Recklessness of assertion characterises the Tory Press in its comments on the action of the Radical M.P.'s with regard to the question of the county Bench. They are charged with wishing Lord Herschell to pack the Bench with Radical partisans. What they ask for is that both political parties should be represented in fair proportion on each county Bench. As it is, the Bench is packed with Tory squires, because they are Tories and because they are squires. Far from desiring that the Bench should be packed, they simply object to the existing system of Tory packing from the squirearchy. And, what is more important, they intend to have an end made to this pernicious system, which has arisen from nearly all the Lords-Lieutenant being either Tories or the mildest of Liberals, selected almost invariably from the House of Lords, and, owing to their class and political prejudices, inherently unable to act with decent fairness in the function of selecting Magistrates, which they have usurped. The Radicals go, indeed, further: they wish that Lords-Lieutenant shall be abolished, and any duties or privileges that they may possess transferred to the chairmen of County Councils. As, however, Radicals always temper reform with mercy, they are ready to allow these gentlemen to retain the right to don the heavily-embroidered coat, the wearing of which may possibly be pleasing to them.

RIMMEL'S TOILET VINEGAR has for over Half a Century sustained its High Reputation as an Indispensable Toilet requisite. RIMMEL'S Perfumes, Toilet Soaps, Powders, &c.—London & Paris.

As things stand, Mr. Gladstone has stated that both he and the Lord Chancellor are greatly pleased with the Radical resolution embodying these views. Lord Herschell had actually dissembled his love when a Radical deputation interviewed him; indeed, he metaphorically kicked them downstairs. But if, on thinking the matter over, he has come to the conclusion that they were right, I trust that he will give speedy effect to that conclusion.

It seems that not only are Radicals, in the judgment of Tory Chancellors and Lords-Lieutenant, deemed ineligible for the Commission of the Peace, but when by chance a Radical has been elevated to that exalted sphere, efforts are made to exclude him from the Grand Jury panel. "A Radical Magistrate," writing from Lancashire, tells me that, though he has been many years on the County Bench, he has never been summoned on the Grand Jury, although most of his Conservative colleagues are summoned in their first year. This is obviously intended as a slight, but, as my correspondent remarks, he is rather pleased with it than otherwise, and no doubt the Liberal J.P.'s generally, whom Lord Herschell hopes one of these days to appoint, will gladly pocket a similar insult.

With all respect to my Conservative readers, I fear they are more ignorant of current politics than Liberals of the same class. Perhaps that is the reason why they are Conservatives. For instance, one of them writes:—

> Does it occur to you that if the Lord Chancellor made Gladstonian Magistrates wholesale, in imitation of the American rule, "the spoils to the victors," as Mr. Storey, yourself, and various M.P.'s wish, when the Conservatives return to power (as I suppose they will), some day they, following the example set them, might flood the country with Conservative Magistrates?

No, my friend, it does not—for the simple reason that the country has been already so flooded with Conservative Magistrates that there is no fear of the tide rising any higher.

Who can wonder, however, that the average Conservative is politically ignorant? The Pall Mall Gazette, which presumably has some knowledge of the real state of the case at present, thus describes the aims of those who object to the Conservatives having a nine to one majority on provincial Benches:—

> He (Mr. Gladstone) must stuff the Bench with Radicals, and he must not allow the Lord Chancellor to consult the Lords-Lieutenant. The Bench must no longer be an instrument of justice, but a reward of political fervour.

What do these Tory scribes expect? Apparently that after Lord Halsbury has debauched justice by making a J.P. of every Conservative who could be found to do the duty, Lord Herschell, in his devotion to the Tory cause, is to continue the same policy.

There are few military men for whom I have a greater respect than Lord Roberts, as he is an able and modest General. Last week he made a speech, in which he urged an increase in the Navy, and asked whether in the event of war we were prepared, even if we were content to adopt the Cape route for our vast Eastern trade, to abandon our sea-borne trade with Italy, Austria, and the Levant? With all respect to Lord Roberts, I would ask him the following questions:—1. Whether he considers that in the event of a war with France and Russia, our better course would, on military grounds, be to bottle up the Mediterranean or to endeavour to remain masters in that sea? 2. If he holds that we ought to "bottle up" on strategical grounds, does he contend that we ought to ignore these grounds, merely with a view to retain during war our sea-borne trade with Austria, Italy, and the Levant, whilst we have fallen back on the Cape route for our Eastern carrying trade? 3. Admitting that we adopt the Cape route, and close the eastern exit from the Mediterranean, does he consider that we should do well, in the event of war, to evacuate Egypt and close this eastern exit by our hold on the Red Sea, or would he leave our troops in Egypt? 4. If the latter, by how many men would our army of occupation in Egypt have to be increased, and from whence would he draw this increase, without denuding vulnerable points in our possessions of the troops needed for their defence?

It may be possible that our Navy needs augmentation. But before agreeing to augmentation, we ought clearly to understand on what basis our Naval requirements are based. Is it held that, if at war, we must make every trade route now used by our commercial marine as safe as in times of peace, and that we must protect Egypt against any chance of our enemy landing an army there? If so, I say that we are striving after the impossible, except at an expenditure absolutely ruinous. As a matter of pounds, shillings, and pence, we should do better to accept the loss of our local carrying trade in the Mediterranean during the war (all the more so as war is only a possible contingency), rather than build ships to enable us to attempt to retain this trade.

My own belief is that this demand for a large increased expenditure on the Navy is a scare organised by the Tories. They know that the revenue has fallen off, and that next year's Budget will have to deal with this. They are aware that the Liberals have laid down that the year's expenditure on ships must come out of the year's revenue. They therefore wish to increase the difficulties of Sir William Harcourt. These ships are not so much aimed at our enemies abroad, as at their enemies at home. No sooner will they have gained their point by forcing us into this outlay, than they will turn round and howl at the Government for laying on fresh taxes, which they will explain would not have been needed had they been in power. If these panic-mongers really do succeed in forcing on extra taxation, I trust that this will fall entirely on journalists and on half-pay Admirals and Captains, for they are at the bottom of the panic. Those journalists who have not joined in the scare would, it is true, suffer, but they must accept the consequences of being in the journalistic business. If it were clearly understood that the Times, the Daily Telegraph, the Morning Post, and their naval "Constant Readers," were to be mulcted heavily, whenever extra outlay on the Navy is deemed necessary, this would have a very calming effect on their eloquence.

SELF GREY LAMB'S WOOL UNDERCLOTHING. English manufacture. Will not shrink and can be supplied in several substances. Price lists sent.—SAMPSON & Co., 268, 270, Oxford-street, W.

If we are to increase our Navy, we ought to meet the cost by a decrease in our Army. I assume that all our garrisons beyond the United Kingdom are manned sufficiently to secure their safety. I assume, too, that we have the requisite number of English regiments in India to enable us, with the native troops, to hold our own there. Our present military establishment at home is based upon the notion, that we ought to have a corps d'armée prepared to take the field abroad, and yet that there would remain sufficient soldiers at home for all requirements when united with the Volunteers. This corps d'armée is a useless luxury; for, were it to land anywhere on the Continent, it could not hope to vanquish any one of the huge Continental armies. By a reduction of our military force, and by cutting off waste in "fuss and feathers," we should probably be able to meet increased outlay on the Navy without the increase costing the nation one farthing.

I am called a "Little Englander," and other such vague terms of reproach, because I advocate the sound principle of securing the safety of the Empire by resting contented with its present expansion, and by leaving the world outside of it to take care of itself. This mutatis mutandis was the view taken by one of the wisest of the Roman Emperors. His predecessors had annexed territory beyond the Danube, and had sought to maintain Roman influence in countries where the sway of Rome did not extend. This wise Emperor withdrew the Roman Legions to the southern bank of the Danube, and left all outside the Empire to kiss or quarrel as they best pleased. Gibbon observes that this policy saved the Empire from destruction for many centuries.

We, on the other hand, have of late years been playing the part of a universal Providence. We want to regulate everything outside, as well as inside, our Empire. At one moment we want to protect Siam against France, at another Turkey against Russia, at another Morocco against all Continental Powers. All this is folly. We shall find ourselves one day dragged into some war which in no way concerns us; and, when we are, it is my belief that those Powers that now profess friendship for us will either turn against us, or look on very complacently whilst we are being weakened by hostilities, which, come what may, invariably weaken all concerned in them. If there is one thing that puts up the back of all, it is the tomfoolery of one nation assuming the airs of a universal Providence.

I am sorry to find that a gentleman who signs himself "Radical in things African no less than things English," is very angry with me for having (as he supposes) done injustice to sundry honourable gentlemen who are doing military duty in the Matabele raid. In his wrath, this "Radical" so far misrepresents me as to assert that "apparently one of the most regrettable features of the whole business in your eyes is that only about a dozen of 'Rhodes's Border Ruffians' have fallen before the Matabele hordes." Nothing that has appeared in TRUTH bears this construction, and I am glad that only a dozen (five I think) have been cut off in their iniquity, and sent to meet their God. I do not hold an enlisted soldier responsible for the cause in which he fights; and men have before now volunteered in the worst causes from a mistaken sense of duty or patriotism. But there is no mistaken sense of duty or patriotism, however, about the greedy adventurers whom I style "Border Ruffians." They have gone for land and gold, and by the terms of their contract they are to be paid in land and gold when they have killed and driven out the black men to whom the land and gold at present belong. There is no room for any question about this, for we know it from the men themselves. If my Radical friend has any doubt about it, let him cast his eye over the letter, which I have reprinted on the opposite page, from the Californian "Pistol" who is serving in Mr. Rhodes' army. The only names I know for such proceedings are robbery, piracy, and brigandage. These terms apply, of course, to the conduct of Mr. Rhodes, the Dukes of Fife and Abercorn, and the Chartered Company at large, as much as to the men who have enlisted under their flag on condition that they get a share of the spoils. Pistol, Bardolph, & Co. were, indeed, a reputable crew by comparison.

Mr. Evelyn, of Wotton House, has written to the President of the Deptford Branch of the Irish National League to inform him that, although he supported Lord Edmond Fitzmaurice in 1892 when contesting the borough, in the event of another contest it will be impossible for him to support a Gladstonian candidate:—

> strongly disapproving, as I do, of the policy of the present Government in sanctioning and co-operating in the present sanguinary war in South Africa, carried on for the benefit, as it seems to me, of unscrupulous adventurers, to the great detriment of this country's reputation for justice, humanity, and morality.

In acknowledging this letter, the President replies:—

> I need hardly say how sorry we are that circumstances have happened which compel you to withdraw from the Liberals of this borough. At the same time, we fully appreciate your motives, and are quite unanimous in agreeing with you that the present conflict being carried on in South Africa is a disgrace to this country, and to the present Government.

I greatly fear that many others will be weakened in their faith in Liberal Governments by the abject submission of COACHING of highest excellence in West of Eng. at "Crawford's," Wykeham Ho., Clifton, Glos., for ARMY EXAMS. (Univ. and Civ. Serv.). Five crowded years of success. No vacancies till Jan., '94.

Ministers to Mr. Rhodes and his freebooters, and their apparent determination to allow him to secure to himself and friends the fruits of one of the most disgraceful incidents that the history of this or any other country can show.

The Times is so enraptured at Mr. Rhodes having, what it is pleased to call, "enlarged the Empire," that in gloating over the slaughter of the Matabele, it breaks out into rapturous laudation of that worthy. His "political aptitude" is "splendid"—so splendid, indeed, that he will "know how to use victory, as he has known how to gain it;" and, therefore, "whatever is possible should be conceded to him;" and as the "nation is grateful to him;' his way should be "made smooth to new plans." There is in this perfect man "a business-like modesty;" and "true humanity as well as true patriotism bids us rejoice;" he may even "claim the hearty admiration of the toughest Radicals," for he has taught us "to make little wars on the cheap." And all this, as well as much more, in laudation of the head of a gang of shady financiers who forced on a war with the man through whose kindness they have pocketed millions; conducted it on the principle that "godless heathen" ought to be mowed down with Maxim guns if they happen to inhabit a country where there may be gold, and their envoys murdered, in order that a rotten Company might be saved from immediate bankruptcy, and the financing gang might be in a position to transfer more money from the pockets of British investors into their own. I really believe that if any adventurer were to start a Company to boil down Africans for the purpose of selling their fat to soap-boilers, and were to devastate Africa in order to get hold of the "raw material," the Times, and other such capitalist organs, would call on Heaven to rain down blessings on the man, and invite us to fall down and worship him as the exponent of British civilisation and British enterprise.

It is pretty clear to me that if Captain Kidd had lived in our days a statue would have been decreed to him instead of a halter. He would have explained that he was maintaining the glories of our Navy on the high seas, that he did this "on the cheap," by the simple expedient of consigning the crews of the ships of other nations to the sea, and that he was increasing the national wealth by taking their property and appropriating it to himself. Poor Captain Kidd! Why was he so ill-starred as to have lived, and murdered, and robbed, before it had been understood that the Decalogue is only applicable to men who do not understand masking their bloodthirsty greed under a pretence of patriotism, and forming themselves into a Company, with two Dukes hired to make speeches pointing out its virtues? The Kidd Pirate Company, with ducal patronage, with founders' shares for its promoters, with shareholders eagerly hoping to hear of ships scuttled, and with newspapers recording its humanity if "properly understood," would have landed the Captain as the ruler of some colony during his lifetime, and in Westminster Abbey when his spirit was translated to some other and warmer sphere.

It would seem that Mr. Rhodes recruited his freebooters from all nationalities. I have received a copy of the Los Angeles Times, in which I find a letter from a Californian with the Rhodes army to his friends at home. Here it is:—

> I shall take military service with the Chartered Company and go to the war. I will go in an independent troop at 'count, and get as pay arms and mount, rations when possible, one half of the spoils, and 6,000 acres of land, fifteen mineral claims, and five alluvial. It will be a hard service but full of adventure. There will be five Americans—hardy, restless, and nervy men. We expect the war to be open within five months. These blacks fight in masses. The border tribes may require guerrilla discipline for six months longer. Lobengula is a well posted black. Praise God for the smart Yankees that invented Maxims and Gatlings, and that can keep a horde of niggers at bay!

What must the Americans think of our hypocrisy in ever suggesting that "niggers" ought to be treated as human beings? What should we have said had they carried on their war against the Southern States on these booty lines with any loafing "nervy" Englishman who would fight for plunder?

My own belief is that Matabeleland will no more pay its expenses than Mashonaland. But what care Rhodes and his gang? They kill and steal in order to fool the British investor out of his money. Look at hard facts: They made an issue of £250,000 of shares, which they took amongst themselves, some of them being paid for in cash, others being given as fully paid up. Then they so manipulated matters that the shares rose on the Stock Exchange to £4. On this they made an issue of 500,000 more shares, taking them at par and paying on them 3s. per share. A very simple sum of arithmetic shows that this transaction was worth to them £1,500,000, every farthing of which came out of the pockets of fooled investors, and every farthing of which these foolish investors have lost, for the shares are now about par. Not content with this swingeing profit, no sooner did they invade Matabeleland, than they called a meeting of the shareholders of the Chartered Company, and forced the Company to double its capital by an addition of one million to it, which was issued to the gang as fully paid-up shares, as payment of half profits of the venture. When asked to produce any agreement giving to them these half profits, the solicitor of the Company was unable to do so, and, so far as I understand it, no such written agreement exists. Talk of Jabez Balfour! That exile was a child—a simple, innocent child of finance—compared with these "patriots."

How public opinion is being manufactured we have now an instance. One Maund came with the Indunas that Lobengula sent to the Queen in 1890, and, so far as the Blue Book throws a light upon the subject, appears then to have been acting for Lobengula against the mining concessionaires. Since then, he seems to have become interested in the Company. He has returned again to England, and has been interviewed. He says that "the Mashonalanders (there were less than 1,500 in a country as large as France) grasped the impossibility of developing the riches of the country with the Matabele ever menacing, &c. The Matabele regiments attacked all the Mashona kraals (they had been asked to punish the Mashonas by the Company). Dr. Jameson hurried to Fort Victoria, and summoned an indaba (i.e., he wanted the chiefs of the impi to meet him). They snapped their fingers, which was more than human nature (Jameson nature) could bear, so he gave them one hour and a-half to clear (i.e., to go thirty miles), which was amply sufficient, for Matabele generally go at the trot. Seeing the possibility of the Matabele attacking in force at the stipulated time (they had already gone several miles to the frontier), an advance was ordered of the available horsemen (these horsemen were under the orders of Captain Lendy, whom Mr. Buxton had already stigmatised as a murderer). No doubt some of the men were carried away at the recollections of the atrocities (a little time previously, these philanthropists had shelled a Mashona village and killed 21 Mashonas, because somebody said that he had lost something near the village) committed by the black soldiers (therefore they shot at them, and killed about thirty, although, in obedience to the orders of their King, they did not return the fire, and only sought to gain the frontier 'at a trot')."

For THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH, Epps's Glycerine Jujubes will always be found effective. Sold only in boxes 7½d., or tins 1s. 1½d., labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

On this interesting and ex parte explanation by a gentleman who was not present, the St. James's Gazette observes that it had "from the first distrusted the sensational accounts of the events which immediatly preceded the campaign which were circulated by the foes of the Company," and that the statement of Mr. Maund "puts a very different and more credible aspect on the matter." All the comment on this that I venture to make is that, if ever I commit a murder, and I am on my trial for it, I sincerely hope the Editor of the St. James's Gazette will be on the jury.

The conduct of the Government in regard to Matabeleland is very much like that of Queen Elizabeth, when "gentlemen adventurers" preyed upon Spanish commerce and South American towns below the Equator. She always pretended to know nothing about the matter. So it is with the newspapers that write articles in the interests of Mr. Rhodes. They apparently hold the view that, where blacks are concerned who inhabit countries where there may be gold, the only proper way of dealing with the matter is to kill off the blacks, and, having seized the hills containing the gold, to bring out bogus Companies at home, and stock idiots with their shares, on nothing more tangible than the assurances of the robbers that they have gold in paying quantities to sell. There is, however, this difference between what occurred in the days of Queen Elizabeth and in those of Queen Victoria. The English adventurers in the former were protecting native races against Spanish murder and rapine, and now they are acting towards these races much as the Spaniards did. Queen Elizabeth, moreover, had not solemnly pledged her word to Spain that, in consideration of allowing a British ship within a South American port, the crew would neither harm the port nor its inhabitants whereas Queen Victoria did pledge her word that if Rhodes, Rudd, and Beit and their employés were allowed to dig for gold in the territories of Lobengula, his sovereign rights should in no way be damnified. Further, Queen Elizabeth always insisted on her share in the spoil, whereas (and this I recommend to our commercial moralists) all the spoil goes now to the adventurers, and we get nothing but a share in the infamy.

The situation in Italy is a good deal more serious than seems to be realised here. Two months ago, I said in TRUTH that the King had lost his popularity, owing to his having become a mere puppet in the hands of Signor Ratazzi, the Comptroller of his Household; and that popular belief ascribed to the latter so greedy a palm, that he was thought to be making the policy of the country dependent on his own personal interests. I see that, owing to the Banca Romana revelations, Signor Ratazzi has been dismissed from his post for corruption. With corruption in the Palace, in the Senate, and in the Assembly, and the people ground down by a taxation that is mainly due to the folly of having made common cause with Germany against France, and involves an Army out of all proportion with Italy's real requirements, I should not be surprised at anything happening. The ablest Italian financier estimates the annual deficit, at the present rate of expenditure, at £5,000,000 per annum. The floating debt is now somewhere about 30 millions. Under these circumstances, I would about as soon buy the shares of the South Africa Chartered Company as Italian rentes at their present price.

SCRUTATOR.

SPOOKED OR SPOOFED?

THE EDITOR, THE PARSON, AND THE CONJURER.

IN returning, according to promise, to the questions raised by the Borderland "Report on Professor Baldwin and his Wife," it will be desirable in the first place—three weeks having elapsed since I dealt in detail with the matter—that I should remind my readers how the controversy stands. The "Report" in question describes a public performance of what is called "clairvoyance," given by "Professor" and Mrs. Baldwin, in connection with their travelling show, and a private séance given by the "Professor" to the author of the "Report"—a Nonconformist Minister—at which séance what purported to be answers to questions addressed in writing by the Minister to the spirits of departed friends were answered by Baldwin. The "Report" was headed, "A Puzzling Problem," and in the first article upon it in TRUTH (November 2) I showed, by an interview with Mr. Maskelyne of the Egyptian Hall, that so far as the séance was concerned, the "Puzzling Problem" presented no problem at all, but simply a reproduction of an old conjuring trick, invented by a professional spirit medium named Foster, and long since exposed. I proposed in a further article to explain, with the assistance of Mr. Maskelyne, how Mrs. Baldwin's "clairvoyance" business was done. Before, however, this explanation appeared, the necessity for it was removed. Baldwin sent me a letter in which he emphatically disclaimed, on behalf of his wife and himself, all occult powers whatever; produced dozens of extracts from advertisements and programmes to show that his public performance was offered merely as an exhibition of illusion, or "escamoterie;" and asserted that in the Borderland séance he had never professed to do anything more than "duplicate" a performance of the medium Foster. He contended, in a word, that he had never departed from the character, which he claims in some of his advertisements, of an exposer of Spiritualism.

This letter I published (TRUTH, November 9). I pointed out at the same time that, so far as the séance is concerned, it was utterly inconsistent with the Borderland "Report," with the editorial introduction to the Report, and with the letter of Baldwin himself to Mr. Stead embodied in the Report. For the proper appreciation of what follows it is necessary that this inconsistency should be made perfectly clear to the reader. In the "Report" itself, Baldwin is represented as asserting that his wife possesses an "inscrutable power," which has been vouchsafed to "only three or four people in the world." In Baldwin's own words a description of this "inscrutable power" is given. Mrs. Baldwin is there said to pass, when mesmerised, into "a hyperæsthetic condition," in which she is able to receive and give forth to the public impressions of events—past, present, or future—otherwise unknown to her. This is the explanation put forward, in Baldwin's language, of his wife's "clairvoyance" exhibition. As regards Baldwin himself, although it is stated at the outset that he spoke as a "Materialist," who had no faith in the existence of any spirit apart from a body of some kind, the following account is given of his power of answering questions addressed to the spirits of the departed:—

> "All this," said the professor, "is done by an inscrutable force. There is no chicanery about it, and no trickery in it. What that force is I do not know. I believe it is a natural force, the properties of which we do not yet understand . . . ." I suggested that a force which gave a rational intelligent answer to a rational intelligent question, proposed by a rational intelligent being, must itself be something more than a mere mechanical force. It must be a rational intelligent being itself. To this he cordially agreed.

The séance which follows is distinctly given as an exhibition of this "inscrutable force," which must be (in the opinion both of Baldwin and his reporter) "a rational intelligent being." At the conclusion of his account of it, which is full of suggestions that there was no possibility of trickery, and that Baldwin was actuated by occult influence of some kind, the reverend gentleman thus sums it all up:—

> I have no theory on which to account for these remarkable phenomena. The "trick" hypothesis seems to me to be precluded by the conditions. The "Devil" hypothesis is out of it, for the Father of Lies could not have said so many things that are good and true. The "natural force" hypothesis will not wash, for the force is a rational intelligence, and therefore akin to mind and not to matter—that is to say, it is personal. The telepathic hypothesis that the sub-conscious mind of Professor Baldwin was reading my thoughts does not accord with the facts, for the matter of the communications was not in my mind at the time, and was never a part of the experience of Professor Baldwin. I can only suppose that Professor Robertson tells the simple truth when he says that spirit individualities whose absolute identity is capable of being proved "have power under some circumstances to communicate with, and perhaps be of great benefit to, friends in earth life." I do not, however, commit myself to any theory. I merely record the facts.

Without further multiplying quotations, which might easily be done, it will be clearly enough seen from this how far the writer believed, or intended the public to believe, that he had merely seen a performance of a conjurer's trick. As regards the Editor of Borderland, besides heading the report with the question, "Clairvoyance, Telepathy, or Spirits?" he prefaces it with his own certificate that "there is no doubt that Professor Baldwin and his wife have extraordinary gifts"; adding that "he (Baldwin) seems to be clairvoyant naturally, while his wife has greater psychical gifts when she is under mesmeric influence." Nor is that all. Extracts are given from a letter purporting to have been written by Baldwin himself to Mr. Stead himself. In this letter Baldwin, after discoursing on his objections to having his powers tested, and promising on a future occasion to open, for Mr. Stead's benefit, "the doors into soul-land," makes the following observations upon a séance, which is either the one described in the report or another exactly similar:—

> I fancy you are wrong in thinking that any reply he received could come from my sub-consciousness. . . . . My hand writes, like yours, automatically, and the reply is not in my individuality, nor in his, but is characteristic of the person to whom it is addressed [he means apparently the person to whom the question is addressed.—Ed. TRUTH]; so characteristic as to be distinctly recognisable long before the signature is seen. There is no chance of sub-consciousness; there is no mention of the name until the signature is put to the communication. The conditions, willingly submitted to, absolutely prevent chicanery.

The reader who is not satisfied with this may find plenty more to the same effect by referring to the article in Borderland. What I have quoted, however, will be more than enough to satisfy any reasonable being, not only that Mr. A., the writer, and Mr. Stead, the Editor, claim for both Baldwin and his wife the possession of "mysterious," "inscrutable," or "occult" powers, but that Baldwin himself, both in the language quoted by Mr. A. and the letter quoted by Mr. Stead, makes the same claim. From beginning to end of the article there is not a shadow of suggestion that Baldwin's rôle, either in the public or private performances, was merely that of a conjurer and an exposer of spiritualistic tricks.

What, then, is the position when Baldwin says, as he does in the letter which I have published, that he is a conjurer and illusionist, pure and simple, and that neither in public nor in private has either he or his wife figured in any other character, or claimed any other powers? It comes to this: either Baldwin, after humbugging both Mr. A. and Mr. Stead, is shifting his ground; or in the Borderland article he is most grossly misrepresented. In my last article I put this clearly enough, telling Baldwin, quite frankly, that in the face of the Borderland article, I declined to accept his version of the matter. He has written two or three letters in reply, adhering to his previous statements; I will refer to them further presently. Now, what has Mr. A. to say, in face of this conflict between Baldwin and Borderland? In the first instance, I received from him a brief note, requesting me to reserve space for a longer communication from him, which was to reach me in time for publication in the forthcoming issue of TRUTH. In order that there might be no further mistake, he had forwarded the document to Baldwin for verification. At the last moment, however, before TRUTH went to press, he telegraphed that he was unable to send this communication. Why? Presumably, because Baldwin declined to endorse it; if any other explanation can be given, I shall be glad to hear it. I then wrote to Mr. A. privately, pointing out to him that the matter could not be left in this unsatisfactory position; and then I received from him the following letter:—

"TOILET LANOLINE" softens, clears, and preserves the skin, and should be used in every household. "Toilet Lanoline" protects the skin from the effects of exposure, and adds to the natural beauty. In collapsible tubes, 6d. and 1s.; in small boxes, 3d., from all chemists and druggists. Wholesale depôt, 67, Holborn-viaduct. The genuine bears the trade-mark, "Lanoline."

DEAR SIR,—I am too much occupied in my work to go into the matter fully, but in response to your courteous letter I feel bound to say that when Mr. Baldwin gave me the séance I was much puzzled and bewildered, so much so that I sought Mr. Maskelyne to see if I could get a solution that would end my perplexity. Mr. Maskelyne very kindly gave me his solution of what to me was a very great problem, but Mr. Maskelyne misunderstood my emotion of surprise and bewilderment for that of pain. I was not pained at all in any sense, nor is there the slightest danger of my intellectual power giving way. And I have never at all felt that my reason was tottering. If I was deceived or tricked by Mr. Baldwin, or believed that the communications were from spirits, the fault was my own, for Mr. Baldwin certainly said not only once but several times, in the most emphatic manner, that he did not believe in spiritualism, and, in fact, did not believe in the existence of spirits nor in a life hereafter. He also said that he made no claim to have any supernatural powers whatever. And he certainly said, I think it was just before giving the séance, that I was "not to take his word in anything."

What I thought and believed and what I wrote to Borderland was purely my own interpretation of what I saw, and was really contrary to what Mr. Baldwin told me before the séance began. For pure curiosity I wanted to see what he could do. I was amazed and puzzled, and wrote what I felt was the solution of what I saw. Whether it was the solution or not remains yet to be seen. Very probably Mr. Maskelyne's solution of the problem was right, still without experiment nothing can be learned, and I am at least none the worse for my acquaintance with either Mr. Maskelyne or Mr. Baldwin.

I wish it to be distinctly understood that I have not and never did have "the conviction firmly rooted" in my mind that I had "been in communication with loved ones who have crossed the bar." Why else did I go to Mr. Maskelyne at all, if it were not to satisfy myself as to the validity and the applicability of the trick hypothesis? I did not by any means repudiate the trick hypothesis. I have guarded myself throughout my report by such phrases as "so far as I can see," "it was as if," "the trick hypothesis seems to be," &c. I wrote to Mr. Stead soon afterwards telling him that after hearing Mr. Maskelyne's explanations I had serious doubts as to the correctness of the spiritualistic hypothesis. And a brother of mine in whose judgment I have great confidence, thinks that Mr. Maskelyne's explanations give the clue to the interpretation of the phenomena. I never attended a séance before, and at no time in my life have I ever had any experience sufficient to prove and put beyond a doubt the validity of the spiritualistic theory.

I think you have done both Mr. Baldwin and myself a grave injustice, though doubtless you were acting in what you believed to be the public interest. So far as I am concerned I leave it to your sense of truth and fairness to withdraw the most objectionable epithets which you have applied to me. Nor can I understand why you should lend your columns to the advertisement of one public entertainer at the expense of another. Mr. Baldwin is no "bungler" at his business, and, however the thing is done, it is certainly executed with consummate skill, as you will, no doubt, be able to see and judge for yourself when he comes to London.

My report is my reading, my interpretation, and my wording throughout, even though put into the mouth of Mr. Baldwin. Thus, for example, I make him say, "Then, in a positively miraculous way, a brief answer is written in one or two words upon the question paper itself as it lies folded and held in the hand." Mr. Baldwin never claimed anything of the kind. On the contrary, he denies the possibility of the miraculous altogether. I ought to have been more explicit and said, "Then (in a way which seemed to me to be positively miraculous) a brief answer," &c. I do not see how you can hold Mr. Baldwin responsible for my views when he takes such pains to repudiate them.

I have spoken strongly and emphatically. I hope I shall not be misunderstood, as my duties are too pressing and important to allow me to give precious time to what is after all only a hobby and not a life work.

I do not commit myself to any hypothesis either for or against, and I do not intend to return to the subject again.—Yours faithfully, V. W.

A more hopelessly unsatisfactory document than this I have never perused. What is required of this reverend gentleman is an answer to the plain question: Did Baldwin lead him to suppose that he was witnessing an exhibition of occult phenomena, or did he not? Though I have read the letter half a dozen times, I cannot say whether the answer is Yes or No, and I doubt whether any reader will be more successful. I find that the séance left him "puzzled and bewildered," and that he went to Mr. Maskelyne to end his perplexities. I know from what he has written to Mr. Maskelyne that he declined to accept that gentleman's explanation, because to do so required that he should also believe "that Baldwin was a deceiver, which he could not do." This would lead one to suppose that Baldwin had persuaded the reverend gentleman that he had witnessed something essentially different from a conjurer's trick. Again, he says that he wrote what he felt was the solution "of what he saw," meaning clearly the spiritualistic hypothesis, for in his concluding observations, already quoted, he dismissed all other solutions but this. He even goes so far as to say "whether it was the solution remains to be seen," implying that, notwithstanding Baldwin's own statement to me, his mind is not even yet made up as to whether the performance was a trick or not. Yet, at the end of it all, he reminds us that he has never "committed himself to any hypothesis." It is hopeless to attempt to extract any categorical statement from a witness whose mind and opinions are in this nebulous condition. One thing, and one only, is clearly apparent in the letter, that the writer is desirous before all things not to commit himself to an admission that Baldwin humbugged him. Rather than that, he wishes it to be understood that he humbugged himself in spite of Baldwin's efforts to prevent him falling into any error. "If I was deceived or tricked by Mr. Baldwin, or believed that the communications were from spirits, the fault was my own." Why these "ifs"? The good man is surely by this time in a position to form an opinion as to whether he was deceived or not. Surely by this time he knows whether he believed the thing or whether he did not. Why cannot he say so plainly, and leave the public to judge for themselves, by the light of the facts he has already narrated, whose the fault was? He thinks "that I have done himself and Baldwin a grave injustice." As to Baldwin, I will speak presently; as to himself, I can only say that in the light of this letter nothing in my previous remarks about him seems strong enough for the occasion. His position seems to be this: He was humbugged by a conjurer's trick, and made a fool of himself by parading the facts as a mysterious psychical experience. When this is proved to demonstration by the admissions of the man who humbugged him, instead of acknowledging his position frankly, and doing his best to undo the mischief which his foolish article cannot fail to have done, he makes a feeble attempt to suggest that there is still a doubt as to his having been humbugged, and lauds and compliments the man who humbugged him. The suggestion that I have advertised "one public entertainment at the expense of another" is almost too childish for notice. My article was no more an advertisement of Mr. Maskelyne than the Borderland article was an advertisement of Baldwin. I went to one showman, as I had every right to do, for the answer to a flagrant attempt to humbug the public in the name of another showman. Though he professes not to be able to understand it, this reverend gentleman must know that as well as I do.

SUCCESSFUL BECAUSE OF SUPERIOR MERIT.—Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer has immense sales everywhere. It never fails to restore grey hair to its natural colour and beauty.

Now, a word or two as to Baldwin's share in this business. I told this gentleman plainly in my last article that, in the face of what appeared in Borderland, I could not accept his declarations that he had never laid any claim to occult powers. I did not suppose then that he would say that he has been misrepresented in Borderland, still less that either the editor of the journal or the writer of the article would plead guilty to having misrepresented him; and none of them have done so. Mr. A., in his letter, says that the report is in "his wording throughout, even though put into the mouth of Mr. Baldwin"; but this, and his attempt to qualify one or two particular phrases, will not get rid of the explicit statements made in the "Report." It does not alter the effect of the assertion that when in America people came to consult Baldwin on matters of business, he was able to tell their names and answer their intended questions before they had spoken; nor of his dissertation, quoted above, on the nature of the "inscrutable force" by which he himself was actuated; nor of his elaborate account of Mrs. Baldwin's "marvellous gifts"; nor—the most damning thing against him—of his own letter to Mr. Stead prefixed to the Report. Neither has Baldwin himself attempted to explain away these things. All that I have had from "the Professor" since his last letter is a few further extracts from his advertisements and Press notices, and some portions of a letter written to him by the Rev. Mr. A. with reference to the séance, and adding nothing to what is said by that gentleman in the letter printed above. I may, however, here mention one circumstance which really does seem to be an "occult phenomenon." By a mysterious coincidence a number of gentlemen connected with the Press in various Northern and Midland towns—editors, sub-editors, and reporters—were all moved about a fortnight ago to write me eulogistic notices of Baldwin's performances in their several districts, and to declare in the strongest terms that they had never known any claim to occult powers to be made on his behalf. That so many gentlemen, all of them journalists, should be suddenly seized with the desire to write to me in Baldwin's defence did strike me as an extraordinary circumstance, and one only to be explained by the hypothesis that the impulse had in some mysterious way emanated from Baldwin himself. But whether the force was "clairvoyance, telepathy, or spirits," I must leave to my friend Mr. Stead and the specialists in occult phenomena.

Unfortunately, however, while all these gentlemen of the Press write so plausibly in support of Baldwin's account of himself, I have a great deal of correspondence to a very opposite effect. I hear from numerous witnesses, who seem to have had no occult influences brought to bear on them, that while it is quite true that in his advertisements and programmes Baldwin professes both for himself and his wife to operate by nothing but trickery and illusion, when it comes to the clairvoyance part of the entertainment he does everything in his power to convince the spectators that Mrs. Baldwin is in a hypnotic trance, and that her answers are given by some such means as that described in the Borderland article. That this is so, is pretty clear from the article itself, it being evident that, in spite of everything previously notified to the contrary, the Rev. Mr. A. was disposed to believe that Mrs. Baldwin was exercising some abnormal gift. In his letters to me Baldwin insists that he is not responsible for an interpretation which Mr. A. put on the performance in defiance of the declarations of the performers, but it is quite certain that half the people who go to Baldwin's show put a similar interpretation on what they see, and that, in spite of all his printed professions to the contrary, they are really led to do so by Baldwin himself. It may be asked what harm is there in this? There is always a certain amount of harm in exciting ignorant and credulous people with pretended manifestations of occult power, and incalculable mischief may be done when these manifestations take the form of revelations of futurity. Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin appear not only to have offered such revelations, but to have carried them to the most dangerous lengths. I take the following from the Glasgow paper, Quiz, which, as I have already stated, exposed Mrs. Baldwin's modus operandi last June, and did so on the ground that she was insidiously represented as possessing mystic powers:—

> Most of the answers given by Mrs. Baldwin are harmless and pointless enough in all conscience. . . . . But often the reply is not free from probable harmful influence. For example, a youth whose query, was "How many birthdays shall I have?" was answered "seventeen." Out of this Baldwin created a sensation by expressing regret that a young and apparently healthy fellow like the recipient of the answer was only destined to live seventeen years. Lots of people were deeply impressed by this piece of cruel deception.

And probably none of them more deeply than the recipient of the answer himself. Anything more abominably wicked than to make capital in this way at a public entertainment I cannot conceive. "Professor Baldwin," according to his public announcement, "wishes it to be distinctly understood that he does not claim that either himself or Mrs. Baldwin possesses any occult or supernatural power." Then let me ask Baldwin by what natural agency either he or Mrs. Baldwin claims to be able to tell a young man that he will die in seventeen years' time? In assuming to answer questions concerning the future, these people do claim a supernatural power, and they have frequently assumed to do this under circumstances as objectionable as the above. In one instance of which I have had an account, Mrs. Baldwin got up a great sensation at the expense of an unfortunate man who had asked whether he would succeed in business. The lady simulated a sort of frenzied condition, and gasped out indications of various horrors which she was supposed to see impending over the wretched questioner, to the manifest consternation of that individual himself. No words can be too strong to condemn such a performance.

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is, 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

The inference which I draw from all this is that while making a great parade of disclaiming occult gifts, Baldwin and his wife do everything in their power to suggest that they are really so endowed. Baldwin, in fact, plays a double game in his public performance, and I take it that he has played the same game even more audaciously with the Rev. Mr. A. and Mr. Stead. It is perfectly true, no doubt, as stated in Borderland, that in the private interview he disclaimed all belief in spirits and spiritualism. It is equally true that, having done this, he did all he knew to impress his reverend interviewer with the belief that he and his wife worked by other means than mere conjurer's tricks. In his letter to Mr. Stead, he goes much further, and boldly assumes the character of a spirit medium, who has taken to conjuring as more remunerative than spiritualism. He knew the impression that he had made upon the Rev. Mr. A., and he knew that this gentleman's report was to be published in Borderland. Yet he allowed this report, with all the professions of mystic powers there attributed to him and his wife, and with his own letter to Mr. Stead prefixed to it, to go uncontradicted for two or three weeks, and he would doubtless have let it go uncontradicted for ever, if the humbug of the whole thing had not been exposed in TRUTH. When the exposure comes he shifts his ground, and declares himself an innocent conjurer, who has never attempted to deceive anybody. As I said before, it won't do. I bear the man no malice. If he has laid himself open to unfavourable comment he has only himself to thank for it. My only concern with him is to show what silly, credulous fools the travellers in "Borderland" are, what pitfalls are laid for them, and how ignominiously they tumble in. Of this I do not think there was ever a more remarkable illustration.

THE IMMACULATE FARM-PUPIL AGENCY.

An article under the above heading appeared in TRUTH of September 7. It conveyed a serious imputation upon Mr. Henry Howden, F.S.A., of 46, High-street, Sheffield, the Rev. David Armstrong, D.D., of Mooretown and London, Ontario, and Mr. James Aspdin, J.P., now, I believe, of "Pendok," Tewkesbury. Although in that article I pointedly challenged Mr. Howden and his colleagues to answer a few very simple questions, they have up to the present moment not thought it expedient to do so. Certain further facts, which have since come under my notice, make it necessary to place the case against these gentry in somewhat stronger terms, and, unless they speedily evince some desire to justify themselves, the public both in England and Canada will have no difficulty in forming its own opinion about their agency and themselves.

It will be remembered that Messrs. Howden, Aspdin, and Armstrong carry on between them "The Anglo-Canadian Farm Pupil Association," which they claim to be the only concern of its kind "recognised by the Canadian Government." Barely three months ago Major-General Bradford, a retired officer, was induced by their advertisements and representations to pay them the sum of £30 for the settlement of his son, Mr. H. W. Bradford, as a farm-pupil in Canada, the payment including the cost of the passage out. The money was paid to Aspdin, and a sealed letter was given to the lad by that gentleman for presentation to the Rev. David Armstrong, D.D., at London, Ontario. The young man left Liverpool on September 16, and in due course wrote that he had arrived safely and had been placed on the farm of a Mr. Healey. On October 23 he wrote from Wallaceburgh, Ontario, to state that Mr. Healey, who had ostensibly been a sort of agent of the Association, had renounced that body and cast his pupil adrift. He stated that he had written to the Rev. D. Armstrong, but could get no answer, and that he now found himself in the pleasant position of being alone in the world with his pocket all but empty. In a later letter (November 5) he states that he had still heard nothing from the Rev. D. Armstrong or the Farm-Pupil Association, and that two other young fellows were out there in precisely the same position as himself, and had published their experiences in the Canadian papers. There can be no doubt as to the perfect truth of this lad's story, his statements being corroborated by a letter from a gentleman at Sarnia who had befriended him, and who wrote to a friend in London to make inquiries as to his history. The facts were given to me by Major-General Bradford himself, with whom the last-mentioned gentleman had communicated, and were given with a view to their being published as a warning to others.

Almost simultaneously I have received the Toronto Daily Mail of November 10, containing the story of the mysterious disappearance of a young Englishman named Raffles Moore, said to be the son of a late Liverpool physician. Moore is stated to have paid in England 400 dols. to the "Anglo-Canadian Farming Association," which is apparently the same concern, a Dr. Armstrong being the head of it. A son of Dr. Armstrong received Moore at London (Ontario) on his arrival at the beginning of October. With young Armstrong Moore travelled to Sarnia, whence he wrote one or two letters to a friend at Toronto, and then all trace of him disappeared. The Toronto Mail mentions that an Englishman had been heard of near Wallaceburgh, who, it was thought, might be Moore, but it may just as easily have been some other victim of the Rev. Dr. Armstrong and his colleagues.

These cases only tell over again the story so often repeated in connection with the farm-pupil traffic, and destined to be repeated as long as parents and guardians in England are so credulous as to suppose that any genuine opening for a boy is likely to be found by such means. As a matter of course, when a boy has been shipped across the Atlantic, and drafted off to a farm labourer's berth in some remote district, the "Agency" never troubles itself further about him. The Anglo-Canadian Association, however, are in a far worse position than any of their predecessors in this line of business. On its behalf the claim is distinctly made that it has been specially exempted from the official condemnation pronounced by the Canadian Government upon all agencies of this kind; that Aspdin and Armstrong have been officially complimented by the Department of Agriculture upon the valuable work they have done; and that the Association is the only one "recognised by the Canadian Government." This claim has been put forward in circulars widely distributed, and also in private letters written with the view of receiving pupils, over the signatures of both Mr. Howden and Dr. Armstrong. As was shown in the TRUTH article of September 7, there is every reason to believe the claim to be false. When pressed recently as to the circumstances under which the alleged exemption was given, Howden took refuge in the absurd plea that the occasion and the result were private, although both the circumstances under which the exemption was supposed to have been given, and the result itself, had been proclaimed in all the circulars issued by the Association. The Canadian Government, when appealed to on the question, have denied having at any time recognised Howden's Association, or knowing anything of Dr. Armstrong beyond his name. Challenged publicly to explain, in the face of this official repudiation, the statements they have put forward as to their relations with the Government, and interrogated at the same time as to other points connected with their business, neither Howden of Sheffield, Armstrong of Moorctown, nor Aspdin of Tewkesbury has, during a space of nearly three months, vouchsafed any reply. On the top of all this come the damning disclosures which I have given above. If, in the face of all this, Howden, Aspdin, and Armstrong have nothing to say for themselves, the time seems to have arrived when steps ought to be taken to put a stop to their game. It is a case which the Canadian Government, interested as it is in putting a stop to all frauds upon emigrants, might very well take up; and if it would use its influence to set the police over here in motion, there is very little doubt what the result would be.

A Fair Beautiful Skin.—By washing with Sulpholine Soap the natural tint and peach like bloom of a perfect complexion is ensured.

"THIEVES ACROSS THE CHANNEL."

Never did dramatist and play-broker get himself into such a hopeless muddle and commit himself to such a tissue of inaccuracies as M. Victorien Sardou in his recent discussion with the English managers, who are politely called by him "thieves across the Channel." The quarrel arose in this fashion. Somebody pointed out that the main incident of Sardou's new drama, "Sans-Gêne," was not original. There was nothing very new or wonderful in that. With all his undoubted skill as a dramatist M. Sardou has a marvellous memory for old French plays, though his recollection is phenomenally faulty when it comes to the discussion of honourable commercial transactions. The silly charge which so irritated the great Sardou was that he had borrowed the best part of "Sans-Gêne" from an old English play by a dead dramatist, Bayle Barnard. The true charge should have been that Sardou conveniently recollected an old French drama, "Louison," from which Bayle Barnard had concocted his English play. To be accused of stealing from an English dramatist was to wave a red rag before the infuriated dramatist. Off he went on the rampage. He lost his head and his temper at the same time, and, evidently prompted by some one as ignorant of the ways and means of the modern English manager as himself, he committed himself to a score of misstatements which would be incredible to any one who did not know how artistic vanity, and love of lucre, are sometimes combined in the same individual.

He first stated that Mr. Bancroft had produced "Diplomacy" before the Queen at Balmoral without having the decency to acknowledge that the play was adapted for the English stage from Sardou's "Dora."

He was at once confronted with the Balmoral programme, which showed that the play was produced at Balmoral by Mr. Hare, and not by Mr. Bancroft at all, and that every possible prominence was given to the name of the French author of "Dora."

Confronted with this reckless inaccuracy, the intemperate author made matters worse by rounding once more on poor Mr. Bancroft, and telling the sensitive French people that when "Diplomacy" was originally produced at the old Prince of Wales's Theatre, his name was ungenerously suppressed, implying at the same time that the play had not even been paid for.

Now, what are the facts?

1. Sardou's name was prominently mentioned on the original programme of "Diplomacy," January 12, 1878.
2. No play-bill of "Diplomacy," in London or the provinces, has ever been issued without the name of Sardou being attached to it.
3. Sardou's agent received from Mr. Bancroft in 1878 £1,500 for the English rights, and the further distinct right of altering "Dora" for the English stage.
4. On the first night of "Diplomacy," when the adapters were called before the curtain they refused to appear, and begged Mr. Bancroft to tell the excited audience that the credit of the play belonged to Sardou.
5. Sardou was officially informed of the generous attitude of manager and adapters towards him personally by a telegram written in French.
6. Sardou replied in French thanking adapters, managers, and artists for their kindness, and congratulating them on his success and theirs.

So much for "Diplomacy." So much for the suggestio falsi. But how about the suppressio veri?

M. Victorien Sardou omitted to tell the French public:

(a) That he has received thousands of pounds from Mr. Bancroft for his plays "Odette," "Fédora," "La Tosca," and "Les Bourgeois de Pontarcy."

(b) That M. Sardou, or his agents, have to his knowledge received thousands more pounds for the right of reading his plays with a view to acceptance or refusal.

(c) That Mr. Charles Wyndham only last June paid fees on account of a new proposed version of "La Famille Benoiton," and promised future nightly fees for a play already acted on the English stage, and unprotected by law, a play printed and published and at the mercy of any one who liked to use it for his own purposes.

The specious attitude of M. Sardou, and his uncontradicted utterances, led his friend and brother Academician, M. Alexandre Dumas, into the same outbreak of inaccuracy. On being questioned about the "Thieves across the Channel," M. Dumas committed himself to the doubly false statement that he had never been asked to give his authority for any adaptation of his work, and that he had never received a farthing from any English manager.

It has been proved by documentary evidence now in existence that M. Alexandre Dumas received from Mr. John S. Clarke, when manager of the Haymarket Theatre, the sum of £1,000 for the right to adapt and alter

HOUSE DRAINAGE.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

"L'Etrangère" for the English stage. Presumably both Sardou and Dumas read the French papers. Whilst they were branding English managers as thieves, might they not in courtesy have reminded the French people that, within the few past months, Mr. Charles Wyndham has paid a weekly fee to Mr. Lecocq for the recent revival of "La Fille de Madame Angot," although the opera is free for English use by him, and, moreover, that Mr. Wyndham's liberality was handsomely acknowledged by M. Lecocq and favourably commented on in the Paris Figaro?

Now, if MM. Sardou and Dumas had contented themselves with the statement that there was a time when English managers did steal French plays, they would have been perfectly right, and no one could have impugned their veracity. The plays of Tom Taylor, J. B. Buckstone, Benjamin Webster, Leicester Buckingham, Stirling Coyne, Maddison Morton, Palgrave Simpson, Charles Mathews, George Henry Lewes (Slingsby Lawrence), cum multis aliis, are nearly all taken deliberately from the French, and were all presumably unpaid for. But why? For the very simple reason that French authors did not care to take the trouble of protecting their own property. They did not recognise the English stage in those days as an important factor in any commercial transaction. They were as ignorant of it and its doings as MM. Sardou and Dumas are apparently ignorant of it to-day. And yet there is scarcely an English farce of popularity, from "Box and Cox" downwards, that does not owe its origin to France. If a man with valuable property in his house leaves the street-door open and invites burglars to come in and help themselves, it is a little inconsistent of him to bully the burglar. The obvious course is to lock the street-door. The moment that French authors opened their eyes and discovered that there was a world beyond Paris—that, in fact, there was an insignificant little village known as London, and a lengthy tract of country called America, full of people anxious and ready to be amused—then they duly protected themselves by law, then they secured a treaty protecting their own property, and then they not only received payment for modern plays written since the passing of the Convention, but, as is shown by the honourable conduct of Mr. Charles Wyndham, they actually receive payment for old and worn-out plays, which are at the mercy of any one, scrupulous or unscrupulous. I cannot see that French dramatists have grounds of complaint against any one but themselves for being so silly as to leave the street-door open so long.

The charge made by M. Sardou against the impudent adapters who sign their names to their own adaptations, is equally silly and unfounded. If an author sells his property for thousands of pounds with the express contract that it shall be altered to the taste of the manager, adapter, and English public, how can he reasonably complain when the work of these mighty geniuses is altered according to the terms of the contract? Some may consider the "Jingo" tone in "Diplomacy" exceedingly silly; some who have not read "Dora" may agree with M. Sardou that his masterpiece has been botched and spoiled. Some would have liked a literal translation instead of an adaptation. But managers, adapters, and public thought differently. The proof of the pudding is in the eating; and, Jingoism or no Jingoism, the play "Diplomacy" has held the English, American, and Australian stage for over fifteen years. If French authors deliberately sell their plays to be spoiled and botched, they must be content to put their pride and their vanity into their pockets with the cheques they receive. They cannot run with the hare and hunt with the hounds. If M. Sardou were a sensible man, he would politely take off his hat, and say to the "thieves across the Channel," "Gentlemen, I am sorry I spoke!"

THE NEW TRIPLE BILL.

The following, I take it, are the triple attractions of Mr. Arthur Chudleigh's triple bill at the Court Theatre. First, the pretty charm of Miss Ellaline Terriss in a sentimental comedietta; second, the artistic singing of Mr. Jack Robertson in a silly opera; thirdly, the burlesque and imitative skill of Miss Lottie Venne in some harmless chaff of current London plays. Actors and actresses, like children, are never so happy as when they are imitating one another, and just now there is a positive craze for imitations. Instead of resenting this as an indignity, the objects of the ridicule seem to like it. To be imitated argues a sense of importance. It may be cruel, but it is a good advertisement. Nowadays we find Mr. Eugène Stratton, Mr. Knowles, and Mr. Gus Elen, of the music-halls, coaching Miss Cissy Loftus in the art of imitating them, and I doubt not that Miss Lottie Venne, if the truth were told, had special audience of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Mrs. Bancroft, and Miss Julia Neilson, in order to perfect and complete an original caricature. The interviewer and the imitator are factors in modern civilisation. To be described at your desk or to be imitated to your face is an implied compliment. It argues, at any rate, that you are a person of some importance. The worst of these skits, or burlesques, or parodies, or reviews, or whatever they may be called, is that they do not hang well together. They spurt, and fizz, and splutter like a squib. They flash and go out and the audience cries "oh!" Miss Lottie Venne is a past mistress in the art of imitation. Years ago she imitated Mrs. Bancroft in the Burnand parody of "Diplomacy," called "Diplunacy," so it comes easy to her to take off the interpolated scene about the Berne clock and the Eton Boy. All this is fair chaff. Whoever invented the Berne clock scene laid himself or herself open to banter. As I ventured to point out last week, however well acted, the scene has nothing on earth to do with the play, and positively delays the action of Sardou's masterpiece. It is calculated to drive M. Sardou into Bedlam, and I hope to goodness that he will never see it, or Mr. Bancroft's life may be in danger; but from the point of view of art it is almost as bad as M. Sardou's suppressed second act. However, physical conditions do not assist Miss Lottie Venne with the clever reproduction of the manner of Mrs. Patrick Campbell and Miss Julia Neilson. In fact, we do not know that each of the ladies possesses such a decided manner, until we hear them imitated. Naturally the imitation game is catching. Mr.

Brookfield imitates Mr. Bancroft and Mr. Penley, Mr. Seymour Hicks imitates Mr. Irving and Mr. Wilson Barrett; and some day some one else will imitate Miss Lottie Venne and Mr. Brookfield and Mr. Seymour Hicks, and all these imitations will be fired off at innumerable matinées until the public become as sick of imitations as of limelight and skirt dances. It is not a very lofty form of art; but, as Mercutio says, "it will serve." Mr. Jack Robertson, the clever musical brother of two well-known musical sisters, saved the poor little Venetian operetta from failure. I should have thought that the place for this pleasant and unaffected artist would be the Savoy, for light tenors who can act and have a sense of humour are rare birds indeed. Anyhow, he is usefully employed here in shielding from injury the young ladies who have been dug out of retirement to do the giddy and sing falsely on the Venetian Rialto. Mr. Seymour Hicks, by the way, is a young actor of considerable promise. He can write plays and parody styles; he can be serious at one minute and merry the next; he can compose and act, and sing and dance, and, if not spoiled, is bound to be popular wherever he goes.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

SHOULD WOMEN SMOKE?

I SEE that a brisk controversy has been going on about cigarette-smoking women in the columns of the North American Review and other periodicals, and that those who broke lances for and against were ladies. Mrs. Lynn Linton, whose novels are read here as feuilletons so extensively and with so much gusto, is quoted as leading the assault against the lady smokers. Is it true that she calls the cigarette when in a lady's mouth the emblem of revolt? If so, she is not up to date, so far as Continental practices go. The cigarette has not yet found its way with after-dinner coffee into the official drawing-room, but it soon will. At all the houses setting up to style it is served at intimate déjeuners and small and lively dinners. Nobody is shocked at ladies smoking not merely one cigarette apiece, but two or three. A Minister of Queen Christina told me that that highly respectable and respected Royal lady is an inveterate and a veteran smoker. She got in the habit of smoking a cigarette when she was Abbess of the Hradschin, a sinecure she lost on getting married. Her cousin, the Archduchess Mathilde, who was engaged to King Humbert when he was Prince of Savoy, lost her life owing to her fondness for cigarettes. She was forbidden by her father, the Archduke Albert, to smoke, but none the less went on doing so. One summer's day, or evening, as she was standing smoking on a balcony, she saw him enter the court-yard on which she was looking down. The Archduchess, who was wearing a muslin dress, whipped the cigarette out of her mouth and hid it behind her back. It came in contact with the muslin, and she was in a moment enveloped in flames, there being a strong draught where she stood.

Most of the Russian Grand Duchesses are smokers. The Grand Duchess Wlademir thinks a husband and wife who smoke are less likely to fall out than if the former alone smoked. I do not know whether the Queen of Italy smokes, but some of her ladies certainly do. When I was at Stresa I saw them enjoying cigarettes when boating on the lake, and in the grounds of the Duchess of Genoa's villa, where the Queen was staying. The Crown Princess of Saxe-Meiningen, a grand-daughter of your revered Queen, could not live without her cigarette. It neither takes from her good looks, nor spoils her teeth, nor diminishes her activity. She is nearly thirty-four, but appears scarcely twenty-six. The Infanta Eulalia spoke when she was last on the Riviera of the Comtesse de Paris as having set her an example as a smoker. As the French say, the Infanta a beaucoup d'imagination, and saw in the cigarette or cigar of the Comtesse a pipe which she believed that Royal lady smoked in the streets of Seville. Spanish ladies are, gratuitously, so far as I know, credited or discredited with being great smokers. I have no idea what they may do in Cuba, though I fancy they are there more conservative and greater sticklers for the proprieties than at Madrid. The ladies who best patronise tobacconists are, next to the Kalmucks, the Russians. The ruling passions of Kalmuck women are ribbons to twist round their long tresses, tea, tobacco, and bright handkerchiefs. But if they have to choose between tobacco and tea, their option is for the former. When a little Kalmuck comes into the world—an event that happens rarely twice in the same ménage, the mamma is given a well-filled pipe to smoke before she nurses the baby. The little one takes to smoking before it is weaned. The pipe is the great cure for nervous headache. Fredensborg, where the Czar and Czarina summer, is the dullest place in the world. The Queen of Denmark is exacting of respect for the proprieties. The last charge that any one could think of bringing against her Court is that of fast behaviour. Yet most of the young and youngish ladies there are smokers. There is no better way of showing off pretty hands and rings than in toying with a cigarette. I saw a Court party from Fredensborg one evening dining at the Copenhagen Tivoli in the colonnade of the restaurant. There was a large theatrical party near them; the actresses did not smoke, but the ladies in attendance and those whom they attended did. Some of the fair smokers were Russians, and not in the least inclined, I should say, to unfurl the flag of revolt. I that evening learned that the Crown Princess of Saxe-Meiningen is not the only grand-daughter of Queen Victoria who finds a solace in the cigarette. Why should not a Princess use it, as an old Irishwoman uses the pipe, to take the edge off nervousness? The only harm is in the abuse. But there is no good thing under the sun that is not mischievous if taken in excess. I can see no more harm in mild smoking than in mild tea-drinking. George Sand, who lived to the age of seventy-three, and was so active and hardworking to the end, smoked cigarettes and cigars—and in excess. The smoke curling before her eyes, roused up her imagination. Victor Hugo hated smoking. So did most of the statesmen of OVOCA.—A perfect old Irish WHISKY. Medically recommended. Absolutely pure and genuine. Thoroughly matured and pale. Of all Wine Merchants.—A. MILLAR & CO., Dublin.

Louis Philippe's reign. But what a hard-hearted, pedantic lot they were! A Police Commissioner once said to me before an Assize Court Judge with whom we were dining, "In all my long experience I never knew two men to plan a murder when they were smoking together." "No; nor did I," broke in the Judge. "The effect of tobacco is to make us tolerant and good-natured. The American Indians were not far astray in clinching every treaty of peace with a good all-round smoke."

The Comte and Comtesse Edmond de Pourtalès have "married," as the French idiom expresses it, their fifth son, Comte Jacques, whom you may have known at Albert Gate House when he was Secretary of the French Embassy, to Mdlle. Marie Jacqueline de Montbrison. Comte Jacques and Comtesse Jacqueline have well-matched names. The bride is a charming person. She has prettiness, gracilité, grace, and graciousness. As the Pourtalès family cling to their ancestral Protestantism, all the five sons of the Comte and Comtesse Edmond have found wives belonging to l'Eglise Réformée. The Montbrisons are an old Protestant family. I am puzzled to think how they contrived to keep to their nonconformity in the face of the penal edicts of Louis XIV., and that, too, without loss of ancestral titles and estates. The Pourtalès had to face exile or go to mass. They went to Switzerland, and settled in Neufchâtel. The King of Prussia, as Sovereign of that little State, made the grandfather of the bridegroom a Count. He married a Maid of Honour of the Empress Josephine, and settled in France. All this nobleman's male descendants now in being have a right to the title conferred on him, and all future ones. Comtes Pourtalès will, therefore, the French Protestants being a fast-multiplying community, be as the seed of Abraham. So far, they have been careful to marry heiresses. The daughter of Baron Schickler, of racing and financial celebrity, became not long ago the daughter-in-law of the Comte and the Comtesse Edmond, who is said to have, in an extraordinary degree, le chic et le chèque. She inherited le chèque from her father, Baron de Bussierre, Master of the Mint, an Alsatian magnate. The ladies of the De Bussierre family had been for generations intimate with the Princesses of Baden and Hesse-Darmstadt—an intimacy which was continued between the late Empress of Russia and her children and Comtesse Edmond. When the Duchess of Edinburgh comes to Paris, she goes to talk of her mother with Madame de Pourtalès, who on the first night of "Mdlle. Sans-Gêne" had all the Imperial Grand Dukes and Grand Duchesses then in Paris as her guests at the Vaudeville to see the play, and, when it was over, to sup at her house. She was the only belle at the Imperial Court whose manners were not fast, and she retained I know not what of German candour and Protestant tenue. Her eyes of light blue were celebrated for their beauty. As she was temperate in all things, she is a charming autumn flower and might take fittingly the chrysanthemum for her emblem. The chrysanthemum lends itself so well to culture. It consoles one at the fall of the leaf for the loss of summer, brightens winter, and lasts round, blooming like the delightful grandmother, to the return of spring. In its extraordinary chic it may be said to represent le chèque, which is behind all high gardening.

Those who attended the wedding at the Temple of the Reformed Church, Avenue de la Grande Armée, were as interested in the Comtesse Edmond de Pourtalès as in her new daughter-in-law. It was remembered that, when on a visit at the Court of Berlin, she warned the late Emperor of the disaster which overtook him a few years later. She had known from the Empress of Russia, the Queen of Prussia, and other illustrious friends what was coming. Her letters were found during the siege at the Tuileries and published, and were of a piece with those of the Queen of Holland. They showed sagacity, deep feeling, and prescience. But they were written in vain. She implored General Ducrot to have the defences of Strasburg looked to, because she knew a storm was coming. He forwarded her communications to the Tuileries, where, unfortunately for France, she had, as a beauty, too many rivals to be listened to. Well, the Comtesse Edmond de Pourtalès was lovely in the autumnal, chrysanthemum way. She was dressed in velvet of that amethyst hue known as heart-of-orchid (cœur d'orchidée), and made with a long train. The bonnet had a sentimental interest as un souvenir d'Alsace, of which province the Comtesse is a native. It was of black lace, forming a large bow of the two butterfly-wings style worn by Alsatian peasants. A few purple pansies were fastened in the centre by the large emerald, one of the finest known to the jewellers here, which the late Empress of Russia gave the Comtesse. Two sapphires, given her by the Princess of Wales, were arranged as heads of bonnet pins. But when one saw them one did not see the bright green jewel with which they would not have harmonised, and vice versâ. Protestant weddings in France are not so operatic as those at the large Catholic churches, where music is sedulously cultivated, and there is room for the processions to march some distance up the aisle. But le chic et le chèque were well employed at the Pourtalès-Montbrison wedding. There could not have been finer music at the Madeleine, and the flowers were bewildering as an arrangement. The Wedding March of Mendelssohn was played as the bride entered the church. Of course, a homily was delivered by the pastor. I did not see the harm, though it was rather long. One gets tired soon of levity and frivolousness pur et simple. Seriousness is reposeful. It is like wholesome bread after a surfeit of iced creams.

I wonder I did not think before of what I am going to tell you. When I was last in Switzerland a large Austrian party was in the hotel where I was staying. There were three Archdukes and any number of "creamy" Viennese. They all dined in the common room at a separate table, and a terrace was reserved for them in a hillside garden. The life of the party was Prince Windischgrätz, now the Prime Minister. He had an extraordinary talent as a whistler. The American whistling girl was nothing to him. He could give without a break a whole act, in no matter which of the operas that he had often heard performed, and all the acts in the course of the same evening. The late Crown Prince Rudolph was very fond of musical whistling. He engaged a famous whistler, the cabman Brotmayer, to drive him to Meyerling with Mlle. Veschera. Rivals are springing up round Prince Windischgratz. But if beaten as a whistler, he can fall back on other talents de société, which are natural endowments, sedulously cultivated. There are few better mimics or pantomimics in all Italy than this Prime Minister. He can take off the Coquelins, Mounet-Sully, Sarah Bernhardt, and that homely tragical mother, Maria Laurent. He is also an accomplished comedy actor. Il est bon prince, but a stickler with his equals for his rights and privileges, and thinks that his position as an hereditary though mediatised Sovereign is too much overlooked at the Hofburg.

MAX GREGER'S PURE HUNGARIAN WINES strengthen and sustain. The pure produce of the famous Carlowitz district.—MAX GREGER, LTD., Wine Merchants to the Queen, 2, Old Bond-st., W.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

MAN is a cooking animal, dear Lady Betty. Civilised man cooks everything—even his accounts. For this reason, the following simple recipes may be of interest to you:—

To make a Modern English Gentlewoman.

Take an American, one part lady, two parts soubrette, dress extravagantly; plunge into millionaire society; let simmer for several seasons; then add a titled husband.

To make a Modern English Gentleman.

Wash a large, red stock-jobber; brush and trim; baste all over with money; arrange in a luxurious West-end house, surround with puff-paste; then serve up hot. Will keep for months.

To make a Fashionable Entertainment.

Put into a few small rooms some three hundred over-dressed men and under-dressed women, a minor Royalty, and two or three alien millionaires; sprinkle over a teaspoonful of principle, a quarter of a teaspoonful of good-breeding, and a tablespoonful of pretension; then add music, supper, and champagne. Let the whole stew gradually.

To make a "Devil."

First catch a gentleman, then fleece him; stir up continually with summonses and writs; strain through the Bankruptcy Court, then put into the City.

To make a Literary Celebrity.

Half-educate a vain youth at Oxford; let hair grow; dip into erotic French literature; add one idea, chop it small; log-roll the whole. Give a grotesque name, then serve up as a rival to Milton, Sheridan, and Shakespeare.

To make an Art Critic.

Open the top and extract the intelligence of a raw Brixton boy; fill up with self-conceit; clean, brush, and trim; rub against a handful of similar obscure and inexperienced lads; add a glass of cheap sherry on Press view days, then serve up cold in the columns of the Penny Positivist. A maigre dish.

* * * * *

I venture—without attempting to compete against Zadkiel—to predict that early in next June the nation will have cause for very general rejoicing. As pleasurable experiences have recently been so scarce, it is earnestly to be hoped that the prediction will be verified.

During the last days of his illness it had become apparent that there was little if any hope of saving the late Lord Cromartie, who died at Stafford House on Friday morning. Whilst yachting off the west coast of Scotland in July, a boat that contained Lord Cromartie, his children, the governess, and a friend, capsised. Very imprudently he pottered about, neglecting to exchange his damp clothes for dry ones, and through this he contracted a chill which eventually brought on the abscess upon the lungs to which he owes his death. To many the late Lord Cromartie will be better known under his former title of Lord Tarbat.

It has been generally understood till now that Copenhagen, the historical horse that carried Wellington at Waterloo, was either a bay or a chestnut. Through the recent death of Lady Charles Wellesley, the present Duke of Wellington has inherited a portrait of Copenhagen, said to have been painted by Sir Edwin Landseer, according to which the horse was grey. Surely Sir Edwin must have made a mistake; but even if he did, it is difficult to understand how he can have been led into so singular an error. In the picture of the "Meeting of Blücher with Wellington after Waterloo," Copenhagen is represented as a bay horse, whilst in the one there is of him at the Royal United Service Institution the colouring is so ingeniously conceived that it is impossible to decide what it is intended for. But a grey Copenhagen is an altogether new idea.

The promoters of the proposed "Nimrod Club"—a new Club designed for hunting men—have acquired the premises of the defunct Salisbury Club, 12, St. James's-square, upon a lease of five years, with a break at the close of the first three. Meanwhile, the proprietors have bought, at a price somewhere between £50,000 and £60,000, the long lease of the late Duke of Cleveland's residence at the corner of the same square, and it is intended to erect here a new club-house, which will be the eventual home of the members of the "Nimrod." This, however, will not, it is expected, be completed for fully three years from now. When the "Nimrod" was first thought of several months ago, it was then known under the name of the "Hunt Club." It is to be regretted that the promoters have altered this to the "Nimrod," which is anything but an improvement upon the previous name.

There was a big gathering at the Branch of Prince's at the back of the Bedford Hotel, Brighton, on Sunday afternoon to witness the match at tennis between Charles Saunders, the champion, and Peter Lathom, the coming man. This Club, which was opened a fortnight ago, is likely to become popular as a Saturday to Monday resort.

The original autograph of the codicil to Nelson's will, written on the morning of Trafalgar, and his diary for some days preceding this event, have lately come into the possession of Greenwich Hospital, and have been placed in the celebrated Painted Hall at Greenwich. Another recent addition here is a full-length portrait of James Duke of York (James II.) represented as Mars. This picture was painted by De Keizar, whom the Duke and Duchess patronised, and it is more especially of interest inasmuch as the page who holds the helmet is John Churchill, afterwards the great Duke of Marlborough, who was then Page of Honour to the Duke of York. This picture, formerly in St. James's Palace, was presented to Greenwich Hospital by William IV., but has hitherto not been accessible to the public. The Admiralty authorities deserve full credit as regards both of these matters.—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER. "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

SPORTING NOTES.

ASCOT is a meeting which is never mentioned by the sporting papers except to be magnified, every arrangement then being the subject of the excessive and undiscriminating laudation of the various reporters. It is not, therefore, a matter for surprise that very little has transpired respecting a conversation which took place at the last meeting of the Jockey Club concerning the state of the course at Ascot, a subject which ought sooner to have engaged the attention of the authorities, for if such a condition of affairs had prevailed at any other meeting they would long ago have decisively interfered. One member of the Jockey Club asserted that for the last two years the course has been in such a condition that "it is positively dangerous to run horses," and he described its state as "very disgraceful." Lord March, one of the Stewards, announced that, acting in conjunction with his colleague, Lord Durham, he had more than a year ago sent a letter, through Messrs. Weatherby, to Lord Ribblesdale, "urging him, in the very strongest terms that I felt justified in using, to take such steps as might be necessary to put the course in a proper condition to run races on." Lord March added that the course "is one not easily dealt with," but that he believed that there had been an improvement this year—a view which, however, was contradicted by General Williams, who maintained that "there was not the slightest improvement this year." The deplorable condition of the Ascot course has been well known to owners, trainers, and jockeys for some years past, and after every meeting numerous complaints have been addressed to the Stewards of the Jockey Club, but without producing any practical result. Even Lord March, who was evidently disposed to adopt a Panglossian view of the grievance, admitted that "it will take a considerable time for the course to be brought into proper condition," which is a highly unsatisfactory prospect for owners who intend to run valuable horses at the meeting next June. The curds-and-whey sort of manner in which the Stewards of the Jockey Club have dealt with Ascot is another proof of the truth of the old saying that whereas one man may not look into the field, another is allowed to enter and abduct the steed from its pasture. With ordinary race officials the Stewards are as autocratic, prompt, and Draconian in their procedure as the Council of Ten or the Emperor Nicholas, and if it had been a case of any other meeting, the managers would not have been merely "urged" to improve the course, but they would have been commanded to do so in the most peremptory terms, and would further have been informed that, failing compliance with the edict, the Jockey Club licence for the meeting would not be granted. The fact is that Ascot is treated with this slip-slop tenderness because "exalted personages" are directly interested in the prosperity of the meeting, and many people in more or less lofty stations of life derive pecuniary benefits from it. The profits of Ascot are vast "beyond the dreams of avarice," and where all the money goes to it is impossible to conjecture. The device of starting private boxes and stalls in the stand was a grand coup, for they yield a regular revenue of many thousands a year, and if the enclosure could be extended further down the course, and another couple of hundred boxes added, there would be a dozen applicants for every one of them. There has always been a divided authority at Ascot. The proprietors (or trustees) of the Grand Stand, the Master of the Buckhounds, and certain other officials respectively have control over the various arrangements of the meeting, and all these are subject to feverish and fitful interferences from Royal personages (particularly from Windsor Castle), which are usually made without any regard to the circumstances. It is understood that whereas the proprietors (or trustees) have full power over the stands and enclosures (except the Royal stand, which is in charge of the Lord Chamberlain, and the so-called Royal Enclosure, which belongs to the Master of the Buckhounds), yet they have no control over the course, which belongs to another authority altogether. It may be that under these circumstances they are not disposed to undertake a liberal expenditure in order to improve the course, and then keep it in proper order. For many years the great man at Ascot was the late Captain Bulkeley, of Windsor, who, being backed by the authority of the Castle, simply acted precisely as he pleased, and defied both the Stewards of the meeting and the Jockey Club. While change was going on all around, Captain Bulkeley remained as fixed as the rock against which Virgil describes the winds and the waves beating in vain, and he triumphed in every conflict with the other authorities of the meeting.

The course at Ascot is Crown property, and no rent is charged for it, which seems quite wrong, for if the meeting was managed in a business-like way, the profits would be large enough to defray a considerable share of the expenses of the Woods and Forests Department. The Ascot meeting is really a fit and proper subject for a Royal Commission, and it would be most interesting to learn what are the gross profits of the races, and how the money is distributed. The Queen is practically the paramount authority, and it will be remembered that although the Spring meeting which was started in 1867 proved a brilliant success, yet it never again appeared in the list of fixtures, because her Majesty objected to it; so it was at once abolished.

The fact that the Middle Park Plate for next year has obtained only eighty-four entries should be a writing on the wall for the warning and instruction of the Newmarket authorities, as this subscription is about half the number which the race regularly received only a few years ago, and there has been a still more notable collapse with the Dewhurst Plate. It is simply fatuous and absurd in the highest degree to go puddling on with stakes of this kind, the pecuniary conditions of which are paltry to a degree, besides being quite obsolete. The liability for every yearling which is engaged in the Middle Park Plate is £25, of which £20 goes to the sweepstakes, while £5 is appropriated by the Jockey Club as an entrance; and, as a matter of fact, these entrances have usually amounted to very much more than the £500 which is nominally added to the stake. Such conditions simply disgust owners in these days. The £5,000 stake at Kempton Park, which was run on the Friday before the Second October Meeting, practically destroyed the Middle Park Plate, the Newmarket event being deprived of all interest when Match Box was withdrawn from it in order that he might run for the more valuable stake. The Stewards ought long ago to have sailed with the stream, and converted the Middle Park Plate into a stake of £5,000, with pecuniary conditions similar to those which have proved so successful at the principal gate-money meetings, without at the same time being costly to the fund. Owners evidently like these subscription stakes, and if the Jockey Club had been observant of the signs of the times, such races would have been largely introduced at Newmarket several years ago, to the great benefit of the sport at that place. I hope that next year the Stewards will make a root-and-branch reform in their programmes, so far as their weight-for-age races are concerned, and the changes certainly will not come before they are seriously needed, as this season's Newmarket meetings have not, most assuredly, been brilliantly successful.

It may be hoped that La Flèche will now be relegated to the stud. The recent management of this mare has been anything but satisfactory, and her defeat on Saturday will certainly not be regretted, except by her backers. Remembering the brilliant performances of La Flèche in 1891 and 1892, and considering that she has won upwards of £31,000 in stakes, she surely might have been turned out of training for the season after her victory at Liverpool, instead of being started at Manchester with a welter weight on her back.

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Pure & wholesome, assists digestion.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Guaranteed to be free from alum.
BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. It has the largest sale in the world.

The London Football Association has suspended the Tottenham Hotspurs because the Club gave one of its members seven and sixpence to buy a pair of football boots. This is an iniquitous sentence. Perhaps the L.F.A. expects him to play without boots. The verdict comes to this, that a man cannot play amateur football unless he provides his own outfit. How the working man is to do this out of his wages, I don't know. The members of the Club that comprises the aristocracy of amateur Association players—the Corinthians—have been paid by the Club all their hotel and travelling expenses when on tour. The L.F.A. does not suspend those players. Apparently the Council is possessed of a Pecksniffian eyesight that enables them to discriminate in a wonderful way between the conduct of players of one class and those of another. I fail to see the difference between providing boots and railway fares.

Ventnor has at last realised that as an invalid resort during the winter it is more dead than alive. It is, therefore, starting links. Norwich is doing likewise. I trust the newly-constituted authorities at these clubs will take to heart a letter I have received from one signing himself "North of the Tweed." Having said that he is an old golfer and on his first visit south, and having described the links, he proceeds:—"My host's son and myself, having played a round, went into the club-room to lunch. Scarcely had we sat down when, to my horror and disgust, some ladies trooped in, and afterwards more and more of them. I had to keep bobbing up and down to be introduced. I retired to the smoking-room, but I was not then safe from intruders. They came to see the secretary. No wonder a cynical cricketer asks is golf a first class game, and scoffers compare it to croquet, when you allow the sanctity of the golfer's lunch and smoke and mid-day chat to be desecrated in this abominable way. Don't think, sir, I am a misogynist. I am not. But some things pass all human endurance, and then it is time to protest," etc.

I omit the rest of the letter, which becomes more vituperative as it goes on. Save for his rather vigorous mode of expression, I quite agree with the writer. Ladies should always have a separate pavilion and links. The male golfer's club-house should be as secure from feminine intrusion as his club in town—if he has one.

The Lord Chancellor has made one appointment which will please both parties. Mr. Lehmann, the well-known authority on rowing, has been placed on the Commission of the Peace for Berks by virtue of his new residence at Bourne End. He is a good Radical and lawyer, and too true a sportsman to let his politics pervert his judgment. Tory J.P.'s, please copy.

Mr. Jardine, who scored his century for Oxford at Lord's and got his Blue for football, sails this week for India to practise at the Bar, and Mr. Hewett has resigned his captaincy of the Somerset team because of his duties as a barrister. He can play cricket fairly regularly one season, and then the next his legal duties prevent. This is fast scoring. How useful it must be to be a barrister! Lord Dunraven will be the guest of the Sports Club on December 11, and the Duke of Cambridge will be present.

It was more by good fortune than merit that Blackheath beat Richmond, after a game remarkable for miserable combination of the Heathens in the pack and outside. Mitchell at back played finely. The Scottish were without Macgregor, and Cambridge had not Neilson, and so both teams played the old game outside. There was little good play in the rain. At Oxford, the three-quarters, especially George and Conway Rees, attacked the Harlequins strongly. Rosslyn Park only play three three-quarters, but they are well together, and Chaldecott by his excellent play enabled his club to beat St. Thomas's, whose forwards were disappointing. The victory of Yorkshire over Lancashire practically gives the North the Rugby Championship. The Southern Counties are useless, and they will be so long as selection goes by favour, and the county matches are not played on a Saturday.

Neither of the Universities did anything worth noting on Saturday. At the Association game Perkins, the Cambridge captain, played well for the Corinthians against the Bolton Wanderers. Cotterill was not sure in front of goal, and Sandilands made some fine runs. The professionals had the better combination, but they lacked the dash of the amateurs. The Old Westminsters had not a strong team against the Caledonians, who completed the Old Boys at all points. Williamson's shooting for the winners was very well timed.

The billiard match between Roberts and North was not particularly interesting, and neither played up to his reputation until near the finish, when, as usual, Roberts was just in time and his opponent just too late. Bedford, a Yorkshire novice, played a series of games with Dawson. He suffered badly from nervousness, but his play is promising, although it lacks class.

Pearce wisely let Thomas make the pace in their five mile race, and then sprinted and left him by fifteen yards at the finish. At Cambridge, Fitzherbert, the Freshman, and Lewin, the Blue, have been running well in the sprints, and Lutyens, the President, is in good form for longer distances. The club runs the L.A.C. next Saturday, December 2, at Cambridge. At Oxford, athletics are very quiet, but the trial eights are very strong as opposed to the Cambridge crews, which are naturally weak, considering the changing and chopping about there has been.

It is proposed to lay out Wanstead Flats as a recreation-ground. This will be a great boon to the neighbourhood, more especially as the work is to be begun at once in order to give employment during the winter months. This is by direction of certain gentlemen in Stratford who have subscribed £500 for the project.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—The more hopeful tone, to which I referred last week as having made itself felt in the stock markets, is still with us. Dealings, it is true, are not active, and the burden of the jobber's song is still "no business," but considerable investment purchases have been made notably of high-class and good second-class securities, and there has also been an appreciation of values in many directions. The termination of the coal strikes has, no doubt, a good deal to do with the improvement, while the Trust troubles are pretty well discounted. There will have to be further investigation and more weeding out of fin de siècle financiers, but I have reason for stating that the position, especially in one notable instance, will be found less disastrous than it had been represented. The Wall-street market has been more active and a general advance is marked in the whole active list, Erie securities having experienced the sharpest rise. The new Tariff Bill just published is a sweeping measure of reform, and effects great reductions in Customs duties, also considerably enlarging the free list. While it will work havoc amongst the American Trusts, it will benefit the railways in the end, and will also greatly extend English trade with the United States. But there will be protracted wrangling over it, and it will, no doubt, emerge with considerable alterations from Congress. The news of the passing of the Rothschild convention for the settlement of the Argentine Debt has not yet come to hand, although it is daily expected. A more forcible illustration of the Spanish mañana could hardly be imagined, but I suppose the protracted period of suspense will come to an end some time or other, when a fresh favourable influence should be felt in the South American market, in which the sharp recovery in Mexicans has been the chief feature.

Home Rails.

As was to be expected, in view of the end of the disastrous coal war, the Home Railway market has shown a good deal of strength during the week, and quotations show a rise in most instances. Investors, who held tight to their stocks before, are not likely to let go now that traffics promise to expand again and prospects for next year are satisfactory. The next batch of traffic returns will not, perhaps, show so much improvement, but in another week I look for increases, especially on the Midland, North-Western, and Brighton lines. What that will mean for the "Bears" of Brighton "A" I need not stop to explain, especially as I have fully discussed the position in last week's issue. The scarcity of this stock was again illustrated by the buying in of £500 stock, which it was most difficult to obtain, even at a considerable advance. Great Eastern have fully maintained their previous advance, and another week will no doubt bring traffic increases for this line as well as for the Great Northern and the Sheffield Companies. In the case of the latter, however, the shock given to the local industries by the coal famine may retard the improvement to some extent. A feature, the influence of which on the traffics of the Underground lines will be watched with considerable interest, is the advance to threepence of the long-distance fares by the Omnibus Companies, and the doubling of the fares between Liverpool-street and Charing Cross, which will commence this week. As the reopening of Olympia is also in sight, there seems to be a fair prospect of both the Metropolitan and the District stocks experiencing a further improvement. Dover "A" have fluctuated within narrow limits. The South-Eastern is not doing well, but the end of the coal war may stimulate traffics, which will, no doubt, also be the case with the Chatham Company. The Scotch lines are threatened with a general coal strike, but it is to be hoped that wiser counsels will prevail.

"Izal."—The new non-poisonous Disinfectant. The strongest and safest the world has ever known. Of all Chemists, in large bottles, at 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., and gallon tins, 10s.

The Yankee Market.

The further advance which has taken place during the past week in Yankee Rails, and which extends to over 6 dols. in the case of Erie Second Mortgage bonds, must be somewhat disconcerting to the critics who are still impressing upon their readers that no improvement can be looked for yet. Having done this ever since the turn in the market came, and having prevented their readers from getting in from 5 dols. to 15 dols. lower down, they look slightly ridiculous. Nor must a weekly contemporary, the excellence of whose financial information I am the first to acknowledge, be surprised if the Wall-street papers head a reference to its prophecy that "no solid advance will be possible until after long liquidation" with the significant title, "A Blue Britisher." The fact is that, with the repeal of the Sherman Silver Bill, the corner has been turned, and, though the improvement may at first be slow, it will gather strength as time goes on. Already an auction of dry goods in New York has realised a considerable advance in prices, and the iron trade shows signs of revival. It would be absurd to argue that a rise in prices of Yankee rails will only come when large increases are shown in the traffic returns. When that auspicious stage will have been reached, it will have been discounted by a considerable advance on to-day's values. In the meantime, traffic decreases are getting smaller, and a general improvement in business is being foreshadowed. One of the best signs is the revival for the demand for bonds in New York, to which reference is made elsewhere, and which generally precedes a recovery in the share market. That a portion of the huge balances which are accumulating in the hands of the American banks will presently find employment in the stocks of their own Railway Companies can, under all the circumstances, not be doubted, and I maintain my view that well-selected investments in this market—I do not speak of the running of speculative accounts—will in three months' time show a big margin of profit. A few weeks ago I expressed the view that "the most welcome sign of a general improvement in the country would be the early reconstruction of the roads which were forced into the receiver's hands—viz., the Northern Pacific, Erie, Reading, and Union Pacific." During the past week the air has been thick with rumours concerning the proposed reorganisation of the Union Pacific and Erie Companies. As regards the first mentioned, Mr. Pierpont Morgan is reported to have been in communication with President Cleveland in Washington, the first condition being a favourable attitude on the part of the Government to the reconstruction. If the movement of prices goes for anything, prospects would appear to be favourable, as Union Pacifics have risen over two points. It may be mentioned that the accomplishment of this reconstruction would impart a very favourable impulse to the Amsterdam market for American stocks, as very large amounts of Union Pacific bonds are held in Holland. There is also the prospect that the same powerful house—Messrs. Drexel, Morgan, & Co.—will be in charge of the Erie reorganisation. The talk is of a scheme under which the Second Mortgage bondholders would receive only 4 per cent. against full foreclosure powers and a distribution of 1,250 dols. of the new bonds for every 1,000 dols. of old bonds. That would be an equitable arrangement, and as it would impart to "Erie Seconds" a value of from 85 to 90, it is not surprising that their price should have risen from 71 to 77, with a proportionate advance in the Prefs., the Ordinary stock being up 1½. There have also been rumours of a projected reconstruction of the Reading without an assessment of the junior securities. That would, no doubt, be possible if the Six per Cent. Collateral bond issue forming part of the last reconstruction scheme (which unfortunately miscarried) could be made at the price then contemplated, viz., 95. That is not likely, but some way may be found to get over the difficulty. With reference to the selection of stocks for investment I should say that Milwaukees, Louisville, Atchison "A" bonds among the dividend payers and Erie, Ohio, Missouri, Kansas. Texas, Union Pacific, Ontario, and Denvers amongst the low-priced securities would be most promising, Advices concerning the Atchison Company are favourable, both as regards the prospective coal and grain movement. But on this point and on all other matters concerning the line President J. W. Reinhart and Mr. J. J. McCook, one of the directors, who will arrive at the end of the week in London, will, no doubt, furnish every information, Mr. Reinhart especially having always talked most freely about his Company. Grand Trunks have remained dull. The traffic outlook in the immediate future for both this line and the Canadian Pacific is not favourable, as the farmers in Canada are keeping back their grain in view of present low prices.

American Railroad Bonds.

The first indication of a sustained upward movement in American Railroad stocks is generally a demand for bonds. After the panic of 1884, the bond market became active, and prices rose considerably, and the process is likely to be repeated now that the crisis in the States is passing away, in the course of which many bond issues fell in price owing to fears that the currency trouble might interfere with their value. Cable advices from New York are to the effect that last week over 10,000,000 dols. of new bonds have been taken up by the public, and when the vast accumulation of money in the financial centres in the States is considered, it is evident that we are only at the commencement of this movement. Nor is it advisable to limit one's attention to new bond issues. As a Wall-street paper puts it, in the last few years the sales of bonds on the New York Stock Exchange have been limited on account of the many new issues sold over the counter. Investors making inquiries at American bankers' offices seldom get any information about bonds listed and dealt on the New York Stock Exchange, for the reason that nearly all the bankers and brokers have for sale new issues which they recommend to the customer, who perhaps never sees the tape, and hardly knows what it is. As a result, he frequently pays 10 per cent. more for an untried bond than a bond paying the same rate of interest listed on the Exchange, and having a record which furnishes good evidence of value may be bought for. In quoting this opinion, I do not condemn new American bond issues generally, but I wish to point out that it is necessary to be careful in their selection. The following tables of American Railroad bonds have been drawn up with a view to facilitate this selection to investors :—

China and Glass.—Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

Name and Description of Bond.	Price at which quoted.	Rate of interest.	Date of Redemption.	Actual yield per cent. if purchased at above price and held to redemption.
I. Gilt-edged Bonds.				£ s. d.
New York Central and Hudson River Gold Debentures	101½	4	1905	3 17 4
Illinois Central Railroad bonds, new issue	97½	4	1953	4 5 3
Manhattan Railway Consolidated Mortgage	95¼	4	1990	4 7 6
Baltimore, Ohio, and S. W. First Consolidated Mortgage bonds, guaranteed by Baltimore and Ohio, new issue by Brown, Shipley, & Co.	101½	4½	1993	4 8 9
Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis Railway Consolidated "B" bonds	105	4½	1942	4 8 9
II. Good Second-class Bonds.
Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis Railroad, recent issue by J. S. Morgan & Co.	90¾	4	1993	4 11 8
St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Manitoba First Mortgage Sterling	89¼	4	1940	4 13 2
Willmar and Sioux Falls First Mortgage, guaranteed by St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Manitoba, and Great Northern Railroads	104½	5	1938	4 18 2
New York, Ontario, and Western Refunding Mortgage	86	4	1992	4 18 2
Denver and Rio Grande First Consolidated Mortgage	82	4	1936	4 18 6
Louisville and Nashville Unified Fifty-year Gold bonds	78	4	1940	5 2 6
S. and N. Alabama Consolidated, guaranteed by Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company	100½	5	1936	5 5 3
Atchison Topeka and Santa Fe Guarantee Fund Notes (extended for five years)	96½	6	1898	7 8 8
III.—Speculative Bonds.
Atchison Topeka and Santa Fe Second Mortgage "A"	40	3	1989	10 10 0
	3¼	for 1 yr. and then 4%
Do. do. do. "B"	42		1989	10 10 0
Denver and Rio Grande Improvement Mortgage	69	4	1928	7 5 0
Mexican Central Railway Gold bonds	53	4	1911	10 10 0
	(including sinking fund) value
New York, Lake Erie, and Western Railway 2nd Mortgage	77	6	1969	In receivership.
Northern Pacific Railway Land Grant Consolidated	34½	5	1989	do.
Philadelphia and Reading Railway General Mortgage	77	4	1958	do.
Do. do. do. First Income	35½	5	1958	do.

All the bonds set out under "I., Gilt-edged Bonds," may be considered as high-class, and I have included amongst them the new issue recently made under the amalgamation scheme of the Baltimore and Ohio South-Western and Ohio and Mississippi as a thoroughly sound security. The good second-class bonds offer all reasonable guarantees of safety, and I have already explained the exceptional security, considering the high yield, provided for the Atchison Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund notes. Under "III., Speculative Bonds," some exceptional opportunities are presented to the investor who is prepared to run a moderate risk. The Atchison Second Mortgage bonds yield a very high return, and are again advancing in value. The Erie, Northern Pacific, and Reading lines are in the hands of receivers, but the four classes of bonds set out offer the prospect of a substantial rise on the accomplishment of a reorganisation, although there is, of course, some risk with such a speculative investment. Since the above table was drawn up—on Saturday—Mexican Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds have experienced a sharp advance to 56½.

Dangers in the American Market.

The following communication from a correspondent will be of interest to a good many readers of Truth :—

I lately bought some Illinois Central Railway shares (ordinary), and received delivery of same in certificates of 1,000 dols. each. One of these certificates stood in the name of, say, A. B., by whom it was blank endorsed, and in the mean time a dividend became payable in America and was paid to this A. B., whose name stood on the books of the Company. I had lost no time in getting the shares transferred into the name of a well-known firm in the City, who would in future pay me over the dividends, and who had given me blank endorsed certificates. I applied to A. B.'s agents in the City, but was informed they could hear nothing of his whereabouts, but believed he was travelling about in America; and my dividend, consequently, is in his pockets in place of mine, with little likelihood of my ever getting back what belongs to me. I placed the matter before the brokers through whom I had bought the shares, but they decline any responsibility, and say that, as I accepted delivery of the shares, they can do nothing further than keep on applying to A. B.'s agent in hopes some day of getting the dividend recouped. My idea is that the brokers are responsible for a good and complete delivery of the shares, and therefore responsible for the payment to me of the dividend. Is this so, or not? Kindly give me your opinion on this point.

My correspondent has, unfortunately for himself, become acquainted with one of the difficulties of investors in the American market, the dangers and inconveniences of blank transfers. He should not, of course, have accepted the certificate in the name of A. B., but should have caused the shares to be transferred either into his own name, or, as I have so frequently advised my readers to do, into the name of the English Association of American Bond and Share Holders. The inconveniences of this system of blank transfers is fully explained in the following paragraphs from the prospectus of this Association, which has done good service to investors in American securities :—

1. The collection of dividends from nominal holders is attended with much delay, expense, and often with loss of the dividend, when the nominal holder cannot be found. In case of the death of the registered nominal holder, the collection of dividends through trustees is almost impossible, and in all cases involves legal expenses. There is also the danger, which has recently been experienced, of shares being passed on forged transfers.

2. In case of the death of an owner of American Railway shares who holds the shares registered in his own name, the transfer to executors can only be obtained by the orginal shares being sent out to New York, for fresh registration, together with a certified copy of the will, involving much delay, the cost of insurance, and legal expenses.

Another point of great importance is the concentration of the voting power in the hands of an association which will use the same for the benefit of the holders, instead of being vested in various arbitrage houses or professional operators, who only too frequently use the votes of holders, who do not trouble to have their shares transferred, against the true interest of the Roads and to their own advantage. The Association above referred to collects the dividends against a small charge, and their system possesses the further advantage that the dividends are received by cable transfer on the day of collection in America, and at once distributed by cheque in London. To avoid the risk of sending shares through the post to be marked for dividend, every time a dividend is payable, the Association issues against shares registered in its name the certificates of the Association, countersigned by the London and Westminster Bank, Limited, against the original shares deposited by the trustees and directors with the Bank. To country holders this is a great convenience, as the certificates bear numbered coupons, and all that is necessary for a holder to collect his dividend is for him to forward the coupons either to the Association or to his banker or broker. Having thus explained the advisability of registering holdings in American Railway securities I cannot refrain from telling an amusing tale of a lady's financial views in connection with this point. She had sold some American stocks which remained in her name and when the broker subsequently claimed the dividend, which she had pocketed, for the purchaser, she coolly wrote to say that she had closed her banking account, and withdrawn her money prior to going abroad. She was not going to pay any more money out, and the matter would have to wait until she returned in six months. The ways of the weaker sex are curious, especially in the matter of finance, and they are, apparently, as much to be dreaded in the American market as those of the arbitrage houses and their connections. Many of these make the most unscrupulous use of the voting power conferred upon them by the accident that investors leave the shares in their name, for the purpose of control of the Railroads concerned, although there are, of course, some honourable exceptions.

Foreigners and South Americans.

Such is the buoyancy of the Foreign market that even with Ministerial crises in progress in two great countries there has been no important set-back. In Italy, the reading of the report on the bank scandals in the Chamber, although every extenuating circumstance had been taken into account by the Committee, disclosed a degree of rottenness amongst leading Statesmen actually in power, and amongst financiers and journalists, that the Ministry had to retire forthwith. Thus my views have in every way been borne out, and it is a wonder that, notwithstanding their "Panamino," Italians still stand at 80⅝. The resignation of the French Ministry is not connected with finance, and although it is a disquieting feature, it may be assumed that the proposed conversion of the Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Rentes will be carried out by any new Minister of Finance, who may be appointed. Spanish are down a point for the week, and no wonder, when a costly war is added to the other financial burdens of the country. Greeks are inactive pending some statement on the part of M. Tricoupis as to his probable action in connection with the public debt. I cannot, however, bring myself to believe that he will render himself responsible for anything that may further damage the credit of Greece, already low enough in all conscience. Whoever can invest in Egyptian Four per Cent. Unified at 101 (a rise of ¾) I cannot understand. There are so many other investments yielding a better return with equal safety. It is useless to discuss Argentines until the ratification of the settlement of the debt comes to hand, which everybody is sick of waiting for, but I may say that the news as regards trade and agriculture from that country is extremely satisfactory. By the way, the Cordoba and Rosario traffic for the fortnight again shows an increase of 5,920 dols. It is an anomaly that the Debenture stock of this line should stand at only 51-52, although it received during the past year 3¾ per cent. interest, and there is every prospect of a return to the full 5 per cent. interest, while the Ordinary stocks of other Argentine lines, which have received no interest for two years, are quoted up to 62. I do not say that the latter are too dear, but the former are undoubtedly too cheap. Uruguay bonds are a trifle firmer, but there is an ever-running tap on in this stock. Peruvian Corporation Debentures have been adversely affected by rumours of an unfavourable report to be issued shortly and of the legal action of the Assets Certificate holders. There is no doubt that the latter have not yet got their due, but this matter will no doubt be settled amicably, but it does not, however, affect the Debentures, and the unfavourable points in the report are all known, while the guano prospects are greatly improved. Under the circumstances, I think holders should not sell at anything like present prices. Mexican Sixes have risen seven points, Messrs. Bleichröder having come to the aid of the Government. The January coupon is, therefore, safe, as I always said it would prove to be, and I understand that the Mexican Government will now be in a position to fulfil all its liabilities. That means, of course, that a new loan will be issued shortly. Venezuela bonds have improved 1, the position in that country exhibiting signs of improvement.

Sanitary Surveys.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

Tall Talk in Western Australia.

Under this heading I took the Perth Daily News to task in TRUTH of August 24 for some very extraordinary statements made in its columns, alleging that Western Australia had a great deal to complain of concerning the manner in which the Colony had been treated by the London Money Market, and glorying in the new departure taken by the Colonial Government in issuing Treasury bills locally, so as to be independent of the mother country, which my contemporary said "had proved an unkind parent to Australia." The Daily News, in its issue of October 5, returns to the charge, being greatly incensed at my criticism. Apart from the vulgar abuse in which the writer indulges, he has, however, no argument to advance. To say that "British money had almost been forced upon Australia" is distinctly a suggestio falsi, and to again indulge in the tall talk about local borrowing, while the Colony has quite recently placed another loan in this country is altogether absurd. I have reason for stating that it is extremely doubtful whether the public in the Colony—even at the present moment—would take £5,000 of Treasury bills if required to. Perhaps the Banks and Insurance Offices might make an effort, but the Banks in the Colonies are still extremely nervous, and will not lend money even on the most ample security. So far is this policy carried that I fail to see how their profits are to be made, if they have only credit balances and then won't lend money. There is no doubt that a great deal of the depression (and there is very great depression in Western Australia) in the Australian Colonies is caused by the closing of overdrafts and the refusal of the Banks to lend money even for legitimate business, and, unless the Banks see their way shortly to be more liberal, the consequences may be disastrous. I should say that even the Perth Daily News will not contradict me when I assert that it would have been a serious blow to the Colony—indeed, that it would have been fatal—if the balance of the loan (£436,000, offered by tender on October 20) had not gone off in this market, as the Treasury chest was getting very low. I do not, however, mind giving it as my opinion that the money is being spent better than has been the case in the other Colonies, as railways are required to open up the vast territory of Western Australia. I stated in my first remarks that, being otherwise poor in resources and in the number of inhabitants, the future of the Colony lay in the goldfields alone. That view I again express. Rich finds are reported in Bayley's South Extended Mine at Coolgardie. That Company was recently floated in Melbourne, and is part of the wonderful Bayley's reward claim. It is a pity that it has not fallen to the lot of Perth to have started this lucky Company, for it would have made up for some of the bad things that have come to that town. It may, however, be the means of bringing in more capital from Melbourne, which will help the West Australians to develop the goldfields, which are eminently "reefing," not "alluvial." Capital will, therefore, be required for the development, and capital will probably also be found in London for that purpose. Only do not let us have any more tall talk about the independence of the Colony of English assistance, or ungrateful references to the mother country as an unkind parent to the Colonies, when many millions sterling belonging to British depositors are compulsorily locked up for years in Australian banks which suspended payment and have since been reconstructed, with what prospect of success in some instances heaven only knows.

Indian Banks and English Officers.

The above subject does not, perhaps, strictly belong to my department, but I am glad to accord it a place amongst the more purely financial topics with which I have to deal, having received several communications on the point. My correspondents assert that one-fourth of the English officers serving in India in English regiments—that is to say, the junior officers, captains and subalterns—and, at the very least, one-third of the English officers of native regiments, not counting some young Indian Civil Servants, are indebted to Indian Banks. I do not, of course, mean the leading exchange banks, such as the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, but institutions like the Bank of Upper India, Limited, of Meerut and the Himalaya Bank, &c. It appears that some of these Banks lend money to officers with the stipulation, that in the case of a sum of Rs. 2,000, or £200, one name is required besides that of the borrower; up to Rs. 4,000, or £400, two names besides that of the borrower; and up to Rs. 6,000, or £600, three names are required in addition to that of the borrower. The rate of interest charged is 12 per cent., and the Bank also insures the borrower's life at the latter's cost, receiving payment by monthly instalments. All goes well provided the instalments are paid regularly, but if an officer falls in arrear, the deficiency is added to the remainder of the original debt, interest is charged on the whole amount, and a heavy score is thus run up. I do not by any means wish to find fault with the Banks. If officers choose to run into debt, they have themselves to blame, and these institutions are, moreover, very convenient money-lenders. Married men in India with wives and families in England could hardly do without them, and they are, I suppose, very handy for impecunious captains and subalterns. What I should like to know, however, is, if the statement, which has also been made to me, is correct, viz., that the principal shareholders in these Banks, which pay high dividends, are the highly paid Civil Servants in India—men drawing from Rs.2,5,000 a month and a few retired General Officers living in the Hills in India. Perhaps some of the readers of TRUTH, amongst whom are so many old Indians, will throw a little more light upon this matter. Their communications will, of course, be treated in all confidence.

Minton's (Limited). Minton's China.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

The Kaffir Circus.

Who would have thought a few months ago that when victory had crowned the Chartered Company's campaign in Matabeleland the shares would stand at only 23s.? Here we have the power of the Matabele crushed and Lobengula a fugitive, and perhaps by now a prisoner, yet there is no enthusiasm in the market. The fact is that operators are afraid of more wire-pulling, and until some idea can be formed of what will be done with the million of new shares to be handed over to the holders of United Concessions, dealings will be more or less nominal. In the meantime, the Chartered bugbear, like the deadly upas tree, overshadows the whole of the Kaffir Circus, killing what little business there was. Another adverse influence is the doubtful position of the Rietfontein Mine, about which a great deal is being said and written. When it was reconstructed I recommended purchases of the shares at about £2. They have since been forced up by monstrous rigging to £7, and I entered a vigorous protest against this manipulation. Now that the shares have fallen to 2¾ I am again receiving communications on the subject, and amongst others a very unfavourable statement by Mr. Alfred Lewis, the mining engineer, of Johannesburg, has been forwarded to me. The letter has, however, already appeared in the daily financial press, and is, moreover, contradicted by a cablegram from the Secretary of the Company at Johannesburg. Neither can I quite understand the why and wherefore certain people take so much trouble to run the mines down. I therefore prefer to keep an open mind on the point. As to Witwatersrand Gold Mines generally, it appears to be doubtful, in the present state of intense languor of the market, if even a record crushing for November would galvanise it into life again. But I advise all holders of well-selected shares to stick to them, as a substantial advance is certain to set in sooner or later in view of the excellent results which are being achieved by the Companies. Just at present the deep level Companies are attracting a good deal of attention, and rightly so. The cablegram which has come to hand from Johannesburg stating that the reef (supposed to be the South Reef) has been struck in the Geldenhuis Deep Level at a depth of 545 ft., and that samples assayed from a trace to 8 oz., twelve sections assaying 66 dwt., is undoubtedly most important. I stated on November 9 that this mine (which is apart from the South Simmer and Jack, the cheapest Deep-level Mine) with 200 claims, and a capital of £350,000 in £1 shares, or at the present price of about 2 (£700,000), averages about £3,500 per claim, against about £5,000 per claim of the Village Main Reef, another Deep Level Mine. South Simmer and Jack shares have risen to 22s., but even at that price the 68 claims work out to only £2,430 per claim. There is here, therefore, a considerable margin for a rise. I am glad to find from the remarks made by Mr. Henry Pasteur, the Chairman of the Oceana Transvaal Land Company, at Thursday's meeting of shareholders, that the Board is likely to adopt my view with regard to the payment of a dividend in shares of the Coal Company. This is how he expressed himself on this point:—

> We shall have to consider whether the accounts should not be recast, so as to show our assets at their true value, which would help us towards being able to divide, by way of dividend, some of the shares we hold. We may for that purpose have to call you together again in the course of the next few months, and we would then put before you the Company's accounts, made up to December 31, in the way in which we think they ought to be prepared.

But why, in all conscience, were not the accounts prepared "as they ought to be prepared," at once, and why should the shareholders wait for their dividend? The Oceana Development Company will, I understand, at once take the sensible course of distributing a dividend in coal shares, which should amount to from about 20 to 25 per cent. on its capital. Why, then, should not the Oceana Board have acted likewise? The news concerning the Coal Company, by the way, is most satisfactory, and there is no doubt that this will develop into a large dividend-paying concern. De Beers have improved on advices of a large contract for diamonds.

Indian, Australian, and American Mines.

The Indian department has been firm, Mysore Reefs and Champion Reefs advancing, the latter on favourable advices cabled from the mine. Ooregum Ordinary are slightly lower, although there is nothing in the position of this mine to justify any decline. Amongst Australian Mining shares, Carringtons have been firm at the advance established, Bear covering having at one time forced the price up to 4s. 6d. Work at the mine is now stated to be in full swing. With reference to the Golden Gate Company (Charters Towers), I learn that they have acquired an additional piece of ground to the south of their property, as it was considered by the local Directors that by so doing they would intersect the various reefs, for which they are drilling, at much less depth than if they drilled from any portion of their old territory. The ore which is being worked by the tributaries in the old part of the mine shows slight improvement in quality. Day Dawn P. C. are firmer on a favourable cablegram and Broken Hill Proprietary are up $\frac{1}{16}$. In American Mines St. John Del Rey, and El Callao are lower, Lomas and Golden Feather also having eased off, while Elkhorn are the turn firmer. Achilles Gold Fields, in which I anticipated an improvement last week, are up $\frac{1}{8}$ at $1\frac{1}{16}$-$1\frac{3}{16}$. I have received a long letter from Messrs. Lee & Davies, the London agents of the Atlantic Cable Consolidated Mine, about which I wrote some weeks since, giving some information which I fear will be unsatisfactory reading for those unfortunate individuals who have been saddled with the shares, but it is so far satisfactory to learn that as far as Messrs. Lee & Davies's, knowledge goes, "there are only two or three English shareholders." These gentlemen tell me the Company was formed a year ago to work mining claims covering an extent of ninety acres near the town of Rico, Colorado; that work was at once commenced to prove the property, which, they state, opened out well, but that, owing to the silver crisis, explorations were suspended in July, and all work was stopped in October. The London agents say "operations will probably not be resumed until after the winter has passed," and that they are assured the Company is absolutely free from debt, but they avoid saying whether there are any funds remaining in hand. Has the Company any money? On reference to one of the certificates, I find the capital is 1,500,000 dols. in 1 dol. shares, yet an attempt was made to market these shares here at 7s. or 7s. 6d.!

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Peckham.—Guatemala Internals are a fair purchase at present price. Max.—Have nothing to do with the firm, whose system is bad. Their prices are from 20 to 40 per cent. above the real market price. Junius.—There is a "Bear" account in Atchison "A," and you have been charged far too high a contango. The rate ought not to have been more than 3 per cent. at the October account, and 2 per cent. at the mid-November account.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Ascension.—Although the Bank passed successfully through a severe ordeal, I do not advise investment in this group. In my opinion sound American Railroad bonds would be preferable, especially now that matters are righting themselves. Constant Reader.—1. These dealings are legal enough, but I feel sure that it would be preferable to deal with a member of the House. Most of the outside brokers of this class run against their clients. 2. Yes. 3. The Gambling Act cannot be pleaded now with any degree of success. Wood Green.—The name of the Association which collects American dividends is the English Association of American Bond and Share Holders, of 5, Great Winchester-street, London, E.C. Austral.—The three Banks named, Bank of New South Wales, Bank of Australasia, and Union Bank of Australia, which have weathered the severe crisis without having had to pull up, will, no doubt, do well, and I daresay that No. 1 will earn fair dividends, but there will be plenty of competition, and I do not think much of the prospects of most of the re-constructed Banks. A Constant Reader, Belfast.—If it is an ordinary oversight, the client would, no doubt, return the contract for the stamp to be put on. If there is anything contentious about it it is quite a different thing, and I cannot obviously advise in the matter before I know the whole of the circumstances. Z. Q. A.—No; in the case of speculative transactions run from account to account, no transfers are made out, if transactions are opened and closed within the same account. In the case of outside brokers, these very often run against their clients. Naval. The securities of Trust Companies are as deep in the mud as they will probably ever be. I should, therefore, advise you to hold the stock. A. E., Inverness.—These German lotteries are conducted fairly enough, but the intermediaries are rarely to be trusted, and you would have little opportunity for learning if you are entitled to a prize. Le jeu ne vaut pas la chandelle. John U., N.B.—There is no satisfactory news available about these New Zealand concerns, against which I have in the past so frequently warned my readers. You can but keep on applying to head-quarters. Miles.—1. There is nothing to be done now respecting the Persian Bank Mining Rights Company, as these shares are unsaleable, and you will have to await the result of claims being made on the Persian Government. Why did you not sell out long ago, when I criticised this hopeless concern? 2. I do not recommend the purchase of these Lottery bonds. They are but a poor investment. H. B.—I am glad you have benefited by my advice concerning the syndicate touts. Cavendish.—You are quite correct in your view. The Trustees' and Executors' Debentures are secured upon the uncalled capital, and have the first claim. In fact, the call has been made with the special proviso that it is to be paid to the credit of the trustees of the Debenture holders at the Bank of England. There is every prospect of these Debentures being paid off in the early part of next year at 103. Hold. Trade.—I suppose the only way is to employ a solicitor and insist upon delivery. I know nothing of the circumstances.

Home Rails.

Bess.—1. As the coal strike is over, there is no reason for selling London and South-Western Deferred now. 2. The Company will probably pull through, but I am afraid its prospects are very doubtful. R. O.—Thanks. My view concerning Brighton "A" has certainly been borne out in the most startling fashion.

American and Foreign Rails.

Kansas (Liverpool).—There is another inquiry under your nom de plume. No. 1 is doing very well. No. 2 is still cheap. It is quite correct that the line No. 3 is doing extremely well through increased coal traffic, but I can say nothing as to the jump predicted by your broker. No. 4 is in my view the least promising of the lot. Constitutional.—All the American Railway stocks, Nos. 1-3, are improving. Hold. On the issue of the new stocks of the Baltimore and Ohio South Western, a rise will, no doubt take place. No reason to sell the English Brewery stocks Nos. 4 and 5. Baltimore and Ohio are a good investment. The turn of No. 3 will come. Kansas.—Yes, you cannot do better than take the bonds Nos. A, B, and E. I do not care for the bonds last mentioned by you. Stag.—Yes, there is every prospect of a turn as soon as the Ohio and Mississippi matter has been fully carried through. Hold. H. W.—1. There is no reason to feel enthusiastic about Grand Trunk Guaranteed; but I think they might be held at this price, the interest being pretty well assured. Hold the Brewery stocks Nos. 2 and 3. Cantante.—1. Ontario should be held for an advance, as the Company has benefited through increased coal traffic. 2. You bought Louisville at 68. I advised a sale persistently when they stood at 56-8. They then dropped to 45, and I advised a purchase. Now you should hold, as traffics are improving. 3. Hold Milwaukees for a further rise, although you have a good profit. 4. No reason to sell. When the new stock is issued in the middle of December under the amalgamation, prices will advance. 5. I do not like Mexican Railway Second Prefs. Whenever the opportunity offers, sell, and exchange into First Prefs. Fearsome.—You should have sold long ago. I have but a poor opinion of the future of this line. Archipelago.—Yes, the Debentures No. 1 are unduly depreciated, and you might venture to buy the small amount. 2. United Railways of Havana Debentures (a) are the better of the two stocks named by you. I do not like b. I never liked No. 4*a* much, but as New Zealand is becoming more prosperous, you might hold for a recovery. No reason to sell the Trust stock 4*b* now. 5. You are right to hold Buenos Ayres Western and Antofagasta. 6. You should carefully watch the stocks of Argentine Guaranteed Railways, such as Argentine Great Western and Cordoba Central (Central Northern Section) Debenture stock. 7. Certainly. H. M. S.—1. Hold, although immediate traffic prospects are not favourable. 2. I do not like these bonds, but I cannot advise a sale after the fall. 3. Hold the Brewery shares. No option but to hold No. 4. Hold Peruvian Corporation Mortgage bonds (5) and Buenos Ayres Great Southern Ordinary (6). Sell Elkhorn (7). As regards No. 8, it is a good bond, suitable for permanent investment. T. D.—You will find in to-day's letter a list of American Railroad bonds, from which you will be able to make a suitable selection. You might add Autofagasta Four per Cent. Debenture stock, now quoted 96. Sidonia.—Your stocks Nos. 1, 3, and 4 are first class, and very suitable for permanent investment. You should on no account sell your Trustees', Executors', &c., First Mortgage Debentures. As I explained last week under "Various Investments," these are secured upon the uncalled capital, in addition to other guarantees, and will no doubt be paid off early next year at 103! I do not care for No. 2 much. Sell when you can do so without a loss, and re-invest in sound American Railroad bonds. Toledo.—I regret not being able to give you any satisfactory news concerning these bonds. It is one of the drawbacks of investing in bonds not dealt in on the London Stock Exchange. Triangle.—The bonds to which you refer are not high-class. You are, of course, aware that both Roads are in the Receivers' hands, although interest on the bonds named by you is not in jeopardy. Reconstruction will very probably soon be brought about, when the bonds will, no doubt, improve, but you must consider them as somewhat speculative. See the list of gilt-edged bonds in to-day's letter. Belfast.—You will find the latest information available concerning the projected Erie reorganisation in my letter. A Constant Subscriber, Bath.—There is no fresh news about the Birmingham and Mobile. Write to the firm named by you for information. Lex.—Hold your Louisville, and buy, as you propose, Atchison bonds. The Guarantee Fund notes mentioned in my table of bonds in to-day's issue deserve your attention. The Industrial Company in question has been affected by the bad state of trade, but an improvement in the price of the shares is now probable.

Mining Shares.

H. B., Sandback.—Both the New Primrose and the Nigel are valuable Gold Mines, although I should give preference to the first named. The shares are fully paid, and the dividends are now paid half-yearly. J. O. K.—It is a good property, and will, I think, work all right in the end. Promptus.—I should advise you to hold New Primrose, Glencairns, and New Crœsus. All these will improve when the present unjustified depression passes away, and you would not better your position by changing the investment. Hold Mysore Gold; the prospects of the Mine are good. Trafford.—I think you might join the Flagstaff reconstruction. It is a fair mining risk. Afrikander.—I replied fully to your inquiry in last week's issue. Carlos.—The authorised capital of the Achilles Goldfields, Limited, is £100,000 in ordinary shares of £1 each, and £80,307 has been allotted. The shares, fully paid, have risen to 1⅛, and the market view is that they will go higher. The Phœnix Mine owned by the Company is situate in New Zealand, and £50,000 is stated to have been spent in developing the property and on machinery. G. H.—No, I do not think this is very promising. 2. See remarks under "Indian, American, and Australian Mines." 3. No, I should not go further into these shares. Argyle.—1. There are no debentures in the Buffelsdoorn Mine. 2. Yes, the Mine will, no doubt, pay dividends some time next year. 3. I should buy Buffelsdoorn and South Simmer and Jack. Gold.—Yes, you might buy more new Idaho shares. Dun.—No dividend is expected to be paid by the Phœbe Gold Mining Company (Charters Towers) yet awhile. They are still sinking underlie shaft, recently passed through good formation, and might get payable stone any time. Hold. Carrington.—Work at the Carrington Mine (Charters Towers) is now in full swing, and you should average. Anchor.—Sell No. 1 on a further rise. Nos. 2 and 3 are fair speculations. I do not like No. 4. Hold No. 5 (Peruvian Corporation Debentures). No. 6 is a fair investment. The General Mining Association (7) is a slow concern, owning collieries in Nova Scotia. If you are not a holder, I do not see any temptation to buy. The shares are somewhat unnegotiable. No. 8 is a fair Eastern bank. You will find a list of American bonds in to-day's letter. Sycorax.—1. Yes. See remarks in to-day's letter. 2. Risk holding Lisbon-Berlyn, but sell on any upward movement. Hold No. 3, but do not average yet. I think they will get on rich ore again eventually. 5. It is a pity you did not hold your Missouri, Kansas, and Texas. Try Erie and Readings, or Atchison "A" bonds. A. N. Drew.—I cannot learn anything of the two concerns you mention; probably both went into liquidation years ago. You might write to one of the banks in Colorado. Deep Level.—Do not sell May Deep Level at this figure. I assume that you have got these taken up. 1. Hopeful. 2. London and Johannesburg. 3. The Directors are Messrs. Dixon, Courteney, Duirs, Farrar, and David. 4. I have not heard of selling for this quarter. Poorer Man.—There have been no special facts to bring forward. Although the price of Poormans has receded since you bought, owing to the general set back, you have received good dividends, and these will continue.

Industrial Companies.

Withington.—A great deal depends upon trade in Chili and any improvement in the Valparaiso exchange. If that comes about a rise is probable. Hold! J. T. P., Seaton.—I do not think that there is any reason to sell the shares at this price. Hold for a recovery. Grace.—No reason to sell No 1 now. Nos. 2 and 3 are fair speculative industrial investments. Novellus.—You should hold these shares for a recovery.

MAJOR HOWE & CO.'S fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

Ulster.—1. The American Railroad bonds No. 1 are very speculative, and I think that you will be able to do better from the lists published to-day in my letter. 2. I should prefer New Primrose to Simmer & Jack. 3. Yes; Louisville are a good purchase. Aberystwith.—You cannot have read my remarks on English Breweries and the dangers of legislation. But you should hold now. You must, of course, run some risk to obtain a yield of 7 per cent., and you must tell me what kind of security you would select, if only Home stocks, or also American and South American securities. Rose Sand.—1. No reason to sell Mexican Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds. 2. You might do better direct through a stockbroker; but, after all, it seems to be safest in your case to deal through your banker. 3. No, there is no fear of this. 4. Impossible to tell, but improbable on the face of it. Puzzled.—You might buy for the investment of your £1,000, Baltimore and Ohio South-Western (guaranteed by the Baltimore and Ohio) Four-and-a-Half per Cent. First Mortgage bonds at 101¼, and Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Four per Cent. Debenture stock at 96. Both are first-class stocks, absolutely safe, would yield an average of 4¼ per cent. on the investment, and would be suitable for permanent investment. You should hold your Atchison "A" and Louisville bonds. Planter.—I am very pleased to find that you have made such judicious use of my advice in your investment of £8,000, and I have no doubt that you will realise a very considerable profit on these with some patience. I hesitate to advise a purchase of Brazilian bonds until it is possible to see more clearly, but Chilians, Argentines, and Peru Debentures are all cheap. Of Yankee Rails those referred to in my letter are the most likely to improve. J. C. R.—I do not think that you stand much chance of making profits through this circularising person, and should advise you to invest your money elsewhere.

VARIOUS INVESTMENTS.

Colonial Government bonds have been in brisk demand, and even Victorian issues have scored a material advance. The fact is that the public are so scared by past losses and by hysterical nonsense to which some of the critics are giving currency, that they are flying to these Colonial bonds for safety. The result will inevitably be that the Australian Colonies will be encouraged to fresh borrowing. Investors should use their intelligence to find other equally safe and more remunerative channels. Silver has again fluctuated within narrow limits, but Rupee paper has improved on the further success of the India Council in placing bills at 1s. 3¼d. and slightly over. So far the amount sold is £6,100,000, against £10,400,000 sold up to the same date last year. Notwithstanding the recovery in Mexican Government bonds, Mexican Rails show a dull tendency, and the Second Prefs. are more especially inactive. It does not look as if the little speculation of the Universal Stock Exchange were likely to prosper. The Foreign and Colonial Debenture Corporation proposes amalgamation with the Debenture Corporation on terms of two £10 shares (£4 paid) of the latter for each £10 share (£4 paid) of the Foreign and Colonial, and 150 £3 shares of the Debenture Corporation Founders' Trust for each Founders' share. This is clearly an attempt to cover up a huge loss. All such hushing up ought to be discouraged, especially in the case of a Trust over which Jabez Balfour at one time presided as Vice-Chairman. Before agreeing to such a proposal the shareholders should, therefore, insist upon the strictest investigation by an independent committee. At the same time I am not opposed to the fusion of Trust Companies on principle, in view of the savings to be effected. The excellent result again obtained by the London and River Plate Bank, which enable the Directors to pay a dividend and bonus of 6 and 2½ per cent. respectively, making, with the interim dividend of 4 per cent. paid in June, 12½ per cent., calls for special notice; £50,000 is placed to the reserve fund, which now amounts to £850,000. At Wednesday's meeting of Elmore's Copper Depositing Company another tale of woe had to be told. This time, however, no blame seems to attach to the Board, the coal strike having caused the trouble. More money is again wanted, and will apparently be forthcoming; but what is satisfactory is that the books show orders on hand for 126,048 lb. against 28,391 lb. on June 23, and that the article manufactured gives general satisfaction. The commercial value of the process being thus proved, ultimate success should come to the much-tried shareholders. By the way, a German reader of TRUTH is anxious to learn something about the International Bourse of White House, Telegraph street, E.C., and its conductor, Mr J. Hammer. Perhaps Mr Hammer or some of my correspondents can supply the information. A new issue of "Kindell's African Market Manual" has been made by Messrs. F. C. Matthieson & Sons, of Old Broad street, E.C. This handy little work of reference is greatly appreciated in the South African market.—Your affectionate uncle, MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.

QUEER STORY.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY.

THE Mess of the Duke of York's Own Rutlandshire Light Infantry (late 120th) unanimously agreed, when Kate Vanderstetter accepted Jack Hayly, that "the Owl," as Jack was called, had fairly gilded the lily of the Regiment's luck by grafting on to its bachelorhood that most auburn and aureate of widows. The Vanderstetter had looks as well as lucre; the former "up to Show form," as the juniors phrased it, the latter of such Mississippian volume that many of the congratulations poured on "the Owl" were greenish. Envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness are unfortunately not a close monopoly of the Church, but occasionally manifest their existence in the other militant body. "The Owl's" means were not modern. To be modern one must be mercantile, but his father had been agricultural, and only left him about enough in depreciated rents to pay the Church its tithes, and the County Charities their subscriptions; two of the many taxes which other forms of property can escape. The old man, however, had died happy in a kind of secondary belief that a grateful country would adequately recompense his son's services, and thought at the same time he had materially aided his career by letting on a seven years' lease the family shootings to the family lawyer in the county town. That the said lawyer charged him about as much money for signing his name to a typogram acknowledging the receipt "of yours of the 15th inst.," as the said grateful country paid his son for a day's wear and tear of brain and sinew, with occasional unnecessary risks to his life, did not strike him as being out of focus. He looked at life through old-fashioned glasses, and honestly believed that lawyers and soldiers were as much natural orders in creation as vaccination or the Thirty-nine Articles, and equally efficacious. He was a good father, and "the Owl" had "favoured" him from infancy, inheriting qualities which were as far from being "dernier cri" as were his means. He was honest, truthful, and domesticated; consequently, a foregone failure in the eyes of his more modern acquaintances. But when he carried off the widow from under their guns, they began to think that there must be something in him. May be it was the widow who discovered it.

Not long after marriage, Jack found that his regimental duties kept him longer than was good for his happiness from the side of his wife, and he sent in his papers. There were, of course, some people who said that she sent them in for him, the pair were so extra-domesticated. Anyway the Regiment was honestly sorry to lose its "Owl," while Mrs. Hayly rejoiced at her approaching sole proprietorship. The outer world shrugged its shoulders, worldly-wisely, or regretfully; one section, male, agreeing that a man would be insane to go to India with a pretty wife plus eight thousand a year; the other, female, lamenting that it would get no amusing conversation, its Society papers no piquant paragraphs out of a mere commonplace domestic felicity.

In the following autumn the Vanderstetter dollars took a moor in Scotland for their latest partner; not a modern moor, supplied to meet the demand, ravaged alternately by shepherds and silk nets, and provided with some improvised shooting-lodge run up at the cost of about half a season's rent, but an original old-fashioned moor, with a Baronial Hall in its midst. The result of the hiring was not uncommon—typhoid fever, and Mrs. Hayly was the victim. Baronial Halls sound well, but they smell badly. Cleanliness may be next to godliness in the south, but sanitation is a very bad second to Sabbatarianism in the north. Mrs. Hayly grew worse, and before the blue hares turned white she died.

FUR-LINED OVERCOATS, ULSTERS, OVERCOATS, and CAPES are kept ready for immediate use at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

Poor Jack was nearly frantic, and when his landlord, with hyperborean consideration, offered to take the place off his hands without charging any extra rent he failed to detect the thistle in the theory, and assented unadvised. So inconsolable was he at first that his friends began to speculate on his marrying again in six months, after the manner of the most deeply afflicted, and when he finally decided on seeking distraction in a voyage to Australia, they were sure of it. Unlike most people who are quite sure, they were right. Scarcely landed, he fell violently in love, his grief adding fuel to the flame, with another auburn woman, whose hair was like his dead wife's; she was merely an unknown governess, and absolutely penniless.

When Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar heard of it they lifted up their eyes, and shrugged their shoulders, and took up their parable to mock him for a fool. Had not the late Mrs. Hayly left her relict all the Vanderstetter money, which she could do as she liked with, as long as he remained unmarried, but if he replaced her it was to go to her next of kin—a vague residuary legatee "next of kin," but more discoverable usually than a diamond-mine, and as grasping as a quicksand. But she was a woman who knew exactly what she wanted, and how to secure it. Vanderstetter had been a 'cute man, and had taught her to help him in his business matters, so with his maxims still in her ears she drew up her will herself on the back of a postcard, and saw that it was duly attested. There were not enough words in it to provide any legal doubt as to its meaning. What a fool their friend was to bring its proviso into force for the sake of the pretty face of a moneyless girl, said Zophar, Bildad, and Eliphaz.

Honest Jack, however, wrote home to his shooting tenant that he didn't know who his late wife's next of kin were, but that they must be hunted up, and the stuff handed over to them; an instruction and an expression which puzzled the man of law. "Fancy a man," said he, "not knowing who his wife's relatives are! But Hayly was always a fool." However, in due course he began to institute inquiries about the late Mrs. Hayly, formerly Vanderstetter, née—who? But he could not get any further; nobody knew who the late Mrs. Hayly was. Honest Jack had never asked her, and she used to be as reticent as the corpse of Vanderstetter, having profited by copybook exercises about "bygones." Jack only knew that she was all in all to him, and that was enough.

The family lawyer opined that it was a very interesting case, and his son confided to a chum that "the governor had got hold of a real soft thing!" Meanwhile, "the Owl" was causing his friends many searchings of heart. Surely there never was a fool so lucky as this fool! Having married a wife with no belongings and much money, he first lost the woman, and then deliberately threw away her gold by marrying another, with no belongings also, but, on the other hand, no money; and here he was now succeeding in making it for himself. There was something rotten in the state of Denmark, they said. But "the Owl" worked doggedly on and prospered, and was happy with his newly-beloved. He seemed merely to have broken the thread of his life accidentally, picked it up again, tied a fresh knot, and gone on as before.

One evening, when Jack and his wife had seen their curly-headed four-year-old boy safely tucked up in his bed, and had only the less demonstrative dinner-table between them, he said:—

"Millie, we've done pretty well here, and things are looking a bit better at home. That seven years' shooting lease my father granted is nearly up, I should like to go back and have a turn at the partridges on the old place, and, if you like it, perhaps settle down there again, and make an English farmer of young Curlywigs. Besides, I really must go and look after those lawyers and stir them up; the money's all right, but they must find the owners; and I should like to show you London, Millie."

"I was born in London," she said, after a pause.

"Born in London!" he exclaimed, and in the silence you could hear the cheese moving. The fool never thought his wife could have been born anywhere out of Heaven, and this new fact surprised him.

"Yes, you dear old goose," she laughed, "you married the little governess, whose employers gave her a good character, without asking about her birthplace or her pedigree; and gave up all your money for her, too."

"Born in London! Well, I'm d——," but the rest was stopped by a kiss.

"So you're a little Cockney," he laughed, when he had got free. "Have you any relatives living in London? You've never told me about your people."

"You never asked me before," she pouted. The man was habitually a fool. Then a look of pain came over her face, and she went on in a lower tone: "I have no people. Mother died when I was born. I quarrelled with father and my only sister, and made my own way till I came out here with the family with whom you found me. I have not heard from—from—home—not for ten years—not since father died."

"Poor lonely little waif," said Jack, fondling her, "and was your quarrel never made up?"

"Never!" she answered, and then, brightening, "I am not lonely any more, I have you and the boy."

Soon afterwards Jack Hayly carried out his idea, realised the property he had acquired in the Colony, remitted the money home, and followed it, taking back his wife and son to the home of his fathers.

A day or two after their arrival the lawyer and his son called, and, having offered the customary congratulations pro formâ, suggested proceeding to business.

They were all sitting in the little library, homelike with its dark mahogany fittings, china, and old prints, and gay with summer flowers.

"Mrs. Hayly will be present at our interview?" began the lawyer interrogatively.

"Certainly," replied Jack; "we have no secrets. She knows that I have been married before; that my wife died; and that I willingly gave up the money left me for her sake," and the love-look crossed between them.

"And he doesn't even regret it! A most unaccountable man," thought the lawyer.

"She must have been a clinker five years ago," was the son's unexpressed comment.

"Well, then, we had better commence with your late wife's will," the elder man said, wiping his spectacles, "a most extraordinary document," he added, casting a wistful look at his own pile of papers some two feet deep. "To carry out its provisions I and my son have devoted considerable time and trouble to this search. We have managed to narrow down the issue, but have not yet been finally successful."

"It is taking a precious long time," said Jack.

"My dear sir," said the lawyer leisurely, "the world has grown so large, and individuals move about with such frequency and rapidity, that it has become a matter of great difficulty to trace anyone."

"I should have thought that made it easier," interpolated Jack, "more people see them." But then he was a fool.

"We were totally unable for a long time," the other went on, taking no notice, "to discover when, where, or to whom the late Mr. Vanderstetter had been married, till at last my son suggested that the lady might have been an American, and——"

"But she wasn't," said Jack, curtly.

"I believe, Mr. Hayly, your information on that point is correct," went on the old man, in his stiffest manner, "but, at all events, she was married to Mr. Vanderstetter in America. Knowing your impatience to have this matter settled, I determined to leave no stone unturned, and, acting on my son's intelligent suggestion, I sent him over there to make personal investigations ('and have a good time' thought the young man). Eventually he succeeded in discovering in Chicago the authentic registration of the marriage between Hugo Vanderstetter and Catharine Amelia Harvey, spinster."

"What a strange coincidence!" said Jack.

His wife said nothing.

"But this was not the end of our difficulties," the father went on. "It had taken us more than two years of laborious search" ("Not forgetting a ledger full of expenses," thought the hopeful son) "to discover where and whom the late Mr. Vanderstetter married, and it took us another two to trace and finally identify the lady with the elder daughter of a Captain Harvey—a not altogether desirable gentleman, apparently—who resided for some years in various parts of London, and died ten years ago, leaving issue Catharine Amelia, afterwards Mrs. Vanderstetter, and Amy Millicent, the next of kin we are still searching for, but all trace of whom seems lost."

"I am Amy Millicent," said Mrs. Hayly.

"Thank God!" said the fool. But he didn't mean what the lawyer thought he did; he was thinking of a sister's reparation. Then he went on: "You forgot my second wife's maiden name was Amy Millicent Harvey, I suppose?"

"No, no, of course not; but I—er—er—thought," he shuffled, "that—er—as you said just now it was a coincidence; I believed this lady was an Australian born."

"What did this fool want to come home for, and spoil my free trip to the Antipodes?" grumbled the son to himself.

Meanwhile, his father had recovered his equanimity and started afresh:

"Mr. Hayly, I congratulate you on the discovery, but, granting that this lady's statement is accurate, you have married your deceased wife's sister, and it is my opinion that such marriage being illegal, and, therefore, nul and void, the money devised in the will does not pass from you at all."

"But the marriage took place in Australia, where it is legal," snapped the son. "Does the money pass with change of domicile? Because if Mr. Hayly were to take many voyages between England and Australia, accompanied by—by—the next-of-kin, it seems to me there might be complications. It would belong to him here, and to her there."

"There is no recorded case on the point, and I am unable to advise at present," said his father, scenting a case for the Superior Courts from afar.

"Gentlemen," said the next of kin, quietly, "my sister made a good will on a post-card; I will settle this in one minute. If, owing to the validity of our marriage in Australia the money passes to me, I give it to my husband now. If it does not, the marriage being no marriage in this country, your stupid old Parliament is sure to pass a law soon making it one, and I will give it to him then. Any way it shall be his. Good morning."

Then the worthy solicitors shook their heads, and packed up their papers, and went home regretting they had not skinned the shoot entirely.

MUSIC.

THE new Queen's Hall in Langham-place was inaugurated with a semi-private conversazione on Saturday, the Prince of Wales and the Royal Amateur Orchestra had it for a smoking concert on Monday, and next Saturday Madame Albani and Mr. Lloyd will sing at a public performance of Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise." Considering that Mr. Newman was as recently as Monday last trying voices for the choir, it might have been thought a prudential matter to have postponed a choral concert till the chorus was properly formed and trained, and thereby to have avoided one, at any rate, of the mistakes of the disastrous season of Promenade Concerts last autumn. Next Saturday's performance is, however, only an isolated one, and it is not proposed to start the regular season of twelve Saturday concerts till January 20 by which time it is hoped Mr. Cowen will be in a position to offer a better choral performance than he was able to give at Covent Garden. There are also other matters in which the management will, I think, learn by experience. Saturday, for example, is notoriously the very worst evening in the week for concerts of this sort. Those ladies who patronise serious concerts are either at home attending to their domestic duties on Saturday night, or are festively inclined and prefer the theatre. At any rate, many people—Mr. Cowen himself among the number—have already tried Saturday evening concerts, but without success. Also, I think, it will be found a fatal mistake to ask half-a-crown for the gallery. It is true it is re-christened the "second balcony," and is a luxurious place for comfort and also for seeing and hearing, but the idea that prices should start at the nimble shilling is deep rooted in the British musical breast. An endeavour is to be made to make the Royal circle the most expensive seats; but what is really wanted for the new hall is a scale of more rational prices, from five shillings to a shilling.

Meanwhile the Queen's Hall is both comfortable and beautiful, a very different sort of building indeed to that to which London concert-goers have hitherto been accustomed. The passages are heated, so that the terrible draughts which are among the great annoyances of ordinary concert-going, are avoided, tilt-up seats and carpeted passages are provided even in the gallery, there are luxurious corridors and lobbies, the place is lofty and well ventilated, and lit with electric lights and gas, the seats on the floor rise in tiers so that every one can see and hear perfectly, and seventeen exits into three streets ought to make the place quite safe in case of fire or panic. Except as to the Royal box, which only needs a dog on its ledge to realise a Punch-and-Judy show, the auditorium is artistic and even handsome, the painted ceiling is pleasant to the eye, and at the back of the band-stand is a very fine organ, a thing which in most of our London concert halls is lacking. There are also in the building a restaurant, and a smaller hall, holding 500, for chamber concerts or dances. The Queen's Hall was, I believe, erected by Mr. Ravenscroft, of the Birkbeck Bank, and it deserves to prove a big success. Indeed, I am sure it will be so, if only it be not, like the English Opera-House, stifled at the outset by ridiculously high prices.

The Imperial Institute is probably safe under its Royal charter, or otherwise it would be interesting to know the views of the County Council as to the smoking concerts which have just been started there. The "temporary hall" where the smoking takes place is built of wood, and apart from two spiral iron staircases, which certainly could not be used in case of panic, there is only one exit in all. This delectable building also has a large gallery, with wooden supports, and merely a small iron spiral staircase for exit and entrance. And yet, if it be necessary to give smoking concerts at the Imperial Institute at all, on either side of this shanty there are fireproof corridors, each capable of holding a thousand people.

An organist in one of the professional papers makes a queer complaint against the clergy. He declares that, although he has heard prayers offered for almost every other person connected with the Church, no petition is ever put up for the organist. Even Jews, Turks, infidels, and heretics get an occasional word, but unless he comes within the wide sweeping expression of "all sorts and conditions of men," the organist is forgotten. I really do not know why. Perhaps he is considered past praying for, or the curtain in front of the organ-loft—so useful when the musician slips out at sermon time to smoke his pipe in the churchyard—causes him to be overlooked. But if the organist really thinks it will make him a better musician, or cause him to play more lively tunes, he should certainly bring before the Bishop of his Diocese the desirability of a section of the Prayer Book all to himself.

The English Ladies' Orchestra has just made its début at Chelmsford, and hopes to give a concert in London next season. The band consists of about fifty executants, all ladies; one pair of rosy lips even attacking that delightful instrument the saxophone. The only male in the band is Mr. J. S. Liddle, the conductor. And yet I fancy the earliest wielder of the bâton was a lady. One is, at any rate, mentioned in Pepys' diary.

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one-half West-end price.—PHILLIPS & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to latest fashion. Perfect fit guaranteed. Caution, the only address, other people are trading on our name.

M. Paderewski, at the London Symphony Concert last week, gave a reading of the Schumann concerto, which, especially as to the first movement, was more astonishing than admirable. The great player was, however, quite at his best in his own Polish Fantasia, which also he is to play at the Crystal Palace next Saturday week. M Siloti, the Russian pianist, has likewise given a couple of recitals, paying special attention to the music of his fellow-countrymen, which is little known here.

Herr Klengel's new violoncello concerto in A minor, which was produced at the Crystal Palace on Saturday, is too short and little developed to be considered a concerto, but it is an effective piece of display, particularly as to a brilliant cadenza which joins the intermezzo to the finale. At this concert Mr. Oudin, who has just returned from St. Petersburg, where he had sung the selfsame work at the Tschaikowsky Memorial Concert, introduced a somewhat melancholy serenade from the pen of the deceased Russian master. On Monday the Royal Orchestra gave a smoking concert at the Queen's Hall, in the presence of the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Saxe Coburg (late of Edinburgh) for once resuming the first violin. The music comprised Sullivan's Imperial March and some overtures, but there was a big attendance of titled people, including Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, Prince Ernest of Hohenlohe, the Duke of Connaught, the Lord Chancellor, the Russian Ambassador, and a couple of bakers' dozens of Peers, besides some of the musical knights and other hangers-on.

On Monday it was exactly half a century since Balfe's "Bohemian Girl" was produced by Bunn at Drury Lane, and a performance to celebrate the jubilee of this much-derided work, which is still popular in the country, was given on the same stage by Sir A. Harris. To pretend, as some have done, that the cast which included Madame Fanny Moody and Mr. Ben Davies as Arline and Thaddeus was the best that had ever appeared in this opera was, of course, absurd. In 1858, for example, at Her Majesty's the two rôles were sung by Piccolomini and Giuglini. But the two artists, nevertheless, sang well, and, despite an elephantine Devilshoof, a Hungarian Gipsy Queen, and a Teutonic conductor, Balfe's sugary melodies received quite as much justice as they merited. On the same night memorial performances were given by the Carl Rosa troupe at Edinburgh and by the Burns-Crotty Company at Bradford.

It has, by the way, been stated that the Carl Rosa Company have secured the sole right to perform Berlioz's "Faust" on the stage. This is a grotesque error. Everybody is at perfect liberty to play Berlioz's "Faust" either on the stage or in the concert room. But one of the English translations is still copyright, and this, doubtless, the Carl Rosa Company hold, although of course, as in the case of "Faust," anybody can make his own translation.

Sir A. Harris has just secured Covent Garden for another year—that is to say, until the spring of 1895—and, in fact, this time he had no serious competitor. In all probability he will produce the opera "L'Attaque du Moulin," by Zola, Gallet, and Bruneau, in English before the regular season. Indeed, his répertoire of suggested novelties is now so large that it would be absolutely impracticable to produce them all during the grand season.

Mr. Charles Mapleson, who died last week, was himself a practical joker, but he was in New York the victim of a champion hoax. It was during his bachelor days, when Charles was a bit of a dandy. One day he received a letter, apparently from a wealthy young lady, declaring she was enamoured of him, and entreating him to call at her house at eight o'clock next evening. The house was in one of the most fashionable quarters of New York, and Charles, faultlessly attired, took a carriage through the snow, and arrived at the mansion, which was in utter darkness. A knock brought a trim ladies' maid, who, with a twinkle in her eye, told the young man he was expected, but begged him to be quiet, and to take off his dress boots. It had cost Charles half an hour to get those boots on, but at the bidding of beauty, off they came. The maid then led him through some dark passages till she came to a door, and he was bidden to knock and enter. He did so, and rushing into the brilliantly-lighted room, his boots in his hand, he found a dozen of his most intimate male friends.

Charles Mapleson, however, had a warm heart. A poor fellow was ill in New York and apparently dying, but Charles nursed him, sitting up night after night, and ultimately pulled him through. He afterwards comically told his consternation when, after the anxiety was over, he discovered himself wearing his Tuesday waistcoat on a Friday.

Sir Arthur Sullivan is now in Berlin superintending the rehearsals of his "Ivanhoe." In certain interested quarters there seems to have been a good deal of opposition to the production of this work, but the Emperor has put his foot down, and it is to be heard at the Imperial opera in January. Even before that time "Utopia, Limited," will be produced at Berlin in German.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER restores the colour, renews the growth, arrests the fall, cleanses the scalp.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—There is no form of lying more common than that Sheridan satirises in his definition of an "impromptu" as the slow result of hours of preparation. It was, of course, "set a thief to catch a thief" with Sheridan, who himself told the most colossal lie of the kind when he asserted persistently that "The School for Scandal" was rattled off in a few months; whereas his papers prove that this masterpiece was a skilful blend of two plays to whose composition and construction he had given years of his life. Only less colossal is the lie which after countless appearances in literature and biography, and a patriarchal life of 150 years, has got at last its quietus at the hands of Dr. Richard Garnett:—

"I wrote 'Vathek' when I was twenty-two years old," declared Beckford to Redding. "I wrote it in one sitting, and in French. It cost me three days and two nights of hard labour. I never took my clothes off the whole time. This severe application made me very ill."

Up to to-day this startling statement was accepted implicitly by everyone, even by Dr. Garnett himself, who repeats it in his notice of Beckford contributed to the "Dictionary of National Biography;" yet a correspondence of Beckford with the Rev. Samuel Henley, to which the Editor of the sumptuous edition of "Vathek" (1) now published has had access, puts it beyond a doubt that its production cost its author nearly a year's intermittent labour. On the other hand, Beckford overstated the age at which he produced the book—really written when he was but twenty-one. It was always more credible, however, that "Vathek" was written by a very young man than that it was written in a very short time, since it is disfigured by the most exasperating impertinences and puerilities, and reminds you of nothing so much as a majestic cathedral whose altars are made into baby-houses of tinsel, toy-images, and paper flowers. I cannot understand how Dr. Garnett, of all men, should add to these irritating trivialities and incongruities the pretty, petty,

(1) "Vathek": an Arabian tale. By William Beckford. Edited by Richard Garnett, LL.D. With notes by Samuel Henley, and Etchings by Herbert Nye. (London: Lawrence & Bullen.)
(2) "Mary Stuart." By John Skelton, C.B., LL.D. (London: Boussod, Valadon & Co., 5, Regent-street.)
(3) "Carmina Mariana." An English Anthology in Verse in Honour of or in Relation to the Blessed Virgin Mary. Collected and arranged by Orby Shipley, M.A. (London: Printed for the Editor by Spottiswoode & Co.)
(4) "The Life of Marie Antoinette." By Maxime De La Rocheterie. Translated from the French by Cora Hamilton Bell. 2 Vols. (London: James R. Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.)
(5) "The Last Earls of Barrymore." 1769—1824. By John Robert Robertson. (London: Sampson Low & Co.)

if graceful, illustrations, which would be in place in a child's book of fairy tales, but are about as appropriate to the heart-shaking conceptions of the incantations of Caraths and of the horrors of the Hall of Eblis as Nero's fiddling to the burning of Rome.

Another édition de luxe, the most sumptuous probably of the year, is Dr. Skelton's "Mary Stuart" (²), superbly illustrated by reproductions of portraits from the collections of the Queen, of the French Government, of the Duc d'Aumale, of the Dukes of Devonshire and of Hamilton, of the Marquis of Salisbury, of the Earls of Morton and of Lauderdale, &c. Dr. Skelton, however, is no mere carpet knight, whose worship of his Dulcinea expresses itself solely in the loveliness and costliness of the ornaments wherewith he adorns her, since he has spent many a year and broken many a lance in her service. His Mariolatry is almost as much a religion as that which has produced "Carmina Mariana" (³), that famous 'vert, Mr. Orby Shipley's anthology of English verse in honour of the Blessed Virgin—an admirable collection. But, like almost all the writers on either side of this controversy, Dr. Skelton proves too much, and the excess of his Mariolatry disposes you to join the iconoclasts. Is it not strange that, after centuries, "the love and hatred borne Mary Stuart should each be in the extremest degree"? Her magnetic personality cannot explain it all, nor her sex, nor her rank, nor even her death. There is something religious in the fury of this blind fanaticism, and its secret is that it has been pressed into the service of a Creed.

The murder of Mary (says Dr. Skelton) was the great Protestant blunder as the massacre of St. Bartholomew was the great Catholic blunder. Tens of thousands were moved then, hundreds of thousands in every age have been moved since by the tragic story; and it is sentiment, not logic, which rules the world.

And certainly Mary herself held her murder to be a Catholic martyrdom, and died with a martyr's fortitude. A few hours before her execution she writes to the King of France:—

La religion catholique et le maintien du droit que Dieu m'a donné a ceste couronne sont les deux points de ma condemnation, et toutes-fois ils ne me veulent permettre de dire que c'est pour la religion catholique que je meurs.

And the consciousness of martyrdom must have had its part in the singular serenity of her death. That other Queen, whose life is read always by the sunset glow of her death, Marie Antoinette, has found in M. Maxime de la Rocheterie, a biographer so brilliant that you read the thousand-times told story with all the interest of the latest and most thrilling novel. He seems to me in this engrossing biography of "Marie Antoinette" (⁴)—which has had the honour of being crowned by the Académie Francaise, and the advantage of being translated by Miss Cora Hamilton Bell—to have made out a better case for his client than Dr. Skelton for Mary Stuart. If, however, M. Maxime de la Rocheterie should fail to convince your reason, he most assuredly does not fail to enlist your sympathy; for all the eloquence of Burke could not move you more than this artistically-told tragedy. But, indeed, how frigid Burke's famous outburst reads beside this grave-digger's bill for thrusting the mutilated remains of the Goddess of the Petit Trianon entertainments into a hole in an obscure corner of the cemetery of the Madeleine!—

The Widow Capet, for the bier ... 6 livres.
For the grave and gravediggers' ... 25 livres.

Do you remember the speech with which the porter breaks the tension in "Macbeth" of Duncan's murder? From "Mary Stuart" and "Marie Antoinette" to "The Last Earls of Barrymore" (⁵) is a transition as abrupt, incongruous, and grotesque. Mr. John R. Robinson gives you in this lively volume a vivid picture of high life in the last century, which in this century would be thought coarse to brutality even as "high life below stairs." What "excellent fooling" this is to be sure! The body of a coachman, who was thrown from his box and killed in driving some guests to the Earl's house, is thrust between a sleeping husband and wife, who, after a night of horror, are charged the next day with his murder! A footman is strapped into a coffin, which is laid at night at a door whose bell is rung furiously. The maid upon opening the door and seeing the coffin screams and faints, and brings down the master of the house, who sends a bullet through the coffin within half an inch of the footman's head! The book abounds in exquisite drolleries of this sort played by the intimates of George IV.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—We had a lovely prowl among the West End shops on Monday. How you would enjoy one with us after your long, long years of scarcely interrupted seclusion in the country. We were bent on buying Christmas-boxes, and could there be a better place than Bond-street for such purchases? Paris? Well, perhaps so; but I hear that prices are simply terrific in that delightful capital. I prefer mine own familiar Bond-street and its neighbouring delightful thoroughfares. Others have loved them before us, and others will love them when we are forgotten. Could we only see the ghosts that haunt them, strolling up and down Piccadilly and Pall Mall, they would far outnumber the crowds of the living and visible.

Attracted by some pretty painted satin sachets in the window, we turned into the shop where the now well-known 4711 Eau de Cologne is vended. The sachets proved, on inspection, to be all our fancy painted them when looking through the glass. It is not ever thus, as you may be aware. There are certain fabrics which, seen from the outside of a shop window, appear all that is desirable, but disillusionment promptly sets in when they are presented to the vision without that flattering medium. The satin was decorated with paintings in the French style, carefully executed in soft colouring. The sachets are in all sizes, and can be scented to order with any kind of perfume that the buyer may select. Another form of Christmas present is a large box containing six bottles of the celebrated 4711 itself, tied up in white paper, with daintily-coloured ribbons, and ornamented with a really charming photograph, cabinet size, representing pretty girls in Swedish attire. They would make good studies for fancy ball costumes. There are some score or so of different dresses, all skilfully coloured by hand. The photographs are mounted on stiff cardboard, and are quite separate from the box itself. By the way, have you ever discovered what a good cure for toothache is a little eau de Cologne mixed with a small quantity of warm water?

Next we turned into the Æsthetic Gallery to have a look at the shadow silks about which we had heard so much. Proceeding through a front room irradiated by the softened glow of shaded lamps, we were mightily heartened and encouraged by the sight of a large inner apartment, nearly all of the beautiful silks in which are of English make. There are cushions made of Spitalfields brocade and frilled with silk from looms at Macclesfield. Pretty chairs are upholstered in printed velvets from Mr. Wardle's silk works at Leek. One chair is covered with shadow silk in a lovely design of irises on a ground of pinkish pearl and green. Across this runs the "shadow" of the pale mauve woof, the silk being made in this way. When the threads forming the warp are stretched upon the weaver's frame the flowers or other design is printed upon them, and afterwards the shuttles, threaded with whatever colour the "shadow" is to be in, fly in and out, over and under, forming the woof. The effect is wholly different from that of a shot. It is more like the bloom on fruit, eluding the eye at one moment and reappearing or disappearing with every change of light.

In an inner room are thousands of pounds' wort'

HUNTING SEASON, 1893-4.—Busvine's new designs and for this year include several special novelties in Rid Coats for Walking and Driving, Walking Jackets Can be seen at 4, Brook-street, or will be sent by r JOHN BUSVINE, by special appointments to the P the Empress of Germany, the Empress of Aust old embroideries. Being told that one piece was priced at £300, we asked to see it, and were glad that we had done so, for it proved to be a length about thirty yards of very wide soft silk, close and firm of make, and rather resembling China crêpe, embroidered with coloured flowers in a most elaborate design, and both sides exactly alike. That is the wonder of it. Think of the neatness of stitchery necessary to bring about such perfection of finish as this. Would it not make a lovely hanging for the walls of a boudoir? What a nice Christmas-box this would be for some lucky woman. There were, besides, chairs, cushions, fans, lamp-shades of the loveliest, big blotters covered with satin, silk, and velvet, and many other trifles of the beautiful kind.

We met Mrs. Fourstars there, and accompanied her and her children to Westbourne Grove, whither they were bound to visit Whiteley's Christmas Bazaar, a wonderful show of toys of all kinds, including several ingenious "penny-in-the-slot" mechanical toys, in which Maud and I were quite as much interested as the chickabiddies. I should like to be very rich and have an indefinite number of these to set going. It is so interesting to find out what they will do when the humble necessary penny starts the mechanism.

I see that Miss Braddon, in her pretty story, "The Christmas Hirelings," in the Lady's Pictorial, makes a strong protest against over-educating girls' minds at the expense of their bodies. There is far too much of this going on at the present time, and I am glad that the well-known novelist has uttered herself upon the subject.

Maud and I on entering a pretty drawing-room to make a call the other afternoon found a very attractive picture presented to our eyes. There was no fire in the room and no other light than that afforded by a little lamp table which was placed in the centre of a large snow-white fleecy sheepskin rug. The lamp shed a rosy glow upon all around it within a radius of about four yards. One of the immediate objects upon which its radiance was cast, and the one which caught our eyes immediately on coming round the door, was a tartan stocking and a scarlet slipper; also—I may remark in passing—a very neat ankle. This belonged to one of our friends who was seated on the rug reading a novel, and with her arm round a sweet little black kitten. She was in a black gown covered with jet which scintillated in the light of the ruddy lamp. On the other side of the latter was her sister in a scarlet dress with black velvet trimmings, and stretched full length by her side was her pet fox-terrier. You cannot think what a nice group these bipeds and quadrupeds made. A box of chocolate creams was an interesting item in the tableau. The lamp struck us as being particularly charming, and we immediately asked all about it. It was an Ardent portable lamp-heating table, a Belgian invention which makes a large room beautifully warm without any fire, and at an expenditure of one penny for every three hours in which it burns at full height. The bulge of the chimney is made of ruby glass, which renders the light very bright and cheerful. This lamp is fitted with a deflector which throws the heat down on the floor, and consequently one's feet are always warm. The table has iron supports and iron feet, and is so constructed that it is almost impossible to throw it over, being rather heavy and extremely strong. I think you would be delighted with one of them.

You asked me if the cloth fur-lined rugs that I told you of some time ago would be useful for long drives to dinner-parties in the country. I should say they would be the very thing, being so made as to form a complete sack into which the feet and knees are thrust. It is perfectly miserable to sit down to dinner with very cold feet, one consequence of doing so being probably a burning face; and yet it is impossible to wear warm stockings and warm shoes at a dinner-party. With a pair of swansdown overshoes and one of these fur sacks, as they are called, one ought to emerge from the carriage as warm and comfortable as if one had just come down from dressing. Shall I send you one? I will, at least, ascertain the price and send it to you.

What should we do without furs? I think I have told you of all the fashionable styles this year. I see that hole animals are even more worn as boas than they were last season. Do you not think the style a very hideous one? The poor little heads look so forlorn, and the little helpless hanging paws, even more than the heads, seem to appeal to our pity. Bands of fur are not so much worn on skirts of dresses as they were, but outlines are still hemmed with them, as, for instance, a brown cloth dress which one of our friends is wearing, is hemmed with beaver, as well as the three capes which supplement the collar. Ermine is certainly not fit for wearing in daylight. It is cold-looking, and it soils so readily that only those who are rich enough to have several sets of furs would venture on purchasing one for day wear. As a lining it is incomparable. A bride of our acquaintance has in her trousseau a grey velvet cloak lined with ermine, and bordered with pink plush embroidered in silver and gold. This elaborate garment was made on purpose to suit the embroidery, which was a present from a wealthy uncle just home from India. I rather like ermine on little children, and I saw a sweet little girl the other day in a white cloth coat trimmed with this fur, and worn over a dress to match. It seems odd to see children in high puffed sleeves, but those of them who are old enough love to be dressed "like mother." It is one of the arguments against eccentricity of costume that children like these unreasonable protrusions.

In the Park the other day I saw a small boy, probably aged five, in an overcoat of scarlet cloth, braided hussar fashion, and bordered with astrachan. Maud and I began to talk to him, as he was in some trouble about losing his glove, and when we had found it for him, and his mind again became placid, he informed us that he had five pockets in his overcoat, and showed us where they all were. Out of curiosity we asked, "What do you keep in all those pockets?" and the miscellaneous assortment of articles that he turned out of them amused us immensely. I need not enter upon the list, as you have young brothers of your own, and can divine them pretty accurately, no doubt, but one of the curiosities of the collection was a small piece of soap. We asked what in the world he carried soap about with him for, and he said he was always intending some day when nurse's back was turned to wash the wings of a very streaky duck that frequents Kensington Gardens. I hope nurse will never turn her back, as he will probably get drowned in the attempt.

I want to talk to you about men's clothes. Are you aware that there is the greatest possible difference in the curve of the hat brims? To the ordinary mind men's hats look all alike, but when you talk to a man about them you become aware that there is considerable art in selecting a hat with just the right bend of brim to suit the wearer. Some men like curly brims, others like them rather flat, and I suppose that is why a man has to try on about twenty before he finally makes a selection. I think I told you that I once had the benefit of watching a man choose a hat in a certain shop in the West-end of London. I have often seen women take a long time over deciding upon a bonnet, but I have never seen any woman take more particular pains, and make more liberal use of a hand-glass, than this gentleman, who was unaware that any one but the shopman was assisting at the operation.

Do you like the long tight coachman's cloth coats that men have been wearing for the last year or so? I do. I think that a good figure is shown to great advantage in these, but it is sometimes great fun to watch a man in one of them when he is in a hurry. The skirts curve out from about his feet in such a curious way when he walks very fast. I suppose they are only intended for standing about at race meetings and for dignified promenades in the paddock and elsewhere. The newest coat is quite tight in the back, and has a velvet collar and cuffs. The regular coachman's coat, semi-fitting and made with huge white pearl buttons on the double-breasted front, is to my mind a most hideous article of dress.

Last week London was full of roses, the barrows in the streets being heaped up with lovely buds of the

The most beautiful of Winter Garments are those of Nature's own production—FURS. For an elegant fit, genuine and best furs, go to NICHOLAY'S, Manufacturing Furriers, 170, Oxford-street, London. Seal Jackets re-made to fashionable shapes. Moderate prices.

Gloire de Dijon sort. These do not last for any time when brought home. They are only a disappointment and a distress to the lover of flowers. Chrysanthemums are the only really satisfactory blossoms. They last for weeks if taken care of, and are lovely enough to please any taste. The variety of colour seems to increase with every year; but perhaps none are so perfectly beautiful as the pure white, with petals of irregular length and blossoms of varying size. Arranged with a few fronds of maiden hair fern they look quite perfect and suit any decorations. Violets, which are also plentiful enough in town just now, last but a single day. However, they remain fragrant for a long time if shut into a drawer with one's papers or laces. Carnations have also arrived in abundance from the South, and though they last rather longer than roses, they cannot be said to be satisfactory. The perfume at first is delicious, but the edges of the petals soon curl up, shrivel, and turn black. The solanum, with its bright red-and-orange berries, continues to be the prettiest possible of winter plants for the decorations on the table or in the drawing-room, the ugly pot being hidden in a jardinière of more or less graceful form, in china or pottery. Some of the former have a very sickly look, the colours being much too pale to assort well with wintry surroundings. Maiden-hair flourishes extremely well in drawing-rooms at this time of year, and defies the cold nights with a fortitude that is surprising in so delicate a plant. There is one thing, however, that makes it strike its colours immediately, and that is gas. However, this is a most unpopular light at the present moment, people who cannot command the electric light satisfying themselves with lamps.

We went for a little trip to Brighton on Thursday, and were most fortunate in the matter of weather, for not only was there bright sunshine, but there was a delightful freshness in the air which was quite invigorating. Brighton is not so full as usual this year, even the Métropole having an occasional spare room. Still, there are several smart people about, and remembering the bad times and the general hard-upedness, I think that the Brighton tradespeople should be thankful for even the small mercies they are receiving, as they are a great deal better off than those of other fashionable resorts. 1893 has indeed been a cruel year, and I am sure every one will welcome with special zest the appearance of 1894.

We went to spend the day with Lilla, who is staying at the Métropole, so, of course, we did a certain amount of shopping, and I am sure you will be interested to hear our adventures in this direction. First, we went to a costumier's on the King's-road, Messrs. Barrance & Ford's. They are, comparatively speaking, a new institution in Brighton, but, judging from the amount of work they seem to have in hand, they appear likely to develop into a very lasting institution. There can be no doubt that they are remarkably "smart," and always (I am told) have lots of stylish models to show. These models, too, are sensibly sold later in the season at a large reduction, so I have made up my mind to run down to Brighton in a month or so's time, and share in the spoil. The thought of bargains to come did not, however, prevent me from ordering a frock; and, from all I am told, I have every confidence that my experiment will turn out a great success, for their fitter, I hear, is "very first-class." From there we called in at Mutton's and had a preliminary lunch, and then hurried on to Messrs. Hannington's—one of the oldest-established and best-known shops in the South of England. To go into Messrs. Hannington's gives one a very restful feeling. There is never any bustle or noise, and the gentlemen who have grown white-haired in the service of the firm, and who look after you in the centre of the shop, are a splendid example to others who fill similar positions in some of our large West-end London houses.

Of course, on our way back to the front, we looked in at Hills's, in East-street (who ever goes to Brighton who does not do so?) This is really a wonderful place, and is one of the most tempting shops I have ever been into. Mr. Hill seems to have the knack of buying just what everyone wants, but even if people fancy they don't want what he has bought for them, he then seems to have the further knack of persuading them that they are wrong and that he is right, and invariably they leave his shop laden with parcels of his wonderful Viennese and other curios.

With wonderful appetites we hurried off to lunch at the Metropole, where we had a sumptuous repast, which, I believe, only cost the modest sum of three shillings a head. Many people, I know, do not like these fixed luncheons with the many little dishes, and finishing up with sweets and ices, but I do. Fred, for instance, who went with us, said he preferred a "cut off the joint," and listen what his "cut off the joint" consisted of. He began with half a lobster, then had some pigeon pie; followed this with two slices of pressed beef and some tomatoes, and then, as he said, "topped" this "snack" up with three slices of ham, though this "topping up" did not interfere with his further indulging in two helpings of Stilton cheese and about two whole sticks of celery. While he smoked a cigar, we sat with him in the conservatory, and passed quite a pleasant half-hour, the scene being both lively and interesting.

Lilla, however, soon interfered with our repose, and dragged us off for what she said was to be a walk, but which really resulted in more shopping. First she took us to a shop in the Western-road, Messrs. Chipperfield & Butler's, where she often picks up some wonderful bargains in the silk department. She tells me that Mr. Chipperfield boasts that he is the largest buyer of silk in Sussex, and she says that if you want anything out of the common, and find Mr. Chipperfield himself, he will turn the shelves topsy-turvy in order to make sure of pleasing you.

From there we went to the stores, and most excellent stores they are—reminding us very much of the Army and Navy Stores in town—though naturally on a very much smaller scale. As Lilla is staying at a hotel, she does not herself make many purchases there, but her friend, Mrs. Williams, who, you know, is blessed with a little family of seven children, says she doesn't know what she should do without these stores. She described in the most ecstatic manner the excellence of the various things she procured there, and was especially strong in her approbation of the poultry and fish departments—where, to use her own expression, "the excellence of the food is only excelled by the civility of the attendants." Charlie went off with Mr. Williams to the wine department. They said they were only going to make some inquiries, but judging from a smile of satisfaction that pervaded their features on their return, and a disposition to continually wipe their moustaches, we came to the conclusion that their inquiries had taken more the form of sampling than anything else. Mr. Williams is most enthusiastic about this department, and he assured us that its manager Mr. Hughes had entirely by his personal efforts worked it up from the smallest of small beginnings to the most paying department of the whole stores.

We had by now had enough of shopping, so we went off for a constitutional on the sea-wall. Fancy going to Brighton for the day, and spending nearly all of it in shops instead of enjoying the delightful air along this excellent walk! If one went abroad and found such a magnificent frontage as there is at Brighton—extending, as it does, from Kemp Town on the east to West Brighton on the west—one would rave about it. But, of course, because we have Brighton in our own country, within an hour and a quarter of London, we treat it as a "matter of no importance." The recent addition of the electric light, too, has added considerably to the popularity of the King's-road. But I expect I have exhausted you with my narration of our day at dear Brighton about as much as the day itself exhausted us. So, beyond saying that we returned by a late train in a most comfortable and non-shaking Pullman carriage, I shall cease to bore you further.

RIDING HABITS.—A speciality in Riding Habits. Has been declared the best, without exception, by all ladies who have seen it. Quite new. Patented. Made only by G. S. WOLMERSHAUSEN & CO., LTD., 16, Gt. Marlborough-street, Regent-street, London, W.

MESSRS. REDFERN beg to announce that the models of Gowns, Coats, Mantles, &c., designed and prepared for winter wear, are now ready, and display the combined ideas of the latest London and Paris Houses.—27, New Bond-street, W.

You remember, doubtless, that I promised last week to let you have the recipe of my Christmas pudding, so I am sending it to you to-day. I am sure you will like it—it is the one that took the prize at the "TRUTH Competition" some years ago. We make a double quantity each year, as we send two or three puddings to friends in Paris, but we always keep one until the following New Year's Day twelvemonth, and I can assure you it has invariably turned out most excellent. Some people I know think it necessary to put brandy into the pudding several times during the year if they are desirous of keeping it. My pudding does not call for any such extravagance:—

Four lb. raisins, 4 lb. currants, 4 lb. suet, 4 lb. breadcrumbs, 1 lb. flour, 1 lb. brown sugar, rinds of 4 lemons chopped very fine, 2 nutmegs, 20 eggs, 1½ lb. mixed peel, ½ bottle of brandy. Mix all the ingredients together thoroughly, then add the brandy and eggs. Boil in basins for eight hours, after which the puddings will keep well. They must be boiled again for six hours when required for use.

Would you like to know how to prepare fillets of wild duck, with orange sauce?—

Cut the fillets from the duck, hack them a little on the under skin, put them in a mixture of oil and vinegar, with chopped onions and a few sprigs of parsley. Season with salt, pepper, and a tablespoonful of mushroom liquor, and leave them to marinade for an hour. When ready put two tablespoonfuls of salad oil into a santé pan. Lay in the fillets and set the pan over a good fire. Turn them often. When done, drain them and arrange in the form of a wreath round the dish. Make the following sauce:—Cut three oranges into halves, and squeeze the juice through a hair sieve into a china basin. Free the zest containing the oil of the oranges from the inner skin, and cut into thin slices. Throw all into rich beef stock with two large peppercorns, and set the vessel on a hot stove. When ready, pour the sauce into the centre of the wreath of fillets.

You should prepare tame duck in this way:—

Choose a good fat white duck, dress it carefully, without breaking the skin. Blanch the feet, cut off the small points, and truss, leaving opening for stuffing. Cut the wings off close to the body and remove the neck. Mix in a stewpan two ounces of butter, the juice of a lemon, and a sprinkling of salt. Fill the bird with this mixture, secure and form it into a good shape. Cover the bottom of the stewpan with barbs of lard (larding bacon), a sliced lemon, and a carrot also sliced, an onion stuck with cloves, a bunch of parsley, the tops of young onions or blades of chives, a gill of good stock, and a wineglassful of white wine. When thoroughly heated, lay in the duck, and cover it with slices of lemon screened with barbs of lard. Put on top an oiled or greased paper. Three-quarters of an hour before serving, let it come to a boil. Put fire under and over. When done, drain from the gravy, unlace, and dish. Pour round it orange sauce, as described in previous recipe, but instead of using beef stock to make it, throw in half an ounce of gelatine.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

MARIANI WINE

This inimitable COCA WINE is an aid to intellectual exertion, and is indispensable to brain-workers and others who suffer from Debility, Exhaustion, Mental Depression, Dyspepsia, Sleeplessness, Voice Fatigue; also to promote Convalescence. Written Testimonials from over 2,000 Physicians. "A powerful rejuvenator and renovator of the vital forces." Sold by Chemists, Grocers, and Stores, or delivered free by Importers, WILCOX & CO., 239, Oxford-street, London. 4s. per bottle, or 45s. dozen.

MOURNING FOR IMMEDIATE WEAR.

Messrs. JAY'S

Large and well-assorted STOCK includes a choice and varied selection of COSTUMES, MANTLES, and MILLINERY, suitable for any degree of Mourning, and ready for IMMEDIATE WEAR. Orders to special instructions are executed in a few hours, and Ladies are Waited Upon in any part of the country without any extra charge whatever.

JAY'S,
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

EXSHAW'S No. 1 BRANDY,
66/- per dozen.
SUPPLIED DIRECT TO THE PUBLIC.

CHAMPAGNES.
JULES CHAMPION & CO.'s (in All Sizes), 68/- Per Doz.
Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1884 (in Bottles only) 105/- per doz. Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1889 (in all sizes) 84/- per doz.
Lebeau & Co. Vintage 1889, 54/- per doz.

POWELL, TURNER, & CO.,
28, KING STREET, ST. JAMES'S, S.W.

CHUBB'S 128, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, LONDON, E.C.
FIRE RESISTING. JEWEL THIEF RESISTING.
WEST END BRANCH—
68, ST. JAMES'S STREET, PALL MALL, S.W. SAFES.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.
THE VIENNESE STRING BAND WILL PLAY DURING
3/6 DINNERS, 6 to 8.30. SEPARATE TABLES. NO CHARGE FOR ATTENDANCE. 5/-

JOHANNIS

KING OF NATURAL TABLE WATERS.

Promotes Digestion. Prolongs Life.
Prevents Gout and Rheumatism.

SPRINGS: Zollhaus, Germany.

LONDON OFFICES: 25, Regent Street, Waterloo Place.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.
300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.
ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.
Weavers of Dress Silks,
Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

TRIPLE SPLICED HOSIERY.

PATENT NO. 20,778.

For Ladies and Children.

For Comfort, Elasticity, and Wear-resisting qualities these goods are the best produced. They are SPLICED AT THE INSTEP, where stockings, when worn with lace-up boots and shoes, first show signs of wear. In the heels and feet there is also a splicing thread more than is found in ordinary Hosiery. Registered Trade Mark, "Musa Dye," on each pair. Colours guaranteed absolutely fast and clean.

Made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

To be obtained of ALL FIRST-CLASS DRAPERS & HOSIERS and WHOLESALE ONLY from the Patentees, DEBENHAM & FREEBODY, FLETCHER GATE, NOTTINGHAM.

MELLIN'S FOOD

For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

MELLIN'S EMULSION

Of COD LIVER OIL and HYPOPHOSPHITES.

The Finest Nutritive and Tonic Food for Delicate Children and Weakly Adults.

VERY PALATABLE. EASILY DIGESTED. PERFECTLY SAFE.

Price 1s., 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per Bottle.

MELLIN'S FOOD BISCUITS

(Manufactured by Carr & Co., Carlisle, especially for G. Mellin.)

DIGESTIVE. NOURISHING. SUSTAINING.

For Children after Weaning, the Aged, Dyspeptic, and for all who require a simple, Nutritious, and Sustaining Food.

Price 2s. and 3s. 6d. per Tin.

AN ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET ON THE FEEDING AND REARING OF INFANTS,
A Practical and Simple Treatise for Mothers, containing a large number of Portraits of Healthy and Beautiful Children, together with facsimiles of original testimonials which are of the greatest interest to all mothers, to be had, with samples, free by post on application to

Mellin's Food Works, Stafford Street, Peckham, S.E.

(The Original Firm, Established 1810.)

MAPPIN BROTHERS' "Queen's" Cutlery.

(PROTECTED.)

By Her Majesty's Special Warrant.

"Queen's" Cutlery is the finest in the World, has stood the test of over 80 years, supplied to the public by the actual manufacturers, direct from Queen's Works, Sheffield.

Mappin Brothers' Corporate Trade Mark is on all Queen's Manufactures in Plate and Cutlery.

Only London Show Rooms: 220, REGENT STREET, W.; AND 66, CHEAPSIDE, E.C. (Next Sir John Bennett's.)

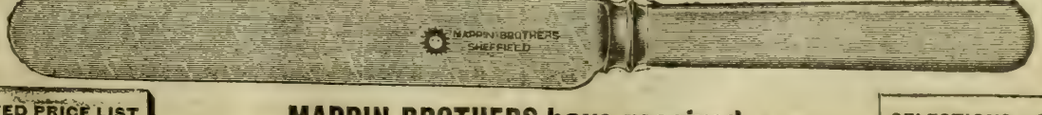
'Queen's' Plate.



SPOONS AND FORKS.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST-FREE to any part of the World.

MAPPIN BROTHERS have received THE HIGHEST AWARDS at the CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

SELECTIONS of Goods forwarded to the Country on APPROVAL

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW NOVELS, &c.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

VASHTI AND ESTHER: a Story of Society To-day. By the Writer of "Belle's Letters." 2 vols.

"The book will presently, I imagine, cause excitement in circles which were lately stirred by Mr. Benson's 'Dodo.' Everyone will read the book, which will pretty surely be talked about: for the writer has been daring enough to put into his story some very well-known persons. And though it is not for me to put the various caps on the right heads, some of the proper wearers will hardly, I fancy, be able to deny the fit of them."—Vanity Fair.

RED DIAMONDS. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, Author of "Dear Lady Disdain," &c. 3 vols.

THE BURDEN OF ISABEL. By J. MACLAREN COBBAN, Author of "The Red Sultan." 3 vols. [Immediately.

THE REBEL QUEEN. By WALTER BESANT, Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." 3 vols.

"We are inclined to rank 'The Rebel Queen' among the best of Mr. Besant's novels with a purpose. It is fresh and full of excellent character-drawing, and there is plenty of humour in it."—Standard.

THE WOMAN OF THE IRON BRACELETS. By FRANK BARRETT, Author of "Folly Morrison," &c. 3 vols.

"'The Woman of the Iron Bracelets' is very certainly not dull; on the contrary, one follows her to the last page with a keen desire to find out what the mystery is, and the interest is too well kept up from page to page to permit the reader to look prematurely to the end."—Guardian.

A WASTED CRIME. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat," &c. 2 vols.

"There is generally something daring and unusual in Mr. Christie Murray's stories which refreshes the weary plodder through the ordinary conventionalities of ordinary novels. . . . . 'A Wasted Crime' is a very bright and pleasantly-written little book."—Saturday Review.

TO HIS OWN MASTER. By ALAN ST. AUBYN, Author of "A Fellow of Trinity," &c. 3 vols.

"The greater part of the book is life-like, as well as marked by pathos and power. . . . . There is nowhere any lack of vigour, and 'To His Own Master' is certainly the best thing which its author has done."—Spectator.

OUTLAW AND LAWMAKER. By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED, Author of "The Romance of a Station," &c. 3 vols.

"A novel of high literary quality, remarkable power, and great interest. . . . There is really nothing to be said about the story that is not cordially and unreservedly laudatory. If the popularity attained by 'Outlaw and Lawmaker' prove proportionate to its merits, it should be one of the most widely read books of its year."—Daily Telegraph.

WOMAN AND THE MAN. By ROBERT BUCHANAN, Author of "The Shadow of the Sword," &c. 2 vols.

"The slender materials employed for the plot are worked up by skilful hands, the vexed question of a wife's duty to a reprobate husband is handled with tact, and the picture of a brave, pure woman is winningly delineated."—St. James's Gazette.

RUJUB, THE JUGGLER. By G. A. HENTY, Author of "The March to Magdala," &c. A New Edition, with 8 Full-page Illustrations by Stanley L. Wood. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt edges, 5s.

"One of Mr. Henty's most enthralling stories. . . . . Mr. Henty has led us to expect stirring incident and adventure in his books, and these he has given us in abundance in the present volume, while he has added a study of character of an extremely interesting kind. No book can be more unhesitatingly recommended for the school or home library."—British Weekly.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

THE DAYS OF HIS VANITY: a Passage in the Life of a Young Man. By SYDNEY GRUNDY. [Shortly.

DR. PASCAL. By EMILE ZOLA, Author of "The Downfall," "The Dream," &c. Translated by Ernest A. Vizetelly. With a Portrait of the Author.

"A beautiful and most touching love story. . . . If anything were wanting to establish M. Zola's right to the title of the first of living novelists, 'Dr. Pascal' would put the question beyond dispute."—Vanity Fair.

THE GUN-RUNNER: a Romance of Zululand. By BERTRAM MITFORD. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood. Second Edition.

"Mr. Mitford's South African tales are always interesting; his latest, 'The Gun-Runner,' is positively thrilling. . . . The story is one that will be read with breathless interest, and it is, perhaps, the author's most telling piece of work."—Literary World.

THE LUCK OF GERARD RIDGELEY: a Tale of the Zulu Border. By BERTRAM MITFORD. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

HEATHER AND SNOW. By GEORGE MACDONALD.

"A book which no one can be anything but the better for reading. It is really a study in soul development and education, and a very beautifully worked-out one, too. . . . 'Heather and Snow' will be warmly welcomed by Dr. MacDonald's many admirers, and will provide much food for thought to all who read it."—Sylvia's Journal.

MRS. JULIET. By Mrs. A. W. HUNT, Author of "Thornicroft's Model."

"A fresh, attractive, and decidedly entertaining story."—Athenæum.

THE RED SULTAN. By J. MACLAREN COBBAN.

"Comparisons are odious, and therefore we will not say that in 'The Red Sultan' Mr. Stevenson's 'Kidnapped' has found its superior, but we will say that it has found a worthy peer."—Daily Chronicle.

BURGO'S ROMANCE. By T. W. SPEIGHT, Author of "The Mysteries of Heron Dyke," &c. (This Story forms the GENTLEMAN'S ANNUAL for 1893.) Demy 8vo, picture cover, 1s.

EMILE ZOLA. A Biographical and Critical Study. By R. H. SHERARD. With Portraits, Illustrations, and Facsimile Letter. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s.

"An admirable book, which will be 'rushed' at the libraries, is Mr. Sherard's 'Zola'—a model of what a biography should be, neither too meagre nor too bulky, told shortly and simply, and making the hero talk as far as possible. It is full of interesting anecdotes."—To-Day.

THE MAKING OF A NOVELIST: An Experiment in Autobiography. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of "Joseph's Coat." With a Portrait. Crown 8vo, Irish Cambric, 6s. [Shortly.

FROM PADDINGTON TO PENZANCE: the Record of a Summer Tramp from London to the Land's End. By CHARLES G. HARPER, Author of "The Brighton Road." With 105 Illustrations by the Author. Demy 8vo, brown holland, 16s.

"Mr. Harper is not only clever with his pencil but writes with grace and dexterity, and with a pleasant touch of originality. . . . . A book of this character, when well written, is always capital reading for the chimney corner; and in these drear November evenings there could be no cheerier volume for an armchair than Mr. Harper's admirably written and beautifully illustrated record of his summer wanderings in odd corners of Old England."—St. James's Budget.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

Messrs. Wm. Blackwood & Sons'

PUBLICATIONS.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED,

LIFE AND TIMES

OF THE RT. HON.

WILLIAM HENRY SMITH, M.P.

By Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P.,

Author of "Passages in the Life of Sir Lucian Elphin," "Meridiana," &c. With 3 Portraits, and numerous Illustrations from Drawings by HERBERT RAILTON, G. L. SEYMOUR, and Others.

Two Volumes, demy 8vo, 25s.

SUMMARY OF CONTENTS

Volume I.—Boyhood—Tavistock Grammar School—Enters Business and becomes Partner—Beginning of the Bookstall Business—The Strand Office in Early Morning—Candidate for Westminster—The Irish Church—Elementary Education—Elected to first London School Board—Thames Embankment Scheme—Financial Secretary to Treasury—Gladstone and the Vatican Decrees—The Suez Canal Shares—The Bulgarian Atrocities—The "Bag-and-Baggage" Policy—The Journal of a Discontented Man—First Lord of the Admiralty—The Berlin Congress.

Volume II.—Afghanistan and Zulu Wars—Causes of Conservative Defeat—The Fourth Party—Rise of Boycotting—Arrest of Irish Members—Mr. Bradlaugh—Assassination of Lord F. Cavendish and Mr. Bourke—Fall of Khartoum—Secretary for War—Gladstone accepts Home Rule—Riots in the West End—The "Round Table" Conference—First Lord of the Treasury and Leader of the House—Sudden Death of Lord Iddesleigh—The Queen and the Pope—"Parnellism and Crime"—Financial Crisis in the City—Sunday Opening of Museums—Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports—Last Illness and Death—Review of Smith's Life and Character—Conclusion.

Captain Lugard's Work on British East Africa.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED

THE RISE OF OUR EAST AFRICAN EMPIRE.

Early Efforts in Nyasaland and Uganda.

By CAPTAIN F. D. LUGARD, D.S.O., Hon. F.R.G.S., Diplom. F.R.S.G.S.

With 130 Illustrations and 14 Maps specially prepared for the work by E. G. RAVENSTEIN.

Two Volumes. Large demy 8vo., 42s.

EXTRACTS FROM SOME EARLY REVIEWS.

"Captain Lugard is the Bayard of African enterprise. . . . We have failed in our task if we have not shown that his work is not only an interesting narrative of one of the most memorable among many striking episodes in the history of Africa during the past ten years, but that it will take a permanent place as one of the most valuable contributions to a knowledge of this perplexing continent, and of the best ways of dealing with it."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"No one can rise from reading these volumes without feeling he has acquired a knowledge which he had not before of the scene, the actors, and the incidents of the great drama which is being played to posterity in Africa. . . . Alike to the ignorant and to the instructed, the book will offer matter for serious reflection."—Times.

"The book is something more than a narrative of events. It is instinct with life and movement. To the philanthropist, the sportsman, the statesman, the administrator, the mere pleasure-seeking reader, every chapter has its own absorbing interest. . . . . Yet has it all the charm of a romance, and it is one more example that truth is stranger than fiction."—Daily Chronicle.

"There is not in the great library of African travel which the last few years have given to the world a work more deserving of perusal and attention. . . . . A mine of valuable information and advice."—Scotsman.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

NEW NOVELS.

Paul Romer. A Novel.

By C. Y. HARGREAVES. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"A pretty and wholesome story, with much quiet power."—Observer.

"We could welcome more such stories, interesting and thoughtful and written in the sure and refined English of a thorough gentleman."—Literary World.

"A more wholesome and fascinating tale than 'Paul Romer' has not been told in print for many a day."—Daily Telegraph.

The Curb of Honour.

By M. BETHAM-EDWARDS. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"A delightful account of life in Pyrenean valleys, and some excellent studies of character."—Observer.

"Miss Betham-Edwards's new book contains some excellent descriptions of Pyrenean scenery and of life in one of the remote mountain valleys on the borderland between France and Spain."—Athenæum.

"Of course the story is painful, but it is told with great tact and restraint, and in its final chapters it has undeniable pathos."—Woman.

Margaret Drummond,

MILLIONAIRE. By SOPHIE F. F. VEITCH. 3 vols. Crown 8vo.

"A novel of real excellence."—Spectator.

"A strong and clever story, readable and bright from end to end."—Daily Telegraph.

"A very thorough and earnest piece of work."—Daily Chronicle.

"A vivid and truthful picture of a west coast parish."—National Observer.

NEW EDITIONS.

A Tangled Web.

By LADY LINDSAY. Price 6s.

One Virtue: a Fiction.

By CHARLES T. C. JAMES. Price 6s.

The Last Touches.

By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD. Price 3s. 6d.

The Dryburgh Edition of

THE WAVERLEY NOVELS. Vols. 1 to 14 now ready, illustrated by CHARLES GREEN, GORDON BROWNE, PAUL HARDY, LOCKHART BOGLE, WALTER PAGET, FRANK DADD, WILLIAM HOLE, R.S.A., JOHN WILLIAMSON, H. M. PAGET, W. H. OVEREND, and GODFREY C. HINDLEY. Crown 8vo. Price 5s. each.

"When complete, this will be the best popular edition in existence."—Christian World.

"This edition appears to improve as it goes on."—Athenæum.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, W.

"An amazingly clever book."—ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

A GRAY EYE OR SO.

In Three vols. By the author of "I Forbid the Banns."

* The FIRST and SECOND Editions being exhausted a THIRD Edition will be ready at the end of this week.*

MRS. CONNEY'S NEW NOVEL.

GOLD FOR DROSS.

In Three Vols. By the author of "A Ruthless Avenger," "A Lady Horsebreaker," &c.

SARAH DOUDNEY'S NEW NOVEL.

A ROMANCE OF LINCOLN'S INN.

In Two Vols. By the author of "Through Pain to Peace."

London: HUTCHINSON & CO., 34, Paternoster-row.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 938.—DECEMBER, 1893.—2s. 6d.

CONTENTS:—ARMED EUROPE: HOW COMING EVENTS CAST THEIR SHADOW BEFORE, by General Sir Archibald Alison, Bart., G.C.B.—THE STORY OF MARGRÉDEL: BEING A FIRESIDE HISTORY OF A FIFESHIRE FAMILY.—BEN JONSON IN EDINBURGH, by Professor Masson.—EARLSCOURT, chaps. XLI.-XLIII.—MAN'S PLACE IN THE COSMOS: PROFESSOR HUXLEY ON NATURE AND MAN, by Professor Andrew Seth.—SUCCESSFUL FISH-CULTURE IN THE HIGHLANDS, by John Bickerdyke.—POPE ALEXANDER VI. AND CÆSAR BORGIA: WERE THEY POISONED? by W. W. Story.—HOW TOMMY ATKINS IS FED.—THE RISE OF OUR EAST AFRICAN EMPIRE.—STEALING A SESSION.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

Seventh Edition, with additions, price 1s., post free.

NOSE and THROAT DISEASES. By GEORGE MOORE, M.D. Revised by Dr. LENNOX MOORE.

London: JAMES EPPS & CO., Ltd., 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street

Hurst & Blackett's PUBLICATIONS.

NEW WORK BY JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON.

In 2 vols. Crown 8vo. 21s.

A BOOK OF RECOLLECTIONS.

By JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON,

Author of "A Book about Lawyers," "A Book about Doctors," &c.

FOUR NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NOW READY AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

IN AN ALPINE VALLEY. By G. MANVILLE FENN, Author of "Mahme Nousie," "The Master of the Ceremonies," &c. 3 vols.

AT SOCIETY'S EXPENSE. By ALGERNON GISSING, Author of "A Moorland Idyl," "A Village Hampden," &c. 3 vols.

CHRISTINE. By Adeline Sergeant. Author of "Caspar Brooke's Daughter," "Sir Anthony," &c. 3 vols.

SECOND EDITION OF

TO RIGHT THE WRONG. By EDNA LYALL. Author of "Donovan," "We Two," "Knight-Errant," &c. 3 vols.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, Ltd., 13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE BEST OF THE NEW NOVELS.

AN ANCIENT ANCESTOR: A Tale of Three Weeks.

In three volumes. By CHARLES E. HALL.

Author of the "Truth" Prize Story, "I Revoke."

"Mr. Hall is quite an original novelist."—Glasgow Herald.

"A decidedly readable novel. Delightful description—varied incident—characters cleverly drawn."—Telegraph.

"The outcome of a holiday in Arran."—Athenæum.

"Especially good."—Public Opinion.

"The Ossianic myth—or verity?—is very skilfully woven into the love story."—Black and White.

"A bold experiment."—Scotsman.

"A brightly written, interesting, well-developed, and thoroughly healthy tale. We have nothing but praise. The elopement is capital, described with genuine humour."—Independent.

"Really laughable."—Saturday Review.

SKEFFINGTON & SON, Piccadilly.

LONDON LIBRARY

ST. JAMES'S SQUARE, S.W.

PRESIDENT ..... LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

The Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE, M.P. | The Very Rev. the DEAN of LLANDAFF.
Sir E. H. BUNBURY, Bart. | Sir HENRY BARKLY, K.C.B.

TRUSTEES.

Right Hon. Sir M. GRANT DUFF. | Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart
Right Hon. Earl of ROSEBERY.

The Library contains 130,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various languages.

Subscription £3 a year. Life Membership according to Age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-room open from Ten to Half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo, price 21s.; to Members, 16s.

C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

100,000 COPIES NOW READY OF

THE WOMAN AT HOME

For DECEMBER. 6d. Profusely Illustrated.

THE CRY of the CURLEW: A Christmas Story. By HEADON HILL. Illustrated.

THE PRINCESS LOUISE. By Katharine Lee. Illustrated. See the WOMAN at HOME.

A CHRISTMAS BABY. By Annie S. Swan. Illustrated.

THE NECKLACE. By Guy de Maupassant. Illustrated. See the WOMAN at HOME for DECEMBER, 6d.

ILLUSTRATED INTERVIEW with LADY COOK. By RAYMOND BLATHWAYT.

CHRISTMAS SERMONETTE. By Mr. Gladstone. See the WOMAN at HOME for DECEMBER, 6d. Containing also "A Page of Confessions," by Lady Charles Beresford; "Sir Edwin Arnold at Home," by M. Z.; "A Christmas Carol," by Katharine Tynan; "Brides and Bridegrooms," and many other articles of special interest.

LONDON: HODDER & STOUGHTON, 27, Paternoster-row.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 8d.

London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

THIRD EDITION IN THE PRESS.

BARABBAS: a Dream of the World's Tragedy. In 2 vols. By MARIE CORELLI.

"The author has tried to tell the story so that it shall be read again with open eyes by some in whose minds the recital of the well-known events produced no more effect than the slipping of a smooth stone on glass."—Christian World.

"By the dignity of its conceptions, the reserve round the central figure, and the [illegible] of the scene and circumstance, the book has a far-off likeness to the Ammergau play. The studies of character are very striking. There is much that is elevating and devout in this remarkable work."—Guardian.

CANON WILBERFORCE writes: "A high-minded and very powerful effort to reinvest by the legitimate use of the imagination a time-honoured history by depolarising it from the conventionality in which it had become crystallised."

CHEAP JACK ZITA. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of "Mehalah." Three vols.

"Zita is a charming and attractive character."—Glasgow Herald.

"Zita is as original and individual as 'Mehalah.' The author is at his best when he is at his strongest. At such moments he comes near to being a great writer; and there are several of them in 'Cheap Jack Zita.'"—Daily Chronicle.

"A powerful drama of human passions, the book abounds in strong situations, and by its vitality and power cannot fail to move all those who read it."—Westminster Gazette.

THE STAR-GAZERS. By G. MANVILLE FENN, Author of "Eli's Children," &c. Three vols.

"A stirring romance."—Western Morning News.

"Mr. Fenn keeps the reader's attention on the alert till the end."—Court Journal.

A WOMAN OF FORTY. By ESME STUART, Author of "Muriel's Marriage." Two vols., crown 8vo.

"A complete character skilfully touched."—Black and White.

CHEAPER EDITION OF "DODO." In One Volume.

Now ready, price 6s., with cover specially designed, the ELEVENTH EDITION of DODO: A Detail of the Day. By E. F. BENSON.

Few novels of late years have been as successful as "Dodo." In its two-volume form it has passed through ten editions, and has attracted by its brilliance universal attention.

METHUEN & CO., 18, Bury-street, W.C.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NEW WORKS.

NOW READY.

A HISTORY of the POST OFFICE, from its Establishment down to 1836. By HERBERT JOYCE, C.B., one of the Secretaries to the General Post Office. In 1 vol., demy 8vo, 10s.

A NEW EDITION NOW READY.

STRAY RECORDS; or Personal and Professional Notes. By CLIFFORD HARRISON. A New and Cheaper Edition, in crown 8vo, 6s.

NEW NOVELS.

NOW READY.

DIANA TEMPEST. By Mary CHOLMONDELEY, Author of "Sir Charles Danvers." In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "NEAR NEIGHBOURS."

The SWING of the PENDULUM. By FRANCES MARY PEARD, Author of "The Baroness," &c. In 2 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

TEMPE. By Constance Cotterell, Author of "Strange Gods." In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

A HEROINE in HOMESPUN. By FREDERIC BRETON, Author of "The Crime of Maunsell Grange." In 2 vols., crown 8vo.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

NEW NOVELS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES. IN THREE VOLUMES.

The Hoyden.

By MRS. HUNGERFORD, Author of "Molly Bawn."

"A clever, sprightly story . . . fresh, sunshiny, and delightful."—Scotsman.

"Mrs. Hungerford's novels are never dull. Her latest romance 'The Hoyden,' has that power of attraction which Mrs. Hungerford's pen possesses in no ordinary degree."—Daily Telegraph.

A Comedy of Masks.

By ERNEST DOWSON and ARTHUR MOORE.

"It is a powerfully-written society tale of London salons and the features of the faces behind the masks which are worn therein. . . . Indeed the dramatic power of the whole book, while free from the least taint of melodrama, is so striking, that if it were rewritten for the stage we should venture to predict for it a brilliant success."—Guardian.

The Countess Radna.

By W. E. NORRIS. Third Edition.

"In style, skill in construction, and general 'go' it is worth a dozen ordinary novels, and justifies the place its author has obtained among living masters of fiction."—Speaker.

The Heavenly Twins.

By SARAH GRAND, Author of "Ideala," &c. Fourth Thousand.

"Everybody ought to read it, for it is an inexhaustible source of refreshing and highly stimulating entertainment."—Daily Telegraph.

SWEET LAVENDER. Being Vol. VIII. of the Plays of ARTHUR W. PINERO. With Introductory Notes by Malcolm C. Salaman. Cloth, 2s. 6d.; paper cover, 1s. 6d.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

A NEW EDITION WILL APPEAR SHORTLY

OF

SCRAMBLES AMONGST THE ALPS IN THE YEARS 1860-69,

Including the History of the First Ascent of the Matterhorn.

BY EDWARD WHYMPER.

An Édition de Luxe (Fourth Edition).

With five Maps and 136 Illustrations, price £2. 12s. 6d. net.

This Edition is being printed by Messrs. R. & R. Clark, of Edinburgh, on paper specially made for the purpose by Messrs. Dickinson, and is bound by Zaehnsdorf. As it is intended that it shall be the best Edition of this work, and the number printed will be limited, early application should be made to booksellers.

The First Edition of SCRAMBLES AMONGST THE ALPS appeared in the summer of 1871, and the SECOND EDITION in the autumn of the same year. In 1879 a THIRD (condensed) EDITION was published, under the title of THE ASCENT OF THE MATTERHORN. The book then remained out of print for twelve years. In the present edition, the matter which was omitted in the third one is restored; the text has been revised generally; corrections which have become necessary in consequence of the lapse of years have been made; the History of the Matterhorn is brought down to the present time, and numerous Illustrations and a full index are added.

Copies of the earlier editions of this work are exceedingly scarce.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

Dr. YORKE DAVIES'S WORK on CORPULENCY. Sixth Edition, Sixteenth Thousand, revised, 1s., cloth 1s. 6d.

FOODS FOR THE FAT. The Dietetic Cure of Obesity. By N. E. YORKE DAVIES, L. Roy. Coll. Phys., Lond.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED.

FOUNDED IN 1842.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE (either New or Second-hand) of the BEST ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from One Guinea per annum. LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for books exchangeable by the Library Messengers) from Two Guineas per annum. COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from Two Guineas per annum. N.B.—Two or three friends may unite in One Subscription, and thus lessen the cost of carriage. LIBRARY BOXES GRATIS.

TOWN AND VILLAGE CLUBS SUPPLIED ON LIBERAL TERMS.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books Gratis and post free.

SALE DEPARTMENT.

All the Leading Books of Past Seasons are on Sale, second-hand, at greatly Reduced Prices. LISTS GRATIS AND POST FREE.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

30 to 34, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON;

241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; and 48, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Mansion House End).

WARD & DOWNEY'S NEW BOOKS.

MOLTKE: a Biographical and Critical Study. By W. O'C. MORRIS, Author of "Napoleon." With Portraits, Maps, and Plans. Price 21s. (Now Ready

NEW NOVEL BY THOMAS TERRELL.

A WOMAN OF HEART. By THOMAS TERRELL, Author of "The City of the Just." 3 vols.

NEW NOVEL BY MABEL COLLINS.

JULIET'S LOVERS. By MABEL COLLINS, Author of "The Prettiest Woman in Warsaw." 3 vols.

NEW NOVEL BY F. C. PHILIPS.

ONE NEVER KNOWS. By F. C. PHILLIPS, Author of "As in a Looking Glass." 3 vols.

"'One Never Knows' displays him in the act of wielding the satirical lash with all his wonted vigour."—Daily Telegraph

"They are all live men and women, and there is not a marionette among them."—Daily Chronicle.

NEW EDITION.

THAT HATED SAXON. By the LADY GREVILLE. Price 3s. 6d.

"Lady Greville's book is wholesome in tone and spirited in incident, and its soundness in equine and canine matters is, of course, beyond suspicion."—Times.

London: WARD & DOWNEY, Limited, York-street, Covent Garden, W.C.

Now Ready (Sixpence), New Series, No. 126.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE FOR DECEMBER, containing "WITH EDGED TOOLS," Chaps. 21 to 24.—"MEMORIES OF THE MASTER OF BALLIOL."—"JANUARY DAYS IN CEYLON."—"TWILIGHT."—"A THORN IN THE FLESH."—"CHARACTER NOTE: THE OLD SCHOOL."—"THE MODEST SCORPION."—"THE MAN WITH NO VOICE."

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

COALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES. Londonderry Wallsend, 30s.; Pittington Wallsend, 29s.; Primrose, 28s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 27s. per ton. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE QUEEN'S HALL,
LANGHAM PLACE,
REGENT STREET, W.

GRAND OPENING CONCERT, Saturday Next, December 2, at 8.—HYMN OF PRAISE (Mendelssohn). Madame ALBANI, Miss MARGARET HOARE, Mr. EDWARD LLOYD. Mr. FREDERIC H. COWEN, Conductor. Full Chorus and Orchestra, 400. Leader, Mr. G. H. Betjemann. Organist, Mr. W. G. Wood.

THE QUEEN'S HALL, Langham-place, Regent-street, W.—GRAND OPENING CONCERT, Saturday Next, at 8. Second half of Programme Miscellaneous. Tickets: Sofa Stalls and Grand Circle, 10s. 6d.; Area Stalls and Balcony Stalls, 5s.; Area and Balcony (unreserved), 2s. 6d. To be obtained of the usual Agents, and the Box-office, Queen's Hall.
Mr. ROBERT NEWMAN, Manager.

THE QUEEN'S HALL, Langham-place, Regent-street, W., can NOW BE BOOKED for Concerts, Balls, Banquets, Bazaars, &c.; also small Concert Hall and Ball Room.—For terms and vacant dates apply to Mr. ROBERT NEWMAN, at the Queen's Hall.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE of MUSIC.—ANNUAL OPERA PERFORMANCE.—Schumann's GENOVEVA, Drury-lane Theatre Royal, Wednesday Afternoon, Dec. 6th, at 1.30 (by kind permission of Sir Augustus Harris). Conductor, Professor C. VILLIERS STANFORD, Mus. Doc. Tickets to be obtained of Mr. GEORGE WATSON, Registrar, at the College; or at the Box-office, Drury-lane Theatre.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SATURDAY CONCERT.—Wagner Programme on Dec. 2, at 3.0.—Overture, "Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg," Wotan's "Abschied von Brünnhilde und Feuerzauber" ("Die Walküre"), Isolde's "Liebestod" ("Tristan und Isolde"), Prayer from "Rienzi," Vorspiel to "Parsifal," and the third act of "Tannhäuser." The Grand Orchestra (conductor, Mr. AUGUST MANNS).—Numbered Seats, 2s. and 4s.; Unnumbered Seats, 1s.

MR. EDWARD LLOYD and Mr. ANDREW BLACK and the CRYSTAL PALACE CHOIR will SING in the WAGNER CONCERT, on SATURDAY AFTERNOON NEXT at 3.—CRYSTAL PALACE.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Albert Chevalier, Little Tich, Fannie Leslie, Bessie Bellwood, Carl Hertz, Mdlle. D'Alton, Lucy Clarke, James Fawn, Brothers Griffiths, Alice Leamar, George Beauchamp, Nellie Navette, Herbert Campbell, Alice Maydue, Billie Barlow; Brown, Newland, and Leclerq, Ada Blanche, J. W. Rowley, Harry Freeman, Eugene Stratton, G. Robey, Fred Mason, Arthur Rigby, Sells and Young.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station, in connection with all railways. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations.—New Portrait Models of the late PRINCE ALEXANDER OF BULGARIA, and their Majesties the EMPEROR of RUSSIA, the EMPEROR of GERMANY, the EMPEROR of AUSTRIA, and the KING of ITALY. Music all day. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Chamber of Horrors, 6d. Open 9 to 10.

NIAGARA in WINTER.—Panorama and Diorama of the Ice Palace at Montreal.—NIAGARA HALLS, St. James's Park Station. DAILY, 10 to 10 p.m. Admission 1s. Children 6d. Tickets, including admission, all District and Metropolitan Railway Stations.

ELOCUTION, EXTEMPORE SPEAKING, ORATORY.—Professor HAYSACK, whose Pupils are among the first clergymen, doctors, barristers, solicitors, public personages, and nobility, GIVES INSTRUCTION. Voice strengthened, defects corrected.—70, Talbot-road, Bayswater.

AMUSEMENTS.

DRURY LANE THEATRE ROYAL. Sole Lessee and Manager, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS. Every Evening, at 7.30, A LIFE OF PLEASURE, by Sir Augustus Harris and Henry Pettitt. For full particulars see Daily Papers. Box-office open from 10 a.m. till 5.

HAYMARKET THEATRE. Mr. TREE, Sole Lessee and Manager. TO-NIGHT at 8.15, THE TEMPTER. LAST THREE PERFORMANCES. LAST MATINÉE SATURDAY NEXT at 2.15. SATURDAY EVENING, December 2, CAPTAIN SWIFT. Box-office (Mr. Leverton) from 10 to 5. HAYMARKET.

GAIETY THEATRE. Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES. Every Evening, at 8, an entirely New Burlesque in Three Acts, entitled DON JUAN, by James T. Tanner. Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Music by Meyer Lutz. With full Gaiety Company, including Miss Millie Hilton and Mr. Arthur Roberts.—Box-office open 10 to 6 daily. Doors open 7.30. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2. Doors open 1.45.

SAVOY THEATRE. Every Evening, at 8.15, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, UTOPIA, LIMITED, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. Doors open at 7.45 and 2. Box-office open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, R. Harding, J. Carter, H. Russell, and Arthur Williams; Mesdames Mary Rorke, Alma Stanley, and Agnes Thomas.—Box-office 10 to 6. Doors open at 7.30.

GARRICK THEATRE.—Mr. JOHN HARE, Lessee and Manager.—DIPLOMACY, adapted by Clement Scott and B. C. Stephenson. EVERY EVENING, at 8. Mr. Bancroft, Mr. F. Robertson, Mr. A. Cecil, Mr. G. Hare, Mr. Trent, Mr. Mayeur, and Mr. John Hare; Miss K. Rorke, Miss E. Robins, Lady Monckton, Miss Luck, and Mrs. Bancroft. Box-office 10 to 5. Matinée Wednesday, December 6. No evening performance on this date.

COURT THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—To-Night and Every Evening, a New Triple Bill. At 8.15, GOOD-BYE; at 9, A VENETIAN SINGER; and at 10, UNDER THE CLOCK. Box-office open 10 to 5. Telephone No. 3,031.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.10, THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY, By Arthur W. Pinero. Doors open 7.45; carriages, 11. MORNING PERFORMANCE SATURDAY NEXT, December 2, at 2.30. Box-office open 10 to 5. Seats may be booked by letter, telegram, or telephone.—ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square.—Every Night, at 8 (doors open 7.30), Mr. AUGUSTIN DALY'S COMPANY in THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL. Miss Ada Rehan as Lady Teazle; Mr. Wm. Farren as Sir Peter; and Mr. Clarke, Mr. Bourchier, Mrs. Gilbert, &c. MATINEE Saturday Next, at 2. Box-office daily, 9 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries.
The Telegraph says:—"Miss Rehan's view of Lady Teazle is the right one." The Times calls it "Another Triumph."

THE TRAFALGAR THEATRE.—Sole Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. FRANK WYATT (Miss Violet Melnotte). Under the Management of Mr. CHARLES H. HAWTREY.—Every Evening, at 9, a New Farcical Comedy, entitled TOM, DICK, AND HARRY, by Mrs. R. Pacheco. Mr. Charles Hawtrey, Mr. John Beauchamp, Mr. W. R. Shirley, Mr. Ernest Percy, Mr. W. F. Hawtrey, Mr. Charles Milton, Mr. C. Meyrick, Mr. Arthur Playfair; Miss Vane Featherston, Miss Georgie Esmond, Miss Eva Williams, Miss Sophie Larkin. Preceded, at 8.10, by BARBARA. Matinée Every Saturday, at 3 o'clock.—Box-office open from 10 to 10.—Business Manager, Mr. E. F. Bradley.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.30, Musical Comedy, words by Owen Hall, Lyrics by Harry Greenbank, Music by Sydney Jones, entitled A GAIETY GIRL. Messrs. C. Hayden Coffin, Eric Lewis, Bradfield, Kaye, Bantock, D'Orsay, Porteous, Rimma, and Harry Monkhouse; Mmes. Decima Moore, Juliette Nesville, A. Jenoure, Cutler, Studholme, Pounds, Phelps, Maud Hobson, Massey, Selwick, Robinson. At 7.45, SIXES. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.15, Vol. II. of MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine, H. Haslem, and Charles Danby; Misses Jennie McNulty, Agnes Hewitt, Maggie Roberts, and Lettie Lind. Preceded, at 7.45, by Rex Harley, the inimitable Mimic of Popular Actors. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30.—Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

TOOLE'S THEATRE.—To-Night and Every Evening, at 9 o'clock, a Farce, in Three Acts, by the late Fred Leslie and Arthur Shirley, entitled MRS. OTHELLO. Miss Fanny Brough, Mr. Charles Glenney, Miss Cicely Richards, Mr. Julian Cross, Mr. W. H. Day, Mr. G. Raiemond, Miss Blanche Horlock, Miss Florence Melville. Preceded, at 8.15, by THE BROTHERS. Doors open 7.45. Seats at all Libraries. Box-office open daily. MATINEE, every Wednesday and Saturday, at 3 o'clock.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.30.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music, and Varieties. At 8.45, the New Grand Romantic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, entitled FIDELIA. At 10.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 35,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Two GRAND BALLETS.—At 7.50, KATRINA, and at 10.10, THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME. Grand Varieties. The new entrance from Leicester-street is now open. Doors open at 7.30. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

THE PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—SCARAMOUCHE, Pantomime Ballet, at 10.40.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL METROPOLE.—On the East Cliff, facing the sea, three minutes' from East Station. The largest, and best magnificent Hotel in Bournemouth. Now open to receive visitors. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.
GEORGE ALEXANDER, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 12s. to 15s. per day.
According to position of rooms selected.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Leas. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 789.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

PORT OROTAVA, Teneriffe.—HOTEL MARTIANEZ (late GRAND).—First-class, standing in a beautiful garden. Shady verandahs, large public and private rooms. Billiards, tennis. Good cooking, good wines, excellent spring water.
Manager, J. R. EGGER.

PORTRUSH, co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL (B. and N.C. Rly). Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing, sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner. French cuisine. Combined Railway and Hotel Tickets from Belfast.—Illustrated tariff on application to MANAGER.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA. — ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL.—First and leading hotel in St. Leonards. Unequalled position, detached, faces sea, due south. Modern improvements, passenger lift, electric light in every room, handsomely furnished. Home comforts. Terms moderate. —Address, MANAGER.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hote at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

THE CROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.

TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.

(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.

THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.

SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.
Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.

NO SUPPERS.

TELEPHONE No. 3,507.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.
(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).

Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn and Lincoln's Inn Fields. A high-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, happily situated, having all modern conveniences and a moderate tariff. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d., at separate tables.—HANS BLACKLEY, Manager. Write for tariff.

OATLANDS PARK HOTEL, Walton-on-Thames, 17 miles from London (Waterloo Station). Most comfortable and homely winter residence, warmed throughout. South aspect. Boarding terms, 10s. 6d. to 12s. per day. Capital stabling. Postal address, Weybridge.

GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.
LARGEST, BEST APPOINTED, AND MOST COMFORTABLE HOTEL IN CHANNEL ISLES, AND THE FINEST SITUATION IN JERSEY.

Directly overlooking the Channel. South aspect. Magnificent Public Rooms, all facing sea. Swimming Bath. Hot and Cold Seawater Baths. Tennis Courts, &c. TABLE D'HÔTE DINNER at 7 p.m. (separate tables) "best in Jersey." Reduced Winter Terms on application.

Telegrams—"Grand, Jersey." SYDNEY ROGERS, Manager & Secretary.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL, 180 Apartments, Patronised by H. R. H. the Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne, K.T. Extensive Structural Alterations and Decorative Repairs have been carried out and 30 NEW BEDROOMS ADDED SINCE OCTOBER, 1891. The entire system of drainage has been re-modelled and re-constructed, and the most improved sanitary appliances fitted to all Bath-rooms, &c. The Hotel stands in its own private gardens of 2¼ acres, faces the sea, and is only five minutes' from the Harbour in the lower part of the town and Shorncliffe New West End Station, and is most convenient for Continental travellers.—For tariff charges, &c., please address the Proprietor.

ALBANY HOTEL (ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.

Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Only Hotel with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

HOTEL CONTINENTAL,
CAIRO, EGYPT.

PATRONISED by ROYALTY and the ELITE of SOCIETY, including H.R.H. the DUKE of CAMBRIDGE and H.I.H. PRINCESS VICTORIA of PRUSSIA. Perfect English sanitation. Electric Light. Hydraulic Lifts. Excellent Cuisine. Moderate terms. Under the personal supervision of the proprietors, GEORGE NUNGOVITCH (also proprietor of the HOTEL d'ANGLETERRE) and L. STEINSCHNEIDER, late Manager of Shepheard's Hotel.

ILFRACOMBE.
Warmest Sea-side Winter Resort in England.
ILFRACOMBE HOTEL. The principal Hotel in Ilfracombe.

First-class return tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. Railway, from 1st November to 14th March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance at the ILFRACOMBE HOTEL, £5 5s. each. Available for one month. Express trains leave Waterloo 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Ask for Hotel Tickets, available by all trains.

THE RUNNACLEAVE, ILFRACOMBE.—Highest average Winter Temperature in England. South aspect. 120 Beautifully-appointed rooms, thoroughly warmed by hot-water apparatus; theatre in constant use; yacht, tennis, billiards, photographic dark room, and indoor skating rink free of charge. Moderate tariff.

EASTBOURNE.—CAVENDISH HOTEL stands alone in the centre of the Grand Parade. Pleasant sea and land views. Patronised by many of the Royal families of Europe. Appreciated for its first-class appointments and homely comforts. Elegant public rooms, convenient family suites, &c. Passenger lift. Table d'hôte. Moderate charges.
G. LOWMAN, Manager.

MADEIRA.—REID'S HOTELS, Santa Clara, Miles's Carmo Hortas, New Hotel. First-class, in finest situations. Large gardens. Tennis courts. Billiards. Sea bathing. Modern sanitation. All steamers met. Pamphlet free.—PASSMORE, 124, Cheapside, London, E.C.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM for IDIOTS.
Nearly one hundred idiots are receiving special care and education.
FUNDS urgently NEEDED.
Special provision is made for the reception of Private Cases on payment.
H. GERARD HOARE, Esq., J.P., Treasurer.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Cheques or Postal Orders may be crossed Messrs. Hoare, Bankers, 37, Fleet-street, E.C.
Offices, 36, King William street, London Bridge, E.C.

CANCER WARDS at the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL, Mortimer street, W.—The WEEKLY BOARD make an URGENT APPEAL for FUNDS in Aid of these Wards. There are 34 beds set apart for patients suffering from this terrible malady. They are admitted without letters of recommendation. Everything that human skill and kindness can suggest is provided, and sufferers are permitted to remain until relieved by art or released by death. Bankers, Messrs. Coutts & Co.
F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary Superintendent.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool road, Islington, N.—The long continued prevalence of scarlet fever is causing a heavy strain on the resources of this Hospital. The benevolent are earnestly asked for HELP. Annual subscribers of a Guinea and upwards for more than a year, as well as donors of Ten Guineas or more in one sum, are Governors, and are entitled to free treatment for their domestic servants. Sufferers residing outside the metropolitan area can only be received into the Hospital from the families of Governors.
Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by the Secretary, at the Hospital, MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott, Dimsdale, & Co., 50, Cornhill.

"THE CRIPPLES' NURSERY," for Little Afflicted Children, from 3 to 12 years of age, is in great NEED of HELP for necessary expenses. Has been established for 30 years.—Address, 15, Park-place, Clarence Gate, Regent's Park, N.W. Treasurer, G. Hanbury, Esq., 28, Prince's-gate, S.W. The smallest contributions, also clothing or gifts, thankfully received.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL.

CONTRIBUTIONS are EARNESTLY SOLICITED towards meeting the EXPENSES of this unendowed Hospital, and will be gratefully received by the Bankers, Messrs. Drummond, or by the Secretary.

North-West London Hospital,

Kentish Town Road.

Patron.
H.R.H. Princess Christian.
Chairman.
Rev. F. J. Ponsonby.
Treasurer.
George Herring, Esq.

The only Institution of the kind in this densely-populated district. Last year there were 555 In-patients and 39,606 cases as Out-patients.
Income from Annual Subscriptions is less than £900; yearly expenditure, £3,500; leaving a deficiency of over £2,600 to be made up each year by special benefactions.
FUNDS ARE GREATLY NEEDED.
ALFRED CRASKE,
Secretary.

WEST END HOSPITAL

FOR

Diseases of the Nervous System, Paralysis, and Epilepsy.

73, WELBECK STREET, LONDON, W.

PATRONESS.—H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

Maintains fifty cots for little children, who are admitted from all parts. This Hospital is totally without endowment. FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to meet the current expenditure. Cheques and postal orders may be crossed Sir Samuel Scott, Bart., & Co. H. ALEX. DOWELL, Honorary Treasurer.

TEMPORARY HOME for LOST and STARVING DOGS, Battersea Park-road, S.W.—The claims of this Institution for pecuniary support are threefold. By the efforts of the Committee, rabies have well nigh been stamped out. Thousands of dogs have been restored to their owners, and funds are just now earnestly needed for the proper feeding of nearly 1,000 dogs a day.
Sir GEO. S. MEASOM, J.P., Treasurer.
MATTHIAS COLAM, Secretary.

TRAVELLERS TO BRINDISI AND THE EAST

WILL NOW FIND

BOLOGNA the most convenient stopping-place.

Coupé-lits can be booked beforehand by Mr. FRANK, Hotel Brun, for DAILY EXPRESS TRAIN, leaving Bologna 6.55. p.m., arriving at Brindisi 10.50 a.m.

ESTATES, AUCTIONS, &c.

No. 1, Kensington Palace gardens.—A handsome and imposing Town Mansion occupying one of the best situations in that fashionable and favoured position, with carriage approach from the Bayswater road and private entrance to the fine outlook over Kensington gardens. The accommodation comprises a stone-paved fine reception room all on the ground floor, with two floors of bed-rooms over and the usual domestic offices. There is a spacious and handsome entrance hall, into which the principal entertaining rooms open, and through which is reached a large ornamental garden, well planted with a variety of shrubs and trees. There is also stabling attached for five horses. This important property, suitable in every particular for a family of position, is held from the Crown for about 30 years to run at the exceedingly low ground rent of £60 per annum, and possession will be given on completion of the purchase.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, ELLIS, CLARK, & Co. have been instructed to offer for SALE by AUCTION at the MART, on THURSDAY, JANUARY 25th, 1894, the CROWN LEASE of the above-described MANSION and PREMISES, particulars of which, with conditions of sale, will be shortly published, and may then be had of Messrs. ROWCLIFFES, RAWLE, & Co., Solicitors, 1, Bedford-row, W.C.; Messrs. BANTING & SONS, House and Estate Agents, 27, St. James's-street, S.W.; and of Messrs. FAREBROTHER, ELLIS, CLARK, & Co., 20, Fleet-street, Temple Bar, and 18, Old Broad-street, E.C.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES.—Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

MASSAGE.—Mrs. ARMSTRONG (Masso-Therapeutist) RECEIVES and VISITS DAILY; liver, rheumatism, debility, chilblains, neuralgic headache, &c., successfully treated.—36, South-street, Park-lane, W.

A LADY is anxious to hear of a post as COMPANION or SECRETARY, for a young lady of good birth and education. Musical (piano and singing). Good amanuensis and excellent traveller. Highest references given.—Address, L. C. T., care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

TRAVELLERS to EGYPT and OTHERS are specially invited to VISIT ABOUKIR (about 5 miles from Alexandria), if they require a suitable INVESTMENT (with or without occupation), and a certainty of a continuing and increasing income with good landed security, and secure a portion of the 23,000 acres at present unsold. Purchases can now be made on very favourable terms either for cash or by instalments. Leases granted. Pamphlets and full information supplied by the SECRETARY, at the Aboukir Company's Office, 134, Palmerston-buildings, Bishopsgate-street, London, E.C., or by the Chairman, SAMUEL G. SHEPPARD, 57, Old Broad-street, London, E.C.

THE INTERNATIONAL SLEEPING CAR and EUROPEAN EXPRESS TRAINS COMPANY. TRAINS DE LUXE AND HOTELS.—SEASON 1893-4. MEDITERRANEAN EXPRESS EVERY SATURDAY and TUESDAY at 7.25 p.m. from the Gare de Lyons, Paris, arriving Nice 1.28 p.m. the following day. Special Ceinture Train from Gare du Nord on arrival of 8.0 and 10.0 a.m. trains from London. Dinner served on the Trains on leaving Paris. Through Sleeping and Dining Cars, with covered vestibule inter-communication between the cars. Only Dining Car service this year. Three other Daily Services to the Riviera.
The Company's RIVIERA PALACE HOTEL, NICE (Cimiez).
PENINSULAR EXPRESS EVERY FRIDAY 8.15 p.m., London to Brindisi. To Cairo under five days viâ P. and O. Steamers. Through Cars from Calais.
The Company's GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL, BRINDISI.
SUD EXPRESS.—MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS to Pau, Biarritz, Madrid and Lisbon, &c.
The Company's GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL (Terminus), LISBON.
ORIENT EXPRESS.—Daily to VIENNA, Three Times Weekly to CONSTANTINOPLE.
These Trains are composed exclusively of Sleeping, Saloon, and Dining Cars, comfortably warmed and thoroughly ventilated. For all tickets and full details of Trains and Hotels apply to Chief London Office, 122, Pall Mall, and City Office, 5, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

WINTER SEASIDE HEALTH RESORTS,

By SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

CHEAP RETURN TICKETS are issued from Waterloo, Kensington (Addison Road), Vauxhall, Clapham Junction, &c., to the undermentioned places:—

BOURNEMOUTH, THE ENGLISH RIVIERA, In 2½ Hours.	28s. 6d. First Class, 21s. 6d. Second Class, 12s. Third Class, are issued by all trains on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays. The First and Second Class Tickets are available to return up to and including the Monday week following the day of issue, and the Third Class by any train up to the following Tuesday (day of issue included).
WEYMOUTH, THE ENGLISH NAPLES. In 3¾ Hours.	33s. First Class, 24s. Second Class, 16s. Third Class, are issued from Waterloo, Vauxhall, Clapham Junction, Kensington, &c., on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays, available to return up to the Tuesday following, by any ordinary train.
SOUTHAMPTON, In 1¾ Hours.	20s. 6d. First Class, 15s. 6d. Second Class, 10s. Third Class, issued on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays, available to return up to the following Monday (day of issue included).
SWANAGE, In 3¾ Hours.	31s. 6d. First Class, 22s. 6d. Second Class, 15s. Third Class, issued on Fridays and Saturdays, available to return up to and including the following Tuesday (Sunday excepted).
SIDMOUTH, In 4¾ Hours.	36s. First Class, 26s. Second Class, 16s. Third Class, issued on Fridays and Saturdays, available to return up to the following Tuesday (Sunday excepted).
EXMOUTH, In 4¾ Hours.	40s. First Class, 28s. Second Class, and 17s. Third Class, issued on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays, available to return any day up to the following Monday (day of issue included).
ILFRACOMBE, WARMEST SEASIDE RESORT IN ENGLAND. In 6¼ Hours.	First Class Return Tickets issued from London, from November 1st to March 14th, including 7 days' bed, board, and attendance, at the Ilfracombe Hotel, £5 5s. each, available for one month. Express trains leave Waterloo at 11.0 a.m. and 3.0 p.m.

First Class Lavatory accommodation in principal trains.
All information can be obtained on application to G. T. WHITE, Superintendent of the Line, Waterloo Station, London, S.E.
CHAS. SCOTTER, General Manager.

CARPETS.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

AXMINSTER PILE CARPETS,
2/11 (American) 3/11 to 4/9

WILTON PILE CARPETS,
3/9 to 4/6

BRUSSELS CARPETS,
2/1 to 3/9

TAPESTRY CARPETS,
1/9 to 2/6

LINOLEUM,
1/- to 4/- per sq. yard.

DECCAN RUGS,
8/9 each.

CATALOGUES FREE.

TRELOAR & SONS
LUDGATE HILL.

MAPPIN & WEBB'S
PATENT TABLE KNIVES.

SAMPLES & PRICES FREE.

"UNEQUALLED FOR HARD WEAR."

Only London Addresses, 158, OXFORD ST. W.
2, QUEEN VICTORIA ST. E.C.
(FACING THE MANSION HOUSE.)

MANUFACTORY—NORFOLK STREET, SHEFFIELD.

ABSOLUTELY THE FINEST TONIC PICK-ME-UP.

Marza Wine

THE ONLY 'SCIENTIFIC AND PALATABLE IRON AND COCA WINE.

Highly recommended by the "Lancet" and Medical Profession for Anæmia, Insomnia, Debility, Exhaustion, Indigestion, Vocal Fatigue, Neuralgia, and Loss of Vital Force. Invigorating, Sustaining, and Vitalising. Checks and prevents Colds, Chills, and all Lung Weaknesses. A Digestive, Tone-Giving, and Health-Promoting Stimulant for Convalescents after Accouchement, Influenza, Fevers, &c. Invaluable for Athletes, Young Children, and all below par, unstrung, fagged, and weary. Price 3s. 9d. per Bottle, 42s. per dozen, everywhere, or sent Carriage Paid by the

MARZA COMPANY, LIMITED, 19 & 21, WILSON STREET, LONDON, E.C.

DESCRIPTIVE PAMPHLETS FREE ON APPLICATION.

21/- 21/-

THE "CHELSEA" DINNER SERVICE.

Groups of Flowers in Electric Blue on Ivory Ground

21s.

"Cottage Set," as pattern (50 pieces) £1 1 0

Full Set for 12 persons (108 pieces) £3 3 0

If for the country, 1s. 3d. and 2s. 6d. extra for package.

DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, AND TEA SERVICES.

ALFRED B. PEARCE,

39, Ludgate-hill, London

Established 1706.

SCOTTADIE

THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE

115 & 115a REGENT STREET

LONDON W.

For

Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Mauds.
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns

Telegraphic Address—Scot Adie London

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7 6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5/-, Polished Nickel, 7/6.

AN ALWAYS ACCEPTABLE PRESENT.

An Original Case of MÜLHENS'

CASE OF SIX BOTTLES 12/6

GENUINE NO. 4711 BRAND OF

EAU DE COLOGNE.

THE PUREST & STRONGEST, YET MOST DELICATE EVER PRODUCED.

THE WORLD says: "Anyone desirous of getting a thoroughly genuine Cologne cannot do better than send for a bottle of the '4711' Double Extract. Once having used it, repetition is a foregone conclusion."

Large selection of Choicest Perfumes, Toilet Soaps, &c. Quintuple Concentrated Extracts, made from Fresh Flowers gathered at Grasse.

Of All dealers in Perfumes, or at the LONDON BRANCH:

62, NEW BOND ST., W.

(ONE DOOR FROM BROOK STREET.)

Price Lists on application to Mr. C. REUTER, Manager. And at

COLOGNE, NEW YORK, VIENNA, RIGA, and ODESSA.

STATHAM'S

WATERPROOFS.

Chesterfield Coat 21/-

Regulation (Cape all round) 30/-

CARRIAGE PAID.

Any size up to 52 inches long. Larger sizes, 1/- extra for every two inches.

Best make, thoroughly Waterproof, and adapted for any climate.

Book of Patterns of all kinds of Tweed, Cashmere, and other Waterproof Cloths post free for 6 stamps (returnable).

H. STATHAM & CO.,

11, CORPORATION STREET, MANCHESTER.

GRANT'S

MORELLA CHERRY BRANDY.

FIRST-PRIZE MEDALS at LONDON, MELBOURNE, and CALCUTTA

Is the most delicious Liqueur in the World.

Have you ever tasted it?

It is very strengthening for the weak and aged, and most comforting in damp and chilly weather. Nice with lemonade or soda water.

Sold by Wine Merchants and at Restaurants.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1886.

You Want a Typewriter.

TRADE MARK.

REGISTERED.

Does it not strike you that a machine invented by one of the first mechanical geniuses of the day,
That in two years has obtained an unprecedented sale,
That has been adopted by one Emperor, one King, several Princes and Princesses, and 20,000 ordinary users,
That has obtained the highest awards wherever exhibited,
That has gained Five Gold Medals,
That has even found its way into the Vatican at Rome,
That has received hundreds of testimonials,
That has found profitable occupation for thousands of operators,
That has been adopted by the principal Railway Co.'s, Chief Engineering Firms, Technical and other Schools,
That is the easiest to learn, does the best work, and
Has no filthy ink ribbon,

Is the Typewriter you Want?

THE YŌST IS ALL THIS AND MORE.

Contractors to

Her Majesty's Government,
The Colonial Governments,
The Indian Government,
The French Government,
and others.

Full Particulars from—

YŌST TYPEWRITER COMPANY, Limited, 40, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

BRANCH ADDRESSES:—MANCHESTER: 3, Deansgate. BIRMINGHAM: 73, Temple-row. LIVERPOOL: 67A, Lord-street. GLASGOW: 112, St. Vincent-street. BELFAST: 2, Rosemary-street. LEEDS: 91, New Station-street. PARIS: 36, Boulevard des Italiens.

LAIRITZ'S Established 1853. Awarded 18 Medals and Diplomas. For the Relief and Cure of GOUT, RHEUMATISM, COLDS, &c.

CELEBRATED

Washing in packets. Knee-Caps, Inside Soles, Oil, EXTRACT FOR BATH, Lozenges. Of all the LEADING CHEMISTS everywhere. Flannels, Underclothing, Knitting Yarn. Sold by all leading Drapers and Hosiers.

Wholesale Depot for Fabrics only: WELCH, MARGETSON & Co., 16, Cheapside, London.

Caution.—Observe the Tree Trade Mark with Signature on each piece.

PINE WOOL.

JULES

Established 1706 AY, FRANCE.

CAMUSET'S CHAMPAGNE

The Lancet says:—"We have analysed it, and are able to give it unqualised praise. It is free from adulteration of any kind, and possesses a very delicate flavour."

Price, 72s. per Dozen, Cash.
Delivered at any railway station in United Kingdom.
22, Great Tower Street, London E.C.

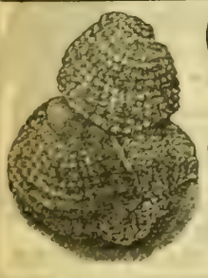
ESTABLISHED 1818.
Ten Prize Medals.

PETER F. HEERING'S

COPENHAGEN

CHERRY BRANDY.

Sold by all Wine Merchants, and at all Bars and Hotels.



OYSTERS! OYSTERS!!

FINEST COLCHESTER NATIVES

In Prime Condition, Delivered Free on Rail

At 3s. 6d. PER DOZEN.

CASH WITH ORDER.

Write for Circular.

HARVEY & CO., MERSEA, COLCHESTER.

SUGG'S PATENT GAS BURNERS.

The best Burners that have ever been invented.
BRILLIANT, WHITE, SILENT LIGHT.

GAS LAMPS, GAS FITTINGS, GAS FIRES, &c.

Send for Price List, Grand Hotel Buildings, Charing Cross, W.C.
1a, Ludgate Hill, London, E.C.; also at Liverpool and Amsterdam.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.

PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE

For holding lamp, meals, &c. In any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1 1s.

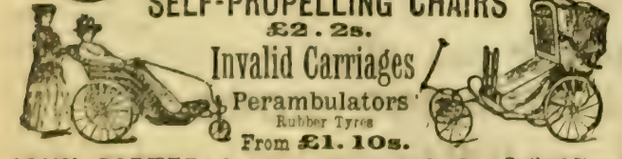
INVALID COMFORTS

Walking Machine for the lame

Adjustable Couches and Beds, £2.
Exercising Chairs £5. 5s.
Reclining Boards £1 1s.
Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d.
Carrying Chairs, £1.
Bed Tables 7s. 6d.
Crutches 10s. 6d.
Folding Couch Chairs 10s.
Bed Rests 10s.
Easy Chairs £2. 10s.
Commode Chairs £2. 10s.

BATH CHAIRS
From £1. 5s.

SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS
£2. 2s.



Invalid Carriages
Perambulators
Rubber Tyres
From £1. 10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.
Telegrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

FARM AND COLONIZATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

DIRECTORS:

WILLIAM WRIGHT, Esq., J.P., Wollaton, Nottingham, Chairman.
FRANCIS W. FOX, Esq., 14, Dean's Yard, Westminster.
HAROLD J. RECKITT, Esq., J.P., Winestead Hall, Hull.
JOHN BROOK BRAY, Esq, Clapham, Polegate, Sussex.
BENJAMIN GLASGOW, Esq., 77, Oxford-gardens, North Kensington, W.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of supplying RELIABLE INFORMATION to intending settlers abroad, and also to give them introductions to the Agents of the Company, who can assist them in any difficulty, and BEFRIEND them until they are sufficiently established to rely upon themselves.

EMPLOYMENT WILL BE FOUND where a living can be earned until the settler is able to farm on his own account.

ASSISTANCE WILL BE GIVEN in the choice of a farm for either special or general farming, also for cotton planting or orange growing.

The Directors and Secretary have a large experience in the requirements of settlers, both at home and abroad; the AGENTS ABROAD are men in good position, and are PERSONALLY KNOWN to the Secretary and some of the Directors.

For further information apply to
VICTOR M. HOLLINSWORTH, Secretary.
11, Charing Cross, London, S.W.

FOR

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS &c.

SAVORY & MOORE'S

DATURA TATULA.

Cigars and Cigarettes—Boxes, 3s., 6s., 8s., and 15s., Tobacco—Tins, 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. For Non-Smokers, Pastilles and Powder for Burning and Inhalation, Tins, each containing a censer for burning, 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s. Of Chemists everywhere.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?

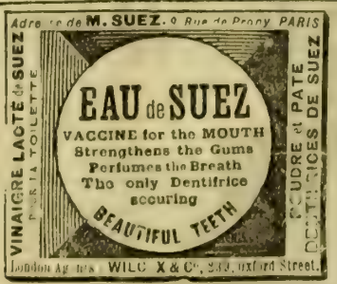
PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement, and biliousness.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.



ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

SUN LIFE OFFICE

FOR BUSINESS FACILITIES

LARGE CASH BONUSES

AND SPEEDY SETTLEMENTS.

ESTD. 1810.

Apply for NEW PROSPECTUS at the Chief Office, 63, THREADNEEDLE STREET, E.C.

HARRIS C. L. SAUNDERS, General Manager.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

BUYERS and SELLERS of quoted and unquoted Commercial, Industrial, and Mining Securities should communicate with

THE COMMERCIAL STOCK and SHARE CORPORATION, Limited, Stock and Share Dealers, 10, Throgmorton-avenue, London, E.C. Telegraphic Address: "UNQUOTED, LONDON." All Mining Shares dealt in at close current quotations. Advances made on Stocks and Shares at moderate rates. Send for List, giving numerous quotations not published by any other firm, post free.

TO CAPITALISTS and Others.—REQUIRED, a FEW THOUSAND POUNDS, to invest in Shares or Debentures of a Government Banking Company; prospects excellent; fullest investigation courted. Principals or their solicitors only treated with.—Address, SOLICITORS, at Horncastle's, Cheapside, London.

REVERSIONS.—The Reversion Mortgage Trust purchase reversions and life incomes, or lend thereon at 4 per cent. per annum. No charge made unless business results.—Apply to Messrs. FELDMAN, 34, New Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, London. Solicitors' and Estate Agents' attention particularly requested.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.

No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.

[ESTABLISHED 1867.]

ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,

From £30 to £5,000,

To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their NOTE OF HAND ALONE.

ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.

Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.

NO SURETIES REQUIRED.

Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.

FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.

A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.

Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.

Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.

Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.

Apply to the SECRETARY.

The 'NEW GUINEA' Spring Bedstead.

Pillars 1-in. Sides 1¼-in. strong Tubes, Double Woven Wire Mattress, Patent 'Reliance' Side Fastenings. All Iron and Steel, no Wood-work. Bedstead in 3 parts only.

Easy to fix up and take down.

PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.

Orders executed same day as received for this bed.

ALL GOODS GUARANTEED FOR 5 YEARS

To be had only direct from—

CHARLES RILEY,
Freeman-street,
BIRMINGHAM.

Illustrated Price Lists Post Free.

21/-
Carriage Paid.

EVERY DESCRIPTION —OF— Bedsteads, Bedding, Spring Mattresses, Bedroom Furniture, &c. direct from the Manufacturer.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited,
No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.

General Accidents. | Personal Injuries.
Railway Accidents. | Death by Accident.

C. HARDING, Manager.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE

63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.

(FIRE.)

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £16,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST

COMPANY INSURING AGAINST

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS

[AT HOME, OR IN THE STREETS, AT WORK, OR AT PLAY.]

THE RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY,
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. Secs. { W. D. MASSY. A. VIAN.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, £1,600,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.

The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT.

BEAUTIFULLY COOL AND SWEET SMOKING.

Sold only in 1-Ounce Packets, and 2, 4, 8-Ounce, and 1-lb. Tins, which keep the Tobacco in fine Smoking condition.

Ask at all Tobacco Sellers, Stores, &c., and take no other.

SMOKERS ARE CAUTIONED AGAINST IMITATIONS.

The GENUINE bears the Trade Mark—"NOTTINGHAM CASTLE"—on every Packet and Tin.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT CIGARETTES, in Packets containing 12,
And Tins of 24, 50, and 100.

"Is as nearly tasteless as Cod Liver Oil can be."—Lancet. "No nauseous eructations follow after it is swallowed."—Medical Press. "Has almost the delicacy of Salad Oil."—British Medical Journal. "A pharmaceutical produce which is in its way unrivalled."—London Medical Record. "It is a great boon to get such an Oil."—Practitioner.

Allen & Hanburys' "PERFECTED" Cod-liver Oil

Manufactured at ALLEN & HANBURYS' Norwegian Factories, from FRESH and SELECTED livers ONLY. It can be borne and digested by the most delicate. It is the only Oil which does not "repeat," and for these reasons the most efficacious kind in use.

In Capsuled Bottles ONLY, bearing A. & H.'s SIGNATURE, at 1/4, 2/6, 4/9, and 9/-.

Bynin LIQUID MALT.—"This is a highly diastasic Malt Extract of very agreeable taste. . . We find that one ounce of BYNIN will digest perfectly one pound of Starch. This is a most favourable result, and, coupled with the fluidity and pleasant flavour, renders this preparation a most valuable one."—Lancet.
In Capsuled Bottles only, at 1/9 and 3/- each. Sold everywhere.

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED FOR SPECIAL EXCELLENCE.

"Every table will look cheerless without it." "The Keystone of HEALTH in every Household." "Will bring a new vigour to our manhood and womanhood."—See Medical, Scientific, and Press Opinions.

"MERSANO" WINE

SAMPLE BOTTLE POST FREE 9 PENNY STAMPS.

"The Monarch Temperance Beverage of the World."
"Strengthening and Sustaining like the best Port Wine."

A PERFECT WINE FOR 6d. PER BOTTLE.

Thousands of testimonials testify to the excellence of "Mersano." The following extracts are a few of the many Press notices that have appeared.

"'Mersano' Wine should have a brilliant future."—The Queen. "We have received a case of this beverage, which we have found refreshing during the recent tropical weather. Non-alcoholic, it is crisp and sparkling, and it has the advantage, besides being a pleasant drink, of assuaging the thirst."—The Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News of August 19th, 1893.

Sold by all High-class Grocers, Stores, Chemists, Hotels, Spiers & Pond's Bars, &c.

Proprietors and Patentees — FORBES, MAXWELL, & CO., LTD., ABERDEEN.

PEARS

·ich· diene·

SOAP MAKERS

BY

Special Appointment

To HER MAJESTY

The Queen

and HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS The Prince of Wales.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 770.—PARODIES OF "AFTER THE BALL."

FELIXICUS (real name and address will be given next week) £1 1 0
JACK (" " " ") £1 1 0

SPECIAL NOTICE.—"TRUTH" HOME-MADE TOY AND DOLL SHOW AT THE ALBERT HALL.

Let me ask those ladies who are dressing dolls for the coming Show, to be good enough to send them to this Office as soon as they are ready. The earlier the parcels of dolls are received, the more convenient it will be for those who have to unpack them for exhibition. During the next week or two it is hoped, therefore, that a considerable number of the dressed dolls will be received. I shall shortly be able to announce the exact date in December when the Toy and Doll Show will be held.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 768.

The Prize for the best original Topical Conundrum has been divided between BARITONE and LUNATIC for the following riddles:—

Q. Why is Mr. Gladstone like a retract ory pauper?

A. Because (although one of the oldest members of the House) he is constantly defying the Guardians of the Union.—BARITONE

Q. Why ought Lord Thring to have been consulted about Lord Lansdowne's successor?

A. Because a draftsman is always able to produce a parallel ruler.—LUNATIC.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 775.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for

THE BEST COMPLETION OF THE LINES OF WHICH THE RHYMED ENDINGS ARE GIVEN BELOW:—

.....maxim
.....ton
.....tax him
.....rum
.....striking
.....spook
.....viking
.....crook

The completed lines may be of any metre which is in common use. In no case must the spelling of the given Bouts-Rimés be altered. All verses must reach me by the morning of Monday, December 11, at the latest.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 771.

Two competitors, MARPLOT and SAHIB BAHADUR, have obtained an equal number of marks for the answers sent in by them to the Thirty-by-Twos Conundrums published in TRUTH for November 9. The prize will therefore be divided equally between them. The number of marks they scored was 145 out of a possible maximum of 180. The competitors who followed next in order of merit were Stanchion (134), Excelsior (121), Lunatic (115), Ben Accord (109), and Jo (104), and East Anglia (101). No other competitor obtained 100 marks or over.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand: whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

BARITONE.—The answer to the Conundrum to which the name of BOBUS was appended should have been credited to you.

ESMERALDA II.—Your communication seemed scarcely to be an answer to the Puzzle, No. 772. Should you again compete please choose some other nom de plume, as "Esmeralda" has been already secured.

LEAF RULE.—I will do my best to give shortly such a competition as you wish.

ONESIMUS.—The idea has been already several times carried out in these pages.

S. H. H.—Many thanks for your suggestion.

PETER.—The often-quoted line of Coleridge, written to give an instance of the hexameter, is:—

"In the hexameter rises the fountain's silvery column."

WALY.—Your answer arrived too late.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 772.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

SUGGESTIONS AS TO HOW THE "TRUTH" HOME-MADE TOY AND DOLL SHOW CAN BE MADE STILL MORE ATTRACTIVE.

I think that if the services of a good ventriloquist could be obtained, it would be most amusing and interesting. He could make the dolls speak, from the smallest to the largest, and much merriment might be got in this way. Doubtless, if this idea was carried out, a request made in TRUTH would bring offers from some who would be very pleased to give their services gratuitously for such a good work.—C.

We have all heard and read of Edison's phonograph, but how few have had an opportunity of seeing and hearing it at work. I think if some well-known public personage could be induced to entrust one of these instruments with a short address appropriate to the occasion, that its reproductions to the audience would add immensely to the attractions of the Doll Show.—Merle.

If practicable, have a row of dolls attired in the fashions to be in vogue during the coming winter. This, if done with due attention to correctness of design and execution would, I suppose, be expensive, but if the feature were specially advertised, I am sure it would make the show very popular. Anyhow, if I were a married man I should be sorry to see the idea put into execution.—Girouette.

An interesting and practicable feature which might be incorporated in the Toy and Doll Show would be a marionnette procession and performance of all the dolls which have gained prizes. This could easily be arranged, and there is no doubt but that it would prove a very effective and successful adjunct to the show. There would naturally be a slight extra expense attending this, which could, however, with good management and by means of a small admission fee, be turned into a source of profit.—Stanchion.

1. Have a baby show of "élite" babies. Three prizes to the prettiest and most taking, under six months. Three prizes ditto over six and under twelve. Jury of eighteen matrons, to whom prize tickets (six in all) are to be given, and the baby showing most first, second, or third-class prizes is unmistakable winner in each class. 2. I saw the great success attending such a show in our own neighbourhood. A flower-show had gathered people together; every one laughed about the baby tent, but it was filled to overflowing during the two hours they were on exhibition, and the excitement and interest shown were most amusing. If your lady friends will help you and send competitors, I do not doubt its proving a great attraction.—Osmond.

A stage on which boys and girls dressed in nursery rhyme or fairy tale fashion might, at intervals, dance quadrilles, &c., hold courts, or recite short pieces. When the children have gone, professional or amateur artists might enliven the scene with solos and part-singing or recitations.—Esperanza.

I suggest tableaux poupées—viz., groups of dolls arranged by means of stands and wires to form historical or other representations of different scenes; and next year prizes might be given for the best tableau poupée sent complete to the show. The dolls waiting to be dressed might be utilised for the purpose this year, and any of the other dolls sent dressed in special historical or other costume.—Chee.

1. I would suggest that the Editor of TRUTH invite ladies and gentlemen to volunteer to give two or three tableaux-vivants at intervals during the Toy Show in the Albert Hall, bringing their own party, paraphernalia, &c., being dependent for light only on "Mr. TRUTH." 2. I do not know how the shadow scenes (at the end of pantomimes) are done, but I believe very easily. If they are possible in the Albert Hall, I think one or two during the evening would prove very attractive.—Simla.

If an entrance fee is charged to visitors to the Show, have a "Dolls' Band," i.e., performers dressed in the style dolls are dressed in, and painted as much like dolls as possible. Ask one or two well-known professionals to give their services as "dolls," and sing or play made up as "dolls," advertising the Dolls' Band well, thus:—

"THE DOLLS' HOUSE,"

Royal Albert Hall .....
"TRUTH" DOLL SHOW.
THE DOLL BAND.

"The Funeral March of a Marionnette" and such pieces might be played.—Paramé.

A young child, appropriately dressed, to be placed at each stall, or at equal intervals round, each to have a different type of doll or toy to play with and show to visitors. At short intervals of time all to go round with them, to music, in procession or musical drill. After complete round, each to hand on toy or doll to next, and so again. Two sets—girls with dolls, boys with other toys—may be formed, and the processions go opposite ways, parallel, or interweaving in figures. Musical toys might be sounded in time and tune to the music. Wheeling toys to be pushed or drawn.—Cartoon.

I suggest that the most original feature which can be incorporated in the TRUTH Toy and Doll Show with a view to ensuring its increased success would be to have a day set apart for the admission of children only (one grown-up person allowed to accompany each party of children).—Banff.

A very good aid to the success of the TRUTH Toy and Doll Show would be to hire a military band to play in the Albert Hall whilst the Show is on. The cost would, no doubt, be defrayed by placing special collecting-boxes in prominent parts of the building.—Showmow

1. Insert in each copy of TRUTH a bill, setting forth the objects and conditions of the Show, with a request to readers to place the bill in some prominent position, where it will be seen by as large a number of people as possible. 2. An appeal by circular (or through the columns of TRUTH) to shopkeepers. This would undoubtedly bring in a quantity of toys. 3. Offer a prize, of say £10, to the reader sending in the largest number of toys, or procuring the greatest number of new contributors.—Mars.

THE CUI BONO OF A DOLL SHOW.

The practical reason that comes in my head,
I hope you'll agree, may be sung and not said.
The dolls should embody each phase and variety
Of people one meets with in London society.
Imagine the smile that your present would fish up
When some one came in for an unctuous doll-bishop!
And, say, could we picture an effigy jollier
Than the doll of a pampered and over-fed collier?
A little French maid gets an officer gay,
And calls him, not dolly, but murmurs "poupée!"
She doesn't mean "puppy," but saves that remark
For the doll of a tailor-made curate or clerk.
Then the feminine dollies! How gladly we'd see 'em
Represent a bas bleu from the British Museum;
A Girton doll;—hoydens in waistcoats and shirts;
And a cyclist-doll, got up in masculine skirts.
Dolly boys in tall hats, and doll maidens—sweet pets!
Who would use horsey language and smoke cigarettes;
Or to monosyllabic remarks might aspire
If you very persistently pulled the right wire.
The idea's a big one. Adopt it, and then
You'll embody all sorts and conditions of men;
Nor ever need run any risk of satiety—
One meets such a number of dolls in society.
Rabelais.

I would suggest that in the Show two or three ladies should be dressed in the costume (as near as possible, with sleeves added) of the figure on the front page of TRUTH, and allowed to watch the stalls and give the small books to the public which are given away annually, also to point out the special objects of the Show; the ladies to provide their own dresses, which would look well in pale yellow art muslin (à la Empire), bound across the shoulders and bust with white satin ribbon. Doubtless some of the Puzzle competitors would join me in offering their services free.—Violet V.

Ask the workhouse authorities to send some of the children to view the Show at the Albert Hall. A small subscription would cover the expense.—Wild Thyme.

It might be an attraction to have some prettily-dressed little girls to do the honours in connection with the dolls and some little boys to explain the working and show off the action of the mechanical toys. Pleasing music has already been a feature in the TRUTH Doll and Toy Shows.—Excelsior.

Arrange a quantity of small tables in all sorts of nooks and corners. Drape prettily with art muslin. Ornament them with pretty Japanese fans, &c. Get a sprightly young lady to take charge of each one, and some good tea, coffee, cocoa, and chocolate, at a fair price. Also to sell at same table small boxes and bags of chocolate sweets. All profits to go to TRUTH Toy Fund. A Country Girl.

Another suggestion would be to have an enormous Christmas tree, on which toys and dolls could be hung, and in the evening illuminated with tiny electric lights (lamps with coloured shades), or procure a number of little Christmas trees or ships, each to be laden with sufficient toys for each separate hospital, so there might be H.M.S. University, St. George, &c., &c.—Chee.

I think that the TRUTH Toy and Doll Show would be rendered much more interesting to spectators if the prize dolls and toys were marked 1st, 2nd, 3rd, &c., prize, as, at last year's Show, I heard many people expressing a wish that they knew which were the prize dolls.—Vera Errol.

My idea would be for tableaux vivants to be introduced in the Show. For instance, a small stage to be arranged with a drop curtain. Tableau 1 could show small ward with child (a big doll) in cot, and the nurse watching over, to be called "Anxious Moments;" the next scene, "Convalescent;" and, lastly, "Recovery," and the nurse presenting the child with a TRUTH toy. I have no doubt that many of the Puzzle competitors would join me in offering their services free.—Violet V.

We all know TRUTH has a large circulation, but I have an idea that the TRUTH "Doll Show" is not as largely patronised as we all should like it to be. With a view of increasing its popularity I propose that there should be a number of medals made at a limited cost, and that all annual and liberal subscribers should be presented with one of the above-mentioned novelties, which, although small in value, their real worth would be in the very appropriate inscription which could be inscribed on the one side, with the date, &c., on the other. They might also be on view at the coming show and should act in a bazaar manner in benefit of the "Doll Fund."—Archaloner.

Make a small charge for admission, and include light refreshments, devoting any balance to the fund.—Leaf Rule.

Gipsy dolls are generally abundant at a doll show. Place them on a separate table in charge of a little maiden attired to match her charges, and let her tell fortunes at 6d. per head in aid of the expenses of the show.—Ivy Leaves.

Make a fancy fair of the Show, with stalls for light refreshments. Let every visitor be given a numbered lottery or tombola ticket, the prizes presented by friends, and including some subscriptions to TRUTH, to be drawn for and distributed at the end of the evening. The fair should open at one o'clock and not close till midnight. Amusements for children would be a special feature in the afternoon. The profits of the undertaking to go to the Doll Fund.—Grip.

With a view to ensuring an increased success to the Toy and Doll Show, a stall for a sale of work and articles in aid of the fund might be held in one part of the building.—Bunny.

From my recollections of the Albert Hall I think the shape and style of the building would adapt itself to a large merry-go-round, placed in the centre and fitted with shelves, rods, &c., on which to display the toys and dolls. The whole thing to slowly revolve to save the public the trouble of walking about. The effect at night could be considerably enhanced by flashes of limelight.—W. Arnold.

A THIN PAPER EDITION OF "TRUTH" IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY,

AND CAN BE OBTAINED ON ORDER OF ALL NEWSAGENTS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION, PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

To the Continent, America, Australia, New Zealand, or the Colonies (India and China excepted), on the following terms:—

THREE MONTHS	£0 7 7
SIX MONTHS	0 15 2
TWELVE MONTHS	1 10 4

To India, and China, on the following terms:—

THREE MONTHS	£0 8 3
SIX MONTHS	0 16 2
TWELVE MONTHS	1 12 6

And to any address in the United Kingdom—THREE MONTHS, 7s.; SIX MONTHS, 14s.; TWELVE MONTHS, 28s.

Reading Cases for TRUTH (cloth, extra gilt), price 2s. 6d. Cases for Binding TRUTH in Half-yearly Volumes, price 3s. 6d.

Post-Office Orders are to be made payable at the General Post-Office, E.C., to Mr. REG. E. BOOKER, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's Gate, London, S.W. Cheques to be crossed WILLIAMS, DEACON, & CO.

MILD INDIAN CIGARS. OBTAINABLE EVERYWHERE.

BAHADUR

COLEMAN'S WINCARNIS

Or Liebig's Extract of MEAT & MALT WINE

Over 2,000 Testimonials received from Medical Men.

Highest Award Chicago Exhibition.

Sole Manufacturers—

COLEMAN & CO., LTD., NORWICH AND LONDON.

JEWSBURY & BROWN'S Oriental Tooth Paste.

White, Sound Teeth, Healthy Gums to Old Age.

CAUTION.—The only genuine is JEWSBURY & BROWN'S.

Pots 1/6 and 2/6. All Chemists.

60 YEARS IN USE.

THREE GOLD MEDALS

The Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam Corset

Exquisite Modèl. Perfect Comfort Guaranteed Wear.

Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil; also in the New Sanitary Woollen Cloth. 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped "Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam No. 116," in oval on the lining.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.

WOODS' PATENT GALVANISED STEEL WIRE MATTRESSES & BEDSTEADS.

Carriage Paid, and Liberal Cash Discount allowed.

Guaranteed for Five Years.

EXHIBITED CARRYING ONE TON

At LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and other EXHIBITIONS.

SHOW ROOMS:

128, BOLD ST., LIVERPOOL.

Catalogues and Prices free on application to the

LONGFORD WIRE, IRON & STEEL CO., LTD.

WARRINGTON.

Please mention this Paper.

AN AROMATIC FRAGRANCE

is imparted to the mouth by the use of Sozodont. It is beyond doubt the cleanest, purest, and best tooth wash ever offered to the public. No lady ever used Sozodont without approving of its cleansing and purifying properties, and the flattering testimonials that have been bestowed upon it by eminent Dentists speak volumes of praise for its merits.

SOZODONT

though efficient and powerful is absolutely harmless, for it contains neither mineral nor acid; it is wholly vegetable in its origin.

"VINOLIA"

EAU DE COLOGNE

CONCENTRATED. DELICATE. PURE.

As Fine as can possibly be made.

Is not largely diluted with spirit to lessen the price and increase the profit.

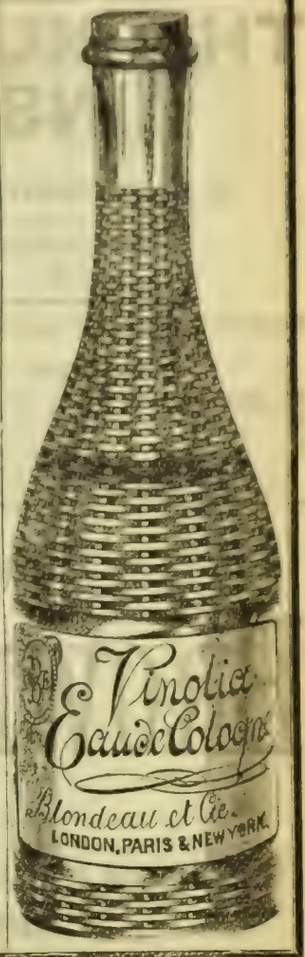
Probably the most concentrated "EAU DE COLOGNE" that is made.

In this you have the finest essential oils, &c.

No. 1.—2 oz. Small Bottles	...	...	...	1s. 6d.
No. 2.—4 oz. Large do.	...	...	...	2s. 6d.
No. 3.—Small Wicker do.	...	...	...	3s. 6d.
No. 4.—Medium do. do.	...	...	...	6s. 6d.

BLONDEAU ET CIE.

RYLAND ROAD, LONDON, N.W.



A PHENOMENAL SUCCESS.

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

AN EXCELLENT MEDIUM MILD INDIAN CIGAR.

A most delightful weed. Sample four or five 1s., or free by return post 12 stamps.

BEWLAY'S 49, STRAND, W.C.; 74, STRAND (EAST INDIA HOUSE); & 143, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.

Tobacconist to the Royal Family. Estab. 1780. Descriptive Price List post free.

WESTWARD TO THE FAR EAST.

JAPAN, CHINA, AUSTRALASIA.—Varied, picturesque, and fastest route is via Vancouver.

CANADA AND UNITED STATES.—Through tickets to all points; luxurious dining cars, sleeping cars, mountain hotels.

ROUND THE WORLD.—By arrangement with the P. & O. Company, and all Atlantic Lines via Japan or Australia, price £125.

FREE FARMS. With Cash Bonus to Settlers in the North-West.—For berths and descriptive pamphlets, apply PASSENGER DEPARTMENT, Canadian Pacific Railway, 67 and 68, King William-street, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street Glasgow.

HOT MINERAL BATHS OF BATH.

Daily yield 507,600 gallons F. at 120.

FOUNDED BY THE ROMANS IN THE 1ST CENTURY.

ΑΡΙΣΤΟΝ ΜΕΝ ΥΔΩΡ.

BATHERS DURING 1890—97,299.

These Baths are unrivalled in Europe for luxury and extent, and contain all that modern improvements can provide for the comfort and relief of the invalid or the enjoyment of those in health.

Reclining, Deep, and Swimming Baths. Thermal Vapour Baths, for Painful conditions of Joints, &c. Douche, Inhalation, Aspiration, Pulverisation, &c., and Ear, Eye, Throat, &c. The Aix les Bains Massage System and Doucheurs and Doucheuses.

The Medical profession sends patients who suffer from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Dyspepsia, Eczema, and other skin affections.

Letters to the General Manager will receive every attention.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON

Very agreeable to take.

A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,

HÆMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.

Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists

E. GRILLON,
69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.

Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35 Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

TO ENSURE THE GREATEST COMFORT
WEAR THE NEW PATENT

"EIDEX"

COMBINATION FOR LADIES & CHILDREN.

By Royal Letters Patent.

No. 14016.

The demand for Combination Garments generally has considerably increased during the last few years, but the one weak point in this otherwise most sensible garment was the difficulty in securing an efficient wrap at the back.

This has now been overcome by means of an extra covering inside at the back only, which is an improvement of the utmost practical utility. Ladies will immediately apprehend and appreciate the greatly enhanced comfort to be obtained by wearing the "EIDEX" COMBINATION.

Prices: From 6/11 Pure Wool from 9/11 Ribbed do. from 5/6

NOTE.—The Dog's Head Trade Mark is Attached to Every Garment.

To be had of all Ladies' Outfitters, and Wholesale only of STAPLEY & SMITH, London Wall, London, E.C.

THE WINDOW

Is the most important thing to be considered in the decoration of a house. The eye naturally turns to the opening by which light enters the room; and in the ideal home the view from that opening, and everything that serves to frame it, should be attractive. The most beautiful thing to be seen through a window is a garden of flowers, but nine-tenths of human habitations in civilised countries are so placed that their windows overlook scenes very different—sometimes dreary streets, stables, and chimney pots. Glacier Window Decoration will add beauty to the window, it is not costly, and no alteration of sashes is required. It is the only effective and reliable substitute for stained glass.

Hundreds of specimens can be seen, and all information can be had at

THE GLACIER DEPÔTS,

153, Piccadilly, W., and 56, Queen Victoria St., E.C.

The best Company is the Company that does the most good.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

R. A Mc CURDY, President.

ESTABLISHED 1843. | 50 YEARS' RECORD. | JUBILEE 1893.

Received from Policyholders ... £94,139,358. | Returned to Policyholders ... £71,223,404.
Accumulated Funds in hand ... £35,871,118.

GUARANTEED INVESTMENTS.

4 % CONSOLS } Purchased by 10, 15, or 20 Instalments.
5 % ditto } Redeemable in 10, 15, or 20 Years, and 6 % ditto } not issued by any other Company.

These Investments include Insurance Protection increasing annually.
Latest accounts show £2 11s. 5d. returned for every £1 received.

A NEW PROSPECTUS, containing SPECIAL INVESTMENT, GUARANTEED BONUS, and other IMPORTANT FEATURES, can be obtained on application to any of the Branch Offices, or to—

D. C. HALDEMAN,
General Manager for Great Britain and Ireland,
17 and 18, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.

MANUFACTURERS TO HER MAJESTY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR

HAS 35 YEARS' WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION.

"IS STILL THE BEST COCOA."

SCHWEITZER'S NOURISHING, STRENGTHENING

Cocoatina

Reduced Prices : ¼ lbs., 11d. ; ½ lbs., 1/9 ; 1 lbs., 3/4.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

FOR ALL

Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as
Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion,
Disordered Liver, and Female Ailments.

Prepared only by the Proprietor, THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helen's, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere, in Boxes, 9½d., 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each, with full directions.

The 1s. 1½d. Box contains Fifty-six Pills.

THE SALE IS NOW SIX MILLION BOXES PER ANNUM.

Printed for the Proprietor by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BODKIN. "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 884. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, December 7, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

THE SEVENTEENTH

CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF "TRUTH,"

"The Spookeries,"

IS NOW READY.

In a Special Wrapper,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Profusely Illustrated by F. Carruthers Gould.

The Illustrations include THREE DOUBLE-PAGED and FOUR FULL-PAGED CARTOONS, printed in colours :—

1. "Truth" Speaks about Spooks.
2. Viva el Toro.
3. A Demonstration of Loyalty (With a Collection).
4. Salisbury's Stuffed Geese.
5. Chamberlain's Dive.
6. A Royalty Raree Show.
7. Work for the Girl-Flogger.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

IT has been decided to hold the Fourteenth Truth Toy and Doll Show at the Royal Albert Hall, Kensington Gore, on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 19th and 20th of this month. The Show will be open to the public on both days, free of all charge, between the hours of 10.30 a.m. and 10.30 p.m., on presentation of a visiting card at the doors, and I hope that a very large number of the readers of Truth and their friends will avail themselves of the opportunity of attending it. Will those ladies who have not yet sent back the Dolls they are dressing, be good enough to do so at the earliest possible date? At the latest all parcels and cases, both of Dolls and Home-made Toys, must be received at this Office, carriage paid, by the 13th inst., in order that there may be time to classify and arrange them for the Exhibition.

A gold watch, kindly presented by the "Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company," of Regent-street, will be included amongst the prizes which will be given to the most successful exhibitors of dressed dolls at this year's Show.

Mr. J. C. J. Drucker has made me an offer in connection with the coming Truth Show at the Albert Hall, which I have accepted with much pleasure. He has promised to send me from fifty to a hundred pheasants, in order that they may be distributed amongst the Metropolitan Workhouses for the use of the older inmates. It seems to me that there may be others amongst the sporting readers of Truth who may be ready to follow so excellent an example, and I shall therefore be willing to undertake the distribution of any game which may be sent, on condition that it is delivered at the Albert Hall, Kensington Gore, on Monday, December 18.

I have also received a short but eminently satisfactory letter from Tom Smith, of Wilson-street, Finsbury-square. It is his intention, he states, to send me in the course of a few days his usual contribution of 22,000 Christmas Crackers. On behalf, then, of thousands of his delighted little subjects let me heartily thank the Cracker King for his renewed generosity.

As those who have visited the Albert Hall are aware, there is a very fine organ in the building; and I am glad to say that there will be many chances of hearing this instrument on the 19th and 20th inst., Mr. Tonking having again kindly offered to preside at it during the Show.

The following letter, received by me at the beginning of the week, tells briefly, but most satisfactorily, its own tale. It is dated London, December, 1893, and runs thus:—

Dear Sir,—I again venture to enlist your kind assistance in distributing the accompanying Eleven Thousand New Sixpences amongst the children of the London Workhouses and their Schools and Hospitals, for which I shall feel most grateful.—Believe me, yours very truly, A Friend.

I may add that the bags of newly-minted coins alluded to above are in my possession, and that I shall, as on so many previous occasions, most gladly carry out the wish of their generous and persistently anonymous donor.

The Editor of the Jockey, a paper which I had not seen before, not only sends me a guinea for the Toy Fund, but makes an excellent suggestion in the current number of his journal. "If some of the fortunate bookmakers and backers," he writes, "desire to do a good action, they might subscribe to the Truth Toy Fund, in order to assist giving the poor children some amusement at Christmas." I hope that "fortunate bookmakers and backers" generally will act on this admirable hint.

A lady, in sending me 3s. 6d. for the Toy Fund, alludes to her donation as "the price of a pair of gloves." If only a few thousand readers of Truth would follow so excellent an example, the amount still required would soon be realised.

At least £500 more is wanted for the children in the London Hospitals and Workhouses to get their toys. Whilst I have to thank many of the readers of Truth for having sent money, I hope that the rest are not standing back under the impression that others are doing all that is required. Charity, said Sidney Smith, often consists in a benevolent wish on the part of A to put his hand in B's pocket to relieve C. I do not think much of this form of charity, and I would respectfully point out to my readers that, whatever its theoretical merits may be, it does not buy toys, which can only be done on a cash basis.

The Plea of Santa Claus.

Good Santa Claus looked in last night,
In his cloak with the sable lining,
And twigs of holly and mistletoe
Round his beaver cap were twining;
But the look of love in his kind blue eyes
Through a mist of tears was shining.

"Oh! Truth," said he, "as you know full well,
I shall soon my rounds be making;
With my shoulders bent 'neath the weight of toys
That to happy homes I'm taking.
And, wherever my footsteps fall, sweet dreams
Will end in a glad awaking.

"Already my Christmas store grows large;
I have toys of all sorts and sizes—
Toys of the very newest kinds
That the skill of man devises,
And toys of the old familiar shapes
Which glad childhood ever prizes.

"Yes, when I go through the West-end squares,
My back will methinks, not bend less;
For the boys and girls of the well-to-do
I have gifts in assortment endless;
But where are the toys for the little ones
Who are poor, and sick, and friendless?

"Ah me, I know how those children wait,
Some, in pain, long vigils keeping;
And some who have never a taste of joy,
Save it be in their dreams when sleeping;
Yet hoping 'gainst hope that I shall come
When the stars of Yule are peeping.

"I know how they're waiting, pinched and worn,
Behind workhouse walls so dreary;
Or in tiny cribs at the hospitals,
Of their little lives a-weary;
Shut in from the gladsome scenes and sights
That the world to a child make cheery.

"I know they are waiting eagerly
And that's why I've come here mainly,
For it seems to me—oh, you must not mind
If a dear old friend speaks plainly—
That there is a terrible chance, alas!
Lest those children wait all vainly.

"And I dread the task that will soon be mine,
On the night of carol-singing,
If I have to pass those little ones by
When the Christmas bells are ringing.
I dread their look when they see that I
Not a toy to them am bringing.

"Yes, Truth, their faces I dread to see,
As hope in their eyes is dying;
I dread to be met with their wistful gaze,
As in weary pain they're lying;
And I know the chimes will a discord make
When I hear those children crying."

Said Truth, "Nay, nay; you must not despair,
For though clouds the sky beset,
There are still ten days, good Santa Claus,
For the rich to pay their debt.
There are still ten days, and I do believe
I shall get the money yet.

"The situation may now be bad,
But I'm sure that we shall retrieve it;
There will be a toy for every child,
And with joy shall each receive it.
And that you will have to pass one by—
I can't and I won't believe it!"

A well-known judge and breeder of St. Bernard dogs has offered me a pup of most exalted pedigree to be put up for sale at the Truth Toy Show for the benefit of the Toy Fund. I had to tell him, with great reluctance, that I have been compelled to make it a rule not to accept articles for sale at the Toy Show, and that I dare not make an exception to the rule. In this unfortunate position I asked whether I might not be allowed to try and sell the pup for the same object through the columns of Truth. To this the gentleman has most kindly assented. I now ask, therefore, who will buy a magnificently-bred St. Bernard pup for the benefit of all the poor little children in the London Hospitals and Workhouses, who are in danger of getting no toys this Christmas owing to the impoverished state of the Truth Toy Fund? What offers? The owner and breeder will not let me publish his name, but I am at liberty to give it privately to all bonâ-fide bidders, who, on communicating with me, will have an opportunity of inspecting the pup before purchase. Here is the pedigree of this highly-connected animal:—

Sire.—Champion Angelo—{Barry. / Wanda.
Imported from Switzerland.
Winner of Challenge Prizes at all the leading shows, such as the Kennel Club, St. Bernard Club, Crystal Palace.

Dam.—Nadeshda.—{Champion Keeper. / Three times winner of the St. Bernard Club Cup at Birmingham, 100 Guinea Challenge Cup.
St. Bernard Club Show. Sire. {First prizes at Warwick, St. Bernard Club Show, Sheffield, Gloucester, Brighton, &c.

I have received the following amounts towards this year's Fund:—

Sir Chas. Russell, £2; R. T. R., 20s.; R. G., £2; K—— W., 21s.; Training ship Mercury, per Captain Hoare, £3; J. Ll., £2. 2s.; R. Heard, 2s. 6d.; A. E., 20s.; J. M. C., 1s. 6d.; F. H., 2s.; Little Johnny Pringle, £1; F. M. B., £2. 2s.; F, B. L. C. and friends, 20s.; P. M., £5; Augustus Spalding, £2; J. Milner Gibson, £5; J. E. B., 20s.; B. A. G., £5; A. W., £3. 3s.; Alice, Annie, Ella, Ethel, and Carlyle Moses, 4s.; J. Dudley, 5s.; A. H. B., 2s. 6d.; Mrs. Eustace Smith, 20s.; L. M. V., £2; W. H. L., 10s.; Mrs. Baldock, £5; Miss Houghton, £1. 1s.; Miss Edith Houghton, £1. 1s.; R. A. Burnett, £1. 1s.; Mrs. Henry Gold, 10s. 6d.; Elsie and Douglas, £2. 2s.; J. H. L., £5; Nina, Sylvia, and Sebastian, 10s.; A. T. C., £5; Francis J. Schuster, £5; J. P. M., £3. 3s.; Lady Lucas, £1. 1s.; J. P., 10s.; E. M. Maude, 5s.; A. T. L., £2. 2s.; Eric and Tita, 5s.; H.M.S. Blanche, per J. de M. Hutchinson, £2. 2s.; E. Tabernacle, £3. 3s.; Friends at Cromer, 3s.; Miss M. C. Wilson, 5s.; Piganoff's Collection, 4s. 6d.; Anonymous, 10s.; Alexr. Harris, 21s.; A Unitarian, 3s. 6d.; C. C., £2. 2s.; W. Y., £5; Aubrey Edgar Jackson, 2s. 6d.; A Member of the Society for the Protection of Birds, £1. 1s.; Mrs. F. A. Mullett, £1; Sir P. Felis, £2; Proprietor the Jockey, £1; Poker, 2s. 6d.; J. Britten, £1. 1s.; C. E. B., G.P.O., £1; H. L. L., £3; D. and E., New York, £3. 3s.; Elisabeth, Margarete, and Max, 10s.; Georgie and Daphne, £2; D. M. J., £2. 2s.; Gerald, 10s.; Ll., £5; J. W. M., £2. 2s.; Cecil, Pat, and Stella Gold, £1; C. T. A., 20s.

The following have also come to hand:—

1 parcel of "Funny Little Chaps" from the J. L. Young Manufacturing Co.; 1 box of Russian Dolls from Mrs. L. White, of St. Petersburg; 1 box of Odd Toys from Dorothy Lindo; 1 parcel of Toys from F. B. L. C. and friends; 2 dozen dressed Dolls from Mr. C. Wilkinson; and 4,200 Toy Books, &c., from the Proprietor of "Holloway's Pills."

For Amusements, see page 1245.
For the Truth Hotel List, see page 1244 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 1247.

The Queen will pay a visit to Coburg next spring, when on her way home from Italy, and during her stay, which is to extend over a week, her Majesty will reside at the Ehrenburg Palace, as the hunting lodge of Rosenau (where Prince Albert was born, and where the Queen stayed in 1865) would not afford sufficient accommodation for the Royal suite.

A paragraph has been going round the papers which states that "great preparations are in progress at Windsor Castle for the celebration of Christmas, when there will be an elaborate series of tableaux vivants." It is added that "there will be a gathering of the Royal Family such as has not been seen for years, as the Queen wishes to get as many of her daughters, sons, grandsons, and granddaughters as possible around her at Christmas." This is all a farrago of blundering nonsense. The Queen will, as usual, spend Christmas at Osborne, and the "great preparations" at Windsor are purely imaginative; nor will there be either tableaux or any other entertainments during the holidays, as her Majesty is in "family mourning" for Prince Alexander of Battenberg. There is to be no large "gathering" of the Royal Family, for the only guests of the Queen at Osborne, according to present arrangements, will be the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, and Princess Louise and Lord Lorne, who are to arrive at the Palace on the 23rd, and they will stay at Osborne until January 8.

The question of the continuance of the Duke of Edinburgh's allowance now that he has become Duke of Saxe-Coburg has been the subject of communications between Mr. Gladstone and Lord Salisbury, with the result that it has been decided that it would be better that the allowance should not continue. The Duke of Edinburgh, who left the matter to the two leaders, has consequently determined to renounce it. He is entitled to considerable credit for this, as his legal right was unquestionable, no contingent renunciation being contained in the Parliamentary grant, and the uncle whom he has succeeded having been so liberal in his expenditure that the Duke is no gainer by his death.

Lord Playfair's term of duty as Lord-in-Waiting on the Queen will conclude next Tuesday, when he ought to be succeeded by Lord Brassey, who, however, is in India, so his place will be taken by Lord Drumlanrig, who has not been to Court since he was appointed a Lord-in-Waiting. His attendance will last for only a few days, as the Queen does not take the Lord-in-Waiting to Osborne.

The Royal yacht Alberta, which has undergone an overhaul and refit, is now in readiness for her usual winter service while the Queen is at Osborne, and she will embark her Majesty at Gosport on the 19th for conveyance to East Cowes. As to the two larger Royal yachts, the Victoria and Albert is under orders to be in readiness for service by the middle of March, when she will be required to convey the Queen to the Continent; and the Osborne is to proceed in February to the Mediterranean, where the Princess of Wales and her daughters will join her at Genoa or at Marseilles for a cruise to Naples, Corfu, and Athens.

The recent visit of the Duke and Duchess of York to Edinburgh has cost nearly £900, towards which only about £350 has been subscribed by the citizens, and the balance will have to be paid out of the rates.

Prince Christian returned last week from Berlin to Cumberland Lodge, and was joined there by Prince and Princess Aribert of Anhalt-Dessau, who had been the guest of the Queen at Windsor Castle, where Princess Christian has also been staying during the absence from England of Princess Beatrice. Princess Christian's recent visit to Reading was a great success, for the Bazaar in aid of the Helena Nursing Home, which H.R.H. then opened, has resulted in a net profit of about £660.

The prospects of the coming Dublin season are too uncertain to be, as in former days, the absorbing topic of conversation at this time of the year. The future, so far as is at present known, holds no possibilities of pleasantness; there are no festive anticipations to brighten social stagnation. Irish society is still disposed for the war path; no feasting except at political banquets, for which, by the way, the Unionists, especially of Ulster, seem to have a marked predilection—no tripping on the light fantastic toe, which has been displaced in favour of the sterner measures of the war dance. The Lord-Lieutenant's hospitable instincts have to find outlet on the far side of the Channel from Ireland. During the past week he has been entertaining parties of guests in Yorkshire. It is, perhaps, one of the most curious facts in connection with the boycotting of Lord Houghton, that the boycott is only enforced in Ireland; that is, in the country where he is the official representative of the Sovereign. Those who will not be the Viceroy's guests at Dublin Castle have apparently no objection to accept Lord Houghton's hospitality in Yorkshire. That they get the opportunity of accepting this hospitality is perhaps the most curious of all the curious facts connected with the matter.

Lord and Lady Alington will next week entertain a large shooting party at More Crichel, their place in Dorsetshire, including the Duke of Cambridge, and excellent sport is expected, pheasants and partridges being very abundant on the estate.

The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, who have been entertaining a succession of large house parties at Chatsworth during the last three weeks, will give a Country Ball there during the Christmas holidays, and they are to be present, with their guests, at the High Peak Ball at Bakewell on the 27th.

AT BOSCOMBE, BOURNEMOUTH.—The HOTEL BURLINGTON, "Sunny Boscombe." A charming Hotel, luxuriously appointed, in acres of matured grounds sloping to the sea. Every comfort of home. Most moderate charges. Bournemouth East Station. Tariff of Manager, or at Burlington & Buckingham Palace Hotels, London.

BOURNEMOUTH.—"Royal Bath." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due south. Moderate charges. Tariff on application. Comparison invited. Electric light throughout. Only Hotel on "East Cliff."

The late Earl of Warwick and Brooke was properly Earl of Brooke and Warwick, the Earldom of Brooke being the older by thirteen years. The Earl preferred to call himself Lord Warwick and Brooke, or simply Lord Warwick. He really belonged, however, not to the family of the King-Maker, but to one which came to the front in the seventeenth-century.

Sir Archibald Orr-Ewing, who died last week, was the Tory Member for Dumbartonshire for twenty-four years, and at each election he won by so small a majority that it was evident that it was only his own great personal popularity which gained him the seat. The constituency was sharply contested four times by the Liberals without success, but when Sir Archibald retired they carried their candidate. Sir Archibald was not a territorial magnate, although he had purchased several estates during the last thirty years, but he was the senior partner in a vast manufacturing concern, which was originally established by himself. He was a calico-printer and a Turkey-red dyer, and his works in the Vale of Leven are on a very extensive scale, the business being one of the largest in the world in that particular line. Sir Archibald was a most munificent benefactor to his native city (Glasgow), more particularly to its University. He was also a generous friend to the Church of Scotland. He was an excellent man of business, full of practical sagacity, and blessed with a most imperturbable temper. He was a Tory with Liberal tendencies, and was exceedingly popular in the House of Commons, as he was always most genial and pleasant, and he left none but kindly memories behind when he retired last year. He died at Ballikinrain, his favourite residence in Stirlingshire, a beautiful old place, which he purchased in 1862 from the Napier family.

The death of the Duke of Leinster is much regretted in Kildare, where he was on good terms with neighbours and tenants. The Leinster family have never been absentees, but for many generations residents at Carton during the greater part of each year. In modern times the family have played no leading part in Irish history, Lord Edward Fitzgerald, of '98 fame, being the last member of the family who made himself conspicuous in the troubled arena of Irish politics. The Leinster Dukedom was the only Irish one until that of Abercorn was created a short time ago. The present Duke of Leinster will have a long minority, which may serve to restore the property. He is now in his sixth year.

A certain association of ladies and gentlemen is known as the Souls. What a lady has to do to become a Soul, and what are the rules of the association, are matters only known to the initiated. A friend of mine sends me a copy of the following honour examination in the expressions used by Souls in their interviews with each other. It is as cryptic to me as were the Eleusinian mysteries to a barbarian. I suppose that each expression has some meaning, but what this meaning may be I do not know :—

Honour Examination in the Expressions. 1893.

1. Explain the following :—
   The dull box. A greenhouse. A gorge riser. Gilletmongering. A Weise creed. Atrophasia. The Stinché. A Lou-good. Jephson. Whippingham. A felbrig. A float-face. Barloon. Greuze.
2. Give an account of :—
   Aunt Sister. Simon Fournier. Salis Schwabe. The return of the Feuerherz. La revanche de Gautier. A chien de poche. Carbolic Acid. Hells delights. Devi-Hoffmeister. Henri-Ware. A sob-breast. An ordure-present. Brain-stoppage. Full-lips.
3. Distinguish carefully between :—
   (i.) Darnley and a death Darnley.
   (ii.) Antrim boat and Addie boat.
   (iii.) International and a Mervyn luncheon.
   (iv.) Eliza and Eliza-teeth.
   (v.) De l'eer and type er.
   (vi). The Newman Flush and the Chronic Blush.
4. Describe accurately the Block, including
   (i.) The duties of the Mopper,
   (ii.) The chief blockites, and explain in a few lines :
   A Stodgite, a groffality, blue face and horns, a John Stone, a Molly Corker, poivre aux pieds, manchettes, Eternity soup, accrochements, six cloisters, puniscimi, type drawers.
5. Give a brief explanation of the following types :—
   Rose, leper, shoulder, stylograph, mustard, Beethoven, pudding, Hat 1st, Hat 2nd ; and illustrate by examples the verbs : to pelf, to raggle, to stool-grasp.
6. Give instances of :—
   Green-milk, Brahms, fausse râk, and dank women.
   Spen, Swinton, carpet-atmosphere and kid-glove men.
7. Describe :—
   Marie Dose, short, speech, the ideahmees, Eaton Hall, the wave-beam, Harris witch, type woman, a mia.
   And what do you know of Sir Godfrey Kneller and Sir Pierceye Shafton.
8. Analyze the following phrases :—
   (i.) This is distinctly Sir Giles.
   (ii.) She almost pecked him.
   (iii.) He has got a touch of egg.
   (iv.) I have got three dentists to-day.
   (v.) He punched her to the bone.
   (vi.) Je suis mariée, vous n'êtes pas.
   (vii.) He took a puff of ærine to sink his sherrine.
   (viii.) He's got a cruet.
9. Write an essay on one of these three subjects :—
   1. A Cowper drink.
   2. A Connaught clock.
   3. An Edgelow.

A particularly bad example of the cruelty exhibited at rabbit-coursing meetings is reported to me by a Waterford correspondent. On the occasion in question the supply of rabbits was deemed insufficient, and so each of the wretched creatures, after being pursued, caught, and more or less injured, was rescued as quickly as possible from the dogs for further use. In this way the same rabbit was coursed over and over again, until it was so mauled and lacerated as to be incapable of running. It is simply disgraceful to a civilised country that its laws provide no means of punishing or suppressing such ghastly torturing. What is the difference between this and a Spanish bull-fight, except that a bull does defend itself, and a rabbit cannot? Yet we are always wondering how Spaniards can be so brutal as to torture bulls.

Dr. Robson Roose treats the subject of clothing as a protection against cold in the Fortnightly of this month. He is a strong advocate of wool, and of several layers of clothing as warmer than a single warm garment. Clothes, he says, should be comparatively loose and easy, so that a layer of air is interposed between them and the skin.

24, Grosvenor Gardens.—To be Sold, or Let on lease, this Mansion, in perfect decorative and sanitary repair, containing 13 bedrooms, two drawing rooms, boudoir on first floor, dining-room, library, billiard-room, and dressing room on ground floor. Stabling for five horses.—Apply, Messrs. Thompson, 6, Bruton-street; or on Premises.

C.O.M. Whisky.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—Andrews & Co., Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand.

Mr. W. Le Fanu, who has just published his Irish "Recollections," is qualified to recollect much that might amuse and interest the public, which cannot always be said of the great army of those who follow the fashion of recollecting in these days. A descendant of Sheridan's, he is the brother of Joseph S. Le Fanu, whose personality was as interesting and peculiar as his novels. Both the brothers lived all their lives in Dublin, where Mr. W. Le Fanu held a leading position in the Board of Works Office. Joseph S. Le Fanu lived and died in a large house in Merrion-square, where most of his weird stories were written.

For a play to run with success, that is to say, with the approval of the public, for fifty nights, and then to be altered at the order of the Lord Chamberlain or the Examiner of Plays is, I believe, an unprecedented occurrence. The precedent has now been set, however, in the case of the "Gaiety Girl" at the Prince of Wales's Theatre. I myself witnessed this amusing burlesque and saw nothing to give offence in the character of the reverend gentleman which is now ordered to be eliminated. No critic to my knowledge saw anything offensive in it. The Examiner of Plays passed the piece after some demur on other points; and he, therefore, must be assumed to have seen nothing offensive in it. The public has shown its approval of the play by flocking to see it for nearly two months; and they have evidently found nothing offensive in it. Who, then, has taken offence at the part of the clerical gentleman? Apparently some influential individual whose opinion has prevailed against that of the Public, the Press, and the Examiner of Plays. Who could it have been?

The Savilian Chair of Astronomy at Oxford has been filled up by the appointment of Mr. H. H. Turner, of Trinity College, Cambridge, who was Second Wrangler in 1882, and he is widely known for his scientific attainments. Mr. Turner has been for nine years chief assistant to the Astronomer Royal at the Royal Observatory. This is an excellent appointment, and one upon which the University is to be heartily congratulated. The chair has been vacant since the death of Professor Pritchard in May last.

A committee has been appointed by the University Council at Oxford to consider the proposal to establish a University sanatorium, which is urgently required, for since the closing of the special ward at the Infirmary, there has been absolutely no provision whatever for infectious patients, as the authorities for several reasons declined the proposal to send them to special wards attached to the City Fever Hospital at Cold Harbour. The Acland House provides admirably for non-infectious cases, but it is full time that accommodation should be arranged in case of an epidemic, and it may be hoped that some practical steps will have been taken before next term begins.

TYPEWRITERS of all makes for Sale or Hire. Machines bought or taken in part exchange for new ones. Documents copied with accuracy and despatch.—N. TAYLOR, Manager, National Typewriter Exchange, 74, Chancery-lane, London.

The vacant living of Langton, Yorkshire, which is worth about £450 a year with residence, has been given by the Lord Chancellor to the Rev. A. H. Smith, rector of Catwick. Mr. Smith, who was formerly an officer in the Army, has held the living of Catwick for nine years. He is one of the most popular and hardworking parish clergyman in the East Riding.

Bishop Moorhouse has appointed Mr. P. V. Smith to be Chancellor of the diocese of Manchester (a post of considerable emolument), which office has become vacant by the resignation of Mr. R. C. Christie, who was appointed by Bishop Fraser. Mr. Smith, who is a decided Evangelical, has been for some years a prominent figure at the Church Congress and in the Canterbury House of Laymen, and he is one of the Bishop of London's diocesan readers.

I am told by a gentleman, who seems to know all about it, that it is an error—apparently an all but universal one—to describe the late Rector of Croft (the Rev. C. Villiers) as having been presented to the living by Mr. Gladstone. He was presented to Lee, Kent, in 1864, by the Lord Chancellor, and exchanged in 1873 with the Rev. F. H. Law, who had been presented to Croft in 1868.

The Chairman and members of the Board of Management of the Children's Hospital, Nottingham, well understand the influence of the peerage on the British public. In issuing invitations to an anniversary service at St. Mary's Church, when Canon Knox-Little will preach on behalf of the hospital, they announce in capital letters that "HER GRACE THE DUCHESS OF PORTLAND, accompanied by HIS GRACE THE DUKE, will attend." Doubtless many persons who would not go to church for the sake of going to church, nor for the sake of benefiting a hospital, nor for the sake of hearing Canon Knox-Little, will flock thither eagerly on the prospect of seeing a live DUCHESS accompanied by a live DUKE.

In one of his speeches at Cardiff, Lord Salisbury ridiculed as "a mere antiquated dream" the idea that the parson has any passion for meddling in or managing the secular offices of his parish. Immediately after reading this, I came across the report of a parish meeting held last week at Hough-on-the-Hill, near Grantham. The business was to elect a committee to carry out the Technical Education Act, and the parishioners appointed a Mr. Chadwick as chairman of the meeting. This step aroused the wrath of the Vicar (the Rev. C. R. Andrews), and he declared that he and nobody else should take the chair, and called for the parish constable to throw Mr. Chadwick out of the room. The parish constable, however, prudently kept outside. The Vicar and another person then put out the lights in the schoolroom, and on Mr. Chadwick procuring a candle the reverend gentleman "practically endeavoured to extinguish the flame." What have Lord Salisbury and those who believe him to say to such an episode in parochial life as this?

CORNS.—Wasmuth's Corn-Rings (in the watch) cure corns painlessly in two or three days. 1s. 1½d., of all Chemists, or post free 1s. 3d., of WARRICK BROS., Old Swan-lane, London, E.C.

One of the latest clerical eccentricities that have come under my knowledge occurred in connection with a wedding at Leamington. In this case the Vicar of the church at which the service was to be solemnised objected, among other things, to the choir being paid more than a certain figure, and to any flowers being used for decoration unless they were purchased at one particular shop. The choir difficulty ended by the choristers refusing to sing on the terms fixed by the Vicar. The other difficulty led to no floral decorations being used. It would be interesting to know the exact nature of the Vicar's interest in the flower shop in question, which is said to be a very small one.

There has been a strange outburst of Presbyterian bigotry in the Highlands lately. A young lady, belonging to the Free Church congregation in a well-known village, arranged to sing "Caller Herrin'" at an amateur concert, which was given there last week in aid of a local charity. Her "Minister" (saturated with stupid, muddy-minded intolerance) actually announced that he would refuse this lady "the privilege of Communion" if she sang at the concert, and the threat obliged her to stay at home. At another place the carpenter who has for years been employed by the managers of the annual "Gathering," happens to be an office-bearer of the Free Church. A few weeks ago this tradesman was requested to proceed with the work as usual, but, to the amazement of the Committee, he declared that he must decline it with regret, as the "Minister and Elders" had expressed their grave disapproval of the sports, and had threatened him with the most severe censure of the "Kirk Session" if he presumed to undertake the work. At another place a dance was to be given, and the manager of the function called on a local shopkeeper to order a piano, whereupon this worthy, who is an office-bearer in the Free Church, announced that, after serious consideration and a consultation with the Minister and Elders, he had come to the conclusion that dancing is a "profane" pastime, so he has decided never in future to supply any instrument which is to be used for the purpose of providing music for dancers. How this vendor of musical instruments can be certain that those which he sells will never be used for dancing, I hardly understand.

A timely warning may be useful to those whose sympathies and pockets are invoked by the Rev. S. C. Church, who has lately been issuing such invitations from "9, West-cliff, Dawlish." It appears to be true that this reverend beggar has been, as he states, in Holy Orders for over thirty years, and he was for a long time Vicar of Llanrhidian, Glamorganshire. But, on the other hand, it appears to be absolutely untrue that he has been, as he also suggests, reduced to beggary by the failure of a fraudulent solicitor, and he has been, either directly or through third parties, appealing to charity for at least fifteen years past. His wife is also well known as a begging-letter writer. The reverend gentleman once had considerable property, and he appears to have got rid of it entirely by his own folly and extravagance. Without going further into his history, of which I have full particulars, I think I have said enough to show that he is no credit to the Church, and no deserving object for charity.

I was referring last week to the claims of the National Training School of Cookery to increased support, and I am reminded of the subject by the Annual Report of the Edinburgh School of Cookery and Domestic Economy. I have several times referred to the work of this flourishing institution, and it seems to have been carried on with undiminished vigour during the last year. Cookery, in all its branches, is a mere item in the curriculum, which includes dress-making, needlework, millinery, book-keeping, hygiene, nursing, washing, and ironing; in fact, a complete course of technical education for women. When it is added that the institution seems to be practically self-supporting, and that its revenue account for the year shows a credit balance of £309, I would ask why we cannot have an equally useful institution in London.

At Glasgow, too, a most useful attempt to improve the cookery of the working classes has, I understand, been carried on for some time by Mrs. John Elder, who about eight years ago started a series of popular classes under qualified teachers of cookery. These lessons have been attended with the best results by many thousands of women, and, doubtless, many more thousands of the relatives of these women have reaped a share of the benefits.

Lady Herbert is making an earnest appeal to the charitable for funds to enable her and the Sisters of Charity of Carlisle-place, Victoria-street, to carry on the usual distribution to the suffering poor of Westminster. "This year," she says, "the misery is increased to an extent that drives us almost to despair; it is impossible to express the reality of the present state of the poor in this district, and of those whose life depends upon their daily earnings, for there is no work to be found." Lady Herbert asks for money to open at once the soup-kitchen, and to distribute coal tickets, clothes, bed-clothes, and warm coverings of any sort. I trust that her appeal will not be in vain. This is not a question of a fair living wage, it is a question of living versus starvation. The soup-kitchen would at most provide one meal a day for sick and children, and the donations of clothing, &c., somewhat temper the cold that they are exposed to in their fireless homes." Slumming in the East-end was the fashion for a brief period. What is now wanted is charity in the West-end; and considering the wealth at this end of the metropolis, it would be disgraceful if Lady Herbert's appeal does not meet with a response. Donations can either be sent directly to Lady Herbert, Belgrave-square, or to the Sisters of Charity in Carlisle-place, Westminster.

COACHING of highest excellence in West of Eng. at "Crawford's," Wykeham Ho., Clifton, Glos., for ARMY EXAMS. (Univ. and Civ. Serv.). Five crowded years of success. No vacancies till Jan. '94.

WINTER VISITORS TO BOURNEMOUTH will find "The Imperial" one of the most complete residential establishments in the United Kingdom. Finest position on East Cliff. Luxuriously furnished, with appointments and cuisine of the highest order. Moderate tariff.—Apply, Manager.—W. H. DORÉ, Proprietor.

Mr. Campbell Bannerman was questioned last week in the House of Commons with regard to the stationing of the South Wales Borderers on Portsdown Hill, to which matter I referred in the last number of TRUTH. Mr. Campbell Bannerman had evidently been misinformed, for he was quite wrong in stating that it was necessary to send the Borderers to these exposed forts, which were certainly about the most unsuitable quarters which could be found in England for a regiment just returned from Aden. Barrack accommodation could perfectly well have been found in Portsmouth, and if the blunder was committed by the local military authorities they deserve to be very severely censured. I hear, by the way, that similarly exposed quarters near Plymouth have been selected for a regiment which will arrive from India in a few weeks, but it may be hoped, after the lesson the War Office has received, that a more suitable arrangement will be made.

Although the fact is not yet officially announced, I understand that Colonel the Hon. Byng has resigned the command of the 1st Life Guards, and is to be succeeded by Major Sir Simon Lockhart. I hear that Captain Carter has also given up the post of Adjutant. Those who followed the 1st Life Guards' scandal as it was disclosed in the columns of TRUTH, will at once see in these events a further, and it is to be hoped, the final stage of the affair. This would not be an opportune moment for reopening the controversy, but I may say that in view of what I have been hearing during the last few months of the position of affairs in the regiment, the change now made has certainly not come about too soon. I once ascribed the beginning of the whole trouble to the alternation of command between King Log and King Stork. King Stork now succeeds King Log. I hope his reign may be more successful than that of his predecessor.

Another interesting item of information for the readers of TRUTH is that Sergeant-Major Johnstone is retiring from the Depot of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. So ends (I hope) the Bodmin Depot Scandal. The War Office are to be congratulated on getting rid of two in one week, if they have got rid of them. The next thing they have to learn is that it is just as easy to get rid of them in the first stage as the last, and infinitely more creditable.

At the beginning of last year I commented on the disgraceful job effected by the appointment of Lieutenant-Colonel Saunders to the 1st Battalion West India Regiment. It was notorious that the motive of this appointment was to enable Lieutenant-Colonel Saunders to complete the service necessary to qualify him for pension. He completed this service in August last. Surely, then, the time has come when he might retire.

On August 17 I uttered some "Plain Words on Practical Jokes," apropos to a blackguardly performance of this type which had just been perpetrated in the camp at Bury; but it would seem that there is still need for more plain words on the same subject, and for something considerably stronger than plain words. I remarked on the last occasion that though it was a Militia Battalion that was then at fault, the evil is equally prevalent in the Regular Army; and to bear out this criticism, it is a Cavalry Regiment where the latest exhibition of this kind took place, and I believe that there are one or two Cavalry Regiments now serving at home which have obtained an unenviable notoriety in this respect. The word "joking" has no application whatever to these performances. They are simply ruffianly outrages perpetrated out of spite upon a brother officer; and if a few of those who commit such offences were punished, as they ought to be, by permanent removal from the society of "officers and gentlemen," the delusion that there is any joke about such conduct would be speedily exploded. What would be said if a number of artisans were to break into the room of a comrade, whom they dislike, and were to break his furniture and toss him in a blanket? Would the excuse of this being a joke be accepted for such conduct?

From a case just laid before me it seems that the War Office denies the right of a Warrant Officer to commute his pension. On what ground this refusal is based I am at a loss to understand. The last ordinance bearing on the point appears to be the Royal Warrant of July, 1891, which gives the privilege of commutation to any "Chelsea Hospital Out-Pensioner" who satisfies the Secretary of State that commutation will be to his "distinct and permanent advantage," in order to enable him to reside in the Colonies or abroad. The Warrant Officer whose case I refer to is a "Chelsea Out-Pensioner;" he desires to "reside abroad;" and the only objection set up in opposition to his application is that the regulations do not allow Warrant Officers to commute. Where is this particular piece of red tape to be found?

It is pretty generally known that at the time of the Queen's Jubilee soldiers who had fraudulently enlisted were promised a free pardon on making confession of their offence. But it is not generally known, I imagine, that the free pardon was accompanied by conditions which made it of considerably more value to the State than to the soldier. As a matter of fact, one of the conditions was, that men confessing would forfeit all service prior to the date of the confession. Had this been generally understood, it is incredible that men with any considerable amount of service to lose by this condition would have confessed at all; for if any considerable time had elapsed since a man's fraudulent enlistment, the chances of detection would be infinitesimal, and the promised "free pardon" consequently worthless.

I am not surprised, therefore, to hear complaints that men were allowed to make their confessions without notice being given them of what they would stand to lose by so doing. A man in the 1st East Yorkshire Regiment, now in Egypt, who had fraudulently enlisted in 1885, and obtained a Jubilee pardon in 1887, went the other day to demand his discharge to Reserve, on completion of his eight years, and then learned, for the first time, as he asserts, that he had forfeited his service prior to his pardon, and had, consequently, still two years to serve. I should like to know what steps were taken to bring this condition of the "pardon" to the notice of men at the time they confessed. It is asserted that in the East Yorkshire Regiment it was never published at all. If so, a more shabby trick was never played on my friend Tommy Atkins.

OVALINE TOILET SOAP, made with Yolk of Egg, is a wonderful discovery for the skin and hair. As a Shaving Soap it has no equal. Price, 8d. per tablet, 2s. per box.—52, King-st., Regent-st., London.

Until Christmas, Messrs. BENJAMIN, of Ulster House, Conduit-street, W., will sell their Dress-length Remnants (suitable for presents) of their celebrated Tweeds, Serges, and Homespuns, at 25s., 30s., 35s., and 40s. the dress length.

An officer sends the following testimony in support of that already given respecting lady nurses in India :—

A brother officer and myself suffered from enteric fever in India last winter, and were nursed in hospital by lady nurses, to whose untiring zeal I am sure we owe our recovery. When I was getting better, I had an opportunity of watching the nurses attending to N.C.O.'s and men of my own and other regiments who were in hospital at the time, and I can assure you that to see the men's faces brighten up when any nurse spoke or attended them was a very pleasant sight.

I am quite certain that any N.C.O. or man of my own regiment who has been nursed by one of the Indian Nursing Staff will fully bear out this statement.

On the other hand, another Service correspondent appeals to me on the audi alteram partem principle to publish extracts from a letter in which a lady member of the Nursing Staff cordially approves of the P.M.O.'s order. If this lady is to be believed, the Indian Nursing Staff is a very dangerous concern for any young woman to have anything to do with. The obnoxious order, she thinks, will stop "a good deal of unbecoming conduct that has given rise to much comment and scandal." In her opinion, it "has not been issued a bit too soon," and "the authorities have graver reasons for their order than the public are aware of." I do not know this good lady's name, but I take it to be Grundy. Ah, my dear madam! only you and I know the depths of deceit and wickedness in the heart of a young woman. To think that these audacious minxes should be regarded by half the soldiers in India as devoted ministering angels! Let us henceforth never judge by appearances, however favourable they may be.

An Officer of the Army Medical Staff writes :—

I feel sorry and annoyed that any Officer of the Medical Staff should have written to you on the Indian Nursing Service in the strain you indicate in your paragraph in Truth.

I have served with these ladies in India, and I cannot speak of their devotion and zeal without respect and admiration. If your previous correspondent's condemnation included the Army Nursing Sisters, it was, if possible, more groundless. For my part I endorse the opinion of the N.C.O.

Here is another suggestion from a military correspondent, apropos to a recent note in Truth on the disparities in the rate of promotion in different regiments. It is, of course, easy enough to remedy the present anomalies by abolishing the regimental system as far as officers are concerned, and promoting men from one regiment to another in order of seniority just as vacancies occur. That seems to be what my correspondent's proposal comes to—or what it would eventually lead to—but I take it that a good many objections will be advanced by military men against this revolution, even in the modified form here proposed :—

Fix on an average service for promotion, say (in infantry) eight years for company and eighteen for majority, then when a step goes in a regiment give it extra-regimentally, unless, in the case of a company, the senior subaltern has seven or seven and a half years' service, and in the case of a majority the senior captain has at least seventeen years' service. No man to be given extra-regimental promotion (except for special service) unless he has at least nine years' service in case of a subaltern, or nineteen in case of a captain. In this way a man brought into another regiment would have, in case of a captain, at least one and a half or two years' more service than the senior subaltern passed over, and at least two years' more service than the senior captain passed over. An arrangement something in this form would do away with the hardship of some men having to wait ten years for their companies and twenty or more for their majorities, while others through pure luck often get their steps in six or seven and fifteen or sixteen, or even fourteen, years respectively. In the same way an average could be fixed for second-lieutenants.

It appears that considerable injustice is likely to be done to Bombardiers R.M.A. by an Admiralty order just issued, the effect of which is that a Bombardier ranks as junior to a Corporal R.M.L.I. Promotion is much slower in the former than in the latter corps, owing apparently to the extended gunnery course which the artillery-man has to pass, and a Bombardier usually serves in that rank from two to two and a-half years before he is promoted to Corporal. In a large number of cases, therefore, he is senior to the Corporal R.M.L.I., who will now uniformly rank as senior to him. If, as is done in this order, the R.M.A. and the R.M.L.I. are to be treated as one corps, the simplest and fairest course of settling the question would have been to abolish the rank of Bombardier and make them all Corporals.

I am asked from an Irish station why an N.C.O. who will complete this month forty years' service, and who has held the rank of Quartermaster-Sergeant for nearly twenty years, should be allowed to engage for a further period. I can only refer to Whitehall for the answer, and I hope that Whitehall will look into the matter. Only gross favouritism can account for such indulgence, and it is a scandalous thing that a number of deserving men should thus be cheated of the promotion to which they are legitimately entitled, for the sake of one individual, who has already had a great deal more than his share of good things.

As I quoted the other day the opinion of an Army Medical Officer that the ordinary medical parades are, for all practical purposes, useless, it is only right to mention that one or two other doctors have since written to me in an opposite sense. I express no opinion on this point myself; but I have a very strong opinion in regard to a form of medical inspection which is practised in the Foot Guards, and I am glad to find that in this I am supported by medical authority. One doctor characterises this function as "filthy," "degrading," "necessarily perfunctory," "loathed by medical officers and men," and "a relic of barbarism." Why this relic should be preserved in the Guards only, I defy any warrior in authority to explain.

There is, I know, a burning desire on the part of the authorities to make matters pleasanter for the Indian Staff Corps. For this reason I hasten to make known a scheme which an Officer of this Corps has propounded to me for providing the Corps with free medical attendance when in this country on furlough or sick-leave. The idea is that the Board which sits every week at the Christmas Greetings.—Patterns are now ready, & will be sent post free, of these new & fashionable Cards for Christmas (specially printed). A most complete collection, comprising many striking novelties.—Parkins & Gotto, Court Stationers, Oxford-st., Londn.

India Office, to examine Officers who have to be passed for any purpose, should be employed to give advice gratis to any Staff Corps Officer who requires doctoring. The parties who will probably object to this are the members of the Board, which at present consists of a President at £500, and two members at £150 per annum. If they will consent to doctor at this figure any Staff Corps Officer who requires medical attention, by all means let them. If, however, they object to do so without an increase of salary, who is to provide this increase?

A few weeks back I complimented the Civil Service Commissioners on their somewhat tardy candour, in informing candidates for the Royal Engineer Civil Staff that the War Office assumes the right of varying the strength of the Staff from time to time according to the exigencies of the service. It is pointed out to me, however, by a correspondent abroad, that this candour is confined within very strict limits. The notice of the Civil Service Commissioners states that there is a "prospect" of earning £500 per annum. It wisely refrains, however, from explaining what the prospect is. Including the post of Chief-Surveyor, there are only ten appointments worth £500 a year, as against fifty-six junior appointments. At the best, therefore, the prospect of reaching £500 is remote. But in the present state of the Staff, the juniors on the list for promotion are, roughly, of the same age as the seniors, and all are compulsorily retired at the same age. Intending candidates would therefore do well to note that for the vast majority of the Staff, the "prospect" of reaching £500 a year is nothing but a delusion.

Having said a good deal about the irregularities by which the pockets of Non-commissioned and Warrant Officers are lined, I am not surprised to have my attention called to some of the means by which a similar service is performed for the pockets of Commissioned and even Commanding Officers. One of these days I hope to be able to say a word on this subject. In the meantime, I cannot help recording the remarkable case of a certain officer, whom we may call "Major T." This gallant warrior seems to combine the arts of peace with those of war by selling tea on commission, and as far as I can make out he goes from regiment to regiment booking orders from the various canteens. Is there nothing in the Queen's Regulations which prohibits an officer from supplementing his pay by travelling in the tea line?

I inadvertently did an injustice last week to Surgeon-General Tuson, M.D., F.R.C.S., by describing him as "Surgeon-Major" Tuson when speaking of his plan for checking the progress of cholera and other diseases by means of sulphur fires. Surgeon-General Tuson is, I fear, not the first Army Medical Officer whom I have robbed of his due rank and title; but, seeing what some of these titles are, a civilian may perhaps be excused for an occasional inaccuracy.

The Rev. J. Bainbridge Smith, formerly Consular Chaplain at Smyrna, writes to me in defence of the project for enlarging and removing the British Hospital at that port. The first part of his letter consists of an extract from a memorial of some kind addressed to the Government in June, 1891, by certain British firms at Smyrna. In this it is stated that the hospital is notoriously "at present barely adequate for the purposes required"; but unless I have the whole document before me, it is impossible to appreciate the bearings of this statement, which seems totally inconsistent with the facts that have lately appeared in TRUTH. In the next place, Mr. Smith states that although the hospital was, in his experience, on rare occasions empty, yet there were times when it was just the reverse; and upon this he argues that "the necessity for beds in a hospital cannot be measured by the average number of patients, but by the maximum number." This proposition I deny absolutely. It leads Mr. Smith (though he does not say so) up to the conclusion that the Smyrna Hospital ought to be big enough to accommodate all the demands made upon it at the time of an earthquake. And it would equally lead to the conclusion that the ordinary hospital accommodation of London ought to be sufficient to meet all the demands which would be made upon it in the event of a cholera epidemic.

With regard to the questions that have been raised respecting the management of the Mablethorpe lifeboat in the late gale, I may mention that I have more than once heard that the value of this boat would be greatly increased if it were removed from Mablethorpe, and placed at the coastguard station at Theddlethorpe. Whether this particular change be desirable or not, it is apparent, as I suggested last week, that there are many similar details concerning the management and operations of the Lifeboat Institution which require investigation.

I am sorry to hear that, according to the latest arrangements, the Channel Squadron will not return to England for the Christmas holidays. If it is true that the Squadron is to spend the "festive season" at Arosa Bay, there will be bitter complaints from both officers and men, as that is a most unpopular station.

Apropos of the refusal of Sir Anthony Hoskins, when at the Admiralty, to allow a naval officer to read a paper on "The Mediterranean in Naval War," at the United Service Institution, I have received the following. If the facts are as stated, the matter seems to call for further notice from the official superiors of the gallant Admiral:—

Since the refusal to which you refer, Sir Anthony Hoskins has presided at a lecture delivered before the Aldershot Military Society, by Vice-Admiral Colomb, on "Our Coaling Stations," whereat the latter officer indulged in Cassandra-like wailings regarding the state of the Navy. The papers state that Admiral Hoskins added some "observations of importance concerning information in possession of the Admiralty" which it would be "unpatriotic" to publish. This information Sir Anthony can only have acquired when at the Admiralty, and it is somewhat strange that he should have made public the same, or even made "observations" upon it, at a Service meeting where the state of the Navy was adversely criticised.

PFUNGST FRÈRES' EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNES.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. PFUNGST & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

SHIRTS FOR EVENING WEAR, with Pique and Fancy Fronts. Dressing Gowns and Jackets. At-home Dinner Jackets.—SAMPSON & Co., 268, 270, Oxford-street, W.

The Admiralty have decided that it is necessary to spend a million in constructing a "defensive" breakwater from Weymouth to the breakwater in Portland Harbour. It will be nearly two miles in length, and it is to be completed in ten years. The stone is to come out of the Portland quarries, and it will be furnished by convict labour.

The long-standing grievances of the "Out-door" Customs Officers have at last been formulated in the shape of a petition to the Treasury, signed by 547 men, and, having supported the claims of these officers for several years past, I hope most heartily that the petition will bear practical fruit. The requests now put forward are based on the assimilation of the position of the "Out-door" Officers to that of the Assistants of Excise. The Excise Assistants, if I remember rightly, are by no means over-satisfied with their lot; but while an Excise Assistant starts at £80 a year, and proceeds by annual increments of £5 to £130, with a distant chance of some day reaching £250, the "Out-door" Customs man starts at £55, rises by annual increments of £2. 10s. to £75, and cannot by any possibility get beyond £100. I say without fear of contradiction that no justification can be shown for the disparity between the two classes. The Customs men pass a stiffer entrance examination, and are employed on work quite as arduous and responsible. But apart from any comparison of this kind, the Customs salaries above-mentioned are intrinsically inadequate to the character of the employment, and ought to be substantially raised without delay.

The London School Board is an unlucky body. Even when its members are trying to do the right thing they are apt to go to work in the wrong way. From a letter addressed to me by the Vicar of St. Stephen's, Westbourne-park, it would seem that this error is being committed in the desire to increase the provision of Free Schools. A petition requesting the provision of Free Schools has just been addressed to the School Board purporting to be signed by 126 parents of 211 children attending St. Stephen's Schools. The Vicar of St. Stephen's states that on investigation he finds that out of 126 signatories 5 had never sent or contemplated sending their children to the Church Schools; 29 had left the parish either before or immediately after the petition was signed; and 80 when the effect of the petition was explained to them readily signed a counter-petition, stating that they had been led to sign the first petition by a misrepresentation, and requesting that their signatures might be cancelled. This leaves only 12 parents who adhere to their petition, representing 15 children instead of 211.

It will probably be answered that the 80 parents who have withdrawn their original signatures have done so under pressure. A good deal of pressure would be required to make 80 people express willingness to pay for what they would get free, and I do not myself see what form in a London parish this pressure could take. On the other hand, it is alleged that the signatures were originally obtained by very serious misrepresentations, and the evidence of the parents themselves is on this side. In his letter to me, the Vicar of St. Stephen's strongly disclaims any hostility to free education, and merely contends for "fair play" to the Voluntary Schools, and the honest representation of the attitude of the parents towards them. I am also in favour of free education, and also of fair play to all parties. From this point of view, I think that the School Board would do well to inquire into the circumstances under which this particular petition was got up, and any others which are open to similar impeachment. Personally I attach very little weight to any petitions which are got up by house-to-house visitation. Given a clever canvasser, with a persuasive manner and an elastic conscience, and you may get women and uneducated men to put their names to anything.

Evidently the Surrey County Council is a body thoroughly representative of the most benighted and selfish Toryism of suburban villadom. Apropos of the flagrant job in the late appointment of a Surveyor, with which I dealt last week, Mr. Octavius Beatty, one of the few Radicals on the Council, tells me that, at the same meeting at which this job was consummated, he proposed a resolution on the lines of the famous one of the London County Council with reference to a Trade Union hours and wages clause in all contracts. This resolution was actually rejected by sixty-five votes to four, and Mr. Beatty's speech in support of it was received with hisses.

The Lurgan Board of Guardians have recently had under their consideration the nursing arrangements in the workhouse infirmaries. It appears that there are over 130 patients, and only two nurses are employed to attend to them. In this task they are assisted, or are supposed to be assisted, by a number of paupers, amongst those assigned for this duty in the various wards being a man recovering from a fractured leg, two suffering from consumption, two suffering or just recovering from loathsome diseases, a young woman with skin disease and "almost imbecile," and a woman with a dying child and herself delicate. The Medical Officer protested against the employment of such persons as these as attendants on the sick, and besought the Board to engage a couple of probationer nurses. Whether the Guardians have yet taken any action in the matter I am unable to say, but when they first discussed it a fortnight since the majority seemed to think that the present disgraceful system was quite good enough for pauper hospitals.

In calling my attention to the proceedings of the Lurgan Board, a Unionist correspondent suggests that such revelations are just what might be expected in connection with Irish local government. But I can assure my Unionist friend that there are scandals quite as bad in English Bumbledom. Last week a proposal was made to the Newton Abbot Guardians for the appointment of two female nurses. Hitherto only one nurse has been employed, and although it was impossible for her to look after the patients properly a section of the Guardians have persistently opposed any increase in the staff. To overcome this opposition Dr. Ley, a member of the Board, mentioned two circumstances. Lately the nurse was attending a case of infectious disease and at the same time seeing to a lying-in case. The latter woman died, and the doctor asserts that her death was "hastened by her being attended by a person who came straight from an infectious disease case." In the second instance a woman of weak intellect, who was enceinte, was left with nobody to look after her, although the nurse did all she could. That woman got up one night and went to an outbuilding, where her child was born and suffocated. After hearing these astounding stories, and being told that if the nursing-staff was not strengthened "the Board would soon be at the bar for manslaughter," the objecting Guardians permitted the resolution to pass.

The Coupé Company's Telegraphic Address is "Coupé, London."

Ledbury is just now agitated by the threatened establishment of a School Board. To ordinary people the prospect may not appear very alarming, but to the affrighted imagination of Lady Emily Foley the town is menaced with an awful calamity. The gravity of the crisis has elicited a letter from her ladyship in which she declares that "the Board Schools, being carried on without definite Christian and religious teaching, promote infidelity, atheism, Unitarianism, Radicalism, disloyalty to the Crown and Constitution, and irreverence towards God." Is it not shocking? Yet I note that Lady Emily Foley promises only £5 of her abundance towards the £1,000 which the Church School managers require in order to avert the impending disaster.

I hear from Victoria, British Columbia, that a reverend gentleman recently started in the neighbourhood of Alderley Park, in that colony, a "farm-pupil" establishment, which shows very plainly the humbug attached to all this business. The reverend farmer suddenly appeared for the first time in the district a year or so ago, bought five acres of worthless land, built a commodious house, settled in it with three servants, and no visible occupation of a profitable nature. He was advertising, it appears, in English papers for "farm-pupils" at five guineas per month, payable in advance. Two youths presently appeared on the scene, but they speedily found cause for dissatisfaction with their investment, and at the end of a few weeks one of them had departed. In what terms this eligible opening was advertised over here I do not know, but it is a good specimen of the kind of snare which is so assiduously laid for parents and guardians.

By a letter just received from Calcutta, I learn that even in that distant part of the Empire parties with houses to let are not safe from the wiles of the impudent rogue Stockham. Fortunately, however, in that part of the world TRUTH is also sedulously read and digested. Consequently, the house-owner who writes to me was sufficiently alert to snap his finger at a claim which Stockham made on him, and at his impudent threats of legal proceedings for the amounts alleged to be due. My Indian reader is more fortunate, I can tell him, than some who, when threatened by this rascal, have placed themselves in the hands of London solicitors.

GRATEFUL and COMFORTING for BREAKFAST and SUPPER is EPPS'S COCOA, made with boiling water or milk. Sold in packets labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

Death has opportunely saved our old friend "Colonel Barron" from penal servitude for life. As many of my readers have doubtless seen, he was seventy-eight years of age when he died last week in Holloway Gaol, and there can be no doubt that, had he lived to take his trial, he would have received a sentence which would have kept him under lock and key for the rest of his days. This old man was, beyond all question, one of the most audacious swindlers and blackmailers that ever lived, and his career has been a most extraordinary one. He is said to have been the illegitimate son of a very distinguished Englishman, and to have been educated at a public school. There is no doubt, I believe, that he was at one time a clerk in the War Office, and there is equally little doubt that for the last five-and-thirty years he has been living—and living well—by various forms of fraud and criminal extortion. He was first convicted so far back as 1864, and last in 1885, when (for the second time in his career) he got five years' penal servitude for a most audacious bogus will trick.

Barron, alias Howard, &c., &c., first came under my notice in 1890 in connection with the famous advertisement of the "Lady of Title," who desired to introduce the daughters of the plutocracy to Court and fashionable society. He was then "Evans, Evans, & Co.," of Swansea, and was being financed by William Usher, the eccentric local money-lender. Usher was, by his own account, entirely innocent of all suspicion that he was running one of the biggest rascals of the century; but the extraordinary thing about it is that the local police, who had received before the end of 1891 any number of complaints of downright swindling against "Evans, Evans, & Co.," and with whom I communicated at a very early stage of the game, should never have had any clue to the old man's identity. He must have started the Swansea swindles almost as soon as he had completed his last sentence of penal servitude; and from that day to this he has been running one swindle after another, all obviously the work of the same hand, and all of them successively shown up in TRUTH. It will be remembered that only a few months ago he had the audacity to write to the Times in defence of his attempt to catch Lord Teynham with the "Australian heiress" trick, and in this letter, as I pointed out, he gave unmistakable clues to his own identity, ex-convict though he was. That during all this time the police should have taken no notice whatever of his proceedings shows a most lamentable absence of supervision over the doings of the criminal class.

There is one other gentleman who has been connected with Barron, as to whom I feel called upon to say a word. When in August, 1892, Mr. Usher, of Swansea, wrote to me explaining his connection with "Evans, Evans, & Co.," he stated that when some time previously he had been arranging to put Barron in command of his business at Reading, he previously "satisfied himself as to his (Barron's) antecedents and respectability" by inquiry of "Mr. John R. Richards, one of the most respectable solicitors in Swansea." That Barron should impose upon the most respectable solicitor in Swansea, as he did upon hundreds of other people, is not surprising. Considering, however, that Barron had only completed a term of five years' penal servitude about a year before this, and that he had been twice sentenced to penal servitude in the previous fifteen years, I am a little curious to hear how Mr. Richards satisfied Mr. Usher as to this hardened criminal's "antecedents and respectability."

A CHRISTMAS BOX.—A Merryweather's Fire Pump, with Buckets, for my friend's country house. Price Lists.—63, Long-acre, London. W.C.

The Queen's Proctor is a valuable public official, but his value will be materially impaired should his functions often be exercised as they were in the Carew case. It is not only that a charge was made in the Queen's Proctor's name against Mrs. Carew on evidence which proved to be utterly rotten. It would not be fair to hold the Queen's Proctor altogether responsible for this, because the best of us are liable to be misled by a dishonest witness. But the ugly feature in this case is the way in which the charge was made. It was not until after the trial of the case had commenced that particulars of the charge of misconduct against Mrs. Carew were delivered to her solicitors, and then only after the strongest pressure by her Counsel. In other words, the worst part of the accusation was sprung upon the party implicated at the eleventh hour, and as a sort of afterthought when everything else had failed; and, when sprung, proved to be the most worthless portion of the case. That the Queen's Proctor was intentionally misled is pretty clear; but that he should be misled under such circumstances is—well, an occurrence which his friends must hope will not happen again.

Most men who had had a verdict for £5,000 damages recorded against them for slander would be taught a little discretion in the use of their tongues. Not so Mr. Farquharson, M.P. Having obtained from Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour the precious testimonials to which I referred the other day, he has been relieving his feelings by traducing the Lord Chief Justice in a speech to his constituents. Here are samples of his style:—

> When you have men in the position of Lord Salisbury, recently Prime Minister, and shortly, we hope, will be Prime Minister again (applause), writing in this way, I am happy to set that statement against the biassed political opinion of a Judge like Lord Coleridge. . . . I think it is an undignified position for a defeated litigant to complain of his Judge (hear, hear), but I have now reached a better position. I have the support of Mr. Balfour and Lord Salisbury, whose opinions any man would take against that of such men as Lord Coleridge.

It is, indeed, an undignified thing for a defeated litigant to go about abusing his Judge—in fact, it reduces Mr. Farquharson to the level of most eminent murderers and other convicted criminals, who all have the lowest opinion of the Judges who try them. The nearest parallel I can remember to the above utterances is to be found in the speeches delivered after his release by the unfortunate nobleman who at one time languished in Dartmoor. Never, however, that I can remember did that individual so far insult the public intelligence as to suggest that the Parliamentary leaders of one of the political parties are less likely to be influenced by political bias than the Lord Chief Justice.

Pericles, when explaining Athenian democracy in one of his speeches, says: "In the matter of legal rights, every man stands on the same footing in all private suits in our Courts." This is, however, not the case with us, although we, like the Athenians, boast of being a democracy; for last Friday Judge Lumley Smith, on an application in the Westminster County Court to set aside a committal order made against the Marquis of Donegall, observed: "Inasmuch as the Court has been informed that the Marquis is a Baron of the House of Lords, the order will have to be cancelled." It would seem, therefore, that our hereditary legislators are absolved from the operation of the ordinary law in cases of debt. Whether this be right or wrong, we evidently are not, like the Athonians, all equal before the law.

Here is an example of the extremely high-handed manner in which the rural police are accustomed to act in the interests of the game-preservers, to whom the services of the force are mainly devoted. On a recent Sunday morning a man named Newell had been shooting small birds (with the permission of a farmer) at Badshot Lea, near Farnham, and was returning home when he overtook two other men, who were also carrying guns. All three had gun licences, and on being stopped on the highway by a constable, Newell and another produced theirs, while the third explained he had left his at home. The constable next searched Newell, and found a few small birds in his possession. He then ordered all three to give up their guns, and, on Newell refusing, he attempted to take his weapon from him. In the end the officer was allowed to carry off the guns to Farnham Police-station. There was no ground whatever for any charge against the men, and none was instituted, but, nevertheless, their guns were detained for over a fortnight, and only returned at last upon legal proceedings being threatened on behalf of Newell.

However, such conduct on the part of country constables is not really surprising when one recollects the monstrous powers of search and seizure with which they are invested by the Poaching Prevention Act, and the encouragement and support which they receive from biassed Justices of the game-preserving class. There was an illustration of this at the West Powder Petty Sessions, Truro, the other day, when a youth named Varcoe was charged, at the instance of Police-constable Light, with coming from land where it was suspected he had been in search of game. Varcoe denied that he had been on the land in question, and called two respectable witnesses, who said they saw Light assault the youth and throw him down. One of these witnesses, an aged farmer, interposed to prevent the further ill-treatment of the defendant, and this was made the pretext for a charge of obstructing the officer in the execution of his duty. In a third summons Varcoe and his mother were accused of assaulting Light when they went to demand the return of the gun which he had seized. On these trumped-up charges the Bench—Tories to a man—imposed fines and costs amounting to no less than £5. 1s. 8d., and directed that Varcoe's gun and his licence should be forfeited.

Messrs. Harborow, Hosiers, Glovers, and Shirtmakers by appointment to the Royal Family, have opened new premises, 6 and 7, New Bond-street, in connection with their old-established business, 15, Cockspur-street.

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. Upwards of twenty cases from all parts of the country show English, Welsh, and Scotch Magistrates to be equally perverse and irrational in treating savage assaults on men and women and gross cruelty to animals as considerably less heinous than such offences as going in pursuit of game, committing a paltry theft, absconding from a workhouse, or sleeping out. For scandalous severity, however, the solitary sample of Irish Justices' justice puts into the shade all the other performances of this kind in the week's list. Three months for stealing a red herring is almost a record-breaking sentence:—

Llangollen Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. R. M. Biddulph, W. Coward, T. Hughes, and E. Lloyd Edwards. Joseph Roberts, convicted of what the Bench described as most brutal assaults on Robert Owens and Evan Hughes. Owens, an old man, was knocked down and kicked. Hughes was struck a violent blow on the head, became insensible, and was in bed three days in consequence. Fined 10s. and costs for each assault.

Llangollen Petty Sessions. Before the same Bench. John Roberts, convicted of game trespass. Fined £1. 10s. and costs.

St. Asaph Petty Sessions. Before Colonel Hore and Mr. Strachen. Walter Jones and Daniel Jones, charged with poaching. Three months each, and a further six months in default of finding sureties.

Norwich Police-court. Before Messrs. J. D. Smith, E. Wild, S. Newman, G. White, and W. Hunter. Charles Goaty, convicted of assaulting a woman with whom he lived. He kicked her out of the house and otherwise brutally ill-treated her. Fined 10s. and costs.

Norwich Police-court. Before Messrs. J. D. Smith, E. Wild, E. K. Harvey, G. White, and W. Hunter. Charles Slater, charged with absconding from the workhouse. Fourteen days.

Pwllheli County Police-court. Before Messrs. Owen Evans and B. T. Ellis. John Roberts, charged with assaulting David Roberts. Complainant was knocked down and lost consciousness, and when he recovered he found defendant beating him in the face. A doctor described the numerous injuries which complainant sustained, and said there was danger of erysipelas supervening. Fined £1 and costs.

Pwllheli County Police-court. Before the same Bench. William Parry, charged with trespassing in pursuit of game. Fined £1. 10s. and costs.

Bromyard Police-court. Before Colonel Bourne, Captain Enderby, and Mr. W. A. Adams. Edward Moore, charged with absconding with workhouse clothes. Three months.

Chorley Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. C. Jackson and J. Lawrence. William Slater, charged with being drunk and disorderly, and assaulting his wife. The latter had been living apart from defendant and he went to her house, broke the windows, got inside, and beat her and her daughter, the woman's arms being black from his blows. Fined 5s. and costs on each charge.

Chorley Petty Sessions. Before the same Bench. Seth Cornwall and Joseph Cornwall, charged with being disorderly and refusing to quit a public-house. The landlady said they called her "names." Fined £1 each and costs.

Greenock Police-court. James Aird convicted of brutally assaulting his wife by dragging her about the house, kicking her, and attempting to choke her. Fined £1, or ten days.

Greenock Sheriff Criminal Court. Patrick Hickie charged with stealing 10d. from a shop. One month.

Uttoxeter Police-court. Before Captain Dawson, Messrs. J. F. Campbell, and W. Grosvenor Jennings. Henry Manning, Thomas Williams, and Joseph Smedley, grooms, convicted of assaulting George Plant by beating and kicking him. A doctor said Plant had several scalp wounds half an inch deep; and the Bench characterised it as a most disgraceful assault. Fined £1 each.

Uttoxeter Police-court. Before the same Magistrates. Frederick West, labourer, charged with shooting game without a licence. Fined £3 and costs.

Blackburn Police-court. Before Dr. Morley and Mr. T. W. Stones. James Scully, charged with stealing coal value sixpence. One month.

Stockton Police-court. Annie Charlton charged with assaulting her step-daughter, who said defendant seized her by the head, pulled a lot of her hair out, and repeatedly knocked her head against the wall. Ordered to pay the costs.

Middlesbrough County Police-court. A youth named Hearse pleaded guilty to stealing a brush and a draining-spit, value 5s. Fined £5 or one month.

Shipston on-Stour Petty Sessions. Before Mr. W. P. Dickins and Mr. H. J. Sheldon. Edwin Claridge, farmer, charged with cruelty to a horse. The animal was "rigged backed" and was turned into a field without shelter and, apparently, without food, and for several days was lying in great agony. A neighbour then gave it some fodder and it was afterwards put out of its misery. Fined £1 and costs.

Portadown Police-court. Before Mr. J. C. Fulton, J.P. Mary Jane Sewell charged with stealing a red herring. A policeman watched her until he saw her commit the larceny at a shop door. The herring was returned to the shopkeeper. Three months.

Port Glasgow Police court. Before Bailie M'Farlane. James M'Farlane charged with assaulting his wife by striking her on the face and head, and kicking her severely about the legs. Fined £1. 1s.

Bath County Police court. William Cocksley and William Samson charged with sleeping out. Seven days each.

Isle of Wight County Petty Sessions, Newport. Before Admiral de Horsey, Sir Graham Hamond Graeme, Lt.-Col. Pearson Crozier, and other Justices. William Kelleway, convicted of trespassing for game on October 5. An employé of the prosecutor said that during the struggle which occurred, defendant fell and broke his leg. Defendant said the witness kicked him and broke his leg. Committed for twenty-one days in default of paying £1. 19s.

Nottingham Shire-hall. Before Mr. T. Hill and Captain Holden. Jeremiah McCarthy, charged with poaching. Six weeks, and fourteen days in default of finding sureties.

With reference to a comment in last week's TRUTH on the failure of the Thirsk Justices to give a woman the benefit of the First Offenders Act, "A Chairman of Quarter Sessions of Fifteen Years' Standing" writes to point out that the fault lies not with the Justices, but with the law. The First Offenders Act, it appears, does not apply to any offence the maximum punishment for which exceeds two years' hard labour, and in the case in question the maximum was five years' penal servitude. I am glad to find a Magistrate of so much experience as my correspondent expressing a firm opinion that this limitation upon the First Offenders Act is a mistake, and it ought to be removed at the earliest opportunity. The question to be considered in applying it is, obviously, what is the gravity of the offence under consideration, not what might possibly be the gravity of some other case which is not before the Court.

The Walsall Bench is composed of men who, as a rule, fairly administer justice, but they had a case before them last week in which I think they might have tempered justice with mercy, and let off the accused under the First Offenders Act, instead of sending him to prison for a month. George Lester, aged 19, and married, was in the employment of Moses Fisher, at the handsome salary of 15s. per week. Moses is a moneylender, and is in the habit of charging for inquiries, whether they result in a loan or not. Lester appropriated to himself £1. 4s., from these inquiry fees. At the commencement of the case, Moses through his counsel offered to produce no evidence if Lester paid costs, but as he appears to have been without money he could not do this. He, however, had offered to account for the £1. 4s. if time had been given to him. The misappropriation was admitted, but it was urged that the system of permitting this youth to charge what fees he liked, together with the inadequate wage, almost invited dishonesty. So I think. If any persons had really suffered, they were those from whom these fees had been obtained.

EIDERDON PURE WOOLLEN FABRICS, in various weights and colourings, for Dressing Gowns, Smoking Jackets, Ladies' three-quarter Capes, Dresses, and Underskirts; also the new Ballylareen Duffle Frieze for Ulster Coats, Inverness Capes, and all descriptions of Winter Wraps where "warmth without weight" is the desideratum. The Eiderdon Rug. Samples of Boyd & Company's productions, with "The Book of the Ulster," illustrated, and forms for self-measurement, may be obtained, post free, on application to the Sole Proprietors and Makers, BOYD & CO., 77, Royal-avenue, Belfast.

If the report of an Ulster paper can be relied upon, the Magistrates at Eyrecourt Petty Sessions lately ventured upon a course for which I can call to mind no nearer precedent than that set by Solomon, C.J., in a famous case. The dispute in this instance was between two brothers, and related to the ownership of a couple of ducks. One brother accused the other of stealing the birds; the latter claimed that they were his own. The Bench, being unable to decide the question, resolved to leave it to the superior sagacity of the ducks. Accordingly, at their suggestion, a sergeant of police took the birds in a bag to a point on the road midway between the respective holdings of the parties, and there released them. The result was that the ducks separated, one going to the prosecutor's house, the other to the defendant's; "and," the report concludes, "the case is settled accordingly." What would have happened if these erratic ducks had gone into some third holding?

I am pleased to see that Sheriff Mair, of Airdrie, has publicly apologised for his conduct on the Bench, which was referred to in last week's Truth. According to a Glasgow contemporary, however, this is by no means the first offensive outbreak of which the Sheriff has been guilty; in fact, it is said that his "unenviable reputation" has been "accumulating for years." It is, therefore, a pity that he did not whilst in a penitent mood make a comprehensive apology for his past misconduct, and, at the same time, promise to mend his ways in the future.

Of eighteen County prisoners tried at Gloucestershire Assizes last week, no fewer than eleven were acquitted. Commenting upon this extraordinary result, Mr. Justice Cave said it was due to "the very insufficient discharge of their duties by those who had to advise the Magistrates." In at least five cases there was no ground for committal; and the prisoners had suffered on an average two months' imprisonment which they never ought to have done. It seems to me that the censure which the Magistrates' clerks received from his Lordship was nothing like so severe as what they deserved, for a more monstrous state of things in connection with the administration of justice can scarcely be conceived. The Judge was apparently under the impression that these committals of innocent persons took place through the mere carelessness of the Magistrates' clerks. I do not know what the practice is in Gloucestershire, but in some districts the Justices' clerks conduct the prosecutions from their Courts at Quarter Sessions and Assizes. Every committal then means so much in the clerk's pocket in the way of costs.

Writing in reference to Mr. Justice Cave's remarks, a correspondent asks:—

Does it not occur to you that many of the cases exposed in your Pillory are due to the clerks? Too many of the Magistrates are incapable of forming an opinion on the case before them, and simply dance to the tune set by their clerk.

There is no doubt a great deal of truth in this, and it is one of the worst points in the present Magisterial system. But, after all, the responsibility for the decisions given must rest with the Justices, and they cannot be allowed to escape reprobation when they do wrong on the ground that they are simply tools in the hands of their clerks. Men without sufficient intelligence and independence to form their own judgment and act upon it have no business to be on the Bench.

With reference to "The Immaculate Farm Pupil Agency" recently dealt with in Truth, Mr. W. H. St. John Hope writes from Burlington House to state that Mr. "Henry Howden, F.S.A.," the representative of the Agency at Sheffield, is not and never has been a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. This ought to be equivalent to saying that the man has no right to use the letters "F.S.A.," but doubtless he will be able to refer to some Morgan or Sturman who has conferred on him for a few shillings the rank of Fellow of the Society of Asses, or some equally valuable distinction. I need scarcely say that I have heard nothing from Howden himself, nor from Aspdin, nor any of their colleagues in reference to the charges against the Anglo-Canadian Farm Pupil Association. Nor do I expect to.

Mr. C. Lister, of 64, Munster-road, Fulham, whose begging letters I recently referred to, writes to say that my remarks about him are "misleading and unfair;" for the reason, apparently, that he has only written begging letters "at a time of sickness or ill-health," and that he has not written one dozen such letters in sixteen years—so he says. He hopes that I will not publish anything more, as it will "militate against his chance of getting employment." Then, I would advise him not to write any more begging-letters, for, as surely as he does, I shall publish something more about him.

At intervals during the last two years I have referred to the "Académie Universelle des Sciences et des Arts Industriels," of Brussels—a concern bearing a family likeness to the "Académie Parisienne des Inventeurs," run by the worthy "Professor Bœttcher." The two Academies are, in fact, so much alike as to be scarcely distinguishable. Various firms who exhibited at the last Brewers' Exhibition at the Agricultural Hall, and the Confectioners and Bakers' Exhibition at the same place, have just been gratified by a communication in the following terms:—

Académie Universelle des Sciences et des Arts Industriels.
Fondée en 1849.
Président titulaire: M. Martin Schmidt ✠ ⊙ ✠.
Bruxelles, le November 14, 1893.

Dear Sirs,—I am pleased to inform you that our delegate, Mr. Fowler, on his return from London, where he has visited the Confectioners and Bakers' Exhibition at the Royal Agricultural Hall, recommended us your establishment and articles with such instance that our Council has decided to admit you as member of the Académie Universelle, and to deliver you the Diploma and first-class Medal of the Society.

You will please return me the enclosed form of application duly filled. I will then send you the Diploma, Medal, and printing blocks.

Successful Because of Superior Merit.—Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer has immense sales everywhere. It never fails to restore grey hair to its natural colour and beauty.

I shall be happy to call you colleagues, and meanwhile I remain, sirs, very truly yours,

Le Président, M. Schmidt.

This means, stripped of unnecessary verbiage, that the party addressed is to pay to the ingenuous Martin Schmidt 50 francs down, 30 of which are the annual subscription, not to mention any charge which may be made for the diploma and printing blocks. There may possibly be found English tradesmen who consider Mr. Schmidt's diploma a decoration worth this price, just as others are found who are ready to pay Bettcher the same price for his "Grand Gold Medal (gilded)." They might just as well, however, start an order of merit of their own, and confer it upon themselves gratuitously.

I congratulate the Rev. S. Naish, of Worcester, on the following announcement, which appears in more or less the same form in various local papers:—

The "Society of Science, Letters, and Art," of London, at its twelfth annual meeting last Friday, elected to a Foundation Fellowship the Rev. S. Naish, Wesleyan minister, of Worcester, and has just forwarded its Latin diploma of Fellowship, together with an appointment as examiner in the Kensington Local Examinations.

It will doubtless interest Mr. Naish to be informed what I have been doing my best to make public for the last two or three years, that the Society of Science, Letters, and Art is a collection of suburban nobodies who are fools enough to pay a few shillings per annum to an illiterate humbug named Sturman for the privilege of calling themselves "Members" or "Fellows" of an institution conducted in this man's parlour at Kensington. Since the proprietors of the principal rival concern were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment and penal servitude, there has not been a more impudent imposture of the kind running. As Mr. Naish is said to have been appointed an "examiner" of this precious institution, I would call his attention to the fact that at an interview published in TRUTH nearly two years ago, I distinctly put it to Sturman that these examinations were a swindle, whereupon he laughingly admitted that they were "a bit wrong."

From the above announcement in the Worcestershire Advertiser, I see that the following distinguished individuals are now being advertised "among the Founder (sic), officers, and patrons" of Sturman's Society:—

H.S.H. the Duke of Teck.
The Duke of Argyll.
The Earl of Glasgow.
The Earl of Mar.
Sir Herbert Oakley.
The Rev. Dr. Forrest.

Knowing, from the example of Maclean's frauds and others, how apt people with well-known names are to lend the use of them to persons and "societies" of which they know nothing, I cannot say that it is impossible that any of the above have extended their patronage to Sturman's swindle. If they have done so, however, it must have been in ignorance, and having been enlightened I trust that they will now take steps to withdraw from this undesirable position.

I have received with pleasure the following letter, and I congratulate the Consul-General for Liberia on his prompt action in the matter. Should any one after this be invited by Mr. Meyler-Warlow to entrust him with £100 in order that it may be converted into £200 in twelve months, I hope he or she will promptly communicate with TRUTH Office:—

3, Coleman-street, E.C., December 1, 1893.

SIR,—Having investigated the matter referred to in your issue of the 16th ult., and the official in question (Mr. T. P. W. Meyler-Warlow) not having given any satisfactory explanation, I have now to inform you that he has been removed from his post of "Liberian Consul" in Carlisle, and shall feel obliged if you will take notice of this in your next issue.—I am, sir, yours obediently,

HENRY HAYMAN,
Consul-General for Liberia.

I despair of the Tory Press. After all the sensation occasioned by the late exposure of the Hounslow Girl, Boy, and Man Flogger in TRUTH, the following advertisement found its way the other day into the Morning Post:—

A Governess (strict disciplinarian) of long experience gives advice to parents and guardians who have unruly children. Advice letter, 5s.; home consultation, 8s. 6d. Visits all parts; terms according to distance.—M. S., Lime Cottage, Lancers-road, Hounslow.

Although she chooses to call herself "M. S.," there is no one at Lime Cottage but the degraded wretch Peirce except a stalwart female whom the Flogger has apparently engaged to protect her against any undesirable manifestations of public feeling. No one who knows the proprietor of the Morning Post would credit him with any desire to aid and abet the vile trade of this woman; but it is an extraordinary thing that in the most respectable journals so little regard should be paid to the use made of the advertising columns. As long as such advertisements are freely received and published it is idle to expect any practical result from mere exposure or denunciation.

A traveller has been at the trouble to write and inform me that the porters of all the Aberdeen hotels are admitted to the platform of the North of Scotland Railway when waiting on passengers who are leaving. I am much obliged to him, but that is entirely beside the point—which is that the Railway Company use their powers unfairly to entrap travellers into their own hotel, and throw obstacles in the way of their going to other hostelries which they might prefer. The same correspondent informs me that both the Midland and the North-Eastern Companies offend in the same respect, and even go beyond the North of Scotland in forbidding porters of other hotels than their own to accompany departing passengers onto the platforms. Then I am very glad to add the North-Eastern and the Midland to the list of offenders.

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

At another "fancy dress bazaar," held last week at Cheltenham, Colonel Thoyts referred to my remarks upon the recent bazaar in aid of the Primrose League and the local hospital, and said that he had ascertained by inquiries of "the leading tradesmen of the town" that there was no truth in the suggestion that such a bazaar did harm to them. The "leading tradesmen," on the contrary, told the Colonel that they benefited by the bazaar, apparently because the materials were bought in the town. To this I have to say that my informant is in a far better position than Colonel Thoyts to ascertain the real opinions of the tradespeople, and that he adheres emphatically to what he said, adding that a large portion of the materials for this bazaar came from big London establishments, Colonel Thoyts is a popular local gentleman, to whom no one would willingly say anything unpleasant. Beyond that, the Colonel's statement is sufficiently answered by the following significant hint to the local tradespeople in a Cheltenham Tory journal:—

> Whoever the person may be, he-male or she-male, who sends up lies to TRUTH about Cheltenham, he or she may depend upon it that when he or she is found out social ostracism will result.

The "lies" here referred to are a tradesman's expression of his own and his neighbours' feelings. Local tradesmen are, therefore, here given to understand by one of the local Primrose organs that, if they publicly express unfavourable opinions about the Primrose Bazaar, "social ostracism will result." In the face of this, I would ask Colonel Thoyts, who seems to be a fair-minded gentleman, what value he can seriously attach to the results of his inquiries among the tradespeople?

Apart from this, by far the most serious criticism which I passed on this Cheltenham Bazaar was that it was "a trick to fill the languishing Primrose exchequer under cover of an appeal to charity." The ground for this criticism was the information given me that, as a matter of fact, 90 per cent. of the proceeds of this "Charity Bazaar" was to be taken by the Primrose League, and 10 per cent. by the Hospital. Neither Colonel Thoyts nor the vicious Primrose boycotter, who threatens the local tradesmen with the consequences of communicating with TRUTH, ventures to contradict this allegation. If it is true, they had better hold their peace, for in that case the Bazaar deserves the worst that could be said about it.

The Parish Councils Bill makes progress in the House of Commons. So does a tortoise. At the present rate, the Bill will not be out of Committee before Christmas, and very probably not then. The most reasonable course, as it seems to me, would be for the Lords, when it goes up to their House, to carry it over to next Session by a resolution. The next Session might then commence at the usual time, and as in the first days of a Session the Lords have little to do, they might carry the Bill through its stages.

A correspondent writes, in view of the attempt of the Tories to continue the administration of parochial charities by churchwardens:—

> In this parish (West Wittering, Chichester) there are seven or eight acres of good land, in several small plots, called Feoffin land, which belong to the poor of the parish. The churchwardens are trustees of it, and until a few years ago they gave the proceeds (rents) to the poor, but now the whole is given to the church, and when the church was restored the surplus of the fund was given towards its restoration, the parson and squire apportioning all the front seats, and leaving the back ones to the poor.

It has now been decided that a Parish Council may levy rates up to sixpence in the pound. This would give an income of £120 per annum for a village with rateable property worth £5,000 per annum. The Council might consist of villagers, worthy men but ignorant of law, and they would have to interpret a very complicated Act without the aid of a legal adviser. Supposing that some litigious individual were to contest their interpretation, from whence would they procure funds to fight the issue? Supposing, moreover, they fought and lost, who would be responsible for the costs in which they could be mulcted for acting ultra vires, the Parish or the Councillors? In a town a Municipal Council has the aid of a clerk, who is an expert in law. Evidently, unless this difficulty be in some way met, the fear of legal responsibility might make the Act inoperative in many villages.

The Tory papers seem astounded that the Prime Minister should have passed over all the "territorial magnates" of Cambridgeshire in order to appoint a Wisbech banker to be Lord-Lieutenant of that county. Even if the "territorial magnates" had not been practically disqualified by their furious high Tory politics, there would have been difficulty in electing one of them, as they are either absentees altogether from their property in the county, or they are only occasional residents. The appointment of Mr. Peckover has given great satisfaction among all classes in Cambridgeshire. He has taken a very active and a most useful part in county business for the last thirty years, and he is very popular. He belongs to a family that has long been resident at Wisbech, and is a partner in the banking firm of Gurney, Birkbeck, & Co., to which it may be added that nearly forty years ago he married a wealthy heiress. Mr. Peckover, who is a hereditary member of the Society of Friends, is a very able man, and belongs to several of the principal learned and scientific societies. He is a distinguished antiquary, and possesses a splendid library, including a complete collection of the first editions of different versions of the English Scriptures, and a unique series of early atlases and maps of England.

I regard a strong and efficient Navy as a necessity of our position. But I have the greatest distrust of sudden demands to augment its strength engineered by a Jingo Press. A little before the Naval Defence Bill was submitted to Parliament by Lord George Hamilton, he had solemnly declared that the strength of the Navy was sufficient for all requirements. That Act was in response to a Jingo outburst in the Press. When it was passed, Lord George Hamilton told us, that all which would be requisite had been done. Again there is a Jingo outcry, and in obedience to it the Navy is to be further increased. The plea now is that France is building more ships than was anticipated, and that Russia is to have a coaling station on the Mediterranean. But is not France building more ships in reply to Lord George Hamilton's foolish boast that we must have a Navy equal to that of any two Powers? And is it not forgotten that Russia had a coaling station at Villafranca before that port was annexed to France? Therefore I say, let us not lose our heads, ruin ourselves, as Sir Robert Peel wisely observed, by spending all our money in ensuring against a problematical risk.

---

A great attraction this Christmas, at 173, New Bond-street, will be Messrs. CHARBONNELL & WALKER'S superb show of PARISIAN NOVELTIES. Their salons are filled with treasures of artistic excellence in every variety. They are too beautiful to describe, and as all the world should see them, we will only add that everything that is lovely and poetic in the shape of novelties will be found there.

Satan finds work for idle ships to do. What I fear is that, if we have a Navy so strong that we can crush all creation, we shall be inclined to try the experiment of crushing it. First we annex some country, then we say that, having annexed it, our Navy must be equal to defending it. Having increased our Navy, we at once annex another country, or thrust our fingers into some foreign pie, and again we build more ships. This is why I have always been against territorial extensions, believing that the British Empire is quite large enough for our requirements. The argument as to the relative merits of eternal expansion and resting satisfied with what is possessed is an old one. It was discussed by the Athenians prior to their expedition to Syracuse, and the arguments for resting satisfied were well put by Nicias. Alcibiades replied to them. Our Jingoes are only repeating his arguments. Nicias was shouted down; he was sneered at as a "Little Greek." Alcibiades, the Jingo, was lauded as a man who understood the duties of Empire. The Athenian fleet went to Sicily. There was a general uprising against Athenian greed. Athens was defeated, and when a Spartan army occupied her territory, the Athenians awoke to the fact that Nicias had been right, and that they owed their ruin to having listened to the boastful swagger of Alcibiades and other such Jingoes.

I put this question to naval constructors: Is it possible to build a small vessel of such strength and of such speed that it could ram any armoured battle-ship and sink it? If such a vessel can be constructed, it will be; and the nation that possesses a few of such rams will be the victor in a naval war, just as a sword-fish is the superior to any number of whales. If during mere manœuvres in time of peace a huge battleship was sunk owing to another fouling it, what is likely to happen in an engagement, when it will be the object of one half of the ships to sink the other half by running into them?

If, as I have often said, we want more ships to be able to ensure our safety in case of war, then we must build them. First, however, we ought clearly to understand what is meant by defence. As it is, we say that our ships must be able to cope with those of any two foreign Navies in order to secure to us supremacy on the seas. It does not follow, however, that our enemies would be limited to two. It seems to me, therefore, that, if we agree to the dictum that supremacy is essential, and can only be ensured by equality of number of ships, we shall have to build a number equal to that of all foreign Navies, or, in other words, that our expenditure in ship building must be such as would ruin us.

I trust that the gentleman who forwards the following effusion to me will never be on a jury in a case in which I am concerned:—

> Multiply the villany of that villain Lobengula a million times and it won't in the faintest degree approach yours, you vile, loathsome, imp of hell. I hope you will never bring an action without losing it. If I were on a jury I would find against you in every case, and only regret that I could not send you to the gallows. Why don't you go to Russia, you accursed beggar—you aggregation of everything that is evil and bad? Siberia, you beast, is too good for you.
>
> May fevers long know you;
> May agues long freeze you;
> May influenza assail you;
> May microbes creep o'er you;
> May many tortures distract you;
> May Heaven destroy you!
>
> Success to Rhodes! Down with you, you traitor and bloody villain who attacks him!

At a meeting of the Concessions Company held yesterday, the arrangement was confirmed by which the Chartered Company doubled its capital in order to give £1,000,000 to its promoters, and in many cases its Directors—because, although there was no signed agreement to give them anything as promoters, they had agreed with themselves as Directors that they were to have this modest trifle. The amusing part of the proceeding was that these very 'cute gentlemen paraded as a kindness on their part, that they were prepared to take £185,000 Six per Cent. Debentures of the Chartered Company. But for what was this money wanted? To pay some of the promoters who had found money for the Company in order to prevent its bankruptcy. The real effect of this benevolence was, that they converted an unsecured debt into a first charge. If all the shareholders of the Concessions Company are not prepared to subscribe their quota of these Debentures, it is proposed to sell to confiding investors some of the free shares given by the Chartered Company to the promoters. My opinion of the shares is that they are intrinsically worth their value as waste paper, or, perhaps, a steak out of some of the cattle that the Company has looted, and which appears to be its most available asset.

The first Earl of Fife was a Mr. Duff, who was a sort of pedlar in Ireland in the days of James II., and made himself so useful to William of Orange that he was created Earl of Fife, and Baron Macduff in the Irish Peerage, and was privileged to amass much money. It is not therefore surprising that his descendant, the present Duke of Fife, treads in the path of his canny ancestor, and is seeking to feather his already well-feathered nest, in the guise of a patriot burning with a noble desire to extend the area of our Empire. This has secured him an income of £1,200 as a Life Director of the South Africa Company, and it would be an imputation upon his intelligence to suppose that this is all that he has obtained by his connection with this Company, judging from his action in other Companies with which he has been connected. I take the following from the Financial Gazette :—

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER restores the colour, renews the growth, arrests the fall, cleanses the scalp.

MAX GREGER'S PURE HUNGARIAN WINES strengthen and sustain. The pure produce of the famous Carlowitz district.—MAX GREGER, LTD., Wine Merchants to the Queen, 2, Old Bond-st, W.

The British South Africa Company is not the only financial venture with which his Grace has been connected. He is a partner in the West-End banking firm of Sir Samuel Scott, Bart., & Co., and another partner is Sir Horace Brand Townsend Farquhar, Bart., who is also a director of the British South Africa Company. These two partners work together in more senses than one. They both figured as founders of such Trust Companies as the United States Debenture, the Imperial Colonial Finance, and the South American and Mexican Company, in connection with which there have recently been disclosures of far reaching importance. The Duke and his banking firm have taken a leading part in the Exploration Company, the shares of which were issued at a premium, and afterwards went to a very substantial premium. The ordinary shareholders in this concern have received 4s. per share in dividends, and the founders £13. 2s. 4d. per share. This Company has paid no dividends since 1890, and it may be interesting to know that Sir Samuel Scott, Bart., & Co., originally held 1,700 shares; Mr. F. Hoare (a partner), 100 shares; Mr. C. H. Burnand (private secretary to Sir Horace Farquhar), 400 shares; and Mr. W. H. Preedy (holder of procuration), 300 shares. It may also be of interest that every one of these shares has been sold. Sir Horace Brand Townsend Farquhar is a Director of this Company. He is also a partner in the firm of Forbes, Forbes, & Co., East India Agents, 9, King William-street, E.C., who have reduced their holdings from 1,120 to 200 shares, while Mr. W. Lower, of the same address, has got rid of 500 shares. Had Sir Horace Brand Townsend Farquhar, Bart., no interest in any of the above sales? Mr. G. F. B. Farquhar has sold the whole of his 1,150 shares, but the Duke of Fife appears to have 600 left out of 1,000. The Duke appears to have been left in the scramble to get out, for the two Managing Directors, Mr. E. G. De Crano has got rid of nearly 4,000 shares, Mr. Hamilton Smith 2,000, and all the founders' shares they had. Of the Companies promoted by, or otherwise connected with, the Exploration Company, at least six pay no dividends, which, to the shareholders, is a matter "of far-reaching importance." The Exploration Company is applying to Parliament for an extension of time for its Central London Railway scheme.

Now, I have no sort of objection to a Duke engaging in commerce. We have got over the nonsense that noblesse oblige to be idle. If the Duke of Fife can sell his services to the promoters of a Company at £1,200 per annum, he is no worse than many other members of the aristocracy who let themselves out for a much smaller fee. If he likes to engage in financing speculations, by all means let him. My objection is that he should wish the public to believe that he is a great nobleman, sacrificing himself and his personal interests to a noble patriotism. He denounced —at a recent meeting of the South African Chartered Company—me and others as "Little Englanders," because we have taken the liberty to protest against an iniquitous and inhuman war being carried on, not from any patriotic motives, but from private greed; and he actually did this when the promoters of the Company, of which he was one, were insisting upon being paid by their own Company £1,000,000, as a douceur for their "patriotism." He can, therefore, find no fault with me if I venture—with that respect for a nobleman which is so deeply ingrained in my nature—to remove a little of the patriotic gilding with which he would cover his commercial gingerbread. If we really are open to the reproach of being "Little Englanders," it cannot be said that we make money by our views of what is best in the interests of the country. Never, indeed, will I believe in patriotism that brings in cash to the patriot.

Considering the former exploits of the Rhodes gang in booming the shares of the Chartered Company up to 300 per cent. premium, to the great loss of those who bought them, and considering that they now have in hand 1,000,000 shares of this Company, which, with the aid of a printing press, they have just conferred on themselves, we may fairly expect a very deluge of stories designed to induce the too-credulous British investor to exchange his hard cash against these "paper" shares. The deluge has, indeed, already begun. Two ladies, I read in a contemporary, bought a "claim" in Manicaland for one shilling. They have already received several hundred pounds in gold from this claim. Considering that no gold has as yet been exported from Manicaland, I am inclined to think that—if really the ladies have received anything —it has been from Rhodes himself, or from one of his gang, on the principle of baiting with a sprat to catch a shoal of herrings. I am anxiously looking forward to the "discovery" of the Queen of Sheba's Palace in Matabeleland. It was "discovered" in Mashonaland, and proved a very taking bait. Having done good service in pulling up the price of the shares of the Company, it was withdrawn from the Mashonaland hook; it is now full time to put it on the Matabeleland hook, and also to show that this district is the true Land of Ophir from which Solomon got all his gold.

These two ladies, Miss Rose Blennerhasset and Miss Lucy Sleman, went to Mashonaland as nurses, and they have published their experiences. That respecting the Church in Mashonaland is curious. The "expected clergyman," they say, "has arrived. His first visit was entirely taken up with complaints of his position. He had no money. The Bishop had left him no authority except over souls. He was not going to stand it." And it would appear that he did not "stand it," for he withdrew from the Church, and went into partnership with a Hebrew pothouse-keeper. Equally strange were the ways of the authorities. At Christmas the Chief Commissioner and the Resident Magistrate, under the influence of the festive season, suspended each other, but the latter got the better of the former by arresting him. The next day, however, they made up their differences at a smoking concert, and spent the rest of the year in festivity. This Resident Magistrate was a man of resource if not of humanity. Having ordered a man into prison, he made him safe every evening by tying his thumbs together behind his back. As for the police, they appear to have been well-intentioned thieves. They sent a cow to the hospital as a gift, but their charity was practised at the expense of some one else, for they had stolen it, and the owner, after a brief engagement with these charitable policemen, got back his stolen cow. I gather that the two ladies are now ordered to St. Helena, in order to recover from the effects of the climate of the salubrious domains of the S.A. Chartered Company.

Such side lights on what really has been going on in Mashonaland are highly valuable, for it must be remembered that these parsons turned pot-house keepers, these drunken Magistrates, and these stealing policemen, are representing themselves as entrusted by Providence with a divine mission, this mission being to make the shares of a rotten Company saleable on the Stock Exchange by "clearing out" a godless heathen nation, possessed of land and mines, which are to be the reward of those who, by killing these godless savages and laying hands on their lands and mines, obey the Divine commandments against murder and theft.

Ovoca.—A perfect Old Irish Whisky. Medically recommended. Absolutely pure, genuine. Thoroughly matured, palatable. Of all Wine Merchants. Wholesale only, A. Millar & Co., Dublin.

One of the latest telegrams from Matabeleland is to the effect that, by order of Mr. Rhodes, a force of burghers (would not burglars be the right word?) left Fort Victoria to liberate some Mashona women and children who some time ago had been carried off by the Matabele. The expedition suffered no losses, the women and children were restored to their people, and eight hundred head of Lobengula's cattle were brought away Whether any women and children were released is, I should say, doubtful. The expedition appears to have been organised to capture cattle belonging to Matabele who were living in their villages, and did not even form part of the fighting force of that nation. Judging from what has occurred elsewhere, it is probable that a good many villages were burnt and a good many Matabele were slaughtered in this cattle raid, and that those still alive—men, women, and children—have been left, homeless and cattleless, to rot. So convinced, however, were the Matabele that the Company would prove the most beneficent of rulers, that we are asked to believe that they expressed a wish to come under its rule. This is about as likely as that a Lowland farmer upon having his cattle "lifted" by Rob Roy, declared himself anxious to be ruled henceforward by that cateran on these lines.

I do not want telegrams from Dr. Jameson, or from Sir Henry Loch, detailing conversations with officers of the Chartered Company's freebooters in regard to the wounded Matebele. What I want is the number of Matabele who were brought into Buluwayo by the victors in previous engagements, and the number of them that are now being treated. I in no way exaggerated when I said that we have been officially informed that at least 3,000 Matabele were killed and wounded in those engagements. Nor did I exaggerate when I said that only 1,000 (and probably far fewer) of these could have been killed by the fire of the Company's forces; for this is the exact estimate of Mr. Rhodes himself in a telegram to Sir G. Spring that is published in the Cape papers. I will allow that 500 were so slightly wounded that they escaped, although, as the cavalry charged them after their onset had been repulsed, this is doubtful. What, then, has become of the remaining 1,500? If the Company had replied that its European soldiers were few in numbers; that they were accompanied by a horde of Mashonas eager for revenge on their former masters; and that the force had to advance rapidly, and was without the means either to protect or to tend the wounded Matabeles; this would have been intelligible. But they neither deny nor admit. The Mashonas, they say, only left the laager after the cavalry had scouted some miles. Very probably; but what did they do when they did emerge from the laager, and the wounded were lying about? Some wounded, continues the Secretary, were taken into the laager and tended. This, too, is probable. Some, he says, were carried on to Buluwayo. A few may have been, but it is evident that it would only have been a very few. After all these fogging evasions, the Secretary throws them all over by asking how many wounded were treated in the hospitals of the Imperial forces during the Zulu campaign? If, as the Secretary hints, the wounded in the Zulu campaign were left to die by a disciplined Imperial force, does it not stand to reason that this would be more likely to occur in the case of an undisciplined force, collected together by promises of a share in booty, which could only be obtained by its owners being slain? This Chartered Company has really found so credulous a public over here, that it is not surprising that its promoters and officers should deem this credulity inexhaustible.

The following extract from a letter that I have received from an African at Leeds is interesting as showing what educated Africans think of our Christian efforts to civilise them on commercial lines:—

> It is impossible for me to see this day pass without having thanked you for the human, yea, most true Christian, manner you plead for my always and everywhere oppressed and hated people. Laughed to scorn by your own countrymen and colleagues in the house known as the "House of Commons"—but which should be the House of un-Commons—you hold on to your own cause. I hope you may live to see the fruits of your labours. Dr. Livingstone did not see his, and there were not enough Scotchmen to continue his well begun work, so it fell to the desired lot of the "great African Explorer," Mr. Stanley, to crush it. Cetewayo, after the most unjust war in Zululand, said:—"The English send us first missionaries; second, a Consul; third, soldiers." And thus a people who were capable of being civilised were destroyed, and the few remnants are forced to labour at very small pay for the conquerors on their own soil; and, very likely, the only education they get is, "servants, obey your masters."
>
> Prejudice against the negro, even in this country, is so very great that Britons never will christianise Africa. What, then, is the use of missionaries? Is their mission to make "the last state of the man worse than the first?" According to a letter written by an Englishman in South Africa, the whole of the "Christian Church" there were in favour of the Chartered Company (How can any Christian Government charter a lot of money-seekers?) waging war against the Matabele. Goethe, in his "Faust," says:—"Churches have eaten up whole countries, and yet have never enough." In South Africa it seems that filthy lucre has there, too, drawn the "Christian Church" into the 300 to 1,000 per cent. that Matabeleland offers. The noble lady who pleaded the cause of the Zulus has, it seems, retired with a broken heart! Wilberforce, Pitt, and the noble Quakers who pleaded the cause of the negro are dead; and Englishmen, who have ever made capital out of the negroes' blood, have found another way of getting their monstrous percentage at the negro's cost and loss. This time, though, the lot has fallen to the Radical Party to stay, at least a little, the bloodhounds' teeth.
>
> May the Omnipotent God sustain you, honourable sir, and your Party for the great, true Christian, and human good you are seeking to secure for His less favoured creatures.

I wonder who on the Westminster Gazette has been "got hold of" by the South Africa Chartered Company? This newspaper, alone amongst Liberal journals, is in perfect ecstasies over the Company's doings, and evidently considers that it matters nothing how many Africans are slaughtered and robbed, if the slaughter and the robbery enabled financing adventurers to make money out of British investors. Mr. Newnes, the proprietor, is an enterprising man of business, and has proved it by that excellent periodical the Strand Magazine. He should, however, find out which of his staff is prostituting the Westminster Gazette in this fashion, and take measures to hinder such pernicious nonsense appearing in its columns; for, if a Liberal journal becomes the organ of a gang of filibustering financiers, its influence (whatever it may have) goes, its circulation falls, it is conducted at a loss, and disappears so soon as its proprietor is tired of losing money by preaching in the desert.

"LIBERTY" YULE-TIDE GIFTS.—Descriptive Catalogue, containing 220 illustrations. Post free on application.—LIBERTY & Co., Regent-street, London, W.

"VERREY'S" RESTAURANT, Regent-street, corner of Hanover-street. The oldest and most select French Restaurant in London. Ladies' luncheons at moderate prices a specialty. Dinners à la carte.

SCRUTATOR.

JOHN JAMES JONES SUPERSEDED.

MANY readers of Truth will doubtless have wondered before this what has become of John James Jones, the Bad Samaritan, upon whose philanthropic career I turned a little light last spring. I have not lost sight of John James, nor of the London Samaritan Society, but as the chief Samaritan has been living for some time in a position of retirement, I have thought it best to remain silent pending further developments. These have now come about by the issue of the following circular :—

THE LONDON SAMARITAN SOCIETY AND HOMERTON MISSION.

STATEMENT BY THE COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT.

The Council has now been merged in the Committee of Management, which consists of eight members, and acts as Treasurers. The Committee alone have power to appoint new members at a meeting.

All money is paid to a banking account day by day, and the account is kept in the name of the Committee.

No money can be drawn from the bank except by cheques signed by at least two members of the Committee, and counter-signed by the Managing Director or Secretary.

All property owned by the Society, or for which the Society pays rent, is subject to the control of the Committee, and the Committee also have general control of the objects and undertakings of the Society, and of accounts, appeals, and records.

All letters received at the London office are opened in the presence of three clerks who render daily statements, and those received at Sandgate, not being private communications, are posted forthwith to the London office to be opened there.

The books and accounts are not only audited periodically by chartered accountants, but are actually kept and written up by them monthly.

The Committee meet weekly. They do not accept personal responsibility for debts. For the payment of these the contributions of subscribers and the various properties of the Society form the security.

The only benefit which the Managing Director receives from the funds, or property of the Society, is the salary paid to him by the Committee.

The freehold properties of the Society are vested in Trustees by deeds enrolled in Chancery. These Trustees form a distinct body from the Committee, and meet when occasion requires.

Signed for and behalf of the Committee,
November 7, 1893. W. Cuff, Chairman.

This is a highly interesting document, intimating, as it does, that the control of the Society has been taken out of the hands of John James Jones, and transferred to those of the Committee, and that a system has been instituted which precludes the Managing Director from handling the cash received. The pains now taken to impress these points upon the public form a striking contrast to the elaborate pretence of exonerating Jones which was gone through after the publication of the Truth articles. Lest, however, this should give rise to the impression that the Committee have, notwithstanding their protestations of belief in his integrity, taken the earliest opportunity of relegating John James to a back place, there is a "P.T.O." below the Rev. Mr. Cuff's signature; and on turning over, the reader finds this even more interesting document :—

98, High-street, Homerton, London, E.,
November 7, 1893.

Dear Friend,—For nearly five months I have been unable to take any part in the direction or management of the work of the London Samaritan Society, owing to my ill-health.

I am truly grateful to God for restoring me to a measure of health and strength; but I feel that neither my physical nor mental strength will permit me to carry in the future the same amount of responsibility and anxiety as I have done in the past. Therefore the very kind and devoted friends to the work of the Society, who have acted during my illness as a Committee of Management and Treasurers, will in the future control all the financial and general management of the Society and Mission which it was my privilege to institute nearly twenty years ago.

The Committee of Management will greatly lighten the burden of responsibility and anxiety, and will enable me to devote more time and energy to superintending the very many details of such a work as that done by the London Samaritan Society for the afflicted and needy men, women, and children of the Metropolis, and nearly all parts of the United Kingdom.

To the very many dear friends who have expressed their sympathy with me in my time of affliction I tender my sincere and heartfelt thanks.—I remain, gratefully and faithfully yours,

John James Jones,
Managing Director.

The charitable public are here invited to believe that failing health alone has led to the removal of Mr. J. J. Jones from the pedestal on which he has hitherto been elevated. I hope that I am not altogether devoid of charity myself, but to me the diseases of Mr. Jones occur too opportunely for probability. They resemble too much the ailments of some other public personages who have possessed the faculty of falling ill whenever circumstances render temporary seclusion expedient. Whatever Jones's infirmity may be, nobody ever heard of its preventing him doing anything that he wanted to do until last November, when he had exhausted every pretext for evading his promise to come and finish his interview at Truth office. Then he suddenly developed the most alarming symptoms; indeed, from the account he gave me of his case, I could only suppose that the worst consequences were to be apprehended, should he persist in keeping his engagement with me. Not less sudden, however, than this alarming attack, was his subsequent recovery, which was apparently brought about by the famous Sandgate landslip. Never in all his life had Jones been so aggressively energetic as after that occurrence. He assumed the arduous duties of Secretary to the Relief Fund, he raised stormy scenes at the Local Board, he called public meetings, he wrote letters to the London papers, he sent out appeals by the thousand, he was busy fighting his own landlord, and bidding for properties whose owners were panic-struck; and all this within three months of the date when his doctors were insisting so peremptorily on perfect rest, that they would not even let him make the journey from Sandgate to Truth office. Then came my articles on the Samaritan Society, and in a moment poor John James was once more in extremis, and, after some sensational incidents which I need not recapitulate, he had to go away and leave his "kind and devoted friends" to get along as well as they could without him. It now appears that this last attack has been so serious that the Committee are going to take "all the financial and general management of the Society's Mission" off his hands. I can believe a great deal, but at this point my credulity stops. To my thinking, the only ailment that Jones is suffering from is a serious attack of Truth, and I venture to say that nobody who has studied the symptoms, and compared the last seizure with that which occurred in November, 1892, will fail to concur in this diagnosis of the complaint.

Far be it from me to blame John James Jones for making his escape from an untenable position by this particular door. On the contrary, I think a certain amount of credit is due to him for recognising that, if he was not prepared to accept my challenge and traverse my charges against him in a Court of Law, it was impossible for him to retain the position he has held. Having decided to step down, he was right to do it with as much dignity as he could. But the position of Jones in this matter is entirely different from that of the "Council" or "Committee of Management," or whatever the body is to be called. It is one thing for Jones to palm off upon the subscribers and the public a flimsy fiction which can deceive none but those who wish to be deceived; it is quite another for the Committee to endorse this fiction, as they do when Jones's ingenious epistle to his "Dear Friends" is appended to a statement of the Committee signed by the Reverend Chairman. From beginning to end of this business the Council seem to have shown far more solicitude for Mr. Jones than for the interests of the Samaritan Society, or their own reputation for common sense. They were content for years to accept the position of dummies, and to lend their names as responsible for the administration of a concern of which they knew nothing. When their eyes were opened by the revelations in TRUTH, they took upon themselves the responsibility of advising Jones not to meet the charges against him in the only way in which they could be met, and the still heavier responsibility of going through the empty form of trying these charges themselves and pronouncing absolution on the accused party. They now crown these proceedings by issuing a statement, which by implication admits that they have found it necessary to remodel the entire administration of the concern; and they allow Jones to retire with honour, on the plea of ill-health, from the autocratic position he has held, when it must be obvious to every independent observer that the only reason for his retirement is the fact that he is unable to answer the charges which have been made against him, but which the Council have pronounced to be unfounded. Whether the Society gains much additional title to confidence by the substitution of a body of gentlemen of this calibre in place of its original founder and autocrat, is a question which I would now recommend the subscribers to consider carefully.

Sanitary Surveys.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

GOOD MR. GOOD.

The following is the letter from the Rev. Wardlaw Thompson, of the London Missionary Society, referred to in last week's TRUTH as having been sent in answer to my recent article, "A Mammonite Missionary." I have been compelled to curtail it in one or two places, but I have eliminated nothing bearing upon the facts alleged in the article:—

First, as to this case of Mr. Good. It is admitted that he has received a gift of land from the Chief. You say it is thirty square miles in extent. He says it is computed to be about 8,000 morgen, or 16,000 acres. In either case it is a large tract of country, and sounds a princely gift. But to those who know the vast waterless plains of Bechuanaland it does not amount to very much, especially as it is without a single permanent stream or fountain, and, so far as is known, is not within any supposed auriferous area. It was practically valueless, except for pasturage, when the Chief gave it, and it is not worth 6d. an acre now.

Next, as to the way in which Mr. Good obtained it. Your readers ought to know that it has been the custom of the Chiefs to assign to Europeans, residing among their people, "places," or tracts of country, where they may graze their cattle away from the native towns and the native herds. In most cases this land is simply loaned, and reverts to the Chiefs when no longer required by the person to whom it has been lent. As the number of Europeans increases, a rent is frequently charged for such land. When Mr. Good went to Kanye more than twenty-five years ago he asked the Chief for a place for his cattle, and this land was set apart for his use. Afterwards, in gratitude for many services, the Chief proposed to make him a present of it. When the present Chief came to power, this gift was formally ratified.

But you say: "I am curious to learn whether the subscribers to the London Missionary Society have been aware of the 'collateral work' which Mr. Good combined with the propagation of the Gospel." This "collateral work" is one of the commonest experiences of the life of a missionary among uncivilised tribes, and is sometimes a tolerably heavy burden. The missionary is obliged to make himself thoroughly master of the native language in order to efficiency in his own work among them; consequently, he is constantly in requisition as the interpreter when European travellers pass through, or when correspondence takes place between the tribe and the British Government. The missionary, if he is a true man, speedily becomes known and trusted by the people as their friend, and is increasingly consulted about matters relating to their interests. He is usually the only European who has not come into the country avowedly to promote his personal ends. He may therefore be expected to give disinterested advice and help. . . .

Mr. Good has during the last twenty years had a very large amount of this "collateral work" to do. Political complications, and the efforts of concessionaires to obtain large tracts of country, have called his services into requisition repeatedly. He is greatly beloved by the people. What wonder, then, if they should express their gratitude in a tangible form by a present? If they had been civilised they might have decided to present him with a service of plate, or some other equally costly and useless token of regard. Being what they are, they presented him with the land which they had already loaned to him. Can any one say that he had not a right to accept the present, or that his conduct gave evidence of a mercenary spirit?

The expediency of accepting such gifts from the natives is quite a different question. I have no hesitation in saying that Mr. Good made a mistake in accepting a present of such a kind, and which might be so easily represented as a quid pro quo for services rendered. But looking at the facts in the light in which I have just stated them, I have never thought it necessary to insist that the land should be given back.

The other stories you refer to, of the huts of Christian converts being burned because a missionary had successfully opposed a concessionaire, and of the missionary who received £50 a year from a trader as "hush money," seem to me to be of that vague kind which the credulous traveller can have plenty of. If you can localise and substantiate them as against any missionary of the London Missionary Society, I can promise you that the Directors of the Society will be prompt in dealing with the offenders.—I am,

R. WARDLAW THOMPSON,
Foreign Secretary of the London Missionary Society.

It seems to me that Mr. Wardlaw Thompson practically acknowledges the justice of my criticism when he admits, without hesitation, "that Mr. Good made a mistake in accepting a present of such a kind." The whole point of my article was that it is a mistake for any missionary to accept presents of such a kind, and, that being conceded, it is hardly worth while to argue the matter further. But there is one point on which I should like to add a word. The present, says Mr. Wardlaw Thompson, "might be so easily represented as a quid pro quo for services rendered," on which ground, apparently, he deems it "inexpedient" that it should be accepted. But the present is not merely "so represented;" it actually was a payment for services rendered. Mr. Thompson's phrase almost suggests that to represent it in this light is to misrepresent it. But does he himself suggest that the gift was anything else than a payment for services rendered? On the contrary, his own explanation of the gift represents it in this light and no other. If the natives had been civilised they might, he says, have expressed their gratitude in a presentation of plate, "or some other equally costly and useless token of regard." As it is, they expressed their gratitude by a presentation which was far from "useless"—a matter of 16,000 acres of grazing land. Mr. Wardlaw Thompson represents the land as practically worthless; but I have already shown that sundry natives, who had a less keen sense of gratitude to the missionary, laid claim to it, and had to be disposed of by force, before Mr. Good became the de facto owner. They evidently did not think it worthless, and I take it that many a European who, unlike Mr. Good as seen through Mr. Thompson's spectacles, has "come into the country avowedly to promote his personal ends," would have been ready to give a substantial quid pro quo for the territory. Thirty square miles, or even 16,000 acres, of "the waterless plains of Bechuanaland" may go up very considerably in value in the next twenty years, and it requires no great stretch of the imagination to see Mr. Good, or his heirs and successors, ranking among the most opulent landowners of South Africa, with a very handsome share of "unearned increment" to awake the jealousy of the landless section of the community.

FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

Granting, then, that the gift was not only a "quid," but a very handsome "quid," there arises another question. What about the "quo"? Mr. Wardlaw Thompson suggests that Mr. Good's services rendered have been out of all proportion to the little 16,000-acre compliment received in return. Some people in South Africa, however, suggest, as I intimated in my article, something very different. Without going into charges of the "vague kind," referred to in the concluding paragraph of the above letter, I may say that I have statements of a similar nature, but not at all vague, with which Mr. Good's name is connected; and I see myself strong reason to doubt whether Mr. Good's "collateral" operations have always been of such unquestionable benefit to the Chiefs and their people that nothing less than a grant of 16,000 acres of land would be an adequate recognition of them. These, however, are details. The Secretary of the London Missionary Society admits that an "inexpedient" thing has been done, which I take to mean one of which the Society do not approve. If they had in their possession full particulars of the relations of Mr. Good with the natives, they would, I believe, see its inexpediency in a much stronger light. The question, then, is whether this inexpedient transaction is to stand, or whether the attitude of the Society is to be that of disapproving of the action of their representative, and at the same time winking at it.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE BEAKS AND CLAWS OF TWO TRAGEDIENNES.

YOU must remember having seen Mdlle. Rousseil under the Perrin management on the stage of the Français taking the house by storm as a tragedy queen. She then showed herself an actress of pre-eminent talent. After she left, Sarcey and the late Barbey d'Aurevilly were always trying to get her back again. Her misfortune, and often her fault, was a hasty temper and a capacity for auto-suggestion, which made her take her fancies for realities. There is no more valuable gift for stage purposes than this disease, which is to the actress what that morbid state which secretes pearls is to the oysters. But off the stage! It makes in private life the actress, who transports hundreds nightly into the seventh heaven of bliss, the plague of those who must bear her company. Mdlle. Rousseil developed the faculty of auto-suggestion on the stage to such an extraordinary degree that her mirages haunted her off the stage, changing, however, their forms. Nobody ever knew her to be without a grievance. As she had bec et ongles to defend herself against fancied or real attacks, she was shunned. Critics who longed to do her justice in the handsomest terms were afraid to write about her, lest she should take their compliments amiss. Still she forced praise from the greatest of them. When the Théâtre Français grew too hot to hold her, she thought herself a victim of jealousy. In this state of mind she came to the conclusion that her best course was to go into a convent, little dreaming to what a terrible degree human nature asserts itself in the cloistered orders. She went. Her noviciate, it appears, was an all-round disappointment, and she is out again. Or, rather, she has been out some time—else there would not have been cause given for the action for libel which she brought against another actress, Mdlle. Teissandier, one of M. Sarcey's favourites. Mdlle. Teissandier is best known as an Odéon actress. But she plays also in Boulevard theatres. When about to appear as the Flower Girl last August in "La Bouquetière des Innocents," she received a note from Mdlle. Rousseil, who, she had imagined, was saving her soul in a cloister. It was to ask her for two passes for the first representation. A kind answer was returned, and the applicant for the tickets was asked to do Mdlle. Teissandier the great pleasure to come to fetch them at her theatrical dressing-room shortly before the rising of the curtain. She went, and found La Bouquetière ready to pop upon the stage, and, as Mdlle. Rousseil shrewishly since put it, cabotine as she could be in her false demonstrations of admiration for her visitor. "Do you mean to say," asked slyly the Judge before whom the action was brought, "that she did not admire you?" "I do. Elle est si peu artiste!" "Still you say she was most anxious to have you give her lessons?" "Yes. She had no personal feeling of their worth, but she knew their market value. She is such a tradeswoman!"

The two sœurs ennemies appeared at the Palais de Justice the day on which the suit was heard. The theatrical world crowded into the Court, and the Bar gleefully looked forward to pursuer (don't you like that Scotch term?) and defendant using becs et ongles. Mdlle. Rousseil seemed confident in a victory of some sort. If she did not get the 100,000 francs at which she estimated the damage done her by the libel, she felt she would wreak vengeance in another form. She was dressed in black with a velvet jacket, a Gainsborough hat and plume, and a white lace neckerchief—the one strong, but not too startling, note in the toilette. The carriage of the head had a touch—not more—in it of the Roman Empress. She came early and seated herself behind the bench reserved for counsel. Mdlle. Teissandier, on the contrary, preferred to enter when the Court was full, and to excite attention by letting herself be called thrice by the usher. She, too, was in black, and wore a heavily-plumed and broad-brimmed hat, looked a fine woman, and tried, but over-much, to look the tragedy queen, and to hide her terror of what her foe could or might say under an air of belle assurance. Her moodiness was rather mechanical. She played with her big black eyes more from habit than intent to charm. Maître Logosso was for the pursuer; Maître Decori for the pursued.

The libel complained of was written on a post-card addressed to Mdlle. Rousseil. I have said what damages were demanded. Maître Decori casually remarked that, if granted, they would reduce his client to the necessity of resorting to the Charitable Casuals Asylum for a night's lodging. Thereupon Mdlle. Rousseil carelessly remarked that this would be a reversal of her usual habit. "Passons," cut in the presiding Judge, maliciously. "The wall that girdles private life should be respected."

The libel was read by the Clerk of the Court. It was gross and ill-spelt. Attention was called to the spelling by the Judge, who had a copy, as if to throw doubts on the authenticity of the signature. It was impossible to have crowded more nastiness into the small space of a post-card. Mdlle. Rousseil was then asked to state the circumstances which she thought proved malignant purpose. She began by asking to be excused if she had often to sit down to rest. Heart disease, and no lack of respect for the Court, would oblige her to do so. Her statement was clear and rather elegantly turned, with here and there a fearfully ill-natured reflection or innuendo. The Judge later remarked that she paid back the libel with compound interest, but that, seeing her sex and profession, that was only to be expected. He complimented her, however, on the form she gave to her statement, adding that she had not in vain kept company with the great dramatic authors.

Mdlle. Teissandier deserved no such compliment. On being asked what excuse she had for writing the post-card, she begged leave to state how she had been goaded into using such unclassic language. Her story was long, and she must begin at the beginning to make it comprehensible. Last August, a few days before she was to appear in "La Bouquetière des Innocents" she received a note signed, "Rosalia à Rousseil de la Comédie Française," asking for two tickets for the two passes. She answered: "Enchanted to oblige you; call for the passes at my dressing-room before the rising of the curtain on the first night." Mdlle. Rousseil came, looking lean and hungry, seedy, and, in short, pitiable. "What!" cried La Bouquetière des Innocents, who was waiting for the call-boy, "is it possible that so great an actress is in this state?" "Yes," was the reply; "and it will surprise you further to hear that I am only too delighted whenever I can pick up a crust." Mdlle. Teissandier embraced her, strove to cheer her up, said she would be son amie, and begged her to regard her as a loving sister. She asked her to come often to see her—the oftener the better, and was taken at her word. Mdlle. Rousseil must have exerted some inexplicable influence over her. In the course of her first visit she ordered Mdlle. Teissandier, who was too much in thraldom to refuse, to take a begging letter to the Rothschilds. It was for 200 francs. Nine hundred francs had been already given in one month. But Rothschild's wealth was unfathomable. When the handwriting on the envelope was looked at, the bearer of the letter was turned away, and told never to return. But she went back, nevertheless, the next day, because Mdlle. Rousseil told her, and got the 200 francs ad alms. The two actresses then talked shop. The prosperous one was engaged to play the part of Agrippine in "Britannicus" at the Odeon. The needy one offered to give her hints. She jumped at the proposal, but only took hints and not regular lessons every day. None the less, she came to sponge and beg for clothes. Mdlle. Teissandier gave her quite an outfit of dresses and elegant inside clothes. But one fine morning she had a letter from Rosalia to say that her stomach could not brook the onions, garlic, and half-raw sheeps' trotters in which Mdlle. Teissandier revelled. It was followed by the visit of a lady, who came with a note, in which 40 francs on account were asked for. Five francs were handed to the lady "as a present for a distressed friend." The lady returned to dun for 200 francs, also on account. Then there was a deluge of insulting and dunning post-cards. They were sent not only to Mdlle. Teissandier, but to the Vaudeville, Châtelet, Porte St. Martin, and Odéon. Patience was overtaxed, and the gross post-card complained of was penned and sent.

What had Mdlle. Rousseil to say to this? Oh, a great deal. She was engaged as a regular professor at 900 francs a month, and was to get 3,000 francs under certain conditions. What were they? Mdlle. Teissandier was bent on the conquest of an immensely rich man, who was an enthusiastic admirer of Corneille and Racine. He was already conquered, but not to the degree of financing like the Marquis de MacMahon. However, he would be capable of doing that, if Mdlle. Teissandier brought down the house as Agrippine. A really humorous account was given of the lessons. Mdlle. Rousseil divested herself of her too modern jacket and skirt, and, robing herself in a loose hair-dressing gown, showed her pupil how a Roman Emperor's mother—an Empress almost by birthright—should walk, sit down, and be draped. The rich admirer often interrupted the lessons by calling and kept the pupil in the salon often for three hours at a time. As Rosalia-Agrippine's things were there, she remained shivering in the peignoir, amid false hair, paint and powder-pots, bears' grease, glycerine, and all the arsenal of a stage star in active service. She asked why the adorer should not be allowed to see the lessons. "Oh, no," cried Mdlle. Teissandier. "Allow un imbécile, who thinks stage tricks the marks of genius, to be present at our cuisine! Is it any wonder, since you are so naïve, that you are now unengaged and hard up?" Then came the account of the lessons in Roman history. Some of them were object-lessons—naturally, since they were required for the stage. Mdlle. Teissandier was ignorant of all the characteristics of the Roman Empress and of the goings-on at the Golden House, though one might fancy she had divined them. She had never read Tacitus, Suetonius, Juvenal, nor the studies of the late M. Beulé on Julia. Mdlle. Teissandier became moodier than ever as Mdlle. Rousseil touched on these lessons. The Judge took an ill-natured pleasure in girding on the two actresses to use their beaks and claws, and to lay bare the seamy side of the French stage. And yet he was a galant Judge, for he avoided asking pursuer or pursued her age. It was impossible, he finally said, on technical grounds not to give judgment for Mdlle. Rousseil. But he valued her character at 25 francs, and he sent her and the other actress away dos à dos. What ruined Mdlle. Rousseil's case was a jocose letter in which M. de Pourceaugnac was put to shame by Agrippine.

The Queen and Queen-Dowager of Portugal are anxious for the Princesse Hélène d'Orléans to make an Italian match. She is of a tall and singularly graceful figure, and beautiful in a modern way. That is to say, she has chic, and the nervous system seems to predominate in her. But she is too tall for the Prince of Naples. But his cousin, the Duke of Aosta, may think her stature an advantage. The lady who goes with her to Italy, Madame Costa de Beauregard, belongs to a Savoyard family well known at Turin. After the Princess has visited that city—where there is no Royal lady to receive her—and Florence, she will visit Egypt and the Holy Land. A change was needed by her. Life is slow at Stowe House and San Manrico. The Princess needs a warm climate. Hence the trip on which she has set out.

The Comtesse de Paris did not put up at the Duc de Chartres' during her last halt in Paris. She preferred to dine at the buffet at the Northern Railway, and push on to Madrid. The attempts of Prince Henri de Chartres to pose as the coming man of the Orléans family are not relished by her.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

WE run a risk now, dear Lady Betty, of becoming altogether too serious. Labour and laughter should, as it were, be husband and wife—new style—possessing, that is, equal rights. To promote this excellent object, I propose with the commencement of the New Year to publish a paper to be called Lies. The avowed purpose of this journal will be to supply each week sprightly and harmless but obvious untruths. As we have it upon high authority that "all men are liars," the public that I shall appeal to is expected to be especially large.

The paragraphs will be composed somewhat as follows:—

We understand that the subscribers to the Liberator Building Society will entertain Mr. Jabez Spencer Balfour at dinner upon Christmas Eve. The Official Receiver will occupy the chair.

* * *

Mr. Jabez Spencer Balfour desires us to state that he is not in any way whatever connected with Mr. Arthur James Balfour, the Leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons.

* * *

The Lord Mayor and the Corporation of the City have invited the members of the London County Council to dine at the Guildhall upon Christmas Day. This is a new method for bringing about the proposed "Unification of London."

* * *

There is no truth in the report that the Drury Lane Pantomime this year is to be entitled "Cecil Rhodes and the (Aqua)—Forte Thieves."

* * *

King Lobengula of Matabeleland speaks in the highest terms of the moderation and disinterestedness displayed by Mr. Rhodes in his conduct of the late campaign. King Lobengula, who is being instructed by Mr. Rhodes, is making great progress in our language. He can now spell "concession," and understands that it is a synonym for plunder.

* * *

The members of the London Stock Exchange have unanimously decided to refund to the public whatever loss it may have sustained through the co-operation of any of their body. This is as we expected.

* * *

We are semi-officially informed that the Duke of Cambridge had intended to resign the appointment of Commander-in-Chief of the British Forces. It is an open secret that the Duke has been deterred from doing this owing to his not having obtained an assurance that Lord Wolseley will succeed him, and that Lord Roberts will not.

* * *

A telegram from our correspondent in Paris assures us that an unmarried American lady has arrived there, who curiously pretends that she is not an heiress. This intelligence, however, lacks confirmation from other sources.

* * *

Mr. Gilbert, R.A., the celebrated sculptor who executed the Shaftesbury Memorial Fountain at Piccadilly-circus, has been commissioned by the Municipal authorities of Paris to furnish designs for similar ornaments to replace the superb fountains in the Place de la Concorde.

* * *

Messrs. Hare and Bancroft have, we understand, decided to give a trial to a M. Sardou, and they have, therefore, commissioned this Parisian playwriter to adapt the "School for Scandal" so as to bring it up to the modern requirements of a Garrick audience. We have surely sufficient native talent to render it unnecessary to entrust this class of work to a foreign and—in England—wholly untried writer!

* * * * *

London cannot go to the mountain, so the mountain must needs now come to London. That they will one day bring the North Pole to us I conceive it impossible to doubt. The new entertainment, "Constantinople," at Olympia, which is to open to the public on Boxing Day, is an instance in point. That we have never yet had anything provided for us which even approaches "Constantinople" in magnitude, magnificence, and attention to detail, is the mere truth without exaggeration. With a quarter of a million capital a syndicate has purchased the freehold of Olympia, and has spent close on half that sum in transforming this large building into a remarkably accurate representation of the Oriental city upon the Bosphorus. "Constantinople" is what "Venice" was, but upon double the scale. Wherever you stroll, and in whichever direction, there are labyrinths of streets carefully copied from those in the real city. Where one thousand actors performed upon the central stage at "Venice" last year, two thousand are to do so now, and everything is in the same proportion. There is the Hall of the Thousand Columns, with its subterranean stream meandering like the bewildering pathways in a maze; the underground palace which in the midst of darkness suddenly discloses itself, with a blaze of light and colour; the Galata Tower, from which is seen the panorama of the Golden Horn, and other sights altogether too numerous to name. A further agreeable feature in the new undertaking is that, except for seats, no further charge but the shilling entrance-money is to be exacted. There are no stalls such as generally now spoil the effect at most exhibitions, but there are in the building almost as many shops as in Bond-street, and in nearly all of them will be men at work either upon carpets, embroidery, pearl-carving, or engaged in some industry or other common to Turkey.

* * * * *

It appears to have escaped notice that the number of widowed and single Duchesses at the present moment is altogether phenomenal. There are only twenty-seven

Minton's (Limited). Minton's China.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

Dukes in the British Peerage, not counting in, of course, those of Royal blood. Nineteen Dowager-Duchesses, then, would seem to be an exceptionally large proportion. They are as follows:—

2. Bedford.	1. Wellington.
1. Grafton.	1. Athole.
2. Manchester.	1. Buccleuch.
2. Marlborough.	2. Roxburghe.
1. Newcastle.	1. Leinster.
1. Northumberland.	1. Abercorn.
1. Sutherland.	1. Buckingham and Chandos.
1. Cleveland.

This raises the curious question, Why does a Duchess live longer than a Duke?

* * * * *

The death of any one is to be greatly deplored, but when an especially beautiful girl of seventeen dies just upon the threshold of responsible life, it is impossible not to feel more than ordinary regret. Miss Dorothy Filmer, the youngest daughter of Lady Filmer, who died last Monday evening after a few days' illness, was a singularly lovely child, possessed of a bright nature and full of life. Upon the Sunday there was no reason whatever to imagine that Miss Filmer was seriously ill, and it is even now difficult to say what caused the peritonitis which occasioned her death. It is impossible not to offer a few words of sympathy to those to whom her loss must be so great a grief.

But King Death has this week handled his scythe with a will; whilst, judging from the illness which abounds upon every side, the harvest in store for him this winter promises to be even more abundant than it was last. The Duke of Leinster, who died of typhoid at Carton last Friday, was an amiable and unobtrusive man who will chiefly be remembered on account of his very beautiful Duchess. The death of Colonel James Buchanan calls again attention to his widow who, as Lady Marion Loftus, a daughter of Lady Ely, the favourite companion of the Queen, was, a little less than a quarter of a century ago, one of the most brilliant and most popular young ladies in London. Amongst others who have died within the week are:—Sir John Drummond Hay, formerly British Minister in Morocco; Miss Florence Meysey-Thompson, a sister of Sir Henry Meysey-Thompson; and Captain Henry Chetwynd, a younger brother of the present Lord Chetwynd. The late Captain Chetwynd, who was well known, had been for the last ten years Chief Inspector to the National Lifeboat Institution. The names of Sir Alexander Cunningham, Lord Warwick, Professor Tyndall, and the Dowager Duchess of St. Albans, have, unfortunately, to be added to the mournful list.

Why does the House of Commons attract in a special degree microbes? According to the return of the sick, there are about ten of our conscript fathers already down with influenza. But whilst the House suffers from this malady, Members seem to be free from the ordinary risk of death. Never before has there been so long a period in which there has been no bye-election owing to the death of a Member.

The statement that through the death of the late Lord Cromartie the Earldom becomes extinct is, to say the very least of it, premature. The patent sets forth that the title shall be "with remainder to her (the late Lady Cromartie) second son Francis and the heirs male of his body, in default to each of her younger sons begotten or to be begotten, and to their heirs male, and in default to their right heirs, and in default, with like remainder, to her daughters Florence and Alexandra." The expression "and in default to their right heirs" failing there being "heirs male," if it signifies anything, must mean that the title devolves in the female line to the late Lord Cromartie's eldest daughter, the Lady Sibell Leveson-Gower—which, indeed, I understand it does.

* * * * *

Though not officially announced as yet, it is for all purposes sufficiently certain that Baron von Golstein is to be appointed Dutch Minister in London, to replace the late Count de Bylandt. Baron von Golstein, who is a man of about sixty-five, is held in much consideration in his own country. He has occupied various high offices in the State, possesses wide influence, is wealthy, and has great charm of manner. Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

THE annual list of winning owners was published last week, and many most asinine comments upon the figures therein contained have appeared in the papers. It seems to be generally supposed that these alleged winnings are really the "gains" on the turf of the respective owners, which is an error of the wildest and most extravagant kind. In these days forfeits and stakes amount every month of the season to an enormous sum if an owner has a large stud and engages his horses freely, and, of course, all these payments must be deducted from the winnings which are announced so complacently every year. I know of one owner whose forfeits for two weeks of the past season amounted to upwards of £1,200, and another had £800 to pay over one meeting.

Of course when simpletons are writing florid nonsense about these large sums, which they ignorantly assume have been really "netted" by the principal owners, they entirely overlook the huge expenses of training and racing a stud, and the very considerable amount of capital which must be invested in the undertaking. I would vastly like to see the complete balance-sheet of such owners as the Duchess of Montrose, Sir J. B. Maple, Mr. Houldsworth, and Mr. H. Bass. The figures in the published list are only within even measurable distance of accuracy (if regarded seriously as winnings) in the cases (which are very rare) when a man has only two or three horses in training, and these not heavily engaged. Mr. Blake, for example, who has won nearly £9,000, thanks to Delphos, may really be credited with almost the whole of that amount; but it is simply idiotic to attach the slightest importance to the figures which are appended to the names of such owners as Sir Blundell Maple or Colonel North.

Mr. McCalmont is credited with £25,431, which is more than £9,000 less than the sum which has been won by the horses of Baron Schickler, who was the most successful owner in France, although he sold nearly all his horses early in the year. Mr. McCalmont is indebted to Isinglass for nearly all his amount, and next season it is clear that he will have to depend upon that horse and his two-year-olds, as he has no good three-year-old. Isinglass has some very nice engagements next summer, and it seems to me that he will have only the then three-year-olds to fear in the £10,000 Princess of Wales's Stakes at the Newmarket First July Meeting, and in the £10,000 Jockey Club Stakes at the First October Meeting, for the best opponent of his own age will have penalties to carry, and Isinglass won all his races with Ravensbury so very easily that I do not believe that Mr. Rose's unlucky beast would have any chance of beating him at 6 lb. Isinglass is also engaged in the Hardwicke Stakes of £2,700 at Ascot, which looks a good thing for him.

The second place in the published list is given to the Duke of Westminster (£16,626), but it really belongs to Baron de Rothschild, whose horses in England and France have won more than £17,000. The Duke is indebted to Orme for two-thirds of his amount, and the remainder was won by three of his two-year-olds. It is odd, considering how very extensively the Duke of Westminster's foals and yearlings are engaged, that his best two-year-old (Grey Leg) was not entered for any of next year's great races, and in the Derby his Grace will have to depend on Bullingdon, who, in my opinion, stands at a preposterously short price.

The Duke of Portland (£15,804) is decidedly the most fortunate owner in the list, as he won three of the most valuable stakes of the year with three exceedingly moderate animals—Raeburn, Mrs. Butterwick, and Schoolbook. I hear that Raeburn is to "go for" the Lincolnshire Handicap, all being well, and he certainly is not likely to win any of his weight-for-age engagements while Isinglass keeps well, and Mr. M'Calmont's horse stops the way everywhere, as he is also in the Eclipse Stakes. The Duke of Portland has two very fine and highly-promising "dark" two-year-olds at Newmarket, which are certain to win some good races if they go on all right, although they may not be quite up to Derby form. These are Cessnock, by Ayrshire out of Wheel of Fortune, and Galston, by Ayrshire out of Dorothea. Both animals were entered for the principal two-year-old races, but it was wisely decided not to attempt to train them on the hard ground.

To Overcome Weakness.—Pepper's Quinine and Iron Tonic gives New Life, Appetite, Health, Strength, Energy. Cures Neuralgia, Indigestion, Nerve Debility. Pepper's Tonic. Kept everywhere.

D

Sir J. B. Maple has sunk to £10,746 from £17,266 last year, and his horses have been very unlucky in various ways. He also has some very good-looking dark two-year-olds, which will be well worth looking after next summer. These are Athlone, own brother to Clarence; Mintlaw, the 4,500 gs. colt by Minting out of Reprieve; and Grand Hampton, the 2,200 gs. colt by Merry Hampton out of Grandeur. The 6,000 gs. Childwick is evidently a very moderate animal, and he will require to be very cleverly placed if he is ever to win as much as he has cost his enterprising owner. Dame President, however, was the great disappointment of the season in this stud.

Mr. Douglas Baird has risen from £4,802 to £10,626, and his prospects for next season are very favourable, as he has two exceptionally promising two-year-olds in St. Florian and Sempronius, the latter being one of the most improved animals of his age at Newmarket. Sempronius went off in the summer, and he was by no means in good form when Ladas ran away from him at Doncaster. Lord Ellesmere has risen from £2,644 to £9,909 (of which about half was won by Phocion), and T. Cannon is indebted to his two-year-olds for his leap from £2,558 to £9,873. Colonel North, who was one of the most unfortunate owners of the year, has fallen from £15,589 to £9,644, and next season he will have to rely mainly upon his two-year-olds. Mr. Vyner is up from £3,028 to £9,036, more than half of which was won by Marcion, who is expected to stand training again; and I hope we shall see him running for the Ascot Cup, in which race his most dangerous opponent will probably be Callistrate, as Isinglass is likely to be reserved for his other engagements.

Sir W. Throckmorton has risen from £697 to £7,102, and he has a very promising Derby outsider in that smart colt Arcano, whose only engagement next year is the great Epsom race. Baron Hirsch has experienced the crash of the year, his total having fallen from £33,383 to £6,976. I predicted twelve months ago that La Flèche would not retain her form as a four-year-old, and the hare-brained enthusiasts who were then jargoning about her sweeping the board this season must now feel even more silly and muddish than usual. The decline of Mr. Houldsworth from £10,115 to £6,379 will be generally regretted, as he is one of the most popular and most deserving owners on the turf. Mr. Houldsworth, however, cannot reasonably regard himself this year as unfortunate, for Orvieto was a very lucky horse to win the rich Jubilee Handicap at Kempton Park.

Lord Rosebery has won £5,768 with Ladas, who is undoubtedly a very good colt, and it is my firm belief that he will find little difficulty in beating Match Box when they meet in the Two Thousand. Ladas is going on as well as possible at Newmarket. I fully expect that Lord Durham's fine colt, Son o' Mine (who was ridiculously backward when he ran at Kempton Park), will give Ladas more trouble in the Derby (or whenever they meet) than any other of his probable opponents, and I feel confident that Son o' Mine will defeat Match Box at Epsom. Lord Durham's colt has been manifestly improving every week, and he is a really beautiful colt, and may be expected to grow into as handsome and racing-like a three-year-old as any one could wish to possess. If Ladas and Match Box meet in the Two Thousand, then the Newmarket Stakes will be a most exciting race if the winner of the former event opposes Son o' Mine, who is not likely to be started for the Hastings Plate on the day before the Two Thousand, which is his first engagement as a three-year-old. Lord Rosebery has a couple of highly promising yearlings, and some infatuated addlehead has been taking 50 to 1 about his dark colt Ravelston for the Derby. This animal is own brother to Corstorphine. I see it is stated that Ravelston "can go," which is the very purest of fictions, as nothing whatever is known about him except that he is remarkably good-looking. Ravelston (like Corstorphine) will prove a very difficult animal to train, as his legs are grievously disposed to become "groggy," and it is improbable that he will ever stand a thorough preparation. He has never yet done any proper work, so harum-scarum statements about his supposed private gallops are altogether imaginative. Nothing is or can possibly be known about his racing merits either by his trainer or any one else. The successes of Common in 1891 have revived and stimulated the periodical craze for "dark" horses, and no doubt several will figure in the Derby betting before long, to the ultimate profit of the bookmakers.

THE A.R.A. AND AMATEUR OARSMEN.

A correspondent has put me into possession of all the facts relating to an agitation amongst a few oarsmen to amend the rule defining an Amateur as laid down by the Amateur Rowing Association. The rule so bristles with absurdities that it would be unjust to the A.R.A. not to quote it in full:—

Rule XI.—No person shall be considered an Amateur oarsman, sculler or coxswain: 1. Who has ever taken part in any open competition for a stake money or entrance fee. 2. Who has ever knowingly competed with or against a Professional for any prize. 3. Who has ever taught, pursued, or assisted in the practice of athletic exercises of any kind for profit. 4. Who has ever been employed in or about boats, or in manual labour for money or wages. 5. Who is or has been by trade or employment for wages, a mechanic, artisan, or labourer, or engaged in any menial duty.

I have italicised the words the reformers wish omitted. Before commenting on the rule, a little history will be useful as showing that the spirit of arrogant snobbery that framed the rule is still rampant. On November 11, a circular letter issued by the Marlow Club, and signed by the Captain, Walter Wethered, appeared in the Field. The letter asked for support in the Club's effort to induce the A.R.A. to change the rule referred to. The quiet and sober letter seemed to offer the Rowing Editor of the Field, Mr. Brickwood, or his subordinates, an opportunity for what, I suppose, he considers smart writing, I call it impertinence—unconscious, I trust. The article begins, "On first reading Mr. Wethered's letter of September 18, it occurred to us that the writer should properly have sent it to the Daily News or the Chronicle, and not to the Field—the country gentleman's newspaper (!)." If this style of writing delights the country gentleman he must be singularly wanting either in humour or in that liberal education which the writer denies Mr. Wethered, for he says, "Now any man who has had a liberal education must know that post hoc is not necessarily propter hoc, as Mr. Wethered seems to imply." Whatever the Marlow Captain's logical faculties may be, he is an old Etonian, and is probably as much a country gentleman as any other reader of that catalogue of athletic prowess and trade advertisements. The writer asks, "Is it possible that Mr. Wethered is the catspaw of the sympathisers with the N.A.R.A.?" I can tell Mr. Brickwood that he is neither a catspaw nor in sympathy with the N.A.R.A., but that he and others who are well known in rowing desire the change. So much for the article. Mr. Wethered wrote a reply. This was not published in the Field of November 18. There was a curt notice to the effect that he had written. He then wrote saying that it was not fair not to publish his reply. Then on November 25 the reply appeared. No apology from the country gentleman, but a note that reeked with supercilious condescension. "Mr. Wethered is very anxious that we should publish this letter, and as we have no wish to take any unfair advantage of him we give it space." Now, it must have struck anybody of even ordinary education that the reply gave in a most able way the salient features of the reformers' case, and from certain references it was tolerably clear that a high authority on rowing had assisted the writer. I am surprised that even a person of a liberal education of a kind that mistakes rudeness for wit could have been blind to this. Writing for country gentlemen must blunt the powers of observation.

Brandauer's Circular-Pointed Pens. Neither scratch nor spurt. Glide over the roughest paper with the ease of a soft lead pencil. A 6d. assorted sample box of any stationer.

To return to the rule. It is obvious that manual labour includes artisans, mechanics, or labourers. The phrase "menial duty" is one that disgraces any sporting rule. Briefly, the case for the reformers is that the rule is arbitrary and unfair, and introduces unnecessary social distinctions. Such a rule is found in no other legislation in any kind of sport either here or abroad. I shall deal in detail with the reformers' case next week. There is a great deal of prejudice to be overcome. The country gentleman's newspaper flatters itself that it has squashed the reformers. But just as the country gentleman has had to be undeceived in other matters, his newspaper will now have to be disabused with reference to rowing.

Really golfers agitate themselves a great deal over rules and etiquette. I suppose they do not find the game itself sufficiently exciting. Just now the question of a caddie showing a blind hole is under discussion. Of course he may give the direct line, but his master should tell him to move before playing his stroke. If his master does not do so, he is guilty of a gross breach of etiquette, and the only course is not to play with that man again. There is one case when a caddie should not give the line, and that is when there is a well-known object to be played. For instance, in playing home at North Berwick, at one hole the cleek-shot from the tee, which ought to reach the green, is played straight at the Bass-rock.

The meeting of the London Athletic Club and Cambridge University was very interesting. The C.U.A.C. is the first club to lower the colours of the L.A.C. in these contests. Lutyens ran grandly in the mile, and he should lower the amateur record before long. Horan, in the three miles, ran to beat S. Thomas, and he did so. Thomas did not seem to have recovered from his race with Pearce. In the quarter Ovenden, of L.A.C., ran better than he ever has done and beat Lewin, who has to learn to run a fast quarter. Fitzherbert, the Freshman, is equally ignorant, and spoilt his chance by going too hard at first. Williams, a Freshman, ran well in the hundred. He has the advantage of coming to the University at an age when most men leave. The hammer was in the programme, and will be there until there is a new Treasurer of the C.U.A.C. This is the only reason I have for wishing the Rev. E. H. Morgan to resign.

Both the Universities brought off their trial eights last week. The Cambridge strokes were better than the Oxonians. At Ely there was a splendid race, while the one at Oxford was a farce. And yet the Dark Blues have all the best material. There is a perfect glut of heavy weights in their market. Stewart (who rowed five for the team at Henley), Tew, and Oakley are all fine oars well over thirteen stone, and Crum, captain of the Eton eight that won the Ladies', and Willimot, are above middle weight, and rowed well. In all probability, the Oxford eight will include:—Cotton (bow), Stewart (five), Pilkington (seven), Pitman (stroke), while the other three I have named will most likely get seats.

At Cambridge the lighter men rowed well, but there were no welter weights worth anything. Bieber and Mansfield might come on with a lot of care; Broadrick, Bland (an Eton fresher and a nephew of the Old Blues), the Barclays, Owen, and Game, who has put on weight during the Long, all rowed well. Both strokes showed coolness and pluck, but the loser scarcely rowed a fast enough stroke at first. The President had enough difficulty to get the eights together, owing to the other events on the river this term. He had only ten days with them. But this is nothing to what his troubles will be in finding a four, five, and six next term. Affairs look bad at Cambridge. Twelve of the sixteen oarsmen were from the Hall and Trinity, proving what I said the other week, that there was no rowing outside these Colleges. Jesus has now forsaken the river.

As to billiards, Diggle is improving rapidly. Peall gave him 500, and caught him the first afternoon by the help of two big breaks. Afterwards the younger player held his opponent, and finally won easily. In the monster match between Roberts and North, the champion has been irresistible. He has been making breaks of three figures with as much ease as any other player makes a break of twenty. There is no hesitation, and he and the marker have a merry race. A spot barred tournament, 12,000 up, on handicap terms, has been suggested between Roberts, Diggle, Dawson, Peall, North, and Mitchell. I should add Coles. But as the object is to find out who is the second best player, why not cut Roberts out and let the rest play level?

The hard ground on Saturday makes it impossible to say much of the Rugby players. A number of games were abandoned, and those who played had too much respect for their limbs to do much. I was glad to see Brooke, the Old Leysian, in form again. Association players were not so troubled. The Old Westminsters took a fairly strong team to Oxford, but the Dark Blues were too good for them. Smith did a lot of work forward for the University. I am sorry to see Sykes was hurt in the Casuals and Crusaders game. The victory of the Arsenal over West Bromwich was a great joy to the local supporters; but it was not a League match, and the visitors were not going to damage themselves on the hard ground.

MAMMON.

CONVINCED AGAINST HIS WILL.

THE following communication has reached me, amongst many others, concerning the latest performance of the Chartered of South Africa in springing upon their shareholders, and carrying at the recent meeting, the astounding arrangement with the United Concessions Company, Limited, by which a million Chartered shares will add more water to the capital of this stupendous undertaking. My correspondent is a shareholder in the Chartered Company, and is evidently at last "Convinced against his will":—

"I am not in accord with you in your general condemnation of the proceedings of the Chartered Company of South Africa, and I attended the great meeting of the Company last week fully prepared to find that the Directors would give sound reasons for inviting the shareholders to present the Rudd Concessionaires with a million shares in the Company's capital. I came away, however, entirely disappointed. Very little was said as to the merits of the proposal which we were assembled to consider. The Chairman scarcely alluded to it, the Duke of Fife let it alone altogether. The Company's Solicitor, who was put up to defend it, took care to skim lightly over all that was material, and to conceal the weak spot by a cloud of irrelevant observations. A large majority of the meeting evidently thought that any one who expressed dissatisfaction must be either a Radical or one of the hostile Concessionaires (the Matabeleland Company). All opposition was therefore shouted down, and the resolution carried with apparent unanimity, after one or two feeble protests. I venture to say that when the shareholders apply their minds instead of their prejudices to the matter, they will be surprised at their own want of judgment. They have voted an enormous price to buy up a charge on the Company's profits, alleged to have been created by an agreement, made no one knows when, or where, or by whom, and of which no minute or memorandum of any kind appears to exist. Was ever such a thing heard of before in business? I do not doubt that there was an understanding among the founders of the Company that those of them who held the Rudd Concession should be paid for making it over to the Company. But was it ever definitely agreed, as now alleged, that the payment should be not merely 50 per cent. of the profits earned under the concession, but 50 per cent. of all the profits that the Company should ever make from any and every source? This is the real question. If such an agreement was made, it is evident that it was one of the most reckless and improvident kind on the part of those who were acting on behalf of the Company. The shareholders were not bound by it until they confirmed it; and why should they have confirmed such an utterly unreasonable bargain? If the contract is binding on the Company, it is probably wise to buy off the lucky possessors of it in the way proposed; but not a shred of evidence was produced at the meeting that that particular arrangement (50 per cent. of all the profits wheresoever and howsoever acquired) was ever made by any one for whom the Company is in law or in honour responsible. The solicitor told us that if the agreement did not exist, we must be trespassers as against the Concessionaires; but as it is clear that we are working the concession with their full assent, this proposition is ridiculous, and is a sample of what goes down at a Company meeting even in the heart of the City of London. Of course, we must pay for the concession; but a million shares—worth at the market quotation more than a million sterling—is an extravagant price for the transfer of a nominal right which is at present, and for a long time is likely to be, wholly unproductive of profit. I have no interest whatever in the Matabeleland Company, but am

CITY SAFE DEPOSIT & AGENCY CO., LD., Throgmorton-avenue. Safes from 1 guinea and Strong Rooms from 15 guineas per annum. Cards to view on application to R. SLAGG, Manager.

A B.C.C. of S.A. Shareholder.

The Temple.

I fully agree with the writer, but why does he not see a little further? The so-called verbal agreement or understanding was made between Rhodes, Rudd, & Co., of the Chartered Company, and Rhodes, Rudd, & Co., of the United Concessions Company, Limited. I dare say the little deal suited the book of these gentlemen, and the shareholders, like a flock of sheep, followed their lead. But it is difficult to have much sympathy with shareholders in the Chartered Company. They are and will be fools for their pains.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

My dear Ben,—What I have been preaching for some considerable time has at last come about. Although delayed by a series of untoward events, which culminated in the partial breakdown of certain Trust Companies, a very substantial improvement has now set in. It has been most marked in American Railroad stocks and bonds, but nearly all the other markets, with the solitary exception of the Mining market, especially the Kaffir Circus, are better. Home Rails have shown a hardening tendency, and important advances are marked in Argentine, Uruguay, and Chilian bonds, the revival in the South American department, which I have repeatedly foreshadowed, thus showing indications of material progress. Less justified, but none the less a fact, is the remarkable strength exhibited by the Foreign market generally, while an important rise has also been initiated in various South American Railway securities. Gilt-edged securities have been in great request, the present buying movement emanating from investors. After a period of prolonged depression such as that through which we have passed, confidence is but slow to grow, and a demand for the high-class stocks generally precedes a movement in the second and third-class securities. Yet the last-named two classes present just now the best opportunities for profitable investment, having suffered most from the depreciation. Not that I advise promiscuous speculation in these. The development of a large "Bull" account in such stocks would be fraught with great danger as long as the markets retain any part of that nervousness which has been their characteristic until quite recently. But exceptional opportunities are still offering for purchasing such securities for investment at very low prices, and those who do so, paying for and taking up the stocks, will see a big profit on them at no distant date.

The Rise in High-class Stocks.

The deep-seated distrust amongst the public has yet further accentuated of late the disproportion between the present values of first-class and second-class securities, and the difficulties of investors to get a reasonable return upon their money with what they would consider safety, have thus further increased. Home Railway Debentures and first-rate Preference stocks, as well as English Corporation stocks, have risen to a level which allows of but the very inadequate return of say from 2⅞ to 3¼ per cent. Colonial Government stocks thereupon came into request, as yielding a better return, say from 3½ to 4 per cent., and the public were thus induced to overcome the distrust of such securities which the excessive borrowing of the Australian Colonies and the Australian Bank crisis had not unnaturally created. It would, however, be greatly to be deplored, if prices of these securities were to be pushed up to any great extent, as the Colonies would then be encouraged to fresh borrowing, while their only salvation lies in a policy of retrenchment. In order to facilitate to my readers the selection of well-secured stocks offering at least equal security, combined with a better yield, I drew up a list of nineteen stocks—chiefly Debentures—on October 19, and it is evident, from the active dealings which followed the publication of this table (since repeated in a different form), that investors were not slow to profit by it. Out of the nineteen stocks, thirteen have advanced from 1 to 5 points, as will be seen from the following comparison:—

	Price October 19.	Price December 4.
Antofagasta Railway Four per Cent. Debenture stock	93½	96
Antofagasta Railway Six per Cent. Guaranteed stock	101	106
Bank of New Zealand Estates Five and a-Half per Cent. Debenture stock	105	108
Chili 1893 Four and a-Half per Cent. bonds	73½	78
De Beers Mines Five and a-Half per Cent. Debentures	102	103½
Law Debenture Corporation Four per Cent. Debenture stock	103	101½xd.
Nitrate Railway Five per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures	95	97½
New Zealand Government Four per Cent. Inscribed stock	104½	106
A. & F. Pears, Limited, Five per Cent. Debenture stock	107	108
Trustees, Executors, &c., Corporation Four per Cent. First Debentures	95	99½
United Railways of Havana Five per Cent. First Mortgage bonds	92	93½
United States Debenture Corporation Four and a-Half per Cent. Debenture stock	90	93½
Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds (1925)	109	111

In consequence of the great improvement in the financial position in the United States, which has followed the repeal of the Sherman Silver Bill, investment in the bonds of American Railroads has also become more popular, and advances have already taken place in several of the three classes of these securities, of which I published a list last week. To this table, and to that of South American Railway Debentures published on November 23, I would specially invite the attention of my readers who are seeking sound and progressive investments.

Home Rails.

No disposition has, so far, been shown by holders of Home Railway stocks to part with the same, and prices have in most cases been maintained, while some, notably South-Western and Metropolitan Districts, have advanced. I have repeatedly pointed out that there is no reason for feeling "Bullish" on the position of Home Rails in view of the heavy losses which have fallen upon the lines through the disastrous coal strikes, but as holders have disregarded these losses, it is not likely that they will sell out now. It is at the same time necessary to consider the effect of this loss of traffic upon the dividends for the current half year. In this direction the estimates arrived at by a correspondent, which I append, will be found useful:—

The following estimate of the losses, direct and indirect, sustained by the following representative Railway Companies owing to the coal strike, now happily ended, may interest some of your readers. In most cases I have allowed for a saving of 33 per cent. in working expenses; but from the monthly state-

For Mutual Life Assurance. The Scottish Widows' Fund Society. Accumulated Funds £12,000,000. Special Notice. Assurances to participate in the next Division of Profits in respect of the year ending December 31, 1893, should be applied for Now. Full particulars of this great Mutual Life Office may be obtained on application to London Office, 28 Cornhill, E C

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

ments published by the London Brighton and South-Eastern Railways it is clear that in their cases, at any rate, diminished earnings have coincided with increased expenses:—

—	Amount required to pay 1 per cent. for the half-year on Ordinary stock.	Loss in gross revenue.	Estimated loss in nett revenue.	Estimated reduction of dividend per cent.
	£	£	£	£ s. d.
Great Eastern	62,864	157,382	104,921	1 13 6
Great Northern	89,620	251,041	167,361	1 17 6
Great Western	110,497	212,880	141,920	1 5 9
London, Brighton, & South Coast ...	40,187	78,688	78,688	1 19 6
London and North Western	197,412	436,641	291,094	1 9 6
London and South-Western	58,367	13,734	9,156	0 3 1
Midland	165,612	804,694	536,463	3 5 0

The Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway has also been a heavy loser, but that unfortunate Company will be unable to make any distribution at all either on its 1889 or 1891 Preference, while its ordinary stock is, of course, quite out of view of any dividend. The dividends on many of the above Companies will be further reduced by increased Pref. and pre-Pref. charges, but that, of course, does not fall to be considered in the scope of a letter such as this.

How far an improvement in the traffic for the remaining five weeks of the year will make up for some of these losses in consequence of a large coal business remains to be seen. As the passenger movement shows a falling-off, and will probably remain poor, too much must not be hoped for, and holders will therefore do well to prepare for a reduction in the dividend by approximatively the above amounts. That would mean, roughly, a dividend at the rate of 2 per cent. for the current half-year on Great Eastern, against 3½ per cent. in 1892; Great Western, 5¾ per cent., against 7; North-Western, 5¾-6 per cent., against 7¼ in 1892; South-Western, 7½ per cent., against 7¾ per cent. in 1892; and on Midlands, a dividend for the current half-year at the rate of 3½ to 3¾ per cent., against 6¾ per cent. for the second half of 1892. Such estimates, being based upon somewhat uncertain data, are not, of course, altogether reliable, but they give at least an indication of what is to come. My estimate of the dividends on Brighton "A" of 5½ per cent. for the year is still fairly correct. A substantial backwardation had again to be paid on this stock last settlement, and the name of one of the directors, Sir Julian Goldsmid, was passed for a considerable block. The making-up price was, moreover, 2 higher at 146¼, so that the Bears have not scored nothwithstanding their ceaseless efforts to depress prices. The course of prices in the near future will be governed altogether by the traffic returns, and it remains to be seen what the addition of a considerable coal business will do for the line. Should the coal strike, in Scotland come to an end, a revival in the stocks of the "Two Macs" would be on the cards.

Metropolitan Districts.

There was a time—when Metropolitan District Ordinary were in the forties—when I expressed myself very strongly on the folly of holding this stock, which had then not the ghost of a chance of a dividend, considering that even the prospects of the Preference stock were of the gloomiest. The Company had, in fact, passed through very bad times. The completion of the Inner Circle had brought nothing but disappointment, entailing, moreover, the issue of £1,250,000 of Four per Cent. Perpetual Guaranteed stock. Then followed, in 1885, the cutting of omnibus rates by the London Road Car Company, with the result that the Five per Cent. Preference stock occasionally did not receive a dividend; and, in fact, got none at all in 1889. Even the severe competition of the omnibuses was, however, eventually compensated to some extent by exhibition traffic, and the Company began to pull round again. From ½ per cent. in 1890 the dividend on the Prefs. rose in 1891 to 2½ per cent., and in 1892 to 3 per cent. The dividend for the current year will hardly work out to more than 2½ per cent., but the circumstances were exceptional. Better times appear now to be at hand. From December 1 the omnibus fares have been restored, and the effect upon the District Company should be very important. Early in 1894 Olympia will reopen with the Constantinople performance; the Earl's Court exhibitions are to be perpetuated, and a new line from Ealing to Harrow on the Hill is projected which would undoubtedly benefit the District Company; while the projected Central Electric Railway has for the present been shelved, it being obviously impossible to raise the capital for such an undertaking at present. With considerable traffic increases assured, the District Company has, therefore, better times before it. Nor is the Ordinary stock so very far off a dividend now. The interest on the £1,500,000 of Five per Cent. Preference stock requires a payment of £75,000 per annum. Of this 2½ per cent., or £37,500, will have been earned in 1893, leaving £37,500 to be made up before the full Preference interests can be met. It requires, therefore, little more than a traffic increase of £700 per week net to place the Ordinary stock within sight of dividends. Add to this that there is no "Bull" account, that stock is scarce in the market, and that a strong "Bull" syndicate has been formed, who will, I am told, take up all their purchases, and it is not surprising that the price of Districts has advanced to 28. They touched 39 in 1889, when no dividend on the Prefs. was paid, and were quoted as high as 43 in 1887, 60 in 1885, 72 in 1884, and 85 in 1880. There is here a considerable margin for improvement, and I should not be surprised to see a sharp rise any day.

A Rise in Yankee Stocks.

A further marked advance has been established in the whole active list of American Railroad stocks, extending to over 4 points in Louisville, 3¼ in Atchison Second Mortgage Bonds and Union Pacifics, and 2 in Milwaukees, all of which are stocks specially recommended by me last week. The upward movement was engineered from the other side of the Atlantic, but it was well responded to here by some large operators and by a moderate amount of public buying. On the Stock Exchange this sharp movement appears to have caused some dismay. The jobbers make wry faces, for those who were not on the "Bear" tack were certainly not "Bull," and they do not, therefore, benefit by the rise. But they had plenty of notice of what was coming, and they have their own confirmed pessimism to blame for their disappointment. The favourable October statements of the Atchison and Louisville lines created a very favourable impression. The former was a most unpleasant surprise for the "Bears," and the circumstance that the gross decrease of 388,600 dols. of the Louisville and Nashville for October worked out to a net decrease of 127,678 dols. was also encouraging. Traffics in the near future will, perhaps, but slowly improve, as the uncertainty respecting the fate of the new Tariff Bill may curtail business. I should not, however, be surprised if this reform were pushed through much more quickly than is generally expected, as President Cleveland will evidently throw his whole influence into the scale. Then there is the question of the various projected reorganisations, especially of those of the Erie and Union Pacific. The report that the Union Pacific sub-Committee was considering the issue of a 2 per cent. "blanket" mortgage for the Company's Government debt, seemed to suggest that Mr. Pierpont Morgan had come to some preliminary understanding with the Government respecting its attitude to the Union Pacific. Another statement transmitted by the usually well-informed New York correspondent of the Financial News, that the Louisville had paid off on Friday last the loan made in July against the 22,000 shares, with option of sale at 65, and that the stock had been returned into the treasury, indicates a distinct improvement in the financial position of this Company, and fully bears out my recent remarks. An encouraging feature is the statement made in the American Press that since the repeal of the Sherman Silver Bill not less than five of the largest iron mines on the Lake Superior ranges have resumed operations or given notice of intention to do so.

Fur-lined Overcoats, Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

The Managers of the Norrie Mine attribute their resumption directly to repeal. The mines are the Minnesota, on the Vermillion iron range, which in prosperous times employs 5,000 men; the Norrie, on the Gogebic range; two shafts of the Lake Superior, on the Marquette range; besides one or two smaller ones. With regard to any selection to be made for investment, I still hold to the view that amongst the dividend-payers Milwaukee, Louisville, and Atchison Second Mortgage bonds, and amongst the low-priced securities Erie, Ohio, Missouri, Kansas and Texas, Union Pacifics, and Denvers are the most promising for a rise, but it will be advisable to buy on reactions, which cannot fail to make their appearance. Denver Prefs. have risen as much as 2 points, the shares ½, and there seems a reasonable prospect of this Company in time retrieving its fortunes again. The publication of the October working statement of the Atchison Topeka and Santa Fé, showing a gross decrease of 333,639 dols., and a net increase of 99,637 dols., created a very favourable impression. I am told that the temporary weakness of the Second Mortgage "A" bonds some weeks ago was caused by the changing of their investments by Boston holders, who were tempted to go into other Atchison bonds, and also into Colorado Midland Fours, which now have risen to 47 on advices that these will be benefited by the general improvement in Colorado. I do not think well of the exchange, but what is still more anomalous is that investors should buy the Four per Cent. General Mortgage bonds at 79, yielding only about $5\frac{3}{16}$ per cent. on the investment, while the Six per Cent. Guarantee Fund Notes, which rank ahead of the General Mortgage bonds, stand only at 97, yielding therefore $7\frac{3}{8}$ per cent. per annum, when the profit on redemption in five years at 103 is considered. It is true that the certificates of the Guarantee Fund Notes are for not less than 5,000 dols., but there are capitalists enough who can take that amount as a minimum, when so advantageous an exchange can be effected. A very active demand has made itself felt for bonds, and in the list which I gave last week Denver and Rio Grande Four per Cent. First Consolidated Mortgage bonds have risen 3 to 85; Louisville Unified Four per Cents., 2 to 80; Denver Four per Cent. Improvement bonds, 6 to 75; and Erie Second Mortgage bonds, 3 to 80. One of the cheapest gilt-edged bonds is undoubtedly the new Baltimore and Ohio South-Western Four-and-a-Half per Cent. First Consolidated Mortgage, guaranteed by the Baltimore and Ohio at ½ premium on the issue price of 101. Fifteen per cent. is paid up, and 43 per cent. is payable on December 18, 43 per cent. on January 10, 1894, while interest commenced on November 1, 1893. The security of this bond is excellent, and it is well suited for permanent investment. Grand Trunks are being kept down by the large accident and working expenses, and by the fact that the traffic decreases, which I predicted, have already made their appearance, but Canadian Pacifics are distinctly better, considerable buying orders having been received from Montreal.

Argentines and Other South Americans.

The Committee of the Argentine Chamber of Deputies has passed the Romero-Rothschild convention, and it may, therefore, be assumed that the ratification by Congress will not be delayed much longer. That, at least, is the market view, as indicated by a fresh rise of from 2 to 3 in Argentine Government bonds. The most important point for investors to watch now is the position of the Argentine guaranteed railways, as the Minister of Finance, Señor José Terry, has expressed himself unmistakably to the effect that he will settle these guarantees as soon as ever the Rothschild convention is ratified. That means a large amount of arrears to be paid to these Companies, and probably a composition of the future guarantee payments in Government bonds, in which case a sharp rise in all these railway stocks may be anticipated. The tap, which has been on in Uruguay bonds, appears at last to have run dry, and the price has risen sharply 3 to 36½. Buying orders have come from Montevideo, and a further important advance is expected. Mexican Government Six per Cent. bonds have risen again to 69½, the issue of a loan of £3,000,000 by Messrs. Bleichroeder and the group of bankers connected with them being expected in January. Peruvian Corporation stocks, on the other hand, have been weak on various rumours. The Directors' report, which has just been issued, is unfavourable, but it contains nothing which was not already known. Costa Rica and Venezuela bonds are also better, and a strong recovery of from 2 to 3 has taken place in Chilian bonds. Affairs in Chili appear to be improving, which ought to benefit the various undertakings carried on in that country, and especially Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Guaranteed Six per Cent. stock, now quoted 106. The position in Brazil does not appear to approach a solution yet, but Brazilian bonds are better. Continental Government stocks are keeping their price remarkably well. It is evident that Italians are being "pegged," or else the suspension of the Credito Mobilaire, following upon the Bank scandals, would have smashed this market. The position in Greece continues very doubtful.

The Kaffir Circus.

The operators, who have been "Bulling" Chartered shares, are bitterly disappointed that, notwithstanding all the victories, the shares remain weak at 22s. They are realising what it means to play with cards which the insiders are able to shuffle at their own sweet will. There are, however, signs of an incipient improvement in Randt Gold Mining shares, in sympathy, chiefly, with the greater activity of other departments. It is hardly probable that the November output will again top the October crushings, but the position of the leading Witwatersrand Mines is in itself so favourable that no record crushings are wanted to justify a rise. What is chiefly against them is the distrust, with which the manipulations of certain big financiers connected with South Africa are viewed. These men appear to be determined to "best" the public whenever an opportunity presents itself. Some of the "Bear" reports are subsiding, after having done their part, and properties which have been attacked in the most unscrupulous manner are stated, on official information, to be in a very different condition from that which was alleged by the rumour-mongers. Thus the news from the Glencairn Gold mine is to the effect that there is no difficulty in the finances, that the output is expected by February to reach 4,000 oz. of gold, and that the large cyanide plant is in course of erection. The shares have thereupon recovered to 26s.—still a very low price in view of the great prospects of this mine. New Rietfontein have recovered to 2⅞, and Crown Reefs and Robinson have been a strong market. Latest cablegrams from the Geldenhuis Deep Mine state that the Main Reef has been struck 8 ft. wide, and that it assays 16¾ pennyweights. This is very encouraging for Deep Level properties generally, and lends strength to my remarks of a week ago concerning the cheapest of these, viz., the South Simmer and Jack, the shares in which now stand at 21s. Amongst Diamond shares De Beers are steady, but Jagersfontein are depressed, operators being very distrustful of the manipulation of these shares. Holders of shares in Transvaal Land Companies are waxing very impatient. Last week I gave expression to the disappointment of Oceana shareholders, who are temporarily deprived of their dividend in Coal shares. This week I have received several communications concerning the Transvaal Lands Company. One of my correspondents sends me a very long criticism of the management of this concern, for which I cannot, unfortunately, find space. He complains of wasteful management, and insists that expenses should be kept down while a waiting game has to be played, the only compulsory payments being a fee of £2 per farm payable to the Transvaal Government, say about £165 a year, and some further expenses for completing the Government survey of about twenty-seven of the farms. Directors will do well to take heed of these complaints, if they will not get into worse trouble with the shareholders than they had at the recent meeting. I am afraid that shareholders of the Transvaal Estates and Development Company will not either find much to encourage them in the report just issued, as there is a small adverse balance of £360 for the year, but there is evidence of the directors trying to keep expenses down, and, after all, the value of the properties of all these Land Companies in the Transvaal is steadily improving, and, in the end, the shareholders will, no doubt, realise a big profit on the price at which the properties stand in their accounts. At the meeting of the Oceana Development Company, the distribution of 23,000 shares in the Coal Company was duly authorised, so that there is nothing now in the way for the Oceana Directors to also declare a similar bonus. I have received the following communication from a correspondent who writes from Glasgow, signing himself "Jacob":

Glasgow, November 30, 1893.

It may be worth mentioning that the Cassel Gold Extracting Company of Glasgow, Limited—the parent Company of the African Gold Recovery Company—are distributing to their shareholders in the way of a dividend, amongst other shares, 10,000 shares of the African Gold Recovery Company. This is the weight that has been resting on the Recovery Company for some time, and accounts undoubtedly for the moderate price of the shares of the Company. Each holder of twenty Cassel shares will get one share in the Recovery Company, so that we will see 10,000 shares of a Company split up into "lots" of two, three, four, five, and perhaps as many as ten to twenty to some few holders. Anything might be expected of the Cassel Company's directors, but that the Recovery Company's directors should have so little care for its shareholders is passing strange. Of course, the bulk of these shares will probably be sold; so an opportunity may offer itself for any one to get possession of a good holding in the Recovery Company at an extremely low price. Under the circumstances, it is not clear how low the price may go.

This, then, is the explanation of the persistent sales of African Gold Recovery shares, which took place some time ago, probably on the part of insiders who knew what was coming.

The Jarvis-Conklin Trust.

It appears from a notice which has been sent to the Press that "the Committee of English representatives of the Jarvis-Conklin Mortgage Trust Company, consisting of Messrs. T. R. Wilkinson, McLean Brodie, J. Arthur Binns, Sir Eyre Massey Shaw, and E. J. Chappel, who were invited to confer with the receivers of the Company, are now on their way to England, and that particulars of the proposed plan of reorganisation will be issued at an early date." This announcement does not appear to have been very favourably received by the Debenture-holders, chiefly because the Committee appears to be entirely self-appointed, while some of them are, no doubt, as shareholders or officials personally interested in some form of reorganisation being carried out. From a number of letters, which have reached me, I select the following for publication:—

Bournemouth.

I am going to invoke your powerful aid in behalf of myself and several other ladies who are Debenture-holders in the Jarvis-Conklin Company. We were always under the impression that our interests were secured by the placing of mortgages in the hands of trustees. We now find that these mortgages have not been assigned to the trustees, nor registered in their names, and are, therefore, an incomplete security according to American law. We also find that Messrs. Jarvis and Conklin have been appointed sole receivers, not only of the general affairs of the Company, but on behalf of these very Debentures, on account of which trusts were set up to meet the very contingency which has arisen, viz., the absolute failure of the operations conducted by these gentlemen. In the daily papers there is a notice to the effect, that certain self-appointed gentlemen who crossed the ocean a week or so ago to examine into the affairs of the Company, are coming back with a scheme of reorganisation in their pockets. It seems to me that as a Debenture-holder, I have no interest in any scheme of which the repayment to me of the money which I have lent the Company does not form a part. It also seems clear to me that our best chance of getting our money out of these mortgages is to have a receiver appointed on our behalf, and not trust to Jarvis and Conklin, who are responsible for the present state of affairs. I have great confidence in your judgment, so advise us.

I am glad to see that my lady correspondent has a very clear head for business. Her suggestion is quite correct and fully justified. The Company has come to grief through the want of foresight of Messrs. Jarvis and Conklin, and there are rumours that the collapse came about through dealing in the stocks of and guaranteeing the bonds of Western enterprises, of which the members of the Committee can know but very little. There is only one course to be taken by the Debenture-holders—viz., they should insist upon the appointment, in their interest and on their behalf, of an English receiver, and they should have nothing to do with a cut-and-dried reorganisation scheme. Very large amounts of Debentures have been persistently worked off in this country, much against my views, which I have freely imparted to all those who have sent inquiries. If there is need of a Committee, half of its members should be appointed by the English Debenture holders. But the latter should require a great deal more information than the self-appointed Committee can give and a good deal of independent testimony, before agreeing to any scheme of reconstruction. In fact, if I were a Debenture holder, I should want to be paid off!

Miscellaneous Mines.

Indian Mining shares have maintained the firmer tendency which they have shown of late, Champion Reefs gaining ½, on hopes of the declaration of a dividend, while South East Mysore, Balaghat, and Nine Reefs scored smaller improvements. Amongst Australian Mines New Queen and Craven's Caledonia (Charter's Towers) have improved, while Carringtons are the turn easier, further advices being awaited from the mine respecting the prospect of the work. The output of the Mill's Day Dawn United for the fortnight was 1,719 oz. of gold, from 1,835 tons, and a dividend of 3d. per share has been declared. The news from the Western Australia Goldfields remains favourable, but that is no reason why investors should subscribe without the most careful investigation to a new Company, the "Western Australian Goldfields, Limited," the prospectus of which is being circulated privately, even though the names of relatives of members of the West Australian Government are on the prospectus. American Mines have been steady, and slight advances are shown in several instances. Columbian Hydraulics are up 2s., Achilles ⅛, but Frontinos are lower. There has been an inquiry for the shares in the new Idaho Exploring Company, the 5s. shares, 4s. 8d. paid, being quoted 6d. to 9d. During the week a large number of advertisements have appeared from an outside broking "corporation," advising a purchase of West Argentines at 2s. Those who have bought at that figure have paid too much, as the shares throughout hee week have been obtainable in the Stock Exchange at 1s. 7½d. I have to remind Mr. Charles Harrison Smith, the liquidator of the unfortunate Ida Gold Mining Company, that the shareholders are expecting the fulfilment of the promise of the Directors that part of their money should be returned. The calls were forced in with the utmost rigour in September. I must now request the liquidator to make a statement as to when he will make a payment to the shareholders.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

J. W. B.—1. Thanks for the West Australian, but I have nothing to withdraw of my comments. 2. I can say nothing as to the dividend being paid by the Newspaper Company in question, but I should sell the shares if I had got them. Cheltenham.—The remark that there was an ever-running tap in Uruguay bonds means that, whenever there was any demand it was at once satisfied by some large seller, who was apparently too weak to hold. This "tap" appears at last to have dried up, and the price is now moving upwards. Hold both Uruguay Government bonds and Railway stocks. The Crown Reef is a good South African mine, and the shares should be held. R. M. K.—It is an exaggeration, but there is no doubt that Argentine Government bonds will further improve when the Rothschild convention has been ratified. As regards the Trusts, await the course of events, but do not support the wreckers. W. C. S., Alexandria.—You should hold all these stocks—they should recover again; but you have been very unfortunate. Moonstone.—The "Moniteur des Tirages Financiers," Place Richelieu, Paris, contains the list of drawings of French Lottery bonds. The subscription is 4 francs a year and postage.

Feeding Dogs.—Prof. Woodroffe Hill, F.R.C.V.S., writes: "A sound, well-balanced canine dietary is the secret of success with 'Spratt's Patent.' I have no hesitation in asserting, with regard to biscuit diet, Spratt's Fibrine Cake is far and away the best in the English market. Some of the dog biscuits I have examined might be composed of pipeclay and sawdust for the nutritive properties they possess. Cheap and dirty means expense and disease." See each "Dog Cake" is stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "X." This is all important.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

B.H., Birmingham.—I cannot undertake to send extracts from Truth to any one. If you read the paper regularly you will soon see my view of outside stockbrokers. Peruvian.—Hold the Peruvian Debentures, and see under "Foreigners and South Americans." Tutissimus.—I never have liked this concern, and you should have no more to do with it, if you can insure elsewhere. Try the Law Debenture Corporation. Once Bitten.—You are quite right to be careful. The Union Bank of London (a) and the National Provincial Bank of England (c) are both high-class Banks, and perfectly safe. The Bank marked b has stood a severe ordeal well, but it cannot compare with the above-mentioned two in solidity. Yes, the Society in question would affect the Bank b. Bess.—Better hold Middlesbrough Lands now. F. D. P.—Thanks. It is really time that Mrs. A. Gordon Edwardes, of Avondale, 30, Regent's Park-road, N.W., should cease her efforts at unloading Founder's shares in the Alliance Financial Company, Limited, upon the public. If she does not, she will get herself into trouble. The letter you sent is one of many of absolutely the same contents which are reaching me from all sides. In my opinion these shares are worthless. Highlander.—It is a wealthy American Life Office and at present quite safe, but you must be aware that American institutions are not quite so reliable for a permanency as English ones. Bess.—No, there is no such book. But surely your friend's solicitor or stockbroker will know. An Old Reader.—The rule of outside brokers dealing on the tape prices on the cover system is, as you no doubt are aware, that a correction on the tape cancels the deal. I am afraid you have no remedy. A Reader of Truth for Years.—1. I should say that there is no risk in the transaction referred to, but I do not like the concern. 2 and 3. When you are dealing with outside brokers, you must be very careful. The firms in question appear, however, to fulfil their engagements at present. A. W., Metropole.—1. Hold the Trust stocks, they are recovering. 2. Hold for a recovery.

Home Rails.

A. C. D. As a speculative purchase I consider Metropolitan Districts the most promising. The course of Caledonians will depend upon the settlement of the coal strike in Scotland, and Brighton "A" will be governed in the near future by traffics. I gave my views of American Rails likely to advance last week, and a sharp rise has since taken place, especially in those named by me. You should read my remarks under Yankee Rails regularly. Certainly hold Bell's Asbestos.

American and Foreign Rails.

Feg.—Nitrate Rails have had a considerable rise, and are somewhat speculative. At 16 they yield, on the basis of a continued 20 per cent. dividend, 12½ per cent. per annum, but the fresh reduction in the tariff is an unfavourable point. W. M.—No reason to sell any American Rails now, even though Nos. 1 and 4 are not the happiest selection. I do not like No. 2, but as they are insured, there is no reason to sell now. Certainly hold Mexican Four per Cent. Gold bonds (3); they have had a marked recovery. Hold also No. 5. Parachute.—You should hold the Prefs. No. 1 for a further recovery; they will eventually probably secure a dividend again, although not just yet. I do not like No. 2 at all. Sell if you can. It is most unfortunate that you got into this Company. Quintilian.—Yes; I should hold both No. 1 a and b, but I do not see any reason for buying more, as a better selection can be made. Certainly hold the American Rails No. 2 a and b, also Canadian Pacifics (2*a*). For the investment of the £1,000 in question, I should prefer to your selection No. 3 a, b, and c, a purchase of Six per Cent. Atchison Five-year Guarantee Fund Notes at 97, an excellent security, redeemable after five years at 103, and therefore yielding 7¾ per cent. per annum on the investment. You cannot get less than certificates of 5,000 dols. or £1,000. J. L. B.—I drew up the list of three classes of American Railroad bonds published in last week's issue as the best selection to be made just now. The bonds mentioned by you should be held for a recovery. They are not, of course, gilt-edged, but should also improve. W. M., Chelsea.—You should have nothing to do with the Special Guaranteed Trusts of Bond, Fraser, & Co., of Broad-street Buildings, or with those of any other syndicate touts, against whom I am continually warning my readers. A. B. C.—All your American Railroad stocks Nos. 1 9 ought to be held. If you were to sell out now with a view to getting in again, you might have to pay a good deal more. I mentioned the stocks I like best last week, and I do so again in to-day's letter. Bedford Park.—Hold the American Rails, they are likely to improve with the rest of the market. These remarks about a reconstruction of the Grand Trunk are absurd. At present price hold the Guaranteed. W. B. L.—Affairs in Spain are not prospering. That is the chief reason for the fall. Snow.—This interest will no doubt be provided under the reorganisation scheme, which is being talked of, and you should certainly hold the bonds. 2. No, you should hold the Denver Fours, they have already improved. Hold also Nos. 3 and 4. Advocate.—I should certainly hold the Brazilian Railway bonds. Whenever the civil war comes to an end, there will be a sharp recovery. Old Soldier.—You will find that this kind of bankers' advice is very unreliable. Hold your Mexicans by all means. All danger is past, and they will go higher. I say again, sell the Home Railway stock and re-invest in the stocks mentioned. As it is, Argentine Funding are already up to 71½, and you could have bought materially lower. Urquhart.—No. 1 is to be exchanged for Four and a Half per Cent. new bonds, now quoted 101½, but I expect a considerable advance also of Nos. 2 3. For your re-investment you might select from the first-class stocks which I mention again to-day under "The Rise in High-class Stocks." Omega.—Yes, you would do well to make the re-investment into Nos. 1 and 2. With regard to No. 3, this Debenture stock has paid only 3½ per cent. for the last year, but will in another year probably pay the full 5 per cent., and should, therefore, also suit you, if you want it for permanent investment. It is an English Company, and you might send for the Directors' report, just issued. London offices, Dashwood House, Old Broad-street, E.C.

Mining Shares.

Ponto.—Hold both Mining shares, they will no doubt improve again. Borderer.—1. These Lottery bonds are but a poor investment, and you should under no circumstances deal through the firm mentioned, who will charge you from 20 to 40 per cent. above the market price. 2. Be very careful; Mining Companies formed privately for working goldfields are dangerous. I know nothing of the concern mentioned. Rad.—Advices from the mine are favourable. Hold, but do not average yet. H. S., Hull.—The unfavourable reports concerning the Glencairn Mine have been officially contradicted, and you should hold your shares, as prices will greatly improve eventually. See under "The Kaffir Circus." Odonto.—There has been protracted depression in the Mining Market, but, now that the other departments are reviving, a recovery is probably not far off. You should hold all your eight different shares for a rise. Hold also Peruvian Debentures. N. N.—Kimberley Roodepoort, Carringtons, Craven's Caledonia, Zouts and Balkis, ought all to be held for a recovery. Camp.—Hold Nos. 1 and 2 for an improvement. I do not know the manufacturing concern No. 3. You might risk holding Barrett's Berlyn Gold (4). Hold United Main Reef (5) for an improvement. Forbes Reef (6) are saleable only at about sixpence. Hold! Which issue of No. 7 do you mean? H. C. E.—Despite the "puffing" by outside brokers, West Argentine (1) may be a fair venture for a small sum of money. The "puffers" say the price is 2s. This is not so, as during the whole week the "House" dealers have been sellers at 1s. 7½d. No. 2 are a fair venture. Nine Reefs (3) will probably improve in price during the next few months. Yes; the American Rails No. 4 will probably take a jump. Speranza.—1. New Chimes have had a big tumble in price. Hold for a higher figure. 2. Buffelsdoorn are a very promising share. 3. No reason to sell now. Do so after a rise. 4. Yes; both should improve now. 5. Certainly keep New Primrose. The next dividend will be declared on December 31. M. S., Chesterfield-street.—The best thing is to let that wretched concern, the French Bob Extension Gold Mining Company, die! Sharcholder.—The rumours respecting the Glencairn have been officially denied. See under "The Kaffir Circus," and hold. R. S., Cavendish-square.—Hold Kimberley Roodepoort, they will recover with the other markets. Ben.—Hold; they have fallen with the rest of the Kaffir market. S. R. P.—Yes; South Simmer and Jack are a good purchase for a smart rise. Aaron.—There is no option but to hold both Nos. 1 and 2, they will recover with the rest of the market. Robinson.—Certainly not; you should hold, this mine is likely to do well. Thackeray.—Yes; these Deep Mining Levels are a fair mining speculation. A Reader of Truth, Birmingham.—Hold Poormans. You will find a comment on No. 1 under "Miscellaneous Mines." Nos. 3, 4, and 5 are fair mining risks, but no catch. I do not care for No. 6. W. O., Pwllheli.—New Primrose ought to stand much higher. The mine is doing well, and the only reason, why the price is so low, is the general depression in the mining market.

Industrial Companies.

P. B. P.—Hold the Brewery Prefs. for a recovery. Carrig.—These shares are very cheap, and pay good dividends. I do not see any reason for selling. Aston Magna.—1. I do not like this Syndicate at all, and should advise you to sell at once, if you can. 2. A fair investment, but I should prefer Milwaukees or Atchison Second Mortgage "A" bonds. Nemo.—Hold Johannesburg Waterworks shares, and see remarks under "Various Investments." R. D.—The course of events has been very disappointing, but the shares should be held now. Mountain.—Hold No. 1. I do not care much for No. 2. I suppose that the Coal stock, No. 3, is likely to recover now. Hold No. 4. There seems a prospect of further recovery of No. 5.

Mixed Investments.

Darlington.—1. These Preference shares are all right now, but it is an industrial concern, dependent upon advertising and fashion, and therefore not suitable for permanent investment. 2. Mexican Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds are a good investment, but they have just risen five points. Loxfield.—1. Affairs in Australia will only slowly improve, and the recovery of the Company in which you are interested must, therefore, also be slow. It will be preferable to hold some time and sell on an improvement. 2. No reason to sell the American Rails now. Hold. A reconstruction of the Erie Company would help them materially. 3. Hold for a recovery, then sell! Peter.—You should hold Mexican National (1); the line is doing well. No reason to sell No. 2-4, which are improving; or No. 5. I consider No. 6 a good investment. With patience you will probably get a return on your Copper shares.

Major Howe & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13½ Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

Various Investments.

Silver has declined slightly during the past week, being quoted fractionally below 32d., and rupee paper has also receded, the sales of India Council bills having fallen off again. Mexican rails have improved moderately, in sympathy with Mexican Government bonds, it being suggested that Messrs. Bleichroeder would not have undertaken the new loan, if trade was not improving and prospects brighter in the country. This could, however, only have a bearing on the First Prefs. The Mexican National Railway is, according to a consular report just published, apparently doing very well considering the bad times. The Bi-metallic League want me to announce that they have opened City offices at 26, Lombard-street, under the management of their general secretary, Mr. Henry McNoel. I herewith fulfil their wish, although I am not in accord with the views of these good people. I am receiving numerous communications from victims of the rotten concerns promoted by Jabez Balfour and his crew. The following, from "A Sufferer," is a specimen of these bitter complaints:—

"A demand for payment of a call of £5 per share in the House and Land Investment Trust Company has now been issued, and I do not feel like paying it without an indignant protest. It has been proved that for years before the issue of these shares the whole concern was being kept up by a system of fraud, and that there was neither likelihood nor expectation at the time that the promises made to accepting shareholders would be fulfilled; therefore there can be no justice in the law that permits further robbery on the too trustful victims of this gigantic swindle. Is it possible that a proceeding so unjust can be enforced? If so, it is time, laws were altered and some connection established between law and upright dealing. If some high in authority and position had suffered a little of what we humbler individuals have done, I believe means would have been found to make the arch-deceiver, Jabez S. Balfour, surrender to the last penny, instead of fattening and luxuriating amidst costly surroundings on the spoils he has stolen from those who are enduring retrenchments, cruel pinching, and starvation at home.

I am exceedingly sorry for the poor victims of that scoundrel, Jabez Balfour, and his confederates, and I trust that means will yet be found to bring him to justice. As to others implicated, the Attorney-General's answer in the House appears to foreshadow some action by the Public Prosecutor. But redress, I am afraid, is out of the question. With regard to the House and Land Investment Trust I may, however, mention that my suspicions were aroused years ago, and although I had no proof of roguery, I have consistently advised all those who made inquiries not to have anything to do with it. The affairs of Trust Companies are simmering down, the shareholders apparently commencing to see that it is not to their interest to encourage the shrieking fraternity. As a consequence, Trustee and Executors' Corporation shares have improved to 5¾ discount, and there has been an almost general recovery in Trust stocks. At the same time it will never do, to acquiesce in all the proposals of Directors with the meekness, with which the shareholders of the Foreign and Colonial Debenture Corporation have assented to amalgamation with the Debenture Corporation without any investigation of the real state of affairs, accepting blindly the huge loss resulting from this operation. It really looks as if Mrs. Greenhough's pungent remark at the meeting of the General Assets Company that the "t" should be left out of the title of the Company, thus constituting it a Company of "General Asses," was of very general application in the dealings of shareholders with their Directors. I wish there were more Mrs. Greenhoughs in the City to object, as she did, to being "led like sheep by a shepherd who does not seem to guide them safely." By the way, a correspondent, in referring to some recent remarks of my esteemed colleague "The Linkman" as to the West End having travelled down east to the City to make money, but that it had returned ruined, ventures to opine that the less West Enders say about that the better. He says there was no need to travel to the City for that purpose. Ladies in want of investments had but to go to their West End Bankers to be advised to put their money into the stocks of a certain Trust Company. These investors, says my correspondent, now find that the brokers who advised them through their bankers were brokers to the Trust Company, and their principal partner a Director of the same. It seems that the West end is no longer to have a monopoly of successful Music Halls, as it is rumoured that the Directors of the Eastern Empire Music Hall will shortly announce a first quarterly dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum. It appears that the actual profits are largely in excess of this figure, the hall, which was opened early in August, having become very popular in its own thickly populated neighbourhood. The capital has been kept down to the moderate figure of £20,000 in shares of £5 each, fully paid, and there is a mortgage charge of £16,100. The bulk of the Company's property is freehold, and the shares, which are quoted 4¾ 5¼, are commencing to attract attention. The opening of the City Safe Deposit at No. 15, Throgmorton avenue, E.C., on Tuesday, places a splendidly fitted-up building at the disposal of stock-brokers and other City men, and I fancy they will not be slow in availing themselves of the facilities offered. I shall have more to say on this subject next week. I see that the Financial Times devotes a well-reasoned article to the discussion of the position of the Johannesberg Waterworks Company, and, while leaving open the question of the water supply in view of possible competition, comes to the conclusion that as an Estate Company alone "it is quite conceivable that the Company possesses a landed property which, lying in the midst of a flourishing gold-field with a long life before it, may be regarded as of great and improving value," and that "those must be possessed of strange ideas of relative worth who consider that the shares of a Company owning an estate in a flourishing urban district are dear at 15s." I have received from Messrs. F. C. Mathieson & Sons, of 16, Copthall-avenue, E.C., a copy of a useful compilation containing a list of principal Railways, Corporations, &c., whose securities are eligible for investment by Trustees, unless expressly forbidden by the instrument (if any) creating the Trust and the clauses, under the Provisions of the Trustee Act, 1893. This list will be found very handy by Trustees. I cannot advise my readers to invest their money in "Venice, Limited." I never much like investments of this description, having in my mind several that have turned out anything but fortunate ventures to their shareholders. And in this case I think that the idea has already been worked for all it is worth. "Venice" in London was an undoubted success, though hardly as great a one as some people have been led to believe. The somewhat similar performance that was run in Chicago also drew large receipts—but whether these large receipts also meant large profits it is difficult to say. If they did, then I am surprised that its promoters do not themselves run this new "Venice" in Paris instead of appealing to the public for funds. Out of the £150,000 capital asked for £75,000 is to go as purchase-money to the "vendors and promoters." I see that the Pall Mall Gazette suggests that less than £10,000 was originally paid for what £75,000 is now asked. Of this I know nothing, but until such a statement is officially contradicted, and until the same paper's other criticisms respecting the working capital are proved to be incorrect, I strongly counsel my readers to keep their money in their own pockets. "Diamonds and Gold in South Africa" is the title of a book on these subjects by Theodore Reunert (London: Edward Stanford), which contains much interesting information on the Diamond and Gold Fields of that part of the world.—Your affectionate uncle,

MOSES.

P.S., Tuesday.—The reaction which has taken place in the American market is a healthy one, and will, no doubt, in due time be followed by an improvement. Such setbacks afford the opportunity for purchases. There is certainly nothing in the manly tone of President Cleveland's message to Congress to justify any misgivings. The Mining Market is hardening, City and Suburban, Geldenhuis, and New Primrose now having taken up the running.

House Drainage.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

The Densmore.—The World's Greatest Typewriter. Now adopted in the highest and most experienced quarters. Guaranteed to give satisfaction.—51, Gracechurch-street, London, E.C.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

A COUP DE THÉÂTRE.

"WHAT, rehearsing alone?" cried Margaret Arnott, as, coming in unannounced, she surprised her old schoolfellow, Clara Rendall, apparently talking to herself. The young lady, however, was merely reading out in a pompous voice the address on an envelope she held in her hand, changing the "Esquire" at the end to an initial "Mrs." Clara faced round, blushing and disconcerted. Being, however, a singularly cool and collected young person, she recovered herself instantly and cried lightly, "Rehearsing? Yes, and no. For my part in our theatricals—no. For my part in life—yes. Listen!" And then she recited with exaggerated unction:—

MRS. RICHARD CHOLMONDELLY SPRAGG,
Northumberland House,
Empress Gardens, W.

"How does that go?" she asked, somewhat offensive-defensively.

"Whom does it go to?"

"Me," retorted Clara, defiantly, looking straight in her friend's face, but colouring in spite of her bravado. "Note it, my dear, for my future address."

"Clara! You—you have not accepted Mr. Spragg?"

"That is just what I have done."

"But, Mr. Berkley!"

"Heigho! Poor George!" Clara answered with a sigh, looking down at a letter she had just put into an envelope. "Poor old George!" she reiterated. "And poor me, for that matter."

"Why? What has happened?"

"Nothing has happened; that's just it. Nothing has happened, or ever will happen as far as I can see; and we can't go on being engaged for ever."

"Do you mean you have broken with Mr. Berkley only because he's poor?"

"Only because we're poor. I have my family to consider," Clara, who had never in all her life considered any one but herself, answered with a martyred air. "We are so poor that I had to do something, and, as I'm not learned enough to teach, nor clever enough to write, nor enough my own mistress to make a fortune on the stage—where I should have made an immense success—Oh, yes, I should," she interjected, with a positive nod. "Well, as I can do none of these things to relieve my family of myself and of a hundred other burdens and bothers, there was nothing for it but to make a good marriage!"

"To Mr. Spragg!"

"To Mr. Spragg," echoed Clara, in an even voice of perfect composure.

"But you do not love him?" objected Margaret, feebly.

"I suppose I love him as much as any married couples love each other a year after marriage. The Seagrens, for instance, or the Brownlows, or the Lepels, or the Rev. Godfrey Pelham and his thorn in the flesh. See how those Christians love! I must look forward, my dear, like a prudent woman. If I married for love, I should have run through that settlement in six months; whereas £10,000 a year—even from land—will take a deal of getting through."

"Clara, you have no heart."

"Oh, well, I don't know," the girl answered with philosophic calm. "I must have had what you call a heart to engage myself to George—a man with hardly anything to look forward to except his father's death. But Madame Rombeaut's bills are enough to crush the heart out of anyone. Just wait till I have £10,000 a year, and can afford to keep a heart again, and you'll see what a creditable turn-out it will be."

"But suppose it bolts with you after marriage?"

"Oh, if I have one at all, I'll have it in hand," she said lightly, with an involuntary glance at the letter she had just put into an envelope. Then, taking it up again, she said, "Listen how I have put matters to dear old George:—

DEAR OLD BOY,—All is at an end between us! It is not possible to express the pain it gives me even to say this. . . . .

And I am miserable about it," she interjected, with a defiant upward look into her friend's face.

"Evidently," Margaret rejoined, dryly.

"I am, really," reiterated Clara, with a look of wide-eyed wretchedness into space. But next moment she proceeded to read on with perfect composure:—

It is not possible to express the pain it gives me to say this—but to do it! ! ! Yet I must do it. I cannot help myself. I have to sacrifice myself in order to save my family from ruin by a rich marriage——

Here, again, Clara felt it necessary to pause to interpret. "But I am doing it for the sake of my family. I can't go on being a burden to them any longer. It was only last week papa said he could not pay Madame Rombeaut's last bill—for the commonest necessaries of life!"

"I quite understand. Well? Go on. 'I must sacrifice myself by a rich marriage to save my family Madame Rombeaut's bills.' We've got so far," Margaret said, with perfect gravity.

"Margaret, you are too absurd!" Clara answered, frowning and laughing simultaneously. "There! I shall not read another word of it, if you take it in that way."

"Go on; don't be silly. Of course you can't tell him the truth, and I suppose that's as near it as you can go," Margaret said, undisturbedly. And, after a little petulant demur, Clara continued:—

The change is not in me, dear George—for my heart is yours only, and always—no, the change is not in me, but in our circumstances, which compel the sacrifice. Other girls may marry for love, and to please themselves, and for their own happiness, but I must give myself up, and give you up—a thousandfold worse sacrifice!—for the sake of others. Not, remember, for the sake of the man I am forced to marry—who is nothing to me but a profession and a provision—but for my family's sake. Good-bye, dear old George! Good-bye for ever! Pray do not come to see me, and so only make my distress insupportable; for my fate is unalterable, and can but be embittered by remonstrance or remembrance of what might have been. Believe me, dear old George, always till death, your loving friend, at least,

LOULOU.

The young lady was quite moved by her own eloquence, and looked up with moist eyes into her friend's face for applause of her lovely composition.

Margaret, however, said only, "It would just serve you right if Mr. Berkley showed the letter to Mr. Spragg."

"Fancy George doing that—or any man! Only a woman would do it, or think of it," she added, with a triumphant laugh at the happiness of the retort.

"Depend upon it, Clara, if Mr. Spragg finds out you accepted him before breaking with Mr. Berkley, he will jilt you as lightly as you jilted his rival."

"You have no right, Margaret, to talk in that coarse, vulgar way after I explained everything to you. Mr. Spragg is not likely to 'jilt' me, as you call it, because of any discoveries he may make. I haven't left him much to find out, I can assure you. I told him with perfect frankness that I had a host of admirers, as any girl in my position and—well, with my attractions—was entitled to have; and if he finds out that George was one of them, he cannot say that I didn't confide it to him."

Margaret laughed at this specimen of her friend's chivalrous frankness, but said presently, with impressive gravity, "Clara, take my advice and burn that letter, and the other also to Mr. Spragg."

"I hadn't begun my letter to Mr. Spragg. I directed the envelope first just to see how the address looked. But I must write to him to thank him for such diamonds, dear! Oh, you must see them. I'm going to wear them in 'Checkmate.'"

Her eagerness to escape further remonstrance upon her change of engagements was much more her motive for carrying her friend off to her room than even her anxiety to show the diamonds.

Upon reaching her room she must needs array herself for Margaret's admiration, not in the diamonds only, but in the frock she was to wear them with in "Checkmate." In the very act of putting it on, however, she was interrupted by a knock at the door.

KINAHAN'S LL WHISKY.—"The Cream of Old Irish Whiskies." Kinahan's LL Whisky. Gold Medal Paris Exhibition, 1878. Kinahan's Glenisle Whisky. The Finest Scotch Whisky sold.

"Yes!"

"Please, Miss, Mr. Spragg has called."

"Oh, bother! Tell him I shall be down in a few minutes."

As she was proceeding leisurely with her toilet, Margaret suggested, "You had better see him at once, hadn't you?"

"Little you know how to manage men," Clara replied, laughing, while she surveyed herself deliberately in the glass. "I never saw the man I couldn't twist round my finger; and it isn't by being at their beck and call it's done, I can assure you. Besides, I mean to begin with Mr. Spragg as I intend to go on—never chucking and never slacking the rein, but keeping a light, firm, and even hand, which just feels the mouth without fretting it. Oh, you'll see, my dear, Mr. Spragg will go like a lamb in harness."

"Please, Miss," cried the maid, entering precipitately, without even knocking. "Please, Miss, Mr. Spragg says he must see you instantly. He's in such a rage about something, you'd think he was gone out of his mind."

After a long and perplexed look at her blanched face in the mirror, Clara cried excitedly, "He has read that letter!"

And so in truth he had. Upon being shown into the drawing-room he made first for the mirror to admire therein his over-dressed little person. In it he saw, if he did not recognise, the hard, worn face of a man who had discounted his youth by dissipation. Presently he turned to look out of the window, and, as he approached it, the envelope addressed to himself caught his eye, as it lay on a small writing-table beside the letter to George Berkley, which Clara, in her haste to show her diamonds, had not replaced in its own envelope. Having sufficiently admired the "sweet Roman hand" of his adored on the envelope addressed to him, he laid it down, and then perceived the letter, which he naturally assumed was meant to be enclosed therein, and meant therefore for him. "Dear old boy." Yes, it was for him, beyond a doubt. "Dear old boy: All is at an end between us." Good God! What had happened? What had he done? Had she heard—but no, it was not possible. Besides, he had broken utterly with the woman. What could it mean? "It is not possible to express the pain it gives me even to say this—but to do it! Yet I must do it. I cannot help myself. I have to sacrifice myself in order to save my family from ruin by a rich marriage. The change is not in me, dear George." George? George? Who the—the letter was to another fellow whom she was throwing over to sell herself to him. What an infernal girl! Mr. Spragg ground his teeth and stamped furiously on the floor before he could bring himself to read on. "The change is not in me, dear George—for my heart is yours only and always—no, the change is not in me, but in our circumstances which compel the sacrifice. Other girls may marry for love, and to please themselves, and for their own happiness, but I must give myself up, and give up you—a thousandfold worse sacrifice!—for the sake of others. Not, remember, for the sake of the man I am forced to marry—who is nothing to me but a profession and a provision—but for my family's sake." What a woman! What an escape! What! He—he Richard Cholmondelly Spragg accepted only "as a provision and a profession," odious, but necessary to save her pauper family from the workhouse! To sell not herself only, but her love and her lover, for money!

At this point rage so overmastered Mr. Spragg that he rushed at the bell, and nearly tore it down. When the maid appeared he shouted at her, "Tell Miss Rendall that I wish to see her at once—at once!" in such a tone that the maid might well have thought he had suddenly gone out of his mind. He had enough time, however, before the maid returned, to master his frenzy of fury sufficiently to go back to the table and read there the rest of the letter. At length the maid returned to say, "Please, sir, Miss Rendall was rehearsing for some private theatricals; but she will be down in a minute now." And, indeed, Clara, having made this diplomatic preparation for the coup de théâtre she had had the presence of mind to think of, almost immediately swept into the room. She was in her stage dress, and as she was a superbly handsome girl, with a perfect figure and a skin which could stand even the fierce light of day, the low frock became her to perfection. As she sailed into the room he hurried towards her, gasping almost inarticulately, "This is your writing!—this is your letter!" holding out the document, and glaring at her like a tiger in act to spring.

"Certainly," she replied, with confounding calmness. "Did you suppose it was meant for you?"

"I—I supposed it was meant for this envelope, which is addressed to me," he stammered, taken utterly aback by her imperturbable coolness.

"Oh! Perhaps the mistake was excusable; but nothing can excuse the scene you have had the bad taste to make before the maid," Clara said, superbly.

He stood blinking blankly at her, hardly believing the evidence of his eyes or ears, for a moment before he could say: "And this letter. What can excuse this letter?"

"The letter!" Clara rejoined, with a shrug of supreme scorn. "The letter, as any one but you must have perceived, is a stage-letter, which comes into my part in some private theatricals Mrs. Arnott is getting up. I wrote it out to save myself the trouble of getting it by heart."

"Oh, I see! I really beg your pardon. How stupid and brutal I have been. Can you ever forgive me? And so George Berkley, of the Foreign Office, Sir Geoffrey Berkley's son, whom I fancied I knew, is a mere character in a play. How strange! He will hardly believe it himself when I present him with this letter," he said, putting the letter into its own envelope, pocketing it, and quitting the room, before Clara had recovered from her stupefaction.

As Mr. Spragg never had a scruple of delicacy or discretion, Clara's hopeless spinsterhood is no doubt due to his venomous circulation of her coup de théâtre.

MUSIC.

M. PADEREWSKI, who has had a very successful tour, is now in Scotland, but he will speedily return to London, as on Saturday next he will play at the Crystal Palace. Of course he has chosen his "Polish Fantasia," which afterwards may, I should imagine, be accorded a rest. There is other music in the pianoforte repertory quite equal to that even of M. Paderewski. On Monday he will appear at the Popular Concerts, when Mr. Lloyd will sing, in English, of course, six of the great pianist's new Polish songs. On the 20th M. Paderewski will play at Hampstead, after which he will return to Paris for Christmas.

It is said in certain brightly written notes, which are understood to be from the pen of Sir A. Harris, that at some of the performances of the Carl Rosa troupe, two men dressed as beefeaters are now placed on either side of the proscenium, mounting guard during the performance. If the statement, which seems to come from good authority, be true, it is a silly practice, and one which I should imagine can hardly appeal even to the smallest provincial mind. In the old days, of course, the guards used to keep order on the stage, to which certain gentlemen of fashion were then admitted, and even in our own time Austrian soldiers were on the stage during the performances of opera in Venice, to intervene should any political allusions be indulged in. But the British beefeaters were abolished when it was found how sorely it distressed elderly men-at-arms to remain standing throughout a long performance. Stuffed figures would, I should fancy, answer the purpose equally well.

The "Royal Punch and Judy Show," as the Royal box at the new Queen's Hall was irreverently called, has been pulled down, and at the public opening of the hall on Saturday the space was thrown into the dress circle. The change is an undoubted improvement. The inaugural programme included Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," with Madame Albani, Miss Margaret Hoare, and Mr. Lloyd as chief vocalists; and a miscellaneous concert, in which Mr Dawson played Beethoven's E flat concerto. The choir was collected hurriedly, and the performance was by no means without flaw, although, as the regular season does not start till January 20, there will be plenty of time to organise a proper chorus. I, however, very greatly doubt whether it is wise to choose Saturday nights for these entertainments. Saturday afternoon is a favourite time, but Saturday evening concerts never have paid in the West-end, and even last Saturday, with Madame Albani and Mr. Lloyd in the cast, the hall was not anything like full.

On the other hand, at the Crystal Palace on Saturday afternoon an enormous audience was drawn to the Wagner programme, which included the whole of the third act of "Tannhäuser," with Mr. Lloyd as the hero, Mr. Black as Wolfram, and Madame Valda as Venus and Elizabeth. These two parts should have been played by Frau Moran Olden, who, however, was too ill to leave Germany, and as Madame Valda only knew the text in Italian, while the rest sang in English, the effect was not a little extraordinary. Señor Sarasate gave his last chamber concert on Monday afternoon, and in the evening at the Popular Concerts a string quartet by Bazzini was produced. The quartet is a curious mixture of styles, the Italian element being strong in the variations which form the chief feature of the slow movement, while the Gavotte is quite old French, and the finale pure Haydn. Herr Ries, who had been an invalid for a week, and had thus been obliged to break a record of thirty-four years as second violin, was now convalescent; but, on the other hand, Signor Piatti, the violoncellist, was temporarily ill, and was replaced by Herr Klengel.

The well-known organist, Mr. H. C. Tonking, last week gave a very largely attended organ recital at the Albert Hall, his programme including works by Smart, Widor, Handel, De Soyres, and others. To Mr. Tonking visitors to the approaching Doll Show at the Albert Hall will also, I am glad to say, be indebted for, I hope, a good deal of music. Mr. Tonking likewise was the moving spirit of the concert given at the Albert Hall on Tuesday in aid of the Benevolent Fund of the District Railway employés.

M. Jean de Reszke has, I believe, decided not to return to the United States next year; and, indeed, in the winter—that is to say, of 1894-5—he proposes to play Tristan at the first performance of Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde" at the Paris Grand Opéra. Contrary to report, however, there is little chance of his attempting the rôle at Covent Garden next season. But he will probably sing Siegmund in "Die Walküre," and to witness the Polish tenor's first appearance in this part in New York a fortnight hence the faithful Mr. Higgins is, I learn, about to sail.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—I am rejuvenated; my pulse is beating again with youthful ardour, and I am once again ready to sally out in the train of Sir Nigel Loring and the other doughty knights of Mr. Conan Doyle's creation in search of honour and advancement. Christmas and the publishers are in part responsible for this state, and I know no better method of rousing the red ashes of youthful ideals into a bright flame than to feed them with the stories and legends which are just now poured out for the benefit of the rising generation. I should, however, scarcely think that the method in which the authoress of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" sets about some such rejuvenation is likely to bring about a similar result; it is too introspective. She has produced a quasi-autobiographical sketch (1) of her own childhood; yet, delicate as is the treatment, and true as much of its incident seems, still she forces one to look through the glasses of maturity through which she herself views the remembrance of the emotions of childhood—the trifle which appalled, the event which awoke a childish sympathy. No; my method is to go straight to the fountain-head of my own memories, instead of analysing them, though I must admit that it is almost impossible to do so without comparing past and present. Thus if one commences with the original book, my memory gives me something far different from the ornate decorations which Walter Crane groups around each letter of the alphabet (2), something more in the style of those brilliant illuminations which cluster about the pages of the toybooks which come in such variety from Messrs. Dean & Co., where the clown tumbles madly through every page, and animals wander unchecked by an unalluring desert of printed matter. Writing from my own recollection, it is clear to me that these are part of my past, and to clinch the matter comes the old-fashioned Venetian Blind book where a tug at a slip of paper brings a fresh picture on every page. The toy books which other publishers produce are perhaps slightly quieter in their colouring, not quite so noisy in their tone, but through them all runs the mad spirit of unmeaning riot without which a nursery would be solemn as a cloister. It is curious that there should be so much of the comic incident about productions for the very young, for, unless in some of the annuals such as that published by Messrs. Griffith, Farran, & Co. (4), there is left no room for pathetic incident. Perhaps the publishers think that it is their duty to counteract the effect of the dismal pictures of every-day life which even infant eyes too often see; perhaps they find it impossible to procure anything which will at all compare with what has been done in the past, for, even when the old tales are illustrated, Cinderella in the ashes is as spick and span as an Adelphi heroine in distress, and Humpty Dumpty falls off his wall with a face expressive of the keenest delight. Perhaps the most modern of them all, a pleasant conceit which will make thousands of children laugh on the dullest of days, is a quaintly-coloured series of plates, where upon turning the book upside down you get an entirely fresh picture (5). It is different with the fairy tales. Even the new ones seem to have something of the spirit of the old, and the old in their charming dress are newer than ever. Who, for instance, will ever dare swear that the touch of age is upon Hans Andersen, especially as he comes to us this season (6), or make declaration that the Countess D'Aulnoy has ceased to charm. It is to these that the child turns from the toy-book to find the non-sentient alive and the non-understandable made known. I think that I was as other children, and of fairy tales I could never have enough, so that I am disposed to welcome the "Winged Wolf" (8) for a boon companion, to shiver at the approach of the malignant gnomes that Mr. R. Nisbet Bain brings from their habitations in "Norwegian Caverns" (9), and, finally, to laugh heartily over the charming illustrations with which Chinese artists have embellished the story of "The Strayed Arrow," and the not less curious adventures which are told in the accompanying narrative (10). About all of these there is something far superior to the book which brings me back to the next stage in the evolution of the child, the sort of book which is chosen by a kindly-disposed though weak-minded aunt as a birthday present, and is read to him in patches by the governess, who gets far more consolation from the reading than the child. It consists of a love story in which two grown-up persons take part, and the youthful interest is imparted by a party of children who disport themselves aimlessly and harmlessly through the pages (11). In the volume which brought up this memory, however, there is a greatly redeeming

(1) "The One I Knew Best of All." By Mrs. F. H. Burnett. (London: Frederick Warne & Co.)
(2) "Walter Crane's Absurd A. B. C. (London: George Routledge & Sons.)
(3) "Fun and Frolic for Children." "Venetian Blind Toy Books," &c (London: Dean & Co.)
(4) "Odd Corner Annual." (London: Griffith, Farran, & Co.)
(5) "Topsys and Turveys." By P. S. Newell. (London: Fisher Unwin.)
(6) "Hans Andersen's Stories and Fairy Tales." Translated by H. Oskar Sommer, Ph.D. With 100 Pictures by Arthur J. Gaskin. (London and Orpington: George Allen.)
(7) "D'Aulnoy's Fairy Tales." Translated by J. R. Planché. (London: Routledge & Sons.)
(8) "The Winged Wolf and other Fairy Tales." Collected by Ba Sheen Kaf. (London: Edward Stanford & Co.)
(9) "Weird Tales from Northern Seas." From the Danish of Jonas Lie. By R. Nisbet Bain. (London: Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner, & Co.)
(10) "Chinese Nights Entertainments." By Adele M. Fielde. (London: G. P. Putnam's Sons.)
(11) "Toddleben's Hero." By M. M. Blake. (London: Methuen & Co.)

feature in the illustrations. Such books as these foreshadow schooldays, and with school opens out the reality of life, before which the fairy tales fall back and are forgotten, until in later years we turn back to them once more to find that their charm is as fresh as ever and the spell they cast as enthralling. School days and our companions; it is possible to live them again in companionship with "Rex Singleton" and "Jim" (13). Take either of the two and the life comes back, not quite so intuitively as in "Tom Brown," but still with that touch of schoolboy frolic and freshness of enjoyment which makes them pleasant reading, altogether different from the sort of thing which marks the doings of "The Boys at Penrobin" (14). Give this to a healthy lad and he will dub the hero a muff; he is not educated to appreciate the study of a neurotic youth who, sensitive as a girl, doubtless seems a natural type to the lady who has drawn him from her imagination. Fortunately for me I have met few characters amongst the myriad who throng the new fiction for boys this year who exhibit at all the neurotic temperament, though a few years ago they were common enough. The type seems now to have been relegated almost entirely to the girls' school room, a matter I can scarcely understand. Can any one explain why there should be no adventure series for girls? At present girls, the hardy, the adventurous, with spirits as high and physical strength equal to that of their brothers, seem to me to be absolutely uncatered for. For instance, one girl's book I have read opens with a fog and ends with a wedding. The heroine, Golden Guendolyn, looking like a princess, and taking all hearts by storm, is persecuted by a wicked guardian, who squanders her £60,000 at Monte Carlo, and finally locks her up as mad until she is rescued by her lover (15). Yet through it all Guendolyn is passive as a doll, a punching block for the hand of fate. And this book is a type of hundreds. In another, without quite the morbid sentimentality of the last, the factory girl, beautiful of course, marries the master for the sake of her family, and runs away from him to find that she has loved him all the time (16). This, too, is typical of hundreds, but why authors and publishers should fancy that the average girl is enamoured of this sort of thing I fail to understand. As it is they go for consolation to their brothers' library, and find there the healthy change which gives them what they need. Such change there is in plenty. It is the wealth of adventure which has brought me into the state which I have already mentioned. One can go with Mr. Overton to seek adventure in everyday life (18) to find it, or, better still, lose oneself in a world of adventure with Mr. Henty, who is as prolific as ever. Just take one year's record of what he has done for Young England. Three big volumes are before me. One tale, in which an English lad with French relatives takes his share in the struggle of the French Huguenots for religion and freedom, and, after numberless hairbreadth escapes, makes a magnificent escape from Paris on St. Bartholomew's Eve (17). Another takes the reader to the formation of the Indian Empire, and the inevitable boy hero fights like a hero in the Sikh war, and comes with honour through the Indian Mutiny(18). And not yet tired of fighting, Mr Henty leads his admirers with another adventurous youngster through the famous campaigns of Charles XII of Sweden against the Russians and Poles (19). And all this is capped by shorter contributions to such a library of entertainment as is comprised in the series of "Stories for Boyhood and Youth." Here is not adventure alone, but a scrap of everything for everybody, even the New World being laid under contribution by the reproduction of some of the best things from Poe, Longfellow, and Hawthorne (20). Should you not tire of fighting by land, there is yet a story, fresh as ever, of the conquest of Mexico (21), or vivid, thrilling as anything that ever came from a well-practised pen, the story of the backwoods, of Indian warfare in the vast inland forests that once stretched from the Alleghanies to the prairies of the far West, from the cane swamps of the Southern States to the great lakes in the North (22). And still the store is not exhausted, for the Maories have to contribute their share, until the hero who undergoes danger amongst them and assists at an auction of missionaries' bones, returns to England, rich in gold and experience (23). Of course, there are some boys to whom fact is more welcome than fiction, to whom the knowledge of things that are, appeals more strongly than the efforts of the most brilliant imagination. It is for their benefit that Mr. Frith has told the story of the locomotive, and told it with a wealth of illustration and detail, and an absence of technicalities that leaves nothing to be desired (24). It is for this class, too, that "Footsteps to Fame" has been written, but without the same success (25). It seems as if the author has swallowed a biographical dictionary, a Church of England Catechism with a few democratic axioms, and brought forth the whole mass in a state of semi-assimilation. The book is, however, free from the record of the pietic money-grubber so dear to Smiles. Then, finally, I come to what is best in the whole lot of the adventure series—the stories of derring-do at sea. At one time it is possible to be pirate hunting on the China Coast with three as honest specimens of boyhood as ever graced a midshipman's uniform (26), at the next with a search party in the polar seas battling with bears, harpooning walrus, and rescuing relatives (27). Mr. Fenn gives an air of reality to his boys, and their very faults make them the very pleasantest of companions. About his books, too, there is the smell of the brine which we are accustomed to get when we take up Mr. Gordon Stables' never-wearying yarns, such as that he has given the youngsters this year (28). Even if this were the total no boy need deplore any lack of adventure, but when added to these is Jules Verne's story, distinct from anything he has done before, for Verne never repeats himself (29), and the still more enthralling history of the "Desert Ship" (30), I have come to the conclusion that there is ample material to last him a decade. The last book alone will mark a period in the existence of anybody who is fortunate enough to get it as present or prize. It is the story of a treasure hunt, as exciting as anything Verne ever wrote and with the reality of Robert Louis Stevenson. Need I say more to recommend it to you?—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, yours sincerely,

DESMOND O'BRIEN.

(13) "Rex Singleton." By Mrs. Lysaght. "Jim." By Ismay Thorn. (London: Gardner, Darton, & Co.)
(14) "The Boys at Penrobin." By Mrs. G. Forsyth Grant. (Edinburgh: W. P. Nimmo, Hay, & Mitchell.)
(15) "Golden Guendolyn." By Evelyn Everett Green. (London: Hutchinson & Co.)
(16) "A Bitter Debt." By Annie G. Swan. (London: Hutchinson & Co.)
(18) "After School." By Robert Overton. (London: Jarrold & Sons.)
(17) "St. Bartholomew's Eve." By G. A. Henty. (London: Blackie & Son.)
(18) "Through the Sikh War." By G. A. Henty. (London: Blackie & Son.)
(19) "A Jacobite Exile." By G. A Henty. (London: Blackie & Son.)
(20) "Fifty-two Stories for Boyhood and Youth." "Fifty-two Stories for Girlhood and Youth." Edited by Alfred H. Miles. (London: Hutchinson & Son.)
(21) "The White Conquerors of Mexico." By Kirke Monro. (London: Blackie & Sons.)
(22) "The Men of the Backwoods." By Ascott R. Hope. (London: Griffith, Farran, & Co.)
(23) "Supple Jack, a Romance of Maoriland." By R. Ward. (London: Chapman & Hall.)
(24) "The Flying Horse." By Henry Frith. (Griffith, Farran, & Co.)
(25) "Footsteps to Fame." By Hain Friswell. (London: John Hogg.)
(26) "Blue Jackets." By George Manville Fenn. (London: Griffith, Farran, & Co.)
(27) "Steve Young." By George Manville Fenn. (London: S. W. Partridge & Co.)
(28) "Just Like Jack." By Gordon Stables. (London: Hodder & Stoughton.)
(29) "The Castle of the Carpathians." By Jules Verne. (London: Sampson Low, Marston, & Co.)
(30) "The Desert Ship." By John Blundelle Burton. (London: Hutchinson & Co.)

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—You never saw anything half so tempting as the London shops are now, with all their bright array of Christmas gifts. It is really difficult to keep even a shilling in one's pocket, for every window one passes is a fresh temptation to spend it. Walking down the Brompton-road the other morning we saw an unwonted display of fine furs, including a whole bear and some other smaller animals. The window belonged to the new drapery department recently opened by the management of Harrod's Stores. Another window was full of evening blouses and ball dresses, some of the former in surah, bengaline, and china silk, tastefully trimmed with velvet, brocade, lace, embroidery, jet or coloured beads; some of the latter in pale brocades, plain silks, or crépons, all in very soft, sweet tones of cream, ivory, blue, pink, maize, green, or white. We went inside to investigate, and found that the other contents of the department rivalled those of the attractive windows, everything being well up-to-date, of the newest materials, and in the smartest styles. The Bromptonites who used to have to go to Oxford-street and Regent-street to look at the new fashions, can now do so at their own doors. It is now possible to get everything one wants at these Stores, including furniture, ironmongery, plate, glass and china, stationery, provisions, and even dress, furs, bonnets, hats, boots, shoes, and underwear. Children's dress is made quite a specialty, and the little garments are, as always, fascinating from their very diminutiveness, and, in addition, attractive, because they here represent the most recent improvements in cut, material, and form.

HUNTING SEASON, 1893-4.—Busvine's new designs and materials for this year include several special novelties in Riding Habits, Coats for Walking and Driving, Walking Jackets, Gowns, &c. Can be seen at 4, Brook-street, or will be sent by return of post.—JOHN BUSVINE, by special appointments to the Princess of Wales, the Empress of Germany, the Empress of Austria, &c., &c.

Maud and I, having decided on giving father a pocket-book for a Christmas-box, turned into Drew's at Piccadilly-circus after this, and took some time to choose what the dear old man's should be. The newest colour, we were told, is a beautiful wine-tint, richly red and very glossy. They call it Burgundy, and it is rightly named, for it is just the colour of that delightful wine. The newest pocket-books at Drew's are made with a fold for bank-notes, which is so well planned that no one not in the secret would suspect its existence. Some of the cases and purses are in malachite green, others the beautiful mottled pale grey and black of the boa-constrictor skin, and others in tan colour. Monograms can be added in gold or silver. Some of the purses are very richly ornamented with repoussé gold or silver. The things are all made by British workmen in Hatton-garden, which is comfortable for the purchaser to know, as most people like to feel that their money is going for the good of their compatriots. We were shown a simply perfect bag for a lady, in hazel-nut-coloured alligator skin, with solid gold fittings. The blotter was covered with sealskin, from which the fur had been removed, and everything was absolutely plain and simple, yet very handsome, just the conjunction that one adores. We saw some excellently-planned hunting-bags for men, and should have liked to buy for Fred one of those that open square and take a saddle as well as hunting rig and the etceteras needed for a day or two in the shires. This sort of bag is appropriately called the Melton.

A very interesting object to which our attention was called was a tea basket made specially for the King of Italy to take with him when he goes hunting. It is made on the plan of Drew's En Route tea baskets, which hook on to the door of a railway carriage, or of any ordinary carriage, and contain every requisite for tea. The King of Italy saw one that his nephew had bought, and immediately ordered six for himself, five of them being intended for presents to his hunting friends. He desired that receptacles for beef-tea, cognac, eggs, sandwiches, etc., should be added, so that the fittings of each of his baskets number forty, with the saucepans, goblets, and plates, all being in silver.

Having selected our small purchases here, we went on to the Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company, in Regent-street, and saw a number of most temptingly-attractive presents for Christmas-tide. A sweet little diamond brooch has three swallows perched on a golden rail, each holding in its beak a letter of X M S. Another shows a design of mistletoe, the berries in pearls and the leaves in diamonds. The word Xmas is in diamonds and blue enamel. The variety of designs seems endless, one brooch having the mistletoe leaves in dull green chrysoprase. There are bracelets and brooches in the fashionable golden cornelian, some with mistletoe or holly in diamonds and pearls, and very cheap, the prices ranging from £3 upwards. A double diamond heart is surmounted by a true-lover's knot in red enamel. On another brooch the hearts are in blue enamel, the knot above being in diamonds. Flexible chain bracelets are quite as various, some having only a couple of hearts in golden cornelian or chrysoprase, while others have them in diamonds or pearls, and a more costly pattern has rings of diamonds interlinked, with precious stones set also in diamonds. Some of these are rubies, some pearl, some emerald, and others turquoise. A very new and pretty design has a heart of golden cornelian, not set in diamonds, but with a separate outer heart of these. The Man in the Moon carved out of cornelian and set in a crescent of diamonds makes a lovely brooch. Quite a novel one has a cornelian heart with a setting of yellow diamonds and white ones alternating.

Among the loveliest things we saw were brooches in the form of butterflies and dragon-flies, made of opal matrix, a material which is in exquisite tones of blue, green, and pearl, all intermingled and shoaling into each other with glints of ruby and rays of pure white light glancing back and forth. You have never seen anything more purely poetic than these lovely things. The bodies of the butterflies and dragon-flies are in diamonds, their legs and antennæ being in gold; the wings alone are in the opal matrix.

Many English husbands follow regularly the time-honoured custom of giving their wives a new dress on Christmas Day. Sometimes it is velvet, sometimes brocade; or it may be silk, satin, or some fancy stuff. Silk gowns are no longer the indispensable items in the wardrobe that they used to be, woollen fabrics being now thought smart enough for any kind of afternoon costume. We have just been looking over Egerton Burnett's patterns, and were particularly struck by the beauty of the embroidered hopsackings. Small sprigs are scattered over them in some soft, pale colour, such as heliotrope on black, amber on brown, pale blue on dark, &c. His serges are always infinitely various, some of them being very soft and finely finished, while others, made of equally pure wool, are in the wide rib, with the rough finish that is so much approved of by some of our best-dressed women. The fancy black dress fabrics are even more than usually attractive this year. One of them resembles a serge, with sprigs in the shape of a lavender leaf in satin, and dots scattered about the surface. Another is simply a honeycomb in soft, deep black. It is so supple of make that it would fall in lovely folds. Another has cells like those of a honeycomb, with a dot in satin occupying the centre of each cell. Some have straight stripes, others diagonal, and one of the prettiest has lines across it that look exactly like feather-stitching of the finest kind. Whipcord cloth is in quite a range of fashionable colours. I notice a sort of speckled tartan which looks rather smart. It is called the Glendevon. A very soft make of hopsack is in serpent-green, cardinal, white, tan, myrtle, brown, navy blue, and black. The Argyll is an up-to-date diagonal woollen, with silky flecks of black upon a ground of red, grey, or brown.

There are other men whose Christmas-box to their better halves invariably takes the form of a new hat or bonnet. Such donors as these should see the lovely hats that Madame Lili has in her beautiful house in Grafton-street. A big picture hat is in emerald-green velvet, with black ostrich feathers arranged in the most picturesque way possible as trimming. It is almost in the well-known "Duchess of Devonshire" shape, being turned up at the left side with a knot of black satin ribbon and a plume of black feathers. Another hat, equally large, is in black velvet, with a loose O'Shanter crown of cream-coloured point lace and bows of black ribbon, half satin, half moiré, tying on bunches of pompon dahlias. Some of these dear little flowers, which are beautifully made, rest on the hair beneath the hat-brim. A large black felt hat, with the brim

Riding Habits.—A speciality in Riding Habits. Has been declared the best, without exception, by all ladies who have seen it. Quite new. Patented. Made only by G. S. Woolmer-Hayden & Co., Ltd., 16, Gt. Marlborough-street, Regent-street, London, W.

The most beautiful of Winter Garments are those of Nature's own production—Furs. For an elegant fit, genuine and best furs, go to Nicholay's, Manufacturing Furriers, 170, Oxford-street, London. Seal Jackets re-made to fashionable shapes. Moderate prices.

slightly curved up all round, has the crown in rose-coloured mirror velvet caught with large jet cabochon pins. The edge of the brim is a line of black feather trimming. A most becoming little toque is in green velvet and sable, with a leather crown. This is quite a novelty, is it not? Steel buckles and pins with cut steel heads are a feature in millinery this winter. They form part of the trimming of a brown velvet and chenille bonnet, the latter material being shaded in brown and green—another novelty. Very new, indeed, is a heart-shaped bonnet in prune velvet with a large bow of black moire silk and pompon dahlias in tones of gold and brown. A small square bonnet is made of red velvet edged with jet and trimmed with black feathers. We also saw some very tempting theatre bonnets for taking with one to Paris, and Madame Lili has some lovely teagowns, which I should like to describe to you, only that my letter is already so long.

Coming out, we walked down Albemarle-street, and promptly fell in love with a tall rushwork harp in Goodyear's flowershop. We went in to inspect it more closely, and he told us that he had devised it for standing at the back of a cottage piano, the back facing the room in the orthodox manner. It was draped with yellow silk and ribbons, and had receptacles for plants in pots, the green of which stood out beautifully against the yellow silk and the rushwork. The harp was about a yard and a quarter in height, and was one of the prettiest floral decorations I have ever seen.

As you are so anxious to have my advice again about Christmas cards, &c., I may at once say that my opinion respecting them has undergone no change since last year. I still think that Messrs. Raphael Tuck are at the top of the tree in this business as regards both originality and beauty of design. Their treble folding screen called "The Minuet Tableau," representing six quaintly-dressed figures dancing the minuet with hands extended to their opposite partners, is one of the most delicately-wrought and highly-finished works of art in the Christmas card line I have seen for a long time. This "Minuet" card will make a charming little souvenir for some of our grown-up friends, as it is both ornamental and artistic. The six figures are dressed in white and grey, with powdered hair, and the background is in white and silver. I also admire exceedingly the Photogravure series, especially the juvenile groups, "Romeo and Juliet," and the reposing Cupids. This style of Christmas card is mounted on coarse early English paper, and is quite worthy of framing. There are several other conspicuous novelties issued by Messrs. Raphael Tuck, and some rural scenes, with little thatched cottages surrounded by trees with foliage of finely-grated cork, are decidedly new. Quite charming, too, is the Salon series—comprising unique trefold cards with embossed borders of daisies and pansies, whilst others with jewelled horse-shoes are specially suitable for sending to friends of a horsey turn of mind. Raphael's Madonna Ansedei is a lovely bit of colouring, and the stained-glass window in the background is most realistic. There are over 2,500 different designs issued by this firm, so you ought to have no difficulty this year in finding plenty to suit you though you may be bothered with an embarras de richesses. Messrs. Hildesheimer & Co., Limited, have brought out a lot of clever mechanical cards which are sure to prove a great success, for naturally nearly all children appreciate the comic side of nature. These include some capital toy cards, such as rocking-horses, see-saws, and performing dogs, which are made to move by means of a leaden pendulum. The idea is quite new, I think.

Messrs. C. W. Faulkner & Co. are always well to the fore with their beautiful cards, booklets, and books, and I cannot speak too highly of two excellent productions of the latter class. "Love and Sleep" and other poems by Lewis Morris, and illustrated by the late Alice Havers and Harriet Bennett, is most beautifully got up. Then for people who prefer to make their Christmas rather a time for serious reflections than for social rejoicings, I can recommend a second book, called "The Love of Christ." It is charmingly illuminated and cleverly illustrated. These books are sold in substantial card boxes for rough handling through the post. The cards, too, of this firm are of a very useful type and a large quantity of them are made for the purpose of holding one's ordinary visiting card, which is hidden in a cosy pocket of violet forget-me-nots and other flowers. To those of our grown-up friends who do not indulge in the fashionable printed name and address form of conveying their Christmas greeting, these sensible cards will prove very acceptable. This firm's calendars, too, are very cheap and pretty, especially those made to hang up.

From an immense variety of cards issued by Messrs. Parkins & Gotto you will, I am sure, admire their greeting cards. The words can be of your own choosing. There is some individuality about a pretty card of greeting, every detail of which has been the careful choice of the sender. The screen-shaped ones are very dainty, whilst those with openwork at the top have a very light and delicate air. One of them is in pale hedge-rose pink, with the lattice-work on the top in gold, and a spray of wild roses at one corner. The back is ornamented with a monogram in pink and gold. Do you like the book-shape? It is rather quaint, I think, especially one I saw that has the cover in green, starred with white and with a sort of white cloud in the centre, on which appear the words "A Yule-tyde Greeting." For your hunting friends there is a plain white card with a fox's head and brush in the two colours of the animal—grey and brown. Golden daisies with ruby centre ornament an otherwise very quiet eau-de-Nil card, and within the fold of it appears the apt quotation:—

> Kind hearts can make December blithe as May,
> And in each morrow find a New Year's Day.

Some of the brocaded papers, so to speak, make a very effective background for the lettering and floral adornments. They are strewn with tiny sprigs in slight relief. A lovely double card has pinked-out edges, and bears on the cover the letters "Xmas" carried out in pink and blue forget-me-nots, with slender brown stems. The part the foliage plays is a subject for congratulation to the artist. Another good idea is seen in a pale mauve card, scattered over with single petals of hyacinth in the same tint. Perfectly sweet is a bright blue card with a greenish tone in it, a little bunch of snowdrops laid across the top, and the words "All good wishes" appearing in pure white. The edges of this charming card are scalloped in paler blue. On another a sky-blue horse-shoe with gilt nails has a white background, and across it is a spray of gilt oak-leaves and acorns with silvered nuts. A brown-paper card is a novelty. It does not, however, look in the least degree cheap. A spray of holly, with brown and green leaves contrast effectively with the yellowish-brown of the card. Another new kind has a border of flowers at the edge, in imitation of embroidery up the sides of a curtain. Another is edged with an imitation of satin-stitch in the form of white forget-me-nots attached to each other with button-hole stitching. I am sure you will admire a pale green tapestry card flowered in dim white, and lined with rose-pink. The texture looks like linen. In making your choice your only difficulty will, I think, be that of deciding which is prettiest among so much that is attractive.

To turn to matters culinary, rabbits are not appreciated as they deserve, as they may be dressed in so many different ways, and form a delightful variety in our every-day diet, while from an economical point of view they leave nothing to be desired. They are now in perfection, and I should like to induce you to try the following recipes:—

Remove the fillets of three young rabbits, flatten them slightly with a cutlet-bat dipped in cold water. Make four or five incisions across the thick part of each fillet, and insert a thin scallop of truffle, in such a manner that the half-circle shows; turn the thin end under the upper part of the fillet, and place them in a well-buttered sautépan with the ends curved inward. Dust them with pepper and salt, cover with a buttered paper, moisten with a very little oyster liquor, and simmer in a moderate oven about twenty minutes. Dish them on a plain border of forcemeat (made with the legs of the rabbits), garnish the centre with a ragoût of oysters and quenelles, and pour the oyster sauce round.

MESSRS. REDFERN beg to announce that the models of Gowns, Coats, Mantles, &c., designed and prepared for winter wear, are now ready, and display the combined ideas of the latest London and Paris Houses.—27, New Bond-street, W.

For the ragoût, blanch a dozen nice oysters, without allowing them to boil, drain and beard them. Make the sauce with the oyster liquor, add a little cream, and season it with pepper, salt, and lemon juice; strain it into a bain-marie and make very hot with the oysters and quenelles, which should be moulded with a teaspoon and poached in a little stock.

These fillets of rabbit larded are delicious:—

Trim the fillets of a sufficient number of young rabbits and lard the thick part with tiny strips of fat bacon. Slice an onion, a small carrot, and a stem of celery into a braising stewpan, add a bouquet of herbs, two cloves, a blade of mace, and six or eight peppercorns, cover them with slices of bacon and arrange the fillets on the bed of vegetable; cover with a round piece of greased paper, pour in sufficient stock to reach the fillets, and braise them very gently for an hour. Then remove the paper, glaze the larding, and return them to the oven without the lid for five minutes; now glaze them again and arrange them in a circle on a bed of dressed spinach. Pour a little glaze gravy round, and they are ready to serve.

You must also try these Fillets à la Provençale:—

Trim the fillets of three young rabbits, make an incision halfway through the thick end of each fillet, and put the small end in this. Fry them very slightly in a little butter for two or three minutes, so that they do not acquire the least colour; then put them to press between two dishes, with the small ends curved to the centre to form cutlets. When they are cold and set, coat one side very thickly with the following preparation:—Mince a large Portugal onion, and parboil it in water for five minutes, strain, wring it in a cloth, and put it into a covered stewpan with a small piece of glaze to finish cooking; then mix in the yolks of three eggs, and rub it through a fine wire sieve. When the purée is firm on the fillets, egg and crumb them, and fry them a nice colour with salad oil in a sautépan. Dish them on a border of mashed potato, garnish the centre with any nice vegetable, and pour the following sauce round:—Fry a minced eschalot and ½ oz. of lean ham in a stewpan with a tablespoonful of salad oil until it is a golden colour, add a teaspoonful of chopped capers and a gill of brown sauce; stir until it boils, strain, and add a pinch of cayenne pepper and a very little lemon-juice.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

CIGARES DE JOY cure ASTHMA.

JOY'S CIGARETTES afford immediate relief in cases of ASTHMA, WHEEZING, WINTER COUGH, and HAY FEVER, and, with a little perseverance, effect a permanent cure. Universally recommended by the most eminent Physicians and Medical Authors. Agreeable to use, certain in their effects, and harmless in their action, they may be safely smoked by ladies and children. All Chemists and Stores; Box of 35, 2s. 6d., or post free from WILCOX & CO., 239, Oxford-street, London, W.

MOURNING FOR IMMEDIATE WEAR.

Messrs. JAY'S

Large and well-assorted STOCK includes a choice and varied selection of COSTUMES, MANTLES, and MILLINERY, suitable for any degree of Mourning, and ready for IMMEDIATE WEAR. Orders to special instructions are executed in a few hours, and Ladies are Waited Upon in any part of the country without any extra charge whatever.

JAY'S,
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

THE MANUFACTURING GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY,
(With which is Incorporated the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Ld. (A. B. Savory & Sons), late of Cornhill, E.C.).
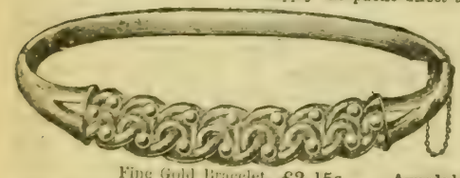
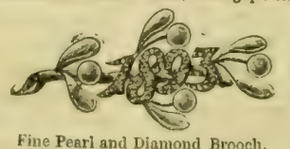
Show Rooms: 112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)
Supply the public direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.



Fine Gold Bracelet, £2 15s.



Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, with Chrysoprase Leaves, £10.

Awarded Nine Gold Medals and the Cross of the Legion of Honour.

Fine Pearl and Golden Cornelian Bracelet, £6.

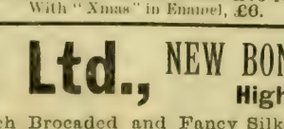
NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE With Reduced Prices, POST FREE.

THE LARGEST AND CHOICEST STOCK IN THE WORLD OF NOVELTIES IN JEWELLERY SUITABLE FOR CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval.

HIGHEST AWARDS AT CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

Fine Pearl and Golden Cornelian Bracelet, £5 10s.



Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch £10 10s. With "Xmas" in Enamel, £6.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Cluster Half-Hoop Bracelet, £50. Sapphires and Diamonds, £50.

REDMAYNE & Co., Ltd., NEW BOND ST. and CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.
High-Class Goods at Popular Prices.

SPECIAL A large purchase of Rich Brocaded and Fancy Silks, in White, Heliotrope, Maize, Cerise, Crevette, Ciel Indien, Lime Blossom, Lichen, and various other delicate Shades, specially suitable for Dinner and Ball Dresses, Tea Gowns, and Evening wear generally. Also in Black grounds, with coloured designs, 5/11 and 6/9 per yard. Usual prices 8/9 and 10/9.
Inspection solicited. Patterns Post-Free on Application.

ALICE HILL.
SMART EVENING TOILETTES from 5 guineas.
TWEED GOWNS from 3½ guineas.
Stylish Parisian Millinery, Trousseaux, and Corsets.
22a, LOWER PHILLIMORE PLACE, KENSINGTON.

MISS WESTROPP-DAWSON,
Court Milliner,
43, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON (over the Kettledrum Tea-rooms).
FRENCH and ENGLISH MILLINERY, also MANTLES, JACKETS, and TRAVELLING GARMENTS, at extremely reasonable prices.
Things sent on Approval on receipt of Tradesmen's Reference.

THE CRITERION RESTAURANT, PICCADILLY CIRCUS.
DINNERS AND SUPPERS A LA CARTE IN THE CELEBRATED EAST ROOM, AND AN EXCELLENT 4s. SUPPER is now also served from 10.30 to 12.30 in the West Room, BOTH BEING ACCOMPANIED BY INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

Christmas Presents

A SELECTION OF ROWLAND'S TOILET ARTICLES IS ALWAYS ACCEPTABLE.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL

Preserves, Strengthens, and Beautifies the Hair, prevents it falling off or turning Grey, and is especially recommended for Children, as it forms the basis of a luxuriant head of hair. As the best Hair Dressing, being neither too greasy or too drying, and is unsurpassed for the Beard, Whiskers, and Moustache. Sold also in a Golden Colour for fair-haired Children. Bottles, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d., equal to four small.

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR

A Soothing, Healing, and Emollient Preparation for beautifying the Skin, and producing a lovely Complexion. Removes Freckles, Redness and Roughness of Skin, soothes and heals Irritation, and produces Soft, Fair, and Delicate Skin, &c. It is warranted free from lead or mineral ingredients. Bottles, 4s. 6d. and 9s. 6d.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO

A Non-gritty Tooth Powder. Whitens the Teeth, prevents Decay, Strengthens the Gums, and gives a pleasing Fragrance to the Breath. Its antiseptic properties are unsurpassed by any other dentifrice, and are most Valuable for the Teeth and Gums. 2s. 9d. per box. Sold Everywhere.

HOWARD & SONS

FURNITURE MANUFACTURERS.] 25, 26, 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W. [SPECIMENS AT WAREROOMS.

EASY CHAIRS EASY CHAIRS EASY CHAIRS A SPECIALTY.

PARQUET FLOORING PARQUET FLOORING PARQUET FLOORING A SPECIALTY.

WOOD TAPESTRY.

WALL DECORATIONS.

IMPERVIOUS TO DUST.

25, 26, & 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.

THE NEW PATENT

TRIPLE SPLICED INSTEP HOSE.

NO. 20,778,

For Ladies and Children

These goods are spliced at the instep, where, in the case of lace-up boots and shoes, stockings first show signs of wear. In the heels and feet there is also a splicing thread more than is found in ordinary goods. Thereby the wearing power is doubled without the slightest clumsiness or discomfort. The improvement is particularly advantageous in the thinnest summer makes of stocking, where the extreme fineness of the yarn makes the ordinary goods very apt to wear out almost immediately.

Made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

See Reg. Trade Mark "MUSA DYE" on each pair.

To be obtained of all the best Hosiers and Outfitters in the United Kingdom, and Wholesale only of the Patentees:

DEBENHAM & FREEBODY,
FLETCHER GATE, NOTTINGHAM.

PAINTERS. MORANT & CO. DECORATORS.

91, NEW BOND STREET.

SPECIAL DESIGNS REGISTERED IN

Genoa Velvets, Brocades, Wall Papers, Furniture, Decoration.
FOUR DOORS FROM OXFORD-ST.

NOT TO BE SEEN ELSEWHERE.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.

300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.

ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.

Weavers of Dress Silks,

Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

The CLARET of the SEASON.

CHÂTEAU LA MARNIÈRE

(VINTAGE 1888, BLANQUEFORT.)

21s. Cash, delivered. Sample bottle, 2s. by post.

Order through your Wine Merchant or Grocer.

SOLE PROPRIETORS:

ARNOLD, PERRETT, & CO., LIMITED,
WINE MERCHANTS,
7a, Lower Belgrave Street, S.W. & Country Branches.

PRICE LIST OF CHOICE WINES AND SPIRITS POST FREE.

Chatto & Windus's New Novels, &c.

MACLAREN COBBAN'S New Novel, "THE BURDEN OF ISABEL," will be ready on Thursday next in 3 vols., at every Library.

CHRISTIE MURRAY'S New Book, "THE MAKING OF A NOVELIST: an Experiment in Autobiography," with a Photograph-Portrait of the Author, will be ready at all Booksellers in a few days, crown 8vo, cambric cover, gilt top, 6s.

Vashti and Esther: A Story of Society To-Day. By the Writer of "Belle's" Letters. 2 vols.

"'Vashti and Esther' is a clever book, written by one who knows; who will be voted daring, no doubt—even audacious . . . . The story is a pretty one."—Vanity Fair.

Red Diamonds. By Justin McCarthy, Author of "Dear Lady Disdain," &c. 3 vols.

"A well told and entertaining tale."—Scotsman.

A Wasted Crime. By David Christie Murray, Author of "Joseph's Coat," &c. 2 vols.

"Has all those characteristics which make Christie Murray's novels a source of perpetual delight."—Sun.

To His own Master. By Alan St. Aubyn, Author of "A Fellow of Trinity," &c. 3 vols.

"A good, strong, and interesting novel . . . . has situations of real power and pathos . . . . a striking novel."—Daily Chronicle.

Outlaw and Lawmaker. By Mrs. Campbell Praed, Author of "The Romance of a Station," &c. 3 vols.

"A novel of high literary quality, remarkable power, and great interest. . . . If its popularity prove proportionate to its merits, it should be one of the most widely read books of its year."—Daily Telegraph.

Woman and the Man. By Robert Buchanan, Author of "The Shadow of the Sword," &c. 2 vols.

"The picture of a brave, pure woman is winningly delineated."—St. James's Gazette.

The Rebel Queen. By Walter Besant, Author of "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." 3 vols.

"'The Rebel Queen' is fresh and full of excellent character-drawing, and there is plenty of humour in it. Standard.

The Woman of the Iron Bracelets. By Frank Barrett, Author of "Folly Morrison," &c. 3 vols.

"A novel which can be safely taken up by all who enjoy a lively story vividly told."—Westminster Gazette.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

THE DAYS OF HIS VANITY: a Passage in the Life of a Young Man. By Sydney Grundy. [Shortly.

HEATHER AND SNOW. By George MacDonald.

"A book which no one, having once taken it up, will lay down."—Spectator.

MRS. JULIET. By Mrs. A. W. Hunt, Author of "Thornicroft's Model."

"A fresh, attractive, and decidedly entertaining story."—Athenæum.

THE RED SULTAN. By J. Maclaren Cobban.

"Mr. Stevenson's 'Kidnapped' has found a worthy peer."—Daily Chronicle.

DR. PASCAL. By Emile Zola, Author of "The Downfall," "The Dream," &c. With a Portrait.

"A beautiful and most touching love story . . . . If anything were wanting to establish M. Zola's right to the title of the first of living novelists, 'Dr. Pascal' would put the question beyond dispute."—Vanity Fair.

THE GUN-RUNNER: a Romance of Zululand. By Bertram Mitford. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood. Second Edition.

"Positively thrilling . . . . Will be read with breathless interest."—Literary World.

THE LUCK OF GERARD RIDGELEY: a Tale of the Zulu Border. By Bertram Mitford. With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

Emile Zola. A Biographical Study. By R. H. Sherard. With Portraits, Illustrations, and Facsimile Letter. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s.

"An admirable book . . . A model of what a biography should be. . . . It is full of interesting anecdotes."—To Day.

From Paddington to Penzance: The Record of a Summer Tour from London to the Land's End. By Charles G. Harper, Author of "The Brighton Road." With 105 Illustrations by the Author. Demy 8vo, brown buckram, 16s.

"Admirably written and beautifully illustrated."—St. James's Budget.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

Messrs. William Blackwood & Sons' NEW BOOKS.

THE RISE OF OUR EAST AFRICAN EMPIRE. Early Efforts in Nyasaland and Uganda. By Captain F. D. LUGARD, D.S.O.; Hon. F.R.G.S.; Diplom. F.R.S.G.S. With 130 Illustrations, and 14 Maps specially prepared for the Work by E. G. Ravenstein. 2 Volumes, large demy 8vo, 42s.

"No more exciting or more instructive work on the affairs of the Dark Continent has been written."—St. James's Gazette.

"Captain Lugard is the Bayard of African enterprise."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"A work of surpassing interest and value.....Many as are the tales of pluck and endurance which have arisen out of English exploration in Africa, none of them surpass in vividness and vitality this of Captain Lugard's."—Globe.

"Destined to rank as a classic in the history of the Dark Continent."—Morning Advertiser.

"A mine of valuable information and advice."—Scotsman.

LIFE AND TIMES OF THE RT. HON. WILLIAM HENRY SMITH, M.P. By Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P., Author of 'Passages in the Life of Sir Lucian Elphin,' 'Meridiana,' &c. With Portraits, and numerous Illustrations by Herbert Railton, G. L. Seymour, and Others. 2 Vols. demy 8vo, 25s.

"A charming and engaging biography.....The Life will give many of us a new view of Mr. Smith.—St. James's Gazette.

"Sir Herbert Maxwell has compiled a Life which few people will read without a certain emotion. No figure in recent political history is more admirable than that of this true man."—Standard.

"Sir Herbert Maxwell has ably completed his undertaking, and the biography is as practical and straightforward in tone as was its subject."—Morning Post.

"A handsome contribution to English literature, and a worthy memorial of a statesman who personified one of the best types of the national character."—Manchester Courier.

A JOURNEY THROUGH THE YEMEN, And some General Remarks upon that Country. By WALTER B. HARRIS, F.R.G.S., Author of "The Land of an African Sultan; Travels in Morocco," &c. With 3 Maps, and numerous Illustrations by Forestier and Wallace from Sketches and Photographs by the Author. Demy 8vo, 16s.

"As instructive and interesting a book of travel as one could wish for.....One cannot be too grateful to Mr. Harris for showing us what manner of men these Yemeni are."—Academy.

"His account of the Yemen and of his own adventures therein is full of life and actuality."—Times.

"A book of travel of great freshness and interest. It breaks ground in one of the few regions of the earth where a little mystery and romance still lingers."—Scotsman.

ON SOME OF SHAKESPEARE'S FEMALE CHARACTERS. By HELENA FAUCIT, LADY MARTIN. Dedicated by Permission to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen. Fifth Edition. With Portrait by Lehmann. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d.

MADONNA PIA: A Tragedy; and THREE OTHER DRAMAS. Written and Translated by Sir THEODORE MARTIN, K.C.B. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

POEMS and BALLADS of HEINRICH HEINE. Done into English Verse by Sir THEODORE MARTIN, K.C.B. Third Edition. Small crown 8vo, 5s.

ARMED EUROPE: How Coming Events cast their Shadows before. By General Sir ARCHIBALD ALISON, G.C.B.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE FOR DECEMBER.

BEN JONSON IN EDINBURGH. By Professor MASSON.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE FOR DECEMBER.

SUCCESSFUL FISH CULTURE IN THE HIGHLANDS.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE FOR DECEMBER.

HOW OUR ARMY IS FED.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE FOR DECEMBER.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

IN EVERY HOME A USE IS FOUND FOR ELLIMAN'S

For Aches and Pains
ELLIMAN'S UNIVERSAL EMBROCATION
AN EXCELLENT GOOD THING
One Shilling and Three halfpence
PREPARED ONLY BY ELLIMAN SONS & CO. SLOUGH. ENGLAND.

ELLIMAN'S IN MASHONALAND.

Read the following extract from the Journal of Bishop G. W. KNIGHT-BRUCE, Bishop of Mashonaland, 1892:—

"I offered a man £1 for half a bottle of Elliman's Embrocation, but he strongly preferred the Embrocation to the £1, as one might be replaced, the other not."

ELLIMAN'S IN MASHONALAND.

NEW NOVEL BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN.

A GENTLEMAN OF FRANCE:

Being the Memoirs of Gaston de Bonne, Sieur de Marsac.

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN,

Author of "The House of the Wolf." 3 vols., crown 8vo, 25s. 6d.

LONDON: LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO.

Hatchards, Booksellers, 187, Piccadilly, London.
ALL THE NEW AND STANDARD BOOKS.
Post Orders Promptly Executed. Usual Cash Discounts.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

NEW BOOKS AT THE LIBRARIES.

ANNIE BESANT: An Autobiography. With Twelve Illustrations, three being Photogravure Portraits. Demy 8vo, cloth, 16s.

DAYS SPENT ON A DOGE'S FARM. By MARGARET SYMONDS. Photogravure Frontispiece and 50 other Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 12s.

THE QUEEN AT BALMORAL. By FRANK POPE HUMPHREY, Author of "A New England Cactus," &c. Twelve full-page Illustrations, and a Photogravure. Large crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s.

SIDE LIGHTS. By James Runciman. With Memoir by GRANT ALLEN, and an Introduction by W. T. STEAD. Edited by JOHN F. RUNCIMAN. Large crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

INDEPENDENT NOVEL SERIES. NEW VOLUMES.

(7) TIARI. A Tahitian Romance. By Dora HORT, Author of "Tahiti: The Garden of the Pacific," &c.

(8) HUGH DARVILLE. By E. L. St. Germaine. Demy 12mo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

THE NEW "PSEUDONYM."

THE HOME OF THE DRAGON: A Tonquinese Idyll. By ANNA CATHARINA. Paper, 1s. 6d.; cloth, 2s.

LONDON: T. FISHER UNWIN, PATERNOSTER SQUARE, E.C.

£50, £40, £30, and other CASH PRIZES are offered to the readers of CASSELL'S MAGAZINE for the best Stories, &c.—For full particulars see the DECEMBER PART, Now on Sale, 7d.

IS MARRIAGE A LOTTERY?

The Author of "How to be Happy though Married" says No; but Mr. G. B. BURGIN says Yes. See the articles by these Writers in the DECEMBER PART of CASSELL'S MAGAZINE.

HOW SHALL I MAKE MY OWN and MY CHILDREN'S DRESSES?

See CASSELL'S MAGAZINE for DECEMBER, which contains ORIGINAL DESIGNS, specially supplied, and practical details by an experienced writer.

THE AUTHOR of "THE TEMPTATION OF DULCE CARRUTHERS" begins a New Serial Story in CASSELL'S MAGAZINE for DECEMBER, under the title of "The Sleeve of Care."

Now Ready. Price 7d.

CASSELL'S MAGAZINE

For DECEMBER.

Containing Three Complete Stories, Two New Serial Stories, and numerous articles of special interest.

Fully Illustrated by Leading Artists of the Day.

NEW NOVELS.

Paul Romer. A Novel.

By C. Y. HARGREAVES. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"A pretty and wholesome story, with much quiet power."—Observer.

"We would welcome more such stories, interesting and thoughtful, and written in the sure and refined English of a thorough gentleman."—Literary World.

"A more wholesome and fascinating tale than 'Paul Romer' has not been told in print for many a day."—Daily Telegraph.

The Curb of Honour.

By M. BETHAM-EDWARDS. Crown 8vo. Price 6s.

"A delightful account of life in Pyrenean valleys, and some excellent studies of character."—Observer.

"Miss Betham-Edwards's new book contains some excellent descriptions of Pyrenean scenery and of life in one of the remote mountain valleys on the borderland between France and Spain."—Athenæum.

"Of course the story is painful, but it is told with great tact and restraint, and in its final chapters it has undeniable pathos."—Woman.

Margaret Drummond,

MILLIONAIRE. By SOPHIE F. F. VEITCH. 3 vols. Crown 8vo.

"A novel of real excellence."—Spectator.

"A strong and clever story, readable and bright from end to end."—Daily Telegraph.

"A very thorough and earnest piece of work."—Daily Chronicle.

"A vivid and truthful picture of a west coast parish."—National Observer.

NEW EDITIONS.

A Tangled Web.

By LADY LINDSAY. Price 6s.

One Virtue: a Fiction.

By CHARLES T. C. JAMES. Price 6s.

The Last Touches.

By Mrs. W. K. CLIFFORD. Price 3s. 6d.

The Dryburgh Edition of

THE WAVERLEY NOVELS. Vols. 1 to 14 now ready, illustrated by CHARLES GREEN, GORDON BROWNE, PAUL HARDY, LOCKHART BOGLE, WALTER PAGET, FRANK DADD, WILLIAM HOLE, R.S.A., JOHN WILLIAMSON, H. M. PAGET, W. H. OVEREND, and GODFREY C. HINDLEY. Crown 8vo. Price 3s. each.

"When complete, this will be the best popular edition in existence."—Christian World.

"This edition appears to improve as it goes on."—Athenæum.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, W.

Kegan Paul, Trench, Trubner, & Co., LIMITED.

AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

GLANCES BACK THROUGH SEVENTY

YEARS: Autobiographical and other Reminiscences. By HENRY VIZETELLY. With Portrait, 2 vols. demy 8vo, 32s.

FIRST EDITION NOW READY.

PROVERBS in PORCELAIN, to which is added

"AU REVOIR," a Dramatic Vignette. By AUSTIN DOBSON. With 25 Illustrations by Bernard Partridge. Small 4to, 5s.

A LIMITED EDITION printed on Large Paper.

ELEVENTH THOUSAND.

The BALLAD of BEAU BROCADE, and other

Poems of the Eighteenth Century. By AUSTIN DOBSON. With 50 Illustrations by Hugh Thomson. Crown 8vo, 5s.

THE MATABELE WAR.

The STORY of an AFRICAN CHIEF. Being the Life of Khama. By Mrs. WYNDHAM KNIGHT-BRUCE (wife of the Bishop of Mashonaland). With a Preface by EDNA LYALL. Fcap. 8vo, 2s.

An INNOCENT IMPOSTOR, and other Stories.

By MAXWELL GRAY, Author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland," "In the Heart of the Storm," &c. With Frontispiece by Gordon Browne. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The ART of MUSIC. By C. Hubert H.

PARRY, M.A., Mus. Doc. Oxon., Cantab., and Dublin. Demy 8vo, 12s.

WEIRD TALES from NORTHERN SEAS, from the Danish of JONAS LIE. By R. NISBET BAIN. With 12 Illustrations by Laurence Housman. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d.

A Selection from the stories of Jonas Lie, the celebrated Danish novelist, from "Trold," "Den Fremsynte," &c., with 12 Illustrations by the illustrator of "Jump to Glory Jane."

LIVING ENGLISH POETS. MDCCCXCIII. With

Frontispiece by Herbert Railton. Large crown 8vo, printed on Hand-made Paper, parchment, or cloth, 12s.; vellum, 15s. A companion volume to "Living English Poets, MDCCCLXXXII."

A LIMITED EDITION printed on Large Paper.

NINTH THOUSAND.

The POETICAL WORKS of LEWIS MORRIS.

Including the Thirty-sixth Thousand of "The Epic of Hades." In 1 vol crown 8vo, 6s.; cloth extra, gilt edges, 7s. 6d.

FOURTH EDITION.

A VISION of SAINTS. By Lewis Morris.

Fcap. 8vo, 6s.

NEW VOLUME OF THE "INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES."

The DISPERSAL of SHELLS: an Inquiry into the Means of Dispersal possessed by Fresh-water and Land Mollusca. By H. WALLIS KEW, F.Z.S. With a Preface by ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, LL.D., F.R.S., &c. With Illustrations, crown 8vo, 5s.

TENNYSON: Poet, Philosopher, Idealist. Studies of the Life, Work, and Teaching of the Poet Laureate. By J. CUMING WALTERS. With Portrait, demy 8vo, 12s.

The ELEMENTS of HYPNOTISM. The Induction of Hypnosis, its Phenomena, its Dangers, and Value. By R. HARRY VINCENT. With 20 Illustrations showing Experiments. Crown 8vo, 5s.

FOUR CENTURIES of ENGLISH LETTERS,

A Selection of 350 Letters by 150 Writers, from the Period of the Paston Letters to the Present Time. By W. B. SCOONES. New and Cheaper Edition, large crown 8vo, 5s.

The DISCIPLES. By Harriet Eleanor Hamilton

KING. Fourteenth Edition, elzevir 8vo, printed on Hand-made Paper, 6s.; small 8vo, 5s.

LITTLE PETER: a Christmas Morality for Children of any Age. By LUCAS MALET. With numerous Illustrations. Fourth Thousand, Imperial 16mo, 5s.

The COMPLETE POETICAL WORKS of PERCY

BYSSHE SHELLEY. The Text newly Collated and Revised. Edited, with a Memoir and Notes, by GEORGE EDWARD WOODBERRY. Centenary Edition. In 4 vols., crown 8vo, 24s. net.

The most Complete Edition of Shelley's Poetical Works.

KEATS' POETICAL WORKS. Edited by W. T.

ARNOLD. Large crown 8vo, printed on Hand-made Paper, with Etched Portrait, parchment or cloth, 12s.; vellum, 15s. Cheap Edition, crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

WORDSWORTH, SELECTIONS from. By

WILLIAM KNIGHT, and other Members of the Wordsworth Society. Printed on Hand-made Paper, large crown 8vo, with Etched Portrait, parchment, 12s.; vellum, 15s. Cheap Edition, crown 8vo, 4s. 6d.

SHAKSPERE'S WORKS.

THE AVON EDITION. In One Volume, large type, double columns, with Glossarial Index, super royal 8vo, 7s. 6d.; also in extra bindings. In 6 vols., cloth, 15s. In 12 vols., cloth, 18s. In box, 21s. Bound in morocco, in box, 31s. 6d.

THE PARCHMENT LIBRARY EDITION. In 12 vols., Elzevir 8vo, choicely printed on Hand-made Paper, and bound in parchment or cloth, £3 12s.; or in vellum, £4 10s.

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS ROAD.

JAMES R. OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO.'S

NEW AND RECENT WORKS

TWO EDITIONS were rapidly disposed of: a THIRD has been PREPARED, and is NOW READY.

LETTERS OF JAMES RUSSELL

LOWELL. Edited by CHARLES ELIOT NORTON. 2 vols., large 8vo, cloth, 32s.

"Among the books of the present season few are likely to attract and enchain more readers than the two volumes of Letters of 'James Russell Lowell.'"—The Times.

CROWNED BY THE ACADEMIE FRANCAISE.

MARIE ANTOINETTE, THE LIFE OF. By MAXIME DE LA ROCHETERIE. With 27 Portraits. 2 vols., cloth extra, 21s.

"We observe that the original of this book has been commended for the French Academy, and it would be hard to find in modern French literature a work that is better worth translating than is this. The translation is a careful and good one. No Life of Marie Antoinette that has yet been published is as good as that of M. de la Rocheterie. The translator is not in this case the proverbial 'traitor.' It appears appropriately in the centenary of the Queen's death."—The Spectator.

WITH PORTRAIT AND MAP. Demy 8vo, 16s.

TRAVELS IN INDIA A HUNDRED

YEARS AGO. With a Visit to the United States. Being Notes and Reminiscences by THOMAS TWINING, a Civil Servant of the Honourable East India Company, preserved by his son, THOMAS TWINING, of Twickenham, and Edited by the Rev. WILLIAM H. G. TWINING, Vicar of St. Stephen's, Westminster.

"The subject and date of this narrative mark it as of exceptional interest."—The Times.

"It would be difficult to name a recent volume of travels at once so entertaining and so instructive as that in which the late Thomas Twining records his experiences in various lands."—The Dundee Advertiser.

SUPERBLY ILLUSTRATED THROUGHOUT.

RIDERS OF MANY LANDS.

By Col. T. A. DODGE. With numerous Drawings by FREDERICK REMINGTON. Demy 8vo, gilt top, cloth extra, 16s.

The Times says:—"Colonel Dodge writes with wide knowledge, keen sympathy, and trained judgment."

THIRD EDITION, READY IMMEDIATELY.

WALTER CRANE EDITION—

THE OLD GARDEN. By MARGARET DELAND. In Old English Type, with over One Hundred Illustrations in Colour from Designs by Walter Crane. Crown 8vo, bound after Designs by Walter Crane, 12s. 6d.

NEW WORK BY ST. GEORGE MIVART, F.R.S.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE ELEMENTS OF SCIENCE. By ST. GEORGE MIVART. Handsomely Illustrated. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

TYPES OF ANIMAL LIFE. By

ST. GEORGE MIVART. With 102 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. [Third Edition.

"Mr. St. George Mivart knows how to combine scientific accuracy with lucid and fascinating description, and in this handsome volume he has selected the most striking and remarkable types of animals, and explained their distinctive features."—The Spectator.

THE PRINCESS OF CLEVES.

By Madame DE LA FAYETTE. With Four Full-page Etchings, and Eight Etched Vignettes, by Jules Garnier, and Portrait engraved by Lamotte. 2 vols. 16mo, 21s.

A HOUSE OF POMEGRANATES.

The Young King, The Birthday of the Infanta, and other Beautiful Tales. By OSCAR WILDE. With Full-page Illustrations by C. H. Shannon, and numerous Decorations in the text by C. Ricketts. 8vo, cloth, uncut edges, 21s.

"The thick, creamy, satin paper, the beautiful type meandering within a wide meadow of margin, the exquisite illustrations, the delicate diaphanous visions depicted on plates prefixed to each story—all minister to that sense of beauty which Mr. Wilde has done so much to stimulate."—Daily Chronicle.

JAPONICA. By Sir Edwin Arnold,

M.A., K.C.I.E., C.S.I. With Illustrations by Robert Blum. Large 8vo, cloth ornamental, gilt tops, 15s.

"We may follow Sir Edwin Arnold in his bright sketches of Japanese men and manners with much profit and no little entertainment."—The Times.

THE DANUBE: From the Black

Forest to the Black Sea. By F. D. MILLET. Illustrated by Alfred Parsons. Large 8vo, cloth ornamental, gilt tops, 10s. 6d.

"Very charmingly illustrated."—The Times.

STUDIES IN CHAUCER: his Life and Writings. By Professor THOMAS R. LOUNSBURY. With a Portrait of Chaucer. In 3 vols., 8vo, cloth extra, 15s.

"Nothing comparable to the literary treatment he has received—remained the roughness and coarseness in English, or, so far as we know, in any other language."—Saturday Review.

SIBERIA AND THE EXILE

SYSTEM. By GEORGE KENNAN. Profusely Illustrated. 2 vols., demy 8vo, cloth extra, uncut, gilt tops, 32s.

"I say that this book is one of those few which make epochs in literature. Such books appear but once or twice in a generation, and Mr. Kennan's is undoubtedly one that will leave one of the deepest marks."—STEPNIAK, in the Graphic.

[Fourth Edition.

BEN-HUR: a Tale of the Christ.

By General LEW WALLACE. With upwards of 1,000 Illustrations, including 20 Full-page Photogravures, all specially made for this Edition. Every page Illustrated. 2 vols. Over 850 pp., 8vo, silk and gold, 31s. 6d.

"One of the finest and loftiest works of historical imagination I have ever read."—H. E. CARDINAL MANNING.

ART AND CRITICISM. By

THEODORE CHILD, Author of "Delicate Dining," "The Desire of Beauty," &c. Superbly Illustrated. Large 8vo, cloth, 31s. 6d.

"The illustrations are admirable."—The Times.

A SELECTION FROM THE

SONNETS OF WILLIAM WORDSWORTH. With numerous Illustrations by Alfred Parsons. Half leather, ornamental, 25s.

"Offers great varieties of opportunities to the accomplished pencil of Mr. Alfred Parsons."—The Times.

IN THE LEVANT. By Charles

DUDLEY WARNER, Author of "The American Italy," &c. With Portrait, 25 Photogravures, and Decorative Headpieces and Initials. 2 vols., large 8vo, cloth, extra gilt tops, 21s.

THE GREAT STREETS OF THE WORLD. BROADWAY.—By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. PICCADILLY.—By ANDREW LANG. THE BOULEVARDS.—By FRANCISQUE SARCEY. UNTER DEN LINDEN.—By PAUL LINDAU. THE CORSO of ROME.—By W. W. STORY. THE GRAND CANAL.—By HENRY JAMES. THE NEVSKY PROSPEKT.—By ISABEL F. HAPGOOD. With upwards of 100 Illustrations by W. Douglas Almond, A. B. Frost, Ilya Efimovitch Répin, G. Jeanniot, and others. Large 8vo, cloth ornamental, gilt tops, 18s.

THE ARMIES OF TO-DAY. A

Description of the Armies of the Leading Nations at the Present Time. By General Viscount WOLSELEY, Brigadier-General WESLEY MERRITT, U.S.A., and others. Richly Illustrated. Large 8vo, cloth extra, gilt tops, 16s.

PRUE AND I. By George William

CURTIS. Illustrated by Albert Edward Sterner. 8vo, silk extra, gilt tops, 16s.

"To dip into this book is to make an excursion into dreamland."—Sketch.

HORACE WALPOLE. A Memoir,

with an Appendix of Books printed at the Strawberry Hill Press. By AUSTIN DOBSON. Second and Revised Edition. Illustrated with Portraits, Views, &c. Post 8vo, cloth extra, gilt tops, 10s. 6d. A Limited Edition of 50 copies, numbered and printed on hand-made paper, 21s.

There remain a few copies of the original edition, printed from type at the De Vinne Press, on hand-made linen paper, with Eleven Etchings and numerous other Illustrations by Percy and Léon Moran, £3. 3s. net.

"An excellent specimen of the literary monograph, excellent in substance, attractive in style, and in paper, printing, and binding, worthy in every way of so ardent a lover of beautiful books as Horace Walpole himself."—The Times.

THE WARWICKSHIRE AVON.

Notes by A. T. QUILLER-COUCH. Illustrations by ALFRED PARSONS. Crown 8vo, half-leather, ornamental, 12s. 6d.

"Mr. Quiller-Couch touches with a pleasant hand every picturesque or storied spot as he passes by, and Mr. Parsons' little airy and delicate gem-like sketches enable every reader to taste the rapture of a pilgrim in those waters."—Daily News.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

ELIZABETHAN SONGS: "In Honour of Love and Beautie." Collected and Illustrated by EDMUND H. GARRETT. With an Introduction by ANDREW LANG. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt top, 10s. 6d. Limited Edition de Luxe, on imperial paper, £5 5s.

Note—New List of Books free on application.

London: JAMES R. OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO., 45 Albemarle Street, W.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

REMBRANDT: His Life, his Work, and his Time. By ÉMILE MICHEL. Translated from the French by FLORENCE SIMMONDS. Edited by FREDERICK WEDMORE.

In 2 vols., 4to, containing 33 Photogravure and 34 coloured plates, printed in Paris, and upwards of 250 Text Illustrations. Price £2. 2s. net.

Also an Edition de Luxe, limited to 150 copies for Great Britain, printed on vellum paper specially imported from Japan. With India proof duplicates of the Photogravures, printed in Paris. Price £10. 10s. net. (Only a few copies remain.)

The Daily News: "M. Michel and his interpreters, between them, have produced a masterpiece in this superb work."

NEW NOVELS IN THREE VOLUMES, AT ALL LIBRARIES.

THE HOYDEN. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.

A COMEDY OF MASKS. By ERNEST DOWSON and ARTHUR MOORE.

THE COUNTESS RADNA By W. E. NORRIS. Third Edition.

THE HEAVENLY TWINS. By SARAH GRAND. Fourth Thousand.

NEW NOVELS IN ONE VOLUME.

THE LAST SENTENCE. By MAXWELL GRAY, Author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland." Crown 8vo, 6s. [Just published.

RELICS: Fragments of a Life. By FRANCIS MACNAB. With a frontispiece, by R. HALWARD. 6s. [Just published.

APPASSIONATA: A Musician's Story. By ELSA D'ESTERRE KEELING. Crown 8vo, 6s.

MR. BAILEY-MARTIN. By PERCY WHITE. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. [Just published.

HEINEMANN'S INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY.

Edited by EDMUND GOSSE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; paper cover, 2s. 6d. each

A NEW VOLUME.

UNDER THE YOKE. From the Bulgarian of IVAN VAZOFF.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

OBSERVATIONS
ON THE EFFICACY OF BURNING SULPHUR FIRES
IN
EPIDEMICS OF CHOLERA, INFLUENZA,
And Other Zymotic Diseases.
WITH ADDENDA REGARDING DISEASE GERMS.
BY
SURGEON-GENERAL J. E. TUSON, M.D., F.R.C.S.,
H.M.'s Bengal Army (Retired). SIXTH EDITION.

HARRISON & SONS, Booksellers to the Queen and H.R.H. The Prince of Wales.
59, PALL MALL. 1893.

THE UNITED SERVICE MAGAZINE.

SIXTY-FIFTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.—DECEMBER, 1893.

The Matabili and their War Dance. Capt. W. SITWELL.
Names of British Men-of-War. Capt. H. MIST, R.N.
Forgotten Volunteers. OWEN E. WHEELER.
Battalion Organization. A Captain of Infantry.
MacMahon and Von Kameké. Capt MARKHAM ROSE, R.M.A.
Miss Daniell's Soldiers' Homes. E. L. DE BUTTS.
The Fire of Artillery. Major J. J. HENRIQUEZ, R.A.
Cavalry in the Berkshire Manœuvres. A Foreign Officer.
Suppression of Rebellion in the North-West Territories of Canada, 1885. Gen. Sir FRED. MIDDLETON.
The Training of Blue-Jackets. A Naval Officer.
The Royal Marine Light Infantry. Capt. J. F. DANIELL, R.M.L.I.
South East Africa. J. M. GAWNE.

TWO SHILLINGS MONTHLY.

OFFICES—15, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.
And at all Railway Stations and Booksellers.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

DECEMBER, 1893.

Faldan Fustian. By MICHAEL DAVITT.
Socialism in France. By YVES GUYOT (late Minister of Public Works of France).
What London People die of. By HUGH PERCY DUNN, F.R.C.S.
Football as a Moral Agent. By HELY HUTCHINSON ALMOND (Head-Master of Loretto).
Recollections of Professor Jowett. By ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.
Upper Houses in Modern States. 1. The Italian Senate. By the MARCHESE F. NOBILI-VITELLESCHI (Senator of Italy).
The Anonymous Critic. By H. D. TRAILL.
Queen Elizabeth and Ivan the Terrible. By W. BARNES STEVENI.
Confessions of a Village Tyrant. By the Rev. EDWARD MILLER.
The Queen and her First Prime Minister. By the Hon. REGINALD B. BRETT.
The Index and my Articles on Hell. By Professor ST. GEORGE MIVART.
On the Origin of the Mashonaland Ruins. By J. THEODORE BENT.
The London School Board; a Reply to Mr. Lyulph Stanley. By JOSEPH R. DIGGLE (Chairman of the Board).
A Wedding-Gift to England in 1662. By WALTER FREWEN LORD.
Toulon and the French Navy. By WM. LAIRD CLOWES.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & Co., LTD.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON'S LIST.

"An amazingly clever book."
ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

A GRAY EYE OR SO.
By the Author of "I Forbid the Banns." In 3 vols.

 The FIRST and SECOND Editions exhausted. THIRD Edition ready this day.

MRS. CONNEY'S NEW NOVEL.

GOLD FOR DROSS.
By the Author of "A Ruthless Avenger," "A Lady Horsebreaker," &c. In 3 vols.

"To the list of gifted women who have achieved legitimate triumphs in the realm of fiction must now be added the name of Mrs. Conney, whose latest story, 'Gold for Dross,' is entitled to a place of honour in the very front rank of contemporary romance. This is indeed an excellent piece of work, lofty in purpose, ingenious in conception, and symmetrical in construction."—THE DAILY TELEGRAPH.

SARAH DOUDNEY'S NEW NOVEL.

A ROMANCE OF LINCOLN'S INN.
By the Author of "Through Pain to Peace," &c. In 2 vols.

"A fine story. The Author's remarkable skill in construction has long ago been recognised; it is fully shown in this attractive novel."—THE WORLD.

BY F. FRANKFORT MOORE.

DAIREEN: A SOUTH AFRICAN NOVEL.
By the Author of "I Forbid the Banns." In crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

"Remarkably original and well constructed, Mr. Moore is to be congratulated on having created so natural and graceful a heroine. He has talent of a high order. 'Daireen' is, indeed, a fine story, full of strength and manliness, of spirit and style."—MORNING POST.

70th Thousand.

THE STORY OF AN AFRICAN FARM.
By OLIVE SCHREINER. In handsome cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

"There was a most exciting debate at the Pioneer Club on 'Favourite Women Novelists.' When the vote came to be taken Olive Schreiner stood first on the list."—BRITISH WEEKLY, Nov. 30.

An Important and Unique Fine-Art Work.
THE FIRST BOOK ON THE SUBJECT.

FRENCH ILLUSTRATORS.
By LOUIS MORIN. With Introduction by JULES CLARETIE.
Édition de Luxe, Limited to 130 Copies for Great Britain. Each copy numbered and signed.

More than Sixty Artists represented. Over One Hundred and Fifty Sketches, Portraits, and Drawings in the Text.

Fifteen Large Plates printed on Japan paper, and prepared by Goupil (Boussod, Valadon et Cie. successors) under the supervision of the Artists themselves. Price £3 12s. 6d. net.

LONDON: HUTCHINSON & CO., Paternoster-row.

— THE —
FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.
December.

The Ireland of To-Day. Part II.—The Rhetoricians. By X.
Some Unedited Letters of Keats. By A. Forbes Sieveking.
The Unemployed. By the Rev. Canon Barnett.
The Ice Age and its Work. Part II. By A. R. Wallace, F.R.S.
A South Sea Island and its People. By Frederick J. Moss.
Self-Government. By W. S. Lilly.
A Hunt for Happiness. By the late Francis Adams.
Gounod. By Mlle. de Bovet and M. Widor.
Clothing as a Protection Against Cold. By Dr. Robson Roose.
History and Sea-Power. By Nauticus.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Poems.

By ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON, D.C.L., Poet Laureate. A Reprint of the 1857 Edition, with the original Illustrations by F. Creswick, J. E. Millais, W. Holman Hunt, W. Mulready, J. C. Horsley, D. G. Rossetti, C. Stanfield, D. Maclise. Engraved by W. J. Linton, T. Williams, J. Thompson, W. T. Green, and Dalziel Brothers. 4to, cloth, 21s.

. A Limited Edition on hand-made paper, with Illustrations printed on Japanese Paper and mounted in text. Super royal 8vo, 42s. net.

Our Village.

By MARY RUSSELL MITFORD. With a Preface by ANNE THACKERAY RITCHIE, and 100 Illustrations by HUGH THOMSON. Crown 8vo, gilt, or edges uncut, 6s.

. Also an Edition de Luxe, limited, super royal 8vo, hand-made paper, uniform with "Cranford," 30s. net. [All sold.

TIMES.—"This charm Mr. Hugh Thomson has admirably seized and expressed in illustrations almost rivalling Caldecott's in their quaint rendering of the humours of English rural life."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"To turn over such pages is a pleasure indeed."

Humorous Poems of Thomas Hood.

With a Preface by ALFRED AINGER, and 130 Illustrations by CHARLES E. BROCK. Crown 8vo, gilt, or edges uncut, 6s.

. Also an Edition de Luxe, super royal 8vo, hand-made paper, 30s. net.

A Short History of the English People.

By J. R. GREEN, M.A. Illustrated Edition. Edited by Mrs. J. R. GREEN and Miss KATE NORGATE. Vol. III. Super royal 8vo, 12s. net.

The Growth and Influence of Classical Greek Poetry.

Lectures delivered in 1892 on the Percy Turnbull Memorial Foundation in the Johns Hopkins University. By R. C. JEBB, Litt.D., M.P. Crown 8vo, 7s. net.

Some Aspects of the Greek Genius.

By S. H. BUTCHER, Litt.D., LL.D., Professor of Greek, University of Edinburgh. Second Edition, revised, crown 8vo, 7s. net.

Letters of Travel.

By the Right Rev. PHILLIPS BROOKS, late Bishop of Massachusetts. 8s. 6d. net.

Letters of Asa Gray.

Edited by JANE LORING GRAY. 2 vols. Extra crown 8vo, 15s. net.

Reminiscences of the Great Mutiny,

1857-8-9. Including the Relief, Siege, and Capture of Lucknow, and the Campaigns in Rohilcund and Oude. By WILLIAM FORBES MITCHELL, late Sergeant 93rd Sutherland Highlanders. Extra Crown 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

MACMILLAN & CO., LONDON.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS' New Books.

VAN TWILLER EDITION.

KNICKERBOCKER'S HISTORY OF NEW YORK

FROM THE BEGINNING OF THE WORLD TO THE END OF THE DUTCH DYNASTY. By DIEDRICH KNICKERBOCKER. By WASHINGTON IRVING. With 225 Original Illustrations by E. H. KEMBLE. 2 vols., white cloth extra, gilt top, 25s. net.

UNIFORM WITH THE ABOVE.

IRVING'S CONQUEST OF GRANADA.
Illustrated with Photogravures by R. H. LAWRENCE.
2 vols., 8vo, cloth extra, 25s. net.

IRVING'S THE ALHAMBRA.
Illustrated with 30 Photogravures by R. H. LAWRENCE.
2 vols., 8vo, cloth extra, 25s. net.

THE WILDERNESS HUNTER. With an account of the Big Game of the United States, and its chase with Horse, Hound, and Rifle. By THEODORE ROOSEVELT. With 24 Full-page Illustrations by Remington, Frost, Sandham, and others. 8vo, cloth, 15s.

New Volume in the Heroes of the Nation Series.

HENRY OF NAVARRE, AND THE HUGUENOTS IN FRANCE. By P. F. WILLERT, M.A., Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford. With Maps and Illustrations. Cloth, 5s.; roxburgh, 6s.

NEW CATALOGUE ON APPLICATION.

24, BEDFORD STREET, STRAND, LONDON AND NEW YORK.

NEW NOVELS NOW READY.

SECOND EDITION THIS DAY.

DIANA TEMPEST.

By Mary Cholmondeley.

Author of "Sir Charles Danvers." In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "NEAR NEIGHBOURS."

The SWING of the PENDULUM.

By FRANCES MARY PEARD, Author of "The Baroness," &c. In 2 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

TEMPE. By Constance Cotterell, Author of "Strange Gods." In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

A HEROINE in HOMESPUN. By FREDERIC BRETON, Author of "The Crime of Maunsell Grange." In 2 vols., crown 8vo.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

Mr. Edward Arnold's New Books.

Now ready at all Libraries.

THIS TROUBLESOME WORLD.

THE NEW NOVEL, by the Authors of

"THE MEDICINE LADY."

3 vols. crown 8vo, 31s. 6d.

"An extremely vigorous, well-constructed, and readable story. It abounds from first to last in clever contrivance and thrilling interest."—Daily Telegraph.

SECOND EDITION JUST READY.

SEVENTY YEARS of IRISH LIFE. By W. R. LE FANU. With Portraits. 1 vol. 8vo, 16s.

"Mr. Le Fanu's literary friends were well inspired to procure for the public one of the most amusing collections of Irish anecdote and reminiscence that we have ever seen."—Daily Chronicle.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries.

RECOLLECTIONS of LIFE and WORK. By LOUISA TWINING. With Portraits. 1 vol. demy 8vo, 15s.

STEPHEN REMARX: a Story of Society and Religion. By the Hon. and Rev. J. ADDERLEY. Third Edition. Small 8vo, paper 1s.; elegantly bound, 3s. 6d.

TALES from HANS ANDERSEN. With nearly 40 beautiful Illustrations by E. A. Lemann. 1 vol. 4to, handsomely bound, gilt edges, 7s. 6d.

"The most charming edition of a charming author."—Westmorland Gazette.

"Miss Lemann has entered into the spirit of these most delightful of fairy-tales, and makes the book specially attractive by its dainty and descriptive illustrations."—Saturday Review.

GREAT PUBLIC SCHOOLS: Eton—Harrow— WINCHESTER — RUGBY — WESTMINSTER — MARLBOROUGH — CHELTENHAM—HAILEYBURY—CLIFTON—CHARTERHOUSE. With nearly 100 Illustrations by the best Artists. Handsomely bound, 8vo, 6s.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.
PUBLISHER TO THE INDIA OFFICE.

TO BOOKBUYERS for Christmas Presents, PRIVATE and PUBLIC LIBRARIANS, &c.—Messrs. W. H. SMITH & SON'S CATALOGUE for DECEMBER of New and Second Hand Books offered at prices greatly reduced is now ready, and will be sent post-free upon application to the Library Department, 186, Strand, London, W.C.

THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS COMPANY,

29 & 31, BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK,

Have Been Appointed our Agents in America for the sale of

"TRUTH."

Single copies can be obtained through any newsdealer in the United States and Canada, or by applying direct to the International News Co., where yearly subscriptions will also be received. Newsdealers throughout the United States and Canada can obtain supplies of TRUTH by applying to the wholesale agents.

"TRUTH"

CAN BE OBTAINED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING AT

THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,

242, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards. Tennis Lawn.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table-d'hote at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL METROPOLE.—On the East Cliff, facing the sea, three minutes' from East Station. The largest, and most magnificent Hotel in Bournemouth. Now open to receive visitors. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.
GEORGE ALEXANDER, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 12s. to 15s. per day.
According to position of rooms selected.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hote at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE. THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of La Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Tabl d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porte Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 783.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Ken sington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric ligh throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ortin England THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by it own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now ope for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELI

PORT OROTAVA, Teneriffe.—HOTEL MARTIANEZ (late GRAND).—First-class, standing in a beautiful garden. Shad verandahs, large public and private rooms. Billiards, tennis. Good cooking good wines, excellent spring water.
Manager, J. R. EGGER.

PORTRUSH, co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL (B. and N.C. Rly). Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificen scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner. French cuisine. Combined Railwa and Hotel Tickets from Belfast.—Illustrated tariff on application to MANAGER

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to al floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Tabl d'hote at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL.—First and leading hotel in St. Leonards. Unequalled position detached, faces sea, due south. Modern improvements, passenger lift, electric light in every room, handsomely furnished. Home comforts. Terms moderate —Address, MANAGER.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the
ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.
TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

LANGHAM HOTEL,
PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.
Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6.30 until 8.15.
Under the Management of WALTER GOSDEN.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.
(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.
THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.
SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.
Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.
NO SUPPERS.
TELEPHONE No. 3,507.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn and Lincoln's Inn Fields. A high class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, happily situated, having all modern conveniences and a moderate tariff. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d., at separate tables. FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Write for tariff.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.
(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).
Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

WHERE SHALL WE SPEND 'XMAS?
At the GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.
Every home comfort. Inclusive terms, per day or week; per week, £3. Large Ball-room for use of visitors. Finest sea views in Jersey, and the largest and best-appointed Hotel in Channel Isles. Hot and cold sea water baths. Skating Rink. For tariff, address—
SYDNEY ROGERS, Manager and Secretary.

ILFRACOMBE.
Warmest Sea-side Winter Resort in England.
ILFRACOMBE HOTEL. The principal Hotel in Ilfracombe.
First-class return tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. Railway, from 1st November to 14th March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance at the ILFRACOMBE HOTEL, £5 5s. each. Available for one month. Express trains leave Waterloo 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Ask for Hotel Tickets, available by all trains.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL, 180 Apartments. Patronised by H. R. H. the Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne, K.T. Extensive Structural Alterations and Decorative Repairs have been carried out and 30 NEW BEDROOMS ADDED SINCE OCTOBER, 1891. The entire system of drainage has been re-modelled and re-constructed, and the most improved sanitary appliances fitted to all Bath-rooms, &c. The Hotel stands in its own private gardens of 2½ acres, faces the sea, and is only five minutes' from the Harbour in the lower part of the town and Shorncliffe New West End Station, and is most convenient for Continental travellers.—For tariff charges, &c., please address the Proprietor.

— THE —
CAP MARTIN HOTEL,
Between Mentone and Monte Carlo,
IS NOW OPEN
(UNDER THE SAME MANAGEMENT).
Perfect Sanitation, Designed and Executed by GEORGE JENNINGS, London.
The Hotel has private Dairy and Laundry. Omnibus meets trains at Mentone.—Address:
MANAGER, CAP MARTIN HOTEL, MENTONE.

THE RUNNACLEAVE, ILFRACOMBE.—Highest average Winter Temperature in England. South aspect. 120 Beautifully-appointed rooms, thoroughly warmed by hot-water apparatus; theatre in constant use; yacht, tennis, billiards, photographic dark room, and indoor skating rink free of charge. Moderate tariff.

AMUSEMENTS.

AWRIE & Co., 15, Old Bond-street, W.
EXHIBITION OF CHOICE PICTURES,
including
"THE BATH OF VENUS,"
by
E. BURNE JONES.
NOW OPEN FROM 10 to 6 DAILY.

THE GRAFTON GALLERIES, 5, Grafton-street, Bond-street.
EXHIBITION of FRENCH ARTISTS in DECORATIVE ART. NOW OPEN. 10 to 6 - Admission 1s.

LONDON PAVILION. Grand and Unsurpassed Programme for Cattle Show Week. The Original WRESTLING LION (for Three weeks only), Albert Chevalier, Little Tich, Fannie Leslie, Harry Randall, Carl Certz, Mdlle. D'Alton, Lucy Clarke, James Lawn, the Three Romas, George Beauchamp, Nellie Navette, Herbert Campbell, Alice Mayduc, Billie Barlow; Brown, Newland, and Leclerq, Ada Blanche, J. W. Rowley, Harry Freeman, Eugene Stratton, Alice Lloyd, Fred Mason, Arthur Rigby, Sells and Young. EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

THE PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue. SCARAMOUCHE, Pantomime Ballet, at 10.40. The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station, in connection with all railways. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations.—New Portrait Models of the late PRINCE ALEXANDER OF BULGARIA and their Majesties the EMPEROR of RUSSIA, the EMPEROR of GERMANY, the EMPEROR of AUSTRIA, and the KING of ITALY. Music all day. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Chamber of Horrors, 6d. Open 9 to 10.

NIAGARA in WINTER.—Panorama and Diorama of the Ice Palace at Montreal.—NIAGARA HALLS, St. James's Park Station. DAILY, 10 to 10 p.m. Admission 1s. Children 6d. Tickets, including admission, all District and Metropolitan Railway Stations.

CONJURERS, PUNCH & JUDY, MAGIC LANTERNS, VENTRILOQUISTS'
Professors Bellairs, Hilton, and 1,000 Refined Entertainers.
Send for Illustrated Price List, gratis.
THE SOCIETY OF ENTERTAINERS,
Mention this Paper.] 44, Upper Baker St., London, N.W.

HOTELS.

MADEIRA.—REID'S HOTELS, Santa Clara, Miles's Carmo Hortas, New Hotel. First-class, in finest situations. Large gardens. Tennis courts. Billiards. Sea bathing. Modern sanitation. All steamers met. Pamphlet free.—PASSMORE, 124, Cheapside, London, E.C.

ALBANY HOTEL (ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.
Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Daily Hotel with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES. — Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

TRAVELLERS TO BRINDISI AND THE EAST
WILL NOW FIND
BOLOGNA the most convenient stopping-place.
Coupé-lits can be booked beforehand by Mr. FRANK, Hotel Brun, for DAILY EXPRESS TRAIN, leaving Bologna 6.55. p.m., arriving at Brindisi 10.50 a.m.

TRAVELLERS to EGYPT and OTHERS are specially invited to VISIT ABOUKIR (about 5 miles from Alexandria), if they require a suitable INVESTMENT (with or without occupation), and a certainty of a continuing and increasing income with good landed security, and secure a portion of the 23,000 acres at present unsold. Purchases can now be made on very favourable terms either for cash or by instalments. Leases granted. Pamphlets and full information supplied by the SECRETARY, at the Aboukir Company's Office, 134, Palmerston-buildings, Bishopsgate-street, London, E.C., or by the Chairman, SAMUEL G. SHEPPARD, 57, Old Broad-street, London, E.C.

THE INTERNATIONAL SLEEPING CAR and EUROPEAN EXPRESS TRAINS COMPANY. TRAINS DE LUXE AND HOTELS.—SEASON 1893-4. MEDITERRANEAN EXPRESS EVERY SATURDAY and TUESDAY at 7.25 p.m. from the Gare de Lyons, Paris, arriving Nice 1.28 p.m. the following day. Special Ceinture Train from Gare du Nord on arrival of 8.0 and 10.0 a.m. trains from London. Dinner served on the Trains on leaving Paris. Through Sleeping and Dining Cars, with covered vestibule inter-communication between the cars. Only Dining Car service this year. Three other Daily Services to the Riviera.
The Company's RIVIERA PALACE HOTEL, NICE (Cimiez).
PENINSULAR EXPRESS EVERY FRIDAY 8.15 p.m., London to Brindisi. To Cairo under five days viâ P. and O. Steamers. Through Cars from Calais.
The Company's GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL, BRINDISI.
SUD EXPRESS.—MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS to Pau, Biarritz, Madrid and Lisbon, &c.
The Company's GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL (Terminus), LISBON.
ORIENT EXPRESS. — Daily to VIENNA, Three Times Weekly to CONSTANTINOPLE.
These Trains are composed exclusively of Sleeping, Saloon, and Dining Cars, comfortably warmed and thoroughly ventilated. For all tickets and full details of Trains and Hotels apply to Chief London Office, 122, Pall Mall, and City Office, 5, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

AMUSEMENTS.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Lessee, Mr. HENRY IRVING. On BOXING NIGHT will be produced Mr. OSCAR PAPRETT'S FAIRY PANTOMIME, CINDERELLA. TWO PERFORMANCES daily at 1.30 and 7.30. Box office open daily 10 till 5. Seats can be secured by letter or telegram Mr. Joseph Hurst, Acting Manager. LYCEUM THEATRE.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—Mr. TREE, Sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING (for a limited number of Nights), at 8.15,
CAPTAIN SWIFT.
Mr. Tree, Messrs. Henry Kemble, C. Allan, H. Clark, C. M. Hallard, Maclagan, and F. H. Macklin; Mesdames Carlotta Addison, Fanny Coleman, Irene Vanbrugh, and Mrs. Tree.
MATINÉE of CAPTAIN SWIFT SATURDAY NEXT, December 9 at 2.30.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) from 10 till 5.—HAYMARKET.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S THEATRE. Under the Management of Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS. Monday Next and Every Evening, at 7.30, A LIFE OF PLEASURE, by Henry Pettitt and Sir Augustus Harris. Transferred in its entirety from Drury Lane Theatre (full particulars see Daily Papers). Box-office open all day.

GAIETY THEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, GEORGE EDWARDES. Every Evening, at 8, an entirely New Burlesque, in Three Acts, entitled DON JUAN, by James T. Tanner. Lyrics by Adrian Ross. Music by Meyer Lutz. With full Gaiety Company, including Miss Millie Hilton and Mr. Arthur Roberts. Box-office open 10 to 6 daily. Doors open 7.40. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2. Doors open 1.45.

SAVOY THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.15, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, UTOPIA, LIMITED, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. Doors open at 7.45 and 2. Box-office open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, R. Harding, J. Carter, H. Russell, and Arthur Williams; Mesdames Mary Rorke, Alma Stanley, and Agnes Thomas.—Box-office 10 to 6. Doors open at 7.30.

GARRICK THEATRE.—Mr. JOHN HARE, Lessee and Manager.—DIPLOMACY, adapted by Clement Scott and B. C. Stephenson. EVERY EVENING, at 8. Mr. Bancroft, Mr. F. Robertson, Mr. A. Cecil, Mr. G. Hare, Mr. Trent, Mr. Mayeur, and Mr. John Hare; Miss K. Rorke, Miss E. Robins, Lady Monckton, Miss Luck, and Mrs. Bancroft. Box office 10 to 5. Matinée To-day (Wednesday), at 2. No evening performance.

COURT THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—To-Night and Every Evening, a New Triple Bill. At 8.15, GOOD-BYE; at 9, A VENETIAN SINGER; and at 10, UNDER THE CLOCK. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.30. Doors open 2. Box-office open 10 to 5. Telephone No. 3,031.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.10,
THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY,
By Arthur W. Pinero. Doors open 7.45; carriages, 11.
MORNING PERFORMANCE SATURDAY NEXT, December 9, at 2.30.
Box-office open 10 to 5. Seats may be booked by letter, telegram, or telephone.—ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square.—Every Night, at 8 (doors 7.30), AUGUSTIN DALY'S COMPANY in THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL. Miss Ada Rehan as Lady Teazle; Mr. William Farren as Sir Peter; and Mr. Clarke, Mr. Bourchier, Mrs. Gilbert, Miss Haswell, Miss Vanbrugh, &c. The Telegraph says, "Miss Rehan's view of Lady Teazle is the right one." The Times calls it "another triumph to be added to the many already won by Miss Rehan." MATINEES of SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL, Saturday Next, December 9, Saturday, December 16, and Wednesday, December 20, and Wednesday, December 27, at 2. Seats may be secured for "The School for Scandal" for the entire month of December, at the Box-office (daily, 9 to 5), and at all Libraries.

THE TRAFALGAR THEATRE.—Sole Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. FRANK WYATT (Miss Violet Melnotte). Under the Management of Mr. CHARLES H. HAWTREY.—Every Evening, at 9, a New Farcical Comedy, entitled TOM, DICK, AND HARRY, by Mrs. R. Pacheco. Preceded, at 8.10, by PICKWICK. Mr. Charles Hawtrey and Miss Jessie Bond. Matinée Every Saturday, at 3 o'clock.—Box-office open from 10 to 10.—Business Manager, Mr. E. F. Bradley.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.30, Musical Comedy, words by Owen Hall, Lyrics by Harry Greenbank, Music by Sydney Jones, entitled A GAIETY GIRL. Messrs. C. Hayden Coffin, Eric Lewis, Bradfield, Kaye, Bantock, D'Orsay, Porteous, Rimma, and Harry Monkhouse; Mmes. Decima Moore, Juliette Nesville, Aida Jenoure, Cutler, Studholme, Pounds, Phelps, Maud Hobson, Massey, Selwick, Robinson. At 7.45, SIXES. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.15, Vol. II. of MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine, H. Haslem, and Charles Danby; Misses Jennie McNulty, Agnes Hewitt, Maggie Roberts, and Lettie Lind. Preceded, at 7.45, by Rex Harley, the inimitable Mimic of Popular Actors. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30.—Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

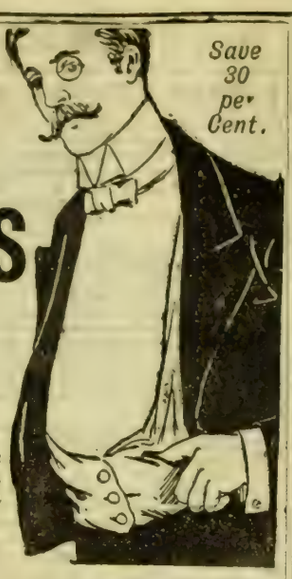
TOOLE'S THEATRE. — Every Evening, at 9 o'clock, MRS. OTHELLO, by the late Fred Leslie and Arthur Shirley. Miss Fanny Brough, Mr. Charles Glenney, Miss Cicely Richards, Mr. Julian Cross, Mr. W. H. Day, Mr. G. Raiemond, Miss Blanche Horlock, Miss Florence Melville. Preceded, at 8.15, by THE BROTHERS. Doors open 7.45. Seats at all Libraries. Box-office open daily. MATINÉE, every Wednesday and Saturday, at 3 o'clock.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.30.—Two BALLETS, Operatic Music, and Varieties. At 8.30, the Grand Ballet, FIDELIA. At 10.30, CHICAGO, and Ballet of Nations. Frequent Change of Programme. On Monday next, DON QUIXOTE. Telephone 35,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Two GRAND BALLETS.—At 7.30, KATRINA, and at 10.20, THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME. Grand Varieties. The new entrance from Leicester-street is now open. Doors open at 7.30. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

PURE IRISH
LINEN SHIRTS
Tailor-Made
Direct from Ireland.



Save 30 per Cent.

Made of the most durable Long Cloth, and fitted with the finest Linen Ireland can produce.

MADE TO MEASURE

FIT AND STYLE GUARANTEED IN THE LATEST FASHION.

Half-a-dozen Pure Irish bespoke Shirts, securely packed, delivered free to any address in the Kingdom for 33/-, 39/-, or 45/-. Foreign Postage Extra.

Sample Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 5/6, 6/6, or 7/6.

Dress Shirts with fine Irish Linen Fittings, Six for 39/-, delivered free. A Sample Dress Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 6/6.

Old Shirts re-fitted with New Irish Linen Fronts, Cuffs, and Neck-bands for 2/3 and 2/9 each. Returned Carriage Free. Coloured Shirts, best quality. French Cambric 30/-, Oxford Cloth 33/- per half-dozen. Patterns Free. Four-fold Irish Linen Collars, best quality, 7/6 per dozen. General Catalogue post free.

For Measure, send size of Collar, Chest, and Height, or an old shirt.

TAAFFE & COLDWELL,
Army Shirt Tailors, 81, Grafton St., Dublin.

SCOTTADIE
THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE
115 & 115a REGENT STREET
LONDON W.

For Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Mauds.
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns

Telegraphic Address—Scott Adie, London.

PINE * WOOL * PRODUCTS
TRADE MARK
L&L Lairitz

LAIRITZ'S
CELEBRATED

Established 1853. Award 18 Medals and Diplom For the Relief and Cure GOUT, RHEUMATIS COLDS, &c.
Wadding in packets, Knee-Caps, Inside Soles, C EXTRACT FOR BATH, Lozenges. Of all the LEADIN CHEMISTS everywhere. Flannels, Underclothir Knitting Yarn. Sold by all leading Drapers and Hosie

Wholesale Depot for Fabrics only: WELCH, MARGETSON Co., 16, Cheapside, London.

Caution.—Observe the Tree Trade Mark with Signature on each piece.

PINE WOOL

COALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORN COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES. Londonderry Wallsend, 33s Pittington Wallsend, 31s.; Primrose, 30s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 29s. per to Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

CARPETS.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

AXMINSTER PILE CARPETS,
2/11 (American) 3/11 to 4/9

WILTON PILE CARPETS,
3/9 to 4/6

BRUSSELS CARPETS,
2/1 to 3/9

TAPESTRY CARPETS,
1/9 to 2/6

LINOLEUM,
1/- to 4/- per square yard.

DECCAN RUGS,
8/9 each.

CATALOGUES FREE.

TRELOAR & SONS
LUDGATE HILL.

HOSPITALS AND APPEALS.

HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, Brompton.

William S. Deacon, Esq., Treasurer.

Funds are urgently required for the support of this unendowed Charity. There are now 321 beds in the two buildings.

Annual Expenses about £54,000, towards which the only fixed income is under £5,000.

William H. Theobald, Secretary.

INSTITUTED 1740.

LONDON HOSPITAL, WHITECHAPEL, E.

776 BEDS.

Funds Urgently Needed.

£40,000 Required Each Year from Voluntary Contributions.

BANKERS { ROBARTS, LUBBOCK & CO. / GLYN, MILLS, CURRIE & CO.

J. H. HALE, Esq., Chairman. G. Q. ROBERTS, House Governor.

SUFFERING WOMEN.

The Committee of the Chelsea Hospital for Women Earnestly Appeal for Funds.

The Hospital has 60 beds. Its object: the treatment of those Distressing Diseases peculiar to Women. About 600 in-patients, 13,000 out-patients annually. Entirely supported by voluntary gifts. Convalescent Home, 22 beds.

HENRY E. WRIGHT, Treasurer.

Fulham-road, S.W.

WEST END HOSPITAL FOR

Diseases of the Nervous System, Paralysis, and Epilepsy.

73, WELBECK STREET, LONDON, W.

PATRONESS.—H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

Maintains fifty cots for little children, who are admitted from all parts. This Hospital is totally without endowment. FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED to meet the current expenditure. Cheques and postal orders may be crossed Sir Samuel Scott, Bart., & Co. H. ALEX. DOWELL, Honorary Treasurer.

North-West London Hospital,

Kentish Town Road.

Patron.
H.R.H. Princess Christian
Chairman.
Rev. F. J. Ponsonby.
Treasurer.
George Herring, Esq.

The only Institution of the kind in this densely populated district. Last year there were 700 in-patients and 40,000 cases at Out-patients.

Income from Annual Subscriptions is less than £2000 yearly expenditure, £4000, leaving a deficiency of over £2000 to be made up each year by special benefactions.

FUNDS ARE GREATLY NEEDED.

ALFRED CRASKE, Secretary.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N. — The long-continued prevalence of scarlet fever is causing a heavy strain on the resources of this Hospital. The benevolent are earnestly asked for HELP. Annual subscribers of a Guinea and upwards for more than a year, as well as donors of Ten Guineas or more in one sum are Governors, and are entitled to free treatment for their domestic servants. Sufferers residing outside the metropolitan area can only be received into the Hospital from the families of Governors.

Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by the Secretary, at the Hospital, MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.

Bankers—Prescott, Dimsdale, & Co., 50, Cornhill.

TO THE CHARITABLE.—FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED for the

BRITISH HOSPITAL FOR MENTAL DISORDERS AND BRAIN DISEASES

(Forbes Winslow Memorial), 205, EUSTON ROAD, N.W.

President—THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE.

Vice-Presidents—The Earl of Hardwicke, Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, M.P., Alfred de Rothschild, Esq., Dr. Hermann Adler, Chief Rabbi, Rev. R. W. L. Tollemache Tollemache, M.A., &c.

ENTIRELY FREE to the POOR. 15,000 Attendances Registered.

WILLIAM J. WHELAN, Secretary.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM for IDIOTS.

Nearly 600 afflicted cases are receiving special care and education.

FUNDS urgently REQUIRED.

Special provision is made for the reception of Private Cases on payment.

H. GERARD HOARE, Esq., J.P., Treasurer.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.

Cheques or Postal Orders may be crossed Messrs. Hoare, Bankers, 37, Fleet-street, E.C.

Offices, 36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

THE NATIONAL REFUGES FOR HOMELESS AND DESTITUTE CHILDREN

And "ARETHUSA" and "CHICHESTER" Training Ships,

164, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.C.

PRESIDENT - - - THE EARL OF JERSEY, G.C.M.G.

As this Society is a National one, not simply Metropolitan, admission is ensured to a destitute child from whatever part of the kingdom it may come.

900 CHILDREN MAINTAINED. FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED.

H. BRISTOW WALLEN, Secretary. HENRY G. COPELAND, Finance and Deputation Secretary.

KING'S COLLEGE HOSPITAL, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, W.C.

Patron - - - - H. M. The QUEEN.

THE Committee of Management earnestly ask for CONTRIBUTIONS towards the Special Five Years' Maintenance Fund of £50,000, to pay off the DEBT of £6,000, and to provide against deficiencies for the next few years. The available capital is exhausted.

N. BROMLEY, Warden.

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL, PADDINGTON, W.

Is striving to do its Great Work WELL, with INADEQUATE MEANS.

Even the smallest addition to its funds will be welcomed, and will be most gratefully acknowledged by the Secretary, Mr. THOMAS RYAN, at the Hospital.

MRS. HILTON'S CRÊCHE.—To Mothers who know all that babies need. Will you kindly send Christmas gifts to my babies, who need everything?—Address, Mrs. HILTON, The Crèche, 12, 14, and 16, Stepney-causeway, Commercial-road, E.

METROPOLITAN HOSPITAL, Kingsland-road, N.E.

Patron: H.R.H. The PRINCE of WALES.

Chairman: JOSEPH FRY, Esq. Treasurer: The Right Hon. Lord BATTERSEA.

Hon. Treasurer: Sir E. HAY CURRIE.

The Committee most earnestly appeal for Funds to pay off pressing liabilities and to re-open the 24 beds closed during the past year. The hospital could accommodate 160 in-patients, but only 54 beds are at present available.

Bankers { GLYN, MILLS & Co. / LLOYD'S BANK, LTD. CHARLES H. BYERS, Secretary.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL.

CONTRIBUTIONS are EARNESTLY SOLICITED towards meeting the EXPENSES of this unendowed Hospital, and will be gratefully received by the Bankers, Messrs. Drummond, or by the Secretary.

CANCER WARDS at the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL, Mortimer-street, W.—The WEEKLY BOARD make an URGENT APPEAL for FUNDS in Aid of these Wards. There are 34 beds set apart for patients suffering from this terrible malady. They are admitted without letters of recommendation. Everything that human skill and kindness can suggest is provided, and sufferers are permitted to remain until relieved by art or released by death. Bankers, Messrs. Coutts & Co.

F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

The 'NEW GUINEA' Spring Bedstead.

Pillars 1-in. Sides 1¼-in. strong Tubes, Double Woven Wire Mattress, Patent 'Reliance' Side Fastenings. All Iron and Steel, no Wood work. Bedstead in 3 parts only.

Easy to fix up and take down.

PLEASE MENTION THIS PAPER.

Orders executed same day as received for this bed.

21/- Carriage Paid.

To be had only direct from—

CHARLES RILEY,
Freeman-street,
BIRMINGHAM.

Illustrated Price Lists Post Free.

EVERY DESCRIPTION —OF— Bedsteads, Bedding, Spring Mattresses, Bedroom Furniture, &c. direct from the Manufacturer.

ALL GOODS GUARANTEED FOR 5 YEARS.

FAC SIMILE OF STAMP ON BACK OF EVERY TWO YARDS OF ALL GENUINE

CHIPPING NORTON TWEEDS

W. BLISS & SON, MANUFACTURERS C. NORTON

Specialty for HUNTING & RIDING BREECHES.

Tweed Suits Boys Wear & all HARD WEAR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from falling off.
Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
Being delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
IS NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
Should be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
Ask your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the

ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.
Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET

Packed free of charge on receipt of cheque.

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes, being superior in every way to the old lamp and boiling kettle more quickly. These lamps fit all Drews' baskets and can be had separately. Polished Brass, 5/-, Polished Nickel, 7/6.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

THE WINDOW

Is the most important thing to be considered in the decoration of a house. The eye naturally turns to the opening by which light enters the room; and in the ideal home the view from that opening, and everything that serves to frame it, should be attractive. The most beautiful thing to be seen through a window is a garden of flowers, but nine-tenths of human habitations in civilised countries are so placed that their windows overlook scenes very different - sometimes dreary streets, stables, and chimney pots. Glacier Window Decoration will add beauty to the window, it is not costly, and no alteration of sashes is required. It is the only effective and reliable substitute for stained glass.

Hundreds of specimens can be seen, and all information can be had at

THE GLACIER DEPÔTS,
153, Piccadilly, W., and 56, Queen Victoria St., E.C.

MAPPIN & WEBB'S PATENT TABLE KNIVES.

SAMPLES & PRICES FREE.

"UNEQUALLED FOR HARD WEAR."

Only London Addresses, 2, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Facing the Mansion House) 158, OXFORD STREET, W.

MANUFACTORY—NORFOLK STREET, SHEFFIELD.

ABSOLUTELY THE FINEST TONIC PICK-ME-UP.

Marza Wine

THE ONLY SCIENTIFIC AND PALATABLE IRON AND COCA WINE.

Highly recommended by the "Lancet" and Medical Profession for Anæmia, Insomnia, Debility, Exhaustion, Indigestion, ...ocal Fatigue, Neuralgia, and Loss of Vital Force. Invigorating, Sustaining, and Vitalising. Checks and prevents Colds, Chills, and all ...ng Weaknesses. A Digestive, Tone Giving, and Health Promoting Stimulant for Convalescents after Accouchement, Influenza, Fevers, &c. Invaluable for Athletes, Young Children, and all below par, unstrung, fagged, and weary. Price 3s. 9d. per Bottle, 42s. per dozen, everywhere, or sent Carriage Paid by the

MARZA COMPANY, LIMITED, 19 & 21, WILSON STREET, LONDON, E.C.
DESCRIPTIVE PAMPHLETS FREE ON APPLICATION.

EXHAUSTION OF BRAIN AND MUSCLE; INSOMNIA.

These are some of the signs of NEURASTHENIA, or NERVE COMPLAINTS. The Modern Treatment is to RESTORE and BUILD UP the Shattered Nervous System by a daily use of

COCA-TONIC-CHAMPAGNE

(LAURENT-PERRIER).

"I consider it most beneficial to the health of all such "hard workers as myself. It is a most delightful drink, "which leaves no injurious effects; and of its nerve restoring "powers as a tonic, I cannot speak too highly."

George Augustus Sala

SOLD BY CHEMISTS AND WINE MERCHANTS.
Pints 45/- per Doz.; Half-Pints 24/- per Doz.

THE IDEAL TONIC FOR INFLUENZA.

Descriptive Pamphlet and Full Reports post free from the Sole Consignees—HERTZ & COLLINGWOOD, 4, SUSSEX PLACE, LONDON, E.C.

PUREST IN ENGLAND. SODA, SELTZER, LITHIA, POTASH, LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, ETC.

BOURNE TABLE WATERS

Supplied in 6 Dozen Cases Carriage Paid by

Analysis, &c., on Application.

R. M. MILLS & CO., BOURNE, LINCOLNSHIRE.

West-End Agent, D. WHEATLEY, 16A, North Audley-st., W.
City Agents, ALEX. D. RAE & CO. (late Hardy & Co.), Chemists, 23, Fenchurch-street, and 6, Railway-place, E.C.;
And of all CHEMISTS, WINE MERCHANTS, &c.

A MOST ACCEPTABLE CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

An Original Case of MÜLHENS'

CASE OF SIX BOTTLES 12/6

GENUINE NO. 4711 BRAND OF

EAU DE COLOGNE.

THE PUREST & STRONGEST, YET MOST DELICATE EVER PRODUCED.

THE WORLD says: "Anyone desirous of getting a thoroughly genuine Cologne cannot do better than send for a bottle of the '4711' Double Extract. Once having used it, repetition is a foregone conclusion."

Large selection of Choicest Perfumes, Toilet Soaps, &c. Quintuple Concentrated Extracts, made from Fresh Flowers gathered at Grasse.

Of All dealers in Perfumes, or at the LONDON BRANCH:

62, NEW BOND ST., W.

(ONE DOOR FROM BROOK STREET.)

Price Lists on application to Mr. C. REUTER, Manager. And at

COLOGNE, NEW YORK, VIENNA, RIGA, and ODESSA.

OYSTERS! OYSTERS!!

FINEST COLCHESTER NATIVES

In Prime Condition, Delivered Free on Rail

At 3s. 6d. PER DOZEN.

CASH WITH ORDER.

Write for Circular.

HARVEY & CO., MERSEA, COLCHESTER.

The Best is the Cheapest!
Fixed, moderate prices for first quality.

TRADE MARK ON EACH GARMENT

JAEGER

PURE WOOL

CLOTHING.

Dr. Jaeger's "Health Culture," and Jaeger Price List, sent free on application.

WEST-END JAEGER DEPOTS—
3 & 4, Princes-street, Cavendish-square (near Regent Circus);
30, Piccadilly (near St. James's Hall).
30, Sloane-street (adjoining McPherson's Gymnasium);
456, Strand (near Trafalgar-square).

CITY JAEGER DEPOTS—
85 & 86, Cheapside (near King-street);
158, Fenchurch-street (near Lime-street);
42 & 43, Fore-street (near Moorgate-street Station).

JULES

Established 1796 AY, FRANCE.

CAMUSET'S CHAMPAGNE

The Lancet says:—"We have analysed it, and are able to give it unqualised praise. It is free from adulteration of any kind, and possesses a very delicate flavour."

Price, 72s. per Dozen, Cash.
Delivered at any railway station in United Kingdom.
22, Great Tower Street, London, E.C.

FOR

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS &c.

SAVORY & MOORE'S

DATURA TATULA.

Cigars and Cigarettes—Boxes, 3s., 6s., 8s., and 15s., Tobacco—Tins, 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. For Non-Smokers, Pastilles and Powder for Burning and Inhalation, Tins, each containing a censer for burning, 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s. Of Chemists everywhere.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH. WHAT TO DRINK?

PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement, and biliousness.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE

"CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE is entirely "free from any poison "or metallic impreg-"nation, does not con-"tain any injurious "ingredient, and is a "good, safe, and useful "medicine."

ALFRED SWAINE TAYLOR M.D., F.R.S., Lecturer on Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology.

Warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities from WHATEVER cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the blood and bones. Thousands of testimonials. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent for 33 or 132 Stamps, by the Proprietors—THE LINCOLN AND MIDLAND COUNTIES DRUG CO., LINCOLN.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS.

FARM AND COLONIZATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

DIRECTORS:

WILLIAM WRIGHT, Esq., J.P., Wollaton, Nottingham, Chairman.
FRANCIS W. FOX, Esq., 14, Dean's Yard, Westminster.
HAROLD J. RECKITT, Esq., J.P., Winestead Hall, Hull.
JOHN BROOK BRAY, Esq., Clapham, Polegate, Sussex.
BENJAMIN GLASGOW, Esq., 77, Oxford-gardens, North Kensington, W.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of supplying RELIABLE INFORMATION to intending settlers abroad, and also to give them introductions to the Agents of the Company, who can assist them in any difficulty, and BEFRIEND them until they are sufficiently established to rely upon themselves.

EMPLOYMENT WILL BE FOUND where a living can be earned until the settler is able to farm on his own account.

ASSISTANCE WILL BE GIVEN in the choice of a farm for either special or general farming, also for cotton planting or orange growing.

The Directors and Secretary have a large experience in the requirements of settlers, both at home and abroad; the AGENTS ABROAD are men in good position, and are PERSONALLY KNOWN to the Secretary and some of the Directors.

For further information apply to
VICTOR M. HOLLINSWORTH, Secretary.
11, Charing Cross, London, S.W.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY. UNION DEPOSIT BANK.

No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
(ESTABLISHED 1867.)

ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods, From £30 to £5,000, To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their NOTE OF HAND ALONE.

ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.

Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.

NO SURETIES REQUIRED.

Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1886.

Foreign Medicines & Toilet Articles &c
Roberts & Co
Chemists. 5 R. de la Paix Paris
Exp. at their London House
76 New Bond St. W.
all French & Foreign Medicines &c

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN,

and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.
Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt—46, Holborn Viaduct, London; also of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

FOUR-AND-A-HALF PER CENT.

PITTSBURGH, CINCINNATI, CHICAGO, and ST. LOUIS RAILWAY CO.,

Consolidated Mortgage Bonds, Series "B," due 1942

Principal and Interest payable, free of Taxes, in New York, in United States Gold Coin. Interest payable Half-yearly on April 1st and October 1st.

Principal and Interest Unconditionally Guaranteed by the Pennsylvania Company.

Messrs. SPEYER BROTHERS OFFER for SALE 4,000,000 dols. of the above-mentioned BONDS (forming part of a total mortgage for 75,000,000 dols., of which 20,615,000 are reserved against Sectional underlying Bonds. Of this Mortgage 22,956,000 dols. Bonds were outstanding on September 30th, 1893 which include the 4,000,000 dols. Bonds now issued), at the price of 104 per cent., equal to £208 per Bond of 1,000 dols., payable as follows:—

10 per Cent. or £20 per Bond on Allotment,
94 „ „ 188 „ on January 8th, 1894.

104 per Cent. or £208 per Bond of 1,000 dols., against which definitive Bonds will be delivered, bearing interest from October 1st, 1893.

Payment in full may be made under discount at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum on allotment. Should the amount payable on allotment not be paid when due, the allotment will be cancelled, and in default of payment of balance due January 8th, 1894, the amount paid on allotment will be subject to forfeiture.

The subscription will be opened simultaneously in New York.

The Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis Railway Company furnishes, together with controlled lines, the direct connection of the Pennsylvania Railroad with the Cities of Columbus, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis and St. Louis, and with Chicago, viâ Columbus, Bradford, and Logansport.

According to a letter of President Roberts annexed to the Prospectus, dated November 18th, 1893:—

The Pennsylvania Company, which guarantees these Bonds, operates the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's system of lines west of Pittsburgh, and its Capital Stock of 21,000,000 dols. is entirely owned by the Pennsylvania R. R. Company.

The Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis Railway Company is absolutely controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Pennsylvania Company, through the ownership of over two-thirds of its Capital Stock.

The present issue of Bonds forms part of the 22,956,000 dols. four and a half per cent. Consolidated Mortgage Bonds outstanding on September 30th, 1893, and therefore does not create any increased interest charge.

The above-mentioned letter of President Roberts also gives further particulars of the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis Railway Company and of its financial condition, as well as of the Consolidated Mortgage securing these Bonds.

The Bonds are 1,000 dols. each "to bearer," but for the convenience of investors they may be converted into Registered Bonds at the Office of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company in New York.

The Bonds are not liable to be drawn or compulsorily redeemed prior to their maturity in 1942.

Calculating the present value of the dollar in London at 49½ pence, and allowing for the interest accrued from 1st October, the subscription price of 104 is equal to about 100 for Sterling Bonds, so that the Bonds pay 4½ per cent. interest per annum.

The SUBSCRIPTION in London will be opened on WEDNESDAY, December 6th, 1893, and CLOSE at four o'clock on the SAME DAY for London and the FOLLOWING DAY for the country.

Applications must be made on the accompanying form.

The Allotment of the loan will be made as early as possible after the Subscription is closed.

Copy of the Mortgage can be inspected by intending subscribers at the Offices of Messrs. Freshfields & Williams, 5, Bank-buildings, E.C.

7, Lothbury, London, E.C., December 1st, 1893.

COPY OF GUARANTEE ON EACH BOND.

For a valuable consideration, the Pennsylvania Company hereby guarantees to the lawful holder the due and punctual payment by the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis Railway Company of the interest upon the within bond, in gold coin of the United States of America, upon the surrender of the proper Coupon, as the same shall from time to time become due, and of the instalments for the sinking fund as in the bond provided, and also the payment of the principal of the within bond, in like gold coin, at the maturity thereof.

In witness whereof, the said Pennsylvania Company has hereunto affixed its corporate seal, and caused the same to be attested by its Vice-President and Secretary, the day of A.D. 189 .

Attest: Vice-President.
Secretary.

Copies of the above-mentioned Letter of President Roberts may be had by applying to Messrs. Speyer Brothers, 7, Lothbury, E.C.

FOUR AND-A-HALF PER CENT. PITTSBURGH, CINCINNATI, CHICAGO, AND ST. LOUIS RAILWAY COMPANY CONSOLIDATED MORTGAGE BONDS, SERIES "B," DUE 1942.

Principal and Interest payable, free of taxes, in New York, in United States gold coin. Interest payable Half-yearly on April 1st and October 1st.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST UNCONDITIONALLY GUARANTEED BY THE PENNSYLVANIA COMPANY.

No.....

To Messrs. Speyer Brothers.

..... request that you will allot ..... dols. ..... of the 4½ per Cent. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago, and St. Louis Railway Company Consolidated Mortgage Bonds, Series "B," due 1942, in accordance with the Prospectus issued by you, dated December 1st, 1893, and ..... engage to accept the said Bonds or any less number you may allot ....., and to make the payments thereon in accordance with the Prospectus.

Signature .....
Name in full .....
Address in full .....
Date .....

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

TO CAPITALISTS and Others.—REQUIRED, a FEW THOUSAND POUNDS, to invest in Shares or Debentures of a Government Banking Company; prospects excellent; fullest investigation courted. Principals or their solicitors only treated with.—Address, SOLICITORS, at Horncastle's, Cheapside, London.

THE LIST IS NOW OPEN.

UNHEARD OF RECEIPTS!

KIRALFY'S EXHIBITIONS!

Oct. 17.—Our receipts at the Addelphi this day for the past week alone amounted to £1,750 0 0
Weekly expenses about 750 0 0

Entire capital returned since weeks ago

1893. Total receipts IMRE KIRALFY'S "AMERICA," for the Season upwards of £150,000 0 0

1892. "VENICE IN LONDON," each £1,000 invested (or £100 shares) received (Dividends on £1,000)

June 7.—12½ per Intermediate Dividend	125	0 0
July 12.—Two thirds Capital returned	666	13 4
Oct. —DIVIDEND at the rate of £250 p.c. per annum on one third capital	416	13 4
	£1,208	6 8
March 6, 1893. Balance capital returned	333	6 8
May 27, " 12½ per cent. dividend on original shares	125	0 0
	£1,666	13 4

A further sum still remains for division.

VENICE (LIMITED). IMRE KIRALFY'S NEW VENICE EXHIBITION FOR PARIS, LONDON, NEW YORK, AND OTHER LARGE CITIES. Imre Kiralfy's coming Exhibition will involve a total expenditure of UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND POUNDS. A new city will be built, and a Fairy like Garden and Grounds, with its numerous Palaces, Temples, Waterways, and Fountains, with a colossal arena and gigantic stage, amid lovely scenery and lakes. As an Exhibition of Art, Music, Drama, and Spectacle, it promises to be one of the greatest achievements of the Nineteenth Century. The most Gorgeous Pageants, Thrilling Historic Fetes, Grand Processions, an army of Living Actors, and Exciting Spectacle of various kinds on a scale hitherto unknown will be introduced.

ISSUE of CAPITAL, £150,000, in 15,000 Shares of £10 each. Payable: £1 on Application, £4 on Allotment, and Two Monthly Instalments of £2 10s. each.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

Sir Philip Cunliffe Owen, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., C.I.E., of the South Kensington Exhibitions, viz., the Fisheries, Health, Inventions, Colonial, &c., 1883-86, and the London, Paris, and Vienna International Exhibitions; Sir Arthur Sullivan, Consulting Musical Adviser.

DIRECTORS.

Imre Kiralfy, Author of "Venice in London," "Nero" at "Barnum's," America," and other famous Spectacular Exhibitions, Director-General; Sir James D. Linton, P.R.I., of the South Kensington Exhibitions, the Healtheries, &c., &c.; H. E. Milner, Esq., Chairman of Earl's Court Exhibitions, 1892 and 1893, Major G. Wyndham Malet, Royal Military Exhibition, Chelsea, 1890; Chas. B. Atwood, Esq., Architect and Designer-in-Chief of World's Fair, Chicago, 1893.

COMITE D'HONNEUR A PARIS.

M. Jules Simon, late Prime Minister of France; M. Humbert, President of Paris Municipal Council; M. E. Lockroy, late Minister of Commerce; M. le Comte de Mouy, Ambassador of France; M. le General Tirr, Aide-de-camp to his Majesty King of Italy; M. Puvis de Chavannes, Président Société Beaux Arts; BANKERS—The London and Westminster Bank, Lothbury; ARCHITECT—M. Dutert (Architect to Paris Exhibition, 1889); AUDITOR—J. Newson-Smith, Esq., 37, Walbrook, E.C.; SOLICITORS—Messrs. Ashurst, Morris, Crisp, & Co.; SECRETARY—C. Osborn, Esq.; OFFICES—37, Walbrook, E.C., 20, Tokenhouse-yard, E.C.

It must also be remembered that this work will be the permanent property of the Shareholders, in accordance with the contract with Mr. Imre Kiralfy hereinafter referred to, and it is intended to proceed from Paris to Chicago, New York, London, and other large cities, where an enthusiastic reception may be expected, so that Shareholders will continue to participate in the profit arising from each Exhibition.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

Imre Kiralfy's extraordinary success continues. At Chicago the immense auditorium has been daily thronged to witness his latest grand spectacle of America," upon which he has been engaged since leaving Venice in London. The following astonishing receipts show the weekly increase:

July 30th to August 4th	$27,336
August 5th to 11th	30,988
" 12th to 18th	34,043
" 19th to 25th	37,007
" 26th to September 1st	35,349
September 2nd to 8th	36,391
" 9th to 15th	39,113
" 16th to 22nd	43,558
" 23rd to 29th	48,599
" 30th to October 6th	53,432
October 7th to 13th	68,750

This Company is formed to produce in Paris, London, New York, Chicago, and other large cities in Europe and America a Grand Spectacular Exhibition by Imre Kiralfy, which will introduce all the popular and attractive features of the Venice Exhibition at Olympia in London, but upon a still more imposing scale, and with novel and extensive additions.

Sir Philip Cunliffe Owen has consented to act in an advisory capacity, and his experience in connection with the Paris Universal Exhibitions, 1855, 1867, and 1878, the London International Exhibition, 1863, the Vienna Exhibition, 1877; the Fisheries, Health, Inventions, and Colonial and Indian Exhibitions, 1883-86, at South Kensington, will prove of the greatest value to the Company. The Directors are also experts in exhibition management.

Mr. Imre Kiralfy's spectacle of "Venice," when produced at Olympia, London, was a source of very great attraction and delight to several millions of visitors, and proved a great financial success. Like the Buffalo Bill Exhibition, the New Venice is likely also to make very large profits upon a return visit to London.

"Within six months of the opening of 'Venice in London,' the Directors of that undertaking were able to return to its Shareholders sums equal to two-thirds of their capital in cash, with a dividend at the rate of 25 per cent. per annum, and three months later they paid a much larger dividend, and they have since returned to the Shareholders sums equal to the remaining third of their capital, and a further sum still remains for division. These results were obtained, notwithstanding the 'Venice' Company, being tenants only, had to pay nearly £15,000 as rent, and a large amount for improvements."

THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF PARIS has granted to Mr. Imre Kiralfy on most favourable terms, with special privileges and concessions, the use of the Palais des Machines, the largest of the Palaces of the great Exhibition Buildings (about six times as large as Olympia in London), also the Galerie de Trente Metres, and the Dome Central. The "Venice" colossal scenery, gondolas, stage properties, and machinery, dresses, armour, and barges from Olympia are purchased and will become the property of the Company.

With anything like the usual Paris season, with its continual flow of visitors, even these results may be altogether eclipsed in Paris alone. The Exhibition appears certain to become what the South Kensington grounds were to London.

How moderate the figures are will be seen by comparing them with the stated number of visitors to the Exhibition:

Fishery Exhibition,	1883	.. No. of Visitors,		2,703,051
Health	"	1884 ..	" "	4,153,390
Inventions	"	1885 ..	" "	3,760,581
Colonial	"	1886 ..	" "	5,550,745
Paris	"	1889 ..	" "	25,398,609

Prospectuses, with forms of applications for shares, may be obtained at the offices of the Company, 37, Walbrook, E.C., and 20, Tokenhouse-yard, E.C.

VENICE (Limited), 37, Walbrook, E.C.; 20, Tokenhouse-yard, E.C.

FORM OF APPLICATION.

Having paid to the London and Westminster Bank (Limited), Lothbury, E.C., the sum of £ , being £1 per share, I request you to allot me shares, and agree to accept that or any smaller number.

Name .....

Address in full.....

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803. 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subscribed Capital, £2,000,000. Paid up, £400,000. Total funds, £1,600,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited. No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.
General Accidents. | Personal Injuries.
Railway Accidents. | Death by Accidental Means.
C. HARDING, Manager.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.
EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.
Invested Funds, £16,000,000.
The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES.
LONDON OFFICE: 81, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.
ASSETS OVER .. .. £31,800,000.
SURPLUS EXCEEDS .. .. £6,400,000.
This Society originated the Tontine System of Life Assurance, under which the premiums paid form a lucrative investment, and not an expense, affording provision for old age as well as immediate family provision in the event of death.
ABSOLUTE SECURITY. LOW PREMIUMS. LARGE PROFITS.
Before assuring elsewhere, send for Prospectus and Illustrative Pamphlets.
A. MUNKITTRICK, Manager for Great Britain and Ireland.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.
(FIRE.)

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

BUYERS and SELLERS of quoted and unquoted Commercial, Industrial, and Mining Securities should communicate with
THE COMMERCIAL STOCK and SHARE CORPORATION, Limited, Stock and Share Dealers, 10, Throgmorton-avenue, London, E.C. Telegraphic Address: "UNQUOTED, LONDON." All Mining Shares dealt in at close current quotations. Advances made on Stocks and Shares at moderate rates. Send for List, giving numerous quotations not published by any other firm, post free.

REVERSIONS.—The Reversion Mortgage Trust purchase reversions and life incomes, or lend thereon at 4 per cent. per annum. No charge made unless business results.—Apply to Messrs. FELDMAN, 34, New Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, London. Solicitors' and Estate Agents' attention particularly requested.

MESSRS. H. HALFORD & CO., Stock and Share Brokers, 2, Royal Exchange Avenue, London, E.C. Daily CLOSING Price List and marked report on application. Speculative accounts opened on terms to be ascertained. Special business in "Options" at CLOSE MARKET PRICES. No "DISTANCES."

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.
HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.
BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.
DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.
FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.
COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.
£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.
NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.
JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT.

BEAUTIFULLY COOL AND SWEET SMOKING.

Sold only in 1-Ounce Packets, and 2, 4, 8-Ounce, and 1-lb. Tins, which kee the Tobacco in fine Smoking condition.

Ask at all Tobacco Sellers, Stores, &c., and take no other.

SMOKERS ARE CAUTIONED AGAINST IMITATIONS

The GENUINE bears the Trade Mark—"NOTTINGHAM CASTLE"—on every Packet and Tin.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT CIGARETTES, in Packets containing 12,
And Tins of 24, 50, and 100.

"NO BETTER FOOD EXISTS."—London Medical Record.

This food, which is malted by a patented process, should be tried wherever other nourishment has not proved entirely satisfactory. It is already cooked—requiring neither boiling nor straining.

Allen & Hanburys' Infants' Food.

A nutriment peculiarly adapted to the digestive organs of Infants and Young Children, supplying all that is required for the formation of firm flesh and bone. Surprisingly beneficial results have attended the use of this Malted Food, which needs only to be tried to be permanently adopted. Medical Testimony and full Directions accompany each Tin.

Price 6d., 1s., 2s., 5s., and 10s. Sold Everywhere.

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED FOR SPECIAL EXCELLENCE.

"Will bring a new vigour to our manhood and womanhood."
—See Medical, Scientific, and Press Opinio

"MERSANO" WINE

SAMPLE BOTTLE POST FREE 9 PENNY STAMPS.

"The Monarch Temperance Beverage of the World."
"Strengthening and Sustaining like the best Port Wine."

A PERFECT WINE FOR 6d. PER BOTTLE.

The following extracts are a few of the many Press notices th have appeared :—

"'Mersano' Wine should have a brilliant future."—The Que
"Most invigorating and refreshing, and the price, 6d. per bott brings it within reach of all."—Medical Times. "'Mersano' Wi is an extremely bright, sparkling, and palatable beverage, and far ahead of the liquids known as 'ginger this,' 'champagne tha and 'tonic the other thing,' of which the market is flooded in spective of consequences. Invalids may, with every reason a advantage, make use of Mersano Wine as a thirst quencher." The Nursing Record. Sold by all High-class Grocers, Stor Chemists, Hotels, Spiers & Pond's Bars, &c.—Proprietors and Patentees

FORBES, MAXWELL, & COMPANY, LIMITED, ABERDEEN.

PEARS

·ich· diene·

SOAP MAKERS

BY

Special Appointment

To HER MAJESTY

The Queen

and HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS The Prince of Wales.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 768.—ORIGINAL CONUNDRUMS.

LUNATIC (real name and address will be given next week)	£1 1 0
BARITONE („ „ „ „)	1 1 0

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 771.—ANSWERS TO CONUNDRUMS.

MARPLOT (real name and address will be given next week)	£1 1 0
SAHIB BAHADUR („ „ „ „)	1 1 0

SPECIAL NOTICE.—"TRUTH" HOME-MADE TOY AND DOLL SHOW AT THE ALBERT HALL.

I would direct the special attention of readers of this page to the announcements concerning the coming Show which will be found on the first page of this number of TRUTH. And let me again repeat the request made last week that those ladies who are dressing Dolls for the coming Show will be good enough to send them to this office, carriage paid, as soon as they are ready. At the very latest, all parcels of Dolls must be at this office by the 13th inst.; but it is hoped that no ladies who can conveniently send them in before that date will omit to do so. In a similar way, I shall be glad to receive all Home-made Toys as quickly as possible. The state of the Toy Fund continues to be anything but satisfactory; though it is hoped that a large number of donations will still be received.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 776.

The New Year is at hand, and the New Year, as we all know, is the season when new resolutions are generally made. People usually make these for themselves, but in this case it is proposed to ask the readers of this page to suggest New Year resolutions on behalf of a number of well-known people. The usual Prize of Two Guineas is, therefore, offered this week to that competitor who shall suggest

THE NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS THAT CAN BE MOST APPROPRIATELY TAKEN BY 1. MR. GLADSTONE; 2. LORD SALISBURY; 3. LORD ROSEBERY; 4. MR. A. J. BALFOUR; 5. MR. CECIL RHODES; 6. LORD R. CHURCHILL; 7. MR. HENRY IRVING; 8. SIR F. LEIGHTON; 9. PRINCE BISMARCK; 10. THE GERMAN EMPEROR; 11. THE CZAR; 12. MR. JOHN BURNS.

Only one resolution must be suggested for each of the persons named, and all lists must reach me by the morning of Monday, the 18th, at the latest.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 772.

I should like to consider a little longer the suggestions received before making any announcement as to the name of the Prize winner.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand: whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name and the address of ACTON, winner of Prize No. 764, are Mrs. Charles Roundell, 16, Curzon-street, Mayfair.

 The real name and the address of IMARA, winner of Prize No. 769, are Miss A. Bruorton, 24, Cambridge-gardens, North Kensington, W.

 The real name and the address of JACK, winner of half of Prize No. 770, are Lieut. Ronald A. Hopwood, R.N., H.M.S. Cambridge, Devonport.

 The real name and the address of FELIXICUS, winner of a half of Prize 770, are Henry T. Sandford, Esq., Kit's Coty House, Bluebell-hill, Burham, Rochester.

SAHIB BAHADUR.—You are only ineligible for further prize-taking for a period of ten weeks from the date of your success.

OPERA.—Many thanks for your suggestion.

NEMESIS.—I am much obliged to you for the poem you enclosed.

FELIXICUS.—The answer to your conundrum (No. 56 on the list) should have read, "Because their good Will is well looked after by the landlords."

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 773.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

RHYMED ACROSTICS ON "CHRISTMAS."

Come, Father Christmas, and show us your quality,
Help to make merriment, fun, and frivolity
Reign in the homes of the high and the low!
Into our minds instil lessons of charity,
Selfishness drowning in shouts of hilarity,
Thrusting it down as the Christian's worst foe!
Master and man bring together in amity,
All classes shielding from strife and calamity,
Set in our hearts all good feelings aglow!
R. F.

Confound it! Always at this time of year
Hoar on the grass, and frequent frosty nips,
Remind me that the festival is near.
I don't mind Christmas much. I loathe the tips
So many ask. One's foes find civil lips.
The postman even, bringing 'ons of bills,
Makes his salaam. The nimble coin slips
And is, I fancy, shortly spent in gills.
Sages pretend things have two sides. I get the ills.
Spencer.

Creditors will soon be calling,
Handing me their bills appalling,
Rest and peace of mind forestalling.
In the night infernal bawling,
Serenades, and caterwauling,
Through my slumbers will be falling.
Most find Christmas quite enthralling,
And its rioting and brawling;
Still on me it's rather palling.
Cynic.

Carols floating on the air,
Holly gleaming everywhere,
Radiant faces, bounteous fare.
Ice-bound ponds for skaters bright,
Snowflakes falling soft and white,
Turkey, pudding, appetite.
Mistletoe, suggesting kisses,
Ardent lovers taste what bliss is,
Sleep, then, all to rest dismisses.
Svonok.

Christmas comes but once a year,
Holidays aren't always here,
Rest will return to the weary brain,
I shall enjoy my books again;
Smoke once more in my easy chair,
Times and TRUTH my wholesome fare.
Mince-pies and plum-pudding no longer are seen,
A cutlet and sole is my diet, I ween,
Slumber again is my bosom's queen.
Gyton.

Crackers, Christmas trees, and toys,
Happy children! these your joys!
Revels, pantomimes, and games,
In elder children, such their aims!
Sad! that with all our earthly ills,
The "vacant chairs," the "Christmas bills,"
Manhood's thoughts, this season fills.
Age comes! ah, then our one watchword,
"Salvator Mundi," "Christ the Lord."
Noah.

WHAT THE BELLS SAY.

Chime out, sweet bells, a merry peal, fill every heart with glee,
Heal up the breach 'twixt rich and poor, and set the slave-born free;
Redress the wrongs of those who groan beneath oppression's sting,
Increase your gifts to all in need, let caste and hate take wing.
Sing songs of gladness, and rehearse, on earth good will to men;
'Tis meet that when the Yule-log burns our love should glow; and then
'Mid greetings 'neath the mistletoe, and where the wassail-bowl
Acts as a potent charm, and crowns the feast a perfect whole.
Sing hey! for merry Christmastide, sing hey! from pole to pole!
Foy.

Christmas, glad Christmas, hurrah for its joys,
How many sick girlies and poor crippled boys
Rejoice in the thought of the coming "TRUTH Toys."
I hear, though, a whisper, "The Toys are so few,"
Surely, oh, surely, it cannot be true
That the children must suffer for what others do.
May we all try our utmost to add to the store
A Doll or one Toy, if we cannot give more,
So that this coming Christmas be glad as of yore.
Popsy.

Care and grief, away, away!
Hide you where the beams of day
Radiate gladness never.
Into shades, where blackest night
Silent sits, and dreams of light,
Take thy forms for ever.
Mirth and gladness we would see,
All things tuned to harmony,
Sadness sighing never.
Tor.

Come, old Christmas, and with thee
Hither bring stout jollity;
Rosy mirth and winsome play
In thy train, with laughter gay!
Soon must fade thy wreath of holly;
To deny thy rights were folly.
Man is dust, his joys are fleeting,
And the voices raised in greeting
Soon in silence die away.
Eglantine.

Came that sweet chant o'er dale and hill,
Haunting the glades serenely still,
"Reign peace on earth, to man good-will."
It echoes yet, that anthem grand.
See here its living witness stand—
"The war in Matabeleland!"
My brethren—thus our pastors say—
As you pray, live;* and then you may
Sing "Peace on earth!"—some Christmas-day.
* John Keble.
Rabelais.

Christmas has come, with its welcome mince-pies;
Holly and mistletoe gladden the eyes;
Revels and routs, plum-pudding and spice—
Industry taxed to make everything nice.
So let all be merry, and do what we can
To lighten the load of our poor fellow-man.
May generous hearts be everywhere found,
And prosperity's offerings richly abound,
Sending sunshine and gladness about and around.
E. Dennis.

Comes he to some, Old Year and New between,
Holly bedeck'd, gift-laden, glad of mien,
Right jocund meetings, feastings, skies serene;
In other lives, nor gifts, nor mirth brings he,
Scant feast, dead loves, lost joys, sad memory—
Task'd sore by toil's iron yoke, fate's stern decree,
Merrily clang, and clash the Christmas bells,
Ache heart, break heart, yet on their music swells.
So runs our life, but wherefore no man tells.
Perdita.

Carols and dances, light fairy feet flying,
How they come once again from the days that are gone;
Rising gently, like sunlight the evening clouds dyeing
In gleams of the morn, ere the dark night comes on.
Stay, stay in my heart then! Oh, rest in my soul then!
Time! fold thy dark wings; oh, forget thy wild way!
Morn will break at thy call—haste not to thy goal then,
Alas! all is dreaming—our dreams will not stay,
Silent Time soothes our hearts, rests our heads, seals our day.
Drumclog.

Carol once more the songs of festival,
Hang the green garlands on the mottoed wall;
Ring, happy bells, ring an exultant chime
In glad announcement of this jocund time;
Succour the poor, ye revellers, and let
The season's cheer bring solace to them yet.
May love and mirth be with us one and all,
And voices of old hatred and annoy
Sink into silence at this truce of joy!
Goggles.

Come and behold! Our Christmas presents view!
Horrors crowd on us, wars our grief renew.
Rhodes and his army over blacks victorious;
In all our land a struggle hard for life;
Spain and the Moors engaged in deadly strife;
These are the things which Christians think most glorious.
Meanwhile we'll let all thoughts of tumult cease;
All must be right, for 'tis the reign of peace;
Shall we not then indulge in mirth uproarious?
Stanchion.

Come ye, who wealth and riches can command,
Help give to those who starve in this our land.
Remember 'tis a duty that ye owe,
In aiding mortals plunged in want and woe.
Shame rests on those who hoard, and e'en deny
To feed the hungry in adversity;
Mirth is not theirs, O, ease their dire distress.
A cheerful giver God will ever bless;
So heed their cry; allay their wretchedness.
W. Tyrrell.

Christmas, come, and bring again
Holly-berries all aglow,
Roving minstrel's merry strain,
Ivy wreath and mistletoe;
Sweet reunions, friendly faces,
Tender thoughts; but bring for me
My lady's kiss and fond embraces,
And thy poet I will be,
Singing oft in measures soft of love and thee.
Collis.

THE BURNING BUSH.

Come, children, gather round us till we see
How near to heaven earth's little ones may be!
Ripe is the moment, lit the Christmas-tree.
In Nurseryland good angels come and go,
Shepherds and kings parade it to and fro,
The "burning bush" burns on before our eyes,
Moses draws nigh with all his old surprise,
And while his lambkins frisk and caper round,
Slips his worn sandals off on holy ground.
Fairy Knowe.

Crape round your holly, for your Maxim gun
Has slain poor savages who loved their own;
Red with their blood, your victory is won
In mild peace offering to Jehovah's throne.
Sweet Christmas bells! our mothers sadly moan
Their dusky warriors dead! we children cry,
"Make haste, and snatch our gold, spare life alone,
And preach no more of peace, good-will on high;
Store up your gains, and go, leave us in peace to die!"
Tulip.

Clear as chord of music swells,
Harped by an angel choir,
Ring the tongues of a thousand bells
In one harmonious lyre,
Spreading messages of peace
Throughout this world of strife,
Muffling discord till it cease
All claim on human life,
So wearily waiting release.
A. F. G.

A MEMORY.

Christmas evening, dark and dry,
Hark, the curlews calling!
Round the lough the sea-gulls fly;
Icy reeds and leaden sky;
Snow will soon be falling.
Through the dusk, to traveller weary,
Mountain, bog, and moorland dreary
All combine to form an eerie
Spectre-land appalling.
Eva Charlotte.

Children look forward to this day of days;
Half doubting, half believing, try to keep
Really awake till Claus his visit pays.
In vain! Ere midnight they are fast asleep—
Stockings unwatched. But early wake and peep
To find them crammed till they can hold no more.
Might not we wiser elders almost weep
At finding Christmas now the "annual bore,"
Save that their tiny socks hang up like ours of yore?
Med. Stud.

Christians, awake! Salute the happy morn,
Howling east wind and hail and storm;
Rattling windows, dismal rain,
In town and country 'tis the same;
Snow on the hills and plains so drear
Tell the joyous (!) season's near.
May we hope our coal will last
Another week, till strikes be past,
So we may feast instead of fast.
Cantab.

Cherrily chime the merry bells,
Happily fraught with magic spells;
Royally has the Old Year pass'd,
Icily blows the wintry blast;
Soothingly falls the flaky snow,
Tunefully passing to and fro;
Merrily out the children run,
Anxiously eager to join the fun,
Smilingly eating a yesterday's bun.
Sofalie.

Christmas comes but once a year,
Homes are bright and hearts are near,
Round the Yule-log, all aglow,
In the land of mistletoe.
Some are poor, and some are sad,
This the time to make them glad;
Men on earth, with one accord,
Angels too!—proclaim the Lord—
Saviour! King! by all adored.
Egavlas.

Care and trouble cast away,
Hear the Christmas bells to-day
Ringing out their peal.
Inspiration now they give,
Showing how in peace to live,
Teaching how to feel.
Make your fires shine clear and bright,
All the wrong will yet be right,
Show your joy is real.
Almaviva.

A SPENSERIAN ACROSTIC.

Come neare and hearken all, the while I tell
How in deepe humblesse was the Lord yborne;
Right King of all the earth, yet sin to quell,
Intil His kingdom, of all glorie shorne,
Sowneless he entered, and of man forlorne
The image took. One star as heralde came;
Men mostly slept, alas! and missed the sight,
And heard not eke the angels' glad refrain;
So was ypast unmarked of men that Christma night.
Troy.

Come, jovial season, with thy festive board.
Heap on the logs, and raise the merry strain;
Round each gay hearth may friendship's myst chord
Invoke love's whisper or the loud refrain.
Soft glows the sun upon the crystal plain,
The crisp, clear air responds with happy glee,
Moving in harmony the mazy train.
Around the lake are gliding, swift and free,
Symphonious with the bells that peal across the le Skylark.

Acrostics have also been received from E. D
Manx Cat, Jo, M. W., Mrs. E. (Southsea), Ray
Thistledown, Anon, Bel Demonio, Beta, Ivy Leave
Comtesse Olga, Vicar, Vespa, Puck, Spes, Lanca
trian, Kemp Town, Girouette, Rhoda, Judex, Chol
J. D. K., Felsberg, Rose, Summer, Moyagl
W. G. B., Moonshine II., Mavis, Fay, April, Sk
lark, E. W. S. B., Imp, Traddles, Rugeley, Hedwi
W. B. W., E. D. E., Rhodes, Ye Hermit, Phi
Braco, Nemesis, Fidelia, Geranium, Sol, Con Og
J. McGrigor Allan, Sahib Bahadur, Bulrushes, Gi
Creran, Letithea, Mathilde, Dorothea, Tessa
£. s. d., Ken, Chatte, Dnalwor, Camodeu
E. N. S., M. S., Judas, Arthémee, Sartor, Prophe
Dandelion, Won by Waiting, East Anglia, E celsior, Esperanza, Rhoda, Hedwig, Scriptor Ign
tus, Malignant.

A LADY is anxious to hear of a post as COMPANION or SECRETARY, for a young lady of good birth and education. Musical (piano and singing). Good amanuensis and excellent traveller. Highest references given.—Address, L. C. T., care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

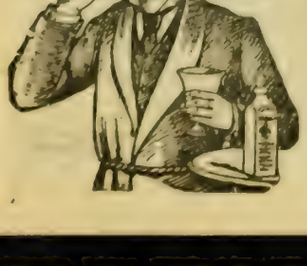
MASSAGE. — Mrs. ARMSTRONG (Masso-Therapeutist, RECEIVES and VISITS DAILY; liver, rheumatism, debility, chilblains, neuralgic headache, &c., successfully treated.—86, South-street, Park-lane, W.

BENGER'S
For Infants, Children, and Invalids. FOOD.
"Humanly speaking, 'Benger's Food' entirely saved baby's life. He could digest nothing until we began the 'Benger.' He is now rosy and fattening rapidly."—Extract from Private Letter.
GOLD MEDAL AWARDED
INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION.
TINS, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s., OF ALL CHEMISTS, &c.

ATKINSON'S
WHITE ROSE.
"A CHARMING SCENT."—H.R.H. The DUCHESS OF YORK.
"THE SWEETEST OF SWEET ODOURS."
ATKINSON'S IS THE ONLY GENUINE.
Of all Chemists, Perfumers, and Dealers, and of the Manufacturers, 24, Old Bond Street, London.

A PHENOMENAL SUCCESS.
FLOR DE DINDIGUL
AN EXCELLENT MEDIUM MILD INDIAN CIGAR
A most delightful weed. Sample four or five 1s., or free by return post 12 stamps
BEWLAY'S 49, STRAND, W.C.; 74, STRAND (EAST INDIA HOUSE); & 143, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.
Tobacconist to the Royal Family. Estab. 1780. Descriptive Price List post free

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE
CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.
PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.
LITERARY MACHINE
For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1.1s.
INVALID COMFORTS
Walking Machine for the lame
Adjustable Couches and Beds, £3. Exercising Chairs £5. 5s. Reclining Boards £1.1s. Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d. Easy Chairs £2. 10s. Commode Chairs £2. 10s.
Carrying Chairs. £1. Bed Tables 7s. 6d. Crutches 10s. 6d. Folding Couch Chairs 10s. Bed Rests 10s.
BATH CHAIRS From £1. 5s.
SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS £2. 2s.
Invalid Carriages
Perambulators
Rubber Tyres
From £1. 10s.
JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.
Telgrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.



PERSONAL LOVELINESS
is greatly enhanced by a fine set of teeth. On the other hand, nothing so detracts from the effect of pleasing features as yellow or decayed teeth. Don't lose sight of this fact, and remember to cleanse your teeth every morning with that supremely delightful and effectual dentifrice
FRAGRANT
SOZODONT
which imparts whiteness to them, without the least injury to the enamel. The gums are made healthy by its use, and that mortifying defect, a repulsive breath, is completely remedied by it. Sozodont is in high favour with the fair sex, because it lends an added charm to their pretty mouths.

UNDER THE CHIN.

IF YOU USE

'Vinolia' Shaving Soap

You will not have a rash under your chin, and the skin of the face will not feel drawn and tight. This is fairly certain.

STICKS.
TOILET, 1/-, 1/6, 2/6. VESTAL, 2/6.

FLAT CAKES.
TOILET, 2/-. VESTAL, 4/6.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON

Very agreeable to take.
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,
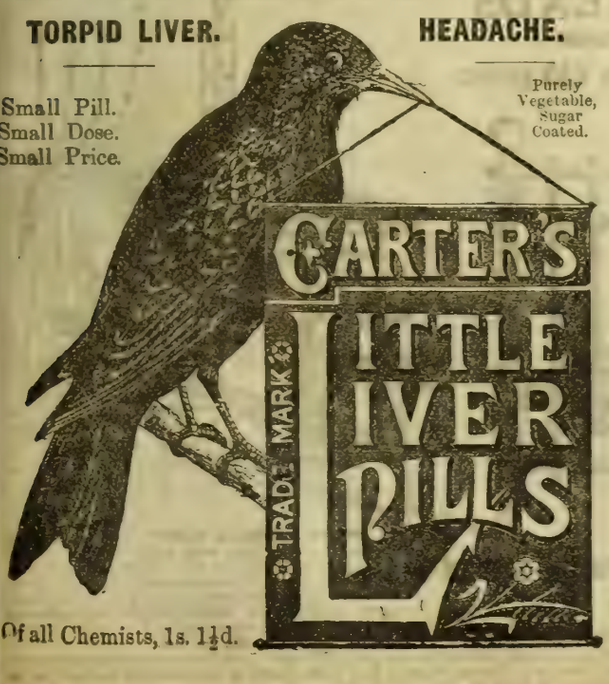
HÆMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.
Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists
E. GRILLON,
69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.

TORPID LIVER.

Small Pill.
Small Dose.
Small Price.

HEADACHE.

Purely Vegetable, Sugar Coated.



Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d.

HEALTHY FLESH

means life, energy, health, and power to overcome or withstand disease. When we are losing in weight it is a sign something is wrong. We need flesh. We can have flesh by taking

Scott's Emulsion

Not loose, superficial flesh, but flesh that is solid and healthy. Thin, angular women ought to have the flesh Scott's Emulsion supplies. It makes angles give way to curves of beauty. Physicians, the world over, endorse it.

BRONCHITIS,

Coughs, Colds, and Throat Troubles are cured by Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with hypophosphites of lime and soda.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Lim., 47, Farringdon-st., London, E.C.

All Chemists, 2/6 and 4/6.

CARPETS
CARPETS
CARPETS
UNDER our FEET
UNDER our FEET

A handy little book full of information about Carpets and Floor-Coverings of every description post-free on application

MAPLE & CO

LIMITED

TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD

LONDON W

THE LARGEST AND MOST CONVENIENT

Furnishing Establishment

IN THE WORLD

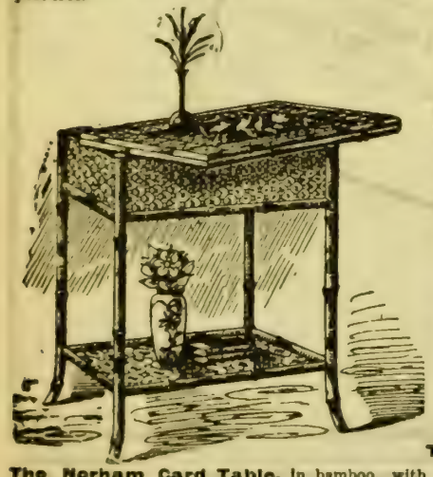
ESTABLISHED FIFTY YEARS

DECORATIONS
DECORATIONS
DECORATIONS
ABOUT OUR HOMES
ABOUT OUR HOMES

Containing much interesting matter about Decorations Decorative Materials, and Sanitary Work, post-free on application.

SMOKING ROOM FURNITURE

MAPLE & CO. have always on show a very large selection of quaint, artistic, and inexpensive novelties in wicker, rush, and bamboo chairs, tables, bookcases, cabinets, writing tables, &c., suitable for smoking or bachelors' rooms, at most moderate prices. Catalogue of Wicker Furniture post free.



The Norham Card Table, in bamboo, with lacquered top; lined cloth; well for cards or papers, and undertray; top measures 24 by 14 in.; if open, 28 by 24 in.; 30 in. high .. .. £1 9s. 6d.

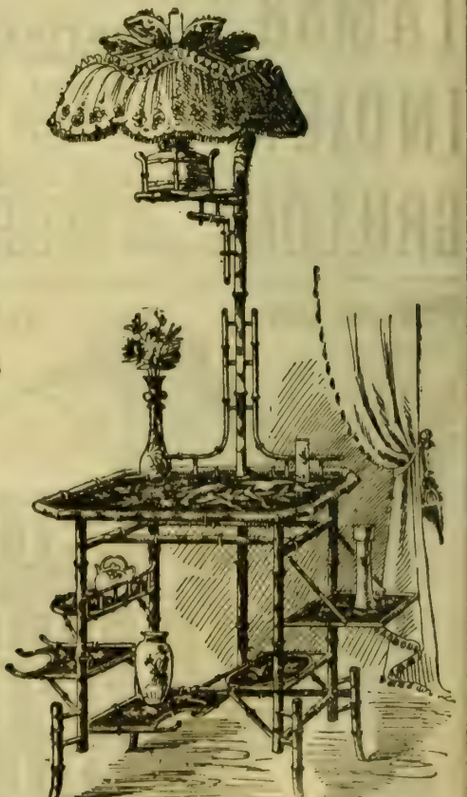
THE BUXTON DRAWING ROOM SUITE, in Walnut or Mahogany consisting of a comfortable couch, two easy, and six occasional chairs, well upholstered in fashionable tapestry or velvet £13 15s.

EASY CHAIRS
LUXURIOUS EASY CHAIRS

MAPLE & CO. enjoy a world-wide celebrity for really comfortable Chairs, especially for luxuriously soft Easy Chairs, Club Chairs, and Lounges. These are made in Maple & Co.'s own factories from specially selected materials by first-class upholsterers Customers can pass from the Showrooms to the factories and see the various processes of manufacture.

SCREENS
ARTISTIC SCREENS

MAPLE & CO. have an immense assortment of Hand-painted and Embroidered Japanese Folding Screens, affording many novel and artistic effects quite different from the usual type, and at exceptionally moderate prices; also numerous new productions in richly-carved and gilt Louis Quinze and other varieties. The finest selection of screens in London. Catalogue of Screens post free.



THE MUTSU TABLE LAMP, forming a lady's writing or work table, with lamp combined. The table is in strong bamboo with lacquered trays, with shelves and brackets for ornaments, papers, or books. The upper part is fitted with strong brass container, patent safety-action duplex burner, and chimney complete; the extreme height, 5 ft. 6 in. Table, lamp, and chimney, £2 9s 6d.

TEN THOUSAND
BEDSTEADS
IN STOCK
From 9s 9d to 150 guineas

Illustrated Catalogues Post Free

BLACK and BRASS BEDSTEAD with PATENT DOUBLE-WOVEN WIRE SPRING MATTRESS complete

3ft 38s 3ft 6in 42s 4ft 49s 6d 4ft 6in 52s 6d

Printed for the Proprietors by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 885. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, December 14, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

THE SEVENTEENTH

CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF "TRUTH,"

"The Spookeries,"

IS NOW READY.

In a Special Wrapper,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Profusely Illustrated by F. Carruthers Gould.

The Illustrations include THREE DOUBLE-PAGED and FOUR FULL-PAGED CARTOONS, printed in colours :—

1. "Truth" Speaks about Spooks.
2. Viva el Toro.
3. A Demonstration of Loyalty (With a Collection).
4. Salisbury's Stuffed Geese.
5. Chamberlain's Dive.
6. A Royalty Raree Show.
7. Work for the Girl-Flogger.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

LET me again ask the readers of this journal to make special note of the fact that the Fourteenth Truth Toy and Doll Show will be held at the Royal Albert Hall, Kensington Gore, W., on Tuesday and Wednesday next, the 19th and 20th inst. It will be open to the public free of all charge on each day, between the hours of 10.30 a.m. and 10.30 p.m., on presentation of a visiting card at the doors. That the Show will be one of great interest and extent is certain, and I hope the attendance will even exceed that of last year, which beat all previous records.

Although the Show is on the 19th and 20th, the "Sending-in Day," as they call it at the Academy, is at the latest Thursday, the 14th, and it is imperatively necessary that all Dolls and Toys should be at Truth Office some time on that day. It will, I fear, be impossible to ensure the inclusion in the Albert Hall Show of the contents of parcels arriving after that day.

As I announced last week, Mr. H. C. Tonking has kindly consented to give recitals on the Albert Hall organ during the time the Show is open. It may be convenient to many visitors to know that there will be three recitals both on Tuesday and Wednesday between the hours of 11 and 12 a.m., 3 and 4 p.m., and 7 and 9 p.m.

Amongst the features of the Show which will be sure to attract much interest this year, it is safe to include the large assortment of Dolls and Toys which have been presented by Duke Alfred of Saxe-Coburg. H.R.H.'s generous present was sent to Truth Office direct from Germany, and included 107 dressed dolls of various kinds, 60 undressed dolls, and several cases of miscellaneous toys of all sorts and sizes. Mr. W. L. Cole, of Kensington, has kindly undertaken to get the undressed dolls which are included in the above gift duly attired in time for the Show.

In answer to several inquiries, I may say that the whole of the prizes intended for distribution amongst the successful competitors in doll-dressing, &c., will be on view at the Albert Hall. These prizes, which will include the gold watch presented by the Goldsmiths' and Silversmiths' Company, of 112, Regent-street, consist of useful articles made of, or mounted with, silver, and are more numerous than they were last year. Amongst them will be found silver-mounted scent-bottles, hairbrushes, and cloth-brushes; silver candlesticks, inkstands, muffineers, puff-boxes, pencil-cases, and a score of other articles. There will also be on view the Truth silver brooches (specially designed for these Shows), one of which is presented to every lady who dresses a certain number of dolls, as a memento of the occasion.

Mr. J. S. Wood, the Editor of the Gentlewoman, sends me a cheque for five guineas for the Toy Fund, on behalf of the 3,000 little members of "The Children's Salon." I am pleased to hear that these clever and generous young people have already contributed, by the work of their own hands in art, literature, and music, over £500 to various worthy objects, and I thank them most heartily for their timely gift to the Truth Fund.

Since my appeal last week I am glad to say that a number of additional donations have been received for the Fund; but I regret to be obliged to add that there is still a substantial deficit to be made up. I am still, however, sanguine enough to trust that the forebodings expressed by Santa Claus in these columns last week will not be realised; but clearly it is high time that intending subscribers made up their minds, and made out their cheques, seeing that the distribution of Toys and Dolls must take place next week. We are all of us, of course, well acquainted with the often-quoted motto Bis dat qui cito dat, but in this particular instance I hope it will turn out to be the case that those who give last will give most!

Meanwhile I have received the following amounts:—

H. M. Weldon, £2. 2s.; Marjorie, 21s.; M. R., 21s.; Chucky, 10s. 6d.; D. T., 20s.; Graham and Jean, £1. 1s.; Leonard and Annie, 21s.; Benedict, 10s.; Gladys, 1s.; Frances, 1s.; Nurse, 6d.; L. G., 6d.; S. T., 2s. 6d.; J. T., 5s.; E. M. L., 10s. 6d.; J. T. Story, 21s.; Claude and Harold, 5s.; H. A. D., 20s.; Dorothy Maud Leon, £2. 2s.; G. W., 10s.; Dr. Balfour Cockburn, 5s.; M. F. H., £2. 2s.; A. C. Lucas, £2; V. P. S., 20s.; Pierrot, 20s.; Third part of Gladys, Howard, Marjorie, and Gilbert's money-box, 8s. 2d.; Mr. Patrick Sim, 21s.; E. M. M. Wolfe, 21s.; A. and J. D., 5s.; E. R., 21s.; O. W. W., 20s.; In memory of Winifred, 5s.; C. E. S., £2. 2s.; Dulcie's money-box, 5s.; Maud, 5s.; Mrs. Hannam, 10s.; Sir Roger Palmer, £2; Mrs. Vagliano, £2; W. A. Hammond, £2; Miss Healey, 10s.; A Dutchman, £5; Mr. A. H., £1; Mrs. Edward Spicer, £1. 1s.; Henry Ablitt, £1. 1s.; The Ghost 10s.; Helena Auerbach, £1. 1s.; T. T., 5s.; M. and E. W. Torquay, £5; Henry Martin, £1; H. C., £2; N. R. E., 10s.; W. H. H., 21s.; Mrs. Whittall, £2. 2s.; E. R. W., 5s.; Emily Lavy, 1s.; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Davis, £3; Master Frederick M. Davis, 20s.; F. E. E., 21s.; Norah Moreton, 2s. 6d.; Mrs. Stephen Ralli, £5; Mrs. W. H. Low, 10s. 6d.; M. S. Baker, 5s.; Mrs. Nivison, 21s.; Chas. Young, 10s.; O. H. M., 1s. 6d.; Little Geoff, 2s. 6d.; Teapot, 2s. 6d.; H. M., £2. 2s.; Journalist Junior, 2s. 6d.; A. B., 5s.; Mrs. Battye, 2s. 6d.; Mr. Lilley, 5s.; C. A. E., 5s.; B. P. L., 10s.; Tommy the Wolf, £1; Margaret, Vere, and Alan, £3; Hugo and Isabel, £1. 1s.; H. F. H. G., 5s.; Norita, £1; In Memoriam, £3; W. B. M., £1; Anonymous, Dublin, 9s.; Mr. Robert Crawshay, £5; Mrs. Stephens, £1. 1s.; Mugulla, £1; Warner Halsey, £1. 1s.; James Knowles, Esq., £5; From the members of the Children's Salon per Mr. J. S. Wood, Editor of the Gentlewoman, £5. 5s.; G. A. F., £5; E. D., 10s. 6d.; Fairplay, 10s.; G. G. C., £2; E. G., in memory of T. V., £2. 2s.; Dolly, 10s.; Marion, 2s. 6d.; Phyllis, 5s.; Sergeants' Mess 2nd Dorset Regiment, £1. 12s. 6d.; Threepenny Bit, £3; Mrs. Martin Edmunds, 10s.; Muriel and Violet, £5; Osborne Lodge, Ascot, 10s.; H. J. Morland, 5s.; Mrs. Le Roy Lewis, £1; Durlacher Bros., 21s.; W. G. E., 21s.; A. S., 21s; Some Lieutenants at Greenwich, £2; Mr. James Daly, 21s.; E. M., 2s. 6d.; Scamp, £1; The Rabbit, 5s.; S. K. D. and S., 21s.; Chas. A. Beattie, £2; S. B. Bancroft, £2. 2s.; Horace Farquhar, £2. 2s.; Mr. S. Nicholson, £3; Mrs. J. M. Fraser £1.

The following have also come to hand:—

Twelve cases of currants, weighing 12¾ cwts., from Mrs. P.; ninety-five sheets of foreign stamps, from "A Lover of Truth," Odessa; three dressed dolls, Miss Ransom; a box of toys, Mrs. Batchelor; a box of wool balls, Mrs. C. Woodcock; six albums, the Misses Agelasto; two scrapbooks and a doll from Miss V. Henderson, of Natal; mechanical toys, books, sewing machine, &c., &c., from Georgette; two scrapbooks from Stephanie and Oscar; two dolls from M. C. Rutherfurd; box of balls, Mrs. Woakes; two dolls, Mrs. P. Brown; Mrs. Pollard, home-made scrapbooks; one magnificent doll, with clothes en suite in trunk, from Miss Potter, of Pau, France; scrapbook, Miss E. V. Wilson; twelve scrapbooks, the Misses Macnaughten and friends; box of balls, E. C. G.; 100 scrap screens, from Bob, Cissy, and George; four scrapbooks, Miss E. R. Osborne; one large doll, Mrs. E. Benjamin. The toys acknowledged last week as from Dorothy Lindo should have been from Dorothy Lindo Henry.

The Prince of Wales is to be the guest of the Duke and Duchess of Rutland at Belvoir Castle for three days during the second week of January. There is to be a lawn meet of the Duke's Foxhounds on one day of the Royal visit, and the other days will be devoted to pheasant-shooting, as the extensive preserves in and around Belvoir Park are being carefully kept for his Royal Highness. A dance will be given at the Castle while the Prince of Wales is staying there. The last Royal visitor to Belvoir was the Empress Frederick, who stayed there for a few days about two years ago.

H.R.H. and the Princess will entertain a family party at Sandringham during the Christmas holidays, including Prince and Princess Christian and Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein. There is to be another large shooting party (which will be the last for this winter) at Sandringham during the first week of January.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught are to leave Bagshot Park towards the end of next week on a visit to the Queen at Osborne, where they will stay until January 2, when they are to become the guests of the Prince and Princess of Wales at Sandringham until the 8th.

Countess Erbach is expected to arrive at Osborne early next month from Darmstadt on a visit to Princess Beatrice. The Countess, who is the sister of the Princes of Battenberg, is married to Count Erbach-Schönberg.

The Duke and Duchess of Teck, who have returned to Richmond from visiting the Duke and Duchess of York at Sandringham, are shortly to be the guests of Lord and Lady Wimborne at Canford Manor, Dorsetshire, and of Lord and Lady Ancaster at Normanton Park, Rutlandshire.

Dowager Lady Churchill is now the Lady-in-Waiting on the Queen at Windsor; and during her Majesty's residence at Osborne the Dowager Lady Erroll, the Dowager Lady Southampton, Lady Ampthill, and the Dowager Duchess of Roxburghe are to be successively in attendance.

The Duke and Duchess of Sutherland have a family-party staying with them at Trentham, where they intend to reside until after Easter. It is rumoured in the neighbourhood that the Dowager Lady Rosslyn will shortly take up her residence at Tittensor Chase, the charming place which the Dowager Duchess was so exceedingly anxious to obtain as a dower house.

Most of the principal country houses in Roxburghshire, Berwickshire, and Selkirkshire were full last week for the Buccleuch Hunt Ball, which took place at Kelso on Wednesday night, and which proved a great success, and for a splendid ball which was given at Newton Don House on Thursday night by Mr. and Lady Nina Balfour, to celebrate the début of their niece, Lady Sybil McDonnell, the daughter of Lord and Lady Antrim, who had "come out" at the Kelso ball.

Lady Sophia Allenby, the eldest daughter of the late Lord Eglinton, has petitioned the Court of Sessions for leave to disentail the large Montgomery estates in Ayrshire and Lanarkshire, to which she succeeded last year on the death of her father. These lands did not form a part of the Earldom of Eglinton estates. The Queen has granted a licence to Lady Sophia and her husband, Mr. S. H. Allenby (who is well known in yachting circles), to assume the name and bear the arms of Montgomery.

The death of Lord Strathallan (which was the result of a chill) is much regretted in Perthshire, and particularly by his numerous tenants, to whom he was very liberal and considerate. Lord Strathallan, who was for many years in the Army, resided near Buckingham for some time before his father's death in 1886, and latterly he had lived entirely on his estates, and he took an active part in supervising their management. He was a Tory, like his father, and a Representative Peer for Scotland. The Strathallan Drummonds are a collateral branch of the Drummonds of Drummond Castle, and the late Peer was heir to the Scotch titles of the Earl of Perth, but the vast estates which formerly belonged to that Earldom are now possessed by Lord Ancaster.

For Amusements, see page 1305.
For the Truth Hotel List, see page 1304 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 1306.

Mr. Æneas Mackintosh, of Balnespick, who died last week at the age of eighty-four, belonged to an ancient branch of the great Highland family of Mackintosh, and he owned an estate of about 10,000 acres in Inverness-shire. Mr. Mackintosh spent nearly half his life in India, where he made a fortune in indigo planting. He had a great reputation in the East as a very skilful tiger hunter.

Mr. R. A. Kinglake, who died last week, was the elder brother of "Eothen," and he passed his whole life at Taunton, where he was in many ways a conspicuous personage. Mr. Kinglake was instrumental in promoting the Weston-super-Mare Sanatorium, a most useful institution, and he established the Somersetshire commemoration of county worthies, by placing their busts in the Shire Hall at Taunton. The bust of Fielding was unveiled by Mr. Lowell, who delivered a most interesting address on the occasion. Mr. Kinglake had some good stories to tell of Sydney Smith, with whom he had a pleasant acquaintance during that divine's fifteen years' residence at Combe Florey.

At one of his brother's elections for Bridgwater he had advanced certain moneys. There was a petition. In those days petitions were tried before a Committee of the House of Commons. "Shall you repay this money?" the Chairman asked the author of "Eothen." It was a nasty question, but "Eothen" was equal to the occasion. "In such matters," he said, "I always act on the opinion of some independent gentleman. With your permission, I should ask you to be the independent friend, and I should pay it, or not pay it, as you might decide."

Mr. Preston Bruce, who died at Edinburgh last Friday, had been an invalid for several years past, and it was the utter failure of his health which caused his withdrawal from the House of Commons about four years ago. Mr. Preston Bruce was so very popular in Fifeshire that his seat was not contested by the Tories even at the General Election of 1886. He was an advanced Liberal, a clever man, a very good speaker, and a general favourite in society.

Northampton has sustained a loss in the person of Mr. J. Gurney, who was one of the soundest and most stalwart of Radicals. In his early years he assisted his mother in making the smocks that agricultural labourers used to wear. He became an Alderman and the Mayor of Northampton, and to him, more than to any one else, was it due that Mr. Bradlaugh was returned by the electors of that town as one of its Members. In his youth he distinguished himself by his determined opposition to Church rates. On one occasion he was indicted for resisting a distraint for those obnoxious imposts. There was, however, a Chartist on the jury. When the twelve good men and true were locked up to consider their verdict, the Chartist told the other eleven, who were for a conviction, that he would never agree. And he produced a large bag of biscuits, which he said would last him for two or three days. He then reasoned with them. Whether the reasoning or the biscuits were most potent is not clear, but, in the end, a verdict of "Not guilty" was returned.

A correspondent sends me a parody of Tennyson's well-known verses commencing "Break, break, break," the "topical" application of which will, I think, be only too evident:—

Broke—Broke—Broke—
Are the Lords of the soil and the Squires,
And alas! that my tongue should utter
The thoughts that arise in the shires.

Let—Let—Let—
Are ancestral homes not a few,
And the owners are paying their court
To the parvenu and the Jew.

And the eager crowds go on
To Ascot and Newmarket still,
But oh! for the touch of the vanished coin,
And the sound of the gold in the till!

Broke—Broke—Broke—
Are the swells of this cold clay land,
And slender's the chance that the money lost
Will ever come back to hand.

An important "Body" has sent me the following letter. I had supposed that the examination paper was a skit. If the "Body" would kindly inform me what the association called "Souls" really is, I should be greatly obliged to him, for I have never quite understood its raison d'être:—

DEAR SIR,—Would you kindly explain that the sham examination paper published in your last number was only a game among some young persons, and that it has no connection whatever with the club or association called the Souls?—Yours faithfully,
A BODY.

During the past year there have been thirty-four sales of Shorthorns, and 1,610 head of cattle have changed hands at the average of £25. During 1892 the average was £23. 10s. for 1,832 head. The highest price this year was 200 gs., which was paid for a bull at the sale of the late Duke of Marborough's Blenheim herd, whereas in 1892 a bull realised 100 gs. at the Queen's sale. The Blenheim sale obtained the best average of the year, £44. 11s. 8d. for forty-eight lots. The only other averages above £30 were the Prince of Wales's, Lord Bective's, Lord Brougham's, Mr. R. Thompson's, Mr. McWilliams, Mr. Barchard's, and Mr. Mills's. There has been a steady decrease in the value of Shorthorns, for, putting aside the extravagant prices which were common twenty years ago, the annual average between 1886 and 1890 was about £37.

AT BOSCOMBE, BOURNEMOUTH.—The HOTEL BURLINGTON, "Sunny Boscombe." A charming Hotel, luxuriously appointed, in acres of matured grounds sloping to the sea. Every comfort of home. Most moderate charges. Bournemouth East Station. Tariff of Manager, or at Burlington & Buckingham Palace Hotels, London.

Some valuable suggestions for the prevention of the frightful cruelty which occurs in the Irish cattle traffic are made in a letter I have received from Mr. S. H. Towers, of Manchester. Mr. Towers, who has given close attention to the subject, urges that the fittings of the pens which divide the cattle should be of sufficient stability to bear the weight of a number of beasts when thrown upon them in a rough sea. This can only be secured by having all permanent fittings fixed, and not, as at present, mere iron stanchions fixed into the deck with grooves for cross-timbers, which are liable to be removed or broken by struggling cattle. Another point is that boats should not be allowed to put to sea with their living cargoes when the weather is really bad, as was done with such disastrous results a fortnight ago. In the Transatlantic cattle trade a vast change for the better has been brought about during the past year or two by the enforcement of more stringent regulations, and an equal improvement might be effected in the Irish traffic. Certainly there is ample room for improvement.

I am beginning to congratulate myself upon the development among some of my contemporaries of a distinct conscience in the matter of advertisements. Additional figurantes being required for the tableaux vivants at the Palace Theatre, Mr. Goldschmidt drew up the following advertisement:—

> Tableaux Vivants.—Wanted, for the above, young ladies of handsome appearance and faultless figure. Apply by letter, enclosing photograph, if possible, to Herr K., Palace Theatre, Shaftesbury Avenue.

Both the Daily Telegraph and the Daily Chronicle refused to have anything to do with this notice, and not only refused it in this form, but would not even allow Mr. Goldschmidt to alter it to suit their views of propriety. He does not tell me anything about the Standard, but I feel sure he would have found them more accommodating at that office. I confess that this squeamishness strikes me as a trifle overdone. The entertainment being not only authorised, but highly praised by the Press, it appears to me to be a trifle absurd that the Press should refuse to advertise for young ladies to take part in it. However, too much squeamishness with regard to advertisements is better than none.

Often have I commented upon the failure of the provincial Press to keep itself and its readers informed upon current swindles; but nothing that has yet come under my notice shows the greenness and gullibility of the provincial editor so painfully as a paragraph which appeared on Friday last in the Worcestershire Echo. A local Nonconformist minister named Naish having been decorated with a Fellowship of Sturman's "Society of Science, Letters, and Art," I last week repeated for this reverend gentleman's benefit a few of the opinions from time to time expressed about this egregious imposture. The Worcestershire Echo seems to have reproduced my paragraph, but "inadvertently," as it hastens to explain, and on the following day the journal actually apologises in this strain:—

> From ample evidence before us we are convinced there is quite another side to Mr. Labouchere's version, and we only regret to have been unintentionally the medium of circulating an erroneous impression as to a society with which graduates and clergy of our own city and students of schools in this neighbourhood are connected. We need scarcely add that this expression of regret also applies to the reflections cast by Truth upon the Secretary of the Society.

I would advise the author of this piece of gratuitous abasement to immediately make known the "other side" of the case of which he is in possession. To no one will it be more agreeably surprising than to Sturman himself, who has never up to the present time been able even to attempt a reply to my comments upon his precious Society. The truth is that there is no "other side," and there can be no "other side." Sturman's antecedents are well known; the history of his "Society" and of the relations to it of Sturman and the poor old pauper octogenarian Irish Baronet now deceased, are equally well known; and, if there were any room for doubt about the character of the concern, it would be removed by Sturman's confessions to me in the interview published in Truth a year and a half ago. That a newspaper editor, presumably a man with some knowledge of the world and some power of judging evidence, should lend himself to whitewashing such a disreputable undertaking, reflects discredit upon us all.

The announcement of a new edition of Scott's novels "edited by Mr. J. M. Barrie" will not, I am disposed to think, excite any pleasant anticipations in any reasonable bosom. It is really very presumptuous for the "rising writers" of the present day to be so ready in undertaking to edit and improve upon Scott, whose own "Author's Edition" of the Waverley Novels ought surely to satisfy fully the most fastidious and exacting reader. During the last twenty years there have been an immense number of re-issues of this complete edition at all prices, and it might, therefore, now have been assumed that the world at large is content to accept the Waverley novels as their author left them. There are at the present time two large editions of the novels in process of publication, the one is the Dryburgh (illustrated), which is issued by Messrs. Black, who purchased the copyright of Scott's novels after the death of Cadell, and the other, published by Mr. Nimmo, is "edited" by Mr. Andrew Lang. No further edition can possibly be required, even if Mr. Barrie was competent to improve upon Scott, and his numerous critics and editions. He would be more usefully employed in adding himself to our stock of standard novels, as for this task he has already proved himself competent.

Under the title of "The Unseen Foundation of 'The Unseen Foundations of Society,'" Mr. F. W. Bain has now elaborated in pamphlet form his charge of plagiarism against the Duke of Argyll. He accuses the Duke of appropriating the entire thought and argument, and in many places the exact language, of "The Principle of Wealth Creation" (Mr. Bain's work) in "The Unseen Foundations of Society," published a few months later; and, fortified as the charge now is by nine pages of closely parallel passages from the two books, it points either to wholesale piracy or to the most extraordinary series of literary coincidences on record. Up to the present the Duke has not thought the accusation worthy of notice, although it was first dealt with in TRUTH three months ago. His silence may possibly be owing to my not having the privilege of numbering his Grace, or any of his personal friends, among my readers. But if, after Mr. Bain's pamphlet has been circulated and noticed (as it has been) in the Press, the Duke still says nothing, the public must draw their own conclusions.

C.O.M. Whisky.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—Andrews & Co., Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors of C.O.M. brand.

24, Grosvenor-gardens.—To be Sold, or Let on lease, this Mansion, in perfect decorative and sanitary repair, containing 13 bedrooms, two drawing-rooms, boudoir on first floor, dining-room, library, billiard-room, and dressing-room on ground-floor. Stabling for five horses.—Apply, Messrs. Thompson, 6, Bruton-street; or on Premises.

Of course, it must be remembered, in the Duke of Argyll's favour, that he appears to be mentally incapable of distinguishing between meum and tuum where the ownership of ideas and language is concerned. Only the other day he gave to the world, as a quotation from something said by the London County Council, what was in substance his own interpretation of what had been said, couched in his own language; and when called to account, he maintained that this was a perfectly right and fair thing to do. Conversely, of course, he may regard it as perfectly right and fair to give to the world as his own the arguments and language of somebody else. Still, the man who treats the goods of somebody else as his own would not cease to be amenable to the law because on a former occasion he had, for private reasons, passed off his own goods as somebody else's.

A Taunton correspondent asks me to notice the prospectus of a Company which is being formed with a capital of £10,000 to run two Tory papers in Somerset. It is stated in a circular that the aim of those "embarking on this important work" will be, "above all, to advance and maintain sound Conservative and Constitutional principles." Well, if political enthusiasts like to sink their cash in a hopeless enterprise of this kind they have a perfect right to do so. In case, however, any Somerset people may be inclined to invest in the concern with a view to their own personal and pecuniary advantage rather than the interests of the Tory Party, I would point out that papers started and conducted on these lines never, or hardly ever, pay. There are scores of them about the country carried on at a heavy loss, and without the slightest political influence. However, they provide a number of persons with employment.

I remember assisting as a spectator on one occasion at an exhibition of pictures by an artist who had a wooden leg, but at Bristol, just now, at No. 5, Clare-street, there is to be seen a collection of water-colours painted under much more remarkable circumstances. The artist, Mr. Bartram Hiles, has, in fact, lost both arms, and holds in his mouth the pencils and brushes he uses for the production of his pictures. Some years ago, in spite of being thus handicapped, he won a National Scholarship, and has since studied at South Kensington with a success that makes his artistic career an object of interest to many.

The University Liberals at Oxford have gained a notable victory in Congregation, which has at last decided by a narrow majority that it is desirable to provide an examination in English Language and Literature, which is to form one of the Final Honours Schools in the second public examination. This proposal has been frequently before Congregation, which had hitherto refused to adopt it, the opposition having always been both powerful and resolute. It was high time that an Honours School in English Literature and Language was established at Oxford, and, if it is properly managed, it ought to prove a complete success, without at the same time injuring the classical scholarship of the University.

A memoir of the late Dr. Hort, who was for many years Lady Margaret Professor of Divinity at Cambridge (in which office he succeeded Bishop Lightfoot), is to be published in the course of next year, along with a selection from his correspondence.

The late Professor Bensly's choice and valuable collection of Oriental books is to be purchased by public subscription, and it will be placed in the Cambridge University Library as a special section. This is an excellent and a really useful form of memorial to one of the most learned and enthusiastic students of the present age.

The Dons of Magdalen, Oxford, have just furnished a monumental example of the childish forcible-feebleness so characteristic of their order. A fortnight or so ago, when there was an immediate probability of Magdalen winning the Association Football Cup, the following official proclamation was issued:—

NOTICE.

In the event of Magdalen College winning the Football Cup on Friday, it has been decided by the Fellows of the College that, if any fireworks are let off, bonfires lit, or any row made, or damage done in college, in celebration of the event, that the Captain (E. F. Buzzard), Secretary (A. D. Erskine), Treasurer (C. D. Hewitt), of the Football Club (Magdalen), will go down on Saturday morning for the rest of this term, and for the whole of the next term. This will take place whether the Captain, Secretary, and Treasurer are here or not, as they will be held responsible in any event.

The undergraduate is not always wise, but he is invariably quick to see when his official superiors have made fools of themselves. Upon the appearance of the foregoing notice it was decided that the three officers mentioned in it should go to the President and inform him that they declined to be saddled with the responsibility here thrust upon them, and that they resigned their offices in the Football Club accordingly. This would have cornered the authorities, and would, doubtless, at the same time have paved the way for a "row" of unprecedented dimensions. A hint of what was intended probably reached the dons. At any rate last week, before the match, which had been postponed, came off, the President sent for the three intended scapegoats and informed them that he and the Fellows had thought better of the matter and would withdraw the notice. At the same time he asked the Captain and his colleagues to undertake to use their personal influence to prevent any disturbance. This was demurred to; but, after further negotiations, a definite treaty was concluded, the President undertaking to withdraw the notice, and to sanction the entertainment of the losing teams and other guests, and the officers of the club undertaking to use their reasonable efforts to prevent undue noise.

The result is highly instructive. Magdalen won the Cup, the authorised entertainment came off, for about the first time on record there was no serious disturbance, and the next day the Dean expressed his acknowledgments of the praiseworthy manner in which the festivities had been conducted. Had it ever occurred to the authorities to approach the men in a reasonable way, with a view to obtaining their co-operation in repressing the disturbances, no doubt the same result would have been secured years ago. The spirit, however, in which College Dons attempt to manage men who are just at the most difficult age to manage, is almost invariably the Dame's School spirit exemplified by the Magdalen Dons' proclamation. Seldom has a "Governing Body" placed itself in a more ignominious position than did these old women in first launching their thunderbolt and then recalling it in trembling fear of the consequences. It may interest them to know, however, that had they stuck to their decree they were likely to have looked still more foolish, for I understand that in that event not only had it been determined that the three appointed scapegoats should resign, but that the President of the College, the Vice-President, and the Dean should be elected to fill their places. Nothing could be more reasonable or just.

It is now definitely settled that the Church Congress is to meet next year at Exeter on October 9, under the presidency of Bishop Bickersteth, and the Congress sermon in the Cathedral is to be preached by the Bishop of London. The Victoria Hall, which holds about 2,400 persons, will be available for the Congress meetings, and the local guarantee fund amounts to £1,600.

Bishop Barry, Canon of Windsor, has undertaken to assist the Bishop of Winchester in his confirmations and other diocesan work, in the place of the Bishop-Suffragan of Guildford (Dr. Sumner), whose health is in a very unsatisfactory state, and he has been ordered to give up most of his duties.

The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's are proposing to introduce the electric light into the Cathedral, which would certainly be a vast improvement in all respects. The cost of the work, however, will be so great that it will be necessary for the Cathedral authorities to make an appeal for special funds.

With reference to my recent remarks upon the Rev. W. Carlile's offer to undertake the work of the three parishes adjoining his own without increase of salary, Mr. Carlile writes to me, first, to point out that it was not the London articles which evoked his offer, but certain observations of his on the evil which led to the London articles; and, secondly, to ask my advice as to the best way of approaching the Government in order to get his scheme carried out. In the course of his letter he says:—

> I do not vouch for its truth, and I hope it is not true, but the objection raised by some is that it is impossible to get any Bill through the House of Commons at the present moment, either private or public, which would enable the Church to purge herself of her abuses, lest she should become too good to form a strong enough case for Disestablishment. Personally, I have not the slightest fear of Disestablishment, as, if it comes, I doubt not that God would over-rule it for the highest good of the greatest number. As a Rector, and therefore a trustee of Church property, I do not feel that I could move a finger to bring such a thing about, but ought to seek to preserve the property for the purposes of the general good. . . . .

Mr. Carlile's views on Disestablishment do him credit. I heartily share his conviction that Disestablishment, whenever it comes, will conduce, under Providence, to the greatest good of the greatest number; but I would assure him that he may lay aside the idea that any efforts of the Church to purge herself of individual abuses will be thwarted by a fear that the case for Disestablishment will be spoiled. Personally, I have not the slightest fear of the case for Disestablishment being spoiled in this way. There is undoubtedly a difficulty about getting any Bills through the present House of Commons, more especially Liberal Bills which the Tory Party profess a love for. If, however, Mr. Carlile can induce any Tory foe of Disestablishment to bring in a Bill giving effect to his own private scheme, I have no doubt that the friends of Disestablishment would do all in their power to further it.

The following contrasts between the City and one outside parish, and between one parish in the City and another outside, are highly instructive:—

	Churches.	Income.	Population.
City...	60 ...	£70,000 ...	37,705
Whitechapel	9 ...	3,145 ...	74,422

	Population.	Income.
St. Alphege, London-wall	31 ...	£925
Christ Church, Spitalfields	17,467 ...	230

The Rev. John Lingham, who died the other day at Wimbledon, was an ecclesiastic of whom the public heard but little, but who exercised a very much greater degree of influence than many other divines whose names were constantly to the fore. He held the living of Lambeth for nearly thirty years, and was the intimate and trusted friend, and very often the wise adviser, of Archbishops Sumner, Longley, and Tait. Mr. Lingham was a man of many accomplishments and a profound scholar, as well as a most zealous and successful clergyman, for Lambeth was one of the best "worked" parishes in England, and the schools were a model, while the Vicar was a favourite among all classes.

An edifying incident, said to have occurred in the parish church at Colsterworth on the conclusion of the Sunday morning service, is narrated by the Grantham Times. The Rector is stated to have gone to the Clerk, who was in the stoke-hole, and in the presence of some of the congregation rebuked the man for finding the wrong lesson. The Clerk denied the impeachment, the Rector warmly stuck to his point, and somehow the altercation ended in the grating over the stoke-hole being kicked down upon the Clerk's face, which was damaged considerably. One can only hope that his reverence has since made reparation to the man.

If he has done so, the Rector of Colsterworth is a more practical Christian than his reverend brother the Vicar of Mickleton, Gloucestershire. It may be remembered that a labourer named Moss, belonging to this parish, was recently fined £1. 4s. by the Campden Bench for picking up four apples in an orchard which he had to cross on his way to work. The case was referred to in TRUTH, and I am glad to record that, as the first result of my remarks, one of my readers sent direct to the man the amount of the fine, while another sent through me £1, which has been duly forwarded to Moss. Another result has been, however, that the man has been subjected to a good deal of petty persecution of which the latest instance is that Moss's daughter, who has for two years attended to the fire in the National School-room at a salary of 3d. per week, has been dismissed from that employment. Whether this is the consequence of the conviction or of the case being pilloried in TRUTH, it is an equally striking example of the way some of the country clergy practise the religion of charity which they are paid to preach.

The Rev. J. Bainbridge Smith complains to me that in summarising the other day his letter in support of the British Hospital at Smyrna I omitted all reference to a passage in it which pointed out that the hospital is not kept up by the taxpayer, but by dues levied on British shipping, which dues "leave a handsome surplus which is remitted to the Treasury in London." "An item so material ought not surely to have been kept back," says Mr. Smith. The answer is that it was not kept back, because it had been stated in TRUTH weeks before. Being obliged to deal briefly with Mr. Smith's letter, I dealt solely with the new points raised by it, and felt under no obligation to re-discuss others, which had not only been fully stated, but were actually part of my case. The very first complaint against this hospital is that it yields to the Treasury a tribute extorted from British shipping. I say further that the tribute is needlessly extorted, and the objections to it are, therefore, in no way removed by the present proposal to make the taxpayer pay back £8,000—not to the shipowners—but to the needless Hospital.

I have received a further communication from the Secretary of the London Committee of the Irish Distressed Ladies' Fund, relative to the case of "sweating," of which particulars were given in TRUTH a few weeks ago. The Secretary encloses a copy of the following letter received by him from the Secretary of the Dublin Executive Committee:—

(COPY.)
Irish Distressed Ladies' Fund,
4, Kildare-street, Dublin.
November 27, 1893.

DEAR SIR,—In reply in reference to the allegations contained in TRUTH of 9th inst., I am directed by my Committee to inform you that the statement in question is quite fallacious.

The facts are as follows:—Eight ladies—not one—were employed in making the vestment referred to, with other work, from the first week in May until August 22.

The amount earned by the eight ladies while employed upon this work amounted to £63. 18s., or an average of 14s. a week each.

My Committee hope that the explanation will be satisfactory.—I am, &c., (Signed) W. Q. FITZGERALD, Secretary.

If the Committee are satisfied with this "explanation" all I can say is they have as enviable a faculty of being easily pleased as the friends of Mr. Peter Magnus were blessed with. I will not go the length of calling the explanation "quite fallacious," but I will content myself with pointing out that it in no way invalidates my statement. That statement referred to a specific case as to which I happened to be in possession of what the police call "information received," which I had every reason to believe—and which until proof to the contrary has been produced I shall continue to believe—substantially accurate. It may be true, as the Dublin Executive Committee state, that eight ladies were employed on a vestment, and that during the time mentioned by the Secretary they received on an average 14s. a week. There may have been some misapprehension on my part (though I have yet to learn that there was) as to the particular article of ecclesiastical man millinery which was made by the lady to whom I referred, but the essential fact remains that for five weeks' work of seven hours a day she was paid at the rate of 1½d. per hour.

The Committee will hardly, I imagine, deny that this is "sweating" of the worst kind; and "sweating" is not made less objectionable by being done in the name of charity. A letter from the lady herself is now before me in which she relates the facts, as already set forth in TRUTH, not at all in the spirit of the professional grievance monger (a type with which my position brings me pretty well acquainted), but as showing the desirability of work at a rate of pay more nearly approximating to a "living wage" being found for her. The Committee's "explanation," in short, does not touch my statement at all, and I therefore respectfully invite their attention to the precise point at issue.

People who subscribed to the Victoria Fund must be disgusted by the manner in which it is being managed by the Patriotic Commissioners, who seem to me to be acting ultra vires in deciding to keep the fund of £80,000 intact, and to expend the interest only. It seems that the weekly allowances given to widows and children are miserably and scandalously inadequate. The average amount granted weekly to widows is under four shillings, and for each child the average is about fifteenpence! The "dependent relatives" are treated even worse by the Commissioners. The generosity of the public brought the Fund into existence, and they have a clear right to know what is being done with the money. The muddling of this Fund is indeed a very fit subject for investigation by a Parliamentary Committee, as the Patriotic Commissioners are perfectly execrated at the seaport towns.

Surprise has been expressed in the Press that more money has not been subscribed to the Liberator Relief Fund. I see one very probable explanation in the fact that no accounts have yet been published, and I am in a position to answer for one subscriber who would have given more, had he been informed as to what has now been done, and what remains to be done in the way of relief. Probably there are others in the same position, and apart from the need of increasing the fund it seems time that those in charge of it rendered at any rate an interim account. I fear that the Liberator Fund has also suffered from the heavy drain upon the charitably disposed in connection with the loss of the Victoria. The Liberator disaster, however, though less striking than the other calamity, created far more widespread distress, and it is to be hoped that the public will yet awake to this fact.

I have received £3. 3s. from A Dutchman for Lady Jeune's Fund.

Lord Roberts having declined to accept the Government of Malta, that much-coveted post has been given to General Fremantle, a selection which, coming after "Bob's," reminds one of the jump from Alexander the Great to Alexander the Coppersmith. The appointment is seriously criticised in Service circles and it certainly seems to be a monstrous job. General Fremantle stands only thirteenth on the list of Lieutenant-Generals, and he had actually never held a District Command until he went to Scotland a few months ago. The pernicious system of preferring Guardsmen to nearly all the best commands still prevails, and General Fremantle is indebted for his good fortune a great deal more to the fact that he is a persona grata in what are termed "high circles" than to any special professional qualifications.

What is the "recent case" so significantly referred to in the Commander-in-Chief's Order reminding officers of their duties when serving on Boards of Supervision for competitive examinations? The only case to which the Order has any relevance is the recent examination of Militia Subalterns for Army Commissions. The irregularities which occurred on this occasion have already been referred to in TRUTH. If the Commander-in-Chief accepts the accuracy of what has been said in regard to that examination, it is grossly unjust that the results so arrived at should be allowed to stand. The whole examination ought to be declared void, and held again.

I am credibly informed that "in a Royal regiment stationed in the South of England subalterns are at present paying 5s. 6d. a day for their messing, and that they are also charged for all entertainments, even though they are not invited, at the same rate as their senior officers, from the C.O. downwards." So far as I can make out, the regiment referred to is the Berkshire. If such a state of things prevails in that or any other regiment, it is not only an irregularity, but an irregularity of a most mischievous kind, as has been again and again pointed out in TRUTH. As regards the way in which the expenses of entertaining are divided, I am afraid that there are a good many regiments about which a very similar story might be told.

My attention has been directed to the following advertisement, which has been appearing in at least one daily paper:—

MEN (Active young) out of employment, between 18-25, should apply to Recruiting Officers, St. George's Barracks, Charing-cross, or 1, Sharpe's-buildings, King-street, Tower-hill, or Hounslow Barracks, for all information. A pamphlet, "Advantages of the Army," can be had free at any post-office; weekly pocket-money 3s. to 4s. 6d.

I am sorry to say that this is another of the advertisements against which I must warn the too confiding. I have therefore drawn up the following by way of supplement to it:—

MEN (Active young) out of employment, between 18-25, before applying to Recruiting Officers should apply at TRUTH-buildings, Carteret-street, S.W., for all information. Back numbers, containing articles on the "Disadvantages of the Army," can be obtained through any newsagent, price 6d. Weekly pocket-money, 1s. 1d.

Until Christmas, Messrs. BENJAMIN, of Ulster House, Conduit-street, W., will sell their Dress-length Remnants (suitable for presents) of their celebrated Tweeds, Serges, and Homespuns, at 25s., 30s., 35s., and 40s. the dress length

Is it "khaki" or "kharki?" For a long time the question exercised me deeply. I found that some Anglo-Indians spelt the word one way, some the other. At last, however, the Broad Arrow delivered for my benefit a long lecture on this material, warning me of the danger which attached to handling it ignorantly. In this discourse the lecturer talked of nothing but "kharki" with an "r." I had been wavering for some time; but that settled me, for I rashly assumed that a Service journal discoursing on khaki would at least know how the word ought to be spelt. But I was wrong. A Hindustani scholar now informs me that the root of the word is khak, meaning dust; and that khaki has no more right to an "r" than a sofa. Then khaki let it be.

A Major R.A. complains bitterly to me of the stagnation in promotion among officers of his rank. He writes:—

The cause is not far to seek. The Lieutenant-Colonels of Cavalry and Infantry hold their Regimental and Battalion commands for four years only; while R.A. Lieutenant-Colonels, who are far less closely associated with those under them, are allowed five years in command. A Major of the Royal Artillery occupies a position quite unique. He performs the duties of a Paymaster and Quartermaster, duties unknown to the Regimental Major of Cavalry and Infantry. Yet with these heavy demands upon them, Majors R.A. are serving up to 48, 49, and 50 years of age before promotion.

Can any one give any valid reason why a Lieutenant-Colonel should hold his command longer in the Royal Artillery than in a Cavalry or Infantry Regiment?

The following gem appears among the Station Orders issued recently by Major-General Sanford, commanding Meerut Division:—

The General Officer Commanding desires to call the attention of Officers Commanding corps to para. 15, Section III., Queen's Regulations, and especially as regards Non-commissioned Officers and men saluting officers in plain clothes.

It may be taken for granted that in most Cantonments almost every gentleman dressed in plain cloth is a British Officer, anyhow, it is better that an occasional civilian should receive a salute, than that Officers should be continually passed without recognition.

What the General Officer Commanding here takes for granted is very far from the fact. A correspondent on the spot tells me that in walking the length of the Mall at night he has counted over 300 men in plain clothes, not 100 of whom were officers; and the effect of the order is that every civilian in the place is being saluted as he walks about, and that a soldier cannot move half a dozen yards at some periods of the day without raising his hand to his head. The other day a soldier was much gratified to find that he had saluted a member of a music-hall troupe which was performing in the place. All these things will doubtless appear to the G.O.C. trifles in comparison with the awful calamity of an Officer being "continually passed without recognition." I take the liberty of denying, however, that an Officer in plain clothes has any business to be saluted under any circumstances whatever.

When the Army Pay Corps was brought into existence I pointed out one or two of the reasons which seemed likely to prevent the Royal Warrant being accepted as a final solution of all the grievances of the Department, and already this view is confirmed by ominous growls from the new Corps. The main complaint is the old one about the slowness of promotion and the closing of the commissioned ranks to the Warrant Officers; and I am glad to hear that there is now an immediate probability of this grievance being removed, for it is one which a Liberal War Minister is specially bound to consider. There is not the slightest reason why, in this Corps alone, the attainment of a commission from the ranks should be an impossibility. One of the Warrant Officers who smarts under this anomaly recently wrote to me:—

WINTER VISITORS TO BOURNEMOUTH will find "The Imperial" one of the most complete residential establishments in the United Kingdom. Finest position on East Cliff. Luxuriously furnished, with appointments and cuisine of the highest order. Moderate tariff.—Apply, Manager.—W. H. DORÉ, Proprietor.

There are now thirty Warrant Officers in the Department with a high average of service, and the highest professional qualifications, who are all perfectly fitted to fill commissioned posts in the Department—especially with the system of Army accounts now in force. More than three years have elapsed since a cheaper class of clerks was introduced for this work, but no attempt has been made to establish a subaltern rank, although quite one-half, if not more, of the Commissioned Officers are performing no other than clerical duties. This is a matter deserving public attention if only in its economic bearings, but I would submit that its effect upon the contentment and efficiency of the subordinates is equally important. . . .

That there are considerable possibilities of economy in the admission of the Army Pay Clerks to commissioned rank is incidentally shown by another letter which I have received. Speaking of the present cost of the Department, the writer says:—

In all large Army Pay Offices there are from two to six Paymasters. The work in Army Pay Offices consists almost entirely of the audit of Pay Lists and other similar accounts. It is an admitted fact that the Paymasters are of little or no use at this description of work. Their work consists for the most part of keeping the "Cash-book," writing out cheques, and signing documents. This work could be done in each large office by one officer, the other officer being available for the audit work.

There would be a large saving to the public, as well as greater efficiency in the performance of the work, if the two or three junior Officers in each large office were "rankers," paid as Quartermasters of the R.E. or R.A. are paid.

This would result in a saving of from £200 to £600 in each case where a "ranker" replaced a Paymaster. The saving would not only be for to-day, but to-morrow; as the retiring allowance or pension would also be reduced.

I regret to find that an injustice was done to Surgeon-Colonel Harvey, I.M.S., in a paragraph which appeared in TRUTH of October 9 respecting his temporary discharge of the duties of the Viceroy's Surgeon during Dr. Fenn's absence at Cabul. The truth of the matter seems to have been that Surgeon-Colonel Harvey happened to be on leave at Simla at the moment, and, being already an honorary surgeon to the Viceroy, he was asked by Lord Lansdowne to fill Dr. Fenn's place in his absence, just as any private individual might have been; but he was not officially placed on duty, and—what I take to be the best test of his true position—he drew no pay. As a misapprehension on this point appears to have prevailed in many quarters, I am glad to have an opportunity of correcting it.

Lord Clanwilliam is to vacate the Naval Command at Portsmouth in June next, and it is now definitely settled that he is to be succeeded there by Sir Nowell Salmon.

One of the Navy recruiting regulations ordains that a candidate must not have more than seven decayed or unsound teeth, and I am told that hundreds of otherwise eligible seamen are every year rejected on this ground. Could anything be more idiotic? In these days there are few young men in any walk of life who can boast of the proportion of sound grinders which is here insisted upon, and there is no more reason for requiring sound teeth in a sailor than in a clerk or a journalist. If the Admiralty are seriously anxious that no man when at sea should suffer from toothache, let them make every recruit engage to have his defective teeth stopped or pulled out. What more can they want than that? So long as a man has a sufficient number of teeth to masticate his food with that is surely sufficient.

With reference to the late scandalous job over the appointment of a Surveyor to the Surrey County Council, a report has been forwarded to me of a meeting of the Council held on July 25 last. On this occasion Mr. Roberts asked whether it was intended to bring up a recommendation from the Committee with reference to the Surveyorship, or whether it was "already settled who was to have the appointment." He went on to comment on the waste of money and the unfairness to candidates of advertising in the latter event. The Chairman, in his reply, said that it could hardly be supposed that there was a resolution already cut and dried, and I understand that Mr. Roberts's questions were groaned at. It now appears, however, that what Mr. Roberts suggested was the true state of the case; and it must be inferred that this unscrupulous job was determined upon as far back as last July, when the first steps towards filling the vacancy were taken. That is to say, the form of inviting competition and going through an election has been from beginning to end a fraud.

Complaint was made to the West Haddingtonshire County Council last week regarding the pollution of a stream at Coalstoun. According to the statements of Mr. Gordon, factor, the water, which is used for domestic purposes at Coalstoun, is at times polluted to a most offensive and dangerous extent by the sewage poured in at Gifford Village and Yester House, a little higher up the stream. Lord Tweeddale, the owner of Gifford Village, and his factor, who are both members of the County Council, seemed to think the matter was not worthy of attention, and by a majority of three the Council dismissed it. Perhaps the Board of Supervision in Edinburgh, to whom a report is now to be forwarded, will give the question the serious consideration which it ought to receive.

A remarkable scene took place at last week's meeting of the Bath Town Council. An expenditure of £37,000 in extending the Pump Room had been recommended, and the various designs for the work had been sent to Mr. Waterhouse, who was appointed assessor. He advised the Council to select a design marked A, which was awarded the first prize of £100. For some at present inscrutable reason, however, the Baths Committee ignored this advice, and they chose a design marked O, which Mr Waterhouse had placed second in order of merit. There are two strange features in the business,

A great attraction this Christmas, at 173, New Bond-street, will be Messrs. CHARBONNELL & WALKER'S superb show of PARISIAN NOVELTIES. Their salons are filled with treasures of artistic excellence in every variety. They are too beautiful to describe, and as all the world should see them, we will only add that everything that is lovely and poetic in the shape of novelties will be found there.

the audacity of the Council in setting aside the deliberate recommendation of a distinguished expert, and the astounding unanimity with which they adopted the second design. The result was a most disconcerting fiasco. The Mayor proceeded to open the envelopes containing the names of the architects who had sent in designs, when, lo and behold! the favoured one marked "O" was found to contain only a blank piece of paper! The Council decided to adjourn for a week, in order that the mystery might be explained, but if (as is expected) the "O" design is the work of a local man, then the anxiety of the Council to adopt it will be understood, and I fancy that in future there will not be much desire among architects of standing to undertake work for the city of Bath.

Reference was made in TRUTH two or three weeks ago to the insanitary condition of parts of Camelford and Liskeard Union, but it would seem that these places are only typical of the greater part of the County of Cornwall. A copy has been sent to me of a monthly return made by the Sanitary Committee of the Cornwall County Council, and it reads like an indictment of all the Sanitary Authorities in the county. Here are a few samples. It should be mentioned that Penzance Rural, Bodmin, and Padstow, are reported as "still refusing to make returns." Probably they are wise in thus hiding their light:—

Camelford. — The insanitary condition of this place is deplorable, as is shown by Dr. Permewan's Report, who was specially commissioned by this Committee to make a personal inspection of the town. This Report is in type, and will soon be in the hands of the Local Authority.

Bodmin Union.—Very strong complaint is made of the careless manner in which typhoid has been allowed to be disseminated from Padstow to Trewetha in Endellion. In the same family two daughters have died and the father is now very ill of disease generated at Padstow. There were 5 cases of diphtheria in one house at Trebell, Lanivet; 3 of them terminated fatally.

St. Columb Union.—There have been ascertained 14 cases of diphtheria, with one death; 2 cases of erysipelas, and 3 cases of scarlet fever. How much more infectious disease there may be in the locality cannot be stated, as the Local Authority persistently refuses to adopt the Notification Act. The Medical Officer reports that isolation, disinfection, and scavenging are all inefficiently carried out for want of suitable means.

Truro Union.—The outbreak of diphtheria at St. Agnes has been a very serious matter. The insanitary condition of this place has been the constant subject of comment in these Reports. It is very lamentable that it requires the sacrifice of sixteen lives to bring this fact home to the responsible parties; but now they are keenly alive to what is necessary.

Helston Union.—Fourteen cases of typhoid fever are reported, with one death. This is owing to the insanitary condition of Porthleven, that has been so often complained of in these Returns. It appears to be quite hopeless to expect any action to be taken by the Local Authority, however bad the circumstances may be.

Penzance Union.—There have been serious outbreaks of typhoid at Sennen Cove and Marazion, and scarlet fever at Lelant.

Truro Urban shows a very low death-rate, but that does not prevent the appearance of diphtheria, 5 cases; erysipelas, 9 cases; and typhoid, 4 cases; which may be expected to continue in greater or lesser quantities, until the sewage is diverted from the rivers which flow through the city.

Paul. There have been no less than 37 fresh cases of scarlet fever here during the month, with 2 deaths; and 6 cases of typhoid fever, with 1 death. It is attributed to inadequate scavenging, and the conversion of Newlyn Harbour into an unscoured cess-pool by the completion of the northern arm of the pier.

It is suggested to me that the simplest and readiest means of dealing with the negligence of local authorities in cases like the above are these:—(1) To confer on the County Councils some of the powers of control now vested in the Local Government Board; (2) to give them the power of appointing sanitary officers, and of re-arranging their districts in the manner most conducive to economy and efficiency; (3) to require officers of health and inspectors of nuisances to obtain certificates of competency from some recognised authority; (4) to make the Infectious Diseases Notification and Prevention Acts compulsory throughout the country. Here are the outlines of a useful rural Public Health Act for next Session, of which I am pleased to make Mr. Fowler a present. That some control over the Sanitary Authorities more direct and effectual than that of the Local Government Board is imperatively required, I think no one with any experience of these bodies will question.

On Tuesday last week the new City Safe Deposit at 13 and 15, Throgmorton-avenue, was formally opened in the presence of a gathering of distinguished City men. It belongs to a private Company, of which Mr. John Morris, the senior of the well-known firm of solicitors, Ashurst, Morris, & Crisp, is Chairman, and is most elaborately fitted up. Ingenuity has, in fact, exhausted itself in surrounding it with such precautions that it completely defies fire and burglar alike. All its important parts are constructed of patent compo undrillable steel, and what with steel grilles, steel doors, time locks of triple action, and armed patrols, the safes and strong-rooms are more completely protected than a fortress. Yet every comfort is provided in the shape of waiting-rooms (including a ladies' waiting-room), private writing rooms, and private compartments, where the tin boxes, which are fitted in the safes, can be examined at leisure, while the vaults are reached either by the easy and well-lit stairs, or by the large and commodious lift.

I wonder that no safe deposit has yet been established in the West-end. Ladies would find such an institution extremely convenient for the temporary storage of jewellery or of important or interesting documents; but after all it will not take them long to drive to Throgmorton-avenue, there to deposit their treasures in one of the neat little safes, to which they will get their own key at a rent of £1. 1s. per annum and upwards. Investors have of late been reminded by an important decision of the Courts of the necessity of keeping all "bearer" securities where they know them to be safe, and I have no doubt that stockbrokers and their clients, trustees, solicitors, &c., will very largely avail themselves of the new Safe Deposit, which is so conveniently situated close to the Stock Exchange and the banking quarter.

The Vicar of St. Stephen's, Westbourne Park, informs me that the Free School petition mentioned in his letter to which I referred last week, was not addressed to the School Board but to the Education Department. This misapprehension, however, has no material bearing upon the facts referred to, because I understand that the moving impulse came from prominent members of the School Board, and that documents furnished to the School Board were used by the promoters of the petition. Whether it was the Education Department or the School Board that was misled, or intended to be misled, is a matter of minor consequence.

SANITARY SURVEYS.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

The Lord Chancellor seems to be afraid of overcrowding the Bench by a too free appointment of Liberal Justices. He should have regard, however, not simply to the number of names in the Commission of the Peace for a particular district, but to the number of men who actually fulfil the duties of the office. There are a good many who, having had their ambition satisfied by their elevation to the Bench, consistently neglect all Magisterial work. As a result, the public are put to great inconvenience. For example, the whole of the cases down for hearing at Atherstone Petty Sessions last week had to be adjourned for a fortnight owing to the non-attendance of Magistrates. Again, at Mansfield County Petty Sessions a few days since the business was delayed for over an hour and a half through the unpunctuality of the Magistrates. Complaints of similar incidents reach me every week. It would be easy to provide a self-working system to rid the Bench of these drones. Each attendance of a Justice at Court is recorded, and those who fail to be present at a certain number of sittings per annum should be at once struck off the roll. In cases of illness a medical certificate could be sent.

Doubtless the executive of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children will give their careful attention to an inquest reported the other day from Dublin, at which the conduct of one of the Society's Inspectors was seriously impugned. It appeared that a child which had died of disease of both lungs, combined with acute pleuritis and peritonitis, was removed to the Children's Hospital under the advice of the Inspector in question, who seems to have supposed that it was being starved. On the way to the Hospital the child was taken to be weighed and photographed, for both of which purposes it was stripped, the mother being under the impression that the Inspector was a doctor, and that the weighing and photographing were part of the treatment. In other words, in his anxiety to compile evidence against the mother, this somewhat muddle-headed officer went very near committing the only cruelty towards the child of which there was the slightest evidence. A striking illustration of the results of trop de zèle!

The Leeds Magistrates last week took the somewhat unusual course of withdrawing a warrant on the application of the solicitor for the party whose apprehension it authorised. From the solicitor's statement it appeared that two or three months ago the wife of a man named Horrobin left him of her own accord and without his consent. On November 17 Horrobin was informed by the Clerk of the Bramley Union that his wife was in the workhouse, and that, unless he made her some reasonable weekly allowance, proceedings would be instituted. Next day the solicitor replied that the woman left her husband of her own accord, but that he was prepared to find a home for her whenever she chose to return. Notwithstanding this offer, and in spite of the fact that Horrobin had not absconded and would have answered a summons, a relieving officer of the Union on November 20 obtained a warrant under the Vagrant Act for the arrest of the husband as a person who wilfully neglected and refused to maintain his wife. The warrant thus secured was not executed, but, it was stated, was held in terrorem over the defendant to coerce him into making an arrangement which would meet the views of the Poor law authorities. In withdrawing the warrant, which had only been granted through a misrepresentation, the Bench expressed the opinion that there had been a gross misuse of the forms of law. Such a censure surely demands the serious attention of the Bramley Guardians, whose officials are responsible for the scandal.

In one of the Dublin Police courts on Wednesday last a young girl named Condron was charged with having been guilty of disorderly conduct. Condron earns her livelihood by selling newspapers, and the disorderly conduct alleged against her was that she carried on this business, in common with other girls, at a street corner. For this outrage on the peace and order of Dublin the Magistrate, Mr. Byrne, sent Condron to gaol for a month, and expressed a hope "that this would be a lesson to the others." I trust that the proper authority will at once order the girl's release, and that means will be found to give the Draco who passed this monstrous sentence a much-needed lesson in the administration of justice. A young girl might earn her living in the streets in a far more undesirable way than in selling newspapers.

"A Lover of Fairness" submits a report of police-court proceedings at Warrington against three licensed victuallers, who were fined for supplying liquor to constables on duty. My correspondent points out that the officers did wrong by going into public-houses for drink when on duty, and he apparently holds that convictions obtained in this way are not justifiable. I cannot agree with him. There was no pretence that the constables were acting under instructions as agents-provocateurs, and it is obviously desirable in the public interest that the Police should be prevented from drinking in public-houses during their hours of duty. With this object, it has been made an offence for licensed victuallers to serve them, and a little reflection will show "A Lover of Fairness" that it is not fair to cite the Warrington cases as proofs of "the crusade against publicans by bigoted teetotal Magistrates."

Writing to me from Wisbech, a gentleman states that his attention has just been drawn to a case recorded in my last week's "Pillory," in which the local Bench sentenced a woman to 14 days' imprisonment for keeping a dog without a licence. My correspondent explains that though the sentence appears harsh it was in reality the reverse. The woman was already in prison on a County Court committal, and as the second sentence would run concurrently with the first, it was an ingenious dodge of the Justices for giving the woman a punishment which was no punishment at all. Their ingenuity in the cause of mercy does the Bench much credit, and for that reason I record the fact. But when and where this performance was accomplished I have not the slightest idea. My correspondent says that he saw the case in last week's TRUTH, but I cannot find it there, nor for several weeks past.

THE COUPÉ COMPANY'S Telegraphic Address is "COUPÉ, LONDON."

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. I think it will be generally agreed that the Irish Judge who treats the smashing of a window as a crime of precisely the same gravity as the slaying of a man, has been deservedly awarded the premier position, though the learned Recorder of Wolverhampton and the Assistant-Chairman of Staffordshire Quarter Sessions are strong competitors with his lordship. Turning to the minor Courts, I would particularly invite attention to the contemptuous disregard of the First Offenders Act at Daventry and Worthing; to the stringent enforcement of the Game Laws for which the St. Asaph Bench is acquiring an unenviable notoriety; and to the amazing conduct of the Kidderminster Magistrates in committing a boy of fifteen to gaol for a fortnight on a charge of sleeping out. It will be seen that our old friends the Barnsley Justices once more figure in the list. During the past few years I have had occasion to say many severe things about these Shallows, and from what occurred at the last meeting of the Barnsley Town Council I find that my views are now endorsed amongst members of that body. "It was a calumny on the name of Justice," declared one Councillor, "to describe the proceedings of the Barnsley Bench by that name":—

Munster Winter Assizes. Before Mr. Justice W. O'Brien. Jeremiah Cronin convicted of the manslaughter of his brother-in-law. During a struggle with deceased, who was drunk, prisoner stabbed him, inflicting six wounds. Six months.

Munster Winter Assizes. Before the same Judge. Patrick Foley and John Williams, privates in the Shropshire Regiment, pleaded guilty to smashing a plate-glass window. Six months each.

Staffordshire Adjourned Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. H. T. Hinckes, Assistant Chairman. Wm. Henry Allen, 43, pleaded guilty to unlawfully assaulting a girl aged 11. She said he had done so three or four times previously. Two months.

Staffordshire Adjourned Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. H. T. Hinckes. Thomas Miller, 17, pleaded guilty to stealing a wrap and a scarf. Nine months.

Wolverhampton Quarter Sessions. Before Mr. F. A. Bosanquet, Q.C., Recorder. John Gollier indicted for indecently assaulting two girls, aged ten and thirteen respectively. Six months.

Wolverhampton Quarter Sessions. Before the Recorder. Benjamin Newbridge charged with stealing two chandeliers from an empty house. Five years.

Pershore Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. F. D. Holland, A. G. Taylor, and R. Hinshaw. Charles Laight, charged with assaulting Wm. and Robert Annis. Defendant kicked both complainants, and also jumped on Robert Annis, who, in consequence of his injuries, was confined to bed for a week. A constable said Robert Annis was smothered in blood. Fined 15s., including costs, or fourteen days for the first assault, and £2, including costs, or one month for the second.

Pershore Petty Sessions. Before the same Justices. John Hewlett, charged with poaching. Fined £2 and costs or one month.

Kidderminster Police-court. Before Messrs. H. Dixon, J. J. Harvey, J. Bytheway, and T. Grove. Nelson Leach, aged 15, charged with sleeping out. He was found sleeping in a railway carriage, and said he had done so for several nights. Fourteen days.

Dunmow Petty Sessions. Before the Revs. E. P. Gepp, G. West, and G. M. Wilson, and Mr. E. T. Foakes. Harry Parmenter, postman, convicted of cruelty to a pony. There was a raw wound six inches long under the saddle and other wounds on the hind quarters. Superintendent Megran said he had never seen a worse case of cruelty. One wound was evidently caused by a stick, and there was not a particle of flesh on the animal's bones. Fined £2.

Daventry Divisional Petty Sessions. Before Lord Henley, Colonel Lowndes, Messrs. T. W. Thornton and C. Rodhouse. Edward Thompson and John Smith charged with stealing 4 cwt. of coal. The former had always borne a good character, and the Bench were asked to deal with him under the First Offenders Act. Smith, six weeks; Thompson, one month.

Self Grey Lamb's Wool Underclothing. English manufacture. Will not shrink and can be supplied in several substances. Price lists sent.—Sampson & Co, 268, 270, Oxford-street, W.

Barnsley Police-court. Before Messrs. C. Harvey and H. Pigott. Alfred Ball and Charles Ball convicted of assaulting an old man named Hope. They smashed open the door of complainant's house and then dragged him out and kicked him about the legs and body. Both defendants had been previously convicted. Fined 10s. each and costs.

Barnsley Police-court. Before Messrs. W. Norton, C. Harvey, and C. H. Taylor. Four youths charged with stealing an old railway sleeper which they took for firewood during the coal strike. Fined, with costs and damage, £1. 3s. each.

Witham Petty Sessions. Before Colonel Lucas, General Howard Vyne, Captain G. P. Townsend, Messrs. J. H. Salter and R. E. Rann. R. W. Franklin, convicted of assaulting W. Harris, who said defendant knocked him down, kicked him, and left him lying in the road in a pool of blood. Fined 10s. and costs.

Witham Petty Sessions. Before the same Magistrates. W. Harris, charged with stealing 7 lb. of suet belonging to R. W. Franklin. Fined £1; in default fourteen days.

Cheshunt Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. T. Micklem, R. Ewing, and H. C. Wales. William Cannon, charged with assaulting Walter Embleton. After striking complainant with his fist, defendant caught hold of his throat and gnawed him like a dog. Fined 10s. and costs.

Basingstoke County Police-court. Before Sir Nelson Rycroft and Mr. A. Wallis. Thomas Kill, Horace Taylor, 17, and Fred. Rose, 17, charged with stealing stackwood, valued at 3s., from a copse. Rose fined 10s., Taylor and Kill fourteen days each.

West Riding Police-court, Doncaster. James Robinson, charged with assaulting his wife, who said he boxed her ears, threw her downstairs, and turned her and her baby and other children into the street. Fined £1. 10s. and bound over.

Wrexham Police-court. Before Messrs. J. Prichard and E. Richards. Margaret Rowlands, charged with sleeping out. Fourteen days.

Rollesby Petty Sessions. Robert Warner, charged with being found in possession of game on the beach at Caister. Fined £5 and costs, or one month.

Worthing Police-court. Before Lieut.-Col. Wisden, the Mayor (Ald. Piper), and other Magistrates. William Effer, waiter at a local hotel, charged with stealing a gold chain and other articles. The prosecutrix did not wish to press the charge, saying she did wrong by leaving her jewellery and money about. Prisoner had previously borne a good character, and the Superintendent of Police spoke in his favour. He was under the influence of drink when he took the jewellery, and afterwards it was recovered. Three weeks.

St. Asaph Police-court. William Hall charged with poaching. Two months.

Thomas Cowap and Edwin Groome charged with a similar offence. Two months each.

Waltham Abbey Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. C. J. Bury and J. Parnell. Charles Smith and Alfred Tant charged with poaching on the land of Sir T. F. Buxton, Bart. There was one previous conviction against Smith; nothing was known against Tant. Two months each, and ordered to find sureties for their good behaviour for six months.

Kilkenny City Court-house. Before Mr. John F. Smithwick and Mr. Laurence J. Power. Two women charged with having been found sleeping in an outhouse in the grounds of Mr. H. F. Considine, R.M. One month each.

A Carlisle County Magistrate has written to me with reference to a paragraph in my Pillory on November 16, in which it was stated that three men were fined—one £5 and the others £2 each and costs—for trespassing in pursuit of game. He informs me that the men in question were not summoned at the instance of any private individual for "trespass in pursuit of game," but by the police under the provisions of the Poaching Prevention Act. I willingly make this correction, but I must add that it does not in my view present the action of the convicting Justices in a more favourable light. On the contrary, I regard the Act mentioned as by far the most monstrous of all the Game Laws. It is further complained that I omitted to state that the defendants were "all of them notorious characters," and my correspondent tells me that "one of them, having begun life in a Reformatory, had from his youth up been convicted of all manner of crime short of actual murder—being, in fact, regarded by those best qualified to judge as one of the most dangerous characters in the country." It is a pity my correspondent did not go a little further back into the history of this dangerous character, and mention for what heinous offence he was committed to a Reformatory—whether it was for stealing a few apples from an orchard, or sleeping out, or some similarly awful crime. It would seem also, if what this Justice says is accurate, that the Reformatory is an institution which very much belies its name.

His Honour Judge G. C. Walpole, of the Supreme Court, Gibraltar, has evidently not learned how to temper justice with mercy. At a recent sitting of the Court, Juan Mouchot was charged with breaking and entering a barber's shop. Seeing the back door of the shop ajar, a policemen went in, and found the prisoner, who had not, however, appropriated or disturbed anything. Mouchot's explanation was that in going home from the tavern he accidentally struck against the door, and it opened. Feeling somewhat tired, he sat down in a chair, and fell asleep until the officer woke him. This was ingenuous, but scarcely convincing, especially in view of the awkward fact that Mouchot had a jemmy in his possession. But whilst appearances were to that extent against the prisoner, in his favour a Sergeant of police testified that he had always hitherto borne a good character, and his employer, who had known him for fifteen years, endorsed this, and said he was willing to take the man back into his service. The Judge also enjoined the jury to consider well the man's previous character, and then, when a verdict of guilty was returned, showed an utter disregard of his own advice by passing a sentence of five years' penal servitude. The punishment was cruelly and preposterously out of proportion to the crime, and, bearing in mind that it was Mouchot's first offence, the Governor ought to have no hesitation in reducing the term, say, by four years and ten months.

I rejoice to see from the prosecution of one Jackson, alias "E. & O. Williams," at Stony Stratford last week, that the Treasury are at last showing a disposition to take up the cases of victims of the bogus employment agency swindlers. Jackson advertised to provide "evening correspondence," worth 10s. 6d. to £4 weekly, on receipt of 7d., to be "repaid afterwards;" and the replies to his advertisements were received by thousands. As his case has not yet been disposed of, I refrain from saying anything which might prejudice him personally. But if, in the meantime, the police or the Treasury want a few more similar cases to fill up their time with, I shall be happy to furnish the names of a dozen other advertisers in the same line, every one of whom I will guarantee to be a successful swindler.

EIDERDON PURE WOOLLEN FABRICS, in various weights and colourings, for Dressing Gowns, Smoking Jackets, Ladies' three-quarter Capes, Dresses, and Underskirts; also the new Ballylareen Duffle Frieze for Ulster Coats, Inverness Capes, and all descriptions of Winter Wraps where "warmth without weight" is the desideratum. The Eiderdon Rug. Samples of Boyd & Company's productions, with "The Book of the Ulster," illustrated, and forms for self-measurement, may be obtained, post free, on application to the Sole Proprietors and Makers, BOYD & CO., 77, Royal-avenue, Belfast.

The "Black Sheep at Chipping Warden," the Rev. E. Henville, is still pursuing his nefarious trade as a begging letter writer. In an effusion of this nature, dated December 1, he once more appeals to charity in terms almost identical with that of the letters previously dealt with in TRUTH, except that he contrives to get a new claim to sympathy out of the late Coal Strike. Another letter, dated December 6, presents a new feature in being in another handwriting, apparently that of one of the ladies of the family, of whom I have heard a good deal. It is unnecessary, I hope, to go again into this reverend scamp's iniquities, for the undisputed facts which I have already given show him to be a disgrace both to his cloth and to the Church, in which such a man is able to hold the position of a parish priest without interference. I trust that no one will be so misguided as to give him money.

In this connection let me once more repeat my usual Christmas warning against our old friend, Reuben May. This hoary-headed sinner is as usual to the front with his Christmas appeals. It has been shown again and again that he is quite undeserving of support, and everything that has been said about him applies just as forcibly to-day as it did ten years ago. With so many honest and well-managed charities crying for help on all sides, there can be no excuse for giving to a man of this stamp.

From Reuben May to Commissary-General Hamley is a very short step. Like the Great Arthur-street Mission through its Pastor, the "Junior Conservative Club" through its Commissary-General is now busily sending out its Christmas appeals, entreating the public to subscribe their guineas. I would not advise the public to subscribe to either, but I really think that the Mission has stronger claims, as a Mission, than the Club has, as a Club.

At this time of year the parties who advertise cheap rubbish for sale at fabulously reduced prices are unusually active. I have just received from an indignant lady a parcel of odds-and-ends which she has been induced to purchase from "The Artistic Photograph Company," 178, Charing Cross-road, by an advertisement representing that the parcel was to contain "A photographic or picture easel, beautifully made of solid oak, and hinged, value 1s.," sundry other articles valued at 6d. each, and a dozen or more miscellaneous valuables, including four steel-plate engravings, published at 3s. each. Needless to say, the beautifully made, solid oak, picture easel is an article which might be worth 2d., and the rest of the goods are in proportion. There is no law which prevents a tradesman over-estimating the value of his wares: but as the law gives no protection, it seems only the more necessary to warn the inexperienced what they may expect.

Besides the "Académie Universelle des Sciences et des Arts Industriels," referred to last week, the enterprising Martin Schmidt is running at Brussels another concern styled the "Société Scientifique Européenne." The object of this institution seems to be to obtain from such fools as have already paid Schmidt 50 francs to belong to his Académie, a further 55 francs (30 of them being an annual subscription) to belong to his Société. The game is played in the same way—that is to say, by sending circulars offering membership to tradesmen who show goods at exhibitions in any part of the world. To show the impudence of the thing, Schmidt does not even take the trouble to translate the documents of his learned Society into decent English. See this, for instance :—

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER restores the colour, renews the growth, arrests the fall, cleanses the scalp.

Object of the Society.

To research, encourage, and reward the progress in agriculture, commerce, and industry; to help them in propagating every useful discoveries and to work to the amelioration of general well-being.

Seat of the Society.

The Society's principal siege is at Brussels, but she will establish groups, sections or associated comities, in the principal cities of the globe.

Admission.

Each person desiring to adhear to the European Scientific Society will make a demand to the Director; she will declare having read the reglement and accept it; she will give her name, prenames, professions, titles, and address and pays her subscription.

Means of actions.

She [the Society] visits the international or national expositions of the world and she represents the interests of her members who expose their products.

She organises, with the help of her members temporary or permanent expositions, national or universal. Every members of the Society have the right to expose freely in these expositions.

I would call the attention of the Public Prosecutor to a specially impudent breach of the Lottery Acts now being systematically carried on by a South Wales paper—the Cardiff Express. Each copy of the paper bears a number printed in coloured ink, and sundry advertisers in the paper offer prizes to the party producing a paper with a specified number. The proprietors of the paper are parties to the proceeding, for in a special notice they call the attention of the public to the system, and to certain advertisements in which prizes are offered. There can be no question, I take it, that this is a lottery pure and simple, and the sauce which has been applied to those London journalists who have organised "missing-word" and other analogous competitions, ought without delay to be applied to provincial contemporaries who break the law in a much more barefaced manner.

No journalist knows better than I do the difficulties of producing a novel and entertaining puzzle competition once a week. At the same time I cannot help wishing that my contemporaries, who make a feature of this line of business, would confine themselves to setting puzzles about the answer to which there can be no doubt. During the last few weeks I have had some hundreds of disappointed competitors writing to me about an arithmetical problem set in a weekly paper. All the writers maintain that they have given the best answer, or that the official solution is wrong. These malcontents may be right, but, unfortunately, it is beyond my power to help them. The Post Office, it is true, benefits by their communications with me, but I wish my contemporaries would benefit the Post Office in some other way.

Inquiries are constantly being made of me as to whether the next century begins with the year 1900 or the year 1901. It seems strange that anybody above the intellectual level of a nursery-maid should be in doubt on the point; but there are many people among us who seem to be under the impression that 1899 is the last year of the current century. Apparently, if £100 had to be paid to them, they would consider themselves paid when the debtor had counted out £99.

A Conservative subscriber to Truth sends me a paragraph quoting from a speech of Mr. Joseph Richardson, M.P., an account of the civility of Lord Londonderry to the Liberals at Seaham during the last General Election, when his Lordship not only lent a hall and ordered every facility to be given for the holding of a meeting, but ran two special trains for Mr. Richardson's convenience at ordinary fares. Though it is somewhat late to compliment Lord Londonderry now, I agree that his action is an excellent example to both parties, and I do not in the least object to assist in making it more widely known. Why should I? Because a man can behave courteously to his political opponents, it does not follow that he is qualified to legislate for his fellow-countrymen. There are many gentlemen outside the House of Lords, and, what is even more wonderful, outside the House of Commons.

The man who has most to learn from Lord Londonderry's action in the above instance is his brother Peer, the Marquis of Bute. This noble Lord, after allowing the use of the Drill Hall at Cardiff to a Tory caucus, at which Lord Salisbury figured, has declined to let the same building to the National Liberal Federation, except in the event of Mr. Gladstone's presence. Lord Bute evidently intends to shelter himself under the plea that what he has done for Lord Salisbury he is willing to do for Mr. Gladstone. In reality he is obviously endeavouring to impose on one Party a condition which he would never have dreamed of imposing on the other. That this is so, is shown by the fact that the hall has often been let for Tory meetings when only the small fry of the Party—Sir E. Ashmead-Bartlett, for instance—have been present. Perhaps Lord Londonderry has a hall somewhere which he will place at the disposal of the Liberal Federation, and if he will run special trains for their accommodation, he may rely upon winning the personal esteem and gratitude of all Radicals. But he would not, I feel sure, expect that in token of this appreciation no resolutions should be passed adverse to the legislative rights of Peers.

Mr. Newnes has sent me the following letter. As he writes "for publication" at the top, I presume that I am carrying out his wish in publishing it, together with my reply. I confess that I am lost in astonishment at his reading of "got hold of." Mr. Chamberlain, for instance, has been got hold of by the aristocracy. But assuredly no one would interpret this as a suggestion that he has received certain sums of money from persons interested in the Primrose League, in consideration of which he has uttered that which otherwise never would have come from a Liberal mouth. Mr. Buxton has been got hold of by Mr. Rhodes. But this does not mean that Mr. Rhodes has handed to Mr. Buxton a number of shares in the Christmas Greetings.—Patterns are now ready, & will be sent post free, of these new & fashionable Cards for Christmas (specially printed). A most complete collection, comprising many striking novelties.—Parkins & Gotto, Court Stationers, Oxford st., Londn.

Ovaline Toilet Soap, made with Yolk of Egg, is a wonderful discovery for the skin and hair. As a Shaving Soap it has no equal. Price, 8d. per tablet, 2s per box.—52, King-st., Regent-st., London.

Chartered Company for a sum below their market value. The last people who have a right to be touchy are journalists. But they are often far too much given to imagine that, whilst they have a sacred mission to lecture others, they ought themselves to be treated with the reverence that an African displays in his relations with his medicine man :—

Wildercft, Putney Heath, S.W., Dec. 9, 1893.

DEAR MR. LABOUCHERE, I was more than surprised to see the paragraph in last week's TRUTH with regard to the Westminster Gazette.

You say practically, and even definitely as follows :—"The Editor and one or more writers of the Westminster Gazette have received certain sums of money from persons interested in the South Africa Chartered Company in consideration of which they have written that which otherwise would never have appeared in a Liberal paper."

You make some sort of appeal to me to investigate your charges. But I reply that they ought never to have been made, and that I am absolutely certain that there is not an atom of foundation for them. I have the most complete confidence in the probity of the gentlemen whom you attack. Your great knowledge of the law of libel will lead you, I think, on carefully again considering the paragraph, to see that you ought to take the first opportunity of making a full reparation.

So far as I am concerned, I wish to publicly state that I entirely repudiate the suspicions and suggestions which you have placed in your widely-read columns. I am sure you do not desire to be wantonly unjust, and I now ask you either to bring proofs of your charges, or else to completely withdraw them, and give some expression of regret for having made them.—I am, faithfully yours, GEO. NEWNES.

5, Old Palace-yard, S.W., Dec. 12.

DEAR MR. NEWNES,—I was even more surprised on reading your letter than you appear to have been on reading my paragraph.

I asked who on your staff had been got hold of. You jump to the conclusion that I thought that some one had been bribed. The meaning of the question is that, having perused the pernicious trash about the S.A. Chartered Company that almost daily appears in the W.G., it was difficult to avoid believing that the writer had found himself thrown with a friend of the Company, and that this evil communication had sapped the writer's Liberal fibre. How else is it possible to account for a Liberal newspaper out-Heroding the Tory newspapers in laudation of a crew of filibusters, who have forced on a war, conducted it with inhuman cruelty, and now would have this country permit them to enjoy the fruits of bad faith, robbery, and murder? When I see a Liberal newspaper applauding and supporting such conduct, I feel that I am taking a kindly view in suggesting that some one connected with the paper must have been deceived by designing men.

Under these circumstances, far from wishing me to express regret for my paragraph, I am sure that, on consideration, you will thank me for it. Personally, you probably know very little about the merits of the question. I would suggest to you to read the "Africa" Blue Book of 1890, and the two Blue Books issued this year on the subject. When you have done so, I do not entertain a doubt that you will concur in my views in regard to these disgraceful transactions, and that you will no longer allow the W.G. to be prostituted by defending men whose deeds must inspire every Radical with detestation.—Yours very truly, H. LABOUCHERE.

JOSIAH TALKS TO THE SQUIRE AGAIN.

Said Josiah to the Squire, "Since I've worked with you for hire,
You have always kept on saying that my good 'tis you desire ;
You have never raised my wages for my hard and wearing toil,
But at Harvest Homes you've praised me for 'remaining on the soil.'
And full many a time I've heard you, at our annual Ploughing Match,
Talk about the virtues thriving 'neath my humble cottage thatch ;
And in promising your sympathy you never seem to tire,
But I don't appear to get it,"
Said Josiah to the Squire.

"For instance, at this moment there's that Parish Councils Bill,
Which, for sure, would bind me closer to the land I help till ;
Which would raise me, that is certain, and my future make more bright,
And yet, Squire, you are opposing that same Bill with all your might ;
Yes, assisted by the Parson, you are fighting tooth and nail
To defeat this act of justice, and to make it wholly fail ;
So it seems you want to keep me down for ever in the mire,
Though you do talk fair and friendly,"
Said Josiah to the Squire.

Said the Squire unto Josiah, "How ungrateful you must be,
Thus to want a Parish Council, and to say as much to me ;
For I've been your Parish Council, with the Vicar, for years past,
And this excellent arrangement ought most certainly to last.
True, we have not raised your wages, but we've served out soup, and coal,
And blankets from the dole-funds of which we have control,
And we've helped you, too, as Guardians, when your poverty's been dire :
Where's the need of Parish Councils ?"
To Josiah said the Squire.

Said Josiah to the Squire, "You have done what you have said,
You have given me some blankets and a loaf or two of bread,
And a sack of coal at Christmas ; this I don't at all deny,
But yet I'm not contented, and I'd like to tell you why—
It's because I think that no one who's worked long and hard like me
Should be forced to be a pauper and to take your charity ;
Yes, I think my hands should earn me all the little I require,
And they don't do that at present,"
Said Josiah to the Squire.

"At the best, as things are going, though I've worked with such a will,
I must end the life God gave me in the workhouse on the hill ;
And, although you may not think it, it will be with sore distress
I shall leave my little cottage and put on a pauper's dress ;
So though you, Squire, and the Parson, may declare my conduct's strange,
Yet I do not mind repeating that I long for things to change,
For I think an honest labourer should be worthy of his hire,
So I vote for Parish Councils !"
Said Josiah to the Squire.

Whether the Employers' Liability Bill should allow contracting out in cases where the men employed bonâ fide wish it may be a question on which, as on most others, there is a good deal to be said on either side. The proposal to forbid contracting out was carried in the House of Commons by the representatives of the nation, and it only found twenty-nine supporters in the House of Lords, where each Peer represented himself alone. That such should have been the result of a Bill coming before the two Houses of the Legislature makes it amply clear that both can no longer exist. Let us, therefore, look facts in the face. If really we believe that the popular

FOR THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH, Epps's Glycerine Jujubes will always be found effective. Sold only in boxes 7½d., or tins 1s. 1½d. labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists, London.

A CHRISTMAS BOX.—A Merryweather's Fire Pump, with Buckets, for my friend's country house. Price Lists.—63, Long-acre, London. W.C.

Assembly ought to go by the board, then let us have the courage of our opinion, and leave legislation to Lord Salisbury and his hereditary merry men. Personally, I take another view. I would get rid of these hereditary merry men.

A Radical, and one sincerely desirous that the cause of progress may prove successful at the next General Election, I am every day more and more at a loss to understand why Government did not commence the Session of next year in the present autumn, instead of continuing the Session of this year. Had this been done, we should not have found ourselves in our present difficulty. The Parish Councils Bill is one that, in the multiplicity of its details, necessarily involves much discussion in an assembly which is largely made up of men who, if they understand nothing else, do understand these details. The most sanguine Ministerialist only expects that, allowing alone a holiday at Christmas of three or four days, the Bill will get through the Commons by January 10. Their hope seems to be that the Lords will pass a "carrying over" resolution when the Bill comes up to them, and that thus the present Session will end in time for the next Session to begin early in February. Were the Lords to do this it would show that they are prepared to sacrifice party considerations to the interests of the country. This is possible, rather than probable. Nor, if they do not, can the Liberals make any great complaint, for when a similar plan was proposed by the late Mr. W. H. Smith in the Commons, it was opposed (I never could understand why) by the Liberal Leaders.

It is always, to my thinking, a grave tactical mistake to count on Tories pursuing any course that may be of advantage to a Liberal Administration. The Tories—rightly or wrongly—are convinced that, if there were an immediate Dissolution, they would win. Their party aim is, therefore, to do their utmost to leave things as they are until a Dissolution does occur. With this object, they will endeavour to render the next Session as short and sterile as possible. Supposing that they decline to pass this "carrying over" resolution, and instead of this, discuss the Parish Councils Bill for two or three weeks, and send it back to the Commons plastered over with amendments, when can the next Session commence? Hardly before March. What with the Queen's Speech, and the requirements of finance, no legislative progress could, in this case, be made before Easter. Then would come the Budget, which I trust will be of such a nature as to make the Tories fight it tooth and nail. Where, consequently, would be the time in the Session for the main reforms to which we are pledged? It would be, to a great extent, a barren Session, and this is precisely what would suit the Tories. So to arrange matters that they can render it barren appears, therefore, to be tactics akin to a man attempting to get the better of a wall by butting his head against it, and denouncing the wall for not falling to pieces. The man may be fighting for the best of causes; the wall may be the very most objectionable of walls, but this does not alter the fact that wall would beat head.

What seems to me to be the weak point in the present Government is that, although its Members are filled with good intentions, and are ever ready to air their excellent intentions in a speech at a public meeting, they are without any clear perception how to give effect to them. The ship drifts. All is hand to mouth. To announce measures in the Queen's Speech, although the number announced may be so great that it is impossible even to hope to pass them, is regarded by the Government as equivalent to carrying the measures. Mr. Gladstone has frankly said that he lives alone for Home Rule. His energy in this direction has been wonderful, nor can it be expected at his advanced age that he can devote the same energy to the other items of the Newcastle Programme. Each particular section of his followers clamours for precedence being given to its own particular reforms. Mr. Gladstone sympathises with all the sections, and now holds out hope to one, now to the other. If a Bill is introduced, it contains rather the views of the Member in charge of it, than those of the collective Cabinet. When, after some discussion, the Minister's views do not appear to find favour, then another Minister is put up to throw the first over—a course of action which certainly does not tend to shorten debate. The assumption always is, that the Opposition will cease to oppose, or limit their opposition to such a time as may suit Ministers; and when they do not, it is deemed sufficient explanation of the miscalculation to declare that they are responsible for hindering legislative effect being given to the entire Newcastle Programme. In addition to this, the greatest atrocities are permitted in Africa by a financing Company; the Government is ashamed of them, and would willingly have forbidden them; but this might add to their troubles; they therefore prefer to wink at them, and to leave the financing Company to rob and murder as it pleases.

Any one, indeed, calling attention to these atrocities, which are a disgrace to our good name and to our civilisation, is regarded askance as an enemy of a Liberal Government; the doctrine being that, if a Ministry secures Parish Councils to English villages, even at the cost of many villages being burnt in Africa, and many Africans being shot down, African villagers ought cheerfully to consent to this, in order that English villagers may become Parish Councillors.

I do not hesitate to say that never in our times has anything so wicked been done in Africa as what is now occurring—and Heaven knows that we have already much on our consciences in regard to our treatment of Africans. The war was forced on these people by the Company in order to rob them. The Queen's specific pledges to their king have been ignored. Hostilities have been waged with unrelenting cruelty. Lobengula's envoys have been killed, he has been told that he must surrender at discretion, and that, until he does this, his people will be shot down like vermin. Their villages have been burnt, their cattle have been seized. The freebooters have sent home triumphant accounts how the remnant of the nation is starving and dying off from smallpox. And now side by side with this joyful intelligence to the shareholders of the Chartered Company is the further intelligence, that the capital of these people is being laid out as a town, to be owned by the Company, and that very rich gold has been discovered in some parts of the conquered country. Ahab took a fancy to Naboth's vineyard, and seized it for his personal enjoyment. This was bad enough, but what would have been thought of Ahab if he had allowed a "Palestine Exploration Company" to seize the vineyard after killing its owner, and then to invite the Jews to buy the shares of the Company, because the soil of the vineyard was so exceptionally good that the wine produced would command a huge price in the market?

Messrs. Harborow, Hosiers, Glovers, and Shirtmakers by appointment to the Royal Family, have opened new premises, 6 and 7, New Bond-street, in connection with their old-established business, 15, Cockspur-street.

"Liberty" Yule-tide Gifts.—Unique, Beautiful, and Inexpensive.—Descriptive Catalogue, containing 220 illustrations, post free.—Liberty & Co., Regent-street, London, W.

Even the Tory newspapers are protesting against the anxiety of the Company at once to secure their blood money. I can understand that this a little conflicts with the theory that spoil was a mere secondary consideration with these "patriots." The Tory papers, however, should not be surprised at this eagerness. One million pounds worth of shares have just been given to the promoters of the Company. Whether these shares will ever pay a dividend by the acquisition of Matabeleland is doubtful. This the promoters know, and they want to parade the townships that they are laying out, and the gold discoveries that they are making, so as to sell their shares to fools at the premium at which they now stand, before the bubble bursts. One of the chief promoters is a Hamburg Jew. With all respect for this financing Israelite, can any one suppose that he is actuated by a burning zeal either for Christianity, or for civilisation, or for the honour of this country? With him the question is one of money, and of money alone.

There have been three ways in which Europeans have made money out of Africa: by selling its inhabitants as slaves, by selling bad spirituous liquor to them, and by killing them and laying hands on their land. Slavery is no longer permitted, and we denounce the slave-dealer as the vilest of human creatures. I doubt, however, whether he is worse than the liquor-seller, and certainly he is not worse than the slayer. What renders the liquor vendor and the filibuster more loathsome in my eyes than the slave-dealer is, that these two labourers in the African field clothe their nefarious trade with a hypocritical pretence of philanthropy, whereas the slave-dealer is at least no hypocrite. Whenever I find a man proclaiming that he has a mission to civilise or to Christianise, and filling his own pockets by his mission, I distrust him. He is, indeed, invariably a pernicious humbug. Religion may be an excellent thing for a man, but if I had been a shareholder in one of Jabez Balfour's Companies, and learnt that the Boards of these Companies began their proceedings with prayer, I should at once have sold my shares for what they would have fetched. Moreover, does not the House of Commons commence every day with prayer? Has this ever hindered that august Assembly from condoning or from ordering massacres of Africans?

If we hold that a country ought to belong to us, we must pay for the opinion, should we determine to act on it. To do our Jingoism by Company is to encourage the worst of cruelties, the basest of trickery, and the play of the most sordid of passions. The honour of the flag should never be confided to a Company; still less should it be confided to a ring of financing adventurers, who would violate every commandment of God and man, in order to send up the shares of their Company, or to make profits for themselves out of the Company that they have brought into existence. A Stock Exchange "war" with Maxim guns, and long-distance rifles against naked Africans armed with spears, is massacre, not war.

I regard a man who throws, or who causes to be thrown, dynamite into a crowd, as rather worse than a Thug. This mode of warring against Society commenced with the active outbreak of Nihilism in Russia. The Nihilists adopted the creed that as the Government of that country punished them they, therefore, were entitled to carry on warlike operations against the Government, and to kill any functionary, from the Emperor downwards, who displeased them. This doctrine of assassination found approval amongst many, because they disliked, with considerable justice, the Russian Government. I never approved of it, for it is obvious that, if private individuals may in secret conclave condemn a man, and execute the sentence, there is no sort of guarantee that the condemned man deserves death.

What precisely a Nihilist is I do not know. So far as I have been able to make it out, he wishes to destroy everything, in order to rebuild everything after his own devices. What Nihilism is in Russia, Anarchism is out of Russia, but the means it employs to propagate its faith are still more monstrous. These means are to throw dynamite bombs into crowds, in order to convince all that law and order are no protection to human life, though what is to be substituted for them the Anarchists do not explain. The idea presumably is that if law and order fail to protect people against these machinations, no one will deem them worth defending. A man may, if he pleases, call this a political creed, and insist that if caught in the act of throwing a bomb amid an unoffending crowd, he should be treated as a political prisoner. But the same plea might be put forward for impunity in poisoning, or arson, or in a hundred other crimes against society.

MAX GREGER'S PURE HUNGARIAN WINES strengthen and sustain. The pure produce of the famous Carlowitz district.—MAX GREGER, LTD., Wine Merchants to the Queen, 2, Old Bond-st., W.

PFUNGST FRÈRES' EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNES.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. PFUNGST & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

I would never show mercy to a detected dynamitard. Dynamite can be manufactured by any half-dozen men; a bomb can easily be carried about by one of them without detection. The only way, therefore, for society to protect itself is to hang every one directly or indirectly implicated in bomb-throwing. A good many persons are quite ready to aid and abet in such crimes, but very few are ready to incur the risk of being hanged. I do not see how a dynamitard can even expect mercy. Is he to kill men, women, and children at his pleasure, and is he to protest against the same fate being meted out to him, if caught?

The Anarchists who air these doctrines are mainly men who make the profession of Anarchy a business. They would not risk their own lives in giving effect to them. These men actually complain if the Police move them on roughly. Yet, if in their opinion a disagreement of view on political issues entitles them to blow up those who disagree with them, they ought to recognise that it would only be acting on their own doctrines, were the Police to throw bombs in their midst. Of course, this would never be done, but I confess that, if a man openly advocates bomb-throwing, I should not deem that he is improperly treated, were he to be given a term of imprisonment with hard labour.

Nothing can be more injurious to the cause of progress than dynamite outrages. The mass of mankind have a wholesome regard for their own skins. Such outrages are worth thousands of votes to the Tories, although I am very far from believing that they would incite to them.

It is curious that our alarmists have not discovered that the reason why the French have of late years built so many warships is because we, in defiance of our pledges, held on to Egypt. That most unfortunate occupation will, therefore, cost us about twenty millions in shipbuilding, and about one million per annum in maintaining the ships when built. This is all the more absurd as, in the event of a war with France, our first step would be to evacuate Egypt, and to block the eastern exit of the Mediterranean by means of our hold on the Red Sea.

The Triple Alliance was made avowedly to secure the peace of Europe; it was made really, under the auspices of Bismarck, to secure to Germany the Provinces that she had taken from France. Supposing that it occurs to Italy that she has nothing to do with these Provinces, and that she shifts her alliance to France and Russia, what would become of our doctrine that we are only safe if we have a Navy equal to those of France and Russia? Italy would weigh down the balance against us.

Successful Because of Superior Merit.—Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer has immense sales everywhere. It never fails to restore grey hair to its natural colour and beauty.

SCRUTATOR.

MISS MARRYAT'S BOGUS BOGEY.

About two years ago, under the title "There is no Death," Miss Florence Marryat presented to the public a highly edifying record of experiences of the spirit world. As it was dealt with by my reviewer at the time, it is unnecessary for me to make now any general remarks upon this book, though I may observe in passing that it strikes me as one of the most painful records of combined imposture and self-deception to be found in this class of literature. It is sufficient for the present purpose to say that the book contains reports of Miss Marryat's alleged interviews with a large number of departed spirits under the auspices of various professional mediums. Quite recently, however, I have come into possession of evidence which seems to make certain passages of the book worthy of further notice—not merely on account of the light which the evidence throws on Miss Marryat's remarkable personal experiences, but for the sake of its bearing upon occult phenomena generally.

The passages to which I refer recount supposed apparitions to Miss Marryat of her stepson, Mr. Francis Lean, at the time of, and subsequently to, his being drowned off the coast of Peru. The evidence with which I am now able to supplement Miss Marryat's narrative comes up in the following way:—A shipmate of Mr. Lean's who was an intimate friend of the lad, and cognisant of the exact facts in regard to his death, accidentally came across Miss Marryat's book a few months ago, and being struck—as well he might be—with certain statements and, still more, certain suggestions made by the writer and by the supposed ghost, drew up on his next visit to England a statement in regard to the circumstances, which he forwarded to me. The name of this gentleman is Frederick John Davis, a Lieutenant in the Royal Naval Reserve, and he is prepared, if necessary, to verify his narrative by a declaration on oath. In the meantime I may say that I am personally quite satisfied of his honesty and good faith. To make the story intelligible, however, it is necessary to give Miss Marryat's statements first.

The first allusion to Mr. Lean's death is at pp. 48-9 of the book. Miss Marryat there describes how in July, 1880, she went down to Brighton by herself to complete some literary work. She says:—

> I used to write all day, and walk in the evening. It was light then till eight or nine o'clock, and the Esplanade used to be crowded till a late hour. I was pushing my way, on the evening of July 9, through the crowd, thinking of my work more than anything else, when I saw, as I fully thought, my stepson, Francis Lean, leaning with his back against the palings at the edge of the cliff, and smiling at me. He was a handsome lad of eighteen, who was supposed to have sailed in his ship for the Brazils five months before. But he had been a wild young fellow, causing his father much trouble and anxiety, and my first impression was one of great annoyance, thinking naturally that, since I saw him there, he had never sailed at all, but run away from his ship at the last moment. I hastened up to him therefore, but as I reached his side he turned round quite methodically, and walked down a flight of steps that led to the beach. I followed him, and found myself among a group of ordinary seamen mending their nets, but I could see Francis nowhere. I did not know what to make of the occurrence, but it never struck me that it was not the lad himself or someone remarkably like him. The same night, however, after I had retired to bed in a room that was unpleasantly brilliant with the moonlight streaming in at the window, I was roused from my sleep by some one turning the handle of my door, and there stood Francis in his naval uniform, with the peaked cap on his head, smiling at me as he had done upon the cliff. I started up in bed intending to speak to him, when he laid his finger on his lips and faded away. This second vision made me think something must have happened to the boy, but I determined not to say anything to my husband about it until it was verified. Shortly after my return to London, we were going, in company with my own son (also a sailor), to see his ship, which was lying in the docks, when, as we were driving through Poplar, I again saw my stepson Francis standing on the pavement and smiling at me. That time I spoke. I said to Colonel Lean, "I am sure I saw Francis standing there. Do you think it is possible he may not have sailed after all?" But Colonel Lean laughed at the idea. . . We visited the seaside after that, and in September, whilst we were staying at Folkestone, Colonel Lean received a letter to say that his son Francis had been drowned by the upsetting of a boat in the surf of the Bay of Callao, in the Brazils (sic), on the 9th of July—the day I had seen him twice at Brighton, two months before we heard that he was gone.

The reader will note here that either Miss Marryat is a singularly inaccurate historian, or her knowledge of geography is woefully deficient, it being, I should have thought, a matter of universal knowledge that Callao is not in "the Brazils," but on the coast of Peru, on the other side of the Continent, and distinct from the Brazilian coast about as far as the Bay of Biscay from the Persian Gulf. That, however, is a mere detail.

The next mention of Mr. Lean is at p. 133, in a description of the various marvels wrought by a medium named Colman, who "materialised" this poor youth, and thus enabled him to communicate to Miss Marryat, and, apparently, to Colonel Lean, also, "the circumstances of his death, and the events leading to it," matters previously unknown to them. It is much to be regretted that Miss Marryat omits to state what were the circumstances narrated in this instance, for, as I shall presently show, when the materialised phantom of Mr. Lean made statements on the same subject under the auspices of another medium, their accuracy leaves much to be desired. Passing over another highly instructive passage, in which the deceased lad is described by the spirit of his still-born sister as "chevying" her round the spirit-world and ducking her in a fountain, we next come across Frances Lean at p. 241, under the mediumship of a worthy who is only alluded to as "the Doctor." As this passage contains the supposed shade's detailed account of the circumstances of his death, it is necessary to quote it in full:—

As she left us, a dark figure advanced into the room and ejaculated, "Ma! Ma!" I recognised at once the peculiar intonation and mode of address of my stepson, Francis Lean, with whom, since he had announced his own death to me, I had had no communication, except through trance mediumship. "Is that you, my poor boy?" I said, "come closer to me. You are not afraid of me, are you?" [Why on earth should he be afraid of her? Is it usual for ghosts to be afraid of human beings?—Ed. TRUTH.] "Oh, no! Ma! of course not, only I was at the Opera House, you know, with the others, and that piece you recited, Ma—you know the one—it's all true, Ma—and I don't want you to go back to England. Stay here, Ma—stay here!" I knew perfectly well to what the lad alluded, but I would not enter upon it before a stranger. So I only said, "You forget my children, Francis—what would they say if I never went home again?" This seemed to puzzle him, but after a while he answered, "Then go to them, Ma; go to them." All this time he had been talking in the dark, and I only knew him by the sound of his voice. I said, "Are you not going to show yourself to me, Francis? It is such a long time since we met." "Never since you saw me at the docks. That was me, Ma, and at Brighton, too, only you didn't half believe it till you knew I was gone." "Tell me the truth of the accident, Francis," I asked him. "Was there foul play?" "No," he replied, "but we got quarreling about her, you know, and fighting, and that's how the boat upset. It was my fault, Ma, as much as anybody else's."

"How was it your body was never found?" "It got dragged down in an undercurrent, Ma. It was out at Cape Horn before they offered a reward for it." Then he began to light up, and as soon as the figure was illuminated, I saw that the boy was dressed in "jumpers" and "jersey" of dark woollen material, such as they wear in the Merchant Service in hot climates, but over it all—his head and shoulders included—was wound a quantity of flowing white material I have before mentioned. "I can't bear this stuff; it makes me look like a girl," said Francis, and with his hands he tore it off. Simultaneously the illumination ceased, and he was gone. I called him by name several times, but no sound came out of the darkness. It seemed as though the veiling which he dislikes preserved his materialisation, and that, with its protection removed, he had dissolved again.

The lad is subsequently "materialised" once more, through the agency of a medium called Virginia Roberts—this time minus the flimsy white veiling, in consequence of which he did not on that occasion look like a girl; but he made no more disclosures of importance.

So much for Miss Marryat. Now for Mr. Davis. He begins by stating that he is a Master Mariner and that in July, 1880, he was first mate of the British barque Stuart, on which Francis Lean was serving as an apprentice. The Captain's name was Bradshaw, and the second officer was Mr. F. Kerr, who had been in the ship two years and was an intimate friend of Mr. Lean. The war between Chili and Peru was at this time in progress, and on July 9 the Stuart was lying off Chorillos, a small port south of Callao, waiting for a suspension of hostilities in order to discharge her cargo at Callao, which was at this time blockaded. The first part of Mr. Davis's statement I desire as far as possible to pass over, because it touches on matters of family history of a delicate nature; but I feel bound to mention that Mr. Davis says, on the strength of two years' acquaintance with Francis Lean on board the Stuart, that the sentiments entertained by the young man towards his stepmother were the reverse of kindly. In fact, from specific speeches which he quotes, it is clear that if, after his decease, Mr. Lean visited his stepmother in a smiling and amiable mood, and addressed her in the affectionate terms above quoted, he must indeed have "suffered a sea change" after the catastrophe of July 9. Mr. Davis flatly refuses to believe in the possibility of his addressing Miss Marryat, either in the flesh or in the spirit, as "Ma" or "Mother," or by any term of endearment. For the rest, his narrative proceeds thus:—

Captain Bradshaw went on shore early in the day [July 9] and left instructions for me to send one of the ship's lifeboats on shore shortly after noon, and I did so, the boat being in charge of Mr. Kerr, the second officer, with five men with him to row her. Shortly after the boat had pushed off from the ship, I noticed her returning, and upon getting near Mr. Kerr hailed me to ask for another man to assist in the rowing, as the boat "rowed heavily." Francis Lean was standing by my side at the time, and the look on his face convinced me that he would like to go, and I told him he might do so. He then asked permission "to get his watch and chain from his berth." I granted his request, and a few seconds afterwards he appeared on deck, carrying his uniform coat on his arm, and a pipe and tobacco-pouch in his hand. I noticed that he had his watch and chain attached to his vest. He entered the boat and took the bow oar, and that was the last I saw of him. . . .

The boat reached the shore safely, and the crew were allowed to wander around the town for a few hours. Between four and five in the evening they pushed off, so as to get to the ship before dark. The second officer was steering the boat, and Lean still rowed the bow oar. When about halfway off to the ship, a blind swell rose close under the boat's bow, and this was followed by a huge breaking wave which "over-ended" the boat. Lean was apparently killed instantly by the boat, in turning over, smashing his head in; at any rate, he never rose again. Five of the occupants found themselves clinging to the boat, and two were missing. One of the missing ones was, however, a prisoner on top of the thwarts under the boat, and, by pushing out the plug, he was enabled to breathe freely. The accident had been witnessed from the shore by the Port Captain, and a boat put off, picked up the floating survivors, and towed the boat on to a little beach when the sailor underneath was liberated, more dead than alive. When the accident occurred the boat's crew were laughing heartily at a tale which Lean had just told them . . . .

CHINA AND GLASS. — Messrs. GOODE, Artists and Designers solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

A reward was offered the next day, and a body was found about twenty miles away, and Captain Bradshaw rode a dreary journey to see it; but it was impossible to recognise the once handsome youth, for he was a very, very handsome lad. However, the body was no doubt his, and received a decent burial, and it was our intention to erect a monument to our comrade's memory, but the Chilians cleared us out at a few hours' notice, and we were unable to do so. . . . He was a splendid specimen of an English lad of eighteen years of age. Upright, truthful, and plucky, and full of fun and devilment, and I am sure his spirit would not lie. I think—nay, I am sure—I knew him better than ever "Miss Marryatt" could have done. . . . .

The portions of the statement which I have omitted are either irrelevant details, or comments upon the supposed revelations of Francis Lean's spirit. I have already stated that Mr. Davis is ready to swear to his narrative if necessary. I may add that he appeals for corroboration to Captain Bradshaw and the rest of the ship's company, and to the log of the Stuart.

Now let us look at the bearing of this narrative upon the supposed appearances of this poor lad to his stepmother after his death. To begin with, Chorillos is by the clock a trifle over five hours West of Greenwich. The accident took place apparently about 5 p.m., or a little after. Mr. Davis does not state the time that it would be required to row from the shore to the ship, but that it was a long and hard pull is shown, first, by the fact of the second officer putting back in order to get an additional hand; secondly, by the boat putting off from the shore "between four and five" in order to reach the ship before dark, the month being in July, and the latitude twelve degrees south of the equator. The boat having started between four and five, and having been capsised halfway between the ship and the shore, it is a safe inference that the time was not much, if any, earlier than five o'clock. What would have been the corresponding time at Brighton? Ten o'clock, or a little later. Yet Miss Marryat is under the impression that she saw Francis Lean on the Esplanade at Brighton before dark on the same evening. And evidently it was some time before dark. She saw him smiling at her, and she "hastened" up to him, but just as she reached him he moved off. This implies that she recognised him at a distance of some paces; and to recognise with certainty at such a distance the features of a man believed to be at the other side of the world, implies that it was still daylight. If it was twilight or dusk, the supposed recognition ceases to have the slightest significance. On July 9 the sun would set about twelve or fourteen minutes past eight, and it cannot have been much later than this that the supposed apparition was seen. At 8.15 by Greenwich time it would be 3.15 in Peru, and at that time Francis Lean was on shore at Chorillos. Even putting the apparition as late as 9 p.m. Greenwich time—when daylight would be all but gone—it would be barely 4 at Chorillos, and the Stuart's boat had not yet put off from shore. It would seem, therefore, either that the young man's phantom, or spook, or whatever it was, appeared at Brighton from one to two hours before his death, or Miss Marryat's eyes deceived her. Personally, I prefer the latter alternative, more especially in view of her subsequent vision of Mr. Lean smiling at her in the crowd on the pavement as she was driving through the streets of Poplar.

Now as to the circumstances narrated by Mr. Lean's shade when "materialised" by "the Doctor." On the first point the spectre is clearly right; there was certainly no foul play. Not only was there no foul play, but there was not a suspicion of foul play; nor, so far as Miss Marryat informs us, a particle of evidence to warrant her in putting the question. But the suggestion having been raised by her question, observe how the "spook" catches it up. Although there was no foul play there was a quarrel, he says—a quarrel about a woman. There was a fight, and in the fight the boat was upset, though the spook very generously admits that he was as much to blame for the occurrence as the comrades with whom he was fighting. Every word of this is pure invention, but it is a trifle beside the next statement. "How was it your body was never found?" asks the lady. She was unaware, you see, herself that the body had not only been found but buried, and for the second time she leads the poor spirit into a fatal trap. His body, he replies, had been dragged down by an undercurrent, and was floating off Cape Horn before even a reward was offered. Thus not only is the non-recovery of the body explained, but a second imputation is cast upon the dead man's shipmates. Alas, poor ghost! Cape Horn, although he does not know it, is distant from Chorillos 2,624 miles, and no current could carry a human body that distance without knocking it to pieces, even if, in order to facilitate matters, all the sharks between Cape Horn and the Peruvian coast had been exterminated. As a matter of fact, although this also he does not know, the poor ghost's body was washed ashore twenty miles from Chorillos. A reward (although he does not know it) had been offered for the recovery of his body within a few hours of the accident; and, long before any portion of his anatomy could, by anything short of a miracle, have drifted to Cape Horn, his remains, although he is unaware of it, were decently interred in the soil of Peru. In short, the statements put into the mouth of this unlucky ghost are from beginning to end a tissue of impudent lies, not only contradicted at each point by the evidence of flesh-and-blood witnesses, but preposterous upon the very face of them.

What is the conclusion? There is a choice of four:—(1) Either Francis Lean's spirit returned to this earth for the purpose of hoaxing his step-mother and suggesting slanderous imputations upon his comrades; or (2) Mr. Davis has gratuitously come forward, from no conceivable motive, to perjure himself in order to impugn the veracity of his departed friend; or (3) Miss Florence Marryat has concocted the alleged revelations of her stepson's spook for the purpose of hoaxing the public; or (4) Miss Marryat is herself the victim of an impudent fraud. The first two alternatives I dismiss at once, and the third does not seem to me more worthy of consideration. I have no doubt that Miss Marryat honestly believes that she saw Mr. Lean at Brighton and London, both on the occasions when she was awake and the occasion when she was asleep; nor do I doubt that she was introduced to what she supposed to be the materialised shade of Mr. Lean by various mediums in House Drainage.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

America. That she really saw in the later instances anything more spiritual than the bogus bogeys which have been publicly exposed and held up to derision a hundred times on both sides of the Atlantic, no sane person who reads these lines will doubt; nor will any sane person have any difficulty in seeing that the bogey, or "the Doctor" who worked it, knew just as much about young Lean's fate as Miss Marryat herself, and invented the rest, with the highly interesting results above described. Cordially and ungrudgingly do I acquit Miss Marryat of any intention to deceive. Nevertheless, a lady who can at this time of day put forward a bulky volume made up entirely of records of stale mediums' tricks and pretended spirit revelations, most of them of the same character as the above and many of them infinitely more grotesque or offensive, deserves, to my thinking, very little mercy. To paraphrase the familiar line, evil is wrought by stupidity or credulity as well as by deliberate intention; and that evil in all sorts of shapes must be wrought by the circulation of such a mass of pernicious nonsense as is contained in this one volume admits of very little doubt.

MORE ABOUT THE UNSPEAKABLE QUACK.

I have received, as already mentioned in TRUTH, a number of interesting communications with reference to my recent article under the above heading (TRUTH, November 16), but other demands on my space have prevented my publishing them, and now compel me to cut the discussion short. To begin with, I have had another letter from Dr. Arthur Welsford, who, returning to his original point, that the present state of the law in regard to quackery is unsatisfactory, cites the recent case of the "Indian Oculists" as evidence to the effect. The Indian Oculists were charged with obtaining money by false pretences, and the charge failed because a criminal intention could not be proved. I doubt that the law will ever be so altered in this country as to enable a man to be convicted of a crime where there is no evidence of a criminal intention. There ought to be laws to prevent unqualified persons practising surgery, and I am under the impression that there are, and if the Medical Colleges have not power to enforce such laws, they should have them, just as the Incorporated Law Society has. On one point I am glad to find myself entirely in agreement with Dr. Welsford, namely, that the Inland Revenue stamp on proprietary medicines and lotions conveys to the ignorant the impression that the compound is in some way certified or approved by Government. This is a point which has often been urged in TRUTH, and I have argued on this and other grounds that the tax on "patent medicines" should be repealed. If the medical profession will support me in demanding this, I shall be at once gratified and surprised. Dr. Welsford raises one or two other points, but these I will refer to incidentally hereafter.

The communication which interests me most is a communication from "A Quack's Ghost"—that is to say, a literary gentleman, one of the class with brains but no money, who has earned a livelihood by compiling a quack's pamphlets, circulars, and advertisements. The Ghost makes his confessions with much candour, and admits that he does not regard his ghostly career with pride; but he denies emphatically that he has been a party to anything in the shape of fraud or misrepresentation. His disclosures from Ghost-land are entitled to great weight, for they relate to a quack who spends from £15,000 to £20,000 per annum on advertising his wares, and who may, therefore, be regarded as one of the leaders of the profession. I cannot give the whole of the Ghost's communication, but here is the substance of it:—

> My quack was a man of very large ideas but limited vocabulary. His wares have for years found and still find great favour with all classes of the British public, and I assert that this would not be so but for their proved efficacy in the relief and cure of a great variety of ailments. There was no misrepresentation in the advertisements. The medical critics may say that the articles could not possibly cure the diseases which they were represented to cure. I reply, "this negative theory will not stand against the positive testimony of John Smith, Sarah Jones, and all the other customers, who bought my quack's wares on the strength of the advertisements, and of their own free will declared themselves cured of rheumatism, indigestion, or whatever the ailment might be." I say this of my own knowledge, acquired by personal contact with the writers of testimonials, and knowing this, I never felt any compunction about the statements made in the advertisements.
>
> The charges most frequently hurled at the quack are (1) that he charges an exorbitant price for an article, the prime cost of which is small; (2) that he obtains his price by grossly exaggerating the value of his wares; (3) that he trades on the ignorance and credulity of his customers; (4) that his testimonials are either fictitious or obtained by tricks from fools. Writing after considerable familiarity with the class and with their tactics and ethics, I think that these would be the answers to the charges: (1) the cost of selling so far exceeds the cost of making the article that the price does not leave an exorbitant profit; (2) the statements as to the value of the goods are in the main based on the statements of people who have tried them; (3) the quack, speaking generally of the whole class, no more trades on ignorance and credulity than the majority of advertising tradesmen; (4) it is simply untrue that testimonials are obtained in this way. So many unsolicited testimonials are received that there is no need for it. Of course there are quacks and quacks. It is the small fry of quackery who bring discredit on the "profession." I admit that I have known some of them to be guilty of some of the charges above specified; but the men in a large way of business I believe to be innocent of three out of four of the charges, while, in regard to the first one, they are only acting on the principle which every advertising tradesman must necessarily adopt—that the customer pays for the advertisement.
>
> I do not say that there is no doubt as to the morality of quackery; but the legality of it is beyond dispute, and the law allows other modes of making money which are less legitimate. Rogues, of course, try their hands at this and other businesses, and when they can be caught let them be punished as the law directs. . . . .

To my thinking, this is a very fair statement of the case. The manufacturer of a "patent" pill, a "patent" potion, or a "patent" lotion, is a tradesman, and he stands or falls by the same rules as other tradesmen. Dr. Welsford is shocked at my arguing that trade advertisements of all kinds are apt to contain falsehoods. "You tell us," he says, "nothing can be done to stop the wholesale fraud which goes on, as so many tradesmen would have to be prosecuted. This being so, the sooner this rotten state of things is mended the better for our self-respect as a nation." But to call it "fraud" is to beg the whole question. I take the first instance I can think of. London hoardings have lately been adorned with a picture representing the Prince and Princess of Wales at breakfast or luncheon. A bottle of somebody's relish or sauce is on the table, and one of the august personages is represented as expressing his affection for it. Does Dr. Welsford think that any Court in its senses would ever be induced to regard this as a fraudulent misrepresentation that the Heir Apparent had given a testimonial to this particular compound? Dr. Welsford may have seen a picture of an infant of tender years reaching out of its bath after a piece of soap of a particular make.

with the categorical statement below that "He won't be happy till he gets it." Is this a fraudulent representation that without the use of this brand of soap no infant can ever be happy? The law, let me remind the doctors again, has what Ibsen's damsel calls the "robust conscience." In all those matters, it says, "Caveat emptor—don't be such a fool as to believe everything a man tells you when he wants you to buy his goods. If what he says is an obvious lie, more fool you to believe it." I can hardly think of a case to which this rule of law seems more justly applicable than the one cited by Dr. Welsford in his former letter of a pill advertised to cure old age. Fancy any old fool going before a jury of his fellow creatures, and professing that he had been taken in by a statement that he could renew his youth for thirteenpence half-penny. Much sympathy he would get—or deserve!

So far, I have been assuming that the vendors of quack medicines tell nothing but lies. My "Quack's Ghost" emphatically denies this, and I see no reason to doubt him. Several doctors have written to me in an abusive strain for suggesting that aloes and ginger can possibly possess one-half or one-quarter the virtues claimed for them, and still more for hinting that regular practitioners occasionally deceive their patients, or have been even known to fail where quacks succeed. If it were worth while to quote those letters, I could now follow them up with quotations from a dozen other correspondents who narrates cures by well-known quack remedies precisely similar to the one which I gave from my own experience. For instance:—

> "Quackery," as you call it, has done more for me than half-a-dozen and more of doctors. I have been a patient at two or three hospitals, and under several private doctors. One said that I was suffering from colic, and another that I was in consumption; a third pronounced me incurable, on what ground I don't know; and, for all they could do, I might have died, but for a certain lady "quack," as you call them. I enclose you the names of all the doctors and where I have been under them, and you are at liberty to write to them to verify my statement.

Does any one outside the medical profession doubt that cases—authentic cases—to the same effect could be multiplied indefinitely? "With regard to all alleged cures effected by drugs," says Dr. Arthur Welsford in his last letter to me, "we must always bear in mind the dangerous post hoc, propter hoc fallacy." Of course we must; and we must bear it in mind in the case of cures effected by the regular practitioner quite as much as in that of cures effected by quack remedies.

My impression about the whole matter is this:—The science or art of medicine rests upon two grand principles—(1) Faith, (2) Aperients. Both of these are as much at the command of the quack as the regular practitioner. As regards faith, indeed, the quack has the advantage. His advertisements, his testimonials—his lies, if you like—above all the fact that he caters largely for the most ignorant class, all tell in his favour as a faith-healer, and my belief is that half the cures wrought, whether by legitimate or illegitimate means, are faith-healing, and nothing else. As for aperients, everyone knows how much store the quack sets by them, or everyone may soon know it by referring to the interesting series of articles in Hygiene, mentioned in my last article. The author of these articles laughs, as a regular practitioner can afford to laugh, at the quack's simple faith in aloes, colocynth, rhubarb, and calomel. But put the regular practitioner to tend patients wholesale by contract; make him an Army doctor, or a parish doctor—especially a parish doctor who finds his own drugs—and what is his prescription then for nine patients out of ten? A blue pill and a black draught. And is he wrong? No. In nine cases out of ten he is right. By the same rule, in nine cases out of ten the quack is right too. And what about the tenth case? Well, the tenth man must either recover or he must die. If he recovers, the medicine gets the credit; if he dies, no one thinks of blaming the medicine. This is most satisfactory for all parties, seeing that in all probability the medicine had nothing to do with the result in either case.

Let me not be misunderstood. I do not suggest that no quack doctors are rogues. Heaven forbid! There are probably more rogues practising in this line than any other. I speak solely of the manufacturers and vendors of the various remedies loosely described as "patent medicines;" and, even as regards these, I am far from saying that some push their wares by fraudulent or otherwise objectionable means. Since this article was first written, a provincial chemist has sent me a circular from a London Company which sells a special pill. The circular invites the chemist to procure the names and addresses of any persons in the locality who have benefited by the pills, promising him in return that when the case is advertised, as it is to be, he shall have a good place in the advertisement. To further stimulate the discovery of such cases, a guinea is offered to any employé of the chemist who may assist in bringing it to light. The Company will doubtless say that they only desire to obtain genuine cases, and, looking at the statements of my Quack's Ghost, they may also say with an appearance of reason that there is no difficulty in discovering genuine cases suitable for the purpose in places where the pills are used. It is nevertheless obvious that the means of discovery employed are little better than premiums on the discovery of bogus cases. This is an objectionable mode of doing business; but I have seen even more objectionable modes adopted by other tradesmen who would strongly resent the imputation that they are not respectable. Public opinion may properly condemn such methods, and honest tradesmen will to the best of their ability set their faces against them. But, to say this is a very different thing from saying that the law ought to step in to prevent such proceedings, or any other aids to the creation of a demand for commodities which are at present lawful. When the regular practitioners ask for that or anything like it, they are asking for an impossibility, and that is all that I am endeavouring to show them.

"THE BLACK CAT."

It has been stated with a great flourish of trumpets that Dr. Todhunter's "Black Cat" is the best play that has been discovered as yet, and produced by the Independent Theatre Society. With that statement nobody can find fault, for it is perfectly true. But then, again, it has been suggested that by the successful production of "The Black Cat" the Society in question has justified its existence. On the contrary, I should be inclined to say that the history so far of this remarkably clever play is the best possible proof of the erroneous tenets of the Society. It appears to be the first principle of the commendably earnest directors of this association never to accept a play that is not morbidly gloomy, and never to encourage an author who is not a pronounced pessimist. They not only encourage black cats but blue devils. The "unhappy ending" is with them a sine qua non. They have apparently sworn to oppose any form of dramatic literature that paints the healthiness of society and the cheerfulness of contemporary life. Mirth with them is misery, and their amusements are shrouded in the "trappings and the suits of woe." The more disagreeable the hero, the more hateful the heroine, the more Morgue-like the method, and the more Kensal-greeny the conclusion, so much the more popular is the play in the estimation of these very advanced and Job Trotter-like young gentlemen. In fact, if a young and clever author wants to have his play acted for one night only and put on the shelf for evermore he cannot do better than entrust it to the crematorium of the Independent Theatre Society. If he wants his play to live, to become a classic, and to afford intellectual pleasure to his fellow creatures, he may abandon all hope when he enters the gloomy gates of the fortress of destruction.

Take, for instance, the case of "The Black Cat." Suppose Dr. Todhunter had taken it, say, to Mr. John Hare, Mr. Beerbohm Tree, or Mr. George Alexander, he would have received some such sound practical advice and encouragement as this: "An excellent play, my dear sir, so far as it goes, and just the play that the general public would admire and applaud. Your comedy writing is admirable, and your satirical style that of a philosophical humourist, not of a verbal juggler. You do not lead up to your jokes in the wearisome manner affected by the most modern playwrights, but they are naturally evolved from the scene, the situation, and the character. Your puppets do not sit round in a circle and bandy their jokes about like the Christy Minstrels. They act, talk, and jest like ordinary men and women in society. The subject you have selected is one that especially appeals to a modern audience, and you have argued out the eternal marriage question with admirable tact and temper, allowing each side to have a fair innings. The chaff of the advanced young man and the emancipated young woman is quite admirable, and there is every reason to believe that the playgoing public will accept your comedy scenes as the best that have been written for a considerable time. But (and it is a very important but) I can assure you, my dear Dr. Todhunter, that you have spoiled your play by appending to your excellent comedy and your domestic drama a wholly irrelevant and unnecessary tragedy, which, regret it as you may, will minimise the marketable value of your work. The play as it stands, up to a given point, is bound to succeed. Now, if you would consent not to force that tragic trump, you would take the trick instead of losing the game."

This, I venture to say, would be the managerial verdict on Dr. Todhunter's play. But then, of course, I do not know what Dr. Todhunter's intentions may be. Does he want to join the ranks of England's dramatists or not? I mean, does he want to write for the stage as it is, and in the character of an ordinary dramatic workman? If so, he has every requisite for the task. A man who could write "The Black Cat," even as it stands, is exactly the dramatist that the stage requires. Perhaps, however, this view of the learned Professor's aims and intentions is erroneous. Possibly he only wants to write in order to uphold the views of the clever, mistaken, and unpractical young men with whom he is associated. If so, he has already got his reward—the reward of a one-night success instead of the applause of thousands of his grateful fellow-countrymen. If Dr. Todhunter aims at the gratification of the minority who in their own estimation and that of their prophets and teachers are "always right," then he must be satisfied; or if, on the other hand, he would please the majority, who in the opinion of faddists are "always wrong," he will take his play back, reconsider it, alter it, make use of that admirable child in the play, the best and most naturally drawn child the modern stage has seen, conclude his play differently, unless he can manufacture geniuses to undertake it; and he will make up his mind to study the stage with a practical eye and cut his dramatic coat according to the cloth that is under his hand. To my thinking it will be a thousand pities if "The Black Cat" is driven off the boards. I would feed her up and give her a new saucer of milk, and make her into a sleek and glossy black cat, not a neglected wanderer among areas.

It was inevitable that a writer of Dr. Todhunter's great capacity and powers of observation should be perplexed. Let him get out of the atmosphere of a mutual admiration society and breathe the air of the world outside. He was told the other day that the tendency of modern audiences is towards pessimism and horrors. Let him believe it not. Public opinion is healthy, broad-chested, and virile. It detests affectation and conceits of any kind. It has not descended to the drivel of dilettanteism. Only the other day we were asked to pat Mr. George Alexander on the back for his pluck and courage in offering to exploit the works of the most pessimistic of the pessimists, to coquet with the plays of a German faddist who has only influence with a small, insignificant, and unimportant school. Mr. George Alexander is not likely to throw his lot in with the minority unless he desires to reduce his banker's account. He will be content with the result of a happy accident, he will be proud of the production of a play of curiosity, he will thank the gods for the goods they have provided for him; but being a man of the world, he is not at all likely to be the pioneer of a school that is already showing signs of dissolution. In less than a year that triumph of the new school, that advertised protest against the so-called stage conventionality, the unhappy ending, is lowering its colours and singing small. It was curious to watch the expression on the faces of the "Independents" when Dr. Todhunter's play went all to pieces. The play, up to a certain point, had delighted everybody, men and women alike, old school and new school, old guard and new guard. Why? Because it was a well-written, consistent, and interesting play. Directly it tumbled into the convention of suicide, and it was forced into the Morgue, it dropped down dead. There are hundreds and thousands of stories that, to be logical, true, and convincing, can only end tragically and with death. There is no other ending for them in art. There are millions of dramatic circumstances in life that can only be described by a note of interrogation. But it is as absurd, and illogical, and inartistic to lay down the hard-and-fast rule that every play must end tragically, as it would be absurd, illogical, and inartistic to say that every play must end with forced and unnatural joy. As a general rule, the tendency of the human mind is towards the advertisement of joy rather than sorrow. Amusement, as a rule, depends upon merriment in preference to horror. Given fine acting, tragedy is most valuable and impressive; but failing fine acting, tragedy is a dangerous stop to pull out on the dramatic organ. At any rate, it is in the highest sense inartistic and foolish to turn a clever comedy into a tragedy because the only apparent voucher for entrance into the charmed circles of Independent Theatre society is a belief in suicide and a disagreeable faith in the ugly, the cantankerous, and the horrible. The love of saying that black is white from the mere fever and disease of opposition, is surely a silly method of obtaining notoriety.

WULFF'S CIRCUS.

It would have been cruel to the children home for the Christmas holidays if their old familiar rendezvous, Hengler's Circus, in Argyll-street, Regent-street, had been closed during the holiday season. London cannot and ought not to get on without a circus. It is as much a national necessity as a pantomime. Children of all ages love the smell of the sawdust. As Thomas Robertson once observed of old Astley's, "You may break, you may shatter the ring as you will, but the smell of the sawdust will cling to it still." And I doubt if there is a better and more convenient circus in existence than Hengler's. The building is well warmed. There are no draughts flying about. A circus is invariably associated with draughts, but this one is air-tight. And then, joy of joys, the children are allowed to go behind the scenes between the acts, to see the stables, and to rub shoulders against Mr. Merryman, Mr. Ring Master, Mr. Whimsical Walker, the Clown, the lovely lady with the silk tights and attenuated frocks, and the muscular Antinous.

Herr Wulff appears to have happily mingled the best features of the Continental circuses. The Germans are distinguished, of course, for their "schooled horses," and here they are seen to perfection. In one scene there is a regular pyramid or Christmas cake of horses, round the base of which horses race and intertwine in maddening fashion. It must have required the greatest patience in training to produce this result. It is usually said that trained horses can do everything but speak. But that difficulty has been got over by one of the clowns, who introduces a talking pony, who will be a special favourite with the youngsters. Misko is a great success already, and he is to go to the music-halls in consequence. The horses are first-rate, the riding is excellent, and the clowning clever, so that Wulff's Circus is likely to be one of the treats in store for the good child who is provided with amiable parents, an indulgent godfather, or a wealthy bachelor uncle. Let them all book a good family box for the circus forthwith.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

THE NAPOLEONIC RENAISSANCE.

NAPOLEON is all the rage. But, luckily, there is no masterful man of the Bonapartean type to come forward as a saviour of society. If there were, we should soon witness another Dictature, eagerly supported by all the successful Panamists, by certainly three nouveaux enrichés of the present Cabinet, and by Society, which is dying to have a Court. Naturally, all the Czarites would be with the masterful man. The genesis of the Napoleonic rage began with General Boulanger. But what most contributed to this fever or fashion was the retrospective exhibition of First Empire furniture and decorative art. We were sick of the trivial petite maîtresse styles—of the plush-lined, plush-covered, and tuft-fringed curtains, portières, table, chair, and corner-shelf draperies; the dreadful arrangements for advertising lust and luxury, and for catching dust and microbes. Cythera and Lesbos had had their way for years. Decorators had to work in a sickly atmosphere, and for décadants and décadantes. The frank, robust, solid style of the Empire came like the breath of heaven on all this sickliness. It was right up and straight down; it was conscientious; the carved bronzes with which Empire furniture was adorned were found to be masterpieces. All the bibelots and bric-à-brac which had been collected during the Second Empire, and since it fell, ceased to please. Amateurs wanted portraits from the unemotional but truthful David. What had been reckoned cold and insipid was suddenly found to be rich in strong characteristics. A passion suddenly sprang up for bolt-upright furniture in massive mahogany, and ornamented with brass palmettas, rosaces, sphinxes, and other pseudo-Egyptian designs. The Marie Antoinette style was discovered to be un style usé. The rococo style nauseated, and so back Paris went to the unseductive style that we associate with the Court and Camp of Napoleon. There was no time when Napoleon was First Consul and Emperor for any one to loll or trifle. The bugle call often emptied ball-rooms. The military beau of to-day might be a shattered, battered trunk to-morrow. Or he might have to quit a dance at the Tuileries to ride as fast as horse could take him with a letter to Madrid, or to Vienna, or mayhap to Dresden. Cabinet makers felt they ought to work for heroes. Clear ideas were only tolerated in the highest region. Generals and legislators knew what they were about. Decorators tried to be in harmony with them. There was no occultism or Blavatskyism in those days. One could see this from the furniture that was on view at the retrospective exhibition I speak of. Naturally, when drawing-rooms were furnished in the First Empire style the fitness of things required First Empire bronzes, marbles, pictures, and dresses. Napoleon was next evoked. The first place of all others where he was raised from the dead was at "Le Chat Noir." The magician who revived him and his Old Guard was Caran d'Ache, and the vehicle he employed les ombres chinoises. We have the two extreme poles of theatrical art in "Antigone" (whose classical severity approximates to the First Empire style) and in "Les Gigolettes." Napoleon fills the intermediary space. Literature is as busy with him as the stage. He is a pleasant change after Joan of Arc, who is utterly played out from being overdone. Napoleon is served up in new year's albums à l'Epinal and otherwise. Gros Claude works up pictorially la légende for the nursery. "Le Mémorial de Sainte Hélène" is coming out in a popular 25 centimes form. "Las Casas" is cried on the Boulevards. D'Esparbès' "Légende de l'Aigle" is a splendid artistic glorification of Napoleon by an anti-Bonapartist. Poor Badinguet has no part in this apotheosis, and there seems no danger of it serving as a wave to bear Prince Victor to an Imperial throne. But I fancy there is much behind it akin to the Russomania. Napoleon stands for glory, to which the Franco-Russian alliance is thought a fresh means. "Le Chat Noir" has taken up Napoleon again. One finds him at most of the music halls. Sardou gives us Napoleon at home, and makes him most amusing as well as interesting. He is brusque, and not as moral as he might be, but is a good fellow, and might well on horseback be a hero. But the great incarnation of Napoleonic gunpowder and glory is at the Porte Saint Martin, where M. Martin Laya has brought out a most scenic and sensational piece, that would if arranged for a circus make, I have no doubt, its fortune.

Napoleon, it is now discovered, was rude to the fair sex because shy. This defect is brought out by M. Martin Laya, who goes parallel with Sardou in also making him out good-hearted and a hero with an extremely soft side. We see him at the Porte Saint Martin, from the cold grey dawn of his career to the murky shades of evening, which, however, close in a lurid apotheosis. The tableaux of the coronation and the Court functions are the very perfection of Tussaudism, but with living men and women instead of wax figures. I am sorry, though, that Mdlle. Tessandier was so short a time ago the defendant in that Rousseil action. She is assigned the part of the venerable Madame Mère. I don't think she has at all the physique required for the character, or that she well understands what a high-strung being Napoleon's mother was. Mdlle. Gallois is a delightful Marie Louise. She is a fresh, sonsy creature with plump white shoulders, which we are allowed to survey in the toilet scene. The Empress there is being attired for some grand function, and is surrounded by her maids of honour. They form a regular battalion of Court beauties. Napoleon comes in suddenly among them, and, delighted with the comely beauty of his wife, is in the best humour with her attendants. This scene yet more than any in Sardou's play is certain to influence all the great couturiers and couturières.

TYPEWRITERS of all makes for Sale or Hire. Machines bought or taken in part exchange for new ones. Documents copied with accuracy and despatch.—N. TAYLOR, Manager, National Typewriter Exchange, 74, Chancery-lane, London.

Mdlle. Tessandier has the merit of being picturesque. She has also a wondrously noble air, when one remembers what post-cards she can write. But she is not well read, and does not know how badly Madame Mère spoke French. Napoleon and his mother spoke to each other a semi-Corsican patois. One day, complaining to him of his brothers, she said: "Vous avez tort et raison: raison si vous ne les paragone à vous, parceque vous ne pouvez paragone à personne; vous êtes une merveille, qualche chose d'extraordinaire. Ma vous avez tort si vous paragone aux autres rois, perche ils sont soupérours à toutti, perche les rois sont si bêtes qu'on peut croire ils ont une voile sur les yeux, et che le moment de lor choute est arrivé pour qu'ils soient remplacés par mes enfants." Marie Louis as a harpist and a warbler of old-fashioned sentimental ditties is a success. She inspires Napoleon to toss pancakes, and is sorry he did not let her compound the batter of which they are made. He is less skilful as a cook than as a warrior. She is a good hausfrau, and does not know how to feign any sentiment that she does not feel. Napoleon, and the State grandeur and other obligations he imposed on her, bored her. She was sick of being a grand idol, and was glad to descend to homely reality and to Neipperg.

A controversy has been going on apropos of that awful play at L'Ambigu about the origin of gigolette. Some philologists thought it must have come from a German word, the English variety of which is giggle. It simply came from gigot—in old French a leg. A nurse says of a baby that keeps on kicking, comme il gigotte. The danseuse who kicks up her heels and knocks off gentlemen's hats with her toes is a gigolette, because one thinks of her legs only. An American pictorial has given one leg in thread stockings, baggy mediæval tights, and elegant garters, of a famed nymph of Le Moulin Rouge. The limb is severed from the rest of the danseuse for the sake of modest subscribers. This indelicately prudish picture I should call a gigot de danseuse. The gigolette would be the whole danseuse treading a mad measure. I am puzzled to think why la gigolette, with her cortège of outer-boulevard prowlers, should be brought upon the stage in a Boulevard theatre. At Le Moulin Rouge she is not so bad, because, whether from drink or natural wickedness, there is spirit in her diablerie. Nevertheless she is sickening, except to the lowest of the low, in her Montmartre lair. Those Russian officers in the suite of Avellan who were able to see her there and at the Casino de Paris thought her sickening, and were glad to go away.

That now stale gamine, Emilienne d'Alençon, is to earn a mint of money in a Christmas piece in which she is to represent the Bal de Quat'z-Arts. She refused another mint of money to exhibit herself with her donkey and her trick-playing rabbits in London. The donkey is not a young Duc, but a four-footed creature. Emilienne is given 100,000 francs by an artistic baroness, the wealthiest in France or Belgium, to serve as a model in her studio.

"IZAL."—The new non-poisonous Disinfectant. The strongest and safest the world has ever known. Of all Chemists, in large bottles, at 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., and gallon tins, 10s.

D

The 8th of this month was the centennial of a Jeanne of Lorraine who made as great a mark on the destinies of France as that of this Jeanne of whom we now are tired—I mean Madame Dubarry. The two Jeannes came from the same neighbourhood. Jeanne Becu was the herald of les nouvelles couches sociales, and the antitype of the maîtresse en titre who had until she appeared at Versailles ruled Royalty. It was expected that the King should not insult the Queen by setting up as a Reine de la main gauche a lady who was not of top quality. Madame de Pompadour was a bourgeoise who gave herself the airs of a Marquise of blue blood, and had a touch of bourgeois pedantry. She was ennuyeuse because a posturess. La Dubarry was just what she appeared. She had high spirits, a good deal of native refinement, and was unconventional. Her sayings were original and funny, and rank however high never awed her. The conventional and stuck-up people were horrified at her pretty familiarity in talking to her King. It was France here and France there. She taught Marie Antoinette manners, and that illustrious lady often, after she came to the throne, went to see her at Luciennes. The fine ladies who went to the scaffold in 1793 affected stoical indifference, but in a light way. La Dubarry struggled and implored Sanson not to fling her on the bascule. Her resistance called forth sympathy, and on December 8 began the reaction against Robespierre. So this Jeanne of Lorraine finished the monarch which the other Jeanne rescued from the English, and helped to destroy Robespierre.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

AS the world well knows, dear Lady Betty, the influenza is a mushroom malady, a parvenu disease, a distemper altogether of recent origin. Every one strives to be in Society nowadays! Here is, for instance, this mere modern disorder, which is so very fastidious that it must needs scrape acquaintance with the most important and influential people in the land. It affects to more or less avoid the sturdy Anarchist and the honest pauper, but attaches itself to millionaire Dukes, City celebrities, Dowagers out-at-elbows, and the fashionable sons of fraudulent stock-jobbers. And, according to its kind, it must needs also employ the petty tricks of trade to obtain notoriety! In fastening upon prominent people such as Mrs. Gladstone, Mr. Arthur Balfour, and Mr. John Morley it, of course, seeks to secure a substantial advertisement, as other parvenus subscribe to hospitals and to charity bazaars to have their names popularised in print.

There is, however, a serious aspect to the case. The ill-conditioned energy of this mushroom disorder provokes the rivalry of the older maladies. There are, for instance, the cholera and typhoid, two eminently respectable diseases with traditions that can be traced almost to the Flood, which naturally resent the unlooked-for competition of this new epidemic. Peritonitis had practically retired, small-pox had settled down into dignified moderation, mumps were mere memories, and even delirium tremens was slackening in activity. Then there comes this upstart influenza, without a respectable record of any sort whatever, which arouses them all to renewed energy!

But what I object to most is the principle of the thing. Let the influenza make a legitimate history for itself in the orthodox manner; let it work its way up methodically, and if it survives the test of time it will then no doubt be accepted as a considerable malady. But this species of vulgar spurt, this morbid preference for the well-fed, the prosperous, and the prominent, is in principle altogether as objectionable in a parvenu disease as it is in a private person.

Let us be resolute. In self-defence, and moreover as a matter of duty, we must altogether ignore the influenza. None of the newspapers must ever refer to it. If any one dies of this, we must ascribe the death to another cause—say, for instance, to gout, cancer, or heart-disease. We must discountenance and discourage it in every way possible. Contempt is the most certain cure.

* * * * *

Why have the London Clubs become so dull at night, is a question which is very generally asked now. Fifteen or twenty years ago the West End Clubs only, as it were, awoke towards midnight, but at this hour they are more or less deserted now. The wholesale change that has been effected in our customs of recent years goes far to explain the puzzle. Women went much less frequently to the theatre then than they do at present, and supper-parties at "Middlesex" clubs and at restaurants were almost unheard of formerly. Except in the Season, or upon the rare occasions when private parties was given in the winter, the latter part of the evening was spent by men at their clubs. Another cause is the great decrease of gambling at the clubs, this having become now more distributed throughout society than it was. Nor should it be overlooked that most West End men have now to earn a livelihood, which comparatively few had to formerly. This naturally fatigues them and forces them to go to bed much earlier than they did.

There are, however, yet many who, having nothing whatever to do, are too indolent even to amuse themselves in the ordinary ways. Though there is no City, perhaps, in the world where there is more to see than in London, the sights here are mostly of a kind which does not appeal to the regular Londoner. Docks, Museums, industries, the curiosities of a Mammoth city—what are they to him? He loves frivolity, and London is the least frivolous Metropolis that there is. Besides, he is tired of reading. Now, I propose that a species of "Crèche Club" should be organised for the benefit of this important but hitherto neglected class. Here all kinds of simple entertainments would be given throughout the afternoon, such as magic-lantern lectures, musical recitals, science-made-easy discussions with experiments, and light amusements of a similar order, suited to well-educated and intelligent, but absolutely indolent, minds. There is the more need for it that, having nothing better to do, many are now driven to spend their afternoons and their money in the billiard-room, or drift insensibly into habits of intemperance. In the proposed "Crèche Club" there ought to be no books but picture-books and the principal events of the moment should be presented in large luminous letters upon the wall where all could lazily read them without shifting from their seats. In the summer, parties might also be "personally conducted" in vans to the museums and other noteworthy sights of London and the neighbourhood. There are between twenty and thirty men of the kind in every club in town, and I estimate the gross total to amount to three thousand. There are, therefore, in the West End three thousand well-educated, intelligent, but indolent men drifting into intemperance and into the habit of petty betting merely because no one has as yet provided suitable entertainment for them!

* * * * *

A fortnight ago I made it known that, through the death of the late Lady Charles Wellesley, the Duke of

Minton's (Limited). Minton's China.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

Wheezing, sneezing, bad cough teazing, passing all belief.
"Oh! this phthisic; oh! for physic that will give relief!"
"Happy meeting, hearty greeting," said my friend of old,
"Take the lozenges of Keating—worth their weight in gold."
Words so pleasing quickly seizing, I took his advice.
Bless the lozenges of Keating! Cured me in a trice!

Wellington had inherited a picture of Copenhagen, the celebrated charger ridden by his ancestor at Waterloo. This picture, as I then said, is alleged to have been painted by Sir Edwin Landseer, and represents Copenhagen as a grey horse, whereas the popular impression is that he was a chestnut. In the portrait which there is at the United Service Club Copenhagen is certainly painted chestnut, as he is also in the picture by the late Mr. Ward, R.A. Since writing, the following letter has been addressed to me:—

"Having seen in TRUTH that there is some doubt about the colour of the horse Wellington rode when he met Blücher after the Battle of Waterloo, I beg to inform you that I have a very old picture that represents this incident. In this, the colour of Copenhagen is distinctly grey."

Upon the other hand, a certain well-known lady possesses a bracelet presented to her mother by Copenhagen's groom, and the centrepiece is a miniature of that horse, which is painted there as a chestnut. There is no doubt whatever that Copenhagen was the latter colour, but it is curious that so careful an artist as Landseer should have wilfully represented him otherwise. In a week or so, this unimportant but singular matter will be definitely decided in Notes and Queries.

* * * * *

The shadow of Christmas hangs heavily over us, and Society is stagnant. If some Anarchist would, metaphorically speaking, cast a bomb in our midst there are many who would welcome this beneficent outrage. Out and away the best story of the week is the one told of Mr. Studd, the well-known cricketer. Mr. Studd was supposed to be at Barcelona at the time of the recent Anarchist outrage in that town. His anxious friends, not hearing of him, communicated their fears to Lord Rosebery, who promptly telegraphed to the authorities: "Studd, British subject, in Barcelona during outrages. Kindly make inquiries and wire results." To this came the reply: "The man Studd in Barcelona. He is being watched." Then later again came another message: "The man Studd attempted to leave Barcelona last night. Is now in custody." The last telegram received by Lord Rosebery was from "the man Studd" himself: "Owing to your confounded telegram, have spent twenty-four hours in Spanish gaol. What do you mean?" In cricketing language, Mr. Studd has made an excellent "score," and is also the "last man out." Lord Rosebery, though, has decidedly been "caught."

* * * * *

For thirty years under Captain Sir Eyre Massey Shaw Londoners heard nothing of their Fire Brigade but its praises. The men worked well and with a will, and the administration was absolutely faultless. Just two years and a month ago the Fire Brigade Committee of the County Council drove Sir Eyre Shaw into retirement. In completing my comments upon this I remarked at the time:—"And so prematurely closes a useful and highly successful career, and London loses a capable and a universally popular public servant." How great the loss has been may be estimated now by the criticisms upon the Fire Brigade which have appeared throughout the Press during the past week. Discontent among the men, insufficiency of apparatus, neglect to provide proper clothing, busybody interference, and several further charges of equally serious importance have been made. We had a good man, why could we not have left him where he was?—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

FEEDING DOGS.—Prof. Woodroffe Hill, F.R.C.V.S., writes: "A sound, well-balanced canine dietary is the secret of success with 'Spratt's Patent.' I have no hesitation in asserting, with regard to biscuit diet, SPRATT'S FIBRINE CAKE is far and away the best in the English market. Some of the dog biscuits I have examined might be composed of pipeclay and sawdust for the nutritive properties they possess. Cheap and dirty means expense and disease." See each "Dog Cake" is stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "X." This is all important.

SPORTING NOTES.

TWELVE months ago a vigorous effort was made to revive the past glories of the Ascot Cup, and if a lavish outlay of money could have achieved that object, success would have been the result of the attempt. This year the Ascot Cup was the most richly endowed race of the whole season, for the added money was £2,000, in addition to a piece of gold plate which had cost £1,000. There were stakes of greater value, but with them it was a case of the owners of the horses entered subscribing the whole or the greater part of the money, whereas at Ascot an owner practically took £2,250 to £20 about his chance, and the sweepstake amounted to £140 besides. Then there was £500 for the second horse, and £250 for the third horse. All this lavish outlay was most assuredly not justified by the paltry result, for there was no increase in the number of entries, and there actually were only four starters, while the event produced the mere show of a race, but it has lived dismally in the recollection of owners and trainers, because every horse which started was afterwards "groggy." for some time, and two of the runners never recovered from the effects of the hard ground. The fact is that these long-distance races are not in these days to the taste of owners, who regard them with indifference—or, indeed, with positive dislike—because there is not one horse in training out of every fifty which can really stay two miles in a fast-run race. The fact may be deplored, but its truth cannot be denied, and money might just as well be shovelled into the sea as wasted in increasing the value of any long-distance race whatever. It may be hoped that the Ascot authorities will not repeat the blunder, and especially as there are other directions in which the money which was thrown away this year on the Gold Cup might be very advantageously utilised. The programme stands in urgent need of a richer stake for three-year-olds and upwards, but to be run over a shorter distance than the Cup course. The Hardwicke Stakes should be converted into a race of £5,000, added to a sweepstakes of £50, forfeit £10 if declared on the first Tuesday in the January before running. This would be a really great race, and that some change is necessary in the direction of increasing considerably the value of the Hardwicke must be manifest to every one who has paid any attention to the matter, as the race is now practically killed by the new £10,000 stake at the Newmarket First July Meeting and by the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown. The Rous Memorial conditions ought also to be revised, and £2,000 should be added, while the sweepstakes ought to be the same as I have proposed for the Hardwicke. The forfeits of this stake have been going to the Rous Memorial Fund for the last fourteen years. Surely this fund has already been sufficiently endowed, and if it still wants help some better arrangement might easily be made than the one which at present prevails. The Alexandra Plate causes £1,000 to be literally thrown away every year, and this event ought certainly to disappear from the programme. As the Ascot treasury is always overflowing with money, it would not be amiss to double the amount (£1,000) now added to the Coventry Stakes and to the New Stakes, and the distance of the Gold Vase should be reduced to a mile and a half, or, at least, there should be a stipulation for three runners—the property of different owners—or no race.

The Pearl, by Newminster out of Caller Ou, who was shot last week at Malton, was at one time a famous mare on the turf. She was foaled in 1868, and was leased by the late Mr. I'Anson to Mr. Chaplin for her racing career, and she won him a number of races, including the De Warrenne Handicap at Lewes (which was then a sort of minor Stewards' Cup) and a T.Y.C. handicap at York, over which Mr. Chaplin won a very large stake. The Pearl, on the strength of a very hugger-mugger trial with Steppe, a mare which had run second to Hannah for the One Thousand, was so heavily backed for the Derby which Favonius won, that she actually started a better favourite than Baron Rothschild's horse, but she was never in the race. The trial had been a slip-slop affair, and showed the desperate fatuity of galloping a candidate for a great race with a beaten animal. Hannah walked away from Steppe in the One Thousand, and Favonius was a stone better than Hannah, so that the trial was the merest fiddle-faddle. Neither The Pearl nor Steppe could stay, and the former was a very uncertain mare. She was expected to be a great success at the stud, and her breeding was certainly unexceptionable, but although sent season after season to the most fashionable sires, she turned out a failure, for she produced nothing better than Selby and Coromandel II. Many of her yearlings realised very high prices at Doncaster, but they did not prove remunerative investments to their purchasers.

The retirement from the turf of Mr. Charles Perkins is generally regretted, and he will be a great loss to the Yorkshire meetings, of which he was a most liberal supporter, and not one of the Northern owners was more free in entering horses in all classes of stakes. Mr. Perkins has latterly bred most of his horses, and he always had a large string of animals in training. He commenced racing in 1875 under the assumed name of "Mr. Northern," which he dropped about the time that Beauclerc won the Middle Park Plate. If this horse could have been trained as a three-year-old he would certainly have won the Derby (Sefton's) and the Leger (Jannette's), but he did not stand a second preparation, and his career was analogous to that of Chittabob eleven years later. Mr. Perkins bred this horse, who was the best animal he ever owned, and inasmuch as there is every reason to think that if he had stood training he would have beaten Donovan in the great stakes of 1889. Mr. Perkins won a number of important races with Dresden China, Jenny Howlet, Madame du Barry, Chislehurst and Dare Devil, but he could not be regarded as a lucky owner, considering the enormous amount of money he expended on his stud. Mr. Perkins is not only selling his racehorses, but also his breeding stud, in which are some splendid mares—notably Madame du Barry and Jenny Howlet, dam of Chittabob. It was with this mare that Mr. Perkins won his only classic race—the Oaks of 1880—which, however, was contested by as bad a field as ever started for a stake of this description.

Another retirement is that of Mr. Singer, who is also selling his breeding stud as well as his racehorses. Mr. Singer has obtained some notoriety from his practice of betting heavily on a system which he expected would prove infallible. There never yet, however, was a system which carried its followers through a whole season with success. Mr. Singer is the owner of Glenwood, a horse about which there was at one time so much journalistic trumpeting that some infatuated addleheads were gulled into backing him for the Two Thousand and Derby. I always predicted that we should not see much of Glenwood as a three-year-old. He was a smart two-year-old, but did not look like a stayer, nor did it ever seem probable that he would stand much work. Glenwood cost 5,000 gs. as a yearling (he was bought about the time when the egregious Ormonde "boom" was at its height), and in two seasons he has won £1,726.

I hear from Newmarket that Matthew Dawson is expected to have a dangerous candidate for the early two-year-old stakes of next season in his own filly by Minting out of Voisine, who is a very racing-like animal with beautiful action. A very high opinion has always been entertained of the Voisine filly, and it will be a real blessing for Minting if she does turn out a flyer, as Mr. Vyner's horse is in urgent need of a good lift.

Whenever a dark horse is announced to have been backed for the Derby, the speculative public are certain to rush upon the animal, and in order to save impulsive simpletons from losing their money, it may be as well to explain how it was that Lord Rosebery's Ravelston came to be supported the other day. A bookmaker was anxious to back Ladas for £1,000, and he stipulated for 3½ to 1, which was somewhat over the market price. The layer ultimately decided to make the bet, but only on condition that the backer also consented to take 50 to 1 to £50 about Ravelston, and in order to obtain the £3,500 to £1,000, these terms were accepted. But let nobody be gulled into believing that any one "knows something" about Ravelston, for such an idea would be a wild chimera. There seems a disposition in certain quarters to "write up" Ravelston, and I see it stated that although he has never been really tried, yet it is known that he can go. The real truth is that Ravelston has not yet been trained, and he has never done a gallop in his life. He is a great, heavy horse, with very "groggy" fore legs.

"The Lunar Month" for 1893, which has just reached me, is a well-arranged little book, which is published at the Sportsman Office, and it contains every information respecting the racing of the past season, both at home and on the Continent. The system of consecutive numbering of the events recorded is very convenient.

Wolf's Crag is to be sold at Newmarket this week, so it may be taken for granted that he will never again be seen on a racecourse. He was one of the early summer favourites for the Cambridgeshire, but he went wrong after winning the Lincolnshire Handicap, and could not be trained again. Wolf's Crag's performance at Lincoln, when he won easily, with 6 st. 7 lb. on his back, from Gangway (6 st. 6 lb.), was an excellent one, but it is simply nonsense and rubbish of the most muddish kind for people to talk of his having beaten Marcion (6 st. 12 lb.), as if the running at Lincoln could be regarded as a genuine test of the form of Mr. Vyner's horse, for he was then preposterously backward.

It is not often that one sees such fine football, or so exciting a match, as that between Cardiff and Blackheath last Saturday. The Blackheath forwards were stronger, but until the last twenty minutes the three-quarters made no attempt to play the new game. Fegan on two occasions, and Evershed once, got clean away, but no one thought it worth his while to back up. Fegan played a good game for himself, but for combination he is useless. Latter and Hubbard, on the left, scored two tries by grand passing. On the other hand, the Welsh three-quarters worked beautifully together. Their halves, who were two men picked from a local team in the absence of the regular players, showed good combination, and fed well when the opposing forwards let them. Onslow, the Blackheath back, cannot tackle, but he picks up the ball and gets his kicks in well.

In the match between London Scottish and Middlesex Wanderers, Macgregor played a pretty trick on his opponents. He caught a high kick and his opponents, who were on side, rushed up, and evidently thought he had made his mark. He had not, and just tossed the ball over his shoulder and his opponents to Campbell, who nearly got in. The Old Merchant Taylors forwards, playing against Guy's, tried giving their outsiders something to do, but as they so seldom get this opportunity they had not had enough practice to use it. In the Charity Cup Ties both the Old Carthusians and the Old Westminsters turned up with strong teams, although the latter were one short, and won their matches. These clubs only make an effort to turn up strongly in Cup Ties, and so set a bad example to other clubs. The match of the afternoon was that between the Casuals and London Caledonians, and the former had a splendid team and gave their opponents a good beating. Topham, who played for the Wolves last year when they won the Cup, was in great form, and sent in some splendid shots; and Stirling, in goal, saved very well.

Sunday golf is a great blessing to Londoners. But some strait-laced and selfish people object to it. The Ealing Club is negotiating for a lease for some links at Hanwell from Lord Jersey. At a meeting of the Club there was a majority in favour of Sunday play. No report of the meeting was published; but Lord Jersey now refuses to grant the lease if there is to be Sunday play. I trust that he will change his mind, and that the zealous busybody who communicated with him will meet with the contempt he deserves.

I should like those who complain of the practice of Rugby referees in putting the ball into the scrimmages, instead of letting the halves do so, to have seen Mr. Lindsay at Blackheath on Saturday. He was up to the scrimmage before the halves were ready to put the ball in. In this way only the dodges that Yorkshire practised last year against Middlesex can be prevented. He rather astonished the Cardiff supporters by giving a free kick, when one of their players fell on the ball and deliberately lay on the ground until some of the team came up. He is an excellent referee.

At billiards, Roberts has suffered his first defeat this season, Mitchell beating him. The winner played a very steady game, and on Saturday he put on a fine break of over 300. The loser played an in and out game. At first he scored rapidly, and he had at one time the best of the handicap, having 1,000 in hand. Peall finds that he has to confine himself to the spot-barred game, and, showing some excellent play, he gave North, whom he met on level terms, a good beating.

The County Secretaries met at Lord's and fixed dates for next season's cricket. The first-class county question was burked, and no change in the rule as to the follow-on was hinted at. The rules are called the M.C.C. rules, but neither the Club nor any other body moves. These matters require immediate attention.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—The upward movement which was in full progress a week ago has been checked, and a reaction has taken place in several departments under the influence, chiefly, of a set-back in the American market. That this will be a temporary effect only, may be safely assumed. As I stated last week, after a period of prolonged depression confidence is but slow to grow, and any unfavourable movement in a leading group of stocks at once revives a gloomy feeling and stops dealings. To this feature must be added the near approach of Christmas and the hardening of money rates, partly owing to the proposed issue of a huge India Council Sterling loan. But there is no demand for gold in this market, and some German requirements are apparently being satisfied from New York. No actual stringency need, therefore, be expected in the closing weeks of the year. Nor need any fresh depreciation of securities be anticipated. That has, apparently, run its course, and at the commencement of the new year it is more than probable that a revival, accompanied by an advance in prices, will follow. Holders of depreciated stocks ought, therefore, to stick to them tightly, as prospects of an improvement were not so bright for many a day. I was rather amused at the argument used by a speaker on the occasion of the opening of the City Safe Deposit in Throgmorton-avenue—by the way, a splendidly-constructed building, to which reference is made elsewhere. So far from this being a bad time, in view of the prevailing depression, argued the orator, it was a good time for the establishment of such an institution, for the very reason that so many securities were unduly depreciated, that they ought to be locked up in a safe and forgotten pro tem., until the resurrection of values, which would be certain to come about sooner or later. And who will deny that two or three years may not put on many millions of sterling to the present prices of stocks, which few will look at just now?

Home Rails.

The Board of Trade returns for November very naturally show the effect of the coal war, and the traffics of the English Railways improve but slowly, even now that several weeks have passed since the termination of the strikes, the Midland still showing a considerable decrease. But some of these lines return their goods traffic a week later, and increases may, after all, be experienced shortly. These cannot, of course, affect dividends for the current half year to any extent, and my estimate of reduced dividends, as given in last week's issue, will, no doubt, prove approximately correct. Holders, however, appear to stick to their stocks, regarding the reduction as exceptional. Midlands have declined 1½, but even now the quotation of 147½ does not express the full effect of the huge traffic decreases consequent upon the coal strikes. Of that effect I gave my readers early notice when the strikes were inevitable. But will it be believed, that a cantankerous individual actually writes to complain that I should have recommended Midlands in 1891 for investment, his idea apparently being that I ought then to have foreseen the coal war in 1893? The decline in the other heavy stocks is but slight. Brighton "A," although occasionally depressed by bear sales, always come up smiling again, 146 apparently being the rallying price. The immediate future of this stock depends altogether upon the "Bear" position. It seems hardly likely that holders of real stock will part with it now that a full yearly dividend of, say, at least 5 per cent. has accrued, especially as coal traffic must henceforth help the returns for some time to come; but any delivery of a block of stock would make all the difference. Dover "A" are suffering from another unfavourable working statement. Metropolitans have been extremely dull, but District Prefs. are 2 points up at 83, and the Ordinary have improved. There is very little of the latter stock in the market, and a recent buyer of £10,000 stock had great difficulty in getting it. Olympia will, I hear, open on Boxing Day with the new Constantinople performance, so that large traffics may be looked for then, altogether independent of the advance in 'bus rates, which should very shortly have an effect on the returns. The Scotch stocks have fluctuated with the varying news concerning the coal strike in Scotland. That has at last been settled, and I cannot help thinking that such a stock as Caledonian Deferred is now worth looking at.

Yankee Rails.

The reaction in the American market after the recent sharp advance was not, perhaps, unnatural, but it seems to have been overdone. I have repeatedly disclaimed any intention of advising promiscuous "Bull" speculation, but I hold to my view that purchases made for investment (the stock being, of course, taken up), especially on reactions such as that which is at present in progress, will in a few months' time show excellent results. There is, of course, no reason why any one anxious to have a little spec. should hold aloof from Yankee Rails, but he should in that case go only for short turns, buying on reactions and selling when the market is strong. The influence of weakness which is at present paramount in this market is the uncertainty which prevails with regard to the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fé. President Reinhart's departure after a short week's stay seemed hurried, but, as a matter of fact, he had at the very outset booked his return passage by the same steamer. He is, however, afloat on the ocean at the time of writing, and "when the cat's away the mice will play" (with due apologies to President Reinhart). The "Bears" have utilised the position to the utmost, and no wonder, as it is a well-known fact that Addison Cammack and his crew were heavily committed on this tack. By the time this meets the eyes of readers of Truth the President will probably have reached New York, and decisive action will be imminent. Assuming, for the sake of argument, that the road were to go into the hands of a receiver, the Atchison "A" and "B" Second Mortgage bonds with their full powers of foreclosure would be in a position which precludes their holders suffering to any extent, and the security of the Guarantee Fund Notes is such that they cannot be touched by a receivership. These are the only Atchison stocks which I have recommended. In the case of a receivership, the shares would, no doubt, be assessed, receiving some quid pro quo in the shape of bonds, &c. But this is the dark side of the picture. If the statements which have at various times been made by President

City Safe Deposit & Agency Co., Ld., Throgmorton-avenue. Safes from 1 guinea and Strong Rooms from 15 guineas per annum. Cards to view on application to R. Slagg, Manager.

Reinhart and his colleagues are correct—and I have no reason for doubting them—there will be no difficulty about the Atchison Company obtaining all the assistance it may want. The position, as far as I have been able to ascertain, is that certain London financial houses are quite prepared to renew the loan due on January 1 of two million dols. on the five million dols. of Second Mortgage "B" bonds, which were to be issued last October, if they are assured that the coupon due on January 1 on the Four per Cent. General Mortgage bonds, amounting to 2,800,000 dols., will be paid. I believe that Mr. Reinhart would have liked to negotiate another loan in order to take up the whole floating debt, and offered as security the valuable Colorado coal properties. There are also available extremely valuable mineral properties owned by the Atchison in Kansas City, but it may be as well to put off the rearrangement of the floating debt for some time, when the Company should be able to obtain better terms than could have been secured at present. My information is that President Reinhart will have no difficulty in obtaining all the assistance he may require in New York, where money is very plentiful just now, and this view is confirmed by recent cablegrams from the New York correspondent of the Financial News. Under these circumstances the next few days will probable be fraught with important events, and it goes without saying, that a satisfactory arrangement of Atchison affairs would induce a "Bear" squeeze in the securities of that Company. The projected tariff reform will no doubt meet with considerable opposition; but, in view of President Cleveland's uncompromising attitude, the issue is not doubtful, and a very strong revival of business should follow the passing of the measure. Some temporary set-backs in traffics may, therefore, fairly be disregarded. I entertain the same favourable opinion of the various dividend-paying and low-priced stocks which I expressed last week, for purposes of investment. A considerable business has again been transacted in American Railroad bonds, which, undoubtedly, form an excellent investment for those who wish for a substantial yield combined with reasonable safety. An atrocious traffic of the Grand Trunk fully bears out my anticipation of bad returns for some time to come. The Canadian Pacific is not doing quite so badly, and I see no reason for selling these shares now.

Foreigners and South Americans.

Rumours of a big Spanish loan to be engineered by the Banque de Paris et des Pays Bas have caused "Bears" of Spanish to buy back, with the result of a marked recovery. It is also reported that Morocco will make terms with Spain, but I cannot help thinking that both these points are doubtful, and, after all, the financial troubles of Spain will remain, whether she gets temporary assistance or not. As to Italy, I have no doubt that, if Signor Crispi succeeds in forming a cabinet, we shall have a temporary recovery in Italians, but the financial and banking position is so thoroughly rotten that it would be extremely difficult to save it. For all that, I should not advise "Bear" sales of Italians now. I am, for the time being, greatly disappointed in the financial outlook in Greece after the advent of M. Tricoupis. There is a drop of from 2 to 4 points in the quotations of the various issues, and I trust that wiser counsels will prevail at Athens. Turkish stocks are better, but I really cannot see the logic of this movement when it is considered that the slightest breath of trouble in the East would cause a heavy fall. The coming spring may bring a crop of such rumours, and it is no secret that the political tension on the Continent is such that an explosion may happen at any time. It is different in the South American department. There seems to be reason for the view that all the troubles, to which South American States may be a prey, have done their worst. Argentine Government stocks are easier, but as soon as news of the ratification of the Romero-Rothschild Committee comes to hand a recovery is probable. Mexican Government stocks, after experiencing a heavy fall, are better again on the announcement by the Mexican Financial Agent that the loan of £3,000,000 is fully arranged. For all that, I do not anticipate any permanent upward movement before January, just before the issue of the loan. Peruvian Corporation stocks are lower. But what about the amount of £180,000 in Chilian bonds held in the Treasury of the Corporation, only a small part of which can be claimed by the Assets Certificate holders? That sum, as well as a considerable increase in the revenue from guano, which is expected in the current fiscal year, ought to secure the Debenture interest completely, and the nervousness of certain Debenture holders appears to be altogether unjustified. Chilian bonds are comparatively firm on rumours of a new loan, and Brazilians remain dull, there being, unfortunately, no indication of a termination of the struggle between the contending parties as yet.

The Kaffir Circus.

There is but little general improvement in the market for South African Gold Mines, although such substantial shares as Langlaagte, Robinson and Crown Reefs have again hardened. There is, however, an absolute absence of speculation, and prices of the shares in many sound dividend-paying properties consequently remain at a very low level. One of these days the public will no doubt appreciate the position, but this will, apparently, not be yet awhile. Some of the crushings for November are rather disappointing, others are favourable. Thus the Simmer and Jack output was 3,450 oz., against 3,049 oz. in October. The Afrikander Mine shows a yield of 920 oz., against 931 oz. for October. The Buffelsdoorn Estate and Gold Mining Company's crushings marks further important progress, the yield being 3,520 oz. of gold, with a profit of £6,000, against 2,019 oz. in October. A further increase in the output is expected in the next few months, and so satisfactory are the reports from this Mine that early in 1894 quarterly dividends at the rate of 40 per cent. per annum are expected. That means, of course, that the present price of $1\frac{1}{8}$ is still extremely low. The production in November of the New Primrose is fully equal to the large October figures, amounting to 7,777 oz., against 7,769 oz. in October. The November crushing of the Glencairn, however, amounts to only 1,528 oz., against 2,151 oz. in October. The explanation obtained by me at the Company's office is that they have a good deal of poor ore to work through. The Manager, however, reports better prospects for the current month. The total crushings of the Witwatersrand Mines for November again beat the record, the yield amounting to 138,640 oz., against 136,682 oz. in October. Deep level properties are steady, but it is still possible to occasionally pick up such promising shares as South Simmer and Jack at par—20s. The shares of Transvaal Land Companies are steady. With regard to the Oceana Company, I learn that the accounts are now being recast, according to the Chairman's promise, and that it is intended to make a distribution of shares in the Coal Company early in the new year, probably at the rate of 10 per cent. The dividend in Coal shares on the Oceana Development shares is at present in course of payment, and it is somewhat surprising that the price of both Oceana and Oceana Development shares, being "cum dividend," does not improve, as the Coal Company is doing excellent work, and the shares are therefore a valuable asset. Chartered of South Africa shares are extremely dull, notwithstanding the end of the fight in Matabeleland. I see that the watering of the capital is also strongly opposed by the Directors of the Matabeleland Company, who allege that since their agreement with the Chartered Company in 1889, the capital of the latter has been increased from £250,000 to £2,000,000, and that had they known this to be the case, they would not have accepted 5,000 shares and the other rights specified for Barnes' concession. This matter is, however, now sub judice. Diamond shares have been irregular, De Beers having improved slightly on the closing of the account of a Paris "Bear" operator, while Jagersfontein are out of favour and lower. St. Augustine have arrived at the magnificent quotation of $1\frac{1}{2}$d.

Rimmel's Toilet Vinegar has for over Half a Century sustained its High Reputation as an Indispensable Toilet requisite. Rimmel's Perfumes, Toilet Soaps, Powders, &c.—London & Paris.

Indian, Australian, and American Mines.

To judge from certain indications, it seems probable that low priced miscellaneous shares will for the present receive more attention than the heavier South Africans. Amongst Indian Mines Mysore West have improved 1s. to 7s. 9d., while Mysore Wynard stand at 3s. 6d., Nine Reefs new, fully paid, at 3s. Crushings of the leading Mines were most satisfactory, the Ooregum showing 6,563 oz. against 6,553 oz. in October; the Mysore 4,904 oz. against 4,860 oz. in October. Amongst Australian Mines dealings have been quiet, but the news from some of the Charters Towers properties is promising. Not only has the Brilliant Gold Mining Company crushed 3,500 tons for 3,150 oz., but the manager of the Carrington cables that he has driven levels 10 ft. each east and west in the Caledonian Reef, and that he has struck 7 in. of good stone. I see from the report of the Directors, just issued, that instructions have now been sent to the manager to continue the underlie of the Victoria Reef as well, and that they consider that at a distance of a further 30 ft. that Reef ought to be as rich as in the Victoria Mine at the same depth. The report recently made by Mr. J. J. Ham, a well known Mining Engineer, on this property, and also published by the Directors, is of an extremely favourable nature, and seems to foreshadow an important future for this Mine. When that is fully realised, the shares will, no doubt, advance considerably above the present low price of 3s. 6d.-4s. Aladdins have advanced to 1¾ buyers on the splendid crushing of 350 tons for 1,518 oz. An almost unlimited supply of this rich ore is, moreover, reported. In American mines the sensation was supplied by Montana shares, which touched 9s. and relapsed to 6s., after having been as low as 2s. not very long ago. Liverpool is engineering this deal, the motive power being supplied by reports of discoveries of rich ore said to assay 50 dols., instead of the old yield of 7¼ dols. per ton. My anticipations concerning the Springdale Mine are bearing fruit, as the Company has just paid its first dividend at the rate of 16⅔ per cent. per annum. A good demand is reported for Idaho shares, that Company having acquired a well-known gold mine in Mexico. A number of "Bear" sales appear to have been made of these shares. Tolima "A" and "B" have improved, probably because holders will not sell until the dividend is off, and St. John Del Rey have also improved. The demand for Caratals is reviving, and the official announcement foreshadowed by me as regards the arrangement with the McArthur Forrest people will probably be made this week, when a further recovery is probable. Colombian Hydraulics and Poormans are slightly better. Latest reports respecting the Macate confirm the statement which has been made that the new lode runs over 2 oz. of gold to the ton. Crushing results are expected by cable within the next few days. De Lamars have also improved, but Ripanji are down. The following circular has been issued by the Directors of the Holcomb Valley Company, Limited:—

14, Cornhill, E.C., London, December 9, 1893.

I am instructed to inform you that the Directors heard by cable from Mr. Pedley on Monday, December 4, as follows:—"All the plant works well; 140 cubic yards [washed in 165 minutes producing] £15. Pipe line will be completed by December 6. I expect to be able to work five hours per day." While the Directors have had reason to regret the delay in the erection of the machinery so far beyond the time originally estimated, the result of circumstances for which no one connected with the Company is in any way responsible, they believe that the shareholders will regard as satisfactory the indications given by the commencement of actual work, which would seem to prove the correctness of Mr. Pedley's original estimate, that the gravel would contain at least 2s. worth of gold to the cubic yard. So far as the Directors are aware, this gravel is taken from the top, and is believed not to be the richest, while its value in gold, if maintained, should leave a satisfactory profit on the operations of the Company.

This statement fully confirms the view I have hitherto taken of this property. By the way, I have two requests to acknowledge from the Far West, which, while very flattering, as showing that "Moses Moss" is not unknown in those remote regions, are, unfortunately, such as I am unable to grant. The first is a letter from Southern California, in which the writer draws my attention to a new gold mining locality on the borders of Monterey and the San Luis Obispo properties, and asking me to mention this matter to capitalists who might be prepared to employ £1,000 to £3,000 in the development. This kind of financial advice does not enter into the sphere of my activity, and I regret, therefore, greatly not being able to assist my Californian correspondent. The other communication is from an enterprising firm of stockbrokers in Colorado Springs, Colorado, and is to the following effect:—

Dear Uncle Moses,—We have noticed that, while naturally giving considerable space to South African Gold Mines, you seldom have any hints to say about those of Colorado. The comparatively new goldfields of Cripple Creek are making a marvellous output and attracting an increasing attention. We receive letters of inquiry from England, and think so pleasing a character as Uncle Moses should give us a call or allow us to correspond with him. Nephew Ben would assuredly be wiser, and probably wealthier, were he correctly instructed concerning the mining business of his American cousins' headquarters. We shall take the liberty of mailing you our Weekly Market Letter and other reliable information. We endeavour to publish the actual facts, and nothing but the truth, regarding Cripple Creek and other mining districts.

I am obliged to my Colorado correspondent for his courteous letter, and shall read his circulars dealing with Cripple Creek with interest; but this is as far as I can go for the present, until this goldfield, which certainly appears to have a future, has been further developed and its merits proved.

More about the Jarvis-Conklin Trust.

I have received further communications concerning the Jarvis-Conklin Mortgage Trusts Company, amongst which the following seems to represent the view of a good many of the debenture-holders:—

You would confer a great benefit on the debenture-holders in the Jarvis-Conklin Mortgage Trust, who are almost entirely resident in England, by applying, as you can, a little moral pressure to the trustees. I myself am only a small holder—viz., of £430—but among my own family and friends there are upwards of £30,000 of debentures held, and, without exception, all the holders are dissatisfied with the present state of affairs. May I suggest that the two men who have presumably been responsible for getting us into this present difficulty—viz., Jarvis and Conklin—are not the men to appoint as sole official receivers in liquidation, from a lawyer's point of view? I enclose an advertisement in the Company's official publication of July 20, 1893. This advertisement was repeated in the August publication. In August a call was made on the shareholders, payable in December, and in October the Company suspended payment, because they could not pay the debenture interest. I maintain that they knew their position well, when that advertisement was issued. The floating of the St. Joseph Stockyard bonds, I am told by an American whom I can trust, should be inquired into. Messrs. Lubbock are trustees for the "A" and "B" series of Debentures, and I believe the Law Guarantee and Trust Society, in Chancery-lane, are trustees for the "C" series. The trust deeds are skilfully drawn, and I believe the trustees are under no legal liability for anything short of fraud. They will not take active measures to protect the debenture-holders in consequence. On Friday last, however, an order was made by Mr. Justice Stirling, on a motion by two debenture-holders, to prevent Messrs. Lubbock from parting with the securities they hold to the American receivers, without leave of the Court. This shows what an English Court thinks of the present state of affairs. The trustees, in my opinion, should apply in America for a third receiver to be appointed in the interest of the debenture-holders; it could hardly be refused. I wrote to Messrs. Lubbock, and on November 21 received an answer, stating they had not parted with any securities then, but implying they intended to do so. As to my suggestion of a receiver, they ignored it, and said they would await the return of the investigating committee, some of whom, at all events, are officials of the Company, and none of whom were appointed in the interest of debenture-holders. When people of Messrs. Lubbock's position publicly accept such a trust, I maintain that they are at all events under a moral obligation to protect their cestui-que-trust. They have not called even a meeting of debenture-holders, and declined to consider the suggestion that such a meeting should be summoned. The whole matter really rests on the honesty or dishonesty of the receivers, and there is no evidence to show that they are to be relied on. I maintain that under the circumstances to trust them is unbusinesslike and foolhardy.

My correspondent will find that I have already, in last week's issue, insisted upon the necessity of an English receiver being appointed on behalf of the English debenture-holders, and I hope that the trustees will take action in this matter. The circulars issued as late as the end of July last, in which these First Mortgages are offered, specially mention their "complete and undoubted security," and set forth the following specific guarantee:—

> The Company, at the time the investment is made, guarantees to the investor both principal and interest of these mortgages. The guarantee given by the Company provides for the prompt payment of the interest half-yearly as it falls due, and the payment of the principal within two years from its due date, with interest meanwhile.

It is not exactly reassuring that a few months after the issue of these advertisements the Company should have suspended payment because it could not meet the debenture interest. Unless some action is taken on behalf of the debenture-holders there is a great deal of risk of the debenture-holders' interests being shelved in favour of the Ordinary shareholders. The holders of the "C" series of Debentures have been called together to a meeting on the 14th by the Law Guarantee and Trust Society. They should attend this meeting themselves, and on no account sign the proxies in favour of the Chairman or Vice-Chairman of the Trust Society, which have been sent to them.

The Syndicate Touts again.

To judge from the numbers of circulars of Syndicate Touts which are reaching me from readers of Truth in all parts of the country, these unscrupulous gentry are again making determined efforts to rifle the pockets of the public, in order to spend a merry Christmas at the expense, no doubt, of the unsophisticated fools who listen to their blandishments. As a merry Christmas for these pests must of necessity imply a sad Christmas for their victims, I will once again endeavour to spoil this nefarious game. By far the most active touts are at present Andrew Stewart & Co., 36, Gracechurch-street, E.C. Their grandiloquent circulars boast of the success of "A Special Stock Operation" in Union Pacifics bought on November 10 at 18, and sold on November 29 at 21⅛, "thereby securing to their clients a gross profit of 312½ per cent., or £31 5s. on every £10 share." I really should like to see the clients in the flesh, who have participated in this profitable operation, and, until I have had that pleasure, I advise all my readers to allow these philanthropists to make the profits for their own account. Say Andrew Stewart & Co., "Operators are relieved of all trouble and anxiety." Quite so, and I have no doubt that they are relieved of their money, too. What I cannot understand is, that respectable papers like the Liverpool Courier, the Bristol Times and Mirror, the Western Mail, and a number of small country papers should assist these touts, by favourable notices of their "system," in emptying the pockets of the public. The nom de guerre under which another active tout is carrying on a similar trade is Philip S. Hartley & Co., of 98, London-wall, E.C., "close to the Bank of England and the Stock Exchange" (!) This firm boasts of the closing of "Railway Trust Fund G" at a gross profit of 230 per cent., heading its circular "Special Christmas English Rails Trust Fund." "Where can such profits be made except on the Stock Exchange?" ask Hartley & Co., innocently, and then go on to say, "if you wish to make money before Christmas with practically no risk, read this circular and join at once." I say, on the contrary, if you wish to spend a merry Christmas give these impudent touts a wide berth. Fortunately, most readers of Truth are sharp enough to discover the cloven hoof. Thus one of Hartley's & Co.'s circulars has reached me with the following comment:—

> Although almost every day's post brings me a circular from one or other of the Stock Exchange touts, I do not remember to have seen any such circular couched in such enticing phraseology as the one I am enclosing, and it is for this reason that I venture to ask you to add Messrs. Philip S. Hartley & Co.'s names to the list of touts against whom you so deservedly warn your readers. It is a pity that nothing can be done by the law to put a stop to the issuing of these wretched circulars, especially to ladies, parsons, and military men, as has recently been done in the case of money-lenders' circulars and minors. I say ladies, clergymen, and officers, for I do not suppose that any other class of the community would be entrapped by the stupid offers of enormous profits held out by these circulars.

I beg to differ from my correspondent in one particular—that only ladies, parsons, and officers take this kind of bait—as I have unfortunately evidence to the contrary. Thus a working-man writes to me from Bury that he has lost £20 through the British and American Investment Trusts of 181, Queen Victoria-street. This unsophisticated person sent his money on October 20, and was informed on November 13 that the "Trusts" had that day operated in Mexican Second Prefs. at 40. The natural sequel was that on November 30 he received the news that the unexpected fall in Mexican Second Prefs. had compelled the closing of the operation at a total loss. Yet this precious Trust still boasts unblushingly of "the phenomenal success of our system of operating." Trust not this Trust, say I! Other active touts are the Anglo-Scottish Investment Corporation of 143, Cannon-street, E.C., who take the cake with the impudent statement that they "closed Combination E in eleven days with a nett profit of over 640 per cent., or a return of £741. 5s. for each ten shares taken in the operation." That, I should say, would be "too high" even for the most unsophisticated parson, widow, or spinster, to take in! Then there are R. Temple & Co.—established 1881, of 27 and 28, King William-street, E.C.—who have "just closed their fifty-second deal for the past twelve months with profits ranging from 50 to 300 per cent. No deal closed at a loss." They "absolutely guarantee" dividends of £2 per month for twelve consecutive months to subscribers of £2. 10s., and £16. 13s. 4d. per month to subscribers of £20. Can human credulity go farther than in the case of those who trust their money to these philanthropists? Yet I have in my possession a letter from a correspondent who sent £2. 10s. to this generous firm on July 15, and had not yet received any dividend, when I heard from him two months later. If he has not yet got his dividend or his money back, I should advise him to take proceedings against these gentry. More modest are Richard F. Sinclair & Co.—chief offices, 60, Fore-street, late of Old Broad-street—who do not lay claim to a larger profit than 80 per cent. on their last Stock Combination. I am afraid, however, that their "Mutual Stock Combination Method" is quite as dangerous as that of the more impudent touts. I wonder how long their circulars will bear the following footnote:—

> In conclusion, we wish again to repeat that we are ready to hand over the sum of two hundred pounds to any person who can prove that any client of ours has ever yet made a loss through subscribing to our Stock "Combinations."

Presumably Sinclair & Co. are still new to the trade. I wonder, by the way, what has become of W. Freeman, Jos. Gledsdale, and T. Nelson, whose doings I had to criticise some time ago, and if the enterprising persons, who ran these concerns, have now transferred their interest to any of the above active touting firms? The approved method of syndicate touting is to change, chameleon-like, skin and name, whenever the game gets too hot. After a time the number of victims grows to such proportions that it is no longer safe to advertise that no syndicate has been closed at a loss, and one after the other the poor deluded sufferers, having come to the conclusion that they have been swindled, make things unpleasant to the syndicate financiers. In my opinion, the Public Prosecutor could not be better employed than in investigating the doings of the half-dozen or so philanthropists who are, to use a vulgar expression, running this show!

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

Bonds.—You should under no circumstances buy these through the firm referred to. They can, of course, be bought through respectable bankers at market price. I shall have more to say on this matter shortly. R. D.—Hold your Argentines. They will improve as soon as the Romero-Rothschild arrangement is ratified. Tipperary.—I really see no reason why you should change your Transvaal bonds at present. Aberystwyth.—Yes, these documents ought to be delivered in both cases, or you should stipulate for same. Costa Rica "B" bonds, Uruguay bonds, Antofagasta Six per Cent. Guaranteed Capital stock, and Argentine Funding bonds would give you what you want.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Antipodes.—One of the general run of reconstructed Australian Banks; impossible to tell yet how it is doing, but prospects seem to be fair. H. A. J. I., Pembroke Dock.—Richard F Sinclair, & Co., of 60, Fore street, E C, are Syndicate touts recently established, with whose "Special Combinations" you should have nothing to do. Colonel, Great Malvern.—Andrew Stewart & Co., of 36, Gracechurch street, E.C., are comparatively new-comers amongst the Syndicate touts, and it is astounding that a number of country papers should condescend to give them notices. This firm, no doubt, obtained your address from the list of shareholders in some Company. Assurance.—The first-named Late Assurance Society (1) is a second rate office, and you might do well to get also the terms of such first class offices as the Sun Life Office, or the Provident Life Office of Regent-street. The Society (2) referred to I should not recommend; the rate quoted is too low for safety, and is apparently subject to increase in later years. R. J.—I have stated your case in connection with the British and American Investment Trust (a high-sounding name adopted by a Syndicate tout) in to-day's remarks on these touts. But if you were a regular reader of TRUTH you would not have fallen into this trap, as I have continually warned my readers against these gentry. Your solicitor should request the return of the money. Chatham.—All the London Banks mentioned are high-class and quite safe. It is not, however, advisable in your position to hold important amounts in Bank shares with large uncalled liability. I am very pleased to hear that my warning enabled you to withdraw from the House and Land Investment Company before the crash came. G. F. T.—A first-class London Bank. Williams.—This circular looks very suspicious, and you should not entertain the matter. The position cannot get worse, and you had better hold now.

Home Rails.

Dennistown.—If you are prepared to hold for some time you might safely average Caledonian Deferred Ordinary. The Scotch coal strike appears to be on the eve of settlement. The Midland and South Western Junction Railway is doing badly, and is in the hands of a receiver. There is nothing for it but to wait. Milo.—You might buy Brighton "A" for the investment of the small amount. H. A. L., Brighton.—Yes, there is a good deal in what you say. The 1889 Preference stock is better secured, hence its higher price.

American and Foreign Rails.

Verdad.—Of the two securities, I consider Atchison Second Mortgage bonds far cheaper than the shares, the former paying interest, the others not. Norfolk Prefs. should also improve, but I naturally gave the names of stocks which had the best chance. I. F., Doncaster.—The immediate future of Grand Trunk First Prefs. is not favourable, as working expenses are heavy and traffics are falling off. If you hold, as you propose, for six months, some improvement may occur, but that cannot, of course, be predicted with any safety. Sportsman.—Erie are likely to recover materially, and should be held. Prospects of Grand Trunk Third Prefs. are very poor, and you should sell on any recovery. Uniqubart.—All the American Railroad bonds mentioned by you (Nos. 6-9) are sound investments and first-class. No. 9 is the least gilt-edged, and I should prefer the new Baltimore and South-Western Four and a-Half per Cent. First Mortgage bonds, guaranteed by the Baltimore and Ohio, to it. Peter Simple.—1. I fancy it would be worth while to join the reconstruction. 2. The accounts of the New English Bank of the River Plate have just been issued, and you will be able to judge for yourself. 3. Costa Rica Rails ought to be held. This line looks very promising. 4. Certainly hold Erie. There seems a prospect of a reconstruction without an assessment of the shares, in which case they would go much better. Betanophtol.—You are, of course, aware that events altogether unforeseen have occurred in the shape of the Baring crisis, the collapse of Murrieta & Co., the heavy fall in silver, and the temporary collapse in Mexico. Matters will, however, right themselves again. Mexico is now pulling round, and the Inter-oceanic Company will eventually recover its position. With reference to the Meat shares and St. Louis Brewery, a turn will, no doubt, come, and I shall not fail to discuss the position as soon as it is possible to speak with some certainty. See remarks under "Various Investments." The Exploration Company in question has proved unsuccessful, but the concern is being kept alive, and may yet have a better future. Such undertakings must, of course, be looked upon as a speculation. Camberley.—You need have no fear on this point. See remarks under "Yankee Rails." Spurn.—Yes, I should hold all the American Rails Nos. 1—4. I do not think that No. 5 is a good spec. just now. Mater.—1. You should hold North British for a recovery. 2. Hold Erie for a rise.

Mining Shares.

Inona.—I really do not know what to tell you. Some months ago I advised my correspondents to sell as there is a considerable liability (£4 per share), and there are very few buyers. A further fall has since taken place, but I am still inclined to say sell. Vieille Moustache.—You will have found some remarks on the Company in last week's issue, under "The Kaffir Circus," and again to-day. It is difficult to pronounce on the Patent question, but the Company appears to be fortified by the opinions of eminent Counsel and will no doubt make a good fight.

A Fair Beautiful Skin.—By washing with Sulpholine Soap the natural tint and peach-like bloom of a perfect complexion is ensured.

Industrial Companies.

Scone.—No; I should not recommend the shares in the two Companies named for investment. I think that the shareholders in the French Company have the prospect of eventually getting a decent dividend. Sheffield Steel.—The new performance at Olympia will, I understand, be inaugurated on Boxing day, and prospects appear favourable. You should certainly hold your shares. H C., Dublin.—I have warned my reader repeatedly in the past not to be led away by the glowing prospectuses of the Tyre Company, which has been brought out in Dublin, and has since collapsed. My opinion of the John Griffiths Cycle Company, Limited, is unfavourable, and I should advise you not to put your money into it. Rastus.—The American meat trade has suffered greatly from over-competition, hence the non-success of these Companies; but I still think that the shares will recover, and I shall not fail to draw attention to the matter, whenever it may be safely stated that better times are assured. The management appears now to have been reformed. X. Y. Z.—You had better hold, the turn cannot be far off. Exam.—I really should not like to offer an opinion, as this class of industrial property is very speculative, and does not usually work so successfully when formed into a Company as it did under private management. Write to the Secretary for the reason of the decline. A Constant Reader, Wandsworth Common.—You should hold all the Brewery stocks Nos. 1-9, as they will improve considerably upon present values. 10. You do not appear to have much choice, and cannot get more than a small yield. I should say English Co-operative stocks and Indian Guaranteed Railway stocks, such as Bombay and Baroda, Great Indian Peninsula and Madras Guaranteed, would be best.

Mixed Investments.

Widow.—1. I have advised the sale of Italians ever since they stood at 95. They have since fallen to about 80, and rallied to 82⅜, and I still am of opinion that they should not be bought. But as there may be another rally you might risk holding and sell on a further advance. 2. As I stated some weeks ago, prospects of traffics of the Canadian Pacific are not favourable in the immediate future, but there is no reason for selling. North British.—You have certainly been unfortunate in your investments, but the times have been so bad, that all but gilt-edged securities have fallen heavily. You will do well to hold all the stock A-G, as a recovery is probable, and a further decline most unlikely. The shares A should recover with any improvement in the position of Chili. The Company "B" has, I think, turned the corner, and you will find some remarks in to-day's issue. There is no reason to sell "C" now, and the Exploration shares "D" cannot go lower, but may recover again. A dividend on "E" will be paid in January. This Company has suffered from the depression of trade. The position of "F" is not nearly so bad as is at present being represented, and "G." will receive a bonus of 10 per cent. in shares in January. W. G. W.—No reason to sell your investments A, C, D, and E. Great Eastern Ordinary stock ("B") yields at present but a very low return, but it may be right to hold for permanent investment. Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Four per Cent. Debentures at 96, and Baltimore and Ohio South-Western Four and a-Quarter per Cent. First Mortgage bonds guaranteed by the Baltimore and Ohio, new issue, through Brown, Shipley, & Co., at about 101½, should suit you. Barcelona.—1. I should say that a purchase of Antofagasta Six per Cent. Guaranteed capital stock at 106 would answer your requirements. 2. I am afraid there is no option but to hold for the present. Peter.—Pears Five per Cent. Debenture stock might suit you. Constant Reader, Dorchester.—1. No market. 2. If you can get out of it, do so. 3. The Company has disappointed the shareholders. W. T., Warrington.—Nos. 1 to 5 are good investments. I do not like No. 6. Cyanide.—I note your favourable view of the Cassell Company (Gold Recovery), but there is no market for the shares here.

Various Investments.

There is hardly any change in silver, which stands at 32d. Rupee Paper is equally dull. In the meantime the India Council have been compelled to make an issue of Sterling bills, payable in London, in order to raise the money, which they have been unable to obtain in the usual way by selling bills on India. Altogether the Micawber-like policy adopted by the India Council has landed them in a very awkward position, and authority is now sought from Parliament for a huge Sterling loan. I am glad to see that an extradition treaty with Argentina is to be concluded, if only in order to get hold of that scoundrel Jabez Balfour. With reference to the House and Land Investment Trust Company, one of the swindling concerns with which that dishonest financier was connected, I have received several communications thanking me for the warning which I gave in reply to all inquiries some considerable time before the collapse. One of my correspondents, who hails from Northampton, is good enough to express himself as follows:—

> I take this opportunity of thanking you very much for advice given me some two years since, as, acting on it, I was enabled to withdraw from the House and Land Investment Company before the crash came.

I am glad to find that my advice was appreciated and acted upon. I see that that ill-conceived scheme "Venice, Limited," upon which I commented last week, has been withdrawn. The Directors have very properly returned the application money, stating that, at the request of the promoters and on the advice of Mr. Kiralfy, they have decided not to proceed to allotment. The prospectus of the "London Music Hall, Limited," which has just been issued, calls for some comment. The purchase consideration of £80,000, payable as to £55,000 in cash, and as to £25,000 in cash or Debentures and shares, appears altogether excessive, and it is, moreover, absurd to hold out the success of the Empire, Alhambra, or Tivoli Music Halls, as in any way foreshadowing similar results in this concern. The estimate of profits given by the accountants is also altogether illusory, as it lacks a sound basis, being arrived at merely from "the capacity of the Hall at prices suitable to the locality." I should advise my readers to leave this Company alone, and that is also my view with reference to the "Norwich Grand Hotel and Empire Theatre Company, Limited," which it is sought to float with a capital of £70,000 in shares and £30,000 in Debentures. It seems to me extremely doubtful that a concern of this kind, and so heavily capitalised, would pay in the very respectable but intensely dull town of Norwich; and the comparison with the Longtown Hotel Company and the Empire Palace, Limited, is really too far-fetched. Why have not the results of the Alexandra Hotel and Continental Hotel Companies, over which the Chairman, Lord Saye and Sele, also presides, been given? The vendors, moreover show little confidence in the future of the Company, as they stipulate for a purchase consideration of no less than £70,000 in cash and £20,000 in cash, Debentures, or shares. The report of the Imperial Bank of Persia is not cheerful for those shareholders who read between the lines. The amount available for distribution is only £51,638, which just suffices to pay 5 per cent. dividend for the year. But the report adds that the great fall in silver has affected the capital, and that if it were necessary to recall all funds, at present rates, there would be a deficiency of about £200,000. The proper policy would have been not to pay any dividend until provision had been made for this deficiency, which practically reduces the capital from £1,000,000 to £800,000. The item of £650,000 for 150,000 fully paid Ordinary shares in the unfortunate Persian Bank Mining Rights Corporation, which has now become quite valueless, does not, fortunately, figure as an asset, but £88,349 as expenditure and advances in connection with the Road Concession do, and in the light of the fate of other Persian concessions it is difficult to say if there is any value in this at all. The report of the Committee appointed by the creditors to advise with the liquidator of the unfortunate New Oriental Bank Corporation discloses a shocking state of affairs. Four of the Directors owed between them £77,835 to the Bank at the time of the stoppage, out of which Mr. G. H. Tod-Heatly's debt alone was fully secured and was eventually repaid. Another serious irregularity was the ruinous financing of concerns in which Directors were interested, amongst which figured the Gatling Arms and Ammunition Company, the Anglo-Asiatic Syndicate, the Kooteray Smelting and Trading Syndicate, the Real Estate and Mortgage Bank of Melbourne, not to mention such concerns as the Stock and Share Auction Company, and other abortive undertakings. The whole report is a catalogue of deeds of mismanagement and irregularity, if not worse, with the result that the whole capital of £612,000 has been lost, and a deficiency of £1,497,000 created, which will have to be borne by the creditors, who will not receive more than 12s. in the £, or 6s. in addition to the 6s. already paid. I may remind my readers who inquired for my opinion that I have persistently advised them to have nothing to do with this bank, which was notoriously carried on in the most reckless manner, and many have thus had the opportunity of clearing out before the collapse came. Full explanations of the position were given at Monday's meeting of the St. Louis Breweries, Limited. The Company has undoubtedly suffered from exceptional troubles, the beer war in St. Louis being followed by the severe commercial crisis in the United States. The management must also be blamed for spending money too freely on improvements, and it is satisfactory to find, not only that the American bonds promise to pull in expenses of this kind, but that a special resolution moved by Mr. Macaskie on behalf of the Investigating Committee of shareholders, was passed recommending the restriction of this vast expenditure, and a reduction of the Directors' fees and of London expenses. If Mr. Macaskie (who has passed from the Committee of Investigation to the Board) proves half as active in deeds as a Director, as he was eloquent in words, the shareholders will soon see dividends again. The statements made at the meeting should also allay the uneasy feeling which has of late prevailed, and which is chiefly responsible for a fall in the price of the shares, that must appear altogether unjustified.—Your affectionate uncle,

MOSES.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

BISHOP BELLERBY'S TOUR.

WHEN the Right Rev. Stephen Bellerby, D.D., had been Bishop of Bampton rather more than a year he began, metaphorically speaking, to feel the weight of his mitre. The candidates for his first Trinity ordination had dispersed to their curacies, wondering if all the Bishops were so genial and so ready to make allowances for nervousness under viva voce examination. The candidates for his second quailed before him, and those who, having entered the diaconate the year before, now aspired to the priesthood, said confidentially one to another that it was a pity the pride of office had so soon spoilt his Lordship's temper.

The Bishop himself knew that he had been snappish, and regretted the fact exceedingly. He even confessed his fault—to his physician—and as a penance was ordered to take more exercise and go away for a change.

"Bowles says it's my liver," he said to his nephew, who lived with him.

Many a man fancies his liver is out of order; no one likes to be told that its sluggishness is the cause of his bad temper, and the Bishop spoke irritably.

"Bowles is an old fool," replied the young man, soothingly. He believed that Bowles was right; but, nevertheless, as he told his conscience, even an old fool must be right sometimes. "But why not take his advice and go to Shrimpton for a fortnight? The change is sure to do you good. You won't be worried there——"

"Shan't I?" interrupted the Bishop. "Much you know about it. The local clergy will be down upon me as one man to ask me to preach for their building-funds—they all have building-funds. How can a man in my position go for a real change? I am tired of being 'our good bishop' week after week, and month after month. It was bad enough when I was Dean of Halswater, but the fulsome adulation I have had to put up with lately is sickening, positively sickening. I need a mental tonic. I want to exchange ideas with other men simply as their fellow-man. But I suppose I must wait till my turn comes for the House of Lords."

"Why not try a tricycle tour?" suggested his nephew.

"What, in these?" asked the Bishop, holding up his apron, and scowling at the gaiters, which had been his pride but one short year ago.

"No, of course not," said his nephew. "Your old cycling suit is somewhere about, I think. Or, if it isn't, you can get another."

Even when Dean of Halswater the Bishop had been a cyclist, but on his promotion he had given up his favourite pastime as lacking in dignity. He had never ceased to regret his decision. He was a strong and somewhat fleshy man, still on the right side of fifty-five, and, after a little consideration, he resolved to carry out his nephew's suggestion. As he had no wife to interfere with his plans, the necessary arrangements were soon made, and, early one fine morning, the Bishop stole away from the back entrance of his palace alone and unseen.

For some days all went well with him. He was not once recognised, and he believed that even his profession, with all outward badges of which he had dispensed, was not suspected by any one with whom he had conversed. He thought, too, that as a man he had favourably impressed his fellows, so he felt satisfied with his experiment and was sure he was better, physically and mentally, for his tour. Late in the afternoon of the sixth day he was riding cautiously down a steep hill, quite two hundred miles away from his Cathedral city, when his brake gave way, and he lost control of his machine which presently upset. The Bishop fell on his head, and lay insensible in the middle of the road.

* * * * *

When the Bishop came to himself he found that he was lying on the grass by the road-side. Some one had evidently moved him. He sat up and looked around but no one was in sight.

"I suppose," said he to himself, "that some good Samar——"

He checked the supposition in the middle of the word as he became aware that his episcopal person was covered only by a few rags, carelessly thrown over it, which fell from his shoulders when he sat up. The Thieves had been there, the Priest and the Levite might have passed, but the Samaritan was yet to come.

It was growing dusk, and the breeze was chilly. The Bishop shivered, drew one of the rags over his shoulders again, and considered the situation. His tricycle had disappeared as utterly as his clothes. Probably the villain who had stripped him had ridden off on it. His head ached, and he rather thought one of his ankles was sprained. Should he try to hobble along in search of help or wait and appeal to the pity of the first passer-by? Good heavens! Suppose the first passer-by should be a woman? The Bishop blushed, and hastily examined the poor substitutes for his neat cycling suit.

There was an old shirt—it seemed to be tolerably clean, but the Bishop shuddered as he put it on—a pair of trousers, very ragged, and something which might once have been a coat, but there were no socks or boots. When he was dressed he stood up, and found that his ankle, though painful, was still capable of contributing to his support.

Not without difficulty he reached the bottom of the hill, where he found a brook. He stooped over it to wash the blood and dust from his head and face, but started back in horror. Surely a most disreputable-looking tramp had crept up behind him and was looking over his shoulder? But no; it was only his own image that had startled him, and, with a deep sigh, he began his ablutions. Then, after a drink from the clear stream, he waded through it, and manfully began to climb the opposite hill, thinking that, as the road over which he had come was very lonely, his best chance of finding speedy help lay in pressing on.

The Bishop was surprised to find how hard even the grass by the roadside was to his bare feet. It was late in the summer, and presently he came to a place where the hedges had been trimmed. In the gathering gloom he stepped continually on hidden thorns, and at the end of half a mile he sat down in despair on a gate. There was a haystack in the field behind him, but no sign of a house anywhere. How would it be to rest under that stack until some one passed, or even all night if necessary?

Less than five minutes afterwards he was comfortably established under the lee of the stack, and snugly covered up with hay. For a while he lay almost contented with his new circumstances, but presently fresh fears assailed him. He was racked by mysterious pains, and he began to think his fall must have injured him internally, but soon a light dawned on him.

"I really believe it is nothing but hunger," he said to himself. "I had no idea it could make one so uncomfortable in so short a time. I wonder if that scoundrel carried anything to eat?"

There was a pocket attached to the tail of the scoundrel's coat in somewhat better condition than the rest of the garment. In it the Bishop found some bread, a bit of cheese, a pipe, tobacco, matches, and a small glass flask containing whisky.

The bread was stale, the cheese was hard, the whisky was raw, and the tobacco was strong, but the Bishop enjoyed them all immensely. The food gave him fresh courage, and he began to think of trying his fortune on the road again.

"Just ten minutes more," said he to himself, but in ten minutes more he was as sound asleep as ever he had been in Bampton Palace.

* * * * *

The Bishop dreamt that he was riding a tricycle with broken spokes, which kept hitting his thighs as the wheels went round, but when he awoke he found that his dream was founded on fact. It was broad daylight, and a stout and angry-looking farmer was standing over him and prodding him about the legs with a stick.

"Hi! Wake up there!" said the farmer.

"I am awake," replied the Bishop, "and I'll trouble you to let my legs alone, my friend."

"None of your impudence, now," retorted the farmer. "Just get up and come along with me. Pick up your nasty pipe, too; we'll take that along. What the country's coming to, when such chaps is allowed to tramp about it setting ricks afire, I don't know. But I'll teach you!"

The Bishop, on the point of indignantly denying the implication about the rick, caught sight of the tramp's well-blackened clay at his feet, blushed guiltily, and remained silent. He remembered now that he had fallen asleep with that clay between his teeth; and though the rick was not burnt, it certainly might have been. For a moment he feared that the farmer meant to impart the promised instruction by personal chastisement, which it would be unseemly, though necessary, to resist.

"Look here, my good man," he said, haughtily, "do you know what I am?"

"Yes," replied the farmer, promptly. "A lazy, dirty, good-for-nothing, loafing vagabond, and you'll just come along with me quietly and go before the Bench at Claxton for sleeping out, or I'll break every bone in your idle body." The Bishop breathed a sigh, partly of resignation, partly of relief. It would be humiliating to appear before the Magistrates, though, of course, his troubles would be as good as over as soon as they heard his story, but anything was better than having to fight that farmer.

There was a dog-cart waiting at the gate in charge of a labourer, who grinned most offensively when he saw the captive. "Jump up, Jim," said the farmer, "and take care this wastrel doesn't give us the slip."

Jim proved worthy of the trust reposed in him. Whenever the Bishop made the least movement, he said surlily, "Ah! would you?" "None o' that, now," or "You'd best not try it on."

The Bishop in vain declared that he had not the least intention of trying it on, and, equally in vain, strove to propitiate his guardian by general conversation. The man, except when he repeated one of his formulæ of warning, kept stolidly silent, so the Bishop abandoned his attempts to make friends, and buoyed up his soul with faith in the quickness of Magisterial discernment.

When the farmer pulled up at Claxton police-station, the Bishop was ordered to get down and stand still. He meekly did so, and then Jim took him by one arm and the farmer by the other. Three small boys who stood near audibly wondered "What he'd been a-doing of," and one of them suggested murder in such a tone of conviction that the Bishop was quite glad when the door of the station-house closed behind him.

"Morning, Jubber," said the farmer to a Police-sergeant whom they found writing within.

"Morning, Mr. Pratt," said the Sergeant, looking up from his work. "What have you got there?"

"Tramp," replied the farmer. "Found him sleeping under my new rick on the Four-acres. Nearly set it a-fire. Here's his dirty pipe."

"Ah!" said the Sergeant, glancing carelessly at the prisoner. "Going to charge him, I suppose?"

"Rather!" replied the farmer, vindictively. So the

FUR-LINED OVERCOATS, ULSTERS, OVERCOATS, and CAPES are kept ready for immediate use at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

Bishop was charged with that heinous offence known as "sleeping out," and the farmer departed, after facetiously telling the Bishop not to fret for him, because he'd be sure to see him again when the Court met.

How soon would that be, wondered the Bishop, and what time was it now? Instinctively he moved his hand towards the place where his watch should have been, and then, realising the futility of his action, sighed so heavily that he attracted the Sergeant's attention.

"Hullo! my man," said he, looking up once more from his writing. "I was forgetting you. It's hardly worth while putting you into a cell, though. The Court meets in an hour. You can sit down there if you'll keep quiet and not interrupt me. I'm busy."

"Thank you," said the Bishop, sinking wearily into a chair. The Sergeant eyed his prisoner keenly for a moment, scratched his ear thoughtfully with the pen-holder, opened his mouth as if about to speak, changed his mind, and resumed his writing.

The Bishop began to consider what he had better do. The Court met in an hour; good. The Magistrates, as educated gentlemen, might be expected to know another educated gentleman when they saw one—but no; the Bishop remembered that reflection in the water and corrected himself—not when they saw one, but as soon as they heard one speak. Good heavens! though, he wouldn't be allowed to speak until after that farmer had told his story. There would be a reporter present to a certainty, and the clay pipe, perhaps even the whisky flask, would get, possibly pictorially, into the papers. That would never, never do. Even imprisonment would be easier to bear than that. A cold perspiration broke out on his brow, and he determined to try the effect of his educated voice on Mr. Jubber.

"Sergeant," he said, in his most mellifluous pulpit-tone, "do you know who I am?"

"No," replied the Sergeant gruffly. "And don't want. "'Taint law or manners to go into a man's previous convictions before his case is heard."

"But I am a—a clergyman, Sergeant," persisted the Bishop, "and I met with an accident yesterday afternoon."

"Clergyman, are you?" said the Sergeant as indifferently as if he had one in custody every day. "Why didn't you say so before? Here I've been and entered you on the charge-sheet as labourer—but I don't suppose it matters."

"Not at all," said the Bishop. "I am a labourer, you know, in a certain sense. But I want to tell you my story. I was——"

"Stop," interrupted the Sergeant. "Don't you know that anything you say to me is liable to be used in evidence against you? Keep your defence for the Bench, man."

"But I don't want to go before the Bench," objected the Bishop.

"I daresay not," said the Sergeant drily.

"And I was wondering if you would be good enough to ask one of the Magistrates to come here and see me privately," resumed the Bishop.

"Now, look here," said Mr. Jubber impatiently, "I let you sit down here on condition you didn't interrupt me. If I'd known you was a parson I'd never have done it, because a parson can't keep his mouth shut any better than a woman, and so if——"

"You believe I am a clergyman, then?" interrupted the Bishop, too much amazed to be careful of giving offence.

"Well, you say you are, and you ought to know," said the Sergeant. "It's once a parson always a parson, isn't it, even if you do go the wrong side the hedge? Now, be quiet or I'll lock you up."

The Bishop went down into the silence of despair. If Jubber believed him to be a clergyman, and yet held him guilty—after all though the man was right. He was guilty. He had slept out, not willingly, of course, but because he could not find a roof to shelter him—which was, no doubt, precisely the reason why nine vagrants out of ten committed the same offence. The Bishop was a just man, and the conclusion was obvious. He had broken the law. As Stephen Bellerby, labourer, he would take his punishment and hold his tongue for the honour and dignity of the cloth.

Just as he came to this heroic resolution some one knocked at the outer door, opened it, and entered before the Sergeant had time to finish uttering a gruff "Come in!"

The newcomer was an athletic-looking clergyman, so young that the mundane bloom of undergraduacy had not yet faded from his cheek, and the Bishop's heart leapt for joy. The Curate—the Bishop knew him for a Curate at a glance—had no doubt come to see if he could do any good among the prisoners. The heroic resolution was rescinded, and the Bishop determined not to submit to martyrdom without another struggle.

"Jubber," said the Curate before the Bishop could speak, "what is this I hear about you not being willing to play on Saturday? Who's to keep wicket, I'd like to know?"

"Well, sir," replied Jubber, putting down his pen, "it's this way. There was a little unpleasantness over at the 'Crown' about three weeks back, and Tom Sleeman was in it. In the way of duty I had to summons him for being drunk and refusing to quit. Perhaps you didn't notice, sir, the way in which he winged in them short-pitched ones last Saturday?"

"Oh! but I did," said the Curate. "I remember telling him to be careful or he'd break the stumps. We really can't afford a new set just now."

"No, sir," returned the Sergeant doggedly, "and no more can't I afford a new set of teeth. It was my head the spiteful beggar wanted to break."

The Curate was a man of experience—in the management of cricket-teams—and he knew that a wicket-keeper with a grievance needs humouring. He turned his head aside so that Jubber might not see him smile, and caught the Bishop's eye fixed on him appealingly.

"Hullo!" said he, turning to Jubber again. "I didn't notice you had company. Who is he? Tramp, eh? Sleeping under rick, was he? Says he's been a clergyman? Poor devil. Um! Drink, I suppose."

Then, after fumbling in his pocket, he held out his hand to the Bishop.

"I'm sorry to see you here," he said kindly. "Perhaps this will help——but, by Jove! No, it can't be. I'm hanged if it isn't though!"

He became dumb through sheer amazement, and the Bishop saw his chance—a better one than he had ever hoped for.

"Do you know me, then?" he asked, in a trembling whisper.

"Yes, I think so—er—that is, I'm sure I do, my lord," stammered the Curate. "You ordained me last Trinity Sunday by letters dimissory from the Bishop of Wroxeter."

"Then, for heaven's sake tell that numskull policeman what I am, and get me out of this," thundered the Bishop, in tones worthy of a longsuffering, but at last indignant, prelate.

* * * * *

The Curate managed it. With a tact and discretion beyond his years he managed it. He told Pratt nothing, but appealed so eloquently to his better feelings that he consented not to prosecute. He so worked upon the misgivings which assailed Jubber as soon as he knew his prisoner's real station in life, that the Sergeant burnt the charge-sheet containing the name of Stephen Bellerby, and hurriedly wrote out another. He smuggled some decent clothes into the police-station, took the Bishop to his lodgings, fed him and condoled with him to his heart's content, without once allowing himself the luxury of a smile.

He never even shared the joke with any one, except the Bishop's nephew, whose acquaintance he made when the grateful Bishop gave him the valuable living of St. Neot's, Bampton. He is popular in his parish, and those who at first blamed the Bishop for appointing so young a man now credit him with almost superhuman powers of discerning hidden merit.

The Bishop has made no further attempt to divest himself of the advantages of his station in his intercourse with his fellow-men. As a corrective to the adulation of his friends, he reads the Bampton Sentinel, whose editor has a poor opinion of Bishops.

The thief was not traced. The Bishop's nephew, who has a frugal mind, said that he ought to be if only for the sake of recovering the tricycle, but the Bishop settled the matter in four words. The first was "Oh!" the third "the," and the fourth "tricycle." The second? Well, the second, perhaps, was excusable.

ART NOTES.

IT was undoubtedly valorous of Mr. D. S. MacColl to exhibit a collection of his water-colours at the Goupil Gallery, but, most assuredly, it was not discreet; for he has, in fact, delivered himself into the hands of the Philistines by his one-man show. As long as he confined himself to writing articles on art, which passed as oracular because they were so delightfully unintelligible, all was well. But since he has essayed to show by the exhibition of some four score of his drawings what is the practical outcome of his art-teaching, he has fatally committed himself.

For now we see what "pirouetting on paper" and "capering on canvas" really mean. We have practical demonstration of how "chattering sunlight" is to be depicted, and what the art which aims at being "a sort of gesture" can effect. And the result, I am bound to say, cannot but prove reassuring to those who stand in the old artistic ways. However loudly Mr. MacColl may blow his trumpet in future, the walls of the Burlington House Jericho are not likely to totter and fall. For, much though there may be to deride and deplore in the conventionality and puerility, and I fear I must add the vulgarity, of the academic art of the period, better by far will it be for us to keep it and make the best we can of it, rather than accept in its place that state of smudgy and smeary artistic anarchy which D. S. M. seems so anxious to introduce.

It will be gathered from this exordium that I am not altogether favourably impressed with Mr. MacColl's artistic "impressions." His art criticisms have often surprised me, but his water-colours, I am bound to say, have made me sad. Perhaps the most depressing feature of the Show is the unmistakable evidence it contains that the artist has not even done as well as he might. It is clear from such drawings as "On the Beach, No. 1" and "Carting" that Mr. MacColl can, when he pleases, invest his works with a luminosity and freshness and vigour which to a considerable extent redeem their lack of form and detail. But in far too many of his drawings he seems of a set purpose to have contented himself with making a number of more or less smeary experiments with washes of colour on pieces of white paper. That these may have been interesting to him to make is probable; that, being made, they have afforded pleasure to some of the more devoted of his disciples, is possible; but that there is anything in them calculated to interest, or instruct, or delectate the average natural man I venture most emphatically to deny.

Mr. MacColl, I have reason to believe, is a young man, but even in the presumption of youth he should not throw his water-colour box in the face of the public. As an art critic his procedure is altogether different. In preparing his articles he at any rate takes pains to write in good English what may or may not be good sense. He does not send in to his Editor a succession of meaningless sentences, unpunctuated, unbalanced, and unformed. He does not imagine that an unorthographic muddle of words can be quickened into sense by a profuse peppering of adjectives however luminous, or of capital letters however big. In short, he does not presume to discharge his dictionary or his thesaurus at the heads of his patient readers. Then why, I would ask him in conclusion, and in all seriousness, has he been ill-advised enough to produce chromatic smudges and defiantly exhibit them as Works of Art?

The drawings alluded to above are hung on the walls of a well-lighted little gallery, which Messrs. Boussod, Valadon, & Co. have just had constructed at No. 5, Regent street. Many other pictures, including several well-known Whistlers, a characteristic Mauve, and a Joseph Israels of exceptional merit, are to be seen in an adjoining room. Nor should the visitor fail to notice a delightful reproduction of a water colour by Outin. Many triumphs have been achieved in colour printing, but it seems to me that the climax of success has been reached in this particular instance.

MUSIC.

M. PADEREWSKI.

M. PADEREWSKI has again been the musical hero of the week, and whether at the Crystal Palace or the Popular Concerts the same tale has to be told of seats sold out days in advance. There is no doubt that the imposition of a guinea for the best places at the St. James's Hall recital, a month or so ago, is to a great extent responsible for the rush to hear the Polish pianist at a cheaper rate. At St. James's Hall on Monday certain enthusiasts of an economical turn of mind arrived, it seems, at the doors at one o'clock in the afternoon, deeming a wait of seven mortal hours as nothing to the chance of securing a shilling seat. At the Crystal Palace on Saturday, for once in a way, the back of the orchestra was brought into requisition, and every place was filled although the programme contained nothing more exciting than the Polish Fantasia, which several of the audience had already heard both in Norwich and London. However, although purely rhapsodical, M. Paderewski's Fantasia grows on acquaintance, particularly as to the lovely andante and the spirited finale. Of course, the real test will come when it is played by somebody else than the composer, an experiment which, however, in such very difficult music, the average pianist is not by any means anxious to try. M. Paderewski afterwards played a trio of smaller pieces, including M. Rubinstein's Valse Caprice, which the composer himself found a hard nut to crack, and for an encore the second of Liszt's rhapsodies.

Last year it is understood that M. Paderewski made no charge for playing either at the Philharmonic or the Popular concerts, but this year, it is said, Mr. Daniel Mayer, his manager, receives for him a fee of 120 gs. each night. Elsewhere M. Paderewski is usually his own impresario, and he makes out of it a good deal more money than any reasonable fee would cover. At his last recital at St. James's Hall, for example, the takings were over £1,000. In the provinces, however, the admission prices are very much lower than in London, although, as the halls are larger, the difference in the total receipts is not so great as might be imagined. The Free Trade Hall, Manchester, where he plays this week, for example, holds 4,000 people, nearly twice as many as St. James's Hall, so that the best reserved seats can be sold at a handsome profit for six shillings each. Six shillings was also charged for the best places on his return visit to St. Andrew's Hall, Glasgow, a room which comfortably holds 3,500 people. If, when he comes back after the New Year, M. Paderewski removes from St. James's Hall to the new Queen's Hall, his tickets are likely to be sold at a far more reasonable rate than before. During his present English tour, however, he has, I learn, taken something like £20,000, a figure which I doubt any other pianist has exceeded in this country.

On Monday at the Popular Concerts Mr. Lloyd introduced M. Paderewski's new album of songs, six in number, the English version by Miss Alma Tadema. The songs are likely to be far more popular than the Polish Fantasia, and two of them, the "Piper's Song" and that entitled "Pain have I endured," which on Monday was repeated in response to reiterated demands for an encore, will certainly win the favour of the public without any trouble. One or two of the others are difficult, but nevertheless interesting; while in the music there is often a curious mixture of the Polish and the German elements. My provincial friends bid fair to have a treat if the suggestion be carried out, that Messrs. Paderewski and Lloyd shall tour with these songs and some pianoforte works in the spring.

OVOCA.—A perfect Old Irish WHISKY. Medically recommended. Absolutely pure, genuine. Thoroughly matured, palatable. Of all Wine Merchants. Wholesale only, A. MILLAR & Co., Dublin.

The Royal mourning has disturbed the arrangements made for the Court festivities at Christmas. There was, as I have already mentioned, an idea to have an operatic Company to Windsor before the Queen went to Osborne, but this, of course, is now abandoned; and the production by Princess Henry of Battenberg and some of the junior members of the Royal Family of two operettas by Signor Tosti has also been postponed. This is fortunate for the composer, as I understand the second of the series, set to a libretto by Mdlle. Descours and M. Marras, is not yet finished. The earlier of the operettas, however, entitled "A Passing Shadow," the libretto by Mrs. Arthur Hervey, is complete, and the Royal amateurs already have their parts.

I am told that the lecture delivered last week before the Royal College of Organists by Mr. Hamilton Clarke, and entitled "Two Years' Music in Australia, by One of the Survivors," is very smartly written, and it certainly ought to be published. Mr. Clarke took up the running of the Victorian Orchestra after Mr. Cowen left Melbourne, and his experiences should be well worth recording.

The revival at the Albert Hall of Handel's "Jephtha" was interesting, although the work would seem to be more suitable for a smaller building, if only because it contains a maximum of airs and a minimum of choruses. I rather fancy, too, that if he had enjoyed the opportunity Sir Arthur would have touched up the additional accompaniments which he wrote for the Barnby choir in 1868-9. However, it is as well that the present generation should have a chance of hearing Handel's last oratorio, and Mr. Lloyd's singing of "Waft her angels" was worthy of the best traditions of English vocalism. This air has always been a prime favourite of British tenors, from Beard, in Handel's own day, to John Braham and Sims Reeves.

At the Albert Hall, by the way, there is now in progress a series of Sunday afternoon organ recitals, which appear to have considerably exercised certain worthy clergymen. The reason why is not at all easy to discover. The organ pieces are interspersed with songs, usually of a sacred—or, at any rate, of a sombre—character, and even applause is forbidden. It is said that the thing which chiefly called down the anathemas of the clerical malcontents was a trombone quartet. I am, personally, not quite prepared to say that a trombone quartet party is altogether the sort of company which a tired man would like to entertain very late at night. But there is nothing impious in a trombone, and, indeed, it is a Biblical instrument, figuring in Holy Writ under the name of the "sackbut." At any rate, the Sunday afternoon organ recitals seem to have hit the public taste, for it appears that the average attendance is about 5,000 people, nearly half of whom were admitted to the gallery free, while the rest pay small sums ranging from threepence to a shilling for reserved seats. The biggest run is on the threepenny seats in the balcony and the sixpenny places in the arena, but there is a certain amount of speculation on the weather, as a wet day, such as we had last Sunday, nearly empties the hall.

The veteran Mr. W. Kuhe, who is as well known in London as at Brighton, where he so long resided, attained on Sunday his seventieth year, and a large number of eminent musicians called at Elm Park-gardens to congratulate him. Sir Arthur Sullivan and Sir George Grove, neither of whom was in town, sent telegrams, but among those who personally attended were M. Paderewski, Señor Sarasate, M. Otto Goldschmidt, Sir J. Barnby, Messrs. Santley, Cowen, Oudin, Salmond, Felix Moscheles, Borwick, Randegger, Brereton, Vert, Mayer, Hipkins, Shakespeare, Albanesi, and Tividar Nachez.

Except that the tenor did not appear to have any natural histrionic talent, and might justifiably be advised to turn his attention to concert work instead of opera, the performance of Schumann's "Genoveva" by the students of the Royal College of Music at Drury Lane last week was really excellent. The stage management, for which Mr. Richard Temple (late of the Savoy troupe) was responsible, particularly showed an immense improvement upon the make-shifts which have done duty elsewhere, while Miss Bruckshaw as the heroine and Miss Lunn as the witch were both remarkably good. "Genoveva," of course, is unsuitable for performance on the ordinary operatic stage owing to a clumsy libretto and music which is rarely dramatic, but it certainly deserves a hearing, and so much interest was expressed in the performance last week that Sir George Grove will probably repeat it.

Sir George Elvey, who died of influenza on Saturday, was a discovery of Queen Adelaide, and when Highmore Skeats the younger died in 1835, that Queen sent for Elvey from Oxford, where he was then a lay chorister at Christ Church, and promoted him to the post of organist at St. George's Chapel. This office he held for very nearly half a century. Elvey was much liked and respected by the Prince Consort, who in those days took a great deal of interest in the Windsor choir and its music. The best of Elvey's compositions were the anthems and chants which he wrote for the St. George's Chapel choir, which in its day has included a very large number of boys who eventually became eminent organists. Elvey was knighted in 1871, shortly after the marriage of the Princess Louise and the Marquis of Lorne, for which occasion he composed a wedding march. Elvey himself was wedded four times, on each occasion to a lady of fortune, and shortly after his last marriage to Miss Savory, a sister of Sir J. Savory, once Lord Mayor, he retired from his duties at Windsor, and has since lived on his country estate in Surrey.

The German version of "Utopia, Limited," is expected at the Friedrich Wilhelmstrasse Theater, Berlin, next week, and Sir Arthur Sullivan, who is now in the German capital, is understood to take great interest in it. On the other hand, in "The Mikado" the Germans have introduced a feminine Nanky Poo, and it seems that according to German law the composer can do little more in the matter than vigorously protest.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—The ages of doubt are also and always and by no inexplicable paradox the ages of superstition. When a great creed is on the rocks, and there is a general sauve qui peut of her passengers, drowning faith will cling to any spar or straw which any hand or any wave tosses within her reach. Hence the superstitions which Father Austin in his interesting biography of a thaumaturgus, the Passionate priest, "Father Charles" (1), ridicules and denounces. To the profane the ridicule and denunciation of any pretence to miraculous power made by any church or sect or cult other than the Roman Catholic reads a little like an advertisement of the pill Mr. Bright described as "good against an earthquake, to be had only at the old-established house. None others genuine. Beware of spurious imitations." And, to say the truth, this profane impression is deepened when you come to the record of Father

(1) "The Life of Father Charles," of the Congregation of the Most Holy Cross and Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ. By the Rev. Father Austin, C.P. (London: Simpkin, Marshall & Co.)
(2) "Do the Dead Return?" A Record of Experiences in Spiritualism. By a Clergyman of the Church of England. (London: T. Fisher Unwin.)
(3) "Pictures from Greek Life and Story." By the Rev. A. J. Church, M.A. With illustrations. (London: Hutchinson & Co.)
(4) "Alfred, Lord Tennyson." A Study of his Life and Work. By Arthur Waugh, B.A. With illustrations. (London: William Heinemann.)
(5) "Some Salient Points in the Science of the Earth." By Sir J. William Dawson, C.M.G., LL.D., F.G.S., &c. (London: Hodder & Stoughton.)
(6) "The Wreck of the Grosvenor." By W. Clark Russell. (New and cheaper edition.) (London: Sampson Low & Co.)
(7) "A Laodicean." (8) "Two on a Tower." (9) "The Return of the Native." (New edition.) By Thomas Hardy. (London: Sampson Low & Co.)
(10) "Poems." By Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. (11) "Poems." By John G. Whittier. (12) "The Scarlet Letter." By Nathaniel Hawthorne. Illustrated. (London: Griffith, Farran, & Co.)
(13) "Arts and Crafts Essays." By Members of the Arts and Crafts Exhibition Society. With a Preface by William Morris. (London: Rivington, Percival, & Co.)
(14) "Platonica." A Study. By Ethel M. Arnold. (London: Osgood, [illegible] & Co.)

Charles's miracles, which reads precisely like the testimonials in an advertisement to the efficacy of a miraculous pill. How Father Austin could suppose that any one, not an old woman, and a Catholic old woman at that, should accept such a testimony as the following as conclusive of Father Charles's miraculous power, I cannot conceive:—

"An educated and wealthy Quakeress and a rich Presbyterian gentleman, to my knowledge," states Father Sebastian, C.P., "came to Father Charles to be cured every time they became unwell, instead of sending for a doctor"— an economical arrangement, by the way, which did not commend itself to Father Charles's own faith and prudence, since he called in a doctor himself when he was ill. The evidence for the few other miracles recorded is too slight and loose to float a pill; whereas, had the Father really possessed miraculous powers, the numbers of the cured and the evidence of the cures must alike have been overwhelming, since you are told that crowds came daily for years to be healed at his hands.

"It was well answered," says Bacon, "by Diagoras to him that showed him in Neptune's temple the great number of pictures of such as had scaped shipwreck and had paid their vows to Neptune, saying, 'Advise now, you that think it folly to invocate Neptune in tempest!' 'Yea, but,' saith Diagoras, 'where are they painted that are drowned?'"

If the multitudes that must have been sent unhealed away were set against the "beggarly array of empty" sick-beds, said to have been emptied by the father with the help of a blessed candle, the evidence of his miraculous power would assume its due and absurd proportions. For my own part I am free to confess that the evidence for spiritualism given in a book of odd and great interest, written by a clergyman of the Church of England, "Do the Dead Return?" (2) seems to me—by comparison—overpowering. Talking of the breaking up of great faiths, I remember once at Rome being strangely struck by what to you will seem the commonplace thought, "Not one worshipper of Jupiter left, to whom so many nations for so many generations built great temples, raised costly statues, offered hecatombs of sacrifices, numberless as the sands, and the prayers and tears of many million sorrows!" (Of course, I am excepting that prudent Scotchman who always took his hat off to a statue of Jupiter, because there was no knowing when he might again come into power.) Well, this, no doubt commonplace, reflection occurred to me again with great force to day on reading in Professor Church's charming "Pictures from Greek Life and Story" (3)—an admirable Christmas present, by the way, to make any boy or girl—the history of the sacred island of Delos. To how many nations, and for how many generations was this little island, but five miles in circumference, so sacred that, so to say, it was paved with their gold and clouded with their incense. On one occasion alone, says Professor Church, the Persians "offered the huge, the almost incredible amount of three hundred talents of frankincense on the altar of its patron god, Apollo." To-day, its sole inhabitants are a handful of sheep!

> Our little systems have their day;
> They have their day and cease to be,
> They are but broken lights of Thee,
> And thou, O Lord, art more than they.

In quoting "In Memoriam" I ought to mention that Mr. Waugh's In Memoriam to Tennyson, which I noticed on its opportune appearance after the poet's death—"Alfred, Lord Tennyson: a Study of his Life and Work" (4)—has appeared in a third and improved edition. No one will be found to question the claim Mr. Waugh makes in the preface to having given us "a more complete, more detailed, and more accurate study of Tennyson than any at present in possession of the public," while the beauty and number of the illustrations, and the admirable get up of the volume would make it also a most welcome Christmas present. Its price, let me say, is but 6s., and that of "Pictures from Greek Life and Story" but 5s. To the scientifically-inclined youth and maiden Sir J. W. Dawson's encyclopædic and admirably illustrated "Salient Points in the Science of the Earth" (5), price 7s. 6d., would be as acceptable a gift as you could offer; while the more frivolous would rejoice greatly over Mr. Clark Russell's "Wreck of the Grosvenor" (6), now in a cheap edition (3s. 6d.), or in the cheap editions of Mr. Thomas Hardy's novels, to be had at the same price, "A Laodicean" (7), "Two on a Tower" (8), "The Return of the Native" (9). More presentable, but less serviceable in their handsome bindings of red, white, and gold, are what I might call Christmas editions of "Longfellow" (10), of "Whittier" (11), and of Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter" (12), all profusely illustrated in the American style, and each 6s. A characteristically beautiful book is "Arts and Crafts Essays" (13), price 7s. 6d., all by experts of a rank so high as to be guaranteed by Mr. William Morris, who writes a preface to the volume. Here are books "for man or woman of all sizes," as Autolycus says; but for your own reading I would strongly recommend a little novelette by, I believe, the sister of Mrs. Humphrey Ward, and—what will mean more to you—the niece of Matthew Arnold. "Platonics" (14) is a most suggestive story of singular promise written on a text which is certainly original: "There are some women whom no man's love can altogether compensate for the loss of a woman's." Original also, I think, is the idea subtly worked out, of a woman retiring into herself as into a Protestant convent of renunciation, a more heart-devouring solitude than the Trappist's.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely, DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—Do you like gaiters on women? To my mind they are one of the too numerous things in which theory and practice are irreconcilable. Theoretically, a pair of gaiters are most excellent in damp or muddy weather. They protect the ankles and a portion of the boots. But, oh! the sight some ankles are, thus armed against our climate! I saw a pair on Wednesday which have left a permanent impression on my mind. They were waddling out of Charing Cross Station on the most substantial pair of ankles that ever supported a worthy, respectable woman. Strange—is it not?—that respectability so often fights shy of the beautiful and the æsthetic! Those rotund gaiters fascinated me. I had to watch them, and would probably have followed them home had not Maud, noting my look of misery, probed my mind on the subject, and laughed at me until I joined in too.

But there are very different gaiters to be seen. They may possibly be very respectable, but that is not essentially the first attribute that they impress upon the spectator. Daintiness, slenderness, coquetry, and costliness, are all eloquently expressed. A pair I have seen are in tan-coloured cloth of the very finest, fitted to a nicety to pretty feet with arched insteps, and lined with white satin. The buttons are placed very close together, the edges of the gaiters being well boned. They are buttoned with the aid of a hook, of course, just like boots.

Walking up Grosvenor-street one day in last week, we noticed that one of the houses near the square is furnished with a pair of reflecting outside mirrors, like those so universally seen in Holland. One was placed at the proper angle for showing to the inmates of the dining-room any one on the door-step, while the other supplied information of the same sort about the area-steps. New idea this, is it not? It would hardly be approved by the occupants of the basement floor.

We were on our way to Goode's splendid show-rooms in South Audley-street, where we wanted to look for some suitable present for Lilla. According to her usual custom she had taken care to let us know the exact sort of thing she wished to be given—viz., something novel in dinner-table decoration, either for flowers or in lighting. We saw so many charming things that it was very difficult to choose. The most graceful was, perhaps, an arrangement in tall white arches of glass for the electric light, the arches being connected by slender chains and provided with flower vases, all in purest crystal. With the pillars and arches wreathed with smilax, or with ivy, the effect of this would be beautiful. Another attractive decoration, also in pure white glass, consists of tall candlesticks, of different height, connected by chains of twisted glass, like ropes. These can be varied in a great number of ways, sometimes composing quite a "twenty cover" line of flowers and lights, and yet being compressible into a small space. The chains are detachable, so that they can be suited to a table of any shape.

HUNTING SEASON, 1893-4.—Busvine's new designs and materials for this year include several special novelties in Riding Habits, Coats for Walking and Driving, Walking Jackets, Gowns, &c. Can be seen at 4, Brook-street, or will be sent by return of post.—JOHN BUSVINE, by special appointments to the Princess of Wales, the Empress of Germany, the Empress of Austria, &c., &c.

A village Maypole is carried out in green glass, the ropes of verdure hooking on to small vases or candlesticks placed in a circle round the Maypole. This is a good idea. The newest lamp-shade is in palm-leaves of green silk, edged with a twist of pink beads, each leaf curving outward so as to form the shade. Smaller leaves finish the top, also with an outward curve. A bow of pink ribbon is tied round the leaves where the stalks meet each other. A lovely pure white silk shade covered the chimney of a white china lamp wreathed with wild flowers, and with a figure from "Midsummer Night's Dream" on the pedestal. There is a set of four of these, all different. Lovely lamps they are, and I do not know which I liked best of them, the perfectly white shade, or a softly tinted "rainbow" one in palest tones of green, pink, mauve, yellow, and pearl. For everyday use, the shades made of tapestry silk are the best for wearing well, and have a handsome appearance. A number of small tea or card tables attracted us, so good were the shapes. One of these, by being merely turned round, causes a portion of the top to rise, thus avoiding the necessity of a spring or anything likely to get out of order. A big white china bowl is carved in bas-reliefs, and has a wavy outline of brim which is particularly light and pretty. It is on a gilt stand. Two exquisite figures in pure white china are of a highly-decorative order. Wedgwood plaques with the well-known airy-looking figures on a background of deep, soft black, stone blue, or grey-green, are rather novel and very artistic. There are vases also in a similar style. Small white china troughs are designed for the dinner-table, being capable of arrangement in any combination, whether for a square, round, or oval table. Like the jardinières, lamps, or candelabra they are intended to accompany, these are decorated with hops, thistles, or wild flowers. Lord Elgin has just ordered a set with the thistle, as becomes a true Scotsman.

We noticed some charming pottery from Friesland, done by peasants whose trade was wood-carving, and who took to modelling in clay. The colours are beautifully blended.

We have just been poring over Howard's catalogue of his artistic furniture in Berners-street. The book is quite a work of art, the illustrations being printed from copper-plates on thick paper with a creamy surface, neither rough nor glossy. As you know, one of the Pater's weaknesses is for furniture, and nothing would give him greater pleasure than to furnish a house every year or oftener. He is also, as you are aware, very patriotic, and one of the circumstances that increases his appreciation of Howard's furniture is that by far the greater part of the goods are manufactured in England at their own steam factories and workshops. Their carved oak for large halls, dining-rooms of town and country houses, also libraries, is a study in itself, so skilfully is it adapted to modern needs, and combined with up-to-date ideas of comfort and luxury. The old fashioned oak chairs were not exactly models of ease for the occupants; but that is all changed now. Staircases are designed to suit the various styles of houses, and the decoration of walls is another point on which special attention is by no means thrown away. On page 4 appears a beautifully-executed sketch of a baronial hall, the details of which are principally Elizabethan. The beautiful ceiling is of solid modelled plaster. The carved chimneypiece is of yellow Mansfield. Antique oak is the material of the woodwork, and the beauty of the entire combination is not to be guessed without a sight of the sketch itself. In the library furniture a feature is made of well-ventilated bookcases, proof against mildew as well as dust. The easy-chairs are so luxuriously and sumptuously soft as to tend to perfect repose of body during hours of study. As to the sideboards, they are of an elaborate description, the carving on some of them being very fine indeed; others are curiously inexpensive, considering the amount of work bestowed upon them. The design on page 11 is a phototype reproduction of one by Mr. Randall, which was accepted and hung in the Royal Academy of 1891—a highly successful arrangement of various coloured marbles and painted glass. Another design by the same artist is for the side of a ball-room, executed in rosewood and pearwood, with silk panels painted with various subjects.

The smaller articles include writing tables, a peculiarly lovely one being in satinwood inlaid with rosewood and decorated with paintings in the French style. The top is finished with a little gilt rail, and the back is as decorative as the front, a fact that enables the possessor to place it in front of a window, or in any other position where the back is likely to be visible. Small tables in a variety of styles are well suited for presents. Screens are seasonable, are they not? Easy-chairs and settees are nice presents for the comfort-loving, especially when they are stuffed and upholstered so luxuriously as Howard's—veritable downy hollows of ease and perfectly delicious to the invalid. So many couches and so-called easy-chairs are delusions and snares, are they not?

I observe that in the "In Memoriam" notices that follow the obituary lists in the daily papers widows often revive the memory of lost husbands, but I have not seen a single instance of widowers referring to their late wives in this manner. How is this to be accounted for, do you suppose?

Truefitt's window is full of deliciously dainty things for presents, silk and satin sachets painted with flowers and tied with ribbons to match the blossoms; hand-glasses and brushes, with the backs hidden behind painted satin, and many another device for making the toilet-table look its very prettiest, to suit its fair proprietress.

We saw a perfectly sweet bodice at Russell and Allen's as we passed, in sapphire blue velvet broché, in a small and regular design upon a ground of black silk. The revers were of black satin lined with the same material in white, and bordered with dark brown fur. The space between the revers was filled in with black satin, almost covered with jet, and the sleeves from the elbows matched this. A band of black satin brought from the centre seam of the back half-way up the bodice, formed a diagonal belt, meeting at the waist in front and finishing in short ends, richly fringed with jet. Lovely, isn't it?

We are just going to pack our hampers for sending to friends in the country, who are sure to send us good things of the rural kind, such as turkeys, Devonshire cream, hares, pheasants, plump capons, grapes, apples, and pears. It is nice to be able to fall back upon such stores as are available in town, and which are a good contrast to the unsophisticated naturalness of what we receive.

Of course, you are coming up to town for the "Truth Toy Show," which, doubtless, you have heard is to be held again this year at the Albert Hall, on the 19th and 20th. From what I am told, I expect one of the chief attractions will be the toys which have been kindly sent by H.R.H. the Duke of Coburg, and amongst which, I hear, are some splendid models. Germany is the land of toys, and, therefore, a present from the head-quarters of Toyland cannot fail to be specially useful. The dolls, too, are sure—as they have now for many years—to come in for a large share of admiration if they turn out to be as magnificently and cleverly dressed as they have been on so many former occasions. Again the liberal anonymous friend to the poor little workhouse children has once more come to the fore with his munificent donation of 11,000 new sixpences. By the bye, I do hope that some one will buy the St. Bernard dog that has been offered by a friend, and which has been referred to in a recent number of TRUTH. It is really a very kind thought of the owner to present it to the Fund. I venture to suggest that whoever buys the dog should name it either "Charity" or "Truth."

Riding Habits.—A speciality in Riding Habits. Has been declared the best, without exception, by all ladies who have seen it. Quite new. Patented. Made only by G. S. Wolmershausen & Co., Ltd., 16, Gt. Marlborough-street, Regent-street, London, W.

Messrs. Redfern beg to announce that the models of Gowns, Coats, Mantles, &c., designed and prepared for winter wear, are now ready, and display the combined ideas of the latest London and Paris Houses.—27, New Bond-street, W.

The prizes are, I am told, to be of the same substantial description as those of last year, and they are, I hear, to include silver card-cases, silver purses, and a lovely square perfume-bottle, almost entirely enveloped in filigree silver. Then there are jardinières in silver for ferns, silver-backed brushes and combs, and even "milk cans" in the same metal. The Goldsmiths' Company, in Regent-street, who are supplying these really useful prizes, have again very liberally presented a dear little gold keyless watch, which is to form the first prize, and for which, doubtless, there will be great competition.

I wonder if the original suggestion made by one thoughtful friend of TRUTH will be followed by many others—I mean the idea of sending pheasants for distribution amongst the various workhouses. The poor people who inhabit these far from lively abodes would be sure to appreciate any such addition to their ordinary daily fare, in the same way as the children delight in Tom Smith's gift of crackers.

I paid my usual visit (at this time of year) to Charbonnel & Walker's, in Bond-street, and the manageress was only too delighted to show me all the latest novelties in "Sweet-land." I found that some of the gigantic receptacles for the tempting goodies can be made into very magnificent and costly bonbonnières, holding, as some of them do, over twenty-four pounds of sweets. Fancy a "quarter of a hundredweight of indigestion!" By the way, indigestible things are almost invariably the most inviting. Some of the newest designs for these bonbonnières are revivals of the modes of Louis XIII. I admired one or two caskets in old-fashioned crimson plush with heavy golden bullion designs upon them; but I must say that the lovely delicate satin boxes so beautifully embroidered appealed more to my taste than the rather heavy-looking plush one. Some embroidered opera hand-bags and an enormous octagon box, which measured over three-quarters of a yard across, were charming specimens of artistic taste and beauty of design. The embroidery this year is mostly worked upon gold tinsel brocade, which naturally (especially by gas-light) shows up to great advantage, and (I am told) keeps its colour remarkably well.

There were some curious surprise boxes, but a "Coffre de Chinois" is rather a gruesome idea I think. A bull's-eye lantern had its "eye" charmingly painted, and tiny unclothed boys and girls daringly "faced the light." A dapper little French sailor-boy, seated on a coil of rope, holds aloft his nation's flag; but I was informed by Madame that it would not in any way wound their feelings to change the flag for one of any other country. A large owl, perched on a holly tree, calmly blinked at his "sooty neighbour." This enterprising sweep was roasting chestnuts over a chimney at the top of a mansion which was intended for French bon-bons only. You would, I am sure though, have pounced at once on a sweet-looking glove-box, especially if some one very nice had promised to partly fill it in the literal way with some gloves, as well as with the proper quantity of chocolates. In looking round at the delicate sachets, screens, and artistic works of art generally, I asked if the things about did not after a time show signs of wear and tear, and if so, what then became of them? "Oh!" replied Madame, "we always find them highly appreciated at the French Hospital where they are sent." In all humility I should like to suggest that this excellent example might be followed by some of the West-end houses, for fancy articles which were too soiled and unsaleable would be eagerly sought after by some of the inmates of our English Hospitals.

Clare sends me the following from Dublin:—

DEAREST MADGE, So long as the old truisms hold good that "accidents will happen" and "circumstances alter cases," so long will the impossibility of life as an exact science exist. We cannot turn ourselves into machines to go by clockwork—to be wound up and worked into doing the same appointed things at the same appointed times. How fully we women understand the chances, changes, and surprises of even the most ordinary life, brought home to us as they are by the personal experiences of every day! Are not our daily lives one long struggle with the unexpected, with the unforeseen that cannot possibly be otherwise than unforeseen? Is there any such slave of circumstances, notwithstanding her apparently commanding position, as the mistress of an establishment? Her duties are infinite in their variety; not a day passes without producing its own special ones, which are usually entirely different from those of the previous days. If possessed of a systematic mind, the utmost she can aspire to is to be methodic in the want of method which is the necessity of her position.

At this season, of all others, one's thoughts naturally turn to the subject of these onerous and varied duties, generally accepted as our feminine specialities. How they crowd upon us! No coming event approaches Christmas in its power of casting its shadow before—such a very long way before. To say nothing of the Christmas literature, which now, one might almost say, brings the holly within touch of the hay, the shopping is a matter of four or five weeks in advance. What a business it is, what gigantic proportions it has the power of assuming! Just now, how little time there is for anything else. I wonder what will happen when, in addition to all our present occupations, we have seriously taken on that reformation of men which is apparently to be the mission of the coming woman. No doubt the men, from our point of view, do need a good deal of reforming; but, then, we too may need it from theirs. By the way, what a much greater taste for reforming men than her own sex, the advanced woman has. And our Mother Eve took so very much the other side in the beginning.

What weather we have been undergoing, most dreadful for the inhabitants of an island whose rulers are on the other side of a boisterous channel! And dreadful for the unhappy ruler, too, whom public affairs oblige to defy the weather. For the last three weeks the Irish seas have been simply terrific in their moods. Have you ever had experience of a gale in our Channel? Though one's experiences of life may be incomplete without it, still the case is one in which incompleteness is hardly to be deplored. I cannot imagine that Mr. Morley, after his last crossing of the Irish Sea, has any great enthusiasm for spending Christmas, as had been his arrangement, at the Chief Secretary's Lodge. The Lord-Lieutenant returned last week to the Vice-regal Lodge, after entertaining and being entertained by his friends in England, or rather should it not be said, after Lord Houghton had entertained his friends and been entertained by them? The Viceroy of Ireland always plays a dual part, as the unchanging representative of the sovereign and the changing nominee of the Government. There is no parallel case for such an involved position, except in the comic creations of the Gilbert-Sullivan operas. The peculiar circumstances which have arisen with regard to the present Viceroy and Irish society, make the position more curious than ever. Were the Viceroy to indulge in auto-biographical form his literary proclivities, the "Strange Case of the Lord-Lieutenant and Lord Houghton" might even surpass in interest that of "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde." There is a rumour that, after Christmas, a Juvenile Fancy Dress Ball will be given at the Viceregal Lodge for Lord Houghton's three little girls. Whether or not politics will disturbingly intrude themselves into the children's world remains to be seen. What a pity if all the Bo-peeps, Jack Horners, Buttercups, etc., must have a political tinge. There is no doubt that politics are, as Wordsworth says of the world, "too much with us, late and soon"; it is bad enough for the "grown-ups," but surely the age of innocence might be spared. Talking of that golden time, a sweetly-pretty little boy is now the Premier Duke of our country. In such a case the human weakness for Dukes seems more comprehensible than in the cases of the many elderly, ponderous, and distinctly unromantic-looking persons who are more ordinarily associated with the ducal title. Some one has said that the types of dukes and of family butlers are singularly alike. It is not really very strange that they should be, since an unusual idea of dignity and personal responsibility is peculiar to the occupiers of both these positions. The Duchess of Leinster has not been very well; her father and mother, Lord and Lady Feversham have been staying at Carton since the Duke of Leinster's death. Sir J. West and Lady Ridgeway bade farewell to Irish society last week, when they gave an afternoon party at the Under-Secretary's Lodge in the Phœnix Park. The house is a very comfortable one, more so than the statelier residence of the Chief Secretary. It is quite near to the Viceregal Lodge, and stands in a prettily-planted lawn. There was a beautiful display of flowers from the conservatories. The rooms were crowded with guests in every variety of winter costume, which with the present fashions can be very varied indeed. Do you detest the big sleeves as much as I do? How they disfigure the human form divine! What sin will our sex not commit in the name of fashion? Lady Ridgeway was charmingly dressed; she will make a good "governess" of Man. Between ourselves, the Under-Secretary is not too pleased to exchange our greater island for the limited confines of Man, even with its blessing of an established Home Rule. It is something to have an official part from us with regret: it is not a compliment invariably paid us by our rulers from over the sea.

MAJOR HOWE & CO.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

—Yours, ever, CLARE.

Do you want to know how to make a lovely plum-cake? This one is well suited to the festive season:—

Beat 1 lb. of fresh butter, with 1 lb. of fine pounded sugar, in a basin until it is quite white and creamy; add nine eggs, beating each one in separately. Then add 8 oz. of Jordan almonds, which must be blanched and pounded. Now have 1½ lb. of picked sultanas and 6 oz. of shred candied peel, rubbed in a little flour to prevent them sinking to the bottom. Mix them carefully with the other ingredients, add 6 oz. of glacé cherries (cut in halves), the grated peel of two fresh lemons, ½ oz. of mixed spice, a wineglass of brandy, a small teaspoonful of Borwick's baking powder, and 1¼ lb. of flour. Mix all thoroughly together, put it into a greased and papered tin, and bake in a moderate oven from five to six hours. It is important that the oven should be kept at an even temperature, and that the door should not be opened during the process of baking. The cake must then be turned on to a wire sieve, and left until next day to cool. Now cut the top level, and put a thick layer of almond icing on it, which is made in this way:—Pound ½ oz. of blanched bitter almonds, mix them with 1 lb. of ground sweet almonds and 2 lb. of sifted icing sugar; mix it into a stiff paste with the juice of a lemon and the yolks of three or four eggs. The cake must now be left until next day to thoroughly dry the icing. Then put 1 lb. of sifted icing sugar into a large basin, make a well in the centre, and place there the whites of two fresh eggs; work it with a wooden spoon until it is white and thick, adding the strained juice of a lemon at intervals; spread it with a palette-knife all over the cake, and again leave it to dry. Then cover it with a thinner coating of icing made with ¾ lb. of sugar, and when that is dry it may be piped with white or pink icing, worked with a little more sugar to make it stiffer.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

MARIANI WINE

This inimitable COCA WINE is an aid to intellectual exertion, and is indispensable to brain-workers and others who suffer from Debility, Exhaustion, Mental Depression, Dyspepsia, Sleeplessness, Voice Fatigue; also to promote Convalescence. Written Testimonials from over 2,000 Physicians. "A powerful rejuvenator and renovator of the vital forces." Sold by Chemists, Grocers, and Stores, or delivered free by Importers, WILCOX & CO., 239, Oxford-street, London. 4s. per bottle, or 45s. dozen.

MOURNING FOR IMMEDIATE WEAR.

Messrs. JAY'S

Large and well-assorted STOCK includes a choice and varied selection of COSTUMES, MANTLES, and MILLINERY, suitable for any degree of Mourning, and ready for IMMEDIATE WEAR. Orders to special instructions are executed in a few hours, and Ladies are Waited Upon in any part of the country without any extra charge whatever.

JAY'S,
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

EXSHAW'S No. 1 BRANDY,
66/- per dozen.
SUPPLIED DIRECT TO THE PUBLIC.

CHAMPAGNES.
JULES CHAMPION & CO.'s (in All Sizes), 68/- Per Doz.
Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1884 (in Bottles only) 105/- per doz. Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1889 (in all sizes) 84/- per doz.
Lebeau & Co. Vintage 1889, 54/- per doz.

POWELL, TURNER, & CO.,
28, KING STREET, ST. JAMES'S, S.W.; & 23, FINCH LANE, E.C.

CHUBB'S 128, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, LONDON, E.C.
FIRE RESISTING. JEWEL THIEF RESISTING.
WEST END BRANCH—
68, ST. JAMES'S STREET, PALL MALL, S.W. SAFES.

GAIETY RESTAURANT, STRAND.
THE VIENNESE STRING BAND WILL PLAY DURING
3/6 DINNERS, 6 to 8.30. SEPARATE TABLES. NO CHARGE FOR ATTENDANCE. 5/-

"To breathe 'Sanitas' is to breathe Health."

CORDON STABLES, C.M., M.D., R.N.

"Sanitas" Eucalyptus Disinfectors, 1s. each.

"SANITAS OIL"
Prevents and Cures
Bronchitis, Influenza, Diphtheria,
AND ALL
Lung and Throat Affections.
DIRECTION:
INHALE and FUMIGATE with "SANITAS OIL."
PAMPHLETS FREE ON APPLICATION.
THE SANITAS Co., Ltd., Bethnal Green, London, E.

"Sanitas" Oil, 1s. Bottles;

Pocket Inhalers, 1s. each.

Fumigators, 3s. 6d. each.

"Sanitas" Eucalyptus Oil, 1s. Bottles.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.
300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.
ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.
Weavers of Dress Silks,
Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

TRIPLE SPLICED HOSIERY.

PATENT NO. 20,778.

For Ladies and Children.

For Comfort, Elasticity, and Wear-resisting qualities these goods are the best produced. They are SPLICED AT THE INSTEP, where stockings, when worn with lace-up boots and shoes, first show signs of wear. In the heels and feet there is also a splicing thread more than is found in ordinary Hosiery. Registered Trade Mark, "Musa Dye," on each pair. Colours guaranteed absolutely fast and clean.

Made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

To be obtained of ALL FIRST-CLASS DRAPERS & HOSIERS and WHOLESALE ONLY from the Patentees, DEBENHAM & FREEBODY, FLETCHER GATE, NOTTINGHAM.

MELLIN'S FOOD
For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

MELLIN'S EMULSION
OF COD LIVER OIL and HYPOPHOSPHITES.
The Finest Nutritive and Tonic Food for Delicate Children and Weakly Adults.
VERY PALATABLE. EASILY DIGESTED. PERFECTLY SAFE.
Price 1s., 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per Bottle.

MELLIN'S FOOD BISCUITS
(Manufactured by Carr & Co., Carlisle, especially for G. Mellin.)
DIGESTIVE. NOURISHING. SUSTAINING.
For Children after Weaning, the Aged, Dyspeptic, and for all who require a simple, Nutritious, and Sustaining Food.
Price 2s. and 3s. 6d. per Tin.

AN ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET ON THE FEEDING AND REARING OF INFANTS,
A Practical and Simple Treatise for Mothers, containing a large number of Portraits of Healthy and Beautiful Children, together with facsimiles of original testimonials which are of the greatest interest to all mothers, to be had, with samples, free by post on application to Mellin's Food Works, Stafford Street, Peckham, S.E.

The Original Firm, Established 1810.

MAPPIN BROTHERS'

"Queen's" Plate.
(PROTECTED)
For TABLE FURNISHING, &c.

By Her Majesty's Special Warrant.

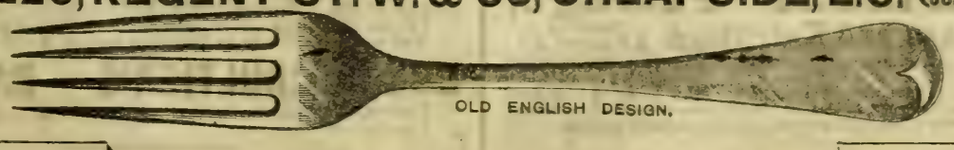
Queen's Plate is the finest in the World. Has stood the test of over 80 years, and is supplied direct to the public by the actual Manufacturers

From Queen's Works, Sheffield.

Mappin Brothers' Corporate Trade Mark is on all Manufactures in Queen's Plate and Queen's Cutlery.

Only London Show Rooms: 220, REGENT ST. W. & 66, CHEAPSIDE, E.C. (Next Sir John Bennett's.)

OUTFITS OF "QUEEN'S" PLATE.



"QUEEN'S" TABLE CUTLERY.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST and SAMPLES POST-FREE.

MAPPIN BROTHERS have received THE HIGHEST AWARDS at the CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

SELECTIONS of Goods forwarded to the Country on APPROVAL.

Chatto & Windus's New Novels, &c.

SYDNEY GRUNDY'S Novel, "THE DAYS OF HIS VANITY: A Passage in the Life of a Young Man," is just ready, crown 8vo, Irish linen, 3s. 6d.

MACLAREN COBBAN'S New Novel, "THE BURDEN OF ISABEL," is now ready, in 3 vols., at every Library.

CHRISTIE MURRAY'S New Book, "THE MAKING OF A NOVELIST: an Experiment in Autobiography," with a Photograph-Portrait, is now ready, crown 8vo, cambric, gilt top, 6s.

Red Diamonds. By Justin McCarthy, Author of "Dear Lady Disdain," &c. 3 vols.

"A well told and entertaining tale."—Scotsman.

Vashti and Esther: A Story of Society To-Day. By the Writer of "Belle's" Letters. 2 vols.

"A clever book, written by one who knows; who will be voted daring, no doubt—even audacious."—Vanity Fair.

To His own Master. By Alan St. Aubyn, Author of "A Fellow of Trinity," &c. 3 vols.

"A good, strong, and interesting novel . . . . has situations of real power and pathos . . . . a striking novel."—Daily Chronicle.

Outlaw and Lawmaker. By Mrs. Campbell Praed, Author of "The Romance of a Station," &c. 3 vols.

"A novel of high literary quality, remarkable power, and great interest. . . . If its popularity prove proportionate to its merits, it should be one of the most widely read books of its year."—Daily Telegraph.

Woman and the Man. By Robert Buchanan, Author of "The Shadow of the Sword," &c. 2 vols.

"The picture of a brave, pure woman is winningly delineated."—St. James's Gazette.

A Wasted Crime. By David Christie Murray, Author of "Joseph's Coat," &c. 2 vols.

"Has all those characteristics which make Christie Murray's novels a source of perpetual delight."—Sun.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

The Luck of Gerard Ridgeley: A Tale of the Zulu Border. By Bertram Mitford, Author of "The Gun-Runner." With a Frontispiece by Stanley L. Wood.

"The description of 'The Tooth' is almost worthy of Mr. Rider Haggard."—Daily Chronicle.

Heather and Snow. By George MacDonald.

"A book which no one, having once taken it up, will lay down."—Spectator.

Mrs. Juliet. By Mrs. A. W. Hunt, Author of "Thornicroft's Model."

"A fresh, attractive, and decidedly entertaining story."—Athenæum.

The Red Sultan. By J. Maclaren Cobban.

"Should greatly enhance Mr. Cobban's reputation as a novelist of strong imagination and really artistic execution."—St. James's Gazette.

The Windsor Peerage, Baronetage, and Knightage. Edited by R. Walford, M.A., Author of "The County Families." 1894 Edition now ready, Windsor cloth, price 12s. 6d.

It gives nearly all the information contained in other books, at little more than a third the cost. It contains also the blazon of the arms of all hereditary titles, and full accounts of all collateral branches in remainder to them.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

Messrs. Wm. Blackwood & Sons'

BOOKS FOR CHRISTMAS.

THE RISE OF
OUR EAST AFRICAN EMPIRE:
Early Efforts in Nyasaland and Uganda. By Captain F. D. Lugard, D.S.O. With 130 Illustrations, and 14 specially prepared Maps. 2 vols. large demy 8vo, 42s.

LIFE AND TIMES OF THE
RT. HON. WILLIAM HENRY SMITH,
M.P. By Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart., M.P., Author of "Passages in the Life of Sir Lucian Elphin," "Meridiana," &c. With 3 Portraits and numerous Illustrations. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 25s.

ON SOME OF SHAKESPEARE'S FEMALE
CHARACTERS. By Helena Faucit, Lady Martin. Dedicated by Permission to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen. Fifth Edition. With Portrait by Lehmann. 8vo, 7s. 6d.

A JOURNEY THROUGH THE YEMEN
And some General Remarks upon that Country. By Walter B. Harris, F.R.G.S., Author of 'The Land of an African Sultan: Travels in Morocco," &c. With 3 Maps and numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 16s.

STRAY SPORT. By J. Moray Brown, Author of "Shikar Sketches," "Powder, Spur, and Spear," "The Days when we went Hog-Hunting," &c. 2 vols. post 8vo. With 50 Illustrations. 21s.

POEMS AND
BALLADS OF HEINRICH HEINE.
Done into English Verse by Sir Theodore Martin, K.C.B. Third Edition. Small crown 8vo, 5s.

MADONNA PIA: A Tragedy; and THREE OTHER DRAMAS. Written and Translated by Sir Theodore Martin, K.C.B. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

WITH THE WOODLANDERS AND BY THE TIDE. By "A Son of the Marshes," Author of "Forest Tithes," "On Surrey Hills," "Within an Hour of London Town," "Annals of a Fishing Village." Edited by J. A. Owen. Crown 8vo, 6s.

ROUND the BLACK MAN'S GARDEN
By Zélie Colvile, F.R.G.S. With 2 Maps and 52 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 16s.

THE HISTORY AND POETRY OF THE SCOTTISH BORDER:
Their Main Features and Relations. By Professor Veitch, LL.D., Author of "The Feeling for Nature in Scottish Poetry," &c. New and Enlarged Edition. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 16s.

THE BOOK HUNTER. By John Hill Burton, Author of "The History of Scotland." New Edition, with Portrait. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

THE SCOT ABROAD. By the Same Author. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, 10s. 6d.

LAYS OF
THE SCOTTISH CAVALIERS,
And other Poems. By Professor Aytoun, D.C.L. Beautifully Illustrated by Sir J. Noel Paton. Small 4to gilt, cloth, 21s.

GEORGE ELIOT'S NOVELS. Cheap Edition. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. ADAM BEDE, 3s. 6d.—THE MILL ON THE FLOSS, 3s. 6d.—FELIX HOLT, 3s. 6d.—SCENES OF CLERICAL LIFE, 3s.—SILAS MARNER, 2s. 6d.—ROMOLA, 3s. 6d.—DANIEL DERONDA, 7s. 6d.—MIDDLEMARCH, 7s. 6d.—The Set handsomely bound in half-calf, 50s.; half Persian morocco, gilt top, 52s.; half Turkey morocco, gilt top, 57s. 6d. GEORGE ELIOT'S LIFE, 7s. 6d.

GEORGE ELIOT'S LIFE AND WORKS. Cabinet Edition. Printed from a New and Legible Type. Complete in Twenty-four Volumes, price £6. Each Volume, price 5s., may be had separately. Also sold in Sets handsomely bound in various leather bindings for presentation.

THE TRUMPETER: A Romance of THE RHINE. By Joseph Victor von Scheffel. Translated from the Two Hundredth German Edition by Jessie Beck and Louise Lorimer. With an Introduction by Sir Theodore Martin, K.C.B. Long 8vo, 3s. 6d.

BON GAULTIER'S BALLADS.
Illustrated by Doyle, Leech, and Crowquill. Fifteenth Edition Fcap. 8vo, 5s.

William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

CASSELL & CO.'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

READY THIS WEEK.

'LISBETH. By LESLIE KEITH, Author of "The Chilcotes," "In Spite of Herself," &c. 3 vols., price 31s. 6d.

A Popular Edition of "LIST, YE LANDSMEN!" A Romance of Incident, by W. CLARK RUSSELL, is now ready, price 6s.

DEDICATED BY PERMISSION TO LORD ROBERTS.

Just Ready, price 6s.

A KING'S HUSSAR. Being the Military Memoirs for Twenty-five Years of a Troop-Sergeant-Major of the 14th (King's) Hussars. Edited by HERBERT COMPTON, Author of "The Dead Man's Gift," &c.

Q.'s NEW WORK.—Just Published, cloth, 6s.

THE DELECTABLE DUCHY.

Stories, Studies, and Sketches. By Q., Author of "Dead Man's Rock," &c.

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

CASSELL'S CLASSIFIED CATALOGUE,

Containing particulars of upwards of One Thousand Volumes, ranging in price from THREEPENCE TO FIFTY GUINEAS, will be sent on request, post free, to any address.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON.

GAY & BIRD'S LIST.

THE AUTOCRAT OF THE BREAKFAST TABLE. By OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES. Two vols. crown 8vo. Fifteen beautiful Photogravures and many engraved text Illustrations by HOWARD PYLE. Printed in the most careful manner and bound in the most attractive style, cloth gilt, gilt top, 21s. Large paper edition, limited to 30 copies for this country, price £4 4s. net.

Daily Graphic.—"As a pretty gift book this is all that could be desired. . . . A superfine production."

Bookman.—"This is really a beautiful edition which one can praise with a good conscience and a good will."

VENICE: The Queen of the Adriatic; or, Venice MEDIÆVAL AND MODERN. By C. E. CLEMENT. Demy 8vo. Twenty Photogravures, handsomely bound and boxed, 12s. 6d. net.

FLORENCE, The City of the Arno; or, Florence PAST AND PRESENT. By V. W. JOHNSON. Demy 8vo. Twenty-five Photogravures, handsomely bound and boxed, 12s. 6d. net.

Spectator.—"This handsome volume is a triumph—it undoubtedly is a triumph—of illustration and typography, quite us much as of literature. . . . . Altogether, this is a very pleasant as well as useful and eminently handsome book."

FOR GOOD OR EVIL. A Novel in Two Volumes. By GILBERTA M. F. LYON, Author of "The Better Part." Crown 8vo, cloth, 21s.

PAVING THE WAY. A Romance of the AUSTRALIAN BUSH. By SIMPSON NEWLAND, ex-Treasurer of South Australia. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

 This volume is based upon exciting scenes and adventures which actually occurred in the pioneer days of Australia.

"Mr. Newland has written a romance not one whit inferior to those of Mr. Bolderwood. . . . . 'Paving the Way' is a fine story finely told."—Publishers' Circular.

"An admirable Christmas present for a stirring lad."—Daily Chronicle.

"A good book of colonial adventure suited to boys and older people."—Manchester Guardian.

New Work by Mrs. WIGGIN, Author of "Timothy's Quest," "Cathedral Courtship," &c.

POLLY OLIVER'S PROBLEM. A Story for Girls. Imperial 16mo, with eight Illustrations, handsomely bound in bevelled cloth, with floral designs of poppies on side, gilt edges, 5s.

LONDON: GAY & BIRD, 5, Chandos-street, Strand,

Agents for American Books.

W. H. ALLEN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

WAR TIMES; or, The Lads of Craigross; and IN THE CANNON'S MOUTH. By SARAH TYTLER, Author of "Citoyenne Jacqueline."

Demy 8vo, Maps, Illustrated, 18s.

THROUGH TURKISH ARABIA. A Journey from the Mediterranean to London by the Euphrates and Tigris Valleys and the Persian Gulf. By H. SWAINSON CAWLEY, F.S.A.

Crown 8vo, Illustrated, 6s.

IN THE SHADOW OF THE PAGODA: Sketches of Burmese Life and Character. By E. D. CUMING.

"All these sketches are entertaining, and the reader may conscientiously say, as he closes the book, that while he has been assiduously delighted, he has been almost unconsciously instructed."—The Times.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE SHADRACH; and Other Stories. By Frank R. STOCKTON, Author of "Rudder Grange."

"There are always readers eager to welcome a new volume of stories by Mr Frank Stockton. In his stories the unexpected is always happening. There is a quaint turn both in phrase and in plot, and a humour which is peculiar yet agreeable."

Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

WOMEN OF RENOWN. By G. Barnett Smith, Author of "The Life and Enterprises of Ferdinand de Lesseps," &c.

"A collection of female intellect, artistic ability, strength of character, and influence rarely equalled in any previous time. The volume is extremely readable."—Daily Telegraph.

Crown 8vo, 5s.

HERE AND THERE IN ITALY AND OVER THE BORDER. By Signora LINDA VILLARI, Author of "Tuscan Hills and Venetian Waters," &c.

"A pleasant writer, who conveys a clear general impression of the places she visited."—Bradford Observer.

Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. With Illustrations by GORDON BROWNE.

THE BOOK OF GOOD COUNSELS. From the Sanscrit of the Hitopadésa. By Sir EDWIN ARNOLD, M.A., K.C.I.E., C.S.I., Author of "The Light of Asia," "The Light of the World," &c. (A Large-Paper Edition, limited to 100 copies, bound in white vellum gilt, 25s. net.)

"This charming re-issue of one of the most delightful volumes of extracts from the wonderful store of Sanscrit literature will doubtless secure a full-hearted welcome."—Home News.

New and Cheaper Edition, crown 8vo, with Portrait, 3s. 6d.

SIR MORELL MACKENZIE PHYSICIAN AND OPERATOR. A Memoir. Compiled and Edited from Private Papers and Personal Reminiscences. By the Rev. H. R. HAWEIS, M.A., Author of "Music and Morals," &c.

"Mr. Haweis has performed his task with skill and conscientiousness, and the result is one of the most vivid and entertaining books of the year."—Daily Chronicle.

A New Novel at all Libraries. 3 vols., crown 8vo.

ALICE OF THE INN. By J. W. Sherer, C.S.I., Author of "At Home and in India."

"The atmosphere of the old coaching days is admirably reproduced, and the writer has evidently had vivid sketches of the life of the past generation upon which to base the structure of his story."—Scotsman.

London: W. H. ALLEN & CO., Limited, 13, Waterloo-place.

Publishers to the India Office.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

BARABBAS: A Dream of the World's Tragedy.

In 3 vols. By MARIE CORELLI. THIRD EDITION.

"By the dignity of its conceptions, the reserve round the central figure, and the fine imagery of the scene and circumstance, the book has a far-off likeness to the Ammergau play. The studies of character are very striking. There is much that is elevating and devout in this remarkable work."—Guardian.

CANON WILBERFORCE writes: "A high-minded and very powerful effort to revivify by the legitimate use of the imagination a time-honoured history by depolarising it from the conventionality in which it had become crystallised."

CHEAP JACK ZITA. By S. BARING-GOULD, Author of "Mehalah." Three vols.

"Zita is as original and individual as 'Mehalah.' The author is at his best when he is at his intensest. At such moments he comes near to being a great writer; and there are several of them in 'Cheap Jack Zita.'"—Daily Chronicle.

"A powerful drama of human passions, the book abounds in strong situations, and by its vitality and power cannot fail to move all those who read it."—Westminster Gazette.

"We hail with delight a story worthy the author of 'Mehalah.' The mise-en-scène is vivid and admirable, and the personages are worthy of it. Mr. Baring-Gould in the present work is at his best, and his best is so good that not more than two or three living Englishmen can equal it."—National Observer.

THE STAR-GAZERS. By G. MANVILLE FENN, Author of "Eli's Children," &c. Three vols.

"A stirring romance."—Western Morning News.

"Mr. Fenn keeps the reader's attention on the alert till the end."—Court Journal.

"Mr. Manville Fenn has never written a more exciting, entertaining, and in many ways clever novel. Told with so much verve that its perusal by those who care for the novel of incident will be found engrossing."—Morning Post.

A WOMAN OF FORTY. By ESMÉ STUART, Author of "Muriel's Marriage." Two vols., crown 8vo.

"A complex character skilfully touched."—Black and White.

"The story is well written, and some of the scenes display great dramatic power."—Daily Chronicle.

CHEAPER EDITION OF "DODO."

DODO: A Detail of the Day. By E. F. BENSON. Twelfth Edition, in 1 vol., 6s. Few novels of late years have been as successful as "Dodo." In its two-volume form it has passed through ten editions, and has attracted by its brilliance universal attention.

ENGLISH POETRY FROM BLAKE TO BROWNING. By W. M. DIXON, M.A. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. A popular account of the poetry of the century.

THE STORY OF IRELAND. By STANDISH O'GRADY, Author of "Finn and his Companions." Small crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. A short sketch of Irish history, simply and picturesquely told.

METEOROLOGY. The Elements of Weather and Climate. By H. N. DICKSON, F.R.S.E., F.R. Met. Soc. Illustrated, 2s. 6d. New volume of the University Extension Series.

METHUEN & CO., 18, Bury-street, W.C.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, & COMPANY'S NEW BOOKS.

RUSSIA'S MARCH TOWARDS INDIA.
BY AN INDIAN OFFICER.

With New Map of Central Asia showing the disputed Territory.
2 vols., demy 8vo, cloth. [Immediately.

SECOND EDITIONS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

The HANDSOME HUMES. By WILLIAM BLACK. In 3 vols.
"Told with all the grace and charm of Mr. William Black's familiar narrative style. . . . A refreshing wholesomeness of thought and tone pervades Mr. Black's excellent book."—Daily Telegraph.

The EMIGRANT SHIP. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. In 3 vols.
"Movement and incident crowd in every chapter, and the prettiest little love story flows as an undercurrent among these billows of adventure."—Pall Mall Gazette.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, Christmas Number.
PRICE ONE SHILLING. PRINCIPAL CONTENTS.

An UNPUBLISHED WORK of SIR WALTER SCOTT: Private Letters of King James's Reign, with an Introduction by ANDREW LANG.

An ARTIST AMONG ANIMALS, elaborately illustrated by the Author, F. S. CHURCH, the great animal painter, who for many years has made a study of the habits of wild and domestic animals.

A BACHELOR'S CHRISTMAS: A Story. By ROBERT GRANT, the Author of "The Reflections of a Married Man." Illustrated by IRVING R. WILES.

CONSTANTINOPLE. By F. MARION CRAWFORD, Author of "Paul Patoff," illustrated by EDWIN L. WEEKS, both of whom made a journey to the Turkish capital especially to prepare this article.

A SEARCH for DELLA ROBBIAS in ITALY. By ALLAN MARQUAND. Illustrated in tint from his unequalled collection of photographs.

And many other Stories, Poems, and Descriptive Articles.

By the Author of "By the Western Sea."
"Books to read, and re-read with unflagging interest."

MARK TILLOTSON. 548 pp., 6s.
"Endued with vitality and individuality."—Times.
"A clever novel."—Athenæum.
"Vigorous writing on every page."—Pall Mall Gazette.

JOHN WESTACOTT. Popular Edition. 418 pp., 3s. 6d.
"Entrancing novel."—Liverpool Post.
"Exquisite literary work."—Scotsman.

OUR FOREIGN COMPETITORS. 1s.
"May be studied with great advantage at the present crisis."—The Times.

London; SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

Mr. Wm. Heinemann's Publications.

THE ART BOOK OF THE SEASON.

REMBRANDT: his Life, his Work, and his Time. By EMILE MICHEL. From the French by FLORENCE SIMMONDS. Edited by FREDERICK WEDMORE. In 2 vols., 4to, containing 33 Photogravures, 34 coloured plates, and 250 Text Illustrations. Price £2. 2s. net.
Also an Edition de Luxe, limited to 150 copies for Great Britain, printed on vellum paper. With India proof duplicates of the Photogravures, printed in Paris. Price £12. 12s. net. (A few copies only remain.)

A New Illustrated Book of Travel,

IN THE TRACK OF THE SUN. By F. D. THOMPSON. Readings from the Diary of a Globe-Trotter. Illustrations on almost every page, reproduced in the choicest possible manner from new and original photographs. The most attractive book of travel of the season, being of the widest possible interest. One volume, 4to. 25s.

NEW ONE-VOLUME NOVELS.
FOR THE HOLIDAYS AND CHRISTMAS.

RELICS: Fragments of a Life. By FRANCES MACNAB, Author of "No Reply." With Frontispiece, 6s.

THE LAST SENTENCE. By MAXWELL GRAY, Author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland." 6s.

APPASSIONATA: a Musician's Story. By ELSA D'ESTERRE KEELING. 6s.

FROM THE FIVE RIVERS: Stories of Native Life in India. By FLORA ANNIE STEEL, Author of "Miss Stuart's Legacy." 6s.

MADEMOISELLE MISS and Other Stories. By HENRY HARLAND, Author of "Mea Culpa." 3s. 6d.

WRECKERS AND METHODISTS: Cornish Stories. By H. D. LOWRY. 3s. 6d.

IN THE DWELLINGS OF SILENCE: A Romance of Russia. By WALTER KENNEDY. 3s. 6d.

UNDER THE YOKE. From the Bulgarian of IVAN VAZOFF. With introduction by EDMUND GOSSE. Cloth, 3s. 6d.; paper cover, 2s. 6d. (HEINEMANN'S INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY.)

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

BURTON'S ARABIAN NIGHTS.—What offers for Sir Richard Burton's supplemental Arabian Nights, Benares Edition 1888? Six vols. in original binding. Good condition. Publishers, Kamashastra Society for private circulation only. C. P. O., The Limes, March.

HURST & BLACKETT'S
PUBLICATIONS.

NEW WORK BY JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON.
In 2 vols. Crown 8vo. 21s.

A BOOK OF RECOLLECTIONS.
By JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON,
Author of "A Book about Lawyers," "A Book about Doctors," &c.

FOUR NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.
NOW READY AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

BROKEN FORTUNES. By HENRY CRESSWELL, Author of "A Modern Greek Heroine," "A Wily Widow," &c. 3 vols.

IN AN ALPINE VALLEY. By G. MANVILLE FENN, Author of "Mahme Nousie," "The Master of the Ceremonies," &c. 3 vols.

AT SOCIETY'S EXPENSE. By ALGERNON GISSING, Author of "A Moorland Idyl," "A Village Hampden," &c. 3 vols.

SECOND EDITION OF

TO RIGHT THE WRONG. By EDNA LYALL. Author of "Donovan," "We Two," "Knight-Errant," &c. 3 vols.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, Ltd., 13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEW WORKS OF FICTION.

NOW READY, THE SECOND EDITION OF

DIANA TEMPEST.
By Mary Cholmondeley.
Author of "The Danvers' Jewels," &c. In 3 vols., crown 8vo.
"Let every one who can enjoy an excellent novel, full of humour, touched with real pathos, and written with finished taste and skill, read 'Diana Tempest.'"—Athenæum.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "NEAR NEIGHBOURS."

The SWING of the PENDULUM.
By FRANCES MARY PEARD, Author of "The Baroness," &c. In 2 vols., crown 8vo.
"A charming story—Norwegian travel, autumn life in English country places, glimpses of London drawing-rooms, and the decks of a pleasure yacht, alternate very attractively in the refined and crisply written narrative."—Athenæum

NOW READY.

BRITOMART. By Mrs. Herbert MARTIN, Author of "Bonnie Leslie," &c. In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

A HEROINE in HOMESPUN: A CROFTER CHRONICLE. By FREDERIC BRETON, Author of "The Crime of Maunsell Grange," &c. In 2 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

TEMPE. By Constance Cotterell, Author of "Strange Gods." In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

OBSERVATIONS
ON THE EFFICACY OF BURNING SULPHUR FIRES
IN
EPIDEMICS OF CHOLERA, INFLUENZA,
And Other Zymotic Diseases.
WITH ADDENDA REGARDING DISEASE GERMS.
BY
SURGEON-GENERAL J. E. TUSON, M.D., F.R.C.S.,
H.M.'s Bengal Army (Retired). SIXTH EDITION.

HARRISON & SONS, Booksellers to the Queen and H.R.H. The Prince of Wales.
59, PALL MALL. 1893.

AT ALL NEWSAGENTS, BOOKSELLERS, AND BOOKSTALLS.

SNOWFLAKE'S ANNUAL, 1893.
Containing Stories by James Payn, Fergus Hume, Florence Marryat, Mabel Collins, F. C. Phillips, Mrs. Selby-Lowndes, B. L. Farjeon, Augusta Hancock, &c., &c. With numerous Illustrations by well-known Artists.
Price One Shilling. Per Parcels Post 1s. 4½d., or Book Post 1s. 5d.

LONDON: "THE LADY" OFFICE, 39 AND 40, BEDFORD STREET, STRAND, W.C.

MR. HENTY'S NEW STORY BOOKS.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S EVE: A Tale of the Huguenot Wars. By G. A. HENTY. With 8 Page Illustrations by H. J. Draper, and a Map.

"Mr. Henty has never drawn on his remarkable resources as a story-teller with better effect."—Saturday Review.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

THROUGH THE SIKH WAR: A Tale of the Conquest of the Punjaub. By G. A. HENTY. With 8 Page Illustrations by Hal Hurst, and a Map.

"This eminently readable story."—Spectator.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, olivine edges, 5s.

A JACOBITE EXILE: Being the Adventures of a Young Englishman in the Service of Charles XII of Sweden. By G. A. HENTY. With 8 Page Illustrations by Paul Hardy, and a Map.

"Mr. Henty has never produced a more truly historical romance, and scarcely even a more poignantly written narrative."—Academy.

London: BLACKIE & SON, Limited, Old Bailey.

ARCHDEACON FARRAR.
W. HOLMAN HUNT.
The Christmas Number of
THE ART JOURNAL.

SEE THE ART ANNUAL,
1893.
8 Full-page Plates, and many other Illustrations.

ARCHDEACON FARRAR.
W. HOLMAN HUNT.
The Christmas Number of
THE ART JOURNAL.

Price 2/6,
or
Cloth gilt, gilt edges, 5s.

Price 21s.

THE ART JOURNAL VOLUME, 1893. With nearly 500 Illustrations and 12 Full-page Etchings and Photogravures after the following eminent artists: Sir J. E. MILLAIS, Bart., R.A.; VICAT COLE, R.A.; HERBERT SCHMALZ; R. W. MACBETH, A.R.A.; E. A. WATERLOW, A.R.A.; G. H. BOUGHTON, A.R.A., &c. &c.

"Magnificently illustrated."—Yorkshire Post.

London: J. S. VIRTUE & CO., LIMITED, 26, Ivy-lane, E.C.

NEW NOVEL BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN.

A GENTLEMAN OF FRANCE:

Being the Memoirs of Gaston de Bonne, Sieur de Marsac.

By STANLEY J. WEYMAN,

Author of "The House of the Wolf." 3 vols., crown 8vo, 25s. 6d.

LONDON: LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO.

SECOND EDITION, Revised and Greatly Enlarged.

MODERN CREMATION: Its History and Practice. With Information relating to the recently Improved Arrangements made by the Cremation Society of England. By Sir H. THOMPSON, F.R.C.S., M.B. Lond., &c, President of the Society. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s.; paper, 1s.

British Medical Journal.—"This elegantly-printed little book, by the President of the Cremation Society of England, will be read with interest by all who wish for authoritative information as to what cremation really involves, and what facilities actually exist in England for carrying it out."

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO., Limited.
Paternoster House, Charing Cross-road, London, W.C.

Dr. YORKE DAVIES'S WORK on CORPULENCY. Sixth Edition, Sixteenth Thousand, revised, 1s., cloth 1s. 6d.

FOODS FOR THE FAT. The Dietetic Cure of Obesity. By N. E. YORKE DAVIES, L. Roy. Coll. Phys., Lond.
London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

Price 1s., post free.

DEAFNESS: Its Treatment by Massage (Hommel's Method), Baths, and Remedial Agents. With Cases of Nervous Deafness. By R. T. COOPER, M.A., M.D. London; JAMES EPPS & CO. (Ltd.), 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES.—Messrs. [illegible] to BE LET and sold by auction [illegible] Hyde [illegible] W.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE PATIENTS [illegible] Address, Mr. G. P. [illegible], 8, Lancaster place, Strand, W.C.

MASSAGE.—Mr. ARMSTRONG (Mason Therapeutist, Exeter) visits DAILY, [illegible] Park-lane, W.

A LADY is anxious to hear of a post as COMPANION or SECRETARY, for a year or two; fair musician and good linguist. Highest references given. Address, L. C. L., care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

TRAVELLERS TO BRINDISI AND THE EAST
WILL NOW FIND
BOLOGNA the most convenient stopping-place.
Coupé-lits can be booked beforehand by Mr. FRANK, Hotel Brun, for DAILY EXPRESS TRAIN, leaving Bologna 6.55. p.m., arriving at Brindisi 10.50 a.m.

THE INTERNATIONAL SLEEPING CAR and EUROPEAN EXPRESS TRAINS COMPANY. TRAINS DE LUXE AND ROYAL. SEASON 1894. MEDITERRANEAN EXPRESS EVERY SATURDAY and TUESDAY at 7.35 p.m. from the Gare de Lyons, Paris, arriving Nice 1.25 p.m. the following day. Special Corridor Train from Gare du Nord on arrival of 8.0 and 10.20 a.m. trains from London. Dinner served on the Trains on leaving Paris. Through Sleeping and Dining Cars, with covered vestibule inter-communication between the cars. Only Dining Car service this year. Three other Daily Services to the Riviera.

The Company's RIVIERA PALACE HOTEL, NICE (Camiez).

PENINSULAR EXPRESS EVERY FRIDAY 8.15 p.m., London to Brindisi. To Cairo under five days viâ P. and O. Steamers. Through Cars from Calais

The Company's GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL, BRINDISI.

SUD EXPRESS. MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS to Pau, Biarritz, Madrid, and Lisbon, &c.

The Company's GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL (Terminus), LISBON.

ORIENT EXPRESS. Daily to VIENNA, Three Times Weekly to CONSTANTINOPLE.

These Trains are composed exclusively of Sleeping, Saloon, and Dining Cars, comfortably warmed and thoroughly ventilated. For all tickets and full details of Trains and Hotels apply to Chief London Office, 122, Pall Mall, and City Office, 5, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

THE INTERNATIONAL NEWS COMPANY,
29 & 31, BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK,
Have Been Appointed our Agents in America for the sale of

"TRUTH."

Single copies can be obtained through any newsdealer in the United States and Canada, or by applying direct to the International News Co., where yearly subscriptions will also be received. Newsdealers throughout the United States and Canada can obtain supplies of TRUTH by applying to the wholesale agents.

"TRUTH"

CAN BE OBTAINED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING AT

THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,
242, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S.; London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY,
LIMITED.

FOUNDED IN 1842.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE (either New or Second-hand) of the BEST ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from One Guinea per annum. LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for books exchangeable by the Library Messengers) from Two Guineas per annum. COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from Two Guineas per annum. N.B.—Two or three friends may unite in One Subscription, and thus lessen the cost of carriage. LIBRARY BOXES GRATIS.

TOWN AND VILLAGE CLUBS SUPPLIED ON LIBERAL TERMS.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books Gratis and post free.

SALE DEPARTMENT.

All the Leading Books of Past Seasons are on Sale, second-hand, at greatly Reduced Prices. LISTS GRATIS AND POST FREE.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

80 to 84, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON;
241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; and 48, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Mansion House End).

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table-d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HÔTEL METROPOLE.—On the East Cliff, facing the sea, three minutes' from East Station. The largest, and most magnificent Hotel in Bournemouth. Now open to receive visitors. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.
GEORGE ALEXANDER, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 12s. to 15s. per day.
According to position of rooms selected.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Lees. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 789.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

PORT OROTAVA, Teneriffe.—HOTEL MARTIANEZ (late GRAND).—First-class, standing in a beautiful garden. Shady verandahs, large public and private rooms. Billiards, tennis. Good cooking, good wines, excellent spring water.
Manager, J. R. EGGER.

PORTRUSH, co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL (B. and N.C. Rly). Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing, sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner. French cuisine. Combined Railway and Hotel Tickets from Belfast.—Illustrated tariff on application to MANAGER.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL.—First and leading hotel in St. Leonards. Unequalled position, detached, faces sea, due south. Modern improvements, passenger lift, electric light in every room, handsomely furnished. Home comforts. Terms moderate.—Address, MANAGER.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hôte at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the
ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

THE CROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.

TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.

(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.

THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.

SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.
Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.
NO SUPPERS.
TELEPHONE No. 3,507.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.
(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).

Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn and Lincoln's Inn Fields. A high-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, happily situated, having all modern conveniences and a moderate tariff. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d., at separate tables.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Write for tariff.

ALBANY HOTEL
(ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.

Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Only Hotel with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

ILFRACOMBE.
Warmest Sea-side Winter Resort in England.

ILFRACOMBE HOTEL. The principal Hotel in Ilfracombe.

First-class return tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. Railway, from 1st November to 14th March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance at the ILFRACOMBE HOTEL, £5 5s. each. Available for one month. Express trains leave Waterloo 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Ask for Hotel Tickets, available by all trains.

WHERE SHALL WE SPEND 'XMAS?
At the GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.

Every home comfort. Inclusive terms, per day or week; per week, £3. Large Ball-room for use of visitors. Finest sea views in Jersey, and the largest and best-appointed Hotel in Channel Isles. Hot and cold sea water baths. Skating Rink. For tariff, address—
SYDNEY ROGERS, Manager and Secretary.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL, 180 Apartments, Patronised by H. R. H. the Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne, K.T. Extensive Structural Alterations and Decorative Repairs have been carried out and 30 NEW BEDROOMS ADDED SINCE OCTOBER, 1891. The entire system of drainage has been re-modelled and re-constructed, and the most improved sanitary appliances fitted to all Bath-rooms, &c. The Hotel stands in its own private gardens of 2½ acres, faces the sea, and is only five minutes' from the Harbour in the lower part of the town and Shorncliffe New West End Station, and is most convenient for Continental travellers.—For tariff charges, &c., please address the Proprietor.

THE RUNNACLEAVE, ILFRACOMBE.—Highest average Winter Temperature in England. South aspect. 120 Beautifully-appointed rooms, thoroughly warmed by hot-water apparatus; theatre in constant use; yacht, tennis, billiards, photographic dark room, and indoor skating rink free of charge. Moderate tariff.

CIMIEZ (Nice), RIVIERA PALACE HOTEL. Owned and managed by the International Sleeping Car Company. 10 minutes from Nice station. 200 apartments. Full south. Absolutely sheltered. English sanitation. Electric light. Lift. Pension.—Full particulars, & tariff, to reserve accommodation, and for tickets for the journey, apply I. S. C. CO., 122, Pall Mall, London, S.W.

LISBON.—GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL (Terminus). Owned and managed by the International Sleeping Car Company. Luxurious hotel. 160 apartments. Moderate tariff. Pension. English sanitation. Fronting the Avenida.—For full particulars, to reserve accommodation, and for tickets for the journey (Sud express), apply I. S. C. Co. 122, Pall Mall, London, S.W.

MADEIRA.—REID'S HOTELS, Santa Clara, Miles's Carmo Hortas, New Hotel. First-class, in finest situations. Large gardens. Tennis courts. Billiards. Sea bathing. Modern sanitation. All steamers met. Pamphlet free.—PASSMORE, 124, Cheapside, London, E.C.

AMUSEMENTS.

WULFF'S GREAT CONTINENTAL CIRCUS, at BENGLER'S, Argyll street W. Every Evening at 8. Doors open 7.30. At every performance the SIXTY HORSES performing in the arena at one time, introduced by MISS MAUDE FRANCESCO. Twenty Clowns, and the Singing Pony "Punch." Matinees, Mondays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, at 2.20. Doors open at 2. Box-office open 10 till 4, and at Libraries. Telephone No. 3[illegible].

CRYSTAL PALACE.—GRAND CHRISTMAS PANTOMIME, JACK AND THE BEANSTALK, in active preparation, under direction of Mr. OSCAR BARRETT. First production on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23rd, at 3. Seats may now be booked for BOXING DAY and EVERY AFTERNOON, at 3, and for Thursday and Saturday Evenings, on and from December 25th. Numbered Seats, 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 5s.; unnumbered seats, 1s. and 1s. 6d.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—RETURN of BLONDIN to the scene of his first British triumphs! M. Blondin, who will complete his seventieth year in February next, will repeat the marvellous feats first performed by him on the High Rope across the boiling chasm of Niagara in 1859 and at the Crystal Palace in 1861 (33 years ago), on BOXING DAY and EVERY EVENING during the CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS. NO EXTRA CHARGE.

LAWRIE & Co., 15, Old Bond street, W.
EXHIBITION OF CHOICE PICTURES,
including
"THE BATH OF VENUS,"
by
E. BURNE JONES.
NOW OPEN FROM 10 to 6 DAILY.

THE GRAFTON GALLERIES, 8, Grafton-street, Bond-street. EXHIBITION of FRENCH ARTISTS in DECORATIVE ART. NOW OPEN, 10 to 6.—Admission 1s.

WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS.—A Choice COLLECTION, including Works by ROSA BONHEUR, ALMA TADEMA, R.A., FORTUNY, Sir JOHN GILBERT, R.A., &c., &c., ON VIEW, in the First Room, at THOMAS McLEAN'S Gallery, 7, Haymarket (next the Theatre).

NIAGARA in WINTER.—Panorama and Diorama of the Ice Palace at Montreal.—NIAGARA HALLS, St. James's Park Station. DAILY, 10 to 10 p.m. Admission 1s. Children 6d. Tickets, including admission, all District and Metropolitan Railway Stations.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station, in connection with all railways. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations.—New Portrait Models of the late PRINCE ALEXANDER OF BULGARIA and their Majesties the EMPEROR of RUSSIA, the EMPEROR of GERMANY, the EMPEROR of AUSTRIA, and the KING of ITALY. Music all day. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Chamber of Horrors, 6d. Open 9 to 10.

CONJURERS, PUNCH & JUDY, MAGIC LANTERNS, VENTRILOQUISTS
Professors Bellairs, Hilton, and 1,000 Refined Entertainers.
Send for Illustrated Price List, gratis.
THE SOCIETY OF ENTERTAINERS,
Mention this Paper.] 44, Upper Baker St., London, N.W.

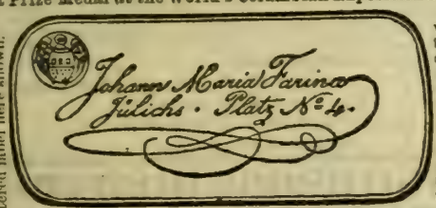
GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.

First Prize Medal at the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago, 1893.

Known in all parts of the world by the lawfully registered label here shown.



All Consumers wishing to obtain the Genuine Eau de Cologne distilled strictly according to the original recipe of the inventor, my ancestor, are cautioned to pay special attention to this label and to my Firm.

JOHANN MARIA FARINA,
Julich Place No. 4, Cologne o/Rhine.
Patented Purveyor to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and to several other Imperial and Royal Courts.

STATHAM'S WATERPROOFS.

Chesterfield Coat 21/- | Regulation (Cape all round) 30/-

CARRIAGE PAID.
Any size up to 52 inches long. Larger sizes, 1/- extra for every two inches.
Best make, thoroughly Waterproof, and adapted for any climate.
Book of Patterns of all kinds of Tweed, Cashmere, and other Waterproof Cloths post free for 6 stamps (returnable).

H. STATHAM & CO.,
11, CORPORATION STREET, MANCHESTER.

AMUSEMENTS.

LYCEUM THEATRE. Sole Lessee, Mr. HENRY IRVING. On BOXING NIGHT will be produced Mr. OSCAR BARRETT'S FAIRY PANTOMIME, CINDERELLA. TWO PERFORMANCES daily at 1.30 and 7.30. Box-office open daily 10 till 5. Seats can be secured by letter or telegram Mr. Joseph Hurst, Acting Manager.—LYCEUM THEATRE.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—MR. TREE,
Sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING (for a limited number of Nights), at 8.15,
CAPTAIN SWIFT.
Mr. Tree, Messrs. Henry Kemble, Chas. Allan, Holman Clark, C. M. Hallard, Montagu, and F. H. Macklin; Mesdames Carlotta Addison, Fanny Coleman, Irene Vanbrugh, and Mrs. Tree.
MATINÉE of CAPTAIN SWIFT SATURDAY NEXT, December 16, at 2.30.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) from 10 till 5.—HAYMARKET.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S THEATRE. Under the Management of Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS. Nightly, at 7.30, A LIFE OF PLEASURE, by Henry Pettitt and Sir Augustus Harris. Transferred from Drury Lane Theatre (full particulars see Daily Papers). Box-office open all day.

SAVOY THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.15, and Every Saturday Afternoon, at 2.30, UTOPIA, LIMITED, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan. Doors open at 7.45 and 2. Box-office open from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.—R. D'OYLY CARTE, Proprietor and Manager.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers.—A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE. Every Evening, at 8. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, R. Harding, J. Carter, H. Russell, and Arthur Williams; Mesdames Mary Rorke, Alma Stanley, and Agnes Thomas.—Box-office 10 to 6. Doors open at 7.30.

GARRICK THEATRE.—Mr. JOHN HARE, Lessee and Manager.—DIPLOMACY, adapted by Clement Scott and B. C. Stephenson. TO-NIGHT, at 8. (LAST FOUR NIGHTS.) Mr. Bancroft, Mr. F. Robertson, Mr. A. Cecil, Mr. G. Hare, Mr. Trent, Mr. Mayeur, and Mr. John Hare; Miss K. Rorke, Miss E. Robins, Lady Monckton, Miss Luck, and Mrs. Bancroft. Box-office 10 to 5. Last Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.

COURT THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—To-Night and Every Evening, a New Triple Bill. At 8.15, GOOD-BYE; at 9, FAITHFUL JAMES; and at 10, UNDER THE CLOCK. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.30. Doors open 2. Box-office open 10 to 5. Telephone No. 3,031.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.10,
THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY,
By Arthur W. Pinero. Doors open 7.45; carriages, 11.
MORNING PERFORMANCE SATURDAY NEXT, December 16, and WEDNESDAY, December 20, at 2.30.
Box-office open 10 to 5. Seats may be booked by letter, telegram, or telephone. ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square.—Every Night, at 8 (doors 7.30), THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL. Miss Ada Rehan as Lady Teazle; Mr. Wm. Farren as Sir Peter. MATINÉES Saturday Next, December 16, Wednesday, December 20, and Wednesday, December 27. "Never before has this fine comedy had a more beautiful setting."—Daily News. Box-office daily 9 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries. Monday, January 1, THE COUNTRY GIRL. Miss Rehan as Peggy.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.30, Musical Comedy, words by Owen Hall, Lyrics by Harry Greenbank, Music by Sydney Jones, entitled A GAIETY GIRL. Messrs. C. Hayden Coffin, Eric Lewis, Bradfield, Kaye, Bantock, D'Orsay, Porteous, Rimma, and Harry Monkhouse; Mmes. Decima Moore, Juliette Nesville, Aida Jenoure, Cutler, Studholme, Pounds, Phelps, Maud Hobson, Massey, Robinson, Gorst. At 7.45, SIXES. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

THE TRAFALGAR THEATRE.—Sole Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. FRANK WYATT (Miss Violet Melnotte). Under the Management of Mr. CHARLES H. HAWTREY.—Every Evening, at 9, a New Farcical Comedy, entitled TOM, DICK, AND HARRY, by Mrs. R. Pacheco. Preceded, at 8.10, by PICKWICK. Mr. Charles Hawtrey and Miss Jessie Bond. Matinée Every Saturday, at 3 o'clock. Box-office open from 10 to 10.—Business Manager, Mr. E. F. Bradley.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.15, Vol. II. of MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine, H. Hasleim, and Charles Danby; Misses Jennie McNulty, Agnes Hewitt, Maggie Roberts, and Lettie Lind. Preceded, at 7.45, by Rex Harley, the inimitable Mimic of Popular Actors. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30.—Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

TOOLE'S THEATRE.—To-night, at 9 o'clock, MRS. OTHELLO, by the late Fred Leslie and Arthur Shirley. Miss Fanny Brough, Mr. Charles Glenney, Miss Cicely Richards, Mr. Julian Cross, Mr. W. H. Day, Mr. G. Raiemond, Miss Blanche Horlock, Miss Florence Melville. Preceded, at 8.15, by THE BROTHERS. Doors open 7.45. Seats at all Libraries. Box-office open daily. MATINÉE, Wednesday and Saturday, at 3 o'clock.
There will be NO PERFORMANCE of MRS. OTHELLO during next week. MRS. OTHELLO will be TRANSFERRED to the VAUDEVILLE THEATRE on BOXING NIGHT.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.30.—DON QUIXOTE, at 10 o'clock, New Grand Dramatic Ballet, in Four Tableaux, At 8.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Operatic Music, Varieties, and Specialities. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 35,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Two GRAND BALLETS.—At 7.50, KATRINA, and at 10.20, THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME. Grand Varieties. The new entrance from Leicester-street is now open. Doors open at 7.30. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. ALBERT CHEVALIER, the Original Wrestling Lion (for Two Weeks only), Little Tich, Fannie Leslie, Harry Randall, Carl Hertz, Mdlle. D'Alton, Lucy Clarke, James Fawn, the Three Romas, Nellie Navette, Herbert Campbell, Ada Vere, Billie Barlow; Brown, Newland, and Leclerq, Ada Blanche, Harry Freeman, George Robey, Alice Lloyd, Fred Mason, Arthur Rigby, Sells and Young.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

HOSPITALS AND APPEALS.

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL, PADDINGTON, W.

Is striving to do its Great Work WELL, with INADEQUATE MEANS.

Even the smallest addition to its funds will be welcomed, and will be most gratefully acknowledged by the Secretary, Mr. THOMAS RYAN, at the Hospital.

KING'S COLLEGE HOSPITAL, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, W.C.

Patron - - - - H. M. The QUEEN.

THE Committee of Management earnestly ask for CONTRIBUTIONS towards the Special Five Years' Maintenance Fund of £50,000, to pay off the DEBT of £6,000, and to prevent the lamentable necessity of materially reducing the accommodation in the hospital. Its available capital is exhausted.

N. BROMLEY, Warden.

THE NATIONAL REFUGES FOR HOMELESS AND DESTITUTE CHILDREN

And "ARETHUSA" and "CHICHESTER" Training Ships,

164, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.C.

PRESIDENT - - - - THE EARL OF JERSEY, G.C.M.G.

As this Society is a National one, not simply Metropolitan, admission is ensured to a destitute child from whatever part of the kingdom it may come.

900 CHILDREN MAINTAINED. FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED.

H. BRISTOW WALLEN, Secretary. HENRY G. COPELAND, Finance and Deputation Secretary.

North-West London Hospital,

Kentish Town Road.

Patron.
H.R.H. Princess Christian.
Chairman.
Rev. E. J. Ponsonby.
Treasurer.
George Herring, Esq.

The only Institution of the kind in this densely-populated district. Last year there were 555 In-patients and 39,606 cases as Out-patients.

Income from Annual Subscriptions is less than £900; yearly expenditure, £3,500; leaving a deficiency of over £2,600 to be made up each year by special benefactions.

FUNDS ARE GREATLY NEEDED.

ALFRED CRASKE, Secretary.

INSTITUTED 1740.

LONDON HOSPITAL, WHITECHAPEL, E.

776 BEDS.

Funds Urgently Needed.

£40,000 Required Each Year from Voluntary Contributions.

BANKERS { ROBARTS, LUBBOCK & CO. / GLYN, MILLS, CURRIE & CO.

J. H. HALE, Esq., Chairman. G. Q. ROBERTS, House Governor.

TO THE CHARITABLE.—FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED for the

BRITISH HOSPITAL FOR MENTAL DISORDERS AND BRAIN DISEASES

(Forbes Winslow Memorial), 20S, EUSTON ROAD, N.W.

President—THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE.

Vice Presidents—The Earl of Hardwicke, Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, M.P., Alfred de Rothschild, Esq., Dr. Hermann Adler, Chief Rabbi, Rev. R. W. L. Tollemache Tollemache, M.A., &c.

ENTIRELY FREE to the POOR. 15,000 Attendances Registered.

WILLIAM J. WHELAN, Secretary

SUFFERING CHILDREN.

THE BOARD OF MANAGEMENT OF THE

CITY ORTHOPÆDIC HOSPITAL

earnestly appeal for Contributions to enable them to admit to Cots, vacant for want of Funds, a number of little ones in intense agony with their bodily ailments.

The Hospital is National, Poor, totally Unendowed, and heavily mortgaged.

Secretary, ERNEST DEREUTH, Hatton Garden, E.C.

METROPOLITAN HOSPITAL, Kingsland-road, N.E.

Patron: H.R.H. The PRINCE of WALES.

Chairman: JOSEPH FRY, Esq. Treasurer: The Right Hon. Lord BATTERSEA.

Hon. Treasurer: Sir E. HAY CURRIE.

The Committee most earnestly appeal for Funds to pay off pressing Liabilities and to re-open the 24 beds closed during the past year. The hospital could accommodate 166 in-patients, but only 54 beds are at present available.

Bankers { GLYN, MILLS & Co. / LLOYD'S BANK, LTD. CHARLES H. BYERS, Secretary.

CANCER WARDS at the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL, Mortimer-street, W.—The WEEKLY BOARD make an URGENT APPEAL for FUNDS in Aid of these Wards. There are 34 beds set apart for patients suffering from this terrible malady. They are admitted without letters of recommendation. Everything that human skill and kindness can suggest is provided, and sufferers are permitted to remain until relieved by art or released by death. Bankers, Messrs. Coutts & Co.

F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

ROYAL EAR HOSPITAL, Frith-street, Soho. Founded 1816.

Patron—HER MAJESTY. President—THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Funds (which are urgently required to meet current expenses) and also contributions to the New Building Fund, will be thankfully received by LLOYD'S BANK (Twining's Branch), 9, Strand; or by the Treasurer, T. PALLISTER YOUNG, LL.B., 29, Mark Lane, E.C.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.—The long-continued prevalence of scarlet fever is causing a heavy strain on the resources of this Hospital. The benevolent are earnestly asked for HELP. Annual subscribers of a Guinea and upwards for more than a year, as well as donors of Ten Guineas or more in one sum, are Governors, and are entitled to free treatment for their domestic servants. Sufferers residing outside the metropolitan area can only be received into the Hospital from the families of Governors.

Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by the Secretary, at the Hospital, MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.

Bankers—Prescott, Dimsdale, & Co., 50, Cornhill.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM for IDIOTS.

Nearly 600 afflicted cases are receiving special care and education.

FUNDS urgently REQUIRED.

Special provision is made for the reception of Private Cases on payment.

H. GERARD HOARE, Esq., J.P., Treasurer.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.

Cheques or Postal Orders may be crossed Messrs. Hoare, Bankers, 37, Fleet-street, E.C.

Offices, 36, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

NATIONAL SOCIETY for the PREVENTION of CRUELTY to CHILDREN.

The object of the Society is that no British child's life shall be unendurable.

Patron—The QUEEN.

250 branches of the Society exist in England, Wales, and Ireland.
20,000,000 of population is embraced in those branches.
£45,000 a year is expended in them.
The Society has investigated:—
9,817 cases of violence.
23,021 cases of neglect and starvation.
4,809 cases of exposure for begging.
1,676 cases of immorality.
1,241 cases of dangerous performances, &c.
24,407 of these cases it has warned.
5,000 it has prosecuted.
4,793 of which resulted in convictions.
These were in all ranks of life.
93,359 children were involved in the cases—all of whose lives have been rendered happier; who have been better clothed and fed and better treated.
The vastness and blessedness of the work should commend itself to every man and woman in the land.
The work is urgent and greatly increasing.

Hon. Director—Rev. BENJAMIN WAUGH, 7, Harpur-street, London, W.C.
Treasurer—J. H. D. Ryder.
Auditors—Gerard Van De Linde & Son.
Bankers—Coutts & Co.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL.

CONTRIBUTIONS are EARNESTLY SOLICITED towards meeting the EXPENSES of this unendowed Hospital, and will be gratefully received by the Bankers, Messrs. Drummond, or by the Secretary.

MRS. HILTON'S CRÈCHE.—To Mothers who know all that babies need. Will you kindly send Christmas gifts to my babies, who need everything?—Address, Mrs. HILTON, The Crèche, 12, 14, and 16, Stepney-causeway, Commercial-road, E.

THE FRIEND IN NEED.—TO GENTLEMEN.—The Managers of a Refuge in Whitechapel, which shelters 160 homeless men nightly, earnestly APPEAL for GIFTS of CAST-OFF CLOTHING.—Address, SECRETARY, 27, Kilburn Park-road, London, N.W.

ESTABLISHED 1818.

Ten Prize Medals.

PETER F. HEERING'S

COPENHAGEN

CHERRY BRANDY.

Sold by all Wine Merchants, and at all Bars and Hotels

COLEMAN'S WINCARNIS

Or Liebig's Extract of MEAT & MALT WINE

Over 2,000 Testimonials received from Medical Men.

Highest Award Chicago Exhibition.

Sole Manufacturers—

COLEMAN & CO., LTD., NORWICH AND LONDON.

MAPPIN & WEBB'S PATENT TABLE KNIVES.

SAMPLES & PRICES FREE.

"UNEQUALLED FOR HARD WEAR."

Only London Addresses, 158, OXFORD ST. W.
2, QUEEN VICTORIA ST. E.C.
(FACING THE MANSION HOUSE.)

MANUFACTORY—NORFOLK STREET, SHEFFIELD.

You Want a Typewriter.

TRADE MARK.

REGISTERED.

Does it not strike you that a machine invented by one of the first mechanical geniuses of the day,
That in two years has obtained an unprecedented sale,
That has been adopted by one Emperor, one King, several Princes and Princesses, and 30,000 ordinary users.
That has obtained the highest awards wherever exhibited,
That has gained Five Gold Medals,
That has even found its way into the Vatican at Rome,
That has received hundreds of testimonials,
That has found profitable occupation for thousands of operators,
That has been adopted by the principal Railway Co.'s, Chief Engineering Firms, Technical and other Schools,
That is the easiest to learn, does the best work, and
Has no filthy ink ribbon,

Contractors to

Her Majesty's Government,
The Colonial Governments,
The Indian Government,
The French Government,
and others.

Is the Typewriter you Want?

THE YŌST IS ALL THIS AND MORE.

Full Particulars from—

YŌST TYPEWRITER COMPANY, Limited, 40, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

BRANCH ADDRESSES:—MANCHESTER: 3, Deansgate. BIRMINGHAM: 73, Temple-row. LIVERPOOL: 67A, Lord-street. GLASGOW: 112, St. Vincent-street. BELFAST: 9, Rosemary-street. LEEDS: 21, New Station-street. PARIS: 36, Boulevard des Italiens.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,
Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

BAMBOO FURNITURE
(SUPERIOR QUALITY)

MAPLE & Co LTD.

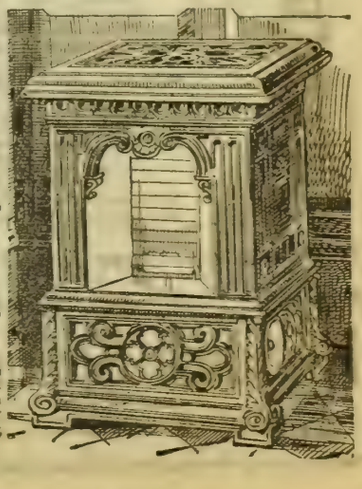
TOTTENHAM COURT RD LONDON

The Largest and Most Convenient

FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT IN THE WORLD

BAMBOO AND WICKER FURNITURE

SPECIAL CATALOGUE OF NOVELTIES FREE



THE NORHAM CARD TABLE in bamboo, with lacquered top; lined cloth; well for cards or papers, and undertray; top measures 24 by 14 in.; if open, 28 by 24 in.; 30 in. high.
£1. 9s. 6d.

THE ARCADIAN OIL WARMING STOVE, in glazed Doulton ware, constructed on scientific principles, absolutely safe, entirely free from smell; costs one farthing per hour.
£2. 18s. 6d.

CARPETS.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

AXMINSTER PILE CARPETS,
2/11 (American) 3/11 to 4/9

WILTON PILE CARPETS,
3/9 to 4/6

BRUSSELS CARPETS,
2/1 to 3/9

TAPESTRY CARPETS,
1/9 to 2/6

LINOLEUM,
1/- to 4/- per square yard.

DECCAN RUGS,
8/9 each.

CATALOGUES FREE.

TRELOAR & SONS

LUDGATE HILL.

THE HOMACOUSTIC.

WHAT IS THE HOMACOUSTIC?

THE HOMACOUSTIC is a contrivance connected with Speaking Tubes, which entirely supersedes for indoor purposes not only the Telephone, but all other existing arrangements for indoor inter-communication.

THE HOMACOUSTIC
Is Automatic, not Mechanical. Once fixed always in Working Order. Its first cost is its last cost.

WITH THE HOMACOUSTIC
There is no blowing into pipes. The automatic whistle is always in position. One speaks and listens at the same time. The tube is closed when not in actual use. Ordinary speaking tubes can be utilised.

ONE (No. 4) HOMACOUSTIC
Places the speaker in communication with any Number of Rooms.

THE HOMACOUSTIC
Is of special value and inestimable convenience not only in business establishments, but in all Private Houses.

The Homacoustic Saves Time, Temper, and Trouble.

For Detailed Particulars, Copies of Testimonials, &c., write to the MANAGER.

Homacoustic Speaking Tube Co.,

22, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Where every description of Homacoustic Instrument is on view.

The Burglar Bewildered.

HOW?

THROUGH THE

HOMACOUSTIC

WHAT IS THE HOMACOUSTIC?

The HOMACOUSTIC is a contrivance connected with Speaking Tubes, which entirely supersedes, for indoor purposes, not only the Telephone, but all other existing arrangements for indoor inter-communication.

HOW WAS THE BURGLAR BEWILDERED?

The owner of the house fortunately had a Homacoustic commutator fixed in his bedroom. This commutator placed him in direct communication, not only with his butler's rooms, but with seven other rooms in the house.

Directly he heard the Burglars he explained the state of affairs through the Homacoustic to his butler, and to the occupants of the other rooms; arranged what should be done, and they were thus all enabled to pounce on the Burglars together, and catch them red-handed, without their being even aware that their presence was so much as suspected. There was no ringing of electric bells, no creeping about the house to warn the inmates, NO PERSONAL DANGER.

The Homacoustic is far more dreaded by Burglars than any existing arrangement of "Protection from Burglary," for whereas when an electric bell rings, though it may probably arouse the inmates, it also acts as a warning to the Burglars themselves to be off.

NO HOUSE IS REALLY SAFE
— WITHOUT THE —

HOMACOUSTIC

Independent of its protective advantages, the Homacoustic is invaluable in all private houses for everyday use, and in all properly arranged business premises it is an absolute necessity.

The Homacoustic is automatic, not mechanical. Once fixed, always in working order. Its first cost is its last cost.

With the Homacoustic there is no blowing into pipes. The automatic whistle is always in position. One speaks and listens at the same time. The tube is closed when not in actual use. Ordinary speaking tubes can be utilised.

The HOMACOUSTIC SAVES TIME, TEMPER, & TROUBLE.

HOMACOUSTIC SPEAKING TUBE COMPANY

22, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.

SCOTTADIE

THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE

115 & 115A REGENT STREET
LONDON W

For —
Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Mantles
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns

Telegraphic Address—Scott Adie London

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET

Packed free of charge on receipt of cheque.

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., In all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes.

A REALLY USEFUL
CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

JULES Established 1796. AY, FRANCE.

CAMUSET'S CHAMPAGNE

The Lancet says:—"We have analysed it, and are able to give it unqualised praise. It is free from adulteration of any kind, and possesses a very delicate flavour."

Price, 72s. per Dozen, Cash.
Delivered at any railway station in United Kingdom.
22, Great Tower Street, London, E.C.

"THE NEW WIRE MAT."

FELTEN & GUILLEAUME'S
GALVANISED
PATENT 'SPIRALIUM' WIRE MAT.
Practically indestructible

Write for Prices of this and their
'CONVOLVULUS' Wire Mat to
Sole Agents, W. F. DENNIS & Co., 11 Billiter St., London, E.C.

THE WINDOW

Is the most important thing to be considered in the decoration of a house. The eye naturally turns to the opening by which light enters the room, and in the ideal home the view from that opening and everything that enters it should be attractive. The most beautiful thing to be seen through a window is a garden of flowers, but absorbents of London [illegible] in [illegible] countries are so placed that their windows commonly present very different spectacles—dreary streets, chimneys and chimney pots. Glacier Window Decoration will add beauty to the window at little cost, and no alteration of sashes is required. It is the only effective and reliable substitute for stained glass.

Hundreds of specimens can be seen, and all information can be had at

THE GLACIER DEPÔTS,
153, Piccadilly, W., and 56, Queen Victoria St., E.C.

WOODS' PATENT GALVANISED STEEL WIRE MATTRESSES & BEDSTEADS

Carriage Paid, and Liberal Cash Discount allowed.

Guaranteed for Five Years.

EXHIBITED CARRYING
ONE TON
At LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and other EXHIBITIONS.

SHOW ROOMS:
128, BOLD ST., LIVERPOOL.

Catalogues and Prices free on application to the

LONGFORD WIRE, IRON & STEEL CO., LTD.
WARRINGTON.

Please mention this Paper.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?

PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement, and biliousness.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
,, WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors,
70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

HIGHEST AWARD, CHICAGO EXHIBITION, 1893

21/- 21/-

THE "CHELSEA" DINNER SERVICE.

Groups of Flowers in Electric Blue on Ivory Ground.

218

"Cottage Set," as pattern (50 pieces) £1 1 0

Full Set for 12 persons (108 pieces) £3 3 0

If for the country, 1s. 3d. and 2s. 6d. extra for package.

DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, AND TEA SERVICES.

ALFRED B. PEARCE,
39, Ludgate-hill, London
Established 1706.

EXHAUSTION OF BRAIN AND MUSCLE; INSOMNIA.

These are some of the signs of NEURASTHENIA, or NERVE COMPLAINTS. The Modern Treatment is to RESTORE and BUILD UP the Shattered Nervous System by a daily use of

COCA-TONIC-CHAMPAGNE
(LAURENT-PERRIER).

"I consider it most beneficial to the health of all such "hard workers as myself. It is a most delightful drink, "which leaves no injurious effects; and of its nerve-restoring "powers as a tonic, I cannot speak too highly."

George Augustus Sala

SOLD BY CHEMISTS AND WINE MERCHANTS.
Pints 45/- per Doz.; Half-Pints 24/- per Doz.

THE IDEAL TONIC FOR INFLUENZA.

Descriptive Pamphlet and Full Reports post free from the Sole Consignees—HERTZ & COLLINGWOOD, 4, SUSSEX PLACE, LONDON, E.C.

THE Best Genuine EAU DE COLOGNE

THE 4711 BRAND

12/6 or 13/- Case of six bottles carriage paid in U.K.

INVIGORATING.

REFRESHING.

Indispensable for Toilet and Sick Rooms.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

Of most Dealers in Perfumes, or from

THE 4711 DEPOT,
62, NEW BOND ST., W.

Address, Mr. T. REUTER, Manager.

THE 4711 BRAND

FOR

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS &c.

SAVORY & MOORE'S

DATURA TATULA.

Cigars and Cigarettes—Boxes, 3s., 6s., 8s., and 15s., Tobacco—Tins, 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. For Non-Smokers, Pastilles and Powder for Burning and Inhalation, Tins, each containing a censer for burning, 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s. Of Chemists everywhere.

JEWSBURY & BROWN'S Oriental Tooth Paste.

White, Sound Teeth, Healthy Gums to Old Age.

CAUTION.—The only genuine is JEWSBURY & BROWN'S.
Pots 1/6 and 2/6. All Chemists.
60 YEARS IN USE.

ABSOLUTELY THE FINEST TONIC PICK-ME-UP.

Marza Wine

THE ONLY SCIENTIFIC AND PALATABLE IRON AND COCA WINE.

Highly recommended by the "Lancet" and Medical Profession for Anæmia, Insomnia, Debility, Exhaustion, Indigestion, Vocal Fatigue, Neuralgia, and Loss of Vital Force. Invigorating, Sustaining, and Vitalising. Checks and prevents Colds, Chills, and all Lung Weaknesses. A Digestive, Tone-Giving, and Health Promoting Stimulant for Convalescents after Accouchement, Influenza, Fevers, &c. Invaluable for Athletes, Young Children, and all below par, unstrung, fagged, and weary. Price 3s. 9d. per Bottle, 42s. per dozen, everywhere, or sent Carriage Paid by the

MARZA COMPANY, LIMITED, 19 & 21, WILSON STREET, LONDON, E.C.

DESCRIPTIVE PAMPHLETS FREE ON APPLICATION.

FARM AND COLONIZATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

DIRECTORS:

WILLIAM WRIGHT, Esq., J.P., Wollaton, Nottingham, Chairman.
FRANCIS W. FOX, Esq., 14, Dean's Yard, Westminster.
HAROLD J. RECKITT, Esq., J.P., Winestead Hall, Hull.
JOHN BROOK BRAY, Esq., Clapham, Polegate, Sussex.
BENJAMIN GLASGOW, Esq., 77, Oxford gardens, North Kensington, W.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of supplying RELIABLE INFORMATION to intending settlers abroad, and also to give them introductions to the Agents of the Company, who can assist them in any difficulty, and BEFRIEND them until they are sufficiently established to rely upon themselves.

EMPLOYMENT WILL BE FOUND where a living can be earned until the settler is able to farm on his own account.

ASSISTANCE WILL BE GIVEN in the choice of a farm for either special or general farming, also for cotton planting or orange growing.

The Directors and Secretary have a large experience in the requirements of settlers, both at home and abroad; the AGENTS ABROAD are men in good position, and are PERSONALLY KNOWN to the Secretary and some of the Directors.

For further information apply to
VICTOR M. HOLLINSWORTH, Secretary.
11, Charing Cross, London, S.W.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY. UNION DEPOSIT BANK.

No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
[ESTABLISHED 1867.]
ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,
From £30 to £5,000,
To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their
NOTE OF HAND ALONE.

ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.
Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.

NO SURETIES REQUIRED.
Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

REVERSIONS.—The Reversion Mortgage Trust purchase reversions and life incomes, or lend thereon at 4 per cent. per annum. No charge made unless business results.—Apply to Messrs. FELDMAN, 34, New Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, London. Solicitors' and Estate Agents' attention particularly requested.

'Xmas and New Year's Gifts.

CARTER ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE.
6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.,
PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE
For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1.1s.

INVALID COMFORTS
Walking Machine for the lame
Adjustable Couches and Beds, £2.
Exercising Chairs £5. 5s.
Reclining Boards £1.1s.
Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d.
Easy Chairs £2. 10s.
Commode Chairs £2. 10s.
Carrying Chairs, £1.
Bed Tables 7s. 6d.
Crutches 10s. 6d.
Folding Couch Chairs 10s.
Bed Rests 10s.

BATH CHAIRS
From £1. 5s.

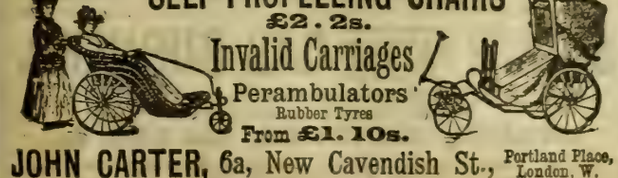
SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS
£2. 2s.



Invalid Carriages
Perambulators
Rubber Tyres
From £1. 10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.
Telgrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.
THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803. 1, Old Broad st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subscribed Capital £1,000,000. Paid up, £300,000. Total funds, £1,600,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited.
No. 14, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.
General Accidents. Railway Accidents. | Personal Injuries. Death by Accident.
C. HARDING, Manager.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.
EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.
Invested Funds, £10,000,000.
The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY
INSURES AGAINST
RAILWAY ACCIDENTS, PERSONAL ACCIDENTS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY.
Capital £1,000,000. Established 1849.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. W. D. MASSY. A. VIAN. } Secretaries.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.

(FIRE.)

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.
The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

BUYERS and SELLERS of quoted and unquoted Commercial, Industrial, and Mining Securities should communicate with
THE COMMERCIAL STOCK and SHARE CORPORATION, Limited, Stock and Share Dealers, 10, Throgmorton-avenue, London, E.C. Telegraphic Address: "UNQUOTED, LONDON." All Mining Shares dealt in at close current quotations. Advances made on Stocks and Shares at moderate rates. Send for List, giving numerous quotations not published by any other firm, post free.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.
MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.
Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.
List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to
FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.
Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

REDUCED PRICES OF CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

VINOLIA POMADE - - -	from 5s. 6d. to 3s. 6d.
LAIT VINOLIA - - - -	„ 7s. 6d. to 4s. 6d.
VINOLIA PERFUMES - - -	„ 1s. 9d. to 1s. 3d.

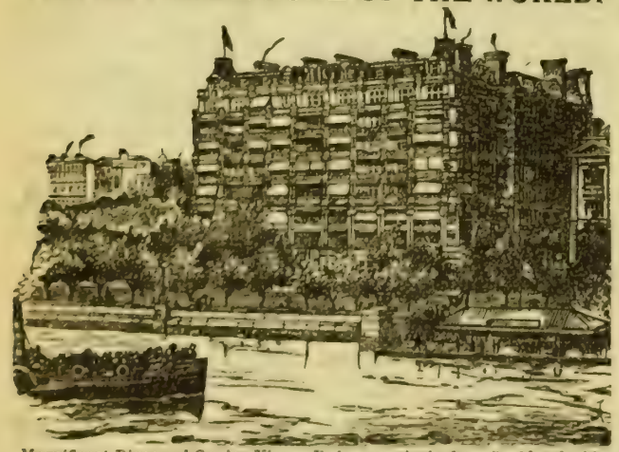
Though the cost of Otto is double what it was three years ago, the price of VESTAL and TOILET "Vinolia" Soaps remains the same,

BUT COAL TAR VINOLIA SOAP
TEREBENE VINOLIA SOAP
CARBOLIC VINOLIA SOAP
SULPHUR VINOLIA SOAP
Are now Reduced from 1/6 to 1/- per box.

"Vinolia" (for Chaps, Chilblains, Cold Sores, &c.), 1/1½.
"Vinolia" Powder (for Redness, Roughness, &c.), 1/-, 1/9.
"Vinolia" Soap.—Premier, 4d.; Floral, 6d.; Balsamic, 8d.; Toilet (Otto), 10d.; & Vestal, 2/6 per Tablet.

BLONDEAU ET CIE., RYLAND ROAD, LONDON, N.W.

SAVOY HOTEL & RESTAURANT,
Victoria Embankment, LONDON.
'THE HOTEL DE LUXE OF THE WORLD.'



Magnificent River and Garden View Bedrooms, single, from 7s. 6d.; double, from 10s. 6d. Small and large suites, with bathrooms, &c., attached, from 25s. No charge for Light, Baths, and Attendance. Shaded Electric Light everywhere. No gas. The building is absolutely fireproof.
SAVOY RESTAURANT, with large terrace. The finest and only Open Air Restaurant in London. Private Rooms for Dinner Parties, &c.
THE VICTORIA ROOMS. Specially adapted for Balls, Banquets, Masonic and Regimental Dinners.
Chef de Cuisine, M. ESCOFFIER. Manager, L. ECHENARD.
General Manager, C. RITZ, Proprietor of the Hotel de Provence, Cannes.

A PHENOMENAL SUCCESS.
FLOR DE DINDIGUL
AN EXCELLENT MEDIUM MILD INDIAN CIGAR.
A most delightful weed. Sample four or five 1s., or free by return post 12 stamps.
BEWLAY'S 49, STRAND, W.C.; 74, STRAND (EAST INDIA HOUSE); & 143, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.
For Christmas Presents par excellence. Descriptive Price List post free.

£20 TOBACCONISTS Commencing. Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. Myers, Est. 1886.

HOT MINERAL BATHS OF BATH.

Daily yield 507,600 gallons F. at 120.
FOUNDED BY THE ROMANS IN THE 1ST CENTURY.
ΑΡΙΣΤΟΝ ΜΕΝ ΥΔΩΡ.
BATHERS DURING 1890—97,299.
These Baths are unrivalled in Europe for luxury and extent, and contain all that modern improvements can provide for the comfort and relief of the invalid or the enjoyment of those in health.
Reclining, Deep, and Swimming Baths. Thermal Vapour Baths, for Painful conditions of Joints, &c. Douche, Inhalation, Aspiration, Pulverisation, &c., and Ear, Eye, Throat, &c. The Aix les Bains Massage System and Doucheurs and Doucheuses.
The Medical profession sends patients who suffer from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Dyspepsia, Eczema, and other skin affections.
Letters to the General Manager will receive every attention.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON
Very agreeable to take.
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,
HÆMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.
Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists
E. GRILLON,
69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.
This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

SUGG'S PATENT GAS BURNERS.
The best Burners that have ever been invented.
BRILLIANT, WHITE, SILENT LIGHT.
GAS LAMPS, GAS FITTINGS, GAS FIRES, &c.
Send for Price List, Grand Hotel Buildings, Charing Cross, W.C. 1a, Ludgate Hill, London, E.C.; also at Liverpool and Amsterdam.

OUR PUZZLES.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—"TRUTH" HOME-MADE TOY AND DOLL SHOW AT THE ALBERT HALL.

It has been decided to hold the Fourteenth TRUTH Toy and Doll Show at the Royal Albert Hall, Kensington Gore, on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 19th and 20th of this month. The Show will, as on all previous occasions, be open to the public free of all charge, between the hours of 10.30 a.m. and 10.30 p.m., on presentation of a visiting card at the door. It need scarcely be said that a large attendance of the readers of TRUTH and of their friends is hoped for. The Albert Hall is a very commodious building, and there is little chance of any recurrence of the inconvenient crowding which marked the TRUTH Shows at the Polytechnic and the Grosvenor Gallery. There will, it is thought, be ample room for the visitors who may attend. The Show is likely to be a specially interesting one, and the Albert Hall is, of course, very easily reached from all parts of London. As there may be possibly some ladies who have not returned the parcels of Dolls they have been dressing, it may be added that all such parcels should be returned immediately to TRUTH Office, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W., as it will otherwise be impossible to include their contents in the forthcoming Show.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 773.

The Prize for the Best Rhymed Acrostic on Christmas has been awarded to R. F.

PRIZE ACROSTIC.

Come, Father Christmas, and show us your quality,
Help to make merriment, fun, and frivolity
Reign in the homes of the high and the low!
Into our minds instil lessons of charity,
Selfishness drowning in shouts of hilarity,
Thrusting it down as the Christian's worst foe!
Master and man bring together in amity,
All classes shielding from strife and calamity,
Set in our hearts all good feelings aglow!

R. F.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 777.

In compliance with a number of requests received by me, the Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week to the competitor who best succeeds in writing

A BALLADE OF CHRISTMAS BOXES, IN WHICH THE RECOGNISED LAWS OF BALLADE COMPOSITION MUST BE OBSERVED.

Instead of giving a technical description of what, in a rhyming sense, a Ballade is, it will be a simpler plan, I think, to print below one of the many Ballades written by Mr. Andrew Lang, which may be taken as a model so far as the order of the rhymed endings is concerned:—

BALLADE OF YULE.

This life's most jolly, Amiens said
Heigh-ho, the Holly! So sang he
As the good duke was comforted
By these reflections, so may we!
The years may darken as they flee,
And Christmas brings his melancholy;
But round the old mahogany tree
We drink, we sing Heigh ho, the Holly!

Though some are dead and some are fled
To ends of autumn over sea,
The lucky berry keeps its red,
The merry children keep their glee;
Thus heard with artless accuracy
This gift for Maud, and that for Molly,
And Santa Claus he turns the key
On Christmas Eve, Heigh ho, the Holly!

Amid the snow the birds are fed,
The snow lies deep on lawn and lea,
The skies are shining overhead,
The robins tame that was so free,
Far North, at home, the "barley bree"
They brew, they give the hour to folly.
How "Rab and Allen cam' to prie"
They sing: we sing Heigh ho, the Holly!

Envoi.

Friend, let us pay the wonted fee,
The yearly tithe of mirth: be jolly!
It is a duty so to be,
Though half we sigh, Heigh-ho, the Holly!

Competitors can, of course, select any rhymed endings they please, but those selected must rhyme together, as the rhymed endings do in the lines quoted above. Any suitable metre may be employed; and competitors need not make any of their lines end in double syllables, such as "holly," unless they wish. All the "Ballades" must relate in some way or another to the given subject of Christmas Boxes; and no Ballade can be received for competition after the morning of Monday, the 25th, at the latest.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 772.

I hope to be able to announce the winner in this competition next week.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand: whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 The real name and the address of SAHIB BAHADUR, winner of a half of Prize No. 771, are F. H. Jackson, Esq., 65, Warwick-road, Earl's Court, S.W.

 The real name and the address of LUNATIC, winner of a half of Prize No. 768, are Lieut.-Col. A. G. Begbie, Glenwood, Westcombe Park, Blackheath.

 The real name and the address of BARITONE, winner of a half of Prize No. 768, are H. Blane, Esq., 22, Howard-road, Cricklewood, N.W.

 The real name and the address of MARPLOT, winner of a half of Prize No. 771, are H. Magill, Esq., 35, Forburg-road, Upper Clapton, N.E.

JACK.—Many thanks for your excellent suggestion.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 774.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

SUGGESTED CHRISTMAS PRESENTS FROM THEIR SUBJECTS TO—1. THE CZAR OF RUSSIA; 2. THE KAISER OF GERMANY; 3. THE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA; 4. THE KING OF SPAIN; 5. THE QUEEN OF HOLLAND; 6. THE KING OF ITALY; 7. THE SULTAN OF TURKEY; 8. THE SHAH OF PERSIA; 9. KING LOBENGULA.

1. A Jew's eye. 2. A box of seidlitz cooling powders. 3. A Horoscope. 4. A Moor's head. 5. Skates. 6. The nomination ensuing for the Papacy. 7. A Noah's ark resting on Mount Ararat. 8. A wax doll. 9. Fifteen shillings (compensation, a sovereign minus a crown).—Jacob Faithful.

1. A book on the liberty of the subject. 2. The continent of Europe. 3. A small house on the above-mentioned continent. 4. The best toy in the TRUTH show. 5. The best doll in the TRUTH show. 6. A tiny cottage on the same continent. 7. A private box at Drury Lane pantomime. 8. A private box at the Alhambra. 9. Mr. Selous's head.—Shlowmow.

1. Turkey with French sauce for his Christmas dinner. 2. A game of patience. 3. A bottle of Stickphast to keep his nationalities together. 4. A pair of Morocco shoes. 5. A waterproof overall. 6. A pair of bellows to raise the wind. 7. A little credit. 8. Une chatte de Perse. 9. A bottle of Elliman's embrocation.—Ross.

1. A codified history of what the liberty of the subject should be, for personal study. 2. A 1,000-ton gun for amusement. 3. A complete history of the London police. 4. A copy of the "Marseillaise" in French. 5. Bound copies of the Queen newspaper since its existence for personal perusal. 6. A cheque for a million pounds sterling. 7. A ton or two of Condy's fluid. 8. Some boxes of Pears' soap for immediate use. 9. His photograph with "Abercorn" and "Fife" as the three Graces.—A Daft Scot.

1. A dynamite-proof suit. 2. Buy him the yacht Vigilant. 3. (He accepts nothing) More love and devotion. 4. An English doctor. 5. A Gondola. 6. A daughter-in-law. 7. A set of scavengers to clean Constantinople. 8. A case of Pears' soap. 9. Revenge.—Foula.

1. A silver death's-head. 2. An efficacious sleeping draught. 3. A quiet and peaceable death-bed. 4. A sword for future protection. 5. A substantial dowry. 6. Malta. 7. Egypt. 8. One of England's most beautiful duchesses. 9. The head of Mr. Rhodes on a charger.—Wot Cher

1. The Life of Howard, philanthropist, and regenerator of prisons, who is buried in Russia. 2. The Life of Numa Pompilius, second and peaceful King of Rome. 3. The Life of the Emperor Charles V., who exchanged the throne for the cloister. 4. An address praying his Majesty to abolish the national disgrace of bull fights. 5. The History of the War of Independence, in which the Dutch, first among modern nations, defended the cause of liberty. 6. An address praying the King to withdraw from the Triple Alliance and avoid national bankruptcy. 7. An address praying the Commander of the Faithful, by precept and example, to establish monogamy; and instead of four wives permitted by Mohammed, to restrict every true believer to one wife. 8. An address praying the Shah to copy the constitutional government of the countries he has visited. 9. A monument of the bones of slaughtered Matabele, called "The Colossus of Rhodes!"—J. McGrigor Allan.

1. A new novel containing no plot. 2. A bomb-proof post bag. 3. A cruet, Sir! (Kreutzer). 4. A few sweets, but no Moor. 5. A prayer-book to counteract the Dutch dams. 6. A new bank in a nice "loanly" spot. 7. A pipe of peace. 8. A purse not bound in Russia. 9. A new kingdom without gold reefs.—Stanchion.

1. A French uniform. 2. The iron mechanical soldier. 3. A draught from the waters of Lethe. 4. Good health. 5. A Dutch doll. 6. A cheque. 7. A disinfectant. 8. A cake of Pears' soap. 9. A bottle of whiskey and a moral-pocket-handkerchief—emblems of Christianity and civilisation.—Ivy Leaves.

1. A bag of Louis d'ors. 2. A to-the-welfare-of-the-Fatherland-hearts-devoted army corps, equipped in bullet-proof uniform. 3. A bunch of blue ribbons to tie up his bonny moustachios. 4. A toy bomb with real gunpowder. 5. The best doll from the TRUTH Show. 6. The site of the ancient Roman Empire. 7. A plum pudding. 8. The heads (in baskets) of the husbands of the fifty prettiest women in Persia. 9. A pot of Allen's anti-fat.—Jagger

1. A copy of Magna Charta. 2. A sleeping draught. 3. A free Press. 4. A few automatic machines. 5. A replica of H.M.S. Pinafore. 6. A guide to the Vatican. 7. A few sultanas. 8. A cure for Persian cat-arrh to be Shah! 9. A suit of clothes.—Phos.

1. An Ottoman, to be sat upon as occasion requires. 2. A new and improved Sedan. 3. A medal from the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. 4. Barcelona nuts to crack. 5. A Dutch doll, a Holland pinafore, and a pot of orange marmalade. 6. Smiles on Thrift. 7. A Russian bear with his claws cut. 8. A portrait of Alexander the Conqueror—up to date. 9 A bottle of Anti-fat.—Tilly Slowboy.

1. A cheque on the Imperial Ottoman Bank to cover advances. 2. A perambulator. 3. A Gladstone bag. 4. An edition de luxe of "Bound in Morocco." 5. A model of a London gin palace. 6. A new Garibaldi, warranted to wash. 7. A Harness's electropathic belt. 8. The Elgin shield. 9. Half a crown.—Opera.

1. A Turkey—ready plucked. 2. A rod of iron—as a ruler. 3. A receipt for satisfactory Diet for Hungary folk. 4. A model stepfather. 5. A magnet to attract Dutch metal. 6. A drag for the State chariot. 7. A Gladstone-bag and a ticket (non-return) to Asia. 8. A return ticket to Europe. 9. A patent Rhodes-crusher.—Maid.

1. A French blouse, made Toulon and Toulouse. 2. Another box of radish seed, but inexplosive, and intended merely to suggest a more Raddish policy. 3. A copy of a well-known trio in "Princess Ida," which points a political moral, to wit:—"This helmet, I suppose, Was meant to ward off blows; It's very hot, and weighs a lot," &c., &c. 4. "Reading without Tears," royal 8vo, morocco extra, 7s. 6d. 5. A copy of "My Dear Old Dutch." 6. The proceeds of a Mansion House subscription. 7. The humble apology of Mr. George Edwardes, mounted and framed. 8. A few dozen of "sherbet" (Ayala, 1884). 9. A few "mineral claims" in Matabeleland, since his claims to Matabeleland will probably be in vain.—Girouette.

1. A picture (" Horrors of War ") by Wenashaydn. 2. A pair of sieben meilen stiefel (seven mile boots); they carry their wearer at each stage seven German miles. 3. A hunting rifle—newest improvements. 4. A nice pony, warranted not to shy at anything. 5. Two sets of dolls, showing how rich people live—and poor people die. 6. A flock of geese laying golden eggs. 7. A medicine chest for sick man. 8. A big box of insect powder. 9. A bit of land—where the white man (Christian) ceases from troubling and Lobengula may have rest.—Jack Cade.

1. A knout (that won't hurt anybody). 2. A new edition of the Law of Strikes. 3. A cigar that the Empress can't smoke. 4. Gibraltar. 5. An enormous sponge. 6. A case of the best Scotch whiskey. 7. The British female flogger. 8. A flannel nightcap. 9. A coffin.—Ye Hermit.

1. Some silver keys to open the dungeons of the political prisoners. 2. A richly-upholstered easy-chair. 3. Some Hock (Hoch). 4. A Christmas-tree to which the children of the grandees will be invited, and the young King will have some juvenile companions. 5. A pile from the Bank of Amsterdam. 6. A strong massive cedar cabinet that may be for some time a fixture. 7. As he has Turkey, a goose might vary the menu. 8. A chalet, for resort in the hot weather. 9. A kraal in some "vast wilderness" to which no European Roads can come.—Esperanza.

1. A statue of Liberty, modelled after that of his French allies. 2. A pocket-mirror framed in diamonds, that he may survey himself in his various uniforms. 3. As he's hungry (Hungary) a few German sausages. 4. A jewelled sword to suit a boy's martial inclinations. 5. A large doll's house, containing a Dutch doll, to be mistress over her other dolls. 6. A few "plums" (£100,000). 7. A portion of grease (Greece) to cook his Turkey. 8. Some Richmond "maids of honour." 9. A Maxim gun, to make him a better match for the English.—Excelsior.

1. Turkey. 2. A book on "Speech-making extraordinary." 3. A good dinner to a "Hungary" Monarch. 4. Requires no Moor presents. 5. A prospective husband. 6. A treatise on "Politics begin at home." 7. A box for the Gaiety theatre. 8. A new loan. 9. A few useful "Maxims."—Ken.

1. A new Constitution. 2. A silver plough. 3. A Reform Bill. 4. Rocking-horse. 5. A bow (beau). 6. A surplus. 7. Turkish delight. 8. The Koh-i-noor. 9. One hundred Maxim guns.—Lindors.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 770.—PARODIES OF "AFTER THE BALL."

 As there is some available space this week, a further selection of the Parodies received is printed.—The Puzzle Editor.

"Trust her not—she is fooling thee." (Longfellow, "Hyperion.")

I thought her angel—call'd her one too;
She vow'd she would forever be true;
I said: At last I have found my guest;
Of all Eve's daughters, the fairest, best;
A faithful heart to be all my own,
Me, no rival can ever dethrone—
Yet who can tell how much may befall—
My eyes were open'd—After the Ball.

Chorus.

After the ball was over,
Fred told me at break of day,
She's on with another lover,
She'll serve him the self-same way;
So pick up the fractur'd pieces
Of your heart, both big and small,
And as time your pain decreases,
You'll bless the Ball.

Disguis'd I saw—my feelings, pray guess—
Officers waltzing, fresh from the mess,
Their whiskers fann'd by the balmy breath
Of her who had vow'd to be true till death.
The worst she favour'd above the rest,
Clung to the warrior's padded breast,
Look'd, sigh'd, whisper'd, kiss'd—Oh, why recall
My mad jealousy—After the Ball?

Chorus.

When next we met, she asked, "Why so cold?
What is the matter?" She soon was told.
"All men are traitors," she groaned and grieved:
"We poor women are ever deceiv'd."
More such compliments by the false jade,
Which I to her could truly have paid!
"Return my letters—your gifts I'll keep all."
And so we parted—After the Ball.

Chorus.

J. McGrigor Allan.

OVER THE WALL.

Came a fair maiden. I, on my knees,
Told her a story, thinking to please;
Told her a story—the best I could tell—
Told her I loved her both wisely and well;
"Nay," said the maiden, "can it be true?
Why! I love some one much better than you.
Yes, I've a sweetheart, my all in all,
And—there he is looking—over the wall!"

Over the wall her lover
Looked on, alas!
Whilst I knelt grieving
There on the grass;
But soon his head was aching,
For, like a ball,
I'd heaved a brickbat
Over the wall.

Cried that fair maiden, "Fool that you are!
Do you know what you've done? you've killed my papa;
You told me a story, and—and—as a sell,
I made up my mind I'd tell you one as well;
And now if you'd ever win me for your wife,
Just hurry and bring back my father to life.
Oh! what shall I do if he's gone past recall?
But no—hark! he's groaning—over the wall."

Over the wall I bounded,
Over so quick,
There lay her poor father—
There lay the brick—
But ere I revived him—
Fate saddest of all—
Two bobbies had got me
Nabb'd—over the wall.

Malignant.

AFTER THE STRIKE.

Came a sweet lassie voicing it clear,
"Tell me a story, do, mother dear."
"Tell thee a story—aye, that I will,
Not about goblins haunting a mill,
But I will tell thee one that is real
'Bout those coal owners, hearts hard as steel;
Once they were humane, now, oh! what like?
Ask the poor miners after the strike."

After the strike is over,
After the owners whine,
After the miners conquer,
After the diamonds shine;
Many a lass will caper,
Dance with her lad and tyke,
Many a home will flourish,
After the strike.

O'er those dank coal mines, grimy and gray,
Mourned men's hearts sadly, filled with dismay,
Armed 'gainst the owners, who cause this strife,
Proud of their loved ones, dearer than life.
Courage! No fainting or funking they cried,
But like true heroes stand side by side,
Waltzing 'round Dives, Dick, Tom, and Mike,
Kissing brave lasses after the strike.

After long weeks, then the secret rolls out,
Owners blurt forth they've been held by the snout;
This they discover, and not too soon,
They have been playing block coal buffoon.
Darling I've finished—kiss me and go,
Call all men brothers, both high and low,
Kiss them and say thus, Love me love my tyke,
Ho! for black diamonds, after the strike."

Foy.

Came a little youngster climbing on my knees,
"Tell me a story, do, uncle, please.
"Tell you a story, a story to-day,
What shall I tell you, what shall I say?
Yes, I will tell you now of football,
Tell of the scrimmage, tell of the maul,
Look at this scar here, look at this patch,
These are my trophies—after the match.

Chorus.

After the match was over, after the game was done,
Wended we sadly homewards, aching in every bone,
Many a shin was broken, our face wore many a scratch,
But the referee was the saddest—after the match.

Our team was the "Rushers," that was their name,
You have heard of the "Rushers," they're known to fame;
I was their goalkeeper, slipped many a shot,
And, I assure you, there were a lot.
Our colours were scarlet, yellow, and green,
The showiest colours that ever were seen,
Our play it was waggish, doubtless to watch,
There weren't many left of us—after the match.

Chorus.

Now I am aged, with many a year
My limbs are feeble, my eyes are blear,
Yet I could often wish for a game,
My love for football is still the same.
Where are the "Rushers," where are they all?
Gone are my cronies, both great and small,
Yet I can feel, now, back, shin, and scratch,
Which I ne'er felt then—after the match."

Lancastrian.

Sport is a pastime, to Englishmen all,
Kicking or batting, that's after the Ball;
So in my glory, I longed for the game,
But when I got kicked, was sorry I came;
Say! would you like to be feeling the pain,
Smothered in mud and rolled in the same?
Out upon crutches, that's nothing at all,
Compared to the kicking—after the Ball.

Chorus.

After the play is over,
After the goal is won;
After the ups and downers,
After the damages done;
Many a leg is aching,
Ere there is time to recall;
Being kicked and bashed and battered,
After the Ball.

One burly fellow, much bigger than you,
Fell down upon me, I thought it was two;
Kicking and plunging, in such a rough way,
You'd hardly believe it was part of the play.
Nay; but you have to, and mustn't complain,
Growl to be kicked at, they'll do it again;
Nothing to laugh at; some didn't fall—
In for the fun of it—after the Ball.

Chorus.

Next time when playing, a rowdier crew,
I went for slogging, and desperate, too;
Tripping and trundling over them all,
Till I came a whopper on top of the ball.
Say what you like though I've broken my back,
Blacked both my eyes, and got twisted my neck;
Home on a stretcher, my coat for a pall—
That was the goal I got—after the Ball.

Chorus.

Sol

A tom-cat was perched on an old maid's knee,
And he purred away in a very high key:
"Why live alone, in this big single flat,
With no one beside you but me—a tom-cat?"
"Hush! my dear pussy, and I'll tell you how,
Me and my chap had a bit of a row;
He left me forlorn—I will try to recall,
How he sloped with another girl after the ball."

After the ball is over, when the dudes are weary and worn,
Many are seedy and thirsty, just at the break of morn;
Many the bunions are aching, if you could feel them all,
The effects of the splay-footed waltzer—after the ball.

The electric light flashed like the rays of the moon,
The band was discordant, and quite out of tune;
My sweetheart appeared, saying, "Excuse me, my own,
While I get a B. and S., I'll leave thee alone."
But I followed and found he was kissing another,
No longer my wrath I attempted to smother;
So I gave him a whack with my fan—that is all,
And I found I had broken it—after the ball.

Long years have elapsed, my sweet pussy, since then,
And now I have nothing to do with the men—
Though he tried to explain how he got rather tight,
And kissed in mistake his big sister that night.
I'm sure 'twas a piece of impertinence and cheek,
To think I'd believe a story so weak;
That's why, my dear pussy, you're dearer than all
The Johnnies who go rolling home after the ball.

G. B. Scott.

OYSTERS! OYSTERS!!

FINEST COLCHESTER NATIVES

In Prime Condition, Delivered Free on Rail

At 3s. 6d. PER DOZEN.

CASH WITH ORDER.

Write for Circular.

HARVEY & CO., MERSEA, COLCHESTER.

Gérard's FRENCH Sardines

AS SUPPLIED TO H.M. THE QUEEN.

PACKED IN BEST OLIVE OIL ALSO WITH TOMATOES

TO BE HAD OF ALL GROCERS & ITALIAN WAREHOUSEMEN.

"TRUTH"

Can be obtained every FRIDAY Morning in NICE at

GALIGNANI'S LIBRARY,

16, QUAI MASSENA

HIGHEST HONORS.

LIPTON'S DELICIOUS TEAS

HAVE GAINED

THE HIGHEST AND ONLY AWARD

IN THE BRITISH SECTION AT THE World's Fair, Chicago.

These famous Teas are to be had at all Lipton's Branches and Agents.

NOTE THE PRICES.

RICH, PURE, AND FRAGRANT,

1/- and 1/4 per lb.

THE FINEST TEA THE WORLD CAN PRODUCE.

No Higher Price. At 1/7 per lb. No Higher Price.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Delivered carriage paid for an extra 1d. per lb. to any address in Great Britain on orders of 5 lbs. and upwards. Samples sent free on application.

LIPTON, TEA AND COFFEE PLANTER, CEYLON.

Sole Proprietor of the following celebrated Tea and Coffee Estates in Ceylon:—Dambatenne, Laymastotte, Monerakande, Mahadambatenne, Mousakelle, Pooprassie, Hantegalla, and Gigranella, which cover Thousands of Acres of the best TEA and COFFEE LAND in CEYLON.

Ceylon Tea and Coffee Shipping Warehouses:—Maddema Mills, Cinnamon Gardens, Colombo. Ceylon Offices:—Upper Chatham-street, Colombo.

Indian Tea Shipping Warehouses and Export Stores:—Hare-street, Strand, Calcutta. Indian Offices:—Dalhousie-square, Calcutta.

GENERAL OFFICES: BATH STREET, CITY ROAD, LONDON, E.C. Branches and Agencies throughout the World.

LAIRITZ'S

CELEBRATED

Established 1853. Awarded 18 Medals and Diplomas. For the Relief and Cure of GOUT, RHEUMATISM, COLDS, &c.

Wadding in packets, Knee-Caps, Inside Soles, Oil, EXTRACT FOR BATH, Lozenges. Of all the LEADING CHEMISTS everywhere. Flannels, Underclothing, Knitting Yarn. Sold by all leading Drapers and Hosiers.

Wholesale Depot for Fabrics only: WELCH, MARGETSON & Co., 16, Cheapside, London.

Caution.—Observe the Tree Trade Mark with Signature on each piece.

PINE WOOL.

THREE GOLD MEDALS

The Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam Corset

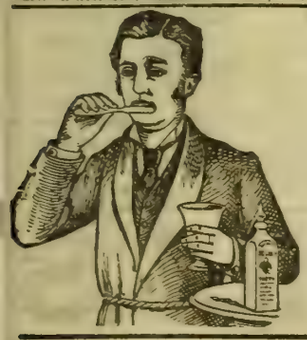
Exquisite Model. Perfect Comfort. Guaranteed Wear.

Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil; also in the New Sanitary Woollen Cloth. 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped "Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam No. 116," in oval on the lining.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.

COALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES. Londonderry Wallsend, 34s.; Pittington Wallsend, 33s.; Primrose, 32s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 31s. 6d. per ton. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.



DECAY OF THE TEETH

arises from various causes, but principally it may be attributed to early neglect or the indiscriminate use of tooth powders and pastes, which give a momentary whiteness to the teeth while they corrode the enamel. The timely use of that delicate aromatic tooth-wash, will speedily arrest the progress of decay, harden the gums, and impart a delightful fragrance to the breath. The formula of Sozodont includes only botanic ingredients, and it contains only the purest and most salutary of these.

FRAGRANT

SOZODONT

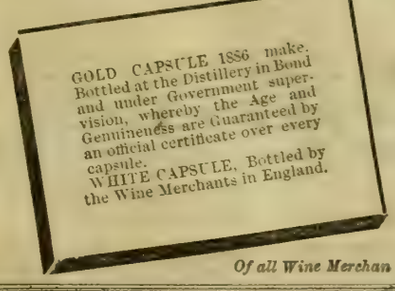
The Gift of the Season: A Case of '86



Of all Wine Merchan

"CANADIAN CLUB" WHISKY.

DISTILLED BY HIRAM WALKER & SONS, LIMITED, WALKERVILLE, CANADA.

TRADE W MARK

Can be obtained with the AGE and GENUINENESS GUARANTEED by the Excise Department of the Canadian Government, by Certificate over the Capsule of every Bottle.

London Offices: 69 & 70, MARK LANE, E.C. Branches and Agencies throughout the World.

The best Company is the Company that does the most good.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

R. A. Mc CURDY, President.

ESTABLISHED 1843. | 50 YEARS' RECORD. | JUBILEE 1893.

Received from Policyholders ... £94,139,358. | Returned to Policyholders ... £71,223,404.
Accumulated Funds in hand ... £35,871,118.

GUARANTEED INVESTMENTS.

4 °/₀ CONSOLS } Purchased by 10, 15, or 20 Instalments.
5 °/₀ ditto } Redeemable in 10, 15, or 20 Years, and 6 °/₀ ditto } not issued by any other Company.

These Investments include Insurance Protection increasing annually.
Latest accounts show £2 11s. 5d. returned for every £1 received.

A NEW PROSPECTUS, containing SPECIAL INVESTMENT, GUARANTEED BONUS, and other IMPORTANT FEATURES, can be obtained on application to any of the Branch Offices, or to—

D. C. HALDEMAN,
General Manager for Great Britain and Ireland,
17 and 18, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.

MANUFACTURERS TO HER MAJESTY.

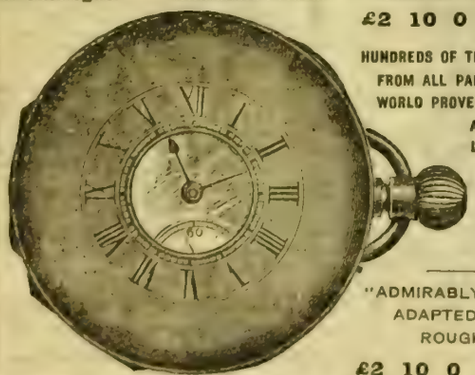
BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR

HAS 35 YEARS' WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION.

Midland Counties Watch Co., Vyse-street, BIRMINGHAM.

Send for Catalogue. Wholesale Prices. Send for Catalogue.

CATALOGUES CONTAINING OVER 1,000 ILLUSTRATIONS POST-FREE UPON APPLICATION TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.



£2 10 0

HUNDREDS OF TESTIMONIALS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD PROVE THE VALUE AND EXCELLENT TIME-KEEPING QUALITIES OF OUR WATCHES.

"ADMIRABLY ADAPTED FOR ROUGH WEAR."

£2 10 0

Gents' Silver Keyless Demi-Hunter, in Plain or Engine-turned Cases, a thoroughly reliable timekeeper. £2 10s. 0d.
Purchase from the Manufacturers at a saving of 25 to 50 per cent.

25s. 25s.

LONDON OFFICE AND SHOW ROOM: 15, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. (Near Mansion House.)

LONDON OFFICE AND SHOW ROOM 15, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C. (Near Mansion House.)

"THE CHEAPEST THOROUGHLY RELIABLE SILVER WATCH EVER MADE."

Gents' Silver Watch, finely finished movement, crystal glass, timekeeping qualities guaranteed, 25s. Ladies' ditto, ditto, 25s.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE CONTAINING HUNDREDS OF TESTIMONIALS OF THIS AND OTHER WATCHES. Gratis and Post Free to any part of the World.

Cheques and P.O. Orders to be made payable to the Company's Manager, Mr. A. PERCY, Birmingham.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

FOR ALL

Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as
Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion,
Disordered Liver, and Female Ailments.

Prepared only by the Proprietor, THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helen's, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere, in Boxes, 9½d., 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each, with full directions.

The 1s. 1½d. Box contains Fifty-six Pills.

THE SALE IS NOW SIX MILLION BOXES PER ANNUM.

Printed for the Proprietors by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 886. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, December 21, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

THE SEVENTEENTH

CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF "TRUTH,"

"The Spookeries,"

IS NOW READY.

In a Special Wrapper,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Profusely Illustrated by F. Carruthers Gould.

The Illustrations include THREE DOUBLE-PAGED and FOUR FULL-PAGED CARTOONS, printed in colours:—

1. "Truth" Speaks about Spooks.
2. Viva el Toro.
3. A Demonstration of Loyalty (With a Collection).
4. Salisbury's Stuffed Geese.
5. Chamberlain's Dive.
6. A Royalty Raree Show.
7. Work for the Girl-Flogger.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

ENTRE NOUS.

IT may be well to remind those of my London readers who get this number of Truth on Wednesday morning that the Toy Show is open at the Albert Hall to-day (the 20th), from 10.30 a.m. to 10.30 p.m. To publish a detailed account of the Exhibition this week is impossible, but a full description of it is being written, and will appear in the next number of Truth. Meanwhile, whilst thanking the many kind friends who have assisted in making the Show so great a success, I would venture to point out that, although we cannot receive more Toys, we should be glad to get more money for those that have been purchased. One more little effort, if you please. The smallest contributions thankfully received, but large ones more thankfully.

The St. Bernard Pup which was so kindly presented to me to be sold on behalf of the Truth Toy Fund has found a purchaser, I am glad to say. Mr. Harry Quilter, the well-known art critic, has given me seven guineas for it, and I hear from him that the dog has already eaten a copy of the Times and a considerable portion of a Persian rug in its new home; so it may be assumed, I think, that it is in fairly good health and spirits. Mr. G. W. Marsden, the gentleman who presented the pup, writes to tell me that, although he cannot always promise a similar gift to the Toy Fund, he will try and manage it every year, if I will, on my part, endeavour to sell the animal. This I most readily undertake to do; and I hope, for the sake of the Toy Fund, that the Fates will smile propitiously year by year on Mr. Marsden's amiable designs, and those of the mamma of the prospective puppies.

I have received the following amounts towards this year's Toy Fund:—

Collected by Gladys and Hilda Bookless, £2. 10s.; E. G., 10s.; H. C. S. D., £1; T. Atkins, 5s.; "Elmfield," 5s.; Maude, 5s.; G. P., £5; David and Leslie, Brisbane, £1; Norman Lord, £5; D'Arcy and Molly, 3s.; J. W. P., £2. 2s.; Anonymous, 5s.; B. W. A., £1; Ashton, Arnold, Gladys, and Phyllis Barton, £1; Two Amateur Liberals, 5s.; T., £2; M. W. C., 2s. 6d.; R. C., £5; C. E. R. B., £2. 10s.; Guy Burnett, 10s.; Horace, Eugene, and Dorothy, £2. 2s.; Miss Auguste Marryat, 5s.; E. C. T., 5s.; R. H., 3s. 6d.; "Cambridge," £1. 2s. 6d.; Mrs. Watkin Homfray, £1. 1s.; Mr. Jeremiah Colman, £5; Eva, 5s.; Bon Port, 5s. 6d.; White Violet, £1; W. Price, 21s.; Anonymous, 5s.; Lo Bengula, 2s. 6d.; L. L. C., £2; B., 4s.; Fitzroy C. Fletcher, £1; A Friend (Windermere), £1; Half-Pay, 2s. 6d.; Amy and her Mother, 3s. 6d.; Miss J. Rogan, 5s.; Lord Durham, £5; Lawrence and Arthur, 5s.; M. J. E. (China), £1; Arthur Evans, £1. 1s.; Officers H.M.S. Collingwood, £3; A. H. S., 10s.; Mr. Granville Leveson Gower, £1. 1s.; "Winter," 10s. 6d.; Messrs. Atkinson & Dresser, £1. 1s.; "The Rat," 3s.; Tyne, £2; A. E. B., 5s.; Admirer, £1; J. M., £25; E. A. T., 2s. 6d.; Admiral, 10s.; X. I. T., 10s.; R. Maude, £1; Masters and Miss Mannel, £2. 2s.; Officers H.M.S. Dreadnought, £2. 1s. 6d.; H. M. P., £1; A. L., £1; Miss Pott, £1; Nan-Fat, £1. 1s.; In memory of Harold, 10s.; Granny's Darling, 5s.; M. P., £1; the Hon. Hugh Childers, £2. 2s.; Mrs. H. Keith, £1; Miss Frances Goldsmid, £3; Lobengula, £1. 1s.; Flora Macdonald, 5s.; In Memory of Mary, £1. 1s.; J. E. M., £2; Arthur and Charley, 2s. 6d.; Disney and Barry, £1; Miss Johnstone, 10s.; C. H. D., 7s. 6d.; Justin Huntly McCarthy (in threepenny-pieces), £2. (The donation of £5 for the Toy Fund acknowledged last week as from G. A. F. should have been G. A. Z.)

The following have also come to hand:—

Six dolls and one scrapbook, J. K. and A. B. Lawree; parcel of needlecases, Messrs. J. James & Sons, Redditch; two scrapbooks, N. R. E.; one large doll, Miss N. Tankard; four dolls, the Mayoress of Beverley; two dolls and scrapbook, the Misses Amphlett; one doll, Miss J. Vaughan; parcel of scrapbooks, Mrs. P. Bookless; one doll, Miss M. Tankard; one box of Christmas cards, Anonymous; one scrapbook, Miss Weedon; three dolls, Lucita, Bee, and Anita; eight balls, Mrs. H. Walford; packet of Christmas cards, Mrs. Paternoster; five scrapbooks, M. W. C., Stockport; two dolls, Annie; two dolls, Miss Marler; twelve woollen toys, E. C. J. M.; forty-eight scrapbooks, Yoko; eighteen scrapbooks, Mrs. H. S. Hairsine; Pierre and Jean Vanden Neat, two large cases of toys; two dolls, Mrs. Gilbey; four dolls, Mrs. Welch Miller; parcel of scrapbooks, May, Edith, and Charlie Lister; parcel of scrapbooks, &c., J. M. T.; seven dolls, Anonymous; three scrapbooks, Miss L. Herskind; one doll, Miss B. Lee; one case of dolls, Lady Oppenheimer; three scrapbooks, Miss J. English; one scrapbook, Miss B. S. Woolf; one scrapbook, Dorothy Fox; one parcel of dolls, Juno; one doll, Anonymous; seventeen dolls and seventeen bags of sweets, each containing a sixpence, Mrs. W. Q. Pogson; one box-top and books, Jane and Helen Walker; one doll, Mrs. Pierce; one dozen musical boxes, Messrs. Paillard & Co.; six scrap-rolls, four scrap-cards, Florence, Eva, Edie, Bertha, and Mabel; two dolls, Mrs. Minton; one box of balls, Mrs. R. Shaus; one scrapbook, Gladys Rose Allen; three scrapbooks, Miss M. Jackson; three boxes of dolls, &c., Mrs. Hermann Borner; balls and books, Mr. W. Davey; two scrap-screens, Miss Jessup; one game, Mr. Henry Thompson; 200 sets of badges from the Directors of the Hurst Park Club; a box of dolls, and a box containing small hampers of sweets and toys, from Mrs. Anderson.

The Queen, who left Windsor on Monday for Osborne, intends to stay in the Isle of Wight for about nine weeks, after which her Majesty will return to Windsor for a month's residence at the Castle before her departure for the Continent, which is provisionally fixed for Monday, March 19.

I announced several weeks ago that her Majesty is to visit Coburg towards the end of April, when on her way home from Florence. The betrothal of Princess Victoria Melita of Coburg and the Grand Duke Ernest of Hesse will shortly be announced, and, according to present arrangements, their wedding is to take place during the last week in April, when the Queen is at Coburg. The ceremony will be attended by her Majesty, the German Emperor, the Prince of Wales, the Empress Frederick, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg, and some members of the Russian Imperial family.

The Queen will spend four weeks at Florence, residing at the well-known Villa Fabbricotti, near Fiesole, and, if all is well, she is afterwards to pass a few days at Venice before leaving Italy for Germany. The Queen will be accompanied to Florence by Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg, and her Majesty is to be attended by the Dowager Lady Churchill, Sir Henry Ponsonby, Sir Fleetwood Edwards, the Munshi, and one Maid of Honour.

Clarence House has been granted by the Queen to the Duke and Duchess of Connaught by warrant; but an arrangement has been made for the Duke of Coburg to have the use of the house whenever he visits London, and certain rooms are to be reserved exclusively for him. The Duke and Duchess of Connaught have hitherto occupied apartments in Buckingham Palace during their visits to London, which, however, was a very inconvenient arrangement, which the Queen long wished to terminate, and it is also deemed desirable for them to have a permanent residence in town. After the death of the Duchess of Cambridge, the Duke of Connaught had the first offer of her apartments in St. James's Palace, but he did not care for those quarters. Clarence House is officially regarded as a part of St. James's Palace. It was occupied by William IV. before he came to the throne, and then by the Princess Augusta, after whom came the Duchess of Kent. The Duke of Coburg enlarged the house by adding a floor at the top, for which he paid himself. It is now a most excellent house in all respects, and superbly decorated and furnished

Her Majesty was very ill-advised when she built the Prince Consort's mausoleum in the middle of the swamp by which Frogmore is surrounded. It was observed on Thursday that in many places the fresco painting of the interior is seriously discoloured from the damp, which appears to have done much damage during the last twelve months, although immense fires are constantly kept burning in the mausoleum. It would have been impossible to have selected a worse site for such a building, and in wet weather the road and paths by which it is approached are nearly impassable

During the last month Torquay has been at various times agitated by a wild report that the Queen contemplates paying a visit to the town in the course of the winter. How this tale originated it is impossible to conjecture, for, of course, it is the purest of fictions.

Lord Houghton returned to Ireland without experiencing a severe gale in the Irish Channel, which has had a succession of storms for the last month. He will spend Christmas at the Viceregal Lodge with a family party. During the past week the Lord-Lieutenant visited the theatre, where he was well received; and this week he attends a performance of the "Messiah," under the auspices of the Dublin Musical Society. At this season, Viceregal duties are not very onerous; the head that wears a Viceregal crown has no cause to lie "uneasy."

Let me recommend Lord Houghton, if he wishes to be popular among the ladies, to keep his nose warm. The ladies whom Lord Londonderry kissed on their presentation to him, frequently complained that his nose was so cold, that this diminished the value of the kiss. Lord Houghton would do well also to cultivate a lofty and haughty air in carrying on the foolish business of Viceroyalty. An Irishman was comparing Lord Spencer and Lord Londonderry. "Give me Lord Spencer," he said; "he was a real Viceroy. When I was presented to him, he looked at me from over his beard, as if I were dirt beneath his feet, but Lord Londonderry shook hands with me, and was quite familiar."

Irish Viceroys are stripped of their sovereign attributes so soon as they reach English waters. The following story is told of Lord Houghton and a lady with whom he was acquainted. They both found themselves on board the Holyhead packet. During the voyage from Ireland the lady treated the Viceroy with ceremonious respect. So soon, however, as the packet entered Holyhead Harbour she said to him: "Now, Bobby, you are no longer a Viceroy, so take my bag and make yourself useful."

The late Lord Bective was one of the most generous and considerate landlords in England, and he took an active part in the management of his large estates, and was always ready to render any assistance in his power to his numerous tenants. He had long been a prominent breeder of Shorthorns, and his herd is one of the best in the world; as well it might be, considering that the "foundation" cow cost him upwards of £8,000. Lord Bective sat in Parliament as one of the Members for Westmoreland for twenty-two years, the seat having previously been held for sixteen years by his father, Lord Headfort. He contented himself with supporting the Tory Leaders by his vote, and never took any leading part in political life, for which he had neither taste nor inclination. Lord Bective's large estates in Westmoreland and the West Riding of Yorkshire came to him from his grandfather, Alderman Thompson, who originally purchased the Underley Hall domain. The Alderman left an immense sum of money to be invested in land, which was to be settled in the same way as the Underley estate, and this was most judiciously invested by the trustees in purchasing a property in Lancashire (which has since increased enormously in value) and in consolidating the other estates. Lord Bective was a great favourite with all classes in Westmoreland, and his death has caused sincere and profound sorrow throughout the county. His daughter, Lady Henry Cavendish Bentinck, inherits all his estates.

For Amusements, see page 1363.
For the Truth Hotel List, see page 1366 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 1364-5.

Professor Milligan, who died last week at Edinburgh, was one of the most distinguished ecclesiastics in Scotland. He held the Chair of Biblical Criticism in Aberdeen University with conspicuous success for nearly forty years, and since the beginning of 1886 he had been the very efficient Principal Clerk of the General Assembly. Professor Milligan was a very learned man, an admirable and a most popular writer on theological subjects, and a most excellent lecturer and preacher. He had long ago obtained a European reputation as a profound and accurate Biblical scholar. His Croall Lectures on "The Resurrection of Our Lord" have been translated into many foreign languages, and he was on terms of friendship with many of the leading German writers on theology.

Sir John Don Wauchope, who died at Edinburgh last week, had been one of the best known and most useful public men in Scotland during the last thirty or forty years, and he has filled several important offices with great efficiency. Sir John took a very zealous interest in affairs of all kinds, he had been particularly active in educational matters, and he was prominent in county business. He was, at heart, always a strong Liberal, but apt to be uncertain in his politics, and in 1874 his ecclesiastical friends induced him to oppose Gladstonian candidates on account of the alleged "Ritualistic" sympathies of the Prime Minister. In 1880, however, Sir John was one of Mr. Gladstone's most ardent supporters at the Midlothian election; and he continued Liberal until the split of 1886, when he joined the Unionist party, to which his popularity and influence rendered him a valuable adherent. He owned a large family estate in Midlothian, which came to him from his father, Mr. Wauchope, of Edmonstone, and he inherited the baronetcy on the death of his kinsman, Sir William Don, in 1862.

Lord James Butler, who died last week at an advanced age, was formerly a well-known member of society in Dublin, where he lived for many years. In very early days he was an aide-de-camp at Dublin Castle, and during the first Abercorn Viceroyalty he held a leading place in the Viceregal household. He was married to Lady Rachel Russell, the Duke of Bedford's daughter, sister of the Dowager Duchess of Abercorn. Lord James was a great "collector," and possessed many artistic and unique treasures of varied kind. Twenty years ago there was no happier hunting-ground for the "collector" than Ireland. It was then discovered by the "dealer," and is now somewhat worked out. For all that, throughout the country, and even in Dublin, there are still artistic treasures of many kinds to be chanced upon.

Alas! the "Body" cannot throw any light on my query, What is a Soul? Will no one enlighten me? Would the Association receive me into membership?

DEAR SIR, I have to thank you for your note on the sham questions. But you ask a question far more puzzling than they are. What is a Soul? I have not an idea. I know one or two who I believe are Souls. Outwardly they look like other people, but what systems they practise I do not know. Yours faithfully, A BODY.

Discussing the other day the question, "Should women smoke?" my Paris correspondent stated, on the authority of a Minister of Queen Christina, that that Royal lady is "an inveterate and veteran smoker." The Minister, however, must have slandered his Royal Mistress. On even better authority, I have since learned that, so far from being a veteran smoker, the Queen-Mother of Spain knows not the taste of tobacco smoke. Personally, I should not think worse of her if she did; but a lady who does not smoke would, doubtless, object to be accused of the habit, and I hasten accordingly to correct the error.

A large farm on one of the estates of one of our greatest "territorial magnates" has just been let on lease at a reduction of exactly 33 per cent. from the rent which was paid by the outgoing tenant. This fall shows the flagrant humbug of the remission system which has lately been adopted by so many landlords. The owner of this estate has been praised by the papers every half-year for his "liberality" in remitting 10 per cent. of the rents; but when one of his farms comes into the market it appears that he can only find another tenant by submitting to a reduction of 33 per cent. It is therefore clear that the outgoing tenant has been for years paying 23 per cent. more than the market value of the farm, and this kind of thing is going on all over the country. Who can wonder that we hear so much about the manifold distresses of tenant farmers?

The agricultural depression, however, has not interfered with the shows of the leading societies. The Chester meeting of the "Royal" was a great financial success, there being a profit of about £2,400, although a much larger sum than usual had been given in prizes. The Edinburgh show of the Highland and Agricultural Society has turned out well, there being a surplus of nearly £2,200.

A great success attended the Ascot Ball, which was held last Tuesday in the Grand Stand, although the weather was very wet and stormy. The decorations were much admired, and the supper was very good. Large parties were brought from Easthampstead Park by Lady Downshire, and from New Lodge by Lady Emily Van de Weyer.

The officials of the Tay Fishery Board have succeeded in obtaining about 575,000 ova for the salmon hatchery at Dupplin. They have been fishing for this purpose in the Tay, near the mouth of the Almond, on thirteen days during the last month. It is very satisfactory that not a salmon which was landed displayed any signs of the fungoid disease, and this is the first season for fourteen years that no affected fish have been met with during the annual netting for ova.

BOURNEMOUTH.—"ROYAL BATH HOTEL." "Hôtel de Luxe of the South." Sea frontage, 1,000 ft.; grounds, 5 acres. Due south. Moderate charges. Tariff on application. Comparison invited. Electric light throughout. Only Hotel on "East Cliff."

An Up-to-Date Christmas Carol.

Hark! the home-made bombs are bursting,
Dealing death and terror round;
Men for blood of men are thirsting,
Wheresoe'er the Cross is found.
Even whilst our bells are jangling
Tidings of goodwill and peace,
With our Maxim guns we're mangling
Savages without surcease.
Aye, the bullet's heartless "tang"
Drowns the song the Angels sang.

Even whilst we glibly utter
Festive wishes by the score,
Starving victims moan and mutter,
Dying at our very door.
And where Santa Claus is spreading
Mirth and pleasure as he walks,
Closely in his footprints treading,
Gaunt and grisly Famine stalks.
Shrieks of hatred and despair
Drown the Carols everywhere.

"Peace on earth!" around is ringing,
Echoing from cliff to cliff;
This it is the Spaniard 's singing
As he's shooting down the Riff.
And the Chartered robbers mustering,
Loudly chant, "Goodwill to men!"
As, still bent on filibustering,
They hunt down the doomed Lo Ben.
Bethlehem's star shines overhead,
O'er the dying and the dead.

Christendom, where'er it stretches,
Joins to sing the Evangel's lines;
Think you, though, they reach the wretches
Moiling in Siberian mines?
Is the outlook less alarming,
As the Yuletide tapers burn?
Does one nation cease from arming,
Or its swords to ploughshares turn?
Is there one that takes account
Of the Sermon on the Mount?

Shall we, resting from our labours,
Carry out the words we speak?
Shall we better love our neighbours
At the close of Christmas week?
For, if not, then, for the greeting
Which we utter near and far,
We'd much better keep repeating,
"Oh! What hypocrites we are!
Hypocrites in self engross'd;
Meaning least when saying most!"

In the obituary notices of Miss Ada Swanborough I have not seen it recorded that she once played Romeo to the Juliet of Mrs. Bancroft, then the Marie Wilton of the Strand. It occurred in this fashion. On the occasion of the tercentenary ceremony in honour of one William Shakespeare, all the theatres in London resolved to honour the bard. The little lively and burlesque loving Strand was not behindhand, and the management announced certain scenes from "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet." This was Mrs. Bancroft's first, and I think only, excursion into Shakespeare-land, but the popular burlesque actress played Juliet on this occasion so charmingly, that she determined from that moment to abandon the frivolity of burlesque for some serious work. At least, she says so in her book of recollections.

The elaborate ballets of the present day bore me somewhat, I must admit, but "Don Quixote," at the Alhambra is a great deal more than a mere gorgeous Terpsichorean spectacle. There is a lot of really good old-fashioned pantomimic fun in it, for Mr. Fred Storey, who always amuses me, plays the part of the famous Knight with irrepressible spirits and humour. And those who are connoisseurs in choreography certainly ought to make a point of seeing "La Salmoiraghi" (Phœbus! what a name!), the new première danseuse, who has already danced herself into considerable popularity. There will be a good chance of seeing "Don Quixote" on Boxing Day, when a special matinée is to be given.

Mr. J. W. Godward is an artist who has been rapidly coming to the front of late. As a painter of marble surfaces he shows a skill second only to that of Mr. Alma Tadema himself; and one or two of his pictures are generally to be seen at the Exhibitions at No. 7, Haymarket. One of the most charming of these, called "Betrothed," a beautiful Roman girl lying in happy meditation on a leopard-skin and cushion spread on a white marble terrace, has just been reproduced in photogravure by Mr. Thos. McLean with conspicuous success. At a time when Romney is so very much in vogue again it is not surprising that Messrs. R. & D. Colnaghi & Co., of Pall Mall East, should have commissioned Herr D. A. Wehrschmidt to engrave in mezzotint one of the most characteristic works of the master in question. The picture chosen is the well-known and much-admired portrait of the Hon. Charlotte Clive, and the reproduction admirably preserves the charm of the original. Messrs. Frost & Read, of Bristol, have also just published an original mezzotint by Mr. John Finnie, R.P.E., of which only 125 signed artist's proofs were printed before the plate was destroyed. "Leafy Trees and Sparkling Brook" is the title of this charming print.

With a view of repeating past successes, Messrs. Leggatt Brothers, of 46, Fenchurch-street, have again produced one of Mr. Frank Paton's etchings to serve as a Christmas card. "The Pleasures of Hope," as the etching is called, is already a familiar object in our shop windows, and, granted that Christmas cards must be sent at all, some such artistic production as this cannot fail to be welcome.

Etiquette, it would seem, does not permit a Duke when charged with literary piracy to defend himself. In consequence of this the Duke of Argyll has been sitting in silence for some months under the imputation that he had incorporated a great part of Mr. Bain's work in "The Unseen Foundations of Society," and even now has only been able to repudiate the accusation by the pen of Mr. Murray, his publisher. However, at whatever date it comes, and through whatever channel, it is a great thing that the denial has come, and I am delighted to know that the Duke of Argyll, although he has no objection to put forward his own language and ideas as the language and ideas of another party, has not so far tampered with the rights of property as to put forward another party's ideas and language as his own.

At Boscombe, Bournemouth.—The Hotel Burlington, "Sunny Boscombe." A charming Hotel, luxuriously appointed, in acres of matured grounds sloping to the sea. Every comfort of home. Most moderate charges. Bournemouth East Station. Tariff of Manager, or at Burlington & Buckingham Palace Hotels, London.

I hope that the matter will now be fully threshed out. We are face to face with one of the most extraordinary literary coincidences on record. By some agency, ostensibly occult, the Duke of Argyll and Mr. Bain have evolved, one after the other, but independently of outward communication, the same arguments and ideas, clothed in all but identical language. What is the explanation? Is it to quote the Borderland "Problem"—"Clairvoyance, Telepathy, or Spirits?" Personally, I incline to the Spook theory, and I would suggest that the question should be referred, with the consent of all parties, to Mr. Stead, assisted by his lady assessor, with the view of his discovering, if possible, the Spook which spoofed the Duke, and bringing him to justice.

In the meantime, however, I hope that it will be observed that, even by Mr. Murray's admission, Mr. Bain's work was published before the Duke of Argyll's had gone to press. Whatever merit, therefore, the work possesses belongs to Mr. Bain and not to the Duke—or the Spook. It also follows that the numerous journalists and reviewers who hailed "The Unseen Foundations of Society" with extravagant laudation as marking a new era in economic thought should forthwith transfer their eulogies to Mr. Bain. I should add that at the last moment before going to press, and after the foregoing remarks were written, I have myself received a letter from Mr. John Murray in answer to what has been said in TRUTH. I will publish it next week, but at present I cannot make room for it.

Major Walter, a neighbour of mine at Twickenham, has published a book called "A True Life of Shakespeare," and I see it stated that the Duke of Clarence, who was a brother officer of the Major, observed "I like the book." With all respect to the late Duke, I hardly think that this is of much importance, beyond showing a kindly feeling towards a friend. More important is it that Canon Liddon, Mr. Spurgeon, and Archdeacon Farrar have also spoken in high commendation of it. The book is well and profusely illustrated, and gives all that is known, or supposed to be known, about Shakespeare and his surroundings, and any one desirous of giving a Christmas present to a friend could not find a better one.

Sumptuous is not one of the adjectives I frequently use, but I certainly think it can be fairly applied to the two volumes just published by Mr. William Heinemann on "Rembrandt: His Life, his Work, and his Time." This is an English edition of the celebrated French work by M. Émile Michel, and Mr. Frederick Wedmore, who has been its editor, may be especially congratulated on his successful completion of a task of no ordinary difficulty and delicacy. The English "Rembrandt" has, in fact, been made more interesting than the French original edition by the addition of a number of important reproductions of celebrated pictures by this great master, which belong to collections in this country, whilst the editor has also shown his good judgment in omitting one or two of the original illustrations. Altogether, the work is a masterpiece.

Mr. Gladstone has presented the Rev. James Dunn, the popular and zealous Vicar of St. John's, Bath, to the Crown living of Croft, near Darlington, of which the net value is £670 a year, with house. Mr. Dunn is a decided High Churchman, indefatigable in his parish work, and exemplary in the discharge of all his duties. He has worked very hard at Bath for many years on a miserably small stipend, and his preferment has given much satisfaction there, and indeed throughout the diocese of Bath and Wells. Mr. Dunn's politics are strongly Radical.

The Bishop of Winchester visited the Isle of Wight last week for the purpose of instituting the Rev. Andrew Milroy, Vicar of St. Mary's, West Cowes, to the important living of Carisbrooke with Northwood, which is one of the most valuable benefices in the island, and to which he has been presented by the President and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford. Mr. Milroy, who has been working hard at Cowes for several years, was formerly Preacher at the Rolls Chapel. His preferment has given much satisfaction at Cowes, where he is highly esteemed and very popular.

The Dean and Chapter of Lichfield have recently put into operation an old statute of the Cathedral which provides that they "shall duly and periodically visit and examine" the Vicars Choral. The latter have accordingly been called upon to furnish written answers to a long series of questions respecting their mode of life, individual religious practices, and methods of carrying out their duties, and also to attend before the Dean and Chapter for oral examination. It is stated that this practice had long fallen into abeyance, and I shall be surprised if the Vicars Choral do not strongly resent its revival. If the Dean and Chapter insist upon it, they ought to be compelled to themselves submit to a similar inquisition at the hands of the choir. I dare say the results would be as interesting in the one case as the other.

Great satisfaction has been given by the appointment of the Archdeacon of Armagh, the Rev. William Meade, to the Bishopric of Cork, for it is in every respect an admirable one. Archdeacon Meade had a distinguished College career, and as Rector for several years of Ardtrea, Co. Tyrone, he did excellent parish work and gained the goodwill of all parties and classes. In addition to his work as Archdeacon of Armagh, Mr. Deane has rendered valuable service to the Irish Church as one of the Secretaries of the General Synod.

The late Bishop Trollope was a High Churchman of the old school, whose wide sympathies caused him to be thoroughly fair to men of all parties, and he was universally beloved and esteemed. The Bishop was a fine scholar, a distinguished antiquarian, an active and successful parish clergyman, and a first-rate man of business. His name was a household word throughout

WINTER VISITORS TO BOURNEMOUTH will find "The Imperial" one of the most complete residential establishments in the United Kingdom. Finest position on East Cliff. Luxuriously furnished, with appointments and cuisine of the highest order. Moderate tariff.—Apply, Manager.—W. H. DORÉ, Proprietor.

Lincolnshire for splendid munificence. The Bishop was a zealous promoter of judicious Church restorations, and he was mainly instrumental in founding the Poor Benefices Augmentation Fund, to which he was a most generous contributor. He represented two of the most ancient Lincolnshire families, the Trollopes of Casewick and the Thorolds of Syston. The Bishop held the living of Leasingham for fifty years, and in 1877 Bishop Wordsworth nominated him to be Suffragan of the Diocese the duties of which office he always discharged mos admirably.

From fully a dozen different sources I have received accounts of the astounding behaviour of the Rev. A. F. Tollemache, Vicar of Whitwick, on the occasion of the funeral of Mr. C. Burton, a member of the Leicester County Council, who was well known and highly respected in the neighbourhood. The interment took place at Whitwick Cemetery, and it was intended that the first part of the burial service should be held in the parish church. When the church was reached, however, it was found that the Vicar had locked the gates, and on being appealed to he declined to open them, and asserted that he had "excommunicated" the deceased, and that he had had a communication from the Bishop of Peterborough approving of what he had done. Canon Denton, who was attending the funeral, expressed some doubt as to the alleged communication from the Bishop, and Mr. Tollemache thereupon called him a "rascal" and a "liar." After further altercation the body was taken to another church, a mile and a-half away, where the service was read. The funeral procession then returned to the cemetery, where Mr. Tollemache caused another painful scene. He stood in his robes by the grave and insisted upon conducting the service, reading in opposition to the clergyman who was properly officiating. This performance he varied by singing a verse and a-half of "Rock of Ages," and by several times blowing a policeman's whistle, which he produced from his pocket.

It is, of course, only charitable to assume that this Vicar is not in a condition of mind to be rightly responsible for his actions. It is therefore satisfactory to note that a letter has been received from the Bishop of Peterborough, intimating that prior to the burial scandal he was in correspondence with the brother of the Vicar regarding the latter's strange conduct. Needless to say, the Bishop denies that he sent any communication approving of Mr. Tollemache's action at the funeral.

In reference to the remarks about the Liberator Fund in last week's TRUTH, I am glad to hear from the Rev. J. Stockwell Walls that an interim report, with a cash statement, is in the hands of the printers, and is on the eve of being issued to the subscribers. I hope that it will be of a nature to encourage further subscriptions.

I am sorry to hear from persons interested in the Royal Hospital for Incurables at Putney that there is little probability of any good resulting from the strong hints on the need of reform in that institution dropped by the late House of Lords Committee. Mainly as the result of these hints, a Committee of Inquiry was appointed under the presidency of Lord Aberdeen, and the Committee has issued a rose-coloured report deprecating all change. The public is thus invited to choose between the opinion of a strong and impartial Parliamentary Committee and that of a private Committee intimately connected with the hospital. If that choice were difficult to make, it would be facilitated by the fact that Lord Aberdeen—a man who never acts without good reason—dissents (in company with Lord Arran) from the report, and has resigned the Presidency of the Hospital. It is also significant that this report was presented to a meeting of Governors without any previous notification that this would be done. Such proceedings can only lead to one result. The income of the Hospital has already suffered heavily by what has happened, and, unless the present mistaken policy is reversed, it is bound to suffer more.

The report on white lead is, that it is impossible that it can be used in manufacture without poisoning the user. With women the poisoning is more fatal than with men, and with women more fatal than with girls. Precautions cannot prevent the poisoning. On reading this I naturally expected that these admissions would be followed by a recommendation on the part of the Commission to prohibit the use of this dangerous stuff in manufacture. I was mistaken. The Commission limits itself to the recommendation that girls alone, under twenty years of age, should not be poisoned. A question, however, occurs to me:—If man, woman, or child is poisoned, or is injured in health, would not an action against the employer lie under the Employers' Liability Bill, should that Bill become law? I should fancy that it would. If a Railway Company were to use an engine that in a given time killed or destroyed the health of the engineers, it would surely be held that this involved negligence. What, then, is the difference between killing by an engine or by white lead? Should my law not be correct, then the law ought to be changed. Many persons suffer in health from match-making. I would give every one of these persons an action against his or her employer.

A hint to doctors and patients. One of my lady readers, having consulted by letter a London specialist, who had several times attended her, was much annoyed the other day on hearing from him in reply that in his absence from home her letter had been "in the ordinary course of business opened by my wife, who naturally was authorised to open and attend to my correspondence in my absence." Why "naturally," and why "the ordinary course of business?" Ladies—and I may add gentlemen—when consulting a doctor, expect from him inviolable secresy. This is equally expected whether the medico is consulted personally or by letter. It seems to me, therefore, that doctors have no right to hand over their correspondence to third parties, even their wives, whom their patients may not desire to take into their confidence. In case, however, the "ordinary course of business" is as described above, patients will do well to ascertain before writing to their medical advisers whether they are at home.

I have received from M. J. E., China, £1 towards Lady Jeune's Fund.

A correspondent has sent me the following verses, with his apologies to Mr. Rudyard Kipling :—

"Jobs."

There's a fiend that troubles man,
Which is "Jobs";
Muddles everything he can,
Our "Jobs";
And his ugly head he rears;
'E's been thriving now for years,
With a smile round both his ears,
Ain't yer, "Jobs"?

Then 'ere's to "Jobs" the master—
British "Jobs," "Jobs," "Jobs";
'E's the cause of all disaster—
Champion "Jobs," "Jobs," "Jobs";
'E's known about Pall Mall,
And in Whitehall as well,
But his real home's in——
Ain't it, "Jobs"?

Oh! it's interest wins the race,
Helped by "Jobs";
And a blockhead gets a place,
Backed by "Jobs";
'E may wear a 'andsome coat,
But a lie is in his throat;
There's a lot o' men of note
Pushed by "Jobs."

'E gives a pretty wink,
Captain "Jobs,"
When he sees a warship sink,
Don't yer, "Jobs"?
Just arsk him to explain,
When our ships upon the main
Steers themselves aground again,
Call on "Jobs."

When the soldier's badly fed,
Look for "Jobs";
When a bay'net twists like lead,
That's old "Jobs"!
'E's been at it now for years,
Leaving such-like souveneers,
'Mid a sea of blood and tears,
Ain't yer, "Jobs"?

What 'e doesn't know o' war,
Gen'ral "Jobs,"
You can ask the blackamore,
Can't they, "Jobs"?
Oh! 'e's fickle but 'e's wise,
'E's a terror for 'iz size
When—'e—wants—to—advertise,
Ain't yer, "Jobs"?

Then 'ere's to "Jobs," the master—
Wicked "Jobs," "Jobs," "Jobs"!
The demon of disaster—
British "Jobs," "Jobs," "Jobs."
And the purpose of this ode
Is served if it 'as showed
That of debt we owe a load
To King "Jobs"!

The following incidents, which lately occurred in a Militia Battalion in the Home District, may possibly be found to have a bearing upon the alleged dearth of Militia officers. The command of the Battalion, falling vacant by the retirement of the Colonel, would primâ facie have devolved upon the senior Major, an officer of long and exemplary service. The Major was, however, given to understand by the General Officer Commanding the Sub-district, that he (the General) intended to make it a rule that he would only have ex-Line officers in command of Militia Battalions under him. Whereupon the Major, not caring to remain longer in the Battalion, if he was to be permanently excluded from it, sent in his papers.

The second Major being an ex-Line Officer, it was to be supposed that he would now obtain the command. Not at all. A fortnight ago, an Officer from a Line Regiment, and, strange to relate, an old brother officer of the G.O.C. was gazetted to the command. I understand that the junior Major has now followed the example of the senior Major, and resigned. The net result is thus, that two perfectly eligible officers have been driven from the Service in disgust, in order that one favoured individual, destitute of all claims, may be jobbed into a particular post. Thus are the interests of the Service, as well as the just claims of individuals, sacrificed to private ends.

For some reason unknown, there seems to be in India a particular difficulty in getting poor Tommy Atkins decently buried. A newspaper cutting just forwarded to me relates how a funeral-party arrived at a graveyard at Gharial to bury a private of the King's Royal Rifles, but found on their arrival that no grave had been dug; so the coffin had to be set down while the mourners went to work and dug the grave, after which the service was performed by the Captain of the deceased's company, no clergyman being in attendance. I refer to the occurrence specially, because another of the same nature was reported from another Indian station only two or three months ago, and such incidents point to culpable negligence on the part of those responsible for the funeral arrangements.

The latest testimonial that is being promoted in the Army is to a garrison schoolmaster at Gibraltar, who is shortly going home on relief; and I understand that the school children—in accordance with the precedents lately set on the most auspicious national occasion—have been directed to ask their parents for the funds requisite for the purpose. The Duke of Connaught—not to mention any other—has a great deal to answer for.

A military correspondent points out to me, with reference to Jubilee pardons for fraudulent enlistment, that the condition as to forfeiture of service depends upon the Army Act, and that though the Queen could pardon a man so as to release him from direct punishment, she could not over-rule the Army Act. Very well; but the question which I have raised is not whether the condition as to forfeiture of service was inevitable or otherwise, but whether it was clearly brought to the knowledge of soldiers before they were led to confess. There is, however, another point of more practical bearing. It seems that, by an Order promulgated about the same time, the forfeited service can be recovered by three years'

C.O.M. WHISKY.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—ANDREWS & Co., Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand.
C.O.M. WHISKY.
C.O.M. WHISKY.

PFUNGST FRÈRES' EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNES.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. PFUNGST & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

exemplary service—i.e., three years clear of an entry in the regimental defaulters' book. The knowledge of this may help some of the men who, as in the case from Egypt to which I referred, are only now discovering that they have to reckon their service from their pardon in 1887.

Here is another piece of information on the same point which may be of use. At the time of the Jubilee, the 2nd East Yorkshire were at Bombay, and before any fraudulent enlisters confessed, the Commanding Officer made a special inquiry as to whether by doing so they would lose anything. He was officially informed that they would not, and this seems to have been on the authority of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, then Commander-in-Chief at Bombay. Two or three years ago, when the 2nd East Yorkshire were at Sheffield, some of the men whose time was expiring found themselves in the same predicament as the man in the 1st Battalion, to whose case I referred a fortnight ago. Some official correspondence took place on the subject, and the grievance was redressed. I may say that I have this on indisputable authority, as may be proved by reference to the official correspondence on the two occasions, which is presumably preserved at the Depot. Surely what was sauce for the 2nd Battalion should be sauce for the 1st

At Shorncliffe the other day the spectacle was to be witnessed of about thirty N.C.O.'s below the rank of Sergeant, belonging to the Provisional Battalion, drilling in the ranks of a squad of recruits. The reason of this is said to have been that at guard-mounting parade the same morning a Lance-Corporal—a lad of about two months' service—on the order to shoulder arms brought his rifle to the same shoulder as the rest of the guard, instead of the N.C.O.'s shoulder. Upon the strength of this delinquency the Adjutant forthwith ordered all the N.C.O.'s two extra drills with the recruits. Such an order seems peculiarly ill-judged. The Corporals and Lance-Corporals are supposed to exercise a certain amount of authority over privates of all classes, and their authority is certainly not likely to be enhanced by inflicting upon them a wholesale degradation.

Several Medical Officers write confirming the views which were the other day expressed in Truth in regard to the system of medical inspection practised in the Foot Guards. The subject, unfortunately, cannot be discussed in any detail, but I am glad to find that there is as strong a feeling against the practice in the Army Medical Staff as there must be in every other quarter, and I trust that the matter will not be lost sight of.

The last reports of the Board of Visitors of Woolwich Academy and Sandhurst College teach very forcibly all that I have so repeatedly insisted upon as to the futility of a military education based upon the "education of a gentleman," as understood at the so-called "Public Schools." As regards Woolwich, it is here officially asserted that electricity and higher mathematics should be taught as absolutely necessary; that commissioned officers of the R.A. and R.E., when they leave the Academy, require further instruction, especially in mechanics, steam, electricity, and hydraulics; that R.E. officers need a more extended knowledge of artillery subjects, and R.A. officers a higher mathematical knowledge, and so on. As regards Sandhurst, after discoursing on the undue extravagance which prevails, and pointing out that the Cadets devote four hours twenty minutes per diem to study in summer, and four hours five minutes in winter, the Visitors recommend that there should be a short course of Military history and geography, and report that the study of French, German, and free hand drawing needs encouragement.

The conclusion to be drawn from these reports is that the teaching of both the military schools is defective in almost all essentials, and that our officers are to a corresponding degree ill-educated and inefficient. So it must continue to be while the entrance to these schools is regulated, not with a view to obtaining lads well grounded in the subjects on which military education rests, but with the view of maintaining the aristocratic traditions of the Service, and suiting the convenience or the whims of one class of schoolmasters. For the perpetuation of this state of things up to the present time we are largely indebted to Mr. Stanhope, who at the beginning of 1891 boldly declared that the first need of the Army was "Public School Boys," and that the object most to be desired was "that the successful candidates for the Army should have a sound and liberal education in all subjects in which boys were ordinarily instructed." I would specially invite Mr. Stanhope's successor to study the results of this theory of military education.

By the way, H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief, when haranguing the Sandhurst Cadets the other day, deplored the painful fact that some cadet had so far forgotten what was due to his position as to communicate with the Press on matters affecting the administration of the College. Who this audacious youth can have been I cannot imagine, nor what journal he can have communicated with. Nevertheless, I would advise him to persevere steadily in his evil courses. Commanders-in-Chief and others in authority may not like too much light let in upon their doings; but Cadets and all others under authority may depend upon it that by assisting to let in such light, whenever needed, they are serving the public interest equally with their own.

The ancient Israelites, when compelled by their Egyptian tyrants to make bricks without straw, were hardly worse off than the servants at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, who are compelled to lay and light the fires of their masters without wood. Every cadet has his allowance of coals from the College, but the servants of the place are expected to provide him with firewood. The idea apparently is that they should go out and collect it in the College grounds; failing which, they have to get it where they can. Such a system is a disgrace to the authorities, and ought to be stopped at once.

Annual Sale.—From 1st January until 6th inclusive, Messrs. Benjamin, of Ulster House, Conduit-st., W., will sell their sample garments at an average reduction of 50 per cent.

Ovaline Toilet Soap, made with Yolk of Egg, is a wonderful discovery for the skin and hair. As a Shaving Soap it has no equal. Price, 8d. per tablet, 2s. per box.—52, King-st., Regent-st., London.

Some bitter growls have been reaching me lately a the favour shown to the Lieutenant-Colonels of the British as compared with those of the Indian Service. The recent Gazette, which recorded the promotion of thirty Lieutenant-Colonels of the British Army, had nothing to say as regards their Indian comrades, although there are several who have held their regimental commands upwards of four years, and many more whose commands have actually expired. If all cannot be promoted at the same rate, one would have thought that it is the Indian officers who ought to set the pace.

When Mr. Campbell-Bannerman next desires to enhance his popularity with the private soldier, he could not do better than relieve the cavalry trooper of the expense to which he is at present put in providing articles absolutely necessary for the maintenance of harness and accoutrements in proper condition. This grievance, as I can personally testify, is a constant source of irritation. Why should a man have to purchase out of his own pocket necessaries like saddle-paste, rubbers, sponges, dandy-brushes, oil, &c.? As well might he be expected to supply forage or ammunition.

The Western Morning News, having at last realised that the grievance of Naval Instructors in regard to their new uniform lies, not in having to wear it but in having to pay for it, admits that there is "some cause for complaint," but goes on to argue that Instructors are better paid than Lieutenants of corresponding service, and that "the grievance is not a very serious one after all." The Naval Instructors in regard to whom this complaint has been made are men forty-five years old and upwards, at which age a Naval Lieutenant is either retired or promoted. As to the seriousness of the grievance, I would suggest that the proprietors of the Western Morning News should forthwith order the editor of that journal to provide himself with a cocked hat and a gold-laced coat for wear in the office, and dock him of three months' salary to pay for these habiliments. I will then take his opinion upon the "seriousness" of these proceedings.

Another Dockyard-town journal made the other day a woeful display of ignorance in an attempt to put me right respecting the relative ranks of Corporals R.M.L.I. and Bombardiers R.M.A. TRUTH does not appear to be aware, says this wiseacre, "that there is such a rank as Lance-Corporal, and that this corresponds with the rank of Bombardier." No; I at once admit that I am not aware of this last point. A Gunner R.M.A., passing for promotion, passes for the rank of Corporal, not that of Bombardier, and is not usually promoted a Bombardier till about a year and a-half after he has so passed. He is sent to sea in command of detachments, which no Lance-Corporal R.M.L.I. would be, and he is in every respect on the footing of a full N.C.O., which a Lance-Corporal is not; for instance, he can only be reduced by a Court Martial, while a Lance-Corporal can be ordered to remove his stripe by his Commanding Officer. A Portsmouth journalist ought not to be ignorant on these points.

I understand that the Admiralty order on which I commented giving the seniority to Corporals R.M.L.I., supersedes a previous order directing that Bombardiers R.M.A., would rank with Corporals according to date of promotion. This is the only just and fair arrangement and it is not easy to see why it should have been revoked.

I have received from Dr. Charles Leet a copy of a pamphlet, entitled "Shipowners and Ships' Surgeons," in which is reprinted the article "Doctors at Sea," which appeared in TRUTH of August 24. Modesty forbids me to speak at any length on this brochure; but I may say that I entirely agree with the views expressed in it, and I trust that it will be widely read and will bring forth good fruit. I am glad to see that Dr. Leet has found "a prominent Board of Trade official" to endorse my opinion, which is that all ships' doctors should be responsible to the Board of Trade, who should through them have control of all questions affecting the health and comfort of crews and passengers.

At this time of year, petitions from Dockyard employés on various matters affecting their interests are sent in to the Admiralty through the heads of Departments; but I understand that before these petitions are transmitted they are copiously annotated by the officials with observations of the "private and confidential" order. Any one can see that this procedure destroys half, or more than half, the value of the document. The object of such a petition is that the employés may address themselves directly to the Admiralty. If intermediate officials, who may possibly consider themselves affected by the petition, are to make their comments upon it, common sense and common justice demand that the petitioners should be allowed to comment on these comments. If one party is to have the right of making "private and confidential" remarks at the expense of the other, both should have this right.

A correspondent sends me the following denunciation of the chimneypot hat and a suggestion as to what would best replace it. Certainly, Naval Officers look very well in frock coats and forage caps, whilst the cap is far more convenient than the tall hat:—

Is it absolutely beyond the ingenuity of man to invent a covering for his head which shall not be a nuisance to himself and to everybody else? The tall hat is destroyed by a little rain, is blown into the gutter by a little wind, it has to be protected in a shower by an umbrella which endangers the eyes of every passer-by, and yet, with every inducement to find a substitute, no one has been able to discover a head-dress which would meet all the requirements. The real difficulty is the frock coat, and, as that is a fixture, the head-gear must be adapted to it. Attempts have been made to cut down the tall hat, but the result has been so terrible that nobody has been found brave enough to make a fright of himself in public. This has not been from vanity, for, as we all know, men have no vanity, which is a property belonging to women only; but from the fact that the low-crowned hat made the best-looking man into a cad. There is one head-dress, and, I believe, one only, which can be set above a frock-coat, without detriment to the dignity or appearance of a man, and that is a forage cap or a yachting cap, which is practically the same thing. For civilians, of course, it should have no gilt or ornamentation. Some years ago, and to some extent even now, this cap used to be worn with the undress frock-coat of Infantry Officers. In their case it was often ornamented with a gold band and gold on the peak, and nothing was more becoming than the combination of the cap and the frock-coat. What a fright an officer would have looked with a tall hat! And it is only habit and custom that prevent us from looking frights. Try this combination in front of a glass, and I think you will be satisfied with the result. I should add that it is worn by Naval Officers

While upon this subject, may I say a word about our evening clothes? They are fairly satisfactory, and may be left alone; but do let us make some change in the butler and the waiter, so that the guests may be known from the waiters with certainty.

The Out-door Officers of Customs having formulated their petition, the "Boatmen" are now anxious to make their voices heard. Considering that only in August the Treasury went through the form of making them concessions, the present hardly seems an opportune time to re-open their case. But I have said again and again that the position of the "Boatmen" is a disgrace to those who are responsible for it, and it is absurd to suppose that their complaints can be silenced by a trumpery rise of pay which works out at the rate of about 2¼d. per week. It would even seem that, after the 2¼d. has been given with one hand, it is being taken away with the other, for I hear that at one port (Grimsby) the working hours per week have been screwed up within the last few months from eighty to ninety-six. Sooner or later the whole terms under which these men are engaged will have to be revised, and it would be much better for all parties that it should be sooner rather than later.

An Uppingham ratepayer sends me some letters which have appeared in a local paper regarding what are called the "erratic deeds" of the Uppingham Guardians. It is complained that whilst money is lavishly spent in some directions, the Guardians are exercising a harsh economy in another by reducing the paupers' rations. Whether this complaint is well founded, I cannot pretend to say. I can, however, heartily support the further attack which is made on the Guardians for refusing to admit reporters to their meetings. It is really high time these Boards were deprived of the power to exclude the Press, and hide their doings in darkness.

With reference to the complaint which I mentioned last week as to the pollution of a stream at Coalstoun, Haddingtonshire, by sewage from Yester House and Gifford village, a correspondent assures me that the water is not used for drinking or other domestic purposes at any point between Yester and Haddington, where it falls into the Tyne. Moreover, the stream is a very fast running one—there being a considerable fall between Yester and Haddington—and consequently the accumulation of sewage is difficult, if not impossible.

A local correspondent sends me some additional facts with respect to the account which I gave last week of the proceedings on the selection of designs for the Pump Room extension at Bath, which put a somewhat different complexion on what passed. He states, in the first place, that Mr. Waterhouse in awarding the first premium did not understand that the Committee desired to give special attention to a proposed building over the old Roman bath, rather than to the Concert Room, and that, upon this being explained, Mr. Waterhouse stated that he should award the first premium to the design marked "O," which he had originally placed second. In the next place, I am informed that the architect whose design was thus selected—that of the City Surveyor of Works—so far from being a persona grata to the Council, is so far the reverse that one or two prominent members were decidedly disconcerted by the result. I give this version of the story for what it is worth, but I hope that it may be the authentic one.

I have been asked to rebuke the shopkeepers of Aberdeen for the cruel way in which—so it is alleged—they overload young girls who deliver goods for them. Under ordinary circumstances I should not have deemed this a matter calling for my attention; but my correspondent remarks pathetically that the clergy and religious lights of the town are so busy in combating the polka and enormities of that class that serious social evils flourish unchecked. I, therefore, undertake the duty of the "Meenisters" by informing the shopkeepers that they had much better dance the polka with their shop-girls than set them to walk excessive distances with loads beyond their strength.

Not many months back the inhabitants of Coalville in public meeting assembled, protested against George Smith—the scourge of gipsy children and dwellers in movable dwellings—distinguishing himself from other George Smiths by assuming the title "Of Coalville." But protest is all in vain, for the signature "George Smith of Coalville" has continued to display itself in the newspapers up to the present date. The assumption of this title by Smith is quite unjustifiable. He is not a native of Coalville. He lives at, and advertises from, as all the world knows, "The Cabin, Crick, Rugby," and is no more George Smith of Coalville, than George Smith of Timbuctoo, or Constantinople. The Coalville people are now anxious to know how they can deliver the town from the stigma which Smith insists upon inflicting on it Perhaps an injunction would be granted in Chancery to restrain Smith from styling himself "Of Coalville.' Failing this, I fear there is nothing for it but a short Act of Parliament.

Some few weeks back I mentioned that a question as to the right of Railway Companies to charge for "excess luggage" had been raised by a dispute between Mr. Hastie, a solicitor, and the Great Western Company. Lest any of my readers should be tempted, on the strength of what was then said, to contest the claims of Railway Companies, I hasten to mention that the question between Mr. Hastie and the Great Western was the other day decided by Judge Lumley Smith in favour of the Company. It was held that the charges made in that case were entirely in accordance with the Company's Acts, and the Judge refused leave to appeal

---

A lady sends me an article from a Hampshire paper in which the work of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is praised, whilst such objects as the Society for the Protection of Birds has in view are more or less disparaged. It is, of course, desirable, as the writer urges, that the former excellent Society should stick to its own special and recognised field of operations. But there is plenty of room also for the second Society, and it is difficult to understand how anybody who supports the one can fail to approve of the other.

Since the conclusion of the Zierenberg case, applications have been addressed to me from at least a dozen different quarters to investigate the doings of other alleged Zierenbergs. All in good time. With Christmas so close at hand, I may perhaps be allowed to take a week's rest. After that I shall be ready to do my best.

A summons under the Food and Drugs Act concerning the alleged adulteration of certain vinegar was recently dismissed by the Manchester Magistrates on the strength of a certificate from the Somerset House Analysts. The City Analyst, Mr. Estcourt, had previously furnished a report of a different tenor, and in a letter to a local paper he points out that whereas he gave the details of the analysis upon which he founded his opinion, the Somerset House authorities simply stated an opinion without supplying any details of the analysis upon which such opinion was based. Mr. Estcourt complains that this reticence on the part of the officials is habitual, and that they never convey the least particle of information as to new processes either of analysis or adulteration. It is, I think, usually wise for a Judge to decline to enter into an explanation of reasons for his decisions. The rule ought not, however, to be applied to analytical work. Certainly it is well calculated to produce such an impression as Mr. Estcourt says is prevalent with reference to "the recognised incompetency of the Somerset House Laboratory officials."

The nearer the Church the further from God; and I suppose, on the same principle, the nearer the County-court the further from payment of debts. A worthy tradesman of Spalding supplied to the local County-court, during the years 1870-2, books and forms for the use of the Court to the value of over £30. At the end of 1872 he delivered his bill at the County-court Office, and from that day to this he has been vainly endeavouring to get his money. His last application was made to the Treasury, and the answer received was that the claim had been disallowed when last sent in, twelve years ago. The ground for disallowing it seems to be that it was barred by the Statute of Limitations; but, as the man very reasonably asks, how could he help that? How was he to recover his money? Was he to county-court the County-court? If so, he could only sue the Court before itself. If he got judgment, was he next to ask the Court to commit itself on a judgment summons for non-payment, or to issue execution against itself, and sell itself up? The thing sounds absurd, but it is no joke for the unfortunate creditor, and it is a scandal both to the Court and to the Treasury that the debt should have been left unpaid, still more that refuge should now be taken in a legal technicality for the purpose of permanently evading payment.

The saying that what is one man's meat is another's poison has just received a novel illustration at Birkenhead. A Borough Magistrate was asked to order the destruction of four pieces of beef which had been exposed for sale at a local butcher's shop. The butcher's defence was that he bought the beef at the Liverpool abattoir, and he called two of the city Meat Inspectors, who stated that although the animal had suffered from pleurisy and several hard tubercles were found on the outside of the lungs, they passed the carcases as fit for human food. One of these officials explained that when the tubercles were hard and not "soft and cheesy," it was their practice not to condemn the carcases, but to cut off the diseased piece. On the other hand, the Birkenhead Meat Inspector and the Medical Officer of Health and three other medical witnesses deposed that the meat was totally unfit for human consumption. Dr. Vachor, an authority on the subject, said the meat might cause tuberculosis in persons liable to contract such a disease. On this testimony the Magistrate, of course, made the desired order. The case ought to lead to some reform in the system of meat inspection at Liverpool; indeed, it is hardly conceivable that the people of that city will any longer tolerate a state of things under which flesh considered good enough for their consumption is legally condemned as unfit for human food in the neighbouring borough.

Amongst the numerous Police-court cases to which my attention has been called during the past week is one in which the Liverpool Bench sentenced a man to three months' imprisonment for loitering "with intent," and stealing a packet of sweets. The correspondent who sends me the report thinks that the punishment was excessive, presumably because the prisoner had over £30 in his possession, and said he did not know what he was doing. The evidence as to his movements, however, indicated that he very well understood what he was about, and the fact that he had so much money in his pocket was, if anything, an aggravation of the offence. I cannot, therefore, concur in my correspondent's censure of the Bench.

A month or so ago I referred to the monstrous sentence passed upon a well-known Alderney man, Mr. Daniel Sebire, who, as it appeared, was being vindictively prosecuted and punished for a technical offence on account of his efforts as a reformer, which have made him obnoxious to the official ring. That this view of the case is taken by a large section of the community was shown the other day, when Sebire, on being released from prison, was welcomed back to his home by a cheering crowd like a popular hero. Meanwhile, Sebire's opponents have presented a petition to the Judge and Jurats of Alderney, praying for his expulsion from the Douzaine. As I suggested at the time, it was probably chiefly with this object that his conviction was procured.

There has lately been a good deal of talk at Leighton Buzzard respecting the manner in which justice, or what passes for justice—is dispensed by Mr. A. Macnamara, the Chairman of the local Petty Sessions. At a recent sitting of the Court Mr. F. Spiers, a well-known tradesman in the town, was summoned for cruelty to a horse; and the Bench not only inflicted a penalty which was heavier than the circumstances of the case justified, but the Chairman followed up the decision by some most uncalled-for and gratuitously offensive remarks to "this man Spiers." On previous occasions, it seems, Mr. Macnamara has similarly insulted local tradesmen and others; and, after perusing reports of his utterances which have been submitted to me, I am not at all surprised to learn that there is a growing feeling in the town that an end ought to be put to the "Squire's" domination of the Bench.

SHIRTS FOR EVENING WEAR, with Pique and Fancy Fronts. Dressing Gowns and Jackets. At-home Dinner Jackets.—SAMPSON & Co., 268, 270, Oxford-street, W.

CREMER'S ENTERTAINMENTS.—PARKINS & GOTTO, of Oxford-street, having acquired the goodwill of the business of the late Mr. Cremer, of Regent-street and Bond-street, have re-engaged all the best artists, and are now booking orders for the holidays.

A question has been asked in the House of Commons with regard to the case of Mr. G. E. Horrobin, of the Bramley Union, to which I referred last week. Sir Walter Foster's reply was based upon what he described as "a very full statement of the facts," which the Local Government Board had received from the Guardians. Considering that it was the action of the Poor Law authorities which was impugned, it is absurd to suppose that information derived from that source alone could enable the Department to express an opinion of any value on the matter. Why was not inquiry made of the Mayor of Leeds, who occupied a perfectly impartial position between the parties, and who came to the conclusion, as he said in Court, that "a gross misuse of the forms of law" had been made by the Union against Mr. Horrobin? As a matter of fact, the version of the case which I gave last week is fully borne out by the correspondence between Mr. Horrobin's solicitors and the Clerk to the Guardians, which has since been published. And from what I hear, this is by no means the first occasion on which the officials of the Bramley Union have done gross injustice by obtaining warrants against men under the Vagrants Act without ascertaining whether a warrant—or, indeed, any other proceeding—was necessary.

A very unsatisfactory decision of the "not guilty but don't do it again" kind was given in the Glasgow Central Police-court last week. A policeman was charged with assaulting a man named Donaghy, and the latter's evidence was supported by that of his sweetheart. On the other side a number of the defendant's fellow-constables denied that any assault had been committed. After hearing the police testimony given on behalf of the Zierenbergs I have reluctantly come to the conclusion that there are members of the force who will affirm or deny anything, as it may suit them. No doubt there are some of this type in Glasgow; at all events the Magistrate said he believed Donaghy and his sweetheart were telling the truth. As to the evidence of the constables, "he did not want to say anything," but "as there had been so much of it he must find the charge not proven." To dismiss a case on the strength of untrustworthy evidence because there had been "so much of it" is certainly a curious proceeding.

The Coupé Company's Telegraphic Address is "Coupé, London."

The following is my Legal Pillory for the week. My readers will, I think, agree with me in regarding the Warrington case as by far the most scandalous in the list. To begin with, a mere fine was an utterly inadequate penalty for the abominable cruelty which the woman Atkins practised on the poor little workhouse waif whom she had "adopted," and if the Magistrates had done their duty this child torturer would have had to spend her Christmas in gaol. But whilst the Bench are greatly to blame for their misguided lenity, what shall be said of the Guardians who entrusted the child to the tender mercy of Mrs. Atkins? It appears that once the Board had, "after due deliberation," sanctioned the adoption of the little girl, they ceased to exercise any supervision over her, and she was left month after month to a life of slavery and ill-treatment which was only ended at last by the intervention of the N.S.P.C.C. The conduct of the Guardians and their officers cannot be too strongly condemned, and the Chairman of the Bench was absurdly mild in letting them off with the remark that they had "acted unwisely":—

Stockport Police-court. Before Messrs. T. Kay and T. P. Torkington. Samuel Hulme and Margaret Johnson, a woman living with him, charged with cruelty to five children. Two of the children had been brutally beaten by Hulme, and they were all grossly neglected, living under most filthy and wretched conditions. Hulme fined £1 and costs; Johnson, 10s. and costs.

Birmingham Police-court. Before the Mayor, Messrs. Lawley Parker, Fallows, and Bloor. Frederick Precious, pugilist, and Albert Allan, convicted of assaulting John Aston. Without provocation, Precious struck complainant in the face, knocking him down, and then held him down and punched him, while Allan kicked him on the top of the head and cut it open. Complainant had to have his injuries attended to at the hospital. Precious fined £1 and costs; Allan 10s. and costs.

Bradford West Riding Police-court. John Bateman, charged with assaulting his wife and his daughter. He struck his wife and knocked her head against the furniture, and, when the daughter went to her mother's assistance, he gave her two black eyes. He had previously ill-treated them, and a separation order was granted. Fined £2 for assaulting his wife and £1 for assaulting his daughter.

Warrington Police-court. Before Alderman Harrison and other Magistrates. Alice Atkins, charged with ill-treating Mary E. Connor, aged eight. Connor, a puny little girl, had been taken out of the workhouse and adopted by defendant with the sanction of the Guardians. The child had to get up and light the fire, wash dishes, scrub the floor, and do other work before going to school. She had been repeatedly beaten by defendant, and when rescued she had two black eyes, scratches and scars on her cheeks and nose, cuts on her hand (caused by Mrs. Atkins with a knife), and bruises on her arms, legs, and body. Fined £2 and costs.

Stockport Police-court. Before Mr. James Leigh and Colonel Wilkinson. John Ryan, charged with sleeping out. Ten days.

Heanor Petty Sessions. Before Messrs. R. S. W. Sitwell, J. J. A. Woolley, and W. Smith. Edmund Nix, aged about 70, charged with stealing 14 lb. of coal. Fourteen days.

Birmingham Police-court. Before the same Magistrates. Edwin Miller and Thomas Manning, convicted of stealing three pairs of boots from a warehouse. They broke a window and abstracted the boots. Three months each.

Before the Stipendiary and other Magistrates. Samuel Jones (18), charged with stealing an orange, valued at a penny. Seven days.

Bradford Borough Police-court. Before Mr. Skidmore (Stipendiary), the Mayor, and Mr. W. Oddy. Five persons, four being youths, convicted of gambling by playing cards in the public streets. Three of them were sent to gaol for a month each without the option of a fine; a fourth was fined 18s. or fourteen days; and the fifth 13s. or ten days.

Liverpool County Sessions. Before Mr. Hugh Perkins and other Magistrates. Ellen Winstanley pleaded guilty to stealing a pair of boots. Six months.

Northampton County Petty Sessions. Before Sir George Gunning and other Magistrates. Eli Martin, shepherd, charged with stealing a bit of coal, valued at sixpence. He said he had had a great deal of trouble lately and had lost two children. This put him to great expense and led him to commit the offence. One month.

Grimsby Borough Police court. Before the Mayor and other Justices. James Howard, master of a fishing smack, charged with assaulting two of the hands named Finning and Walker. He knocked Finning down, knelt on him, and hit him in the face, and then kicked him in the eye with his sea boot. Walker was assaulted whilst in the rigging. Fined six guineas.

Grimsby Borough Police court. Before the Mayor and other Justices. John Johnson late cook on a smack, charge with stealing a coil of rope Two months.

Dennis Brown, charged with absconding from a smack Twenty one days.

Loughborough Police court. Before Messrs. J. Underwood, T. Conner, D. Tabberer, R. J. Goodacre, and G. Stevenson. Joseph Benford, Joseph Greaves, and Sarah Ann Benford charged with assaulting Elizabeth Ann Withers. The female defendant held Withers and kicked her, whilst the men struck her about the head with their fists. The Bench considered it a very bad case. Fined 40s. each and costs.

Watford Divisional Sessions. Before Messrs. J. F. Watkins, R. W. Henderson, W. R. Woolrych, E. H. Loyd, F. S. Knyvett, and the Hon. A. Holland Hibbert. George Chambers and Luke Franklin, charged with poaching. Chambers, 14 days; Franklin, one month.

Bromyard Petty Sessions. Before Mr. W. H. Barneby, Colonel Bourne, Captain Enderby, and other Justices. William Green, charged with cruelty to a horse, which was found down a clay-pit in his brickyard. The animal was in the pit from Sunday till Wednesday, and rubbed off portions of its flesh in its struggles to get out. Fined £2 and costs.

Halesworth Petty Sessions. Wm. Hines, army pensioner, charged with stealing a pair of garden shears. Nothing was known against him. Twenty-one days.

Weobley Police-court. Before Messrs. W. Prescott, G. W. Marshall, and W. F. Walker. John Brace, charged with assaulting Lucretia Neville, who said he rushed at her and knocked her into the ditch, and then kicked her. She had to go to the doctor. Fined £1 and costs.

Sleaford Police-court. Before Colonel Wilson, Captain Reeve, Messrs. H. Smith, E. J. Lucas-Calcroft, and C. Sharpe. Henry Wildmore, charged with trespassing for game. Fine and costs, £2. 14s.; in default, twenty-one days.

Rawtenstall Police-court. Before the Mayor (Alderman Worswick) and Mr. J. E. Holt. James Allen, charged with assaulting James Lord by knocking him down and kicking him in such a savage manner about the head as to render him unconscious. Fined £5, including costs.

Cranbrook Police-court. Before Major Atkin-Roberts and Colonel Ready. William Weeks, charged with stealing 2 cwt. of coal. Six weeks.

Bath County Police-court. Ernest Hobbs, a lad, charged with stealing a coat. One month.

A singular course was adopted at Munster Assizes on Friday in a case in which one Kelly pleaded guilty to the abduction of a girl of thirteen. The Judge told the prisoner that he had committed a very grave offence against public morals and against the innocence of "that young woman"; but instead of inflicting the term of hard labour which Kelly richly deserved, his Lordship consented to liberate him on bail (to come up for judgment if called upon) on his undertaking to marry the girl and "make an honest woman of her." His Lordship's action was doubtless well-meant, but to my mind it was most ill-advised. It enables Kelly to entirely escape the punishment which the law provides for his crime, and the chances are that a further wrong will be done to the girl by making her unhappy for the rest of her life. What good can be expected of a marriage contracted under such circumstances by a child of thirteen?

Much indignation has been excited at Exmouth by the conduct of the police in arresting an innocent girl on a charge of child-desertion. It appears that the police not only made a stupid blunder by taking the girl into custody, but added to the wrong they had done by detaining her in the cells after they knew that she could not be the guilty party. She was arrested on Thursday evening, and the same night her employer showed that she could not possibly be the offender, and offered substantial bail for her release. A Superintendent named Jesse declined, however, to liberate her, and she was kept in the cells till mid day on Friday. She was then taken before a Magistrate, and after a statement on behalf of the police that "a mistake had been made" she was at once discharged. It is to be hoped that Superintendent Jesse's official superiors will take serious notice of this monstrous "mistake."

I understand that the extraordinary narrative which I published three weeks ago respecting the arrest and imprisonment of a collier named Smith at Ashton-in-Makerfield, near Wigan, has led to an investigation by the county police authorities, but up to the present no report on the subject has been issued. It is stated, however, that the constable who played a prominent part in the story has been removed from Ashton. Smith's fellow-colliers have given a practical proof of their sympathy with him by subscribing a sum of £20 for him, and I have been asked for advice as to the disposal of this money. On the whole, I think it would be wiser to hand the £20 over to Smith rather than to engage in litigation. At the same time his friends should see that a full statement of the case is laid before the Home Secretary, and also the Standing Joint Committee.

A scandalously severe sentence was passed last week at Beccles Petty Sessions on two gamebeaters who had been convicted of stealing a pheasant. The prisoners had been employed as beaters by Mr. Hayley, of Worlingham Hall, and they concealed a pheasant in the park, and were detected when taking the bird away. Both men were sentenced to three weeks' hard labour, but, considering the circumstances, they ought surely to have been dealt with under the First Offenders Act. I suppose, however, that the Magistrates are themselves game-preservers, and that they were therefore stimulated to undue severity with the object of warning other beaters. The Home Secretary would do well to release the men, as they have been more than sufficiently punished by this time.

It is unwise of the average policeman to attempt to emulate the remarkable feats of Sherlock Holmes. A shop was lately broken into at Walsall, and three and sixpence stolen from the till. Lynx-eyed investigators found a button outside the shop, and noted that inside there was a board with cobbler's wax upon it. These were only slender clues, but they were enough for the subtle reasoners who had the matter in hand. A young man named Raines had a button missing from his coat and some cobbler's wax adhering to that garment; therefore he was charged with the crime, and last week stood his trial at Staffordshire Assizes. It is hardly necessary to say that he was not convicted upon such flimsy evidence; for, as Mr. Justice Cave pointed out, there are thousands of buttons of the pattern in question, and plenty of persons might be discovered in Walsall with cobbler's wax upon their clothes. His lordship, indeed, declared that he had never seen a more scandalously got-up case in his life; it was what was called a police case and nothing more. No doubt it is some consolation to the police to reflect that if they egregiously blundered so did the Magistrates in sending this "scandalously got-up case" for trial.

MESSRS. HARBOROW, Hosiers, Glovers, and Shirtmakers by appointment to the Royal Family, have opened new premises, 6 and 7, New Bond-street, in connection with their old-established business, 15, Cockspur-street.

If it is, as I am given to understand, a maxim of the Equity Courts that those who come into Court must come with clean hands, there never were, I should imagine, a more unpromising batch of parties to a Chancery suit than the "Female Bridegroom" and her relatives. Equity has, I take it, done all that could be expected of her in sending the whole family away empty. What chiefly comforts me, however, in regard to this action is that it distinctly stays the onward march of Woman. We may have lady stockbrokers, lady barbers, lady Government clerks, lady County Councillors, lady smokers, but we can't yet have a female bridegroom, nor, by inference, a female paterfamilias. Equity itself draws the line here.

It would seem that Mrs. Anna Ruppert is making a bold effort to rehabilitate herself after her late prosecution at Dublin and her exposure in the English medical papers. I have received from all quarters copies of the circulars which she has been issuing by post. A "free lecture" which she gave a day or two ago at the Lyric Theatre, supplemented by the attractions of "one of the best Regimental bands" and an offer of a "box of soaps and face powder worth 2s. 6d." to every lady in the audience, has also been trumpeted far and wide. It seems desirable, therefore, to remind the public, especially lady readers of Truth, that this person has been convicted at Dublin of infringing the Poisons Act, that charges of the gravest character have been made against her in the Lancet and the British Medical Journal, and that a cautionary notice against her was some time ago issued by the Berlin police. That ladies' papers in London should, in the face of these facts, continue to puff Mrs. Ruppert is simply scandalous, and that a half-page advertisement of her lecture should have been allowed to appear in a paper usually so careful as the Queen is certainly calculated to cause astonishment.

A case has recently come under my notice in which this woman was consulted by a young lady suffering from a troublesome skin complaint. Mrs. Ruppert obtained from her considerable sums of money, and did her considerable harm—as might be expected from what has already been proved in regard to her preparations. A relative of the young lady came to the rescue, and insisted on a return of the money, and eventually obtained a repayment, not of the whole, but of some £8 or £9. An analysis of the mixture for the hair made for the purposes of this case disclosed the presence of twelve grains of protochloride of mercury to ten ounces of mixture. It looks as if the example of the Berlin police might be followed with advantage in London.

I would warn "Clergymen of all Denominations" against the insidious proposals addressed to them by "The London Dress Company" from 1, Finsbury-square, E.C. "Knowing the great distress existing throughout the country," this philanthropic firm has, it says, "decided to give a share of its profits this winter to any deserving fund nominated by a clergyman from whose parish an order is booked." The share is to be calculated at the rate of 1s. upon every order for "a full dress length, of the finest quality," price 10s. 6d.; and a "Chartered Accountant"—blessed word!—is to "go through our books and certify as to the number of orders received from each district." The "London Dress Company" which issues this seasonable circular possesses apparently nothing in the nature of a warehouse. Its name is inscribed upon the door of a ground-floor office at the corner of Finsbury-square, and on the same door is the name of the "National Finance and Advance Company." If the "Clergy of all Denominations" are capable of appreciating the significance of these facts, they will think twice before assisting to book orders for this firm of Christian philanthropists.

Shuckburgh, the Bristol usurer, whose bogus testimonials and disreputable proceedings in other directions have been so fully exposed in Truth, is on the same tack as the "London Dress Company," or the "National Advance Company"—whichever it may be. To the last of his touting circulars, which are specially designed to ensnare poor clergymen, he attaches the following notice:—

> During the winter months it is my custom to give small sums to any deserving charity throughout England, same being guaranteed on the word of any clergyman. Clergymen having any deserving case, and on giving me particulars, I shall be pleased to help.

If any clergyman can make this canting rascal disgorge a part of his ill-gotten gains for any deserving object, by all means let him do so. But let there be no mistake about Shuckburgh's character or his motives. He has already been shown in a court of justice to be an unscrupulous blackguard, and this piece of humbug proves him to be a brazen hypocrite as well.

The other day a young author, who had been victimised by a shady firm of publishers, called my attention to an advertisement of the firm in question on the front page of the Athenæum. Side by side with it I found an advertisement of the Society of Authors warning budding literary genius to consult them before concluding agreements with publishers. Thus side by side were displayed the bane and the antidote. It occurred to me, however, that the Athenæum, as a high class literary journal, would have done better to refuse shady publishing firms the use of its columns, and thereby further the ends which the Society of Authors has in view.

The Earl of Mar requests me to state that he has addressed to the so-called "Society of Science, Letters, and Art (of London)" a request that his name as a patron of the "Society" may be withdrawn. His lordship adds that he originally countenanced the concern, some years ago, in the belief that the object was a good one, but that he has merely expressed approval of the object, and never been in any way connected with the direction. This I can readily believe. I hope that Lord Mar's action will lead the other prominent persons whose names have been mentioned to dissociate themselves from Sturman.

Apropos to my recent articles on Doctors and Quacks, an Irish reader of TRUTH utters a vigorous complaint concerning chemists' charges for making up prescriptions. He founds his complaint on a bill of £38 recently delivered by a chemist for medicines supplied during eight and a-half months. On one date appear the following items:—6d., 1s. 8d., 2s. 2d., 1s. 2d., 2s. 6d., 2s., 1s. 6d., 6d., 6d. It will surprise no one to hear that the unfortunate patient to whom drugs were administered on this scale is now no more. Personally, I should be disposed to dispute this bill, and if that course is taken I shall watch the result with interest. But what surprises me even more than the chemist's bill is that any doctor in his senses should prescribe medicines at this rate—if any did.

To no swindles is my attention more frequently drawn than to the advertisements of "new second-hand" plate for sale by private individuals, the private individual being frequently a lady desirous of disposing of duplicate wedding-presents. There is an enormous trade done in this way, exclusively in cheap rubbish which is manufactured for the purpose. In some cases the dealers themselves set up a private house and advertise their goods in various characters. In others they send them to bonâ fide private individuals to be disposed of on commission. Such a system is distinctly fraudulent, since no one in his senses would buy the goods at the prices asked, if he knew with whom he was dealing. I would, therefore, point out that this trade is carried on exclusively through the medium of the Press, and that it rests entirely with newspaper proprietors to continue it or stop it. This hint seems specially needed in Ireland; for n one recent copy of a Dublin Conservative paper I find no less than eleven of these advertisements, all plainly bearing their character on their faces.

One "C. Brandram," giving an address at a Post-office, has been advertising in some of the London papers for "Educated Young Gentlemen—Musical preferred." It may interest educated young gentlemen of musical proclivities to know that "C. Brandram" (whose professional name is "Charles E. Kemble," and who last hailed from 1, Canterbury-street, New Brompton, Kent) requires first and foremost, not a musical gentleman, but a premium of £5. On payment of this sum he is willing to confer a permanent appointment as his concert assistant at a salary of £3 a week with board and lodging. In a letter written to a gentleman who desired to interview him before concluding an engagement on these terms, Mr. Brandram Kemble writes:—

> Coming for an interview would certainly be useless, as I want a young man to do some business for me at once.
>
> It is a most tiresome and difficult task in these days to convince people that anything is genuine, especially where money is required, but if it would be of any use to you I would divide the £5 into three parts, and you would pay one third instead of half on coming.

Why on earth a man who is to be boarded and lodged free for a week and to be paid £3 at the week's end, should start by paying £1. 13s. 4d. to the party who is to board, lodge, and pay him, is extremely difficult to understand. It is a comfort to hear from Mr. Brandram that a difficulty is nowadays experienced in getting money out of people by such ridiculous pretexts, and it will always be a pleasure to me to aid to the best of my ability in increasing this difficulty.

Mr. Baldwin, the "Professor of Escamoterie," to whom I lately devoted some space, is relieving his feelings, I learn, by abusing TRUTH in his advertisements and in the course of his entertainments. At Southampton the other night his emotions so far mastered him that he said that I, or any one who accused him of claiming spiritual powers, must be "an arrant ass." This may be good enough for a provincial audience, but those who know anything of the controversy between this excited conjurer and TRUTH, know well enough that the point against him is that, both he and his wife were represented as possessing mystic or supernatural powers in an article in the last issue of Borderland; that although he knew beforehand that this article was to appear, he offered no disclaimer of the powers there attributed to him until after the article had been dealt with in TRUTH; and that when he then published his tardy disclaimer, he was contradicted by his own handwriting in his letter to Mr. Stead quoted in the article. Does Baldwin now repudiate his letter to Mr. Stead? Does he assert that he ever disclaimed or objected to the Borderland article until he found that instead of serving as an invaluable advertisement it was likely to do him more harm than good? Can he answer the questions I have put to him in regard to sundry objectionable features in his public performance? If not, the less he says about his controversy with TRUTH, the less likely is the epithet "ass" to recoil on himself.

I am getting a good deal of information about the Baldwin performances from distant parts of the world, and it all confirms what I have said as to this worthy pair doing everything in their power to insinuate, notwithstanding their printed notices, that Mrs. Baldwin is gifted with occult and inexplicable powers. How much of the occult or inexplicable there really is may be seen from the following letter from Kimberley:—

> During his sojourn in Kimberley "Professor" Baldwin and his wife performed the "clairvoyance" trick in practically the same manner as that described in your article—which is justly termed

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, andcheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

"The Latest Spiritualistic Fraud." He announced that Mrs. Baldwin could only do the "clairvoyance" business on two occasions during his visit, seeing that it was a great strain upon her mental power. Believing the man to be a rank impostor, I attended the two séances which were held in the theatre here. At that date (May, 1891) the Manipur fighting was taking place in India, and as I happened to have two brothers engaged in the hostilities, I wrote upon my visiting card, "Is my brother R——, at Manipur, all right? Is he there at the present time?" In due course my card was pressed against the forehead of Mrs. Baldwin (who was seated on the stage covered with a sheet), and in a sepulchral tone I was told by that lady that my brother was well, and that at that particular time he was recruiting his health in Bombay. I accordingly put myself in communication with my brother, and in a couple of months' time I received a letter from him from Assam to the effect that he had never been near Bombay since 1879. To give the devil his due, I must admit that this clairvoyance trick was cleverly performed by the Baldwin couple; indeed, one of the most ignorant of the Kimberley Borough Councillors publicly presented Mrs. Baldwin with a diamond as a thank-offering for a piece of gratuitous advice which she had given him regarding some business speculation.

Baldwin appeared to me to be an exceptionally 'cute Yankee; he never stayed more than a week or so in any one town in this country, and always, of course, made a point of picking out of the hundred or so questions about twenty which the merest tiro at legerdemain could easily answer.

I remarked the other day, apropos of petitions to public bodies, that "you may get women and unedu. cated men to put their names to anything." "Is not this," asks one of my readers, "somewhat rough on women? Surely your compositor must be responsible for this slip?" No, it was not the poor compositor this time. I assume full responsibility. I don't mean, of course, that you can literally get any woman to sign anything. But I certainly mean that, given a fairly plausible petition, and a canvasser who understands his business, he ought to be able to get the signatures of nine out of ten women that he calls upon—married or single.

A truly delectable exhibition was offered last week to the people of Burnley by William Heaton of that town, who claims to be "the most expert slaughterman in the three Kingdoms," and who has, in his own words, "thrown down the gauntlet to all comers, even to our Yankee friends and others in the Colonies, and failed to meet a foeman worthy of his steel." In order to prove that he "meant Business and not Bounce," Heaton undertook to give two exhibitions of his prowess, each consisting in the slaughtering of "one beast and five sheep" in forty minutes. The public of Burnley were admitted to this elevating entertainment at 3s., 2s., and 1s., and very enjoyable they must have found it. We are, indeed, a civilised nation, and well may we raise our hands in pious horror at Spaniards and Frenchmen who can find entertainment in the public slaughtering of bulls.

Mr. Staples has now nearly completed his picture of the House of Commons, having had sittings from most of the Members who are portrayed in it. On Friday Mr. Gladstone gave him a sitting at Downing-street.

It has been generally rumoured in the Edinburgh Parliament House during the last week that Lord Watson is about to retire from his judicial duties in the House of Lords, and that he will be succeeded by Lord Advocate Balfour. In this case Mr. Asher will become Lord Advocate, and he would probably be succeeded as Solicitor-General for Scotland by Mr. Ure, who unsuccessfully contested West Perthshire last year, and Linlithgowshire a few months ago. It would most likely be arranged for Mr. Ure to replace Mr. Balfour as member for Clackmannan and Kinross, which is a perfectly safe Liberal seat.

I understand that the Garter recently conferred upon the Marquis of Breadalbane was at first offered, with a Marquisate, to the Earl of Bessborough. The head of the house of Ponsonby was deeply touched by so striking a proof of Mr. Gladstone's regard, but he did not see his way to accept the offer. This refusal, coupled with his Lordship's absence from the Home Rule Division in the House of Lords, gives colour to the report that he wishes henceforth to be classed as a Unionist.

A friend calls my attention to the following lines of Tom Moore, published in 1834. They seem sufficiently up to date to bear republication, so little has the Peerage progressed in sixty years:—

MUSINGS OF AN UNREFORMED PEER.

Of all the odd plans of this monstrously queer age,
The oddest is that of reforming the peerage;—
Just as if we great dons with a title and star
Did not get on exceedingly well as we are,
And perform all the functions of noodles by birth,
As completely as any born noodles on earth.

How acres descend is in law-books displayed,
But we, as wise acres descend, ready-made;
And by right of our rank in Debrett's nomenclature
Are, all of us, born legislators by nature;—
Like ducklings to water instinctively taking,
So we, with like quackery, take to law-making;
And God forbid any reform should come o'er us,
To make us more wise than our sires were before us.

Th' Egyptians of old the same policy knew,—
If your sire was a cook, you must be a cook too;
Thus making from father to son a good trade of it.
Poisoners by right (so no more could be said of it),
The cooks, like our lordships, a pretty mess made of it;
While fam'd for conservative stomachs, th' Egyptians
Without a wry face bolted all the prescriptions.

It is true we've among us some peers of the past,
Who keep pace with the present, most awfully fast,
Fruits that ripen beneath the new light now arising
With speed that to us, old conserves, is surprising,
Conserves, in whom—potted for grandmamma uses—
'Twould puzzle a sunbeam to find any juices;
'Tis true too, I fear, 'midst the general movement,
Ev'n our House, God help it, is doomed to improvement,
And all its live furniture nobly descended,
But sadly worn out, must be sent to be mended—
Yet distant, ye gods, be that terrible day,
When—as playful old Nick for his pastime they say
Flies off with old houses, sometimes in a storm—
So ours may be whipt off some night by Reform—
And as up, like Loretto's famed house through the air,
Not angels, but devils, our lordships shall bear,
And radical phizzes, unused to the sky,
Shall flit round like cherubs to wish us "Good-bye!"

"Liberty" Yule-tide Gifts.—Unique, Beautiful, and Inexpensive.—Inspection invited. Descriptive Catalogue, containing 220 illustrations, post free.—Regent-street, London, W.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer restores the colour, renews the growth, arrests the fall, cleanses the scalp.

I am asked to correct another misapprehension to which I have unwittingly given currency respecting the designs of Dr. Hertzka and the "Freeland" colonists. Mr. Phipson, of the Nationalisation of Labour Society, explains in a letter to me that Dr. Hertzka insists before all things upon the duty of a kindly and considerate attitude towards the natives, whom it is hoped to convert into valuable friends of Freeland—perhaps even Labour Nationalisers. Mr. Phipson also points out that the natives of Africa have no more right to exclude those who desire to settle on unoccupied or unused portions of the globe than have European landlords. Of course not; and I may add that the idea that they possess such a right is far less likely to occur to them than to the European landlord.

Nevertheless, what they have heard or seen of the habits and motives of European settlers in other parts of Africa may possibly lead these natives to view with suspicion, and perhaps hostility, the approach of white men, even in the most pacific guise. News travels in rapid and inexplicable ways in Africa, and it is possible that the history of Lobengula may already have been published in the Kenia Highlands. If it has, the intelligent Highlanders will be aware that it is one thing to admit white settlers to unoccupied lands in their vicinity, and another thing to keep them there, if they see a chance of bettering their position by moving into lands occupied by some one else. Suppose, for instance, that the lands already in the occupation of the Kenia Highlanders should hereafter turn out to possess a promising gold reef in the neighbourhood of the Chief's kraal, or even that it should turn out that this region is more healthy and fertile than the vacant plots about to be taken up by the Freelanders. What are the chances that sooner or later the Chief's headquarters will be Buluwayo'd? That is the question which I should put to myself were I a Kenianite. And, supposing that Kenianite civilisation has advanced as far as the rule of three, I should answer it in this way:—

Mashonaland : Matabeleland :: Freeland : Kenia Highlands.

Of course, I know that Dr. Hertzka and his colleagues will repudiate with indignation the suggestion that a regenerate apostle of universal brotherhood could ever hunger after a gold "claim," much less lift his hand against an African brother, with a view to his own profit. It may be so. It may be that Dr. Hertzka has found the secret of expelling the old Adam, and not only expelling (which is a comparatively easy matter), but preventing his return. It may be, though the history of previous Socialistic experiments in the same direction does not make this hope exactly a certainty, that a means has at last been found of making white men cease to hunger for gold, and refrain from making away with their neighbours, black or white, who stand in the way of their enriching themselves. If so, I have no doubt that a method will also be speedily found of enabling the Ethiopian to change his skin. When that is done, white man and black man will dwell together in unity, and the Millennium will dawn—in Africa, of all places.

I published two letters last week that had passed between Mr. Newnes and myself. Here are four more to complete the correspondence. Why Mr. Newnes should have taken it into his head that "got hold of" is equivalent to an accusation of monetary corruption entirely surpasses my comprehension. Who on his staff had been got hold of by some one connected with the Chartered Company? I asked. Well, let us suppose that the gentleman on the staff responsible for the defence of the Company had been in South Africa, had found himself thrown with Mr. Rhodes, had been entertained by him, and had acquired his facts from him, and from his entourage. This I should call being "got hold of." The gentleman might be the most honourable and honest of men, but his mind would have been influenced — perhaps unconsciously to himself. This sort of social hypnotism is the commonest of occurrences. Who ever heard of a war correspondent not taking the side of the General on whose staff he rode? This is so invariable a rule, that the truth as to the incidents connected with a war can only be ascertained by balancing the accounts of the correspondents on each side. In this Matabele war we have alone the accounts of the Chartered Company itself, and the comments of those who have been thrown with some of those connected with the Company. I entirely decline to accept either accounts or comments as gospel truth. We ought to have Lobengula's side, all the more as it is clear, even on the admissions of the Chartered Company, that the war was forced on the Matabele, and that, having been forced on, it was conducted with the grossest inhumanity by a body of men, who looked to the reward of their civilising labours in the loot that would be acquired when the Matabele were either killed or had been induced by the threat of being killed to turn their swords (as Mr. Buxton puts it) into mining shovels. What the difference between this and the scheme of civilisation adopted by the Spaniards towards the Indians of South and Central America is, I do not know; nor, indeed, does any one know:—

Wildcroft, Putney Heath, S.W., December 13, 1893.

DEAR MR. LABOUCHERE,—Your letter entirely evades the only point in mine. I did not refer to the question as to whether you or the Westminster Gazette are right on South African matters, nor was I in the slightest degree interested in knowing the books which had led you to hold the views you do. I only stated that I, with many others, regarded a certain paragraph as a charge of corruption against members of my staff of the Westminster Gazette, and I falsely hoped that when this was pointed out to you, you would apologise handsomely for having created such an impression.

With regard to your remark as to my knowledge of the merits of the question, that was quite unnecessary, as every one is well aware that you hold the fixed opinion that you are the only person living who knows anything at all about this and many other subjects.—I am, faithfully yours, GEO. NEWNES.

5, Old Palace Yard, S.W., December 14.

DEAR MR. NEWNES,—Between thinking that I am the only person who knows anything about the Matabele question, and that you know very little about it, there is a distinction. You say that you are not in the slightest degree interested in knowing the books that have led me to hold the views that I do on the subject. These books are "Blue Books." They are issued in order that all—and especially M.P.'s, and journalists who take upon themselves to instruct the public in regard to the Matabele war—should be acquainted with facts. As you have undertaken this task, it is to be regretted that you should not feel any interest in these official records. It accounts for your having been led into error.

A great attraction this Christmas, at 173, New Bond-street, will be Messrs. CHARBONNELL & WALKER'S superb show of PARISIAN NOVELTIES. Their salons are filled with treasures of artistic excellence in every variety. They are too beautiful to describe, and as all the world should see them, we will only add that everything that is lovely and poetic in the shape of novelties will be found there.

MAX GREGER'S PURE HUNGARIAN WINES strengthen and sustain. The pure produce of the famous Carlowitz district.—MAX GREGER, LTD., Wine Merchants to the Queen, 2, Old Bond-st., W.

I—By cannot be answerable for impressions created in your mind by words used by me. The signification of English words and phrases is not dependent, as you seem to think, on individual impressions. With a charitable desire to clear your mind of a mistaken impression, I explained to you, in my previous letter, the meaning of the phrase "got hold of," and I had hoped that I had convinced you that it involved no implication of monetary corruption. But that you should have expected me to have apologised to you for your own want of knowledge of the signification of the phrase is as singular an illusion as ever lurked in a human brain.

I would again recommend you to read the "Blue Books" on recent transactions in Matabeleland, and to this I would venture to add the suggestion that you should devote a little time to acquiring a clear knowledge of the meaning attached to English phrases. This you will, as a member of the House of Commons and as a journalist, find most useful.—Yours truly,

H. Labouchere.

Wilderoft, Putney Heath, S.W., December 15, 1893.

Dear Mr. Labouchere, I am exceedingly obliged to you for your kindness in advising me on various matters.

I appreciate it all the more because the advice was absolutely unsolicited. But as you have placed me under this obligation, I desire to discharge it by giving you in return also some advice, which I hope will prove most useful to you, both as an M.P. and a journalist.

Do not assume, without the slightest grounds for doing so, that another man knows less about a subject than you, or has not read certain books which he ought to have read.

Do not when tackled upon one subject refuse to face it, and enter into a controversy on another, which has nothing whatever to do with the question raised.

Do not calumniate honourable men, and when called upon to apologise take refuge in the pretension that your words do not mean that which you must know every one would take them to mean.

I do not know whether you desire to continue this mutual improvement correspondence, but, if so, there are several other points on which I might be helpful to you.—I am, faithfully yours,

Geo. Newnes.

5, Old Palace Yard, S.W., December 18.

Dear Mr. Newnes,—Not on various matters, but on two—(1) to read the Blue Books on South Africa before instructing the public upon matters in that part of the world; (2) to acquire a thorough knowledge of the English language, in order not to mistake the meaning of phrases in that language. My well-meant endeavours, however, to be useful to you appear to be wasted. On both subjects you are impenetrable to reason and to advice. This I regret, for on general politics you are an excellent M.P., whilst every one owes a debt of gratitude to you for affording them such excellent reading in the Strand Magazine.

With the compliments of the season, and a sincere hope that you will pass a more pleasant Christmas than the Matabele, and that no Chartered Company will confiscate Wilderoft under the pretence that civilisation and Christianity will be advanced by the Company owning it, and either shooting you and your staff, or making you and them dig its garden, I must take leave of you.—Yours truly,

H. Labouchere.

The following frank confession of a filibuster's faith is to be found in Mr. Selous's last book on South Africa. It is set forth apropos to the treaty with reference to Manicaland, concluded in 1890 between Mr. Colquhoun, on behalf of the South Africa Company, and the Chief Umtasa, by which, says Mr. Selous, "the British Company acquired and took possession of a large slice of very valuable auriferous country to which the Portuguese had previously laid claim." Upon this proceeding the filibustering Nimrod thus moralises:—

My idea of the whole controversy is this. On the one hand the Portuguese claim to Manica was a very hazy and unsubstantial one, much more so than I had previously believed; besides which, having held the country, as they said, for four hundred years, and done so little with it, they had forfeited all right to be allowed to hold it any longer.

On the other hand, the British Company knew that they could colonise the country and develop its great natural resources, and being determined to take possession of it, were anxious to do so legally, if possible under the rights acquired by a treaty with Umtasa, though possibly, had no such treaty existed, the British flag would still have waved on the hills of Manica.

In other words, A, having decided to his own satisfaction that he can make a better use of B's property than B himself can, determines to take possession of B's property—legally if possible, but, if not, otherwise. As a parallel to this artless statement of the case, a correspondent forwards me the following passage from Thackeray's "George de Barnwell," where the same views are expressed in language even more to the point:—

When I stood before my uncle in the moonlight, in the gardens of the ancestral halls of the De Barnwells, I felt that it was the Nemesis come to overthrow him. "Dog," I said to the trembling slave, "tell me where thy gold is. Thou hast no use for it. I can spend it in relieving the poverty on which thou tramplest, in aiding science which thou knowest not, in uplifting art, to which thou art blind. Give gold and thou art free." But he spake not, and I slew him.

There is one little fact transmitted to us by telegram from Matabeleland which ought to open the eyes of the investing public. The Burghers of Mashonaland declare that this country was so rich that they only went to Matabeleland in order to hinder the Matabeles from doing them out of their El Dorado. The telegram now announces that they intend to remain in Matabeleland. What, then, becomes of the fabled wealth of Mashonaland? What, too, of the statement that they only made war against Lobengula because they feared that he would drive them out of that country? Not one of these Burghers has any intention of cultivating land or of mining in either. They went to Mashonaland in order to get claims to land or mines with a view to selling them to fools in England, who took them on the assurances of the Burghers. No one would buy these properties in Mashonaland, so they stole Matabeleland in the hopes of being able to humbug fools into buying properties there. Both countries are far too near the tropics to be healthy for Europeans. Whilst, as for gold, it is there in sufficient quantities to pay were it in the Isle of Man, or some place near at home, but the reefs are not rich enough to give middlemen profits, in view of cost of labour, &c.

The Times has published a letter from Bishop Knight Bruce, of Matabeleland. His Lordship dates his letter from the Camp of the Filibusters, but explains that he is not only their Bishop, but also the Bishop of the Matabele. Although he does not seem greatly distressed at one portion of his flock being engaged in massacring the other portion, he furnishes some information respecting the wounded. After stating that "amongst the wounded is one Matabele," he goes on to say, "I hope the Matabele take away their wounded. I can find nothing about them." This, the Westminster Gazette observes, "is satisfactory, so far as it goes." Satisfactory, possibly, to Mr. Newnes, but not to me; nor, indeed, to most people, I should fancy. At the particular engagement to which the Bishop refers, I gather from Typewriters of all makes for Sale or Hire. Machines bought or taken in part exchange for new ones. Documents copied with accuracy and despatch.—N. Taylor, Manager, National Typewriter Exchange, 74, Chancery-lane, London.

24, Grosvenor-gardens.—To be Sold, or Let on lease, this Mansion, in perfect decorative and sanitary repair, containing 13 bedrooms, two drawing-rooms, boudoir on first floor, dining-room, library, billiard-room, and dressing-room on ground-floor. Stabling for five horses.—Apply, Messrs. Thompson, 6, Bruton-street; or on Premises.

his letter that there were 500 killed and wounded. Of these one wounded man is discovered by the Bishop, and he can find out nothing about the others. What would have been thought if a similar statement had been made by a French Aumônier after an engagement between the French and Germans, in which the French had had the upper hand and held the field of combat, the Aumônier seasoning his report with the pious hope that the Germans had carried away their wounded? The only conclusion would have been that the French had killed the wounded Germans. And is this more improbable when the victors are filibusters, the riff-raff of Africa, accompanied by a native force of savages, and fighting for pay from confiscation of their enemy's property? The Bishop on the spot seems to have much the same opinion respecting the fate of the wounded Matabele as that which I have been told it is scandalous for me even to suggest.

But there is another piece of evidence. As I previously said, Mr. Rhodes telegraphed to his locum tenens at the Cape, that, before the fight at Buluwayo, he estimated that 3,000 Matabele had been killed and wounded. On the lowest estimate this means that 1,000 were killed, and 2,000 were wounded. The Company, after the fight at Buluwayo, telegraph home that fifty wounded Matabele were treated in Buluwayo. Probably these were wounded in the fight there, but assuming that they were a portion of the 2,000 wounded before the fight, what has become of the remaining 1,950? This statement is convincing proof, that the greater number were either killed or left to die of their wounds, for never yet in the history of war has a defeated force, pursued by cavalry, carried away its wounded.

Why should this be surprising? It is now admitted that in the massacre that took place before the war commenced, when Captain Lendy and the Burghers of Victoria attacked the unresisting Matabele because they had not covered thirty miles in one hour, there were no wounded, and that most of the dead Matabele had four or five bullets in them. If this does not mean that the wounded were killed, I fail to see what it does mean.

The South Africa Chartered Company reminds me of Livy's famous description of Hannibal:—"An inhuman cruelty, a worse than Punic perfidy, no truth, no reverence, no respect for an oath, no scruple of religion." Hannibal, indeed, even from a Roman historian's point of view, compares advantageously with the Company, for against "remarkable faults he had remarkable qualities." He did not butcher helpless savages, but he vanquished in fair fight the Roman legions; nor did he add to his want of religion the pretence that he was warring in the cause of religion. Moreover, he spent his substance for his country, and did not use his country in order to amass money for himself.

At a gathering last week in the Colonial Institute to hear laudations of Uganda, which a few months ago was described by the Jingoes as a "pearl," but which seems to be off colour just now, Lord Lorne read from the Zanzibar Gazette an extract from a speech alleged to have been made by Sir Gerald Portal at Zanzibar on his return from the "pearl." We are asked to believe that Sir Gerald said that Uganda is a fine country affording fields for cricket and football, and would restore to vigour the jaded constitutions of Englishmen residing in Zanzibar. If, therefore, "by any means he had helped to place this country nearer the reach of the latter, he would indeed feel that his work had not been done in vain." "How," said Lord Lorne, "in the face of that the Government can get out of Uganda, I do not know." The audience laughed, and well they might laugh. Probably Sir Gerald Portal never talked so foolishly and so indiscreetly. The idea of our annexing a country at vast expense in the centre of Africa to provide the English at Zanzibar with a playground for cricket and football is the reductio ad absurdum of African annexations.

Government has very rightly declined to accept the view that it is not to be trusted in regard to the requirements of the Navy, and that it ought at once to satisfy the cravings of the Opposition to know the number of ships by which our naval force is to be increased. This singular demand proceeds on the assumption that the Admiralty Board when in Liberal hands, is not prepared to meet the exigencies of national defence, and that it ought to submit its intentions to Lord George Hamilton. His lordship has assigned to himself a pension of £2,000 per annum for the term of his natural life, because he for some years received £5,000 per annum as First Lord of the Admiralty. If all naval requirements were dealt with in this profuse spirit, it is evident that the Navy would absorb the whole of the Budget. Were this eminent patriot to announce that, in view of the increased expenditure that he demands, he is prepared to give up this preposterous pension, I should have more confidence in his good faith. I suppose that the cost of a small torpedo boat when in commission would be about £2,000 per annum. We must cut our coats according to our cloth, and surely the very smallest torpedo-boat would be more useful to the country, than giving Lord George Hamilton £2,000 per annum for doing nothing.

For my part, I have confidence that her Majesty's present advisers will not add one farthing to our burthens by building ships in excess of our requirements, and that they will not be induced to squander money, because a number of half-pay Admirals and such like alarmists urge them to convert all our goods and chattels into battleships. I wonder at sailors insisting that, if we have an equal number of ships with our enemy we shall be victorious, and that if we have one less we shall be vanquished. This is very different from the old boast of the sea-dogs who fought and conquered in days gone by. They did not count up the number of the ships opposed to them, and surrender if they discovered that they had one gun less than the enemy. A good, efficient Navy let us have by all means; but to play a game of brag with the world by building ship against ship spells ruin.

GRATEFUL and COMFORTING for BREAKFAST and SUPPER is EPPS'S COCOA, made with boiling water or milk. Sold in packets labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

Every now and then some one crystallises the description of a situation in a telling phrase. This was done by the Frenchman who, after the Balaclava charge, observed, "C'est magnifique, mais ce n'est pas la guerre." Just so, the attitude of the Liberal Party in the House of Commons at present is magnificent, but it is not business. Like the Roman sentinel, we are prepared to die at our post. I, however, whilst admiring this sentinel, think more of soldiers who take care to occupy a position in which they can inflict death on their opponents. We are now discussing the Parish Councils Bill. The Opposition insist upon the discussion being minute, and consequently lengthy, and they insist that it cannot be brought to an end (allowing a day or two as a holiday at Christmas) before we are well into January. Very possibly they may have arrived at this conclusion because this will embarrass the Government. The motive, however, is not of much consequence, if they can bring about what they profess to anticipate.

Now, let us assume that the Bill does not get through the Commons until the third week in January. If we have taken months over the Bill, we cannot be exceedingly indignant if the Lords take weeks over it. Allow three weeks. This brings us into February. The Bill would then be sent back to the Commons plastered over with amendments, and the discussion of those amendments would take time. We should probably agree with some and disagree with others. It is possible that the Lords would stand to many of those on which there is disagreement between the two Houses. The Bill would, therefore, be returned to the House of Commons with the amendments still in it against which that House had voted. Sometimes, under those circumstances, there is a conference between the two Houses. There would not, however, be time for this, as a new Session has to meet in time to wind up the financial business of the year before March 25.

Various expedients are suggested. One is all-night sittings. Against this there are so many objections that I doubt if it would be possible. Another is the closure in some way or other. By a resolution, as in the case of the Home Rule Bill, the Parish Councils Bill might be divided into compartments, and a fixed time set down for each compartment; or the House might declare that the Bill is to be reported from Committee (i.e., the Committee stage closed) on a certain day. Both are very bungling plans, for the opponents to the Bill would go on discussing each clause as it comes up, with the result that many clauses would not be discussed at all. That this was done in regard to the Home Rule Bill was used as a plea by the Lords for rejecting it, and it must be admitted that there was a certain amount of reason in the plea. Honestly, I do not think that any important clauses in a Bill remodelling the whole of the rural life of the country ought to be passed without some opportunity for discussing them.

There is a standing order which allows the Chairman of a Committee to put any clause, or any portion of a clause, whenever he considers that there has been sufficient discussion. But this has been held to mean that the clause, or the portion of the clause, must not be put if there be any amendment of importance which would be shut out. This standing order cannot, therefore, greatly aid in reducing the length of discussion on the clauses of any Bill.

All things considered, therefore, it appears to me that our difficulties have been caused (1) by continuing the Session of this year instead of commencing in October the Session of next year; (2) by not having sufficiently taken into account that the Parish Councils Bill was too big a Bill for an autumn Session, if the Tories insisted on minute discussion of its details, as they were certain to do. We can, it is true, sit until it is passed, but this is snipping at our nose in order to spite our face; for we sit on this Session only by putting off the commencement of next Session, although the original source of our difficulties is that this Session began too late, and although it is obvious that if we are to have much legislation next year, the Session of that year must begin early.

We have, in fact, got into such a mess, that no course is without objections, and, this being so, we ought to take that which is the least objectionable. This would be to prorogue on Friday next, after having carried over the Parish Councils Bill to next Session; commence the next Session in the second week of January; at once pass in the Commons a drastic Registration and "One Man" Bill; introduce a Democratic Budget; then go on with the Parish Councils Bill and send it to the Lords; accept no amendment of the Lords on any of our Bills; and when they are thrown out on account of this, go to the country on the large issue, whether the Lords, or the Representatives of the people, are henceforward to govern. On this Plan of Campaign I believe that we should win at a General Election; whereas, if we potter on in a half-hearted way, I should, were I a betting man, be inclined to put my money on the Tories.

In the complaints on the part of the Tories at being allowed no remission from their legislative labours, there is some point, although a good deal of exaggeration. Their contention is that it is desirable that the House of Commons should be composed of all classes, and that men of business and men engaged in county matters ought not to be obliged to sit in permanence at Westminster, because they cannot do this without neglecting their own affairs or those of their counties. The reply of Ministers to them is that they have obstructed legislation, and that they have only themselves to thank for the lengthy Session, to which they answer that they have not obstructed. Thus the eternal issue between the "ins" and the "outs" is raised.

Elderdon Pure Woollen Fabrics, in various weights and colourings, for Dressing Gowns, Smoking Jackets, Ladies' three-quarter Capes, Dresses, and Underskirts; also the new Ballylareen Duffle Frieze for Ulster Coats, Inverness Capes, and all descriptions of Winter Wraps where "warmth without weight" is the desideratum. The Elderdon Rug. Samples of Boyd & Company's productions, with "The Book of the Ulster," illustrated, and forms for self-measurement, may be obtained, post free, on application to the Sole Proprietors and Makers, Boyd & Co., 77, Royal-avenue, Belfast.

At the bottom of this issue is the question, whether a Legislative Assembly, composed of men who insist upon expressing their views upon most matters submitted to it, can fairly discuss all that is submitted to it in a year within the limits of, say, eight months. When this Assembly has to deal with all Imperial and all local matters, I say that it cannot. And this is why I would have Home Rule all round, leaving Imperial matters alone to the Imperial Parliament. I defy any one to frame rules that will enable a dozen quarts of liquor to get into a quart pot. As the pot cannot be enlarged, it is necessary to distribute the liquor amongst various pots. Until we realise this self-evident proposition, and act on it, we never shall make reasonable legislative progress. The Tories do not want such progress to be made: we do. Why, then, are we so foolish as not to provide the only machinery that can render progress possible? The Tories used to be taunted with being the stupid party. I am beginning to think that this term ought to be applied to us.

We profess that we are most anxious for Radical reforms. Yet we think it sufficient to blow a trumpet round the walls of the Tory Jericho, and then to blubber and whimper because the wall does not fall down. So incredibly simple are we, that if ever we do manage to make a hole in this wall and creep through it into the town, we allow ourselves to be turned out of it by a number of hereditary chuckers-out whom we maintain as part and parcel of our "glorious" Constitution. This dove-like simplicity may be an excellent quality, but doves find that they are put in a pie and eaten. I should like to see a little more of the wisdom of the serpent.

That the Tories would like a Dissolution is natural. They are out, and they want to be in. If the election went against them they would not be more out; if it went for them they would be in. So strong is their desire to enjoy the sweets of office, that Mr. Goschen threw out last Friday that very possibly there would be an immediate Dissolution. The next day the Tory papers improved on this: accepted Mr. Goschen's possibility as a certainty, and roundly asserted that there would be one. Now, when the Lords threw out the Home Rule Bill, it is possible that our tactics ought to have been at once to have paved the way for an appeal to the country by passing Acts to make the appeal a real one, and then to have appealed. This course was not, however, adopted. Other valuable Bills were brought in, and there is not the slightest likelihood of an election at the present moment.

The Tory papers prove that there will be one, because, according to them, Ministers will have next Easter to deal with a falling revenue and an increased expenditure. These cunning Ministers, therefore, will make their appeal to the electorate before they impose new taxes. To what does this really amount? That whenever revenue falls and expenditure increases, a Ministry ought to shirk their responsibilities, and, even though they may have a majority in the House of Commons, dissolve in order to evade unpopularity. A more astounding theory of representative government I never heard. If Sir William Harcourt meets our requirements by such alteration in the incidence of taxation as puts the burthen of taxation on the shoulders best able to bear it, the Budget of next year, far from weakening the Ministry in the country, will greatly augment its popularity. The country is Radical. The addition of one Radical to the Tories, by Mr. Chamberlain having gone over to them, does not alter the fact. Why, then, is there ever a Tory majority? Because our official leaders, although wondrously Radical when in Opposition, tame down when in office. This sickens and disheartens Radicals, and they turn out the Ministry, not because the country is Tory, but because the Liberal Ministry is not Radical.

SCRUTATOR.

IS THE ZIERENBERGS' RIGHT PLACE A HOME OR A JAIL?

IT appears to be generally recognised that the exposure of the charitable doings of Mr. and Mrs. Zierenberg, which I have been instrumental in bringing about, is a benefit to the public and to the cause of charity. This has, indeed, been conveyed to me in so many flattering terms from so many unexpected quarters, that the first thing I feel it my duty to do is to thank my contemporaries of the Press, as well as many private correspondents, for their remarks upon the result of the Zierenberg action.

Having said so much, let us look at this result. What has been proved? In 1863 Mr. and Mrs. Zierenberg, two Germans, apparently of Jewish extraction, came to this country in a condition bordering on destitution. They left Germany, there can be little doubt, to avoid their creditors. The woman is said to have obtained employment of some sort soon after her arrival, but the husband makes his first appearance in the character of a begging-letter impostor. His modus operandi was to send out to charitable persons as his wife's work slippers bought wholesale for the purpose, with a piteous story of sickness and destitution as inducements to purchase. Did a recipient of this appeal call personally to investigate the case, Zierenberg was found in bed, apparently prostrate with sickness. By such means as these enough money was raised to enable the wife to open a Berlin-wool shop in Pimlico. Viscount Stern assisted them from time to time with small advances of £5, in response to piteous appeals from the woman, usually about rent-day. A business was next started by Zierenberg himself in Ivy-lane. It ended in a fire, a disputed claim on an Insurance Company, and a bankruptcy immediately after the fire and before the dispute was settled. The fire claim was decided by the arbitrator to whom it was referred to be a fraudulent one; the bankruptcy resulted in the creditors, who had supplied Zierenberg with the goods supposed to have been burnt, getting 1s. 3⅝d. in the £. This was in 1874. Another business was started in New gate-street. Within a year another bankruptcy was threatened. Zierenberg made an assignment of everything he possessed for the benefit of his creditors; and, in order to induce the creditors to accede to this arrangement in preference to making him a bankrupt, Mrs. Zierenberg agreed to add an assignment of all that she possessed. What was this? It purported to be an interest in a house in Berlin and a farm in Pomerania. The house in Berlin is now shown to have been purchased by her, prior to her leaving Germany, for a sum of about £300, subject to a mortgage, and to have been further charged by her for subsequent debts to the amount of about £295. The original mortgagee is further shown to have foreclosed in 1864 or 1865, when the house was sold up for less than the amount of the mortgage debt; so that nothing was left for the subsequent mortgagees, let alone for Mrs. Zierenberg herself. Consequently, the trustee under the assignment of 1875 found that there was nothing to be got out of this house, nor did he get anything out of the alleged farm in Pomerania, as to Mrs. Zierenberg's interest in which nothing has been discovered to this day. In other words, the bogus assignment which Mrs. Zierenberg purported to execute in 1875 was nothing but a fraud designed to prevent her husband's creditors from making him bankrupt a second time. Zierenberg himself played up to this fraud by scheduling among his assets large sums, alleged to be due to him by parties owning such names as "Smith, of New York," and "Friedlander, of Berlin," parties to whose whereabouts he could afford the trustee no clue, and who, as a matter of course, were never found. The net result of this liquidation was that the creditors, who were led to expect payment in full, got nothing. Then it was that this worthy pair entered upon their benevolent mission on behalf of "Female Inebriates." St. James's Home was started in 1876, a few months after the liquidation. Nothing more significant was told in the whole course of the trial than the evidence of Mr. Viney, the trustee under the assignment of 1875, as to the circumstances under which the Home came to be started. Seeing that the debtor and his wife had lost everything, down to their household furniture, and were apparently without any visible means of subsistence, Mr. Viney inquired on one occasion what they were going to do next. The reply of the lady was that she thought of starting a home for female inebriates. The last resource! Everything else having failed, having played out the begging-letter trick, having defrauded their creditors, having been defeated in a conspiracy against an insurance Company, bankrupt, penniless, and characterless, these two pauper aliens now embraced the sacred cause of philanthropy, and prepared to devote the rest of their lives (and fortunes) to the benefit of suffering and erring womanhood.

What success attended the venture I need not tell my readers. From the first the Home paid its way. For sixteen years it continued to grow. A year ago, when my alleged libel upon the institution was published, four or five houses had been acquired on long leases. They were the private property of Mrs. Zierenberg, and were let by her to the Home at a profit rental of £200 a year. Large sums had been spent upon improving the property, all of it belonging to Mrs. Zierenberg. This property included the machinery and plant of a large laundry, worth some two or three thousand pounds, and doing business to the amount of £40 or £50 per week, which had been specially subscribed for by the charitable public. What sums the Zierenbergs had invested is not known, but they have admitted that stock to the amount of £500 had been sold for the purpose of the action against Truth. In addition to all this, they have lived free for sixteen years. The "Home" boarded, lodged, and clothed them from 1875 downwards. It provided them with servants, with carriages and horses (for, after a few years in the philanthropic line, the "Lady Superior" could not do without her brougham) and with abundant pocket-money; Mrs. Zierenberg's private account showing receipts rising from £300 and £400 a year in the earlier period up to £800 and £900 in the later years. All these items represent annual profit from the concern, in addition to an accumulation of property in their names which, on the facts actually known, would not be worth much less than £12,000, and which may be worth very much more. In order to conceal this state of things, the impudent fiction was devised that Mrs. Zierenberg—the penniless wife of the fraudulent bankrupt of 1874-5—was a lady of large property, devoting her fortune to charitable work. To give colour to this fiction, the annual balance-sheets of the concern—now proved to be among the most worthless documents ever issued to the world over the signature of chartered accountants—showed year by year large advances, purporting to be made by this pauper adventuress in her character of "Lady Superior." In the very first year of the undertaking this woman, who a few months before had been making an assignment of fictitious property, in order to deceive her husband's creditors, figured in the report as a benefactress to the Home to the amount of about £900, and year by year this pretence was carried on until her total donations amounted to above £4,000; while even Zierenberg, the fraudulent bankrupt himself, figured from time to time as advancing substantial sums in order to carry on the good work. A double end was served by this trick. In the first place, any question as to the purity of the motives of Mr. and Mrs. Zierenberg was precluded, and a noble example was set to those to whom the worthy pair appealed for assistance in their charitable work; in the second, the lady's claims upon the assets of the concern were placed upon an unassailable foundation, and a complete answer was furnished to any suggestion that the property of the institution ought to be vested in trustees. Such suggestions were, in fact, made more than once, and were peremptorily negatived by the "Lady Superior." She had even the courage to maintain this attitude when the same suggestion was made to her in the witness-box. The place, and everything in it, was her property, that was the substance of her reply on all occasions, and she was certainly not going to hand it over to trustees. Her property, mark you.

Now, how was this property—not only the available assets of the Home, but the profits in cash and in kind drawn from it by this enterprising couple since the year 1876—amassed? I need not deal with the explanations given by Mrs. Zierenberg and her husband in the witness box; the jury have refused to accept them, and they could not but do so, for the greater part of the woman's statements were negatived by clear evidence before the case ended, and the rest were so incredible in themselves, and so discredited by collateral evidence, that no intelligent person would attach any weight to them. Her means were, beyond all doubt, derived solely from the Home, and they were derived in three ways: first from paying "patients" received there; secondly, from the donations and subscriptions of charitable people, which for many years were acknowledged at the rate of about £1,000 a year, but which possibly far exceeded that amount; thirdly, from the laundry. As to the first source of income, it is unnecessary to say more than that the reception, or at any rate the detention, of inebriate patients in an establishment of this kind was carried on in gross violation of the law. As to the charitable subscriptions, I need only point to what has been said above in proof of the unscrupulous frauds which were perpetrated on the contributors. The cardinal feature of the swindle, the chief source of income of late years, and at the same time the seat of the most abominable of the iniquities which have been perpetrated in the Home, was the laundry. In the article which contained the alleged libels by me upon the Zierenbergs, it was asserted that the place was essentially a commercial undertaking, comprising the additional features of a casual ward, a sweating den, and a gaol. Each one of these epithets has now been justified, and more than justified, in open court. The place was a private casual ward, because any homeless and friendless girl who knocked at the door—misled by the name, "St. James's Home," displayed over the portals with a careful omission of the qualifying words "for Inebriates"—was received, and set to pay for her board and lodging by her bodily work. It was a prison, because, once inside, whether entering voluntarily or brought by other persons, no woman ever left until the "Lady Superior" chose to let her go; because those so imprisoned were forbidden to communicate with the outside world, except under the sanction and supervision of this same woman and her officials; because they were kept to hard labour, subjected to prison diet and discipline, and punished when refractory with prison punishments. It was a sweating den, and worse than a sweating den, because not only were these wretched women forced to toil and slave their whole lives long for the enrichment of the two owners of the place, but they worked for absolutely nothing but their board and lodging, and these of the meagrest, the profits of the business being enhanced in proportion. But the abominations that have been brought to light in the course of this trial do far more than establish these points and justify the alleged libel. They show that the poor creatures imprisoned here were herded together without regard to health or decency; that brutal cruelty was systematically inflicted for no worse fault than desiring to leave the place, or in some other way offending the tyrants who ruled it; that mere children, whose presence in such a place at all was an outrage, were thrown into intimate association with the vilest and most abandoned of their sex; that girls, whose only fault was that they were homeless, or decent women, who had no worse failing than the desire for drink, were mixed up indiscriminately, forced even to sleep in the same narrow bed, with creatures utterly foul and polluted in mind and body: that dirt, disease, and nameless evils besides, were common features of the life there. Finally, they show that bankruptcy, fraud, imposture, were but minor traits in the character of the man Zierenberg and his wife. The mere keeping of such a place, the mere perpetration of the outrages and abominations that went on there, for the purpose of robbing the wretched inmates of their labour, and robbing the charitable to whom their condition was supposed to appeal, would be bad enough. It has been proved, however, that the man himself used brutal and cowardly violence to the poor wretches on whom he was living; and that his wife was equally guilty of personal violence and cruelty towards them. Both inside and outside the dirty music-hall which they at one time carried on as a branch of their "Temperance" work, they allowed decency to be shamelessly outraged, and religion to be ridiculed and insulted. Finally, they have both crowned their performances by wholesale and shameless perjury, of which the verdict of the jury virtually pronounces them guilty. When it is remembered that all this was done in the name of religion and charity, that their appeals and public utterances were interlarded with blasphemous cant, that this man Zierenberg assumed the character of a Christian minister, and preached the Gospel, nay, actually administered the Sacrament, in the very hall where the worst indecency and profanity had received his approbation overnight, it will be admitted that two viler specimens of humanity have seldom been held up to public scorn and loathing.

The most disquieting feature in the scandal is, not so much that this den of infamy should have been carried on all these years in the name of "charity," and with the assistance of a number of amiable but indolent people, who interpret "charity" to mean the giving away of money without intelligent effort to discover what becomes of it, but that a place like this, and people such as these Zierenbergs, should have earned, and retained up to the time of the trial, the confidence and support of a number of persons occupying distinguished and responsible positions in Church and State. I do not envy the reflections of some of these gentlemen after what has now been established. Prominent among them was Canon Fleming, who appeared as a witness for the plaintiffs, only to admit, when cross-examined, that if various things had happened, which are now shown beyond all question to have happened, he would not have approved of the management of the institution. A still stronger partisan of the Zierenbergs was the Rev. Hugh B. Chapman, another of their witnesses. In times past I have been instrumental in obtaining some support for charitable work in which Mr. Chapman displayed an interest, but after this demonstration of the value of his judgment it will be long indeed before I should again venture to recommend to the support of the benevolent any religious or charitable work on this reverend gentleman's recommendation. Another witness who has no doubt helped in time past to put many pounds into the Zierenbergs' pockets is a Mr. Mark Knowles, a barrister, whose professional position would naturally be taken as some guarantee for the possession of common sense and of acquaintance with any facts for which he accepted responsibility. In this and all other similar cases the appearance of men of character and position as the sponsors for one of the most disreputable swindles ever established affords deplorable evidence of the recklessness with which such men allow themselves not only to be humbugged, but to be made the means of humbugging others. Of Mr. Chance, the former Magistrate at Lambeth, I do not wish to speak too severely, for he was only acquainted with the Home in its earlier years, and, though he was no doubt deceived as to the merits of the institution as an Inebriates' Home, he did detect the unsatisfactory manner in which it was constituted and controlled, and he did make a practical recommendation for improving it in that respect. But of the Magistrates who have succeeded Mr. Chance at Lambeth, and who have again and again been appealed to against the flagrant illegalities perpetrated at the "Home," it is difficult to speak too strongly. And this brings me to one of the most serious features in the whole case—namely, the relations of the Zierenbergs with the police. It has been shown—though only partially, for it must be remembered that not half the evidence which I was prepared with was actually given at the trial—that the police on duty in the neighbourhood were in the habit of conducting or directing vagrant and homeless girls into Mrs. Zierenberg's trap; and it was also shown, as perhaps the most scandalous violation of the law in the whole case, that in cases where women wrongfully imprisoned there had succeeded in making their escape, they were actually arrested and brought back by the police. The Zierenbergs also put into the box in support of their case a number of policemen. A great part of this evidence had reference to the highly moral and satisfactory way in which the music-hall was conducted; and in view of the opinion arrived at by both the Judge and jury, it is not too much to say that the whole of the constables who gave this evidence stand at present in a most unfavourable light. It is not for me to go into the motives for the cordial co-operation of the police in the carrying on the work of Mr. and Mrs. Zierenberg, either at this Home or the adjoining Music-hall. This is a matter for the authorities at Scotland Yard and the Home Office. I trust that their attention will be given to it, and that steps will be taken with the view of preventing such a scandal as that of the police aiding and abetting the grossest violation of the law, as well as the systematic swindling of the public.

HOUSE DRAINAGE.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

The most important question, however, of all is, whether there is any means of preventing the recurrence of such abuses and frauds as are exemplified in this case. That is a question which I have at the moment neither room nor time to discuss. I may, however, notice one point. It has been remarked in the Times that it is not desirable that the exposure of such evils should be left to the private enterprise of a newspaper proprietor. In this I entirely concur. I may add—and, perhaps, my opinion in this respect will be held to possess special weight—that if it is to be left to newspaper proprietors it will be done very seldom. Sir Edward Clarke put it to the jury on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Zierenberg that the article complained of was published in the ordinary course of business, and not from any exalted motives. I do not quarrel with this view of it. Unlike Sir Edward Clarke's clients, I do not profess to be a philanthropist, though it need not follow that I am on that account a worse specimen of humanity. Speaking, then, not as a philanthropist, but as a newspaper proprietor, I take the liberty of saying that no proprietor of a newspaper of established sale and reputation would knowingly incur the cost of a Zierenberg action as a mere matter of business. That a successfully defended libel action may occasionally benefit a newspaper, I should be the last to question. But that an action extending over twelve months, involving hard preliminary fights on interlocutory points, elaborate inquiries covering a period of twenty years in England and Germany, the production of some sixty witnesses, the briefing of three eminent counsel, and a twenty days' trial, and with a doubtful prospect at the end of it all as to the recovery of any costs from the other side, that such an action as this can yield any return commensurate with the outlay from a commercial point of view, I absolutely deny. If, therefore, the public desire to see frauds and illegalities of this class systematically checked, I would recommend them to establish some properly authorised official for the purpose, and not to rely too much on newspaper proprietors or other private citizens undertaking the task as a matter of business. The time has come, in my opinion, for the chaotic operations of voluntary charity to be subjected to some kind of public supervision; and the most striking lesson of the Zierenberg case is that such supervision may be as necessary for the protection of those whom a "charity" is ostensibly designed to benefit, as for the protection of the benevolent persons who furnish the means of carrying on the work.

THE FARM-PUPIL SWINDLE.

The Canadian Government, I am glad to learn, are by no means indifferent to the proceedings of Messrs. Howden, Aspdin, & Armstrong, alias the Anglo-Canadian Farm Pupil Association of Sheffield, and in view of the special activity of these gentry at the present moment, the representatives of Canada in this country are making special efforts to disseminate their useful warnings against all agencies which undertake, for cash down, to plant "pupils" on farms in the Dominion. In my last article on the Anglo-Canadian fraternity (Truth, November 30) I referred to reports in the Canadian papers of the disappearance of a young Englishman named Raffles Moore, who had recently come out from England as a pupil of this Association. Since that I have received a letter from Mr. Raffles Moore himself, dated November 23, and narrating his experiences, which entirely coincide with those of Major-General Bradford's son, already described. As regards his relations with the Association, Mr. Moore confirms what has appeared in the local papers, except that his payment (as a two years' premium) was £30. This sum, like Major General Bradford, he paid direct to Aspdin, "J P" in England. He was furnished with a letter of introduction to the Rev. Dr. Armstrong, who was to meet him at London, Ontario; but, on reaching that place, he found a message requesting him to proceed to Sarnia. This he did at his own expense, and after waiting two days at Sarnia he was joined by Dr. Armstrong. Against this divine he makes allegations of a most serious nature, which for the moment I will pass over. Dr. Armstrong had no vacancy ready for Mr. Moore, and he could only direct him to wait where he was. The young man did this for about a week, and then, not caring to remain idle, he found himself work with a farmer up the country—which, I may remark in passing, he had much better have done in the first instance, without any payment to the Anglo-Canadian concern. Not being satisfied with this work as a permanency, however, he presently went in search of the Rev. Dr. Armstrong, who was now at Mooretown. Armstrong kept him at an hotel for a fortnight, and then dispatched him to a farmer who, the Doctor stated, had 400 acres and a saw-mill. On his arrival, Mr. Moore found that the farmer had only 150 acres and no saw-mill, and, what was more, had an English pupil on the premises already, and no room for another. The young man then returned to Armstrong, who said he would find him another place. Pending that result, Mr. Moore telegraphed to his friends in England the significant message:—"Starving—no work—Armstrong a liar." His friends sent to Armstrong for an explanation, and the Doctor thereupon turned the "pupil" adrift. He writes to me on November 23 that he is without money or friends, that he is dependent for the moment on the kindness of strangers, and that he has heard of other pupils of the Anglo-Canadian Association in much the same plight. Such are his statements. I have, of course, only his authority for them; but the facts are substantially the same as those narrated by Major-General Bradford's son, and if the one is true (as no doubt it is), the probability is that many other stories might be told to the same effect.

A lady writes to me from a country rectory, and, no doubt, with the best intentions, forwarding a copy of a letter relating to a young man who went out nearly two years ago under Howden's auspices, and who is still in every way satisfied with his bargain. My correspondent adds that Dr. Armstrong received his present living from his Bishop, and that he also fills the post of Rural Dean. The last-mentioned facts only make it the more imperative that Dr. Armstrong should answer the allegations against himself and his Association put forward in TRUTH of September 7 and November 30, more especially in view of the contents of the letter which I have just received from Mr. Raffles Moore. As to the reference to one farm-pupil who has been satisfactorily placed, I am not so insane as to suggest that this Association has for years been accepting premiums of large amount and doing nothing in return. It would not surprise me to find that dozens of cases could be produced in which pupils have been placed more or less satisfactorily. The allegations, however, against Howden & Co. are:—(1) That all such agencies are a fraud, inasmuch as at the best they can do no more in return for a premium than the Canadian Government is prepared to do free, and inasmuch as the Government is in a much better position to do it effectually; (2) that the Anglo-Canadian Association is less entitled to confidence than any other of its class, because it is sailing under false colours; (3) that in numerous cases, as might be expected, these people have utterly failed to carry out their undertakings. They make no attempt to answer these allegations, and in this they are wise, for the allegations are necessarily unanswerable. On the other hand, they continue to ply their trade with unabated vigour. I have now in my possession letters and circulars despatched by Howden on November 30 and December 2. In these, not content with repeating all the illusory promises which I have already quoted as to what the Association is prepared to do, he boldly advises the young man to whom he is writing, that if he has not money to pay the premium, he should borrow from his friends ("as many of our pupils do"), "as good wages are paid in Canada," and he can consequently rely on soon repaying the loan. While on the one hand I see such statements being industriously circulated, and on the other receive from Canada such evidence as that of Messrs. Bradford and Moore, I shall not cease to warn parents, guardians, and intending emigrants against any dealings with Howden or his colleagues.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

TOUJOURS NAPOLÉON.

I SUSPECT that a Napoleonic candidate for supreme power in France is at nurse in Russia. If I am right the aspirant is Prince Louis, who is going to retire from the Russian service. When he entered it he was received as, through the Würtembergs, a cousin of the Imperial family, invited in a friendly way on a visit. He pleased his august host and hostess. The course he took in the Caucasus, which was reported by the Grand Ducal Governor, raised him still higher in their opinion. Prince Louis has there been Colonel of a crack Cavalry regiment. If he had been preparing to urge a suit for the hand of a Grand Duchess hereafter, he could not have acted with more judgment. The Czar is now a moral man. He has given up deep potations of champagne, card-playing, and the rest, attends devoutly to his religious duties, and has no favourites. Prince Louis is austerely virtuous, copies his mother's religious practices, acts as if he were enrolled in the tierce order of St. Francis, to which she belongs, and is not less studious than his great-uncle was in the Quai de Conti phase of his career. It might be a good political speculation of the Czar to give him his eldest daughter, with a dowry that would keep up both in Imperial style, and send them to live in France and Italy as unofficial diplomatic representatives. Prince Louis can be ostracised under the law to banish perpetually the heads of dynastic families. But it would require a special decree to exile him, he being only a younger son of the late Prince Jerome. In the present state of Russo-mania, such a decree would not be signed were he openly to come forward as the protégé of Alexander III. I suspect the dramatic authors who have in the matter of the Napoleonic rage been heaping fuel on the fire, have had a hint from the Princesse Mathilde of the favour in which her nephew stands at Gatchina. She is very fond of him, but she is almost hostile to Victor.

FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

Talking of the great-uncle, the Porte St. Martin is giving Martin Laya's Napoleonic epopee in fifty tableaux and three parts on Thursdays and Sundays—the half and whole holidays of the Paris schools. Cambronne is nature in the evenings in the din of Waterloo, but in the matinées he is, the advertisements state, arranged ad usum delphini. When called on to surrender by an English General, he answers pepo—a babyish word to express dislike for food. Taking the ball of fashion on the hop, M. Leopold Flameng is exhibiting a picture in his crispest style under the name of "Isola Bella." Nittis could not have better rendered the sky and atmosphere of that sweetest scene on earth, the middle reach of Lake Maggiore. The painting is not a mere landscape, Napoleon and Josephine with a military Court, and some Italian and other ladies in brilliant toilettes, are in the terraced garden of Isola Bella, listening to Grassini singing. Josephine begins to fear she has met a rival, and is not mistaken. A table is laid for a refection, and affords the artist an opportunity to show his skill in a still life fantasia. The Generals and ladies do not seem interested in the singer. But the coming Cæsar is. What the courtiers want is, Joseph-like, to divine his dreams, to interpret and to act according to them. Flameng consulted endless portraits and old engravings. Perhaps he would have done better to place his figures under the shade of the cork trees and parasol pines. The light of an Italian afternoon in April or May is a little crude for flesh tints. The concert takes place on one of the terraces facing Lavino. A bit of the lake is visible. Domodossola and the Alps form the background.

Bonaparte, or Napoleon, being the topic of the hour, the Duc d'Enghien is also dragged from his grave. It is curious how the old social influence of the Princes of Condé, when it was thought to be quite a thing of the past, oozed up out of the solitary grave of the Duc d'Enghien—the best Bourbon of his particular line. It is more curious how the impression of that influence should have been conveyed through him to subsequent generations. That his execution startled up old French Royalists, and society and Court circles all over Europe, is not wonderful. Most English Milords and Miladis who went to travel on the Continent when the Bourbon Condés lived in greater state at Chantilly than the King did at Versailles were entertained by them. Among the guests of the Duc d'Enghien's grandfather were the Emperor Joseph, the Archduchess Maria Christine, Gustavus III., and the Comte and Comtesse du Nord, afterwards Emperor Paul and Empress Maria Feodrovna. But what is surprising is that historians should since have looked upon Napoleon as a monster for his high-handed mode of dealing with the Duc d'Enghien, and that posterity should have accepted the verdict. The hecatomb of French soldiers (1,800,000) in the Napoleonic wars is generally overlooked by those who dwell upon the D'Enghien affair. Martin Laya, in his "epopee," does not in this respect follow the snobbish multitude. He has a charming mot, to paint Napoleon as one of those shepherds who lead peoples to the shambles. At a grand review in the Place du Carrousel, the Emperor comes on a veteran who, though he helped him to carry the bridge of Lodi, is still in the ranks. He promotes him in less than two minutes, grade by grade, up to the rank of Captain. "Sire," cries the grateful and enthusiastic old soldier, "I should like to die for you." "Mon ami," returns Napoleon, patting him on the shoulder, "cela viendra."

To return to d'Enghien, who has been resurrected with Napoleon: he did conspire with Georges Pichegru and some others, who, in inventing the infernal machine of the Rue St. Nicaise, were the forefathers of Ravachol. Most Royalists then sympathised with the St. Nicaise-street conspirators, and the leading ones were prepared to take advantage of the explosion. The Grand Duchy of Baden could scarcely be called a neutral territory, it being a satellite of France. Ettenheim being near Switzerland, Belfort-Strasburg was a convenient place to wait in and watch while the Rue St. Nicaise set were acting. A hundred years ago there was little scruple about cutting through the meshes of international law, for which Nelson showed utter disregard at Copenhagen, and the Austrians in invading, without declaration of war, the territories of Bonaparte's German allies. The Duc d'Enghien, I suppose, is like Marie Stuart. However in the wrong he may have been, posterity will go on seeing him as he appeared to European Society, whose eyes were still filled with the dust of Condé prestige.

The great question regarding the Duc d'Enghien has been what became of the lock of hair, the watch, ring, and some other trinkets which on being called on to meet his doom, he asked to be sent to the Princesse Charlotte de Rehan-Rochefort. He and she had been living together romantically at Ettenheim. She was educated at an English boarding-school, took her ideas of life from the novels that preceded Scott's, and was a high-hearted, warm, and imprudent person, but interesting. A Captain with the ominous name of Noireau commanded the firing party at the execution. To him the souvenirs were handed. He kept the trinkets as prizes of war, but gave the lock to Savary, who sent it on to the Prefect of Police. It was in the archives of the Prefecture up to 1871, when it was destroyed in the fire that burned down that building. De Neuville, the artist was shown it by M. Piétri. I heard him say that it was reddish, and of coarse quality—in short, like copper wire. The interest attached to it was so sad and suggestive that one must feel sorry at its being lost. The Princesse Charlotte de Rehan-Rochefort, twenty years after, when she was living at Chantilly as a sort of daughter-in-law of the Prince de Conde, wrote to Captain Noireau to ask him for the souvenirs to which she was entitled. Rochefort says he has her letter, and professes to give a copy of it. It strikes me as being genuine, the manner in which she writes to the thievish Captain to get him to disgorge is so wrapped up and ladylike. It has a flavour of the old-fashioned English manner, though in French.

Minton's (Limited). Minton's China.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

The Princesse Mathilde quarrelled with Taine for writing down her uncle, in order, as she thought, to court the Duc d'Aumale, and pay for the Orleanist vote which brought him into the Academy. I fancy that Sardou will never again bask in the light of her countenance. Reading so much about "Mdlle. Sans-Gêne," she said she must see it. Her literary friends, knowing how she worships Napoleon, and feeling how Sardou demolishes in some respects la légende, tried to dissuade her. But she was not to be prevented. The anger came up into her face in the scene in which Napoleon and his sisters wrangle. It all seemed to her flat blasphemy, and, fearing she might lose self-command, she rushed from the theatre. But, as she left prematurely, her carriage had not yet come to take her home. So her cavalier obtained for her the loan of that of the pretty Mdlle. Verneuil, who personates Caroline Murat, aunt of the Princesse.

It appears that German dramatic authors are now divided into two schools, the Ibsenites and the Zolaites. "Solitary Souls," which has been interdicted at "Les Bouffes du Nord," in its adapted form, is by the Ibsenite Hauptmann. Ibsen being just now in favour here, it had at the rehearsal a literary success. The plot is simple, and the dramatis personæ are well defined. Why this play should be forbidden I am at a loss to think. Here is the subject. Doctor Johannes Vockerat, a German scientist, receives into his house Anna Mahr, a Russian studentess, she being too impecunious to put up at an hotel on her way to the Zurich university. Frau Katherine Vockerat is an excellent Hausfrau, but has not a soul above housekeeping, and is as dull as ditchwater. Her husband, father, and mother are good, narrow-minded Evangelicals, highly respectable and prim. Anna electrifies the soul of Johannes, and teaches him to revolt against those conventionalities which are death to the higher life. This life alone is worth living. He experienced the delight of having an intellectual companion in petticoats, and begs her to stay, and stay, until his Katha grows uneasy and then restive, and then miserably jealous. She only bargained for Anna staying a few days, but has had her for weeks and months. The tie between the scientist and studentess is purely Platonic. Nevertheless, its consequences are disastrous, and the happiness of all, save Anna, who is able to live as a solitary soul, is utterly wrecked. Vockerat, having no fault to find with Katha, —she living according to her light and conscience— cannot find it in his heart to divorce her. And if he did what would be the use? The allowance he would have to make her and her children would leave nothing for Anna, who, on the whole, is better off as a solitary soul than clogged with a miserably-poor husband. The wife calls in the parents-in-law as allies. They inform Dr. Johannes of the scandal to which his intellectual union with Anna has given rise. Anna then determines to push on to Zurich, to soar higher in the cerulean blue of idealism and intellect. Before leaving, she exhorts the Doctor to accept Katha as a means of mental and soul discipline. He will thus profit by her prosaic talk and her chit-chat on darning stockings and such other domestic matters. Johannes accepts her advice. But the light of his life goes out with Anna's departure. Katha becomes unendurable: snappishness alone relieves her stagnation. The one solution—and it means nothing so far as Johannes himself is concerned—is suicide. He, therefore, drowns himself in a lake.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

THIS is indeed retribution, dear Lady Betty. Last week I attacked the influenza; this week it has attacked me. It has also brought several of its poor relations. Being occupied in playing the part of unwilling host to these unwelcome guests, I need scarcely offer further excuse for writing an unusually short letter. The influenza is perhaps a trifle better than Christmas; if the former enables me to forget the latter I shall have, therefore, no great cause to complain.

* * * * *

Apropos of the influenza, I hear that the epidemic has been exceptionally severe at Harrow School, where eight of the masters out of twelve have been laid up with it. Sixty-two of the boys have also been attacked. There had been an intention to break-up on Saturday—that is a few days earlier than the appointed time—but to do this it was first necessary to obtain the sanction of all the Governors.

Writing from a bed of illness, my thoughts naturally turn to sickness. It is generally understood now that the attack of typhoid fever which carried away the late Duke of Leinster was brought about through eating oysters. The origin of Mr. Portman's illness can be traced to a similar cause. This supposed unwholesomeness of oysters is ascribed to last summer's drought. If there is anything in the theory, whitebait should be more dangerous, for these fish can be seen any day feeding in thousands at the mouth of the Thames sewers.

* * * * *

In connection with the controversy which I mentioned last week regarding the colour of Copenhagen—the horse the Duke of Wellington rode at Waterloo—I have received several letters, which finally decide the matter. Amongst them are the following:—"In the general Stud-book Copenhagen is described as 'ch c'" (chestnut colt). This appears to put the matter beyond any doubt. It is curious that he should be found in the Stud-book at all, as his dam is described as h-b (half-bred); but the reason, no doubt, was the horse's celebrity."

The second is to the same effect:—"Copenhagen's name will be found in the Stud-book. He had run in races before he descended, or, perhaps, ascended, to the position of a charger. He was a chestnut. It is a curious fact that the leader in another great war, the Emperor William, was carried for a considerable time by the Colonel, a Liverpool steeplechase winner, half-bred nominally."

* * * * *

The mention of the Duke of Wellington's horse leads not unnaturally to the statue of the Duke which formerly figured above the gate at the top of Constitution Hill. It will be a surprise to many to learn that one of the chief causes which led to its removal was the strongly-expressed repugnance of the Queen at having to drive through the gates of her Palace under a horse with a figure of one of her subjects astride upon it. This is, of course, merely a matter of sentiment, but such a circumstance did not and does not exist in any other capital in Europe.

To Overcome Weakness.—Pepper's Quinine and Iron Tonic gives New Life, Appetite, Health, Strength, Energy. Cures Neuralgia, Indigestion, Nerve Debility. Pepper's Tonic. Kept everywhere.

Another curious fact is that the only picture of the Great Duke at Apsley House is a copy of a portrait by Sir Thomas Lawrence, the original of which is in the possession of Sir Robert Peel. It was Sir Robert, moreover, who presented to the late Duke of Wellington the copy which I refer to. In the gallery at Apsley House there are portraits of Napoleon, the Emperor Alexandra, the King of Russia, and the Emperor of Austria, all full-length pictures. It is strange that in his own house there should not have been a portrait of the Great Duke himself up to a comparatively recent time.—Believe me to be, truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

SPORTING NOTES.

NO sooner had Sir Hugo been entered for the autumn handicaps and for a number of stakes than it was discovered that he could not be trained again, and it has been the same thing exactly with Marcion. A few weeks ago Mr. Vyner's horse was entered for the Hardwicke Stakes at Ascot and other events to be run next year and in 1895, but now all hope of his standing another preparation has been abandoned, and he has been relegated to the Fairfield Stud, where he is to stand at 200 gs., which seems to me to be an outrageously high fee for an untried horse of his age, to which it must be added that, although Marcion did win the Ascot Cup, yet neither in that race nor in any other did he ever meet a really good animal. The papers deplore that the expected meeting between Isinglass and Marcion in next year's Ascot Cup will not take place, but I do not for a moment believe that there would ever have been any such encounter, as, for reasons which I shall presently mention, it seems in the highest degree unlikely that Mr. McCalmont will start his horse for that race. It may be hoped that the unfortunate collapse of Marcion will cause the question of the disgraceful state of the Ascot course to be seriously taken in hand by the authorities. Four horses ran for this year's Ascot Cup, and not one of them was afterwards worth anything on the turf.

La Flèche is apparently to be kept in training for another year, which does not seem a sagacious arrangement, as she is far more likely to deteriorate than to improve during the next four or five months, and her prospects of distinguishing herself as a five-year-old are not brilliant. She is sure to be over-weighted in handicaps, and her only weight-for-age engagements are the Newmarket Champion Stakes and the Hardwicke Stakes at Ascot, in both of which races Isinglass and several of the best four-year-olds are entered. I should fancy that La Flèche will probably "go for" the Kempton Park Jubilee Handicap if she is at all fairly treated in that race.

The Newmarket sales presented the usual features of an apoplectic plethora in the catalogue, and a paralytic tenuity in the ring, and an enormous number of lots were sent back unsold, the reserve in many cases being foolishly and absurdly high. During the four days only two animals were sold for upwards of 1,000 gs. Queen Adelaide, who beat Busybody for the Dewhurst Plate of 1883, and who ran third for the Derby in 1884, was sold for 1,550 gs. to Mr. Chaplin, and she goes back to the Blankney Stud, where she was bred. She ought to prove a good bargain, being in foal to St. Simon. Mezzotint, own sister to Blue Green, was sold for 2,000 gs. to M. Lebaudy. She is in foal to Bend Or. A number of mares were bought for Lord Derby's new stud at Knowsley.

In the early part of last year Lord Harewood's "dark" colt Flaxby, by Barcaldine out of Carillon, was backed for a good deal of money for the Derby. I warned my speculative readers at the time to leave Flaxby alone, as it was very doubtful whether he would ever stand training, and my unfavourable opinion has been thoroughly justified by the result, as he never started for any race whatever, and was sold last week at Newmarket for 20 gs. A very high opinion was at one time entertained of Flaxby, and he was heavily engaged as a yearling.

Baron de Rothschild's La Nièvre (own sister to Le Nord) is growing into a very beautiful filly, and if she is kept in this country next spring, instead of being started for her French engagements, she will be a dangerous candidate for the One Thousand and for the Oaks. La Nièvre is entered for the Grand Prix, but in England she has no engagements after the Oaks until the Nassau Stakes at Goodwood. I should fancy that La Nièvre will be started for the One Thousand, whatever policy may be adopted with her as regards the Oaks, as the Newmarket event does not seem likely to take a great deal of winning, the best of the sixty-six entries being Venia, Wedding Bell, Mecca, Jocasta, Schoolbook, Vulpecula, and Sanderling, and some of these fillies went off very much in the autumn, while others are certainly non-stayers. Go Lightly's nomination is void, as she was entered by "Mr. Abington," but she remains in the Oaks, having been engaged in that stake by her breeder, Mr. J. S. Harrison; and Melancholy, Letterewe, Sweet Duchess, and Grania are also entered at Epsom. There is sure to be a very extensive weeding out on January 2 for both the Derby and the Oaks, as there will be an extra sum of £25 to be paid on each animal which is left in for either race after that day. In the official handicap of the two-year-olds Glare was estimated to be the best filly, being placed 11 lb. behind Ladas. Mecca and Maundy Money were 6 lb. worse than Glare, and 1 lb. behind them came La Nièvre, Letterewe, and Sweet Duchess.

Mr. D. Cooper's Saintly, by St. Simon out of Lonely, by Hermit, is one of the nicest and most promising yearlings at Newmarket, and it is by no means improbable that she will win the Brocklesby Stakes at Lincoln, which race was carried off last March by her stable companion, Glare, who next season will be hard to beat in any five-furlong event for which she may be started. Saintly was practically bred by Lord Cadogan, as Lonely was in foal with her when she was sold to Mr. Cooper for 2,000 gs. at the Newmarket winter sale in December, 1891. On that occasion Lonely's foal by Isonomy (Isola) was bought for 400 gs. for Lord Penrhyn, but she has turned out a failure, having started three times last season without winning.

I hear from Newmarket that Isinglass is likely to turn out a magnificent four-year-old, and it is generally believed there that Buckingham is very little inferior to Mr. McCalmont's horse. It will be remembered that at the sale of Lord Calthorpe's stud Buckingham was sold to Captain Machell for 3,150 gs. This horse has not run this year, and it was supposed that he could not be trained, but although he may possibly have been unsound during the spring, it is quite certain that he has been all right for a long time past, and he is now in regular work at Newmarket. If there was nothing wrong with Buckingham at any time, and if he is really a good horse, it was extraordinary for him not to have been brought out for some of his valuable engagements during the early part of the season. It is also odd that Buckingham has not been entered for any of the stakes which have closed during the last six weeks. I expect that this horse will be engaged in the Lincolnshire Handicap, and also in the City and Suburban, and Kempton Park Jubilee Handicap. Buckingham has always been mentioned of late as being without engagements, but the fact has been overlooked that he was nominated for both the £10,000 stakes, which are to be run at Newmarket next year, by Captain Machell, so the entry remains good. The Bedford Cottage stable has an excellent chance of winning these races, having both Isinglass and Buckingham entered. I should suppose that Mr. McCalmont will start Isinglass for the Hardwicke Stakes at Ascot, as there is such a very moderate entry for that race, and then let him go for the £10,000 race at Newmarket and for the Eclipse Stakes. If, however, Buckingham is really a good horse, then he may very likely represent Bedford Cottage in the Princess of Wales's Stakes of £10,000 at the First July Meeting, as he would meet the other runners with an advantage in the weights of 9 lb. as compared with Isinglass, who has 12 lb. extra to carry, whereas Buckingham's penalty is only 3 lb. These two horses have only the three-year olds to fear, and all the Derby colts are entered in this stake. Having regard to the very rich engagements which were long ago made for Isinglass, I shall be surprised if he runs for the Gold Cup at Ascot, as a preparation for such a race might very likely impair his speed, and that trophy will in all probability be won by Callistrate, for I understand that M. Abeille's horse is to remain in England with a view to his being trained for this and other long-distance events.

Kinahan's LL Whisky.—"The Cream of Old Irish Whiskies." Kinahan's LL Whisky. Gold Medal Paris Exhibition, 1878 Kinahan's Cloc-le Whisky. The Finest Scotch Whisky sold.

THE A.R.A. AND AMATEUR OARSMEN.

An ounce of fact is worth a ton of fiction. And I have been fortunate enough to receive from the Rev. Vicars A. Boyle, Vicar of Burton-on-Trent, that ounce of fact to assist me in my attack on the A.R.A. with reference to the unjust and ungentlemanly rule by which those who earn weekly wages and are engaged in manual work are excluded from competing as amateurs. The vicar writes: "In Burton there are three rowing clubs—the Burton, the Leander, and the Trent. The members of the Trent R.C. are for the most part young men employed at manual labour and earning weekly wages. The members of the other two clubs are amateurs within the definition of the A.R.A. There is at Burton an annual regatta held under the A.R.A. rules. It follows that at this regatta the majority of the Trent R.C. are excluded from competing. It is fair to say that the Burton and Leander R.C.'s have done their best to induce the A.R.A. to alter the objectionable law, but in vain."

My correspondent thinks that the Universities and "amateur" gentlemen athletes have a grievance against those who are employed in manual labour, which may explain, though, as he justly says, it cannot excuse the selfish exclusiveness of the A.R.A. rule. The date of the rule is about 1880, a time when professionalism began to exist in a veiled form, and was unrecognised in Association football, and the Vicar considers that the rule was framed to prevent such a degradation of amateur rowing. To a certain extent he is correct, but if he refers to the Field of November 11 he will see an article which explains that the object of the rule is to mark the distinction "between the bonâ-fide and the bogus amateur who exists in other branches of sport, and to prevent the splendid and unsullied old English sport of amateur oarsmanship sinking to the low and disreputable level of the athletic 'Hammytoor' (as he calls himself)." What do we find in other sports patronised by the "people"? the writer of the article rhetorically asks. And his answer is that a coal-waggoner is amateur swimming champion for four years, pedestrians enter under false names and "rope" and "ramp," cyclists run for the makers in whose employ they are, and win or lose to suit their books, and all the winners sell or pawn their prizes; while footballers live in winter by the payments they receive. Then the writer goes on to other matters. The argument that he wishes to enunciate—although apparently he has not the ability to do so—is that the healthier state of rowing is due to the fact that the A.R.A. definition of an amateur is different in the point in question from the definition adopted in other sports.

To establish this position the writer has to prove that in each branch of sport which he enumerates the evils are caused by those who are engaged in manual labour or menial duty, or, as he contemptuously calls them, the "people." He attempts to do so by sneering at a coal-waggoner who swims—a most excellent recreation on the score of cleanliness alone for one who has been doing such work. He has to prove that a coal waggoner is ipso facto a bogus amateur. He dare not suggest such a ridiculous proposition. Then, as to pedestrians, not a word does he use to hint that the rogues he refers to are limited to the "people." So far as the cyclists are concerned, the writer literally gives himself away. To demonstrate the degradation of the sport, he takes that class of rider known as the maker's cyclist. From the very nature of his occupation it is clear that he is not engaged in manual labour, and therefore, on the writer's own showing, the "people" are in this case not responsible. I may point out that such a rider is a professional under the A.R.A. rule, which also provides against boatbuilders' oarsmen. No one wishes to alter the rule in these respects. The question of football is more complex. In the Association game professionals are recognised, but the Rugby game is the only pastime in which "pros." are not supposed to exist. However, the writer does not attempt to show that the troubles there spring from the class he despises. He simply fails to prove his case. He knows perfectly well, if he has any knowledge of anything but rowing, that the Amateur Athletic Association and the National Cyclists' Union would have very little to do if the wrongdoers were confined to those who are engaged in manual labour. A more miserable apology for the present rule was never attempted. A more ridiculous defence of those who deny justice to the young fellows at Burton and other places was never put in print.

I have dealt with this article at length, because it is semi-official, and may therefore be taken to be the true expression of the anti-reformers' views. Mr. Brickwood is the Rowing Editor of the Field. He must have known and approved of the article if he did not write it. He is on the Committee of the A.R.A., and on the Sub-committee that is considering the revision of the rules. In fact, that intemperate and illogical article was written at the time when the Sub-committee was just about to settle down to its duties. No wonder, then, that the amateurs at Burton have made their protests in vain when their appeals are sent to men who talk of those engaged in manual labour in this snobbish and despicable manner, to men who are so illogical as to welcome as an amateur the shop-assistant, while his brother, if he be a master carpenter, is an outcast. Is this the way to foster sportsmanslike and honourable feelings amongst men? It is the grossest hypocrisy for Mr. Brickwood to write of the unsullied old English sport of amateur rowing while there is this disgraceful blot on the rules of the A.R.A. I trust that I have said enough to show that the defenders of the rule have utterly failed to sustain their position. I shall at an early date deal with the case for the reformers, and show what precautions are neccessary to avoid the dangers and difficulties that are experienced by the A.A.A. and N.C.U. in their respective spheres of sport.

Affairs in the billiard world have been rather quiet lately. Coles and Roberts have begun the first money match of the season. But I doubt if the stakes influence either the public or the players. The public want to see the players in form, and to secure the patronage of the public the players have to play up whether or not there is a stake. On Saturday evening Roberts put in a run of heavy breaks, and gained quickly on his opponent. Dawson and North were engaged in an interesting series of spot-barred games last week, and the former, by playing most consistently, won eight out of the dozen played.

The North did not have everything its own way in the Rugby match with the South at Manchester. Better goal-kicking by the Southerners would have altered the score. The names of those selected to play for England are a sufficient indication of the success of the players in the game. I congratulate Hooper, of the Middlesex Wanderers, on getting his cap. He has worked his way steadily up the ladder. Tucker, of Cambridge, is rather fortunate. I have not heard any reason why Evershed should not be playing. On his form against Cardiff he was worth his place. There were few good games in the Metropolis. The Kensington forwards wisely kept the ball to themselves, and so prevented the Scottish outsides from doing much damage, although they could not avert defeat. Croydon have come on as much as the Old Merchant Taylors have fallen off, and by good all-round play they scored their first victory over the Old Boys.

MAJOR HOWE & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

The most interesting Association match was the English Cup tie between the 2nd Scots Guards and the Royal Arsenal. Extra time had to be played to bring the result to a definite conclusion. Private Hyslop and Lieut. Gosling were in grand form for the soldiers, and if the latter had not injured his leg, the result might very easily have been the defeat of the professional team. Stirling also played a fine game. I hear that the Guards will start further teams if the necessary permission is granted. The increase of recruits is directly traceable to the popularity of football. I only hope no red-tapeism will be introduced to stop it. On paper the Old Carthusians should have been able to beat the Caledonians, but as it was not a Cup tie they did not come up to the mark.

At a meeting of the Southern Counties' Amateur Swimming Association, I am glad to see a rigid set of rules was passed to regulate amateur races at those galas which professional swimmers organise. Permits, if the A.S.A. approves of the scheme, will only be granted under stringent rules. These galas are frequent on the South Coast during the summer, and the manner in which they have been conducted has caused a justifiable slur to be cast on amateur swimming. It is wonderful how many swimmers who call themselves amateurs have been able to get about from place to place, and there is no doubt that more than expenses have often been paid. But it is practically impossible to prove a man's guilt. Under such circumstances, the burden of proving his innocence should be cast on the swimmer who indulges in such doubtful practices. At present this is not the rule, but some such law is necessary if swimming is to be freed of certain pests.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN.—Although prices are fairly maintained in many directions, the volume of business is decreasing, as usual, when Christmas draws near, and the Christmas boom, which had been predicted by some, is not yet in sight. The view is now being expressed that the hoped-for revival will make its appearance in January, and there will most certainly be money enough about in all conscience by that time to support such a movement. The one condition, which is still absent, however, is some degree of confidence on the part of the public, the fresh disclosures in connection with Trust Companies keeping the distrust alive. The purchases by the public are, therefore, still confined to high-class securities, enormous sums remaining uninvested. The nervous condition of the American Market has affected most other departments to some extent, but a distinct improvement is shown in Home Rails owing to better traffics, and there is also a more hopeful tone in the Argentine market, as the Romero-Rothschild Convention has at last been ratified by the Chamber of Deputies. In this department, and in that of Mexican Government stocks an important movement will probably be seen shortly. In the meantime investors will do well to cast about for some of the many depreciated securities, especially amongst South Americans, which will, no doubt, be favourably affected by the improved financial position in Argentina and Mexico. Investors need not necessarily place all their money into gilt-edged stocks, although in the case of persons with small means who are dependent upon the income from their investments alone this is distinctly desirable. Those who are better placed and possessed of larger means should invest the greater part of their capital in high-class stocks, so as to have it absolutely safe, but there is no reason why they should not also buy second-class or more speculative stocks as long as there is so large a supply of these at exceptionally low prices.

City Safe Deposit & Agency Co., Ld., Throgmorton-avenue. Safes from 1 guinea and Strong Rooms from 15 guineas per annum. Cards to view on application to R. Slagg, Manager.

The Demand for Gilt-edged Stocks.

The continued demand for high-class securities is one of the features of the present time. As Consols (Two and a-Half per Cents.) stand at 97, it is, perhaps, not surprising that some demand should manifest itself for Metropolitan Two and a-Half per Cent. Consolidated stock (1919-49) at 91 x.d. British Corporation stocks came in for a good deal of inquiry some months ago, and cannot be bought now to yield more than 3 per cent. on the investment. Then come Colonial Government stocks, which have materially advanced of late—perhaps, in the case of Australian securities of this kind, quite as high as they ought to be without encouraging these Colonies to fresh borrowing, the abstention from which, combined with retrenchment, is so important a condition of their return to financial soundness. In this department a yield of from 3⅞ to 4 per cent. is to be obtained with reasonable safety. Home Railway Debentures and Preference stocks are at almost prohibitive prices, and the guaranteed stocks of Indian Railways also stand at a high level. No wonder, therefore, that the markets are being searched for other well-secured stocks which may give a somewhat better yield. I explained a fortnight ago, with the aid of a comparative table, that out of nineteen high-class stocks which I mentioned on October 19, thirteen had risen from 1 to 5 points, and of these three have again improved during the last week, Western of Buenos Ayres Five per Cent. Mortgage bonds (1925), rising to 113 against 109 on October 19, Nitrate Railway Five per Cent. First Mortgage Debentures to 98½ against 95 on October 19, and De Beers Five-and-a-Half per Cent. Debentures to 104½ against 102 on October 19. A proof of the high appreciation in which gilt-edged Home Securities are held is also furnished by the extraordinary success which has attended the issue of £360,000 of Four per Cent. Perpetual Debenture stock of the Gordon Hotels, Limited. Although, in addition to the 5 per cent. payable on application, the whole balance of 95 per cent. was due on allotment, the applications amounted to over £1,800,000, the amount being, therefore, applied for five times over. The security, of course, is excellent, the Debenture stock being a direct obligation of the prosperous Gordon Hotels Company, which is paying 10 per cent. dividends on its Ordinary capital, and being, in addition, specially secured by a first mortgage on the Hotel Victoria, Northumberland-avenue, London, and the Cliftonville Hotel, Margate (both freehold), with a floating charge covering the furniture, fittings, and stores in these hotels. The old Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Debentures of the Gordon Hotels, Limited, being quoted at 122, at which they yield £3. 13s. 9d. per annum on the investment, it is not surprising that the new Four per Cents. should have been so eagerly sought after at par, and they still look cheap at the premium of 3-4, at which they are now quoted. Other gilt-edged stocks, which yield good results with every safety, are the First Mortgage bonds of leading American railroad Companies. A return of from 3⅞ to 4⅜ per cent. can be obtained from these, and for particulars I need but refer to the table published on November 30. Of South American Railroad Debentures I gave a list on November 23, since which time an advance has taken place in most of the stocks mentioned. A yield of from 3⅞ to 5¼ per cent. per annum can be obtained in these with reasonable safety. I have in the foregoing fully set out information which is again and again sought by my correspondents. The latter will, by an intelligent study of the various tables referred to, be able to select for themselves suitable investment stocks. What they should do, is to keep Truth on file. They will thus be able to refer at once to the various lists, which afford full information as to the security of the stocks, their prices, and yield on investment.

Home Rails.

At last the improved coal business of the Railways, caused by the termination of the coal strikes, is making itself felt in the traffic returns, small increases taking the place of the large decreases even in the case of the Midland, North-Western, and Great Northern. Prices are steadier in consequence, although the dividend disappointment in January has yet to be got over on the part of those holders who are not already prepared for it. It will be useful to give the estimates of the dividends, such as they are at present fixed by the talent of the Home Railway market in the "House," side by side with dividends paid last year, and I have, therefore, compiled the following table :—

	Dividends Paid by the Companies per cent. per annum.			Estimated Dividends per cent. per annum.
	First Half 1892.	Second Half 1892.	Year 1892.	First Half 1893.	Second Half 1893.	Year 1893.
Metropolitan Ordinary ...	3¼	3¼	3¼	3¼	2¼	2¾
Metro. District First Pref.	3¼	2¾	3	2¼	7¼	2
Brighton Ordinary	3¼	9¼	6½	4¼	7	5¾
Brighton "A"	1½	12½	7	2½	8	5¼
Sheffield	¾	3	1⅞	Nil.	Nil.	Nil.
South-Eastern Ordinary ...	1¾	6¼	4	2¼	5¼	3¾
Great Eastern	¾	3½	2¼	¾	2	1⅜
North-Eastern	3	6¼	4¾	4¾	7¼	6
Chatham First Pref. ...	3⅜	4½	3 1/16	2¾	3	2¾
South-Western	4¼	7¾	6	4¾	8	6¾
Midland	5¼	6¼	6	4¾	3¼	4
Great Northern	3	5¼	4¼	3	3	3
Great Western	4¾	7	5⅞	4	5½	4¾
North Western	5⅜	7¼	6¼	5½	5⅜	5½
Caledonian Ordinary ...	4	4¼	4⅛	4	4½	4¼
North British Deferred ...	Nil.	⅜	⅛	¼	Nil.	⅛

It will be seen that the chances of Sheffield "A" getting any return are greatly diminished by a considerable deficiency. All the "Heavies" are suffering severely, and the poor traffics of the Great Eastern continue notwithstanding the termination of the coal strikes. The North-Eastern alone has been doing well, and on the basis of the estimates yields between 3⅞ and 4 per cent. per annum on the investment. It is not surprising, therefore, that Berwicks have been in favour. The impression has been growing of late that there is no further fall in Brighton "A" for the present. The price has risen to 147¾, and the "Bear" account was shown at the last settlement to be as large as ever, the backwardation touching ½ on the second day. There are rumours about, moreover, that the dividend will be a good deal better than the estimate, mysterious reports being set about of some fresh development. Metropolitan Districts are strong at 28, and if any further improvement were to take place in traffics (which have increased by £200 upon the returns of the previous three weeks, presumably in consequence of the raising of the 'bus fares), a marked advance would probably follow.

Yankee Rails.

With the exception of Erie and Atchison descriptions, in which a strong undercurrent is noticeable, notwithstanding repeated "Bear" raids, American Railroad stocks have again suffered a moderate decline. The uncertainty which surrounds the tariff question in view of a protracted contest in Congress is one of the features which have weighed on the market, unsatisfactory traffic being predicted in consequence. Some of the returns have, in fact, fallen off materially, but it is supposed that working expenses have also been cut down, and it would not be surprising, therefore, if the net result were not to prove so disappointing as the gross returns suggest. Money, moreover, remains a drug in the New York market, and the gold shipments from that side have ceased, at least, temporarily. It would, therefore, be unreasonable to join in the pessimistic views which are being aired in certain quarters, and I should say that there is a good deal in the following argument of a Wall-street contemporary, the Daily Indicator:—

> The demand for the very best class of investment securities is admittedly out of all proportion to the supply. The same information comes to us not only from bankers in this city, but from Boston and Philadelphia and other financial centres. There is money to invest in securities that will yield a return, and it will not be long before the capital which finds no room in the particular field selected will be turning towards stocks that have a future. The investor, finding that he cannot get a security that will return him his 4 or 5 or 6 per cent. per annum in the shape of interest or dividends, will not hesitate to take hold of a railroad stock which is almost certain to return him from 20 to 30 per cent. in a year or two years in appreciation in price. The infallible sign of a general upward movement in the stock market is the quiet exhausting of the gilt edged bond and stock supply by careful investors. A "Bull" market is in view. The cry "Hold your wheat" has been started again among the Western wheat growers, but we doubt if it will avail much. The same cry has too often proved an injury to the farmer, and if it should not prove so this time it will be because he hasn't much wheat to hold. The price of wheat is certainly low enough to justify the belief that before the next crop is harvested it must advance very considerably. Still, the fact stands that the price is bound to be lower, when there is wheat to sell than when there isn't.

These are not times for sanguine anticipations, yet there is a good deal of sound common-sense in the Wall-street writer's argument. Money will be a drug in the market here in January, as it will be in the States, and the Stock Exchanges generally discount the future at a very early period. As regards wheat, the stocks now kept back will have to come forward sooner or later, and the freight on them is, therefore, certain to be earned by the Companies eventually. The position is one eminently for investors to consider. I do not recommend promiscuous speculation, or the running of "Bull" accounts; but I say again, that any one who secures well-selected investments in Yankee Rails on the present reaction, taking the stock up, will see very considerable profits in the course of two or three months, and the chances are that January will already usher in an upward movement. Grand Trunk stocks have experienced a sharp break in consequence of forced sales of pawned stock and of unfavourable views of the position, there being a probability of a further series of traffic decreases. That, by the way, was fully foreshadowed by me. The guaranteed stock will probably get its full interest this time, but the market estimates that the First Prefs. will get nothing. With reference to Canadian Pacifics, prospects are by no means bright either, but this department is not quite so hopelessly demoralised as the Trunk market, in which hardly a jobber has a sixpence left to call his own.

Atchison and Erie.

With regard to more immediate market influences, the Atchison difficulty will apparently be removed from the list of troubles of the Yankee Market. According to the statements made by the New York correspondent of the Financial News, President Reinhart has fully provided for the interest on the "Fours" due on January 1, and there is very little doubt now that the wreckers will be foiled in their attack upon this Company. As a New York contemporary puts it, the Atchison Company carried, with the assistance of the London financial houses, between 5,000,000 dols. and 6,000,000 dols. of floating debt during the recent panic, when everybody knew that there was 7,000,000 dols. of notes coming due in November, but the Board also successfully provided for the extension of those notes. This means at least 12,000,000 dols. of financing through the toughest panic and the most prolonged strain that financiers in the States have ever been called upon to wrestle with. It is a memorable achievement, and one which completely answers the persistent and prejudiced criticism of the people, who can see nothing good in the Atchison Road or the Atchison management. For this reason the Atchison Second Mortgage bonds must be considered remarkably cheap, and the Guarantee Fund Notes are, of course, fully secured, even should a receivership come about, which does not appear at all likely under present circumstances, the period of panic having passed away. The success of the Erie reorganisation would, no doubt, exercise a very favourable influence on the American Feeding Dogs.—Prof. Woodroffe Hill, F.R.C.V.S., writes: "A sound, well-balanced canine dietary is the secret of success with 'Spratt's Patent.' I have no hesitation in asserting, with regard to biscuit diet, Spratt's Fibrine Cake is far and away the best in the English market. Some of the dog biscuits I have examined might be composed of pipeclay and sawdust for the nutritive properties they possess. Cheap and dirty means expense and disease." See each "Dog Cake" is stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "X." This is all important.

Market generally. The chief features of the plan which has been drawn up by a Committee of the Erie Board, consisting of Messrs. J. G. McCullough, M. K. Jessup, A. E. Orr, Abram S. Hewitt, J. Lowber Welsh, W. A. Wheelock, and President John King, ex officio, have already been stated by me. They consist of the reduction of the interest on the Second Mortgage bonds to 5 per cent. —a further new issue being authorised—in consideration of the bonds receiving full foreclosure powers, the arrangement at present in force not enabling holders to foreclose until six coupons have been defaulted upon. It is, of course, in the interest of the Second Mortgage bondholders that the reorganisation should succeed on account of this very helplessness of theirs in the face of default, but I am, all the same, of the opinion that the shares should bear part of the burden. It may, in fact, be taken for granted that the shares would not have escaped without an assessment, if they were not, as to seven-eights, held on the other side of the Atlantic, while the majority of the "Seconds" are located here. Reorganisation and other committees are becoming too numerous to mention in Wall-street, and some of the boldest of the dissatisfied holders of Kansas Pacific consols are arranging for a committee to petition for the removal of Russell Sage as trustee and the appointment of two new trustees. Russell Sage, since the death of Jay Gould, has been the sole trustee under the mortgage, and the dissatisfied ones maintain that he has failed to comply with the terms of the mortgage in regard to the investment of the proceeds of land sales. He now has, they say, 700,000 dols. or 800,000 dols. cash from land sales which should be used to purchase and retire the consolidated bonds. Purchases of these have been made heretofore as high as 108 and 110, and they are now quoted at 83 to 85. "Brother Sage," says a Wall-street contemporary, "must feel it acutely to have his superior wisdom and judgment questioned in this way by these aggressive and unterrified bondholders of a cold, ungrateful world."

Foreigners and South Americans.

The events of the week in this department have been the announcement of default by Greece and the ratification of the Romero-Rothschild Convention by the Argentine Chamber of Deputies. I have hitherto entertained the view that M. Tricoupis was an honourable man who would not lend himself to any dishonest practices. His last performance has roused general indignation. It is hardest of all upon the Monopoly bondholders, whose special hypothecation is coolly disregarded—a precedent which is extremely dangerous, and is not unnaturally meeting with protests on all sides. If the Greeks do not come to their senses, they ought to have the quotations of their loans expunged by every bourse in Europe. Italians have improved and reacted. There is nothing in the financial or political outlook in Italy to justify any improvement in the Rentes. Spanish have improved, but it is difficult to see any valid reason for this movement. Egyptians and Russians have declined on realisations for French account. The news of the ratification of the Romero-Rothschild Convention for the settlement of the Argentine National Debt has caused Argentine Government stocks to improve, it being understood that similar action by the Senate will follow. In that case it will be possible to pay the interest on the various loans due on January 1 according to the Convention. What this will be for the various loans I fully stated, together with the yield, on November 23. It is to be hoped that the Argentine Government will now also at once proceed to deal with the Railway guarantees, which have been allowed to remain in default for two years, although it had been provided in the original Rothschild agreement that they should be paid in Funding bonds. Considering that these guarantees were entered into by the Government under special contracts, and that they attracted many millions sterling from English investors, they ought really to be redeemed in cash in full. The Argentine Republic has reaped great benefit from the railway system so created with English capital, and it will be impossible to re-establish Argentine credit, unless these guarantees are fairly dealt with. Uruguay bonds are firmer in sympathy with Argentines, and Peruvian Corporation stocks have also recovered from the lowest point touched, the statements made at the meeting being to some extent reassuring. The most active market, however, has been that for Mexican Six per Cent. Government stock, which rose at one time to 68 on repurchases by "Bears" and realisation of profits, reacting to 67¼. The January coupon has now been officially announced, but there is still a nervous feeling about, which will, however, doubtless disappear when the new loan is actually brought out. It has been remarked that at present sellers come forward whenever the quotation approaches 68. Brazilians are firmer on the hope—as yet very slender—that the civil war will come to an end shortly. Chilians are distinctly stronger.

The Kaffir Circus.

The South African Gold Mines are doing as well as the most sanguine could expect, and the Randt Mines send record crushings month after month. Yet there is no activity in the market, and, with the exception of advances of ¼ in Crown Reefs, City and Suburban, Langlaagte, and a few others, dealings have shown great dulness. That pernicious Chartered of South Africa trouble may in part be blamed for the prevailing depression, these shares having now been knocked down to 22 by the unfavourable advices from the seat of war in Matabeleland. Liberties have again been taken by the "Bears," with Glencairns, but that is a very dangerous game in the face of the favourable official advices. The African Gold Recovery Company announce that 36,810 oz. of gold have been recovered by means of their MacArthur-Forrest cyanide process at the Randt, and 3,500 oz. in other districts, total 40,310 oz., during November, being 26½ per cent. of the Randt output for November. How important this process has become to the gold mining industry may be seen from the figures of the Langlaagte Estate Company, which has, mainly through its instrumentality, assumed the premier position as a gold-producer on the Randt. There has of late been a great deal of talk, eagerly fostered in interested quarters, that the validity of the McArthur-Forrest patents will be contested in South Africa. So far, however, no such step has been taken, neither has any one Company as yet refused to pay royalty. It may of course come to that, but the Directors appear to be very confident that they will be victorious in such a contest, being justified on all points by the opinions of eminent experts and counsel. The following letter bears on this and other questions raised in Truth of December 7 by a correspondent signing himself "Jacob":—

Glasgow, December 15, 1893.

Your friend Jacob attaches too much importance to the recent division of a few thousand African Gold Recovery shares amongst the Cassel Co. shareholders. They were spread over nearly a thousand shareholders, and the matter had already been discounted. The present low price of the A. G. R. Co. shares is more attributable to depreciatory rumours about the patents circulated by parties who grudge the moderate royalty charge, and would like to evade payment. It is easy to raise doubts and create alarm, but shareholders should recollect that the patents were thoroughly investigated and approved by counsel when purchased by the various Companies; and those people who have an intimate knowledge of the subject have absolute confidence in their stability. The position and prospects of the African Gold Recovery Company are excellent. The McArthur-Forrest process has created a new industry of great utility, and the increase of the South African returns is mainly due to its instrumentality. The recovery by the process for November is 40,310 oz. as against 38,000 oz. for October. By its means the Langlaagte Estate Company has assumed the position of leading gold producer with 5,820 oz., recovered by cyanide from tailings and concentrates out of a total of 12,039 oz. The Crown Reef Company also won 3,023 oz. by cyanide, and almost every other important Randt Company is deriving benefit. African Gold Recovery shares pay excellent dividends, are cheap at present price, and should advance on merits and prospects.—I am, &c., F. N.

The shares of Transvaal Land remain dull in sympathy with Gold Mines. Oceana are absurdly low. The Directors of the Central African and Zoutpansberg Exploration Company have issued their annual report, in which favourable statements are made concerning the exploration and development of the various territories in which the Company is interested and which include large holdings in the Katanga Company, the Companhia da Zambezia, &c. M. E. Foa, the Company's Manager in East and Central Africa, is shortly expected in this country and will address the shareholders at an early meeting. De Beers and Jagersfontein Diamond shares have improved, but the recovery is so far a feeble one.

Miscellaneous Mines.

The greatly increased number of inquiries which I have received during the past week concerning Mining shares, especially in the miscellaneous department, shows that the public are commencing again to pay attention to the latter. Indian Mines, however, have, so far, been dull, and declines are marked in Mysore, Mysore Reefs, Nundydroog, &c. I still consider the prospects of Gold fields of Mysore as promising. Speaking at the meeting of the Nine Reefs Company, Mr. John Taylor said: "At the South Shaft the Goldfields Company is undoubtedly opening out a very nice mine, one which will be heard of much more before long, and heard of very favourably." Shareholders of the Mysore Company have been favoured with a long pamphlet attacking the policy of the Directors and the Managers. I have several times protested against the heaping up of the capital of the Company, and I believe its affairs should be more economically managed, but if a shareholders' committee is to be formed, as suggested, the very greatest care should be exercised as to its constitution. Generally speaking, I have not much faith in shareholders' committees. A correspondent, signing himself "West Wynaad," sends me a lengthy communication in which the management of the Mysore West and Mysore Wynaad is criticised, and a scheme for amalgamation of these two Companies is propounded. I really cannot find space for this letter, but the matter seems worthy of consideration. Amongst Australian Mines Aladdin's continue to attract attention, the excellent crushings and the richness of the ore, which is now being opened up, justifying higher prices. Both Wentworth Priority and Ordinary shares stand at low and tempting quotations. At the meeting of shareholders of the Carrington (Charters Towers) a very hopeful feeling prevailed, and it is quite on the cards that this will be proved a rich gold-bearing property. Achilles Gold shares have again risen $\frac{1}{16}$ on the announcement of a first crushing of 245 tons for 320 oz. Active dealings have taken place in some of the cheap American Mines. Montanas have recovered to 8s. on the confirmation of the richness of the ore now being crushed. De Lamars have risen 1s. 6d., American Belle and Elkhorn 1s., while Glenrocks and West Argentine have improved. There have also been considerable dealings in La Plata at from 9d. to 1s. It is pointed out that the whole capital at this price represents only £18,000, against which they own their Leadville property, now worked on lease, and 100 claims in Mozambique, the located portion of which the engineer describes as the pick of Massi Kessi Goldfields. From the Holcomb Valley property a further cablegram has been received to the effect that 252 cubic yards treated yielded £30. This shows the gravel to be worth 2s. 4½d. per cubic yard, while the previous return showed a value of only 2s. 1½d. per cubic yard. On the basis of these returns the Company would earn good dividends. The latest advices to hand leave no doubt as to the richness of the gravel, the average of which is even higher than Mr. Pedley's original estimate, which was 2s. per cubic yard. The shares are quoted 9d. to 1s., and are extremely scarce, being considered a good purchase in view of the fact that the Company has ample funds and the shares are fully paid. Other cheap shares, such as Caratals and Idahos, have also been dealt in to a considerable extent. I hear that there is likely to be a considerable movement in Caratals, large purchases having been made by insiders at the recent low prices. El Callao are better, and some hopeful reports are being set about with reference to the Palmarejo. It is to be hoped that the unfortunate shareholders will at last get some good news, but I am not sanguine on the point. Advices from the Springdale Mine continue satisfactory, and it is believed that the results from this property will tend to bring these shares into favour. Mr. Charles Harrison Smith, the liquidator of the unfortunate Ida Gold Mining Company, has not taken any notice of my request that he should make a statement as to when the surplus, which the shareholders have been led to expect, will be returned to the latter. I hereby reiterate my request in the name of several indignant shareholders.

Some Questions Concerning the Jarvis-Conklin Trust.

A great deal of correspondence continues to reach me from holders of Debentures in the Jarvis-Conklin Mortgage Trust Company, all of whom agree that it is necessary for the holders on this side to act in concert in order to protect their interests. It is also desirable that the greatest publicity should be given to the matter, as, at the meeting of the "C" Debenture-holders, convened by the Trustees (the Law Guarantee and Trust Society) on Thursday last week, Mr. Gray and two other holders complained that they had received no notice of the meeting. The Debenture-holders are certainly not fully alive to the importance of looking after their interest, as out of the £123,000 issued, only £16,650 was represented at the meeting. As under the trust deed one-fifth in value of the bonds issued in the series must be represented to form a quorum (£26,600), no action could be taken last Thursday; but the meeting has been adjourned until Thursday, the 21st inst., at two o'clock, at the offices of the Law Guarantee and Trust Society, when according to the terms of the deed the meeting can come to a binding decision, whether the one-fifth of the value be represented or not. I hope, therefore, that next Thursday the Debenture-holders will make an effort to attend in larger numbers, as affairs have arrived at a very critical stage. The following letter refers to an important point:—

> I have read with great interest the remarks anent this Company in your last issue. With your knowledge, which in matters financial has so often proved to be "extensive and peculiar," you may perhaps be able to solve a question which to me seems inexplicable.
>
> Why do the Law Guarantee and Trust Society persistently refuse to do what they are bound to do under the terms of their trust deed, viz., rescind the assignment of the mortgages they hold in trust for the Debenture-holders? Everybody who knows anything about American law knows that this course, if adopted, would effectually protect us.
>
> There is a reconstruction scheme talked about. Perhaps you know its purport and effect, and whether it be likely to influence our trustees.—Yours, &c.
>
> A "C" Debenture-holder.

As was stated by the Chairman at the meeting, the Trustees hold securities to the value of £123,141, consisting of first charges on mortgages on freehold real estate, together with certificates to the effect that the value of such assets was at least two and a-half times the amount of the advances made upon them, and it is undoubtedly imperative that these assignments should be duly registered. I have been at some trouble to inquire into the matter, and after reading the documentary evidence in an action which has been brought by a "C" Debenture-holder against the Trustees, it is evident to me that the Law Guarantee and Trust Society were advised by their English Counsel to record these mortgages, and that they gave their New York agents orders to carry out this obvious course, although not having seen the trust deed, I cannot say whether it is compulsory on them to do so or not. The correspondence shows that they received a communication from Mr. Jarvis (which is unfortunately omitted from the list of letters), upon which they began to waver in their views upon the necessity of recording. Called upon for their advice the New York agents were ready with all manner of reasons against recording. They wrote that the Trustees were "fairly protected," and that they ran "no considerable risk" (whatever that may mean) in allowing things to remain as they were. In a subsequent letter, which seems to have determined the society not to record, the New York agents stated that they had just seen the receivers, and that "the main serious thing was to re-organise." It appears that they then thought they ought to have some agreement with the receiver about collecting the interest on the mortgages. Then came suddenly the action above referred to, which found the Law Guarantee and Trust Society committed to a course which I cannot help thinking is opposed to their better judgment. They very properly then appealed to the Debenture holders, but as they have not apparently placed this very important matter of recording the assignment before them, I herewith do so. It is obviously not a question of being "fairly protected." The Debenture-holders ought to insist upon their full rights. As I am writing, the heads of the proposed plan of re-organisation are published, but the English Debenture-holders should not assent to any such scheme without being in possession of the fullest information on the position of the Company, and that can only be obtained by independent investigation. In the meantime it is the duty of the Trustees for the Debenture-holders to see that the latter should be fully protected. That they are not so at present with Messrs. Jarvis and Conklin appointed as sole receivers, and the assignment unrecorded, is obvious, and the Debenture-holders will have themselves to blame if they do not now insist upon a different course being followed. By the way, a correspondent writes to me for information concerning the "Y" series of Debentures of which he is a holder, the New England Safe Deposit and Trust Company being the trustees. Perhaps one of my readers can enlighten him.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

J. A. L.—1. I should prefer the Chilian bonds, there being less risk, although there may also be less recovery than in Brazilians, should the civil war come to an end. 2. You should hold Erie Second Mortgage bonds. The interest will not be scaled down to less than 5 per cent., and the bonds will receive full foreclosure powers. 3. With the measures taken by the Mexican Government to maintain the national credit, the bonds named by you should also be safe. Nemo, Highbury.—I should say that the vigorous and universal protest against the scandalous treatment of the Monopoly bondholders by the Greek Government will have some effect. Military Chaplain.—New Zealand finances are greatly improved, and these securities may now safely be held. Nor need you for the present sell the other Australian stock. Archipelago.—You should hold your Peru Debentures. The selling has been overdone. They might be averaged.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

S. E. Co.—This concern has got well through recent troubles, but I do not care for this kind of investment, and think you would do well to change it for one not open to doubt. W. P. S.—Thanks. You may rely upon my following the Jarvis-Conklin matter carefully. Irish Reader.—You should have given orders to close the stock when it advanced. This you do not appear to have done. G. C. Y.—I have never advised the purchase of American Investment Deferred, but you should not sell now, as most Trust stocks are unduly depreciated, and a recovery is eventually on the cards. G. E. W.—I referred to the report on the disastrous New Oriental Bank liquidation last week under "Various Investments," and I am doing so again to-day. H. C., Boston.—Both Philip S. Hartley & Co. and Percy Barclay & Co. are syndicate touts. Have nothing to do with them, and read my remarks in last week's issue under "The Syndicate Touts Again." I cannot reply by letter. Nemo, Blackpool.—I give you Punch's advice to those about to marry—"Don't!" You will find it very difficult to make any money on the cover system with outside brokers. All the men mentioned by you are advertising outside brokers, some of them very shady. I do not know the solicitors. Inquirer, Naval and Military Club.—I should not advise you to deal with these people. Bon Mot.—1. No; I do not recommend transactions through Percy Barclay & Co. 2. Yes. 3. The system of the syndicate touts was fully commented on in last week's issue under "The Syndicate Touts Again." Sufferer.—I note your experience with the Provident Association of London, and shall have more to say about this concern shortly. Cromedge. Of the two I should prefer the "Guardian." Tyse.—I cannot possibly tell you if these German lottery intermediaries are reliable. Some are and some are not, and I do not recommend this kind of gambling, which is, moreover, illegal in this country.

Home Rails.

Pulteha.—It is not unlikely that the Sheffield stock in question will recover again somewhat, but the stocks referred to by you are undoubtedly more progressive. S. N.—Yes, Metropolitan District Railway are a good "lock up" for a substantial rise.

American and Foreign Rails.

Nassau.—I should hold Atlantic Firsts. In any reorganisation of the Erie these will have to be dealt with fairly, and the price should then recover. S. S. C.—The Brazilian Railway stocks, Nos. 1 and 2, have chiefly fallen of late through the civil war, and should therefore be held for a recovery. Argentine Great Western Debenture-stock will, of course, benefit by a settlement of the Railway guarantees. Hold these two. Tyke.—1. There is no reason to sell your Nitrate Rails now. They have paid you 20 per cent. ever since you bought them. 2. Both New Primrose and Nigel are good Gold Mines, temporarily neglected. One of these days they will advance sharply. Medicus.—1. No reason to sell these bonds now. I never liked the Canadian bonds, No. 2, but cannot advise you to sell now after the heavy collapse. Blackbird, Armagh.—The Brazilian Railway stocks, Nos. 1 and 2, are rather speculative, as a recovery must depend upon the end of the civil war. Carthage and Adirondeck Four per Cent. Railway Bonds guaranteed by the New York Central (3), at 101, are gilt-edged. You may safely buy No. 4, but No. 5 is more speculative, although progressive. The Brewery shares No. 6 are a fair industrial investment. Mero.—It is expected that No. 1 will at no distant period receive the full dividend again. No. 2 is rather speculative owing to the civil war in Brazil, but should do for a "lock up" for a small amount. 3. Grand Rapids and Indiana First Mortgage Seven per Cent. bonds are quoted 112-117, the Muskegon Division Five per Cent. bonds 90-95. Athenæum.—All the gilt-edged American Railroad bonds mentioned by me are easily saleable. This applies more especially to New York Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds. Bonds not quoted on the London Stock Exchange are, of course, more difficult to deal in, although they may be perfectly safe and have a market in New York. Alexis.—1. Yes, Peruvian Debentures might be averaged. No. 2 is a fair speculation. 3. Always take good profits when you can get them. 4. Erie Second Mortgage bonds should be held. 5. Atchison Guarantee Fund Notes are safe in any case. See remarks under "Atchison and Erie."

Mining Shares.

D. S.—Yes, Buffelsdoorn shares have a good future in view of the rapidly-increasing output. See remarks in last week's issue under "The Kaffir Circus." Caractacus.—I must leave you to make the discovery yourself. Cromer.—I think all the South African Gold Mining shares mentioned by you should be held. The decline is unjustified, and sooner or later the prices will right themselves again. D. C. P.—The shares have fallen in sympathy with the rest of the market, and should be held for a recovery. A. C. F.—From the official information, which I have published in the last two issues of Truth under "The Kaffir Circus," you will gather that the position of the Glencairn Mine is not so unsatisfactory as the "Bears" would like to make it out, and with some more patience you will see the shares rise again. Just now the Mining Market is so weak that all kinds of lies are finding ready credence. Bunker.—Same reply as above to "A. C. F." as to Glencairn. A stockbroker may only charge commission, not profit, and if he is a member of the Stock Exchange, the committee would interfere. Constancy.—You should hold Kimberley Roodepoort for a recovery. Paul Jones.—Watch the market carefully, and when South African Mines generally experience a strong recovery, which they will be sure to do sooner or later, take the opportunity to average. Monmouth.—All the South African Gold shares in question should be held for recovery. Pioneer.—Amongst the most promising coming Mines are South Simmer and Jack at about 20s, and Buffelsdoorn at 22s. 6d. W. B., Peckham.—The last news from Balaghat is not particularly encouraging. To the South the Coromandel Company's prospects are improving, but to the North the Nine Reefs workings are disappointing. It may be well to look on for awhile as regards Balaghat shares. 2. There is no option but to hold this stock. W. W. B.—I am surprised to hear that Newfoundland Colonisation and Mining shares have recently changed hands in Ireland at 2s. 3d. It is satisfactory to learn that the soil is considered "superior to any in Nova Scotia." Sergeant, Liverpool.—The only Great Laxey Mine known on the London Market is the Great Laxey Mining Company, Limited, which owns a silver lead mine in the Isle of Wight. These shares are quoted 2⅜-3¼. Keynote.—1. Yes, Nigels look a promising purchase. 2. If you hold Mosman's keep them for the present. They are fully worth the present figure of 4s. 6d. Monmouth.—A. Hold Glencairns; b and c should also be held for an improvement. I do not think much of d. Ajax.—The Forbes Reef Company was previously reconstructed in 1889, and owns a property of upwards of 50,000 acres in extent. The shares at present are unsaleable, but I believe it will pay holders to take their proportion of shares in the new Company. Loughtonian.—1. No, don't buy American Belle; buy Macate Gold instead. I see no temptation to buy Nos. 2 and 3, but No. 4 would be a fair "lock up." No. 5 are a fair venture for a small amount, now that the Company's affairs have been thrashed out thoroughly. Wentworth ordinary (6) are cheap. Leave Nos. 7 and 8 alone; buy Holcomb Valley instead, to which I have before referred. 9. Yes, you should claim the certificate. A Gambler.—The news from the Holcomb Valley property is very satisfactory, and an advance in the shares seems imminent. T. T.—Yes, Caratals should be held for a substantial advance. Southport.—Yes, you might average Holcomb Valley, as the news of crushings is favourable.

Industrial Companies.

H. C.—I have already expressed a strong view against the London Music-hall, Limited, in last week's issue under "Various Investments," and I agree with a good deal of what you say, although some of the expressions used by you would, if published, bring you in conflict with the law of libel. New Reader.—It is certainly difficult to form any conclusive opinions of such local undertakings. There is, moreover, no market for the shares. A. D. A.—I do not care for either of these stocks very much; but there is no reason to sell now that the price is down so much. A d.—Write to the Secretary for the information. It is not to be procured here, as it seems to be a kind of private Company.

Mixed Investments.

Chatham.—You want apparently gilt edged stocks, and might select either from the table of American Railroad Bonds, Class L, published in Truth, November 30, and yielding from 4 to 4½ per cent. per annum; Antofagasta Four per Cent. Debenture stock, at 96; or, if you require a home security, the new issue of Gordon Hotel Four per Cent. Perpetual Debenture stock, already at 3-4 premium, should suit you as a high class investment. The Indoor Investor.—1. This kind of financial Company has been very heavily hit, but I should say that it is advisable to hold now. You have no option but to hold the railway stock: there is a chance of a recovery, but you ought never to have invested so much in such a security. The shares you refer to are somewhat speculative; and, after your experience, you ought to put the further money you have to invest into gilt-edged stocks, being satisfied with from 4 to 4½ per cent. interest. See remarks under "The Demand for Gilt edged Stocks." Bee.—1. It is impossible to give an opinion of such an industrial concern without special information from investors, and the question is, if you can trust your informant. 2. Gordon Hotels are doing well, The Ordinary shares are a fair industrial investment, and the Debentures gilt-edged. 3. Investors who have bought Brighton "A" should hold them, prospects are brightening. Doubtful One.—1. In your position you should spread the investment of the £5,000 over gilt-edged stocks, and be satisfied with moderate interest. My lists of gilt-edged investments and of American Railroad bonds will assist suitable selection. Also see remarks under "The Demand for Gilt-Edged Stocks." 2. Yes. 3. Yes. 4. I do not like this bank. Withdraw the deposit if you can. Thanks for the extract concerning the Free Church meeting. Jeremiah.—No. 1 is a good American bond; No. 2 a fair Brewery investment. I do not like Australian Land Companies of the class of No. 3. Palla.—Hold Nos. 1 and 2 for an improvement. No option but to hold Nos. 3 and 4. Things are not so bad as represented. 5. If you mean the Teutonia Gold reconstructed in 1891, this mine is full of water and the shares are unsaleable. 6. Do you mean the Anglo-Argentine Bank? The Gympie Great Eastern (7) is now known as the Australasian. The quotation is 1s. 6d. Prospects disappointing. 8. For the investment of your £3,000—£4,000 see my remarks in to-day's letter under "The Demand for Gilt-edged Stocks." M. S. T.—Certainly hold Nos. 1, 2, and 3. Sell Nos. 4 and 5. I do not know anything of the Dairy Company (6). Ask the Secretary. You ought to have sold Salt Union Prefs. (7) long ago when I advised this. Hold Nos. 8 and 9. The Day Dawn Block and Wyndham (10) is not doing well, but if you sell, you will probably not get more than 4s. 6d. Richer stone may be met with at any moment, and at present price it seems a good risk to hold on awhile. The Amador (11) has been liquidated and is now known as the Jackson Goldfields. Sell when the market for the shares becomes active again. Peter.—A fair investment, but no catch.

Various Investments.

Silver has hardly moved from the price of 32d. during the week, and Rupee Paper is slightly firmer at 65⅝. There is very little change in other so-called silver securities, Mexican First Prefs. having reacted to 54½, after a temporary improvement. It is evident that it is not so easy to bring home responsibility to Directors even of concerns of the notorious Balfour group, as shown by the result of the actions of the Official Receiver brought against Directors of the Lands Allotment Company. In one of these the defendants were held not to be personally liable as, although they had acted ultra vires, there was no evidence of fraud, and in the other action two of the Directors were pronounced as not being responsible, because they had not been present at the meeting when a certain investment was decided upon. Clearly the law on the responsibility of Directors ought to be amended, if this decision is upheld. I have received a communication from Mr. R. Mansell-Jones in which he says that, as inventor and proprietor of the Tyre patents which the Acme Pneumatic Tyre and Brake Company, Limited, was formed to acquire, he had not obtained the stipulated consideration from the promoters, and that he had therefore rescinded the contract. I cannot trouble about the squabbles between vendors and promoters, but if any readers of Truth are shareholders in this concern (which I do not think is the case, as I have throughout warned them not to have anything to do with the various Tyre Companies) they had better look after their interests. The Eastern Empire Music Hall has, as I anticipated, announced a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum in respect of the last quarter's working, payable on January 1, so that purchasers buying this month will get the benefit of the distribution. It is stated that a sum equal to another 7 per cent. on the capital has been carried forward, which makes the shares look cheap at par. A correspondent writes to find fault with the capitalisation of Saville Brothers, Limited, the prospectus of which Company was issued last week, and objects also to the circumstance that the Trustees for the Debenture stock holders should be, in addition to Sir Wm. H. Humphery, Bart., Messrs. E. Savill and Philip Savill themselves. This objection is undoubtedly justified, as such Trustees should always be independent persons. Several communications have reached me concerning the ill-fated New Oriental Bank Corporation, all, of course, commenting in indignant terms on the monstrous state of things disclosed by the reports of the Committee just issued. I expressed my view of this shocking case of mismanagement and irregularity, if not worse, very freely last week, and I hope that responsibility will be fixed where this is possible. A stockbroker calls my attention to the doings of an individual who, after writing on crested notepaper from Reading and subsequently from a West-end Club, and telegraphing an order to sell £1,000 Egyptian Unified and to buy 200 Atchison shares, subsequently disappeared and could not be heard of either at Reading or at the Club. It is believed that this would-be victimiser of stockbrokers is a traveller trying to sell encyclopædias for a London firm. Perhaps the publication of these particulars will act as a warning to other stockbrokers.—Your affectionate Uncle, MOSES.

For Mutual Life Assurance. The Scottish Widows' Fund Society. Accumulated Funds £12,000,000. Special Notice. Assurances to participate in the next Division of Profits in respect of the year ending December 31, 1893, should be applied for now. Full particulars of this great Mutual Life Office may be obtained on application to London Office, 28, Cornhill, E.C.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY;

A CHRISTMAS CONFLAGRATION.

EVERY country district in England, even at the end of this nineteenth century, nurses its plentiful store of legends and superstitions; but I do not think there is any part where they linger quite so much as in our beautiful and romantic Western counties. There is not a village where you cannot, if you have a mind, pick up half-a-dozen wonderful stories relating to the neighbourhood; hardly a poor man above middle age who is not an interesting raconteur of such things, if you know how to draw him. I myself have always taken a pleasure in doing so when I have had the opportunity; and though, perhaps, not more than one in ten of these legends is worth retaining in one's memory, yet that tenth one is frequently so quaint, so fanciful, and even so dramatic, that it fully counterbalances the tedium of listening to the other nine superstitious commonplaces.

The story which I am now about to relate was picked up in Devonshire several years ago, and is certainly worth repeating on account of an extraordinary modern ending to a very old-standing tale. This ending I can vouch for; because I saw it with my own eyes. While as for the preliminary events, which are said to have occurred early in the last century, I can only assert that they are an article of faith in every poor family on that country side.

Several years ago there stood in the village of P—— a large stone mansion, built in the Jacobean style, which had long been tenantless, and was rapidly falling into decay and ruin. Its situation was delightful, on a rising slope, facing the south, and looking over a fair expanse of park and wood, with a silvery lake in the foreground, and a glimpse, through a break in the trees, of soft, blue distant hills. It was the property of an absentee landlord, who had a larger place in some other county, and who somehow could not find a tenant for this beautiful demesne; his agent said because the house was too old-fashioned and the climate too damp; the villagers (whose heads are full of nonsense), because it was haunted.

Ovoca.—A perfect Old Irish Whisky. Medically recommended. Absolutely pure, genuine. Thoroughly matured, palatable. Of all Wine Merchants. Wholesale only, A. Millar & Co., Dublin.

This latter idea was based on a legend connected with yonder large wood, in the distance, facing you, but slightly on your left as you stand upon the doorstep of P—— Manor. It is named Hawker's Wood, and comprises some seventy acres of excellent timber and brushwood. It is part of the P—— estate, and has been let for several years to a neighbouring landlord, who has the sporting rights over the manor. But the villagers one and all assert that, if people had their due, this Hawker's Wood would be common, for the benefit of the poor in the place. For they say (and nothing will get the idea out of their heads) that one Squire Plarsk, more than a hundred and fifty years ago, made over the said wood by deed, on his death-bed, to certain trustees for the use and benefit of the poorer inhabitants; and that his son Squire George — commonly styled "the wicked Squire" — destroyed the deed in question and appropriated the wood to himself.

This Squire George appears to have been not only dishonest and wicked, but to have been endued with a sort of devilish humour and sardonic sense of dramatic effect. For, instead of burning the deeds then and there, as a less artistic villain would have done, he kept them concealed for some months, until Christmas Day came round; and on that festive occasion, having followed the example of his ancestors from time immemorial and invited his tenantry to the roasting of an ox whole at a huge bonfire in the park, he secretly consigned the packet of suppressed deeds to the flames of the conflagration. The attorney who had drawn them up, and who was a villain second only to his employer, stood by with Squire George and watched the villagers unconsciously celebrating the destruction of their rights, as they danced and sang round the bonfire; and the two men exchanged many diabolical jests appropriate to the situation.

Some said that the knavish attorney had better reason to jest than had his employer; for—so these wiseacres asserted—he had over-reached the Squire and substituted forged documents for the real, intending to retain the latter as a means of levying blackmail in the future. However that may have been, they had never again been produced; and though some few villagers obstinately clung to the conviction that they were still existent, if one only knew where to find them, the large majority adhered to the ordinary legend, that they had actually perished in the flames.

The only punishment, apparently, that fell on the wicked Squire in this life was that of a childless marriage. For he died without leaving any legitimate issue, though more than one poor family in the neighbourhood boasted that the blood of the Plarsks flowed in their plebeian veins. But that he was suffering adequate penalties for his wickedness in the other world was clearly evinced, not merely by the plain pronouncement of Scripture on the fate of such characters, but by a more readily demonstrable proof of the tortures which his unquiet soul endured. This proof was, that every Christmas night, at twelve o'clock precisely, all the windows of P—— Manor lighted up with a sudden blaze, and against the shining background of flame was to be seen the dark form of Squire George in the act of burning the deeds; while a ring of swarthy figures—not innocent country folk now, but hell-born devils—danced round and round with shrieks of unholy merriment.

The old gamekeeper on the estate, an honest and trustworthy fellow, assured me solemnly that, on several occasions, while out night-watching, he had witnessed the scene which has just been described. I did not doubt his good faith in the least; but I had my own theory about the natural phenomena which had probably taken him in, and none the less easily, it might be, because he had been "keeping Christmas." For what more likely than that the flashing of the moon on the windows had dazzled the drowsy watcher's superstitious eyes? Or that the shadows of flitting owls—which infested the old place—had been mistaken by him for human figures; and their weird screeches for the devil's unholy merriment?

I was rash enough to hint this to him, as a possible explanation of what he had seen. But he naturally treated the idea with contemptuous scorn.

"Nay, nay, sir," he answered, with a shake of his hoary head. "If you'd jest seen it yourself you'd never talk such silliness as that! Besides, don't you think I've been out often enough at night to know what the moon shining on windows is like, and to be tol'bly well acquainted with the hoot of an owlet? No, no, Master Charles; you take me for a fool, I'm thinking."

"Not at all, Bracebagge," I said, apologetically. "I know you to be very far from that. But I confess I should like to see this wonderful spectacle with my own eyes."

"Would you really, now?" he inquired, fixing his eyes upon me.

"I should, indeed," I repeated, emphatically.

"Well," he said, slowly, "if that's really your mind, I don't know why you shouldn't. Christmas Day will be here in less than a week, and, should you be agreeable, I'd take you out and show you the sight from the same point where I've seed it from myself three times. Then you'd be sure there's no mistake."

"Done!" cried I. "I'm your man, Bracebagge." And then I added, as I thought I detected a curious look in his eye, "All fair and square, of course? You won't play a trick upon me, by sending some of your friends into the Manor House with lights or anything of that sort?"

He smiled, rather scornfully.

"Practical jokes ain't my way," he answered. "Least of all would I jest wi' such a fearsome subject as the flames of eternal torment. You may trust me, Master Charles. I give you my promise."

This quite satisfied me, for I knew my old friend to be probity itself. I, therefore, arranged with him definitely, before I left his cottage that evening, to make our projected little excursion on the night of Christmas Day. As I walked home after doing so, I reflected to myself that it was a foolish and somewhat fatuous undertaking; for, of course, the apparition of Squire George and his attendant evil sprites, against a background of supernatural fire, was sheer nonsense—utter impossibility. At the same time, I must confess that when the appointed day and hour arrived, I did feel just a little bit excited, and not quite as calm or confident as sober reason would have had me be.

I called for old Bracebagge at his cottage, and we walked together to our intended point of view, a grassy knoll surmounted by a clump of beeches, exactly facing the manor house, and about three hundred yards away. Here there was nothing to intercept our line of sight, not even a tree; so we seated ourselves upon the waterproof rug which I had brought out with me, lit our pipes, and waited, for it still wanted nearly half-an-hour of midnight.

It was rather a windy night, and the whistling of the wind in the woods at our back caused a decidedly eerie sound. My companion, also—in order, perhaps, to work up my mind to a more receptive pitch—beguiled the interval by relating all the most gruesome and thrilling supernatural legends that he could produce from the capacious store-room of his memory. And I won't deny that I began to feel a trifle creepy. I tried to shake the sensation off, but without effect, and at last I became quite ridiculously nervous.

Before he had finished his last yarn, over which he was awfully and solemnly deliberate, the church clock struck twelve, its clanging tones being borne to us with an almost startling distinctness on the breath of the rising gale.

"Now," I interrupted him, laying my hand upon his arm, and giving vent to a very forced laugh, "now, I suppose, we may expect the Squire and his evil spirits—eh?"

Fur-lined Overcoats, Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

"They'll not be long," he answered, solemnly. "And when they come, you'll not laugh no more."

Five—ten—fifteen minutes went by. The old Manor House stood there, sombre and dark before us, a black obstructing mass against the starlit sky. Not a sign of light or flame was to be seen. The uniform blackness of the gloomy mansion was unbroken from end to end . . . . Of course, I might have known—I did know—that this would be the case. I never expected anything else. For all those nonsensical tales about Squire George's Ghost, and—ha! Old Bracebagge gripped my wrist, and, pointing to the house, said in an impressive whisper:—

"Look, Master Charles! Look!"

With a sudden, thrilling sensation, which I cannot attempt to describe, I saw a strange, weird light flash brightly in the great window of the central hall. I rubbed my eyes and fixed them intently on the spectacle, to assure myself that it was not some trick of my imagination. The light rapidly increased; in a minute or two I could see flames leaping in the hall, showing up its interior with vivid distinctness. There loomed the dark, oak staircase, in the very middle, it seemed, of the blaze; there, the mammoth statue of the original Squire Plarsk in a niche on the opposite wall; there, the ponderous chandelier suspended from a massive beam in the ceiling.

We watched this wonderful sight, spellbound. The blaze spread with extraordinary quickness to the rooms on either side of the hall, and by-and-by they were flashing in the windows on the first floor. My companion gripped my arm again, and this time I could not restrain a shudder. For in the room above the doorway—the room which was always pointed out as Squire George's bedchamber—dark figures were visible, hurrying to and fro, and giving utterance to the most blood-curdling shrieks that ever smote on mortal ear.

"That be no owlet's screeching, be it?" whispered old Bracebagge to me, with a touch of triumph in his tone.

I shook my head. I could not speak. My whole attention was riveted on the awe-inspiring sight. Lurid smoke was now rolling up in dense columns to the sky; the roaring and crackling of the flames resounded clearly; and yes! there was the crash-crash-crash of glass, as the fire burst through the huge panes of the windows. Then the shrieking of the demons took a definite form—an articulate sound. And "Help!" "Help!" "Help!" was dinned into my ears in tones of agonised terror.

With a sudden revulsion of feeling, an intense conviction, born in a moment, that I was witnessing no supernatural flames, I sprang to my feet.

"See! see!" I cried. "The manor is really on fire; and there are men within being burnt to death. We must try to save them."

Old Bracebagge endeavoured to restrain me. He evidently thought that I was mad to entertain such an idea. But I shook myself free from his detaining hand, and started to run across the intervening stretch of meadow. As I neared the manor and felt the warm breath of the flames on my cheek, I saw one of the shrieking figures leap from the upstairs window and fall with a thud to the earth. Then, except for the roaring of the fire, silence!

I rushed in, scarcely able to bear the scorching heat and nearly blinded by the smoke, to the place where I saw him fall. A man's helpless figure lay huddled on the doorstep. Half dragging, half carrying, I staggered with this burden to a safe distance from the fire and laid it down upon the lawn, just as old Bracebagge came up.

"By the powers," he exclaimed, as he bent down and examined the prostrate man's face "if it bean't poor Tummas Node!"

* * * * *

The man Node, although severely scorched by the fire and badly damaged by his leap from the window, ultimately recovered. And it was from his lips that we learned the explanation of the above startling episode.

It appeared that he was one of the small knot of villagers upon whom the alternative form of the legend—viz., that the deeds were still existent—had taken a strong hold. And he had got it into his head, somehow or other, that they were lying concealed in the manor house, and that the aim and object of Squire George's annual apparition on Christmas night was to point out to the villagers where they lay hidden; for that, until they were unearthed and justice done, his troubled spirit would never be allowed to rest.

He had brooded over this for some months, and had half decided to put his belief to the test by secreting himself in the manor on the night of the next Christmas. It is probable, however, that he would not have found courage for this—to him—perilous venture, had it not been for the following circumstances.

He himself and a companion still more wild, by name Jem Mace, had been caught, for the third time, asserting their rights to Hawker's Wood by appropriating certain pheasants from that covert. For this offence they were sent to hard labour for fourteen days, and their term expired about a week before Christmas. Smarting freshly from the sting of their wrongs, they vowed most solemnly that, if only to spite their persecutor, they would dare the desperate deed and conceal themselves in P—— Manor on the approaching Christmas night.

They had both been on the drink since their incarceration, and thus were more than usually reckless. Moreover, to fortify themselves yet further, they had taken a bottle of spirits with them on their momentous expedition. Not finding the Squire and his attendant devils turn up as soon as expected, they organised a search on their own account, and actually happened upon a hollow panel near the head of the stairs, close to the place where the deeds were supposed by some to be concealed in an iron-clamped oak chest, minutely described by the legend-mongers.

They forced the panel with their tools, and—much to their surprise, Node confessed—did unearth an oak chest nearly corresponding to that of the story. And what is more, on prising it open, they found it full of legal documents of various kinds—one packet of which, after careful examination, Node's companion confidently declared to be the deeds for which they were searching. They left the other papers littered about the stairs, and taking the precious packet into the nearest room, sat down there to drink to their marvellous discovery.

What happened exactly after that Node could not coherently explain; he was too drunk to have grasped anything. He supposes, however, that sparks from their pipes must have fallen on some of the papers, and so started the fire. At any rate, when they realised their danger and tried to escape, they found the staircase in flames. . . . . Node escaped, as I have described. Poor Mace, who seems to have been more hopelessly intoxicated, was left lying senseless on the floor, and perished in the flames. And it goes without saying that all the papers were destroyed.

Sceptical people threw doubt on Node's story. And I myself, as far as I could gather, should suppose that Jem Mace had scarcely been in the state to pronounce accurately on the contents of a legal document; especially as, by the older custom, it would have been engrossed in Gothic characters. This, however, has to be admitted—that among the débris on the stone floor of the hall a number of iron clamps and a very old-fashioned padlock, such as was much used in those days for strong boxes, were actually found.

There is one point to record more peculiar still. When old Bracebagge learned that it was Jem Mace who had met with such an awful end, he said to me: "You can't deny that the Almighty's finger is in that, anyways, Master Charles!"

"What do you mean?" I asked him.

"Don't you know?" he explained. "Squire George had never no child by his wedded wife. But he got my

CORNS.—Wasmuth's Corn-Rings (in the watch) cure corns painlessly in two or three days. 1s. 1½d., of all Chemists, or post free 1s. 3d., of WARRICK BROS., Old Swan-lane, London, E.C.

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one-half West-end price.—PHILLIPS & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets re-modelled and re-dyed to latest fashion. Perfect fit guaranteed. Caution, the only address, other people are trading on our name.

lady's maid into trouble; and what came of it was—Jem Mace's grandfather!"

Further investigation satisfied me that this was quite correct.

MUSIC.

THE DEPARTING SEASON.

ALTHOUGH Academy performances are not usually very exhilarating functions, yet they are always welcome to at least one small section of the musical community, for they mark the close of the season. This year the honours have fallen to the Royal College and the Guildhall School. The Royal Academy people do not appear to have bestirred themselves very much, for they do not give any operatic performance this winter at all, and their concert programme, apart from a couple of short pieces by students, was chiefly made up of pianoforte concertos, in one of which Miss Sybil Palliser, a promising young daughter of the late Sir William Palliser, was announced. The Royal College Directors, on the other hand, have given a creditable representation of Schumann's only opera, "Genoveva," and also announce an orchestral concert, while the Guildhall students are about to represent "Philémon et Baucis" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," and last week they gave the first hearing within living memory to Handel's "Messiah" in its entirety. Sir J. Barnby, who on the whole secured an excellent performance, was apparently playing against time, and the rapid pace at which he started some of the numbers seemed to indicate his fears lest the winning post should not be passed before eleven o'clock, the hour at which he had mentally undertaken to send the young people home to their beds. It is a remarkable fact that out of the nine ladies independently chosen as the best in the school to undertake the chief female parts in the "Messiah," five were pupils of Mr. Hermann Klein, while two of the others merely took part in the duet, "O Death, where is thy Sting?" which, so far as this deponent goeth, may now safely be relegated to the oblivion to which Sir Michael Costa assigned it. Indeed, the experiment of giving the "Messiah" in its entirety once tried need not be repeated, except, perhaps, at the Handel Festival, where people want a good deal for their money. Even at the record pace occasionally adopted by the conductor few of us would care to do another three and a-half hours of this music.

The departing season has been notable for the enormous amount of money spent upon music during the autumn. It is curious that a dull season should be the best of all for concerts, but the fact is indisputable. Of course, it is easy to explain the thing away. During the "mourning" seasons for the Duke of Albany and the Duke of Clarence it was very readily, and perhaps very truly, said that music was benefited at the expense of the theatres. But so far as the recent autumn is concerned there has been dulness everywhere, save at concerts. No doubt the good time which music has enjoyed has to a certain extent been attributable to the absence of competition. As this year there is no Signor Lago in the field, Sir A. Harris has not attempted opera at all. The crowd of impecunious and other Continental pianists and performers who annually invade this capital have, moreover, this winter been discouraged by the concert agents, so that the serial concerts have had a practical monopoly. The London Symphony, Albert Hall, Crystal Palace, and others have, consequently, enjoyed piping times, while the Popular Concerts, although, as usual, the subscribers have displayed their usual lack of interest in the novelties and the new artists, for which they are perpetually clamouring, have had some fine houses, the largest, of course, on the Paderewski night.

News came from Berlin on Monday that Dr. von Bülow had suffered a relapse, and that his case was considered almost hopeless. Many, no doubt, have felt the sharpness of the doctor's caustic tongue, but he has for nearly a quarter of a century been one of the foremost personages of musical Germany, and every one will hope that the alarmist reports as to his state of health will prove to be exaggerative.

The Philharmonic Society, despite the fact that their dates had already been fixed elsewhere, have resolved, during the forthcoming season, to give their concerts at the new Queen's Hall, whither also the Bach Choir have removed, and where Mr. Boosey, a week or two hence, proposes to try a ballad concert. That the Philharmonic, the oldest and most conservative of our musical institutions, should thus depart from St. James's Hall, is a matter which will, I fancy, not escape the notice of the directors of the Piccadilly building. It is surely within the wisdom of British architecture to ventilate the old building without in the winter causing the winds of heaven to whistle across the hall, and in the summer without extracting the needful fresh air from the room. The chief trouble, as the neophyte almost might perceive, lies with the never-used entrance on the left, or Regent-street side, of the orchestra. This place ought to be bricked-up; but, instead, a curtain is hung across the door, and the draft is such that whenever any of the end doors are opened people who have paid half-a-guinea for their seats are compelled to muffle themselves up in furs or overcoats. When St. James's Hall enjoyed a monopoly of fashionable concert-going this was all very well, but now that the warmed corridors and luxurious fauteuils of the Queen's Hall have given people an idea of what comfort really means, to suppose that delicate ladies will be willing to clothe themselves as for a sleigh drive in order to listen to classical music is absurd. Many of us have a sort of home affection for St. James's Hall, hallowed as the building is by thirty years' recollections of the best music heard within its walls. We may, therefore, fairly again ask whether it be really quite beyond the resources of British genius to prevent the winter draughts and summer stuffiness, the dinner smells, and the sounds of quadrille bands and Christy Minstrels heard in the midst of the most delicate violin solos.

The recent Bristol Festival has resulted in so serious a deficit that it has been found necessary to call up 45 per cent. of the guarantee. Meanwhile, at the meeting last Thursday the situation was boldly faced, and the Committee were requested to bring up speedily a scheme by which the affair might become self supporting. This it certainly never can be while the present absurd plan is continued of importing a band from Manchester for a few days, and taking no successful steps to introduce novelties. After the last Festival an official notification was issued to the effect that the negotiations for novelties had proved abortive, as in fact they always will be until a resident band is retained to adequately rehearse British music. Meanwhile, Bristol, one of the greatest cities in England for choirs, already has a local orchestra, which the adherents of the Manchester band will not support, while the local patriots who pay for Riseley's concerts avoid the festival. It ought certainly not to be difficult to reconcile the two conflicting elements. As to the alleged statement of the chairman that the Bristol people "obtained at an average of 8s. 7d. a concert which cost 13s. 2d. to provide," if the figures be correctly quoted, the reason of the deficit is obvious. The expenses are far too great. At the Albert Hall, where the best choral concerts in the world are given, the average is less than 4s., and at the Crystal Palace little more than 2s. a head. To suppose that any concerts can possibly pay at a cost of 13s. 2d. a head is supremely ridiculous.

The brains of Dr. Boïto and Signor Sonzogno—and,

"Truth" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is, 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the Manager, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

erhaps, what is more to the purpose when such hopeless mateurs with firearms as these two excellent musicians re considered, the brains of their seconds are safe on heir heads, and Europe has been spared the spectacle of wo respected men of middle age popping at one another n account of a mere criticism upon an opera about hich probably not one Italian in a hundred cares a straw. Dueling, as exercised in bonne vieille days, is always more aughter provoking than dangerous; but when two grey-aired and respectable men of music propose to indulge in hese escapades, it is high time that the weapons should e limited to the wooden swords of the jesters of old, or he air bladders of the clowns of a modern circus. The redit of stopping this nonsense is due to Signor Giulio icordi, the music publisher, and the only man who, in absurd a business, seems to have kept his level head.

Sir Arthur Sullivan is back again from Coburg, but will eturn to Berlin next month for the final rehearsals of Ivanhoe."

That rising young musician Mr. Edward German con-ucted the final Crystal Palace concert on Saturday, when is own Symphony, produced at the last Norwich Festival, as repeated, the slow movement and scherzo again roving the favourites. The concerts are now suspended ll February 17, by which time the pantomime will be ver and Mr. Manns will be back from Scotland. The ief novelty of the new season will be Dr. Dvorák's Fifth ymphony, which, despite its author's recent manifestoes, ill not, I learn, be based on American negro melodies.

An amusing story is told about Herr Brückner, one f whose symphonies Dr. Richter has introduced here, hile another, recently given at Vienna and lasting a hole evening, is happily yet unknown in this capital. err Brückner, it is said, had appeared before the ustrian Emperor, who, in accordance with custom, ade him make any request he might choose. Herr rückner, it is alleged, in reply, asked Francis Joseph order Professor Hanslick, musical critic of the Neue Freie Press, to write a little more favourably of the rückner compositions. What the Emperor thought, and so what Dr. Hanslick would have replied had the order een given, can only be conjectured.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—That "History repeats itself," which is supposed to be a French maxim, and which certainly is to be found in Montaigne, robably forced itself as a reflection upon the earliest istorians, and is anyway expressed in these very words by hucydides. It is necessarily true of any people whose haracter and environment are both fixed. As nothing ould be more fixed than the character and environment of he Irish, nothing can be more dismally monotonous than heir history, which goes round and round, like the hildren of Israel in the wilderness, always moving, but ever advancing, in a Dantesque "Inferno" circle. (By he way, I might say in passing that a cheap edition, s. 6d., of Carey's translation of the "Purgatory and aradise" (1), with Doré's illustrations, might commend self to you as an appropriate Christmas present.) But o return to Ireland: I could not help thinking, as I read Ir. Barry O'Brien's magnificent edition of "Theobald Wolfe Tone's Autobiography" (2), how fate has fought always against all external attempts to wrench that country out of this pit of wretchedness; while all internal attempts thereat in every generation for seven centuries have been foiled by a single masterly policy, "Divide et impera." But is it masterly? Surely Goethe is right when he says it is the policy of a hand to mouth politician rather than of a far seeing and far reaching statesman.

> "Divide and rule!" the politician cries:
> "Unite and lead!" is the watchword of the wise.

To me the diplomacy by which Wolfe Tone united and led the Catholic and the Presbyterian is even more striking than the diplomacy by which he obtained from France those fleets and armies, while both contute the Duke of Argyll's really grotesque estimate of this "low adventurer." The Duke of Wellington, though as prejudiced politically against Wolfe Tone as the Duke of Argyll himself, formed a very different estimate of the man:—

> "Wolfe Tone," he says, "was a most extraordinary man, and his history is the most curious history of those times. With a hundred guineas in his pocket, unknown and unrecommended, he went to Paris in order to overturn the British Government in Ireland. He asked for a large force, Lord Edward Fitzgerald for a small one. They listened to Tone."

Mr. Goldwin Smith, again, though no less prejudiced, is much more competent to speak to Tone's character and career than the Duke of Argyll, and he speaks to them thus:—

> Though Wolfe Tone's name is little known among Englishmen, he, brave, adventurous, sanguine, fertile in resource, buoyant under misfortune, was near being as fatal an enemy to England as Hannibal was to Rome.

Englishmen have now an opportunity of judging between these conflicting witnesses and of reading "the most curious history of those times" in as ably edited and as finely got up an edition of the "Autobiography" as the heart of man could wish for. Another autobiographical work that I am sure would interest you is "Essays, Speeches, Memoirs, and Correspondence of Moltke" (3). It is most astonishing, and to men of middle age encouraging, to think that if Moltke had died at sixty-seven he would have been known chiefly or only as a fifth-rate author! And the fifth-rate author too may derive encouragement from finding that Moltke got sixty years ago from his German publisher precisely the same letter that every English publisher to-day writes to every English author:—

> "All the sorrows of a young author who is spoiling for a publisher have visited me," writes young Moltke. "Thoroughly impressed by the value of our work, we are astonished to hear the booksellers talk of unsuccessful ventures, of the depressed condition of the book trade to which we have just purposed to add a new impetus by our manuscript."

These volumes, I ought to say, contradict the Field-Marshal's own modest estimate of the interest of his early years.

> "Fate willed," he writes to a would-be biographer, "that I was not to be placed in such circumstances as to excite universal interest till I was advanced in age. Nobody would be interested in my earlier years."

Of another statement in the same letter:—

> "The character of a man is a riddle difficult to solve, even for his relations, how much more so for strangers,"

I am reminded in reading an extremely interesting book, "Voltaire's Visit to England, 1726-1729" (4). Sam Johnson, who was what he loved, "a good hater," and who had a truly Christian hatred of Voltaire, states positively:—

> Pope discovered by a trick that Voltaire was a spy for the Court, and never considered him a man worthy of confidence.

His authority was probably Ruffhead, and Ruffhead's authority was probably Warburton; yet the scandal is

(1) "The Vision of Purgatory and Paradise." By Dante Alighieri. Translated by the Rev. Henry Francis Carey, M.A., and Illustrated by Sixty Designs by Gustave Doré. (Popular edition.) (London: Cassell & Co.)
(2) "The Autobiography of Theobald Wolfe Tone." 1763-1793. Edited, with an Introduction, by R. Barry O'Brien. Two vols. (London: T. Fisher Unwin.)
(3) "Essays, Speeches, and Memoirs of Field-Marshal Count Helmuth von Moltke." The Essays Translated by Charles Flint McClumpha, Ph.D.; the Speeches by Major C. Barter, D.A.A.G.; and the Memoirs by Mary Herms. Two vols. (London: James R. Osgood, McIlvaine, & Co.)
(4) "Voltaire's Visit to England." 1726-1729. By Archibald Ballantyne. London: Smith, Elder, & Co.).
(5) "A Song for the Season" and other Poems. By Geoffrey Lane. (London: Swan Sonnenschein & Co.)
(6) "Escarlamonde" and other Poems. By Douglas Ainslie. (London: George Bell & Sons.)

SUCCESSFUL BECAUSE OF SUPERIOR MERIT.—Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer has immense sales everywhere. It never fails to restore grey hair to its natural colour and beauty.

false on the face of it. Is it credible, or even conceivable, that so malign a man as Pope, with a pen like a stiletto, should have written always so highly of Voltaire if he had believed the Frenchman's friendship to have been espionage? Apropos of Pope and Voltaire, it is odd that Mr. Ballantyne does not himself see the bearing and the humour of Bolingbroke's comparative criticism of the French and English poets. "They are," said Bolingbroke, "the two finest geniuses in Europe; but there is much more philosophy in the head of the English poet than in Voltaire." The philosophy is, of course, to be found in the "Essay on Man," and the whole substance of the Essay was supplied to Pope by Bolingbroke. Hence what Bolingbroke pronounced so fine a picture was but the reflection of his own face in a glass. Mr. Churton Collins does not evince a similar complacency upon finding himself, as he supposes, Poped and pumped by Mr. Ballantyne. "My thunder by G——!" he shouts in the "Athenæum." I must say, however, that Mr. Ballantyne seems to have disposed of the charge that he simply expanded in his "Voltaire's Visit to England," Mr. Collins's "Voltaire in England," without acknowledgment or substantial enhancement. Finally, let me recommend to you an exceedingly smart, but cynical, volume of verse, "A Song for the Season" (), which holds the mirror up to society and certainly "shows Scorn her own image." "Escarlamonde" (), too, will, I think, please you by, perhaps, its very ambition, for ambition is a virtue in a young poet. Perhaps time may prove him what he claims to be, the avatar of Tibullus.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND B. O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—We have done so much and seen so much since last I wrote that I have plenty to tell you in this letter. On Monday afternoon we attended the entertainment provided at the Chelsea Town-hall by Mr. Harrison Watson for the charity which provides some poor East-end children with breakfasts and dinners in the winter. The programme, very prettily got up in pale pink and blue, set forth the names of no less than thirty-one different artists, who nearly all fulfilled their promise of giving their services for the charity. The hall itself was filled with little round tables, quite in the style of a real café chantant, so that the audience could sit comfortably and have tea or coffee while they were amused by the shifting scene upon the stage, which, by the way, was prettily decorated with palms and shaded lamps, a large centre piece being in preparation for the dance which is to take place on January 8 for the same charity. Miss Cissy Loftus delighted us with her clever imitations of some well-known artists, and we were glad to hear the Fisher-Parkoa duettists, of whom we had heard so much, and Mr. Gus Elen, whose coster songs have made such an impression. Miss Kate James did her clever doll dance. Two little girls, the sisters Germaine, danced very gracefully in Japanese costume, and sang in sweet childish voices some little ditty which they timed with their fans. They also executed later in the programme a very pretty skirt dance, which brought down the house. Miss Nancy McIntosh, Miss Edith Chester, and Miss Letty Lind were unable to be present, but we had some charming singing by Mr. Sydney Barraclough, Madame Hope Glenn, Miss Agnes Janson, and Mr. Hirwen Jones. Punch and Judy was provided for the youngsters. The arrangements were excellent. Nice girls in dark skirts, long white aprons, and pink or blue blouses of striped silk crépon, with Alsatian bows to match in the hair, waited on the visitors, and found some difficulty in threading their way with cups and saucers among the crowd that surged round the platform. Mrs. Vincent Glass's new "Olde Tyme Dance," specially arranged for this occasion, was extremely pretty, the girls dancing round a tree trunk covered with ivy and crowned with shaded roses, which was placed in the centre of the stage. This and her well-known Royal minuet, danced in powder costume by her pupils, and played upon by the lime-light in all sorts of beautiful colours, were thoroughly appreciated by a very smart audience. Mr. Luther Munday was stage manager, the excellence of the arrangements including even those for reaching one's carriage or obtaining a cab with ease.

On Thursday evening we went to the Prince's Cinderella, and found floor and band all that could be desired. The attendance was not large, numbers of people who had taken tickets being unable to be present because of the prevalence of influenza. This disagreeable ailment was the principal topic of conversation, rivalling even the weather in universality. The absentees, however, left all the more room for dancing, and I have never seen the Barn dance to better advantage on this account. Many of the dresses were very fresh and pretty. One particularly was much admired, being a poetic mingling of white satin, the same material in pale yellow, green crêpe, and ruches of violets, these forming a border to the vandykes in which the crêpe overskirt ended over the yellow satin. A little bunch of violets was tucked into the beautiful hair of the wearer, who was one of the best dancers in the room. A tall, fair woman looked brilliant in petunia velvet and satin. Blondes should be grateful to all such tints as these, so well do they set forth soft flesh tints of pink and cream. Pale brocade, with jewel-like gleams of blue, pearl, and opal, the seams sewn with sequins, was worn by a lady with one of those interesting faces that one never tires of looking at. Soft laces fell from the short sleeves over her arms, and drooped from the shoulders over the bodice. We liked a dress, very plainly made, of white satin hemmed with beaver and edged with the fur round shoulders and seams. A tall girl, with a good figure, who danced well, wore pink tulle and brown velvet—a very good combination. The orchestra looked very picturesque with abundant green leafage and tall lamps shaded with gold and crimson, the red coats of the "Bijou" musicians adding a fine note of colour to the scene. Upstairs among the pictures was the buffet, tended by the white-clad maidens of the Oriental Association, and decorated with large, lovely pale mauve and yellow chrysanthemums.

The next day we went with Mrs. Fourstars to Parkins & Gotto's to choose toys for the children. They have such lovely ones there—really good, you know—and one can obtain duplicates of old favourites, which is always an advantage, as children get so attached to their toys, and are so conservative about them, in one sense of the word. If an accident happens to a cherished woolly dog that walks and barks, or to a pair of kittens that mew and play the violin, there is wailing and sorrow in some nurseries I know, only to be mitigated by the production of a fac-simile. One of the new toys we saw was Robinson Crusoe, a fur-clad figure, with a pair of hatchets in his belt, his umbrella in one hand, and a spear for fishing in the other. Crusoe turns his head, whirls his umbrella, and digs imaginary fish with his spear. The Jumping kangaroo is a mechanical toy, which exactly imitates the rather ungainly motions of the zoological emblem of Australia. The animal is very well modelled and covered with skin of the natural grey tint. The Guards' Band is a delightful toy. The musicians, in correct uniform, with their music-stands, are grouped round a bank, on which stands the conductor, under a tree. They play "God Save the Queen," and a bit from "Cavalleria." The Royal Circus will be a source of endless amusement to the fortunate children who are given it. It has a revolving platform which, when set in motion, works the music supposed to be supplied by a miniature orchestra on an elevated plateau. There are horses in every attitude of the manège, clowns, riding-masters, grooms and equestrians, flags, trapeze, &c., all of which can be arranged and re-arranged by the small proprietors, who can thus devise and carry out a quite extensive programme. The new racing game "Ascot" appeals as much to the adult as the child. It is a long green baize racecourse, perfectly straight, and the horses, whether moved by clockwork or by an ingenious arrangement of winding thread, never come in twice in exactly the same order, and during the race itself precede each other or fall behind with all the fluctuating uncertainty of a real race. The Ostrich Farm is a most interesting toy, and the Tiger and Elephant Hunts are equally so. The Eastern Showman, with his dancing bear, monkey grinding the organ, and another monkey riding the camel, is very clever. We lingered, fascinated, over the dolls' houses, a very large one, completely furnished and fitted with electric bells, subjugating us completely. On the dinner table, fully laid, were decanters and glasses full of sherry, which can never be emptied. Near the houses we saw a walking doll, which, with a little assistance from its small human mother, moves its feet in the slow, cautious way in which some babies learn to walk. This doll also moves its head while walking. Very clever, indeed, is the Sleepy Banjoist, a beautifully-dressed boy player with grotesquely blackened face. When wound up he begins to play, but gradually drops off to sleep, his eyes closing and his fingers dropping away from the keys. The call-boy's bell is heard, when the banjoist half wakes, but shuts his eyes again. Another bell rouses him a little more, but his eyes close, and he seems so overcome with sleep that it is quite infectious. At the third sound of the bell, he wakes up and begins to play again. Pierrot and Pierrette are a pair of the same order, the movements being very good. They play the violin to each other, the heads moving, Pierrette kissing a white-gloved hand and dangling a daintily-shod little foot. A French chef cutting a water-melon is also amusingly realistic.

Redfern's Sale. Preparatory to taking possession of their new Premises, the Messrs. Redfern will sell, regardless of cost, all their original models of Gowns, Coats, Mantles, Wraps, and Millinery, designed and produced by them during this season. Commencing Monday, January 1st, and continuing for two weeks. —27, New Bond-street, London, W.

Sanitary Surveys.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

On Thursday afternoon we went to see the Earl of Essex married to the beautiful Miss Grant, at St. Margaret's, Westminster. The bride looked very pretty, but her following of small children wore rather theatrical costumes. There was a very smart congregation, the American colony being well in evidence. The long pelisse reigned supreme among the guests, the one Duchess present (indigenous to American soil) wearing one in black moiré, trimmed with sable. Another well-known Transatlantic belle had her pelisse in grey-blue velvet and sable. Two beautiful Englishwomen wore respectively a bright green watered velvet pelisse and one in rhododendron pink velvet. You may imagine from this short sketch what a brilliantly garbed congregation it was. Most of the hats were large and of the "picture" order. One of the exceptions was a bonnet of green velvet and violets, worn with a grey velvet costume, sable-trimmed, by an American lady. Velvet was worn by the mile at that wedding, and fur by the furlong. As to the diamonds—well, you must just in your own imagination pin them into every pair of bonnet-strings, fasten the feathers into hats with them, clasp laces and furs on every neck with them, and when you have thought of every conceivable position for them, add a supplementary scatter of the gems, not forgetting to decorate one of the guests with a long chain of them, probably intended to support a muff, though none was worn.

I went with a little, little pocket-handkerchief to the Comedy Theatre the other evening, not knowing that I should want an ample supply of cambric, though we had been told that Miss Winifred Emery makes her audience weep, and sheds real tears herself every night in "Sowing the Wind." I am one of the comfortably hard-hearted people who can sit through the ordinary tragedy without the slightest emotional disturbance, but on this occasion I discovered that lace is a very disagreeable material for drying one's tears upon. We were favoured, by the way, with a sight of the book of words for the matinées of "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," with illustrations by Hugh Thomson. The pictures are charming, even the rats being invested with an individuality of their own, while the children are so quaint, so chubby, so altogether delicious, that no "grown up" can look at them without immediately wearing a smile or executing a laugh.

I happened to see a beautiful gown at Mrs. Blackborne's the other day that had just been finished for Baroness Burdett-Coutts. The material was a very handsome brocade, the ground a pale pink, subdued still further by a design in curved lines in pure, silvery white. A small carnation in two shades of red, the stem and leaves in green, was brocaded upon this ground. The skirt was very full, the side seams opening over fluted satin of the deep carnation pink, and caught with cut crystal beads. A ruche of the satin showed a little at the edge of the dress, and gave a very pretty effect. The bodice of the brocade, draped across, had a shaped berthe of the deep satin edged with crystals, and veiled with very fine old Mechlin lace, which looked its loveliest upon the satin.

Clare sends me the following from Dublin:—

DEAREST MADGE,—Here we are face to face with another Christmas, and what a short time it seems since the last! We only really arrive at a just appreciation of the swiftness of the flight of time when somewhat advanced towards the middle distance in the valley of years. Time begins to pass so quickly then, compared to its happy, leisurely way of progressing in the days of childhood and early youth. One wonders if old age is all a whirl? Though the old look so sedate and slow, are the years carrying them along as on the wings of the wind?

There is no doubt that Father Christmas is not up to date with his ideas of jollity and frolicsomeness, his wreathed brows and wassail bowl, and his general air of rejoicing. He surely proclaims life to be worth living, and not that only, but worth enjoying also. He defies the most aggressive pessimism, and boldly confronting a correct gloom and modish despair, comes up in his own time and place, year after year, smiling and unconquerable. The confidence of a good backing inspires him, than which none can be greater. Even at the end of the doubting, desponding, cynically-disposed nineteenth century, can it be doubted that he would be returned by an overwhelming majority were he to stand election for his place. So long as there are children Father Christmas, with all his works and pomps, has us securely in his grip. Let us writhe as we may under his institutions, including plum-pudding and mince-pies, we must, more than metaphorically, swallow them. While we grin and bear it, however, the children laugh, and if nothing else be wholesome at Christmas their laughter is.

Of course you are shopping hard still, hardest of all during this week, probably. For is it not the most striking peculiarity of Christmas shopping, that no matter how soon one begins it there is always the same overwhelming amount to be done at the end? I often wonder if it would answer just as well to begin at the end. Not to have time for weighing and balancing, above all for doubt. It is difficult enough, as a general rule, to know what one wants one's self, but when, as at Christmas time, one has to try and think of what everyone else wants is it not too dreadful? One undertakes, as it were, a kind of variety entertainment in putting one's self in everybody else's place, and then working out the situation. And how excruciating the effect on the brain! The bothered, bewildered state that one is in after a day spent in all sorts of different shops trying to make purchases from the different points of view of all one's relatives and friends, who are within the circle of one's Christmas duty or generosity. How worse than useless is any attempt to shirk the responsibility of choice in presents by seeking the help of shop assistants. What preposterous suggestions they make, false to every principle of common sense, but generally true to the good old one that there is nothing like leather. Imagine a tea-basket for Fred, and the latest improvement in Gladstone bags for Aunt Julia, who has not left her room for many years!

It is customary to pity the friendless and lonely ones of the world; I am not at all sure that they may not turn the tables on us at this season. One cannot but feel at times—for instance, when adding up one's accounts at the end of each day—that there are mitigations in the lot of a foundling. Are not Christmas boxes more given, on the whole, to relatives than to friends? Which makes them so different from other presents; less spontaneous, more a matter of duty. Does it also account for what may be heard addressed to the shop assistants on all sides at this season, "I don't want anything dear, but something inexpensive. It is not for myself; something for a present, you know"? And the assistants always do seem to know.

Society does nothing but grumble at its own decay, and takes no pains to try and "rise on stepping stones" of its dead self "to higher things." Perhaps sociability may return later on, and the New Year bring better counsels and more amiable

RIDING HABITS.—A speciality in Riding Habits. Has been declared the best, without exception, by all ladies who have seen it. Quite new. Patented. Made only by G. S. WOLMERSHAUSEN & Co., LTD., 16, Gt. Marlborough-street, Regent-street, London, W.

HUNTING SEASON, 1893-4.—Busvine's new designs and materials for this year include several special novelties in Riding Habits, Coats for Walking and Driving, Walking Jackets, Gowns, &c. Can be seen at 4, Brook-street, or will be sent by return of post.—JOHN BUSVINE, by special appointments to the Princess of Wales, the Empress of Germany, the Empress of Austria, &c., &c.

feelings between man and man, including women. Mrs. Moncrieff, the wife of the general commanding the Dublin garrison, gives a fancy dress ball at the beginning of next month. Men, of course, will be allowed to wear uniform and Court dress. It is so much more serious for a man to get a fancy dress than for a woman. We can always utilise ours afterwards in some way. But what use can a man find, say, for the satin or velvet "combinations" of mediæval or Elizabethan periods? Even the smoking-room does not give them a chance, and it is just the same with most other dresses. Wishing you in the good old fashion a "Merry Christmas and a happy New Year."—Yours ever,

CLARE.

One so seldom sees turkey dressed in any other way than "roast" or boiled, that I should like to persuade you to try the following recipes:—

Pluck, draw, and truss a nice young bird, and fill the breast with the following stuffing:—Parboil six minced onions in water for five minutes, strain and press the water from them, simmer them for ten minutes in a stewpan with a pint of milk, now stir in as many bread-crumbs as the milk will absorb, add 4 oz. of butter, two tablespoonfuls of chopped parsley, and salt and pepper to taste; cover closely for five minutes then mix in two whole eggs and two yolks. Having fastened the stuffing securely in the bird, spread two large sheets of white paper with butter, cover them with sliced onion, carrot, and celery, place the turkey on the vegetable, and cover the breast of the bird, first with thin slices of lemon, then with slices of fat bacon. Now fold the paper and vegetable carefully over, tie it securely with string, and roast it nearly three hours in a moderate oven, basting very frequently with good fat. Before serving, remove the paper and vegetables, when the turkey should be quite wh and very juicy. Pour tomato sauce over. Fry a sliced oni in 1 oz. of butter until a pale brown colour, mix in a tab spoonful of flour, add the contents of a tin of tomato, a simmer until the water has evaporated, then rub them throu a hair sieve, return the purée to the stewpan with a small pie of glaze and a little stock.

Another way is:—

Pound 1 lb. of scraped veal in a mortar, add ½ lb. of scrap fat bacon and 4 oz. of butter; pound again, then work two whc eggs and two yolks thoroughly with it, season with salt a pepper, and mix a dozen blanched and bearded oysters careful into it. Sew the forcemeat securely into the breast of the turke and wrap it entirely in two sheets of greased kitchen pape Place the turkey in a braizing pan or fish kettle, that will onl just hold it, with a sliced carrot, an onion, a few stalks of celer a blade of mace, a few peppercorns, a bouquet composed of for sprigs of parsley, two of thyme, and two bay leaves, add suff cient white stock to nearly cover the bird, bring it slowly to th boil, then simmer very gently for nearly three hours. Take from the liquor, remove the paper and string, and serve wit oyster sauce. Put two dozen oysters with the liquor into a ste pan, bring them slowly to boiling point, strain at once an remove the beards. Dissolve 1 oz. of butter in a stewpan, mi in two tablespoonfuls of flour and the liquor from the oysters stir until it boils, add the oysters, a gill of cream, salt and peppe to taste, and a tablespoonful of lemon juice, make it quite hot i a bain-marie, and on no account allow it to boil.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

OLD SILVER FOR PRESENTS.

The Choicest Stock of genuine Old Silver in London, at moderate cash prices, with 10 per cent. discount.

SPINK & SON,
Goldsmiths and Silversmiths.
17 & 18, PICCADILLY, W.
and at 2, GRACECHURCH ST. CORNHILL,
LONDON, E.C.

ESTABLISHED 1772. Under the Patronage of H.M. the Queen.

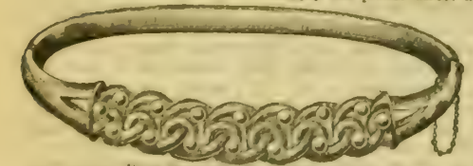
MOURNING FOR IMMEDIATE WEAR.

Messrs. JAY'S

Large and well-assorted STOCK includes a choice and varied selection of COSTUMES, MANTLES, and MILLINERY suitable for any degree of Mourning, and ready for IMMEDIATE WEAR. Orders to special instructions are executed in a few hours, and Ladies are Waited Upon in any part of the country without any extra charge whatever.

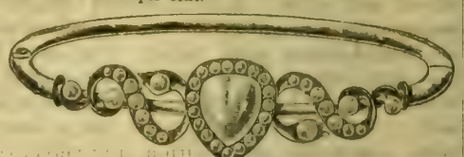
JAY'S,
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

THE MANUFACTURING
GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY,
(With which is Incorporated the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Ld. (A. B. Savory & Sons), late of Cornhill, E.C.).
Show Rooms: 112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)
Supply the public direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.



Fine Gold Bracelet, £2 15s.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch, with Chrysoprase Leaves, £10.
Awarded Nine Gold Medals and the Cross of the Legion of Honour.



Fine Pearl and Golden Cornelian Bracelet, £6.

NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE With Reduced Prices, POST FREE.

THE LARGEST AND CHOICEST STOCK IN THE WORLD OF NOVELTIES IN JEWELLERY SUITABLE FOR CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval.

HIGHEST AWARDS AT CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

Fine Pearl and Golden Cornelian Bracelet, £5 10s.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch £10 10s. With "Xmas" in Enamel, £6.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Cluster Half-Hoop Bracelet, £50. Sapphires and Diamonds, £50.

ALICE HILL.

SMART EVENING TOILETTES from 5 guineas.
TWEED GOWNS from 3½ guineas.
Stylish Parisian Millinery, Trousseaux, and Corsets.
22a, LOWER PHILLIMORE PLACE, KENSINGTON.

MISS WESTROPP-DAWSON,

Court Milliner,
43, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON (over the Kettledrum Tea-rooms).
FRENCH and ENGLISH MILLINERY, also MANTLES JACKETS, and TRAVELLING GARMENTS, at extremely reasonable prices.
Things sent on Approval on receipt of Tradesmen's Reference.

THE CRITERION RESTAURANT, PICCADILLY CIRCUS.

DINNERS AND SUPPERS A LA CARTE IN THE CELEBRATED EAST ROOM, AND AN EXCELLENT 4s. SUPPER is now served from 10.30 to 12.30 in the West Room,
BOTH ACCOMPANIED BY INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

Christmas Presents

A SELECTION OF ROWLAND'S TOILET ARTICLES IS ALWAYS ACCEPTABLE.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL

Preserves, Strengthens and Beautifies the Hair, prevents it falling off or turning Grey, and is especially recommended for Children as it forms the basis of a luxuriant head of hair in the most delightful manner, being not too greasy or too drying, and is unsurpassed for the Beard, Whiskers and Moustache. Sold also in a Golden Colour for fair haired children. Bottles, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d., equal to four small.

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR

A Soothing, Healing, and Emollient Preparation for beautifying the Skin, and producing a lovely Complexion. Removes Freckles, Redness and Roughness of Skin, soothes and heals Irritation, and produces Soft, Fair, and Delicate Skin, &c. It is warranted free from lead or mineral ingredients. Bottles, 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO

A Non-gritty Tooth Powder. Whitens the Teeth, prevents Decay, Strengthens the Gums, and gives a pleasing Fragrance to the Breath. Its antiseptic properties are unsurpassed by any other dentifrice, and are most valuable for the Teeth and Gums. 2s. 9d. per box. Sold Everywhere.

HOWARD & SONS

FURNITURE MANUFACTURERS.] 25, 26, 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W. [SPECIMENS AT WAREROOMS.

A SPECIALTY.

PARQUET FLOORING
PARQUET FLOORING
PARQUET FLOORING

EASY CHAIRS
EASY CHAIRS
EASY CHAIRS

A SPECIALTY.

WOOD TAPESTRY.

WALL DECORATIONS.

IMPERVIOUS TO DUST.

25, 26, & 27, BERNERS STREET, LONDON, W.

TRIPLE SPLICED HOSIERY.

PATENT NO. 20,778.

For Ladies and Children.

For Comfort, Elasticity, and Wear-resisting qualities these goods are the best produced. They are SPLICED AT THE INSTEP, where stockings, when worn with lace-up boots and shoes, first show signs of wear. In the heels and feet there is also splicing thread more than is found in ordinary Hosiery. Registered Trade Mark, "Musa Dye," on each pair. Colours guaranteed absolutely fast and clean.

Made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

To be obtained of ALL FIRST-CLASS DRAPERS & HOSIERS and WHOLESALE ONLY from the Patentees,

DEBENHAM & FREEBODY, FLETCHER GATE, NOTTINGHAM.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.

300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.

ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.

Weavers of Dress Silks,

Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

MORANT & Co.

DECORATORS,

91, NEW BOND STREET (4 doors from Oxford St.)

Makers of Venetian Seats, Henri II. Benches, Louis XIII. Sofas, Louis XV. and XVI. Furniture in great variety, not to be seen elsewhere. Chaises Directoire from old models.

NEARLY 5,000 ORPHAN & OUTCAST CHILDREN NEEDING BREAD!

The COMMITTEE of Dr. BARNARDO'S HOMES EARNESTLY APPEAL for AID in SUPPORT of the GREAT FAMILY of ORPHAN and WAIF CHILDREN now sheltered in the Institutions, to which about NINE Souls are added every Twenty-four Hours.

To make up the deficiency which has occurred during the past few months of diminished receipts, a Friend ("S.") offers £100 if 49 similar gifts are promised during this month, and "Beta" offers £50 if 50 others will follow his example. "Beta" also offers £10 if 100 others will give the same amount.

Gratefully will even the smallest donations be received by the Treasurer, Mr. WILLIAM FOWLER; by the Chairman of Committee, Mr. S. G. SHEPPARD; by the Vice-Chairman, Mr. HOWARD WILLIAMS; by the Founder and Director, Dr. J. T. BARNARDO; or by the Bankers, L. and S. W. Bank (Bow Branch), and PRESCOTT, DIMSDALE, and Co.

E. E. GILL, M.A., Clerical Secretary.
JOHN ODLING, General Secretary.

Offices of the Institutions—
18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS
AT ALL LIBRARIES.

Red Diamonds. By Justin McCarthy, Author of "Dear Lady Disdain," &c. 3 vols.

"'Red Diamonds' is, in point of plot and closeness of construction, by far the most remarkable of Mr. McCarthy's works of fiction. . . . A bold and original conception, and the working out of plot and character to a highly dramatic issue, after a fashion which no deliberately sensational novelist has surpassed. —World

The Burden of Isabel. By J. Maclaren Cobban, Author of "The Red Sultan." 3 vols.

Vashti and Esther: A Story of Society To-Day. By the Writer of "Belle's" Letters. 2 vols.

"A clever book, written by one who knows; who will be voted daring, no doubt—even audacious."—Vanity Fair.

A Wasted Crime. By David Christie Murray, Author of "Joseph's Coat," &c. 2 vols.

"Has all those characteristics which make Christie Murray's novels a source of perpetual delight."—Sun.

To His own Master. By Alan St. Aubyn, Author of "A Fellow of Trinity," &c.

"A good, strong, and interesting novel . . . . has situations of real power and pathos."—Daily Chronicle.

Outlaw and Lawmaker. By Mrs. Campbell Praed. 3 vols.

"A novel of high literary quality, remarkable power, and great interest."—Daily Telegraph.

Woman and the Man. By Robert Buchanan, Author of "God and the Man." 2 vols.

"The picture of a brave, pure woman is winningly delineated."—St. James's Gazette.

The Making of a Novelist: an Experiment in Autobiography. By David Christie Murray, Author of "Joseph's Coat." With a Portrait. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

"Mr. Murray has been in his time journalist, actor, soldier, penniless man of letters, and amateur tramp. With the pen of a practised novelist, he turns his varied experiences to excellent account, and tells his own story in a lively succession of strange scenes and stirring adventures."—Times.

Emile Zola. By R. H. Sherard. With Portraits and Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s.

"An admirable book . . . A model of what a biography should be. . . . Full of interesting anecdotes."—To-Day.

From Paddington to Penzance. By Charles G. Harper, Author of "The Brighton Road." With 105 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 16s.

"Admirably written and beautifully illustrated."—St. James's Budget.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

The Luck of Gerard Ridgeley: A TALE OF THE ZULU BORDER. By Bertram Mitford, Author of "The Gun-Runner," &c.

"The story has a goodly array of adventures and hairbreadth escapes of a thrilling description. . . . The absorbing attraction of the romance is found in the delineation of the escapades and experiences of the two transport traders with native tribes."—Scotsman.

Heather and Snow. By George MacDonald.

"A book which no one, having once taken it up, will lay down."—Spectator.

Mrs. Juliet. By Mrs. A. W. Hunt, Author of "Thornicroft's Model."

"A fresh, attractive, and decidedly entertaining story."—Athenæum.

The Red Sultan. By J. Maclaren Cobban.

"Mr. Stevenson's 'Kidnapped' has found a worthy peer."—Daily Chronicle.

A Trying Patient, &c. By James Payn.

"A volume altogether good to read. Stories that cannot fail to charm by their vivacity, humour, and deftness of character-sketching."—Saturday Review.

Ropes of Sand. By R. E. Francillon. With 31 Illustrations.

"Powerful, original, and fascinating. . . . Every character delineated by a master hand."—Daily Telegraph.

Dr. Pascal. By E. Zola, Author of "The Dream" and "The Downfall." With Portrait.

"A beautiful and most touching love story."—Vanity Fair.

Geoffory Hamilton. By Edward H. Cooper.

"Clever and real. The story is told with much vigour and a wonderfully acute knowledge of human nature. Will certainly live."—Manchester Courier.

Lady Verner's Flight. By Mrs. Hungerford.

"There are in 'Lady Verner's Flight" several of the bright young people who are wont to make Mrs. Hungerford's books such very pleasant reading."—Spectator.

The Windsor Peerage, Baronetage, and Knightage. Edited by E. Walford, M.A., Author of "The County Families." 1894 Edition now ready, Windsor cloth, price 12s. 6d.

It gives nearly all the information contained in other books, at little more than a third the cost. It contains also the blazon of the arms of all hereditary titles, and full accounts of all collateral branches in remainder to them.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS 214, Piccadilly, W.

THE ARGOSY
FOR JANUARY.

THE GREY MONK,
A New Serial Story of Powerful Interest, commences in
THE ARGOSY for JANUARY.

LETTERS FROM SOUTH AFRICA,
By CHARLES W. WOOD, commence in
THE ARGOSY for JANUARY.

NOW READY.

THE ARGOSY FOR JANUARY.

CONTENTS.

1—The Grey Monk. Chap. I.-IV. A New Serial Story. Illustrated by M. L. Gow.
2—Personal Recollections of Sir Walter Scott.
3—The Law of Life.
4—Country Lovers.
5—Letters from South Africa. By Charles W. Wood, with nine Illustrations.
6—The Christmas Knock.
7—Clough na Molla! By Julia Kavanagh.
8—The Old Lady in Black.
9—Lines on a Nun. By C. J. Langston.

SIXPENCE MONTHLY.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, 8, New Burlington-st., W.

100,000 COPIES. READY THIS DAY.

THE WOMAN AT HOME for JANUARY. Price 6d., with PRESENTATION CALENDAR for 1894.

DANIEL JACOBS. By Rev. S. Baring-Gould. An Idyll of Dartmoor. The First of a Series of Idylls. Illustrated.

H.R.H. the DUCHESS of YORK. By Marie Adelaide Belloc. With many Illustrations.

MRS. PLATT'S HUSBAND. By Annie S. Swan. Illustrated. See the WOMAN AT HOME for JANUARY, Price 6d. Now is the time to subscribe.

AMONG THE FJORDS with Edvard Grieg. By Rev. W. A. Gray. Illustrated.

ORIGINAL FASHION DESIGNS. By Mildred Harris (formerly designer to Messrs. Liberty).

CONFESSIONS of a ROYAL ACADEMICIAN. By Paul Seton. I. Evangeline. Illustrated.

A BACKWOODS CHILDHOOD. By Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson. Illustrated. See the WOMAN AT HOME for JANUARY. Containing also THE VANISHING BELLROPE, by Headon Hill; JEANIE'S LOVE LETTERS, by Katharine Lee; A PAGE OF CONFESSIONS, by Lady Butler; OVER THE TEACUPS, by Annie S. Swan; and all the regular attractive features.

London: Hodder & Stoughton, 27, Paternoster-row.

MR. J. M. BARRIE'S WORKS.
Buckram, Gilt Top, 6s. each.

1. A WINDOW in THRUMS. Eleventh Edition.
2. AULD LICHT IDYLLS. Eighth Edition.
3. MY LADY NICOTINE. Fifth Edition.
4. WHEN a MAN'S SINGLE. Seventh Edition.

London: Hodder & Stoughton, 27, Paternoster-row.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

"This is beyond doubt the finest illustrated book of the year."—THE BOOKMAN.

REMBRANDT: His Work, his Life, and his Time. By EMILE MICHEL. From the French by FLORENCE SIMMONDS. Edited by FREDERICK WEDMORE. In 2 vols., 4to, containing 53 Photogravures, and 34 Coloured Plates, printed in Paris, and upwards of 250 Text Illustrations. Price 42s. net.

Also an Edition de Luxe, limited to 150 copies for Great Britain, printed on vellum paper specially imported from Japan. With India proof duplicates of the Photogravures, printed in Paris. Price £10. 10s. net. (Only a few copies remain.)

TIMES.—"We need not repeat the praises we bestowed on M. Emile Michel's splendid monograph on Rembrandt, but now we have a still more sumptuous English edition in two large folio volumes, edited by Mr. Wedmore, who for satisfactory reasons has added a good deal, especially with reference to English collections unknown to M. Michel. A striking addition is the artist's portrait in yellow gaceridine from the collection of Lord Ilchester."

THE ROMANCE OF AN EMPRESS.—Catherine II. OF RUSSIA. From the French of R. WALISZEWSKI. 2 vols., large 8vo, with Portrait, 28s. [At all Libraries.

TIMES.—"Few stories in history are more romantic than that of Catherine II. of Russia, with its mysterious incidents and thrilling episodes; few characters present more curious problems."

A FRIEND OF THE QUEEN. (Marie Antoinette—Count Fersen.) With Portraits. 2 vols., 24s. [At all Libraries.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"M. Paul Gaulot's 'Memoirs of Marie Antoinette and Count Fersen' should gain many readers in its present form, since it is well translated and got up attractively."

IN THE TRACK OF THE SUN. Readings from the Diary of a Globe-Trotter. By F. D. THOMPSON. Illustrations on almost every page, reproduced in the choicest possible manner from new and original photographs. The most attractive book of travel of the season, being of the widest possible interest. One volume, 4to. 25s.

THE PIPER OF HAMELIN: a Fantastic Opera. By ROBERT BUCHANAN. With Illustrations by Hugh Thomson. Cloth, 2s. 6d. net.

Also an Extra Edition, limited to 50 copies, 10s. 6d. net. [All sold.

NEW THREE-VOLUME NOVELS,
AT ALL LIBRARIES.

A COMEDY OF MASKS. By ERNEST DOWSON and ARTHUR MOORE.

"This book will compel attention by its masterly knowledge of men and things. . . . The character painting is done with a far finer brush than that of the average writer of fiction, or even of many writers above the average. Of a literary partnership so promising as that begun by this work we hope to hear again, and to hear often."—Saturday Review.

THE HOYDEN. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of "Molly Bawn."

"Mrs. Hungerford's novels are never dull. Her latest romance 'The Hoyden,' has that power of attraction which Mrs. Hungerford's pen possesses in no ordinary degree."—Daily Telegraph.

THE HEAVENLY TWINS. By SARAH GRAND, Author of "Ideala," &c. Fourth Thousand.

"Everybody ought to read it, for it is an inexhaustible source of refreshing and highly stimulating entertainment."—Daily Telegraph.

THE COUNTESS RADNA. By W. E. NORRIS, Author of "Matrimony," &c. Second Edition.

"In style, skill in construction, and general 'go' it is worth a dozen ordinary novels, and justifies the place its author has obtained among living masters of fiction."—Speaker.

NEW ONE-VOLUME NOVELS.

RELICS: Fragments of a Life. By FRANCES MACNAB. With a Frontispiece by R. HALWARD. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

"A little book that has a special charm of its own."—Daily Telegraph.

APPASSIONATA: A Musician's Story. By ELSA D'ESTERRE KEELING. Crown 8vo, 6s.

FROM THE FIVE RIVERS: Stories of Native Life in India. By FLORA ANNIE STEEL, Author of "Miss Stuart's Legacy." 6s.

THE LAST SENTENCE. By MAXWELL GRAY, Author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland." New Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s.

MR. BAILEY-MARTIN. By PERCY WHITE. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

"Teems with smart sayings and graphic characterisations. . . . cannot fail to make a mark among the cleverest novels of the fast-waning year."—Daily Telegraph.

MADEMOISELLE MISS: and other Stories. By HENRY HARLAND, Author of "Mea Culpa," &c. 3s. 6d.

WRECKERS AND METHODISTS: Cornish Stories. By H. D. LOWRY. 3s. 6d.

ORIOLE'S DAUGHTER. By JESSIE FOTHERGILL, Author of "The First Violin." New Edition. 3s. 6d.

HEINEMANN'S INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY.

Edited by EDMUND GOSSE. Crown 8vo., cloth, 3s. 6d.; paper cover, 2s. 6d. each.

NEW VOLUME.

UNDER THE YOKE. From the Bulgarian of Ivan Vazoff.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.

December. Price 2s. 6d.

ABRIDGED CONTENTS.

Political Causes of Business Depression. By Governor Russell.
The Battleship of the Future: a Reply to Admiral Colomb. By Capt. W. E. Sampson, U.S.N.
Thoughts on English Universities. By the late Professor Freeman.
The Hawaiian Situation. By E. T. Chamberlain and others.
Parliamentary Manners. By Justin McCarthy, M.P.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

"Age cannot wither or custom stale the infinite variety of 'HARPER.'"
LADY'S PICTORIAL

The JANUARY No.
OF
Harper's Magazine

WILL CONTAIN THE OPENING OF

"TRILBY"

The New Story by George Du Maurier, Author of "Peter Ibbetson," with 15 Illustrations by the Author.

READY DECEMBER 22. ONE SHILLING.

ARCHDEACON FARRAR.
W. HOLMAN HUNT.
The Christmas Number of
THE ART JOURNAL.

ARCHDEACON FARRAR.
W. HOLMAN HUNT.
The Christmas Number of
THE ART JOURNAL.

SEE THE ART ANNUAL,
1893.
3 Full-page Plates, and many other Illustrations.
Price 2/6,
or
Cloth gilt, gilt edges, 5s.

Price 21s.

THE ART JOURNAL VOLUME, 1893. With nearly 500 Illustrations and 12 Full-page Etchings and Photogravures after the following eminent artists: Sir J. E. MILLAIS, Bart., R.A.; VICAT COLE, R.A.; HERBERT SCHMALZ; R. W. MACBETH, A.R.A.; E. A. WATERLOW, A.R.A.; G. H. BOUGHTON, A.R.A., &c. &c.

"Magnificently illustrated."—Yorkshire Post.

London: J. S. VIRTUE & CO., LIMITED, 26, Ivy-lane, E.C.

The New Review.

EDITED BY ARCHIBALD GROVE.
JANUARY, 1894. PRICE ONE SHILLING.

CONTENTS.

ANARCHISTS: THEIR METHODS AND ORGANISATION.
I. By Z.
II. By IVANOFF.
THE NEW MUSEUM AND THE SIDON SARCOPHAGI. By Prof. MAX MULLER. (Illustrated).
THE FUTURE OF HUMOUR. By H. D. TRAILL.
DISESTABLISHMENT IN ENGLAND. By AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, M.P.
SOME IMPRESSIONS OF AMERICA. By WALTER CRANE (Illustrated).
THE PREACHING OF CHRIST AND THE PRACTICE OF HIS CHURCHES. By COUNT LYOF TOLSTOI.
IS OUR LIFEBOAT SYSTEM EFFECTUAL? By E. H. BAYLEY, M.P.
PROFESSOR TYNDALL. By P. CHALMERS MITCHELL.
FRENCH PLAYS AND ENGLISH MONEY. By WILLIAM ARCHER.
PAROCHIAL SELF-GOVERNMENT (1750-1890). By Rev. J. FROME WILKINSON.
A LUCKY SIXPENCE.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

Hatchards, Booksellers, 187, Piccadilly, London.

ALL THE NEW AND STANDARD BOOKS.
Post Orders Promptly Executed. Usual Cash Discounts.

"TRUTH"

CAN BE OBTAINED EVERY THURSDAY MORNING AT
THE GALIGNANI LIBRARY,
242, RUE DE RIVOLI, PARIS.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S
New Works of Fiction.

NOW READY, THE SECOND EDITION

DIANA TEMPEST.
By Mary Cholmondeley.

Author of "The Danvers Jewels," "Sir Charles Danvers," &c.
In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "NEAR NEIGHBOURS."

The SWING of the PENDULUM.
By FRANCES MARY PEARD, Author of "The Baroness," &c. In 2 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

TEMPE. By Constance Cotterell,
Author of "Strange Gods." In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

BRITOMART. By Mrs. Herbert
MARTIN, Author of "Bonnie Lesley," &c. In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

A HEROINE in HOMESPUN: By
FREDERIC BRETON, Author of "The Crime of Maunsell Grange," &c. In 2 vols., crown 8vo.

NOW READY.

MOLLY and her MAN-O'-WAR.
By Dr. ARABELLA KENEALY, Author of "Dr. Janet of Harley-street.", In 1 vol., crown 8vo, 6s.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street.

NEW STORY BY W. E. NORRIS.
NOTICE.—The CORNHILL MAGAZINE for JANUARY contains the Opening Chapters of a new Serial Story by W. E. NORRIS, entitled "MATTHEW AUSTIN."

On December 22 (Sixpence), New Series, No. 127,

THE CORNHILL MACAZINE FOR JANUARY, containing "MATTHEW AUSTIN," by W. E. Norris. Chaps. 1 to 4.—"IN A COUNTRY OMNIBUS."—"INSECT GODS."—"A PRESENT FROM MARGATE."—"MILITARY BALLOONING."—"CHARACTER NOTE: THE PRACTICAL WOMAN."—"THE CALDERA OF PALMA."—"WITH EDGED TOOLS," Chaps. 25 to 27.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

NOW READY

The Christmas (December)
DOUBLE NUMBER OF
THE STRAND MAGAZINE.
EDITED BY GEORGE NEWNES.
208 Pages, with 218 Illustrations.

Amongst other interesting Stories and Articles it contains—

THE ADVENTURE OF THE FINAL PROBLEM. By A. CONAN DOYLE.
AN INTERVIEW WITH THE SULTAN OF TURKEY.
TOWARDS THE NORTH POLE. An Article specially written on board the Fram for the STRAND. By Dr. NANSEN.
AN ILLUSTRATED INTERVIEW WITH SIR GEORGE LEWIS. By HALEY HOW.
A CHRISTMAS STORY. By SARAH BERNHARDT.
TRANSFORMATION SCENES: How they are made and worked.
MONARCHS AND MUSCLE. By MISS PHYLLIS BENTLEY.
A CEMETERY FOR DOGS. By E. B. BRAYLEY HODGETTS.
STORIES FROM THE DIARY OF A DOCTOR: The Wrong Prescription.
A LITERARY COINCIDENCE. By E. W. HORNUNG.
With a large COLOURED PLATE, entitled, "FROM THE SUBLIME TO THE RIDICULOUS."

PRICE 1s.; Post free, 1s. 6d.

ALSO READY.

THE PICTURE MAGAZINE,
DECEMBER, PRICE 6d.,
CONTAINING THE FIRST ROYAL ACADEMY PICTURES,
by Eminent Artists, including those of Sir Frederick Leighton, P.R.A. (by special permission of Her Majesty the Queen), Mr. G. D. Leslie, R.A., Professor Herkomer, R.A., Mr. Peter Graham, R.A., Mr. G. F. Watts, R.A., and about 20 other Pictures. Post free, 8d.

GEORGE NEWNES, LIMITED, LONDON, W.C.

New Edition, pp. 324, cloth 1s., post free.
HOMŒOPATHIC FAMILY INSTRUCTOR. By Drs. R. & W. EPPS. Describes fully and prescribes for general diseases. London: JAMES EPPS & CO. (Ltd.), 48, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Piccadilly.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London. A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 8d.
London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

SELECT BOOKS FOR CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

CAPTAIN LUGARD'S
THE RISE OF OUR EAST AFRICAN EMPIRE:
EARLY EFFORTS IN NYASALAND AND UGANDA. By Captain F. D. LUGARD, D.S.O., Hon. F.R.G.S., Diplom. F.R.S.G.S. With 180 Illustrations, and 14 Maps. 2 vols., large demy 8vo, 42s.

"No more exciting or more instructive work on the affairs of the Dark Continent has been written."—St. James's Gazette.

"The most important contribution that has yet been made to the history of British East Africa."—Times.

"Many as are the tales of pluck and endurance which have arisen out of English exploration in Africa, none of them surpass in vividness and vitality this of Captain Lugard's."—Globe.

SIR HERBERT MAXWELL'S LIFE AND TIMES OF THE RIGHT HON. WILLIAM HENRY SMITH,
M.P. By Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P., Author of "Passages in the Life of Sir Lucian Elphin," "Meridiana," &c. With 3 Portraits and numerous Illustrations. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 25s.

"Sir Herbert Maxwell has done his work well, with tact and discretion. He has used his materials with literary skill, producing a couple of volumes which can be read throughout with pleasure."—Globe.

"A charming and engaging biography of a man whom Englishmen of all parties respected."—St. James's Gazette.

"A handsome contribution to English literature, and a worthy memorial of a statesman who personified one of the best types of the national character."—Manchester Courier.

MISS M. WARRENDER'S
MARCHMONT AND THE HUMES OF POL-
WARTH. With 9 Portraits and numerous other Illustrations. Crown 4to, 21s. net.

LADY MARTIN'S ON SOME OF SHAKESPEARE'S FEMALE CHARACTERS.
By HELENA FAUCIT, LADY MARTIN. Dedicated by Permission to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen. Fifth Edition, with Portrait by LEHMANN. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d.

MR. W. B. HARRIS'S
A JOURNEY THROUGH THE YEMEN, and
SOME GENERAL REMARKS UPON THAT COUNTRY. By WALTER B. HARRIS, F.R.G.S., Author of "The Land of an African Sultan: Travels in Morocco," &c. With 3 Maps and numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 16s.

"As interesting and instructive a book of travel as one could wish for. . . . One cannot be too grateful to Mr. Harris for showing us what manner of men these Yemeni are."—Academy.

SIR THEODORE MARTIN'S
MADONNA PIA: a Tragedy; and Three Other
DRAMAS. Written and Translated by Sir THEODORE MARTIN, K.C.B. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

JEANIE MORISON'S
DOORSIDE DITTIES. With a Frontispiece.
Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

"A SON OF THE MARSHES."
WITH THE WOODLANDERS AND BY THE TIDE. By "A SON OF THE MARSHES," Author of "Forest Tithes," "On Surrey Hills," "Within an Hour of London Town," "Annals of a Fishing Village." Edited by J. A. OWEN. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"An indescribable charm lurks in every page of this entertaining work, the outcome of sedulous and loving observation. . . . The book cannot be too highly praised or widely read."—Daily Telegraph.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

OBSERVATIONS
ON THE EFFICACY OF BURNING SULPHUR FIRES
IN
EPIDEMICS OF CHOLERA, INFLUENZA,
And Other Zymotic Diseases.
WITH ADDENDA REGARDING DISEASE GERMS.
BY
SURGEON-GENERAL J. E. TUSON, M.D., F.R.C.S.,
H.M.'s BENGAL ARMY (RETIRED). SIXTH EDITION.

HARRISON & SONS, Booksellers to the Queen and H.R.H. The Prince of Wales, 59, PALL MALL. 1893.

PALL MALL CLUB,
26, SUFFOLK STREET,
PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

Established for Social Purposes only.

Premises consist of spacious, lofty, and well-lighted rooms, with frontage to Pall Mall.

Subscription £3 3s. per annum.
Entrance fee £2 2s.

(suspended for the first 200 members, who are now being elected).

Full information sent on application to the Secretary.

AMUSEMENTS.

CONSTANTINOPLE OLYMPIA OPENS BOXING DAY.

CONSTANTINOPLE.....OLYMPIA.

OPENS
BOXING DAY,
TWICE DAILY,
12 Noon. 6 p.m.

CONSTANTINOPLE .....OLYMPIA.

A Marvellous Spectacle.	A Real City.
Magnificent Palaces.	Oriental Warmth and Comfort.
Glorious Mosques.	Most Gigantic Scenic Effects.
Picturesque Bazaars.	Fleets of Real Turkish Caiques.
Cosmopolitan Population.	The Waters of the Bosphorus.

CONSTANTINOPLE .....OLYMPIA.

Marvellous Reproduction of	Floating in the Harbours,
The Hall of 1,001 Columns.	Gorgeous Palaces of the Sultan,
Illuminated Fairy Palace,	Illustrating the Tales of the Tower of Galata.	Arabian Nights.
Delightful View of Golden Horn.	In all their Eastern Opulence,
Great Bridge of Boats.	So vividly illustrated
Fully-Rigged Turkish Vessels.	That the world will be filled with astonishment.

CONSTANTINOPLE; or, REVELS OF THE EAST.
BOLOSSY KIRALFY'S Gigantic Production.
2,000 Performers.
Marvellous Dances, Sports and Pastimes,
Grand Slave Ballet by real Negresses.
Magnificent Water Carnivals.

CONSTANTINOPLE .....OLYMPIA.

Special Covered Way direct into the Building from Addison-road Station. Visitors from all parts of London independent of weather. Special trains, thousands of 1s. Tickets, which include a Reserved and Numbered Seat, and admit Everywhere. Positively No Extra Charges. Admission (including reserved seat):—1s., 2s., 3s., 4s., 5s.; Private Boxes (hold six), £3 3s. Seats from 3s. booked at all Box Offices, and at Olympia.

WULFF'S GREAT CONTINENTAL CIRCUS, at HENGLER'S, Argyll-street, W.—Every Evening, at 8. Doors open 7.30. At every performance the SIXTY HORSES performing in the arena at one time, introduced by HERR ED. WULFF. Twenty Clowns. The Singing Pony Punch. Matinees, Mondays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, at 2.30. Doors open at 2. On and after Boxing Day, twice a day, at 2.30 and 8. Box-office open 10 till 4, and at Libraries. Telephone No. 35,222.

CRYSTAL PALACE PANTOMIME, JACK AND THE BEANSTALK. Written by Horace Lennard. Produced by OSCAR BARRETT. Every Afternoon, at 3, and on Thursday and Saturday Evenings, at 7.30. Plenty of Fun and the Grandest Spectacular Display. Numbered Seats, 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 5s., may be booked one month in advance. Unnumbered seats, 1s. and 1s. 6d.

LAWRIE & Co., 15, Old Bond-street, W.
EXHIBITION OF CHOICE PICTURES,
including
"THE BATH OF VENUS,"
by
E. BURNE JONES.
NOW OPEN FROM 10 to 6 DAILY.

WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS.—A Choice COLLECTION, including Works by ROSA BONHEUR, ALMA TADEMA, R.A., FORTUNY, Sir JOHN GILBERT, R.A., &c., &c., ON VIEW, in the First Room, at THOMAS McLEAN'S Gallery, 7, Haymarket (next the Theatre).

NIAGARA in WINTER.—Panorama and Diorama of the Ice Palace at Montreal.—NIAGARA HALLS, St. James's Park Station. DAILY, 10 to 10 p.m. Admission 1s. Children 6d. Tickets, including admission, all District and Metropolitan Railway Stations.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station, in connection with all railways. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations.—New Portrait Models of the late PRINCE ALEXANDER OF BULGARIA and their Majesties the EMPEROR of RUSSIA, the EMPEROR of GERMANY, the EMPEROR of AUSTRIA, and the KING of ITALY. Music all day. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Chamber of Horrors, 6d. Open 9 to 10.

CONJURERS, PUNCH & JUDY, MAGIC LANTERNS, VENTRILOQUISTS
Professors Bellairs, Hilton, and 1,000 Refined Entertainers.
Send for Illustrated Price List, gratis.
THE SOCIETY OF ENTERTAINERS,
Mention this Paper. 44, Upper Baker St., London, N.W.

ELOCUTION, EXTEMPORE SPEAKING, ORATORY.—Professor HAYSACK, whose Pupils are among the first clergymen, doctors, barristers, solicitors, public personages, and nobility, GIVES INSTRUCTION. Voice strengthened, defects corrected.—70, Talbot-road, Bayswater.

CENTRAL SCHOOL OF FOREIGN TONGUES.
Gouin's Series Method.
HOWARD HOUSE, ARUNDEL STREET, TEMPLE, LONDON.
Life lived through in imagination and thoroughly learnt anew in the Foreign Tongue, both orally and in writing.—See Gouin's Art of Teaching Languages. FRESH CLASSES for beginners in FRENCH, GERMAN, SPANISH, ITALIAN, RUSSIAN (Day and Evening) will be started after Christmas.—Prospectus for stamp from the Directors, HOWARD SWAN and VICTOR BETIS.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Lessee, Mr. HENRY IRVING. [illegible] Mr. Irving. Next Production [illegible] Mr. Irving's [illegible] Box-office open daily from [illegible] letter or telegram.—Mr. Joseph Hurst, Acting Manager.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—MR. TREE,
Sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING (a limited number of Nights) at 8.15,
CAPTAIN SWIFT.
Mr. Tree, Messrs. Henry Kemble, Chas. Allan, Herman Clark, C. M. Hallard, Maubourg, and H. H. Mackin, Mesdames Carlotta Addison, Fanny Coleman, Irene Vanbrugh, and Miss Tree.
MATINÉE of CAPTAIN SWIFT SATURDAY NEXT, December 23, at 2.30.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) from 10 till 5.—HAYMARKET.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S THEATRE.—Under the Management of Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS. Nightly, at 7.30, A LIFE OF PLEASURE, by Henry Pettitt and Sir Augustus Harris. Transferred from Drury Lane Theatre (full particulars see Daily Papers). Box-office open all day.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers. A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt [illegible], A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, R. Harding, J. Carter, H. Russell, and Arthur Williams; Mesdames Mary Rorke, Alma Stanley, and Agnes Thomas. Box-office 10 to 6. Doors open at 7.30.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER.—CLOSED. RE-OPENING on BOXING DAY with, at 2.30 and 8.15,
THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY,
By Arthur W. Pinero. Doors open 7.45; carriages, 11.
MORNING PERFORMANCE BOXING DAY, December 26.
Box-office open 10 to 5. Seats may be booked by letter, telegram or telephone. ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

COURT THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—To-Night and Every Evening, a New Triple Bill. At 8.15, GOOD-BYE; at 9, FAITHFUL JAMES; and at 10, UNDER THE CLOCK. Box-office open 10 to 5. Telephone No. 3,031.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square.—Every Night, at 8 (doors 7.30), THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL. Miss Ada Rehan as Lady Teazle; Mr. Wm. Farren as Sir Peter. MATINÉE Wednesday Next, December 27, Last Matinée Saturday, December 30. "Never before has this fine comedy had a more beautiful setting."—Daily News. Box-office daily 9 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries. Monday, January 1, THE COUNTRY GIRL. Miss Rehan as Peggy. Seats can now be booked.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.30, Musical Comedy, words by Owen Hall, Lyrics by Harry Greenbank. Music by Sydney Jones, entitled A GAIETY GIRL. The most powerful cast in London. At 7.45, SIXES. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

THE TRAFALGAR THEATRE.—Sole Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. FRANK WYATT (Miss Violet Melnotte). Under the Management of Mr. CHARLES H. HAWTREY.—Every Evening, at 9, a New Farcical Comedy, entitled TOM, DICK, AND HARRY, by Mrs. R. Pacheco. Preceded, at 8.10, by PICKWICK. Mr. Charles Hawtrey, Mr. C. P. Little, and Miss Jessie Bond. Matinée Every Saturday, at 3 o'clock. Box-office open from 10 to 10.—Business Manager, Mr. E. F. Bradley.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.15, Vol. II. of MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine, H. Haslem, and Charles Danby; Misses Jennie McNulty, Agnes Hewitt, Maggie Roberts, and Lettie Lind. Preceded, at 7.45, by Rex Harley, the inimitable Mimic of Popular Actors. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30.—Matinée Every Saturday, and Boxing Day, at 2.30.

TOOLE'S THEATRE.—MRS. OTHELLO. Matinées Every Day during this week, at 3 o'clock. Preceded, at 2.30, by THE BROTHERS, Messrs. Charles Glenney, Julian Cross, Gordon Harvey, G. Raiemond, Percy Marshall, Cecil Crofton; Misses Cicely Richards, Blanche Horlock, Irene Rickards, Alice de Winton, Florence Melville, and Fanny Brough. Seats at all Libraries. Box-office open daily. NO EVENING PERFORMANCES during THIS WEEK. MRS. OTHELLO will be TRANSFERRED to the VAUDEVILLE THEATRE on BOXING NIGHT.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.30.—DON QUIXOTE, at 10 o'clock, New Grand Dramatic Ballet, in Four Tableaux. At 8.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Operatic Music, Varieties, and Specialities. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 35,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Two GRAND BALLETS.—At 7.50, KATRINA, and at 10.10, THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME. Grand Varieties. The new entrance from Leicester-street is now open. Doors open at 7.30. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Programme. Albert Chevalier, Eugene Stratton, Wrestling Lion, Fannie Leslie, Carl Hertz, Mdlle. D'Alton, Lucy Clarke, the Three Romas, Nellie Navette, Herbert Campbell, Ada Vere, Ada Blanche, the Staverdales, Rosie Rendel, Johnny Dwyer, Eva Bell, the Sisters Devan, Sismondi and Vivian Troupe, Bernard Armstrong, Alice Lloyd, Sells and Young.—EVERY EVENING. Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

HOSPITALS AND APPEALS.

THE NATIONAL REFUGES FOR HOMELESS AND DESTITUTE CHILDREN

And "ARETHUSA" and "CHICHESTER" Training Ships,

164, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.C.

PRESIDENT - - - - - THE EARL OF JERSEY, G.C.M.G.

As this Society is a National one, not simply Metropolitan, admission is ensured to a destitute child from whatever part of the kingdom it may come.

900 CHILDREN MAINTAINED. FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED.

H. BRISTOW WALLEN, Secretary. HENRY G. COPELAND, Finance and Deputation Secretary.

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL, PADDINGTON, W.

Is striving to do its Great Work WELL, with INADEQUATE MEANS.

Even the smallest addition to its funds will be welcomed, and will be most gratefully acknowledged by the Secretary, Mr. THOMAS RYAN, at the Hospital.

NATIONAL SOCIETY for the PREVENTION of CRUELTY to CHILDREN.

The object of the Society is that no British child's life shall be unendurable.

Patron—The QUEEN.

250 branches of the Society exist in England, Wales, and Ireland.
20,000,000 of population is embraced in those branches.
£45,000 a year is expended in them.
The Society has investigated :—
9,817 cases of violence.
23,021 cases of neglect and starvation.
4,809 cases of exposure for begging.
1,676 cases of immorality.
1,241 cases of dangerous performances, &c.
24,407 of these cases it has warned.
5,089 it has prosecuted.
4,793 of which resulted in convictions.
These were in all ranks of life.
93,359 children were involved in the cases—all of whose lives have been rendered happier ; who have been better clothed and fed and better treated.
The vastness and blessedness of the work should commend itself to every man and woman in the land.
The work is urgent and greatly increasing.

Hon. Director—Rev. BENJAMIN WAUGH, 7, Harpur-street, London, W.C.
Treasurer—J. H. D. Ryder.
Auditors—Gerard Van De Linde & Son.
Bankers—Coutts & Co.

ST. JOHN'S DAY NURSERY,

9, Fisher Street,
RED LION SQUARE.

Number of attendances in year ending Lady Day, 1893, 6,438. Funds needed to meet Rent incurred for temporary premises during re-building, and towards current expenditure. Report on application.

G. J. FOSTER, Hon. Secretary.

North-West London Hospital,

Kentish Town Road.

Patron.
H.R.H. Princess Christian.
Chairman.
Rev. F. J. Ponsonby.
Treasurer.
George Herring, Esq.

The only Institution of the kind in this densely-populated district. Last year there were 555 In-patients and 39,006 cases as Out-patients.
Income from Annual Subscriptions is less than £900 ; yearly expenditure, £3,500 ; leaving a deficiency of over £2,600 to be made up each year by special benefactions.
FUNDS ARE GREATLY NEEDED.
ALFRED CRASKE,
Secretary.

TO THE CHARITABLE.—FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED for the

BRITISH HOSPITAL FOR MENTAL DISORDERS AND BRAIN DISEASES

(Forbes Winslow Memorial), 208, EUSTON ROAD, N.W.
President THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE.
Vice-Presidents—The Earl of Hardwicke, Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, M.P., Alfred de Rothschild, Esq., Dr. Hermann Adler, Chief Rabbi, Rev. R. W. L. Tollemache Tollemache, M.A., &c.
ENTIRELY FREE to the POOR. 15,000 Attendances Registered.
WILLIAM J. WHELAN, Secretary.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.—The long-continued prevalence of scarlet fever is causing a heavy strain on the resources of this Hospital. The benevolent are earnestly asked for HELP. Annual subscribers of a Guinea and upwards for more than a year, as well as donors of Ten Guineas or more in one sum, are Governors, and are entitled to free treatment for their domestic servants. Sufferers residing outside the metropolitan area can only be received into the Hospital from the families of Governors.
Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by the Secretary, at the Hospital, MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott, Dimsdale, & Co., 50, Cornhill.

INSTITUTED 1740.

LONDON HOSPITAL, WHITECHAPEL, E.

776 BEDS.

Funds Urgently Needed.

£40,000 Required Each Year from Voluntary Contributions.

BANKERS { ROBARTS, LUBBOCK & CO. / GLYN, MILLS, CURRIE & CO.

J. H. HALE, Esq., Chairman. G. Q. ROBERTS, House Governor.

SUFFERING CHILDREN.

THE BOARD OF MANAGEMENT OF THE

CITY ORTHOPÆDIC HOSPITAL

earnestly appeal for Contributions to enable them to admit to Cots, vacant for want of Funds, a number of little ones in intense agony with their bodily ailments.

The Hospital is National, Poor, totally Unendowed, and heavily mortgaged.

Secretary, ERNEST DERUTH, Hatton Garden, E.C.

ROYAL HOSPITAL FOR Diseases of the Chest,

CITY ROAD, LONDON.

President—The Right Hon. the LORD CHARLES BRUCE.
Treasurer—S. HOPE MORLEY, Esq.
Chairman of the Council—T. ANDROS DE LA RUE, Esq.
Vice-Chairman—The Hon. LIONEL ASHLEY.

The Hospital was founded in 1814 by Her Majesty's father, the late Duke of Kent, and was the FIRST HOSPITAL in Europe devoted to the treatment of Diseases of the Chest.

OPENING OF TWO ADDITIONAL WARDS

to meet the DEMAND for increased accommodation for IN-PATIENTS. It is a matter of life and death in many cases for the suffering to be admitted as IN-PATIENTS without delay. At present the available Beds are quite INADEQUATE to the DEMANDS made upon the Hospital. The opening of these wards will INCREASE the bed accommodation from 50 to 80, and the expenses by £1,000 per annum.

THE HOSPITAL

is situated in one of the POOREST QUARTERS of London, and relieves thousands of the deserving poor.

THE ATTENDANCES

of out-patients last year reached the large total of 23,673. OUT-PATIENTS, as well as IN-PATIENTS, receive the best possible Medical Advice, and all MEDICINE GRATUITOUSLY.

FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED

to enable the Council to carry on the EXTENDED WORK of the Hospital. Without INCREASED SUPPORT it will be IMPOSSIBLE to permanently maintain the Additional Wards.

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN and T.R.H. THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF YORK have recently sent donations.

DONATIONS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS

ARE EARNESTLY SOLICITED, and will be thankfully received by the SECRETARY at the Hospital.

JOHN HARROLD,
SECRETARY.

A NATIONAL WORK.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND

CENTRAL SOCIETY FOR PROVIDING HOMES FOR WAIFS AND STRAYS.

Presidents :
THE ARCHBISHOPS OF CANTERBURY AND YORK.

MEANS ADOPTED.
1. Establishing Small Homes.
2. Boarding Out.
3. Emigration.

HELP URGENTLY NEEDED

For the Support of over 1,900 Destitute and Orphan Children under the Society's care, and to enable the Executive to accept very many deserving cases.

CONTRIBUTIONS will be gratefully acknowledged by E. DE M. RUDOLF, Secretary.

OFFICES OF THE SOCIETY :—Church House, Dean's-yard, Westminster, S.W. Cheques should be crossed "Lloyds' Bank, Ltd., 54, St. James's-street, S.W.," and made payable to H. DE M. RUDOLF.

HOSPITALS & APPEALS.

CANCER WARDS at the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL, Mortimer-street, W. The WEEKLY BOARD make an URGENT APPEAL for FUNDS in Aid of these Wards. There are 44 beds set apart for patients suffering from this fearful malady. They are admitted without letters of recommendation. Everything that human skill and kindness can suggest is provided, and sufferers are permitted to remain until relieved by art or released by death. Bankers, Messrs. Coutts & Co.
F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary Superintendent.

METROPOLITAN HOSPITAL, Kingsland-road, N.E.
Patron: H.R.H. The PRINCE of WALES
Chairman: JOSEPH FRY, Esq. Treasurer: The Right Hon. Lord BATTERSEA.
Hon. Treasurer: Sir E. HAY CURRIE
The Committee most earnestly appeal for Funds to pay off pressing liabilities and to reopen the 24 beds closed during the past year. The hospital could accommodate 160 in patients, but only 54 beds are at present available.
Bankers { GLYN, MILLS & Co. / LLOYD'S BANK, LTD. } CHARLES H. BYERS, Secretary.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM for IDIOTS.
Nearly 600 afflicted cases are receiving special care and education.
FUNDS urgently REQUIRED.
Special provision is made for the reception of Private Cases on payment.
H. GERARD HOARE, Esq., J.P., Treasurer.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Cheques or Postal Orders may be crossed Messrs. Hoare, Bankers, 37, Fleet-street, E.C.
Offices, 56, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

ROYAL FREE HOSPITAL, Gray's Inn-road.
PRESIDENT—The Marquis of DUFFERIN and AVA.
BUILDING FUND APPEAL.
Owing to the dilapidated state of the old front building, the Committee have been compelled to commence the work of re-building in order to provide much needed isolation wards, new casualty rooms, and dispensary, at a total estimated cost of about £20,000, towards which the sum of £10,000 has been received. An earnest APPEAL is therefore made for the remaining £10,000 to enable the Committee to open the new building free from debt. Admission to the Hospital is entirely free, no letters of recommendation being required. Contributions for the Building Fund and for the general expenses will be gratefully received by Messrs. Brown, Janson & Co., 32, Abchurch-lane, or at the Hospital by CONRAD W. THIES, Secretary.

ROYAL EAR HOSPITAL, Frith-street, Soho. Founded 1816.
Patron HER MAJESTY. President THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.
Funds (which are urgently required to meet current expenses) and also contributions to the New Building Fund, will be thankfully received by LLOYD'S BANK (Twining's Branch), 215, Strand; or by the Treasurer, T. PALLISTER YOUNG, LL.B., 29, Mark-lane, E.C.

MRS. HILTON'S CRÊCHE.—To Mothers who know all that babies need. Will you kindly send Christmas gifts to my babies, who need everything?—Address, Mrs. HILTON, The Crêche, 12, 14, and 16, Stepney-causeway, Commercial-road, E.

THE FRIEND IN NEED.—TO GENTLEMEN.—The Managers of a Refuge in Whitechapel, which shelters 160 homeless men nightly, earnestly APPEAL for GIFTS of CAST-OFF CLOTHING.—Address, SECRETARY, 27, Kilburn Park-road, London, N.W.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL.

CONTRIBUTIONS are EARNESTLY SOLICITED towards meeting the EXPENSES of this unendowed Hospital, and will be gratefully received by the Bankers, Messrs. Drummond, or by the Secretary.

ALEXANDRA HOSPITAL FOR CHILDREN WITH HIP DISEASE,
QUEEN SQUARE, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

The Committee earnestly APPEAL for AID on behalf of this Charity, which ministers to a class of sufferers unsuitable for general hospitals. New annual subscriptions urgently needed.
Further information will be gladly furnished on application.
Bankers: Messrs. HOARE and Messrs. DRUMMOND.
STANLEY SMITH, Secretary.

The Best is the Cheapest!
Fixed, moderate prices for first-quality.

TRADE MARK ON EACH GARMENT

JAEGER
PURE WOOL
CLOTHING.

Dr. Jaeger's "Health Culture," and Jaeger Price List, sent free on application.

WEST-END JAEGER DEPOTS—
3 & 4, Princes-street, Cavendish-square (near Regent Circus);
30, Piccadilly (near St. James's Hall).
30, Sloane-street (adjoining McPherson's Gymnasium);
456, Strand (near Trafalgar-square).

CITY JAEGER DEPOTS—
85 & 86, Cheapside (near King-street);
158, Fenchurch-street (near Lime-street);
42 & 43, Fore-street (near Moorgate-street Station).

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES.—Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences TO BE LET and SOLD may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park square (the corner of Albion street) W.

ON WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY, DECEMBER 13th and 14th, a portion of the FURNITURE belonging to the late Lady Sydney was SOLD by Messrs. GIDDY & GIDDY, at No. 5, Cleveland square, St. James's, when many of the articles fetched high prices, including a Inlaid Cabinet, with nine drawers, 62 guineas; a small Ormolu Mounted Escritoire, 19 guineas; three ditto Writing Tables 34 guineas, £41, and £49 respectively; pair 21 in. Ormolu Candelabra, 35 guineas; a large pair ditto 72 guineas; pair Revolving Dumb Waiters, £16 10s.; old Satin Wood Card Table, painted flowers, £16; a small Marble and Ormolu Mounted Clock, £26; pair old Wedgwood Candelabra (damaged), £11.

MASSAGE.—Mrs. ARMSTRONG (Masso-Therapeutist, RECEIVES and VISITS DAILY; liver, rheumatism, debility, lumbago, neuralgic headache, &c., successfully treated. 39, South street, Park lane, W.

A LADY is anxious to hear of a post as COMPANION or SECRETARY, for a young lady of good birth and education. Musical (piano and singing). Good amanuensis and excellent traveller. Highest references given. Address, L. C. T., care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended.—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster place, Strand, W.C.

C. P. R. SERVICES.
CHINA, JAPAN, AUSTRALIA, ROUND the WORLD } MONTHLY via VANCOUVER.
Fastest, finest, only twin-screw Steamers on Pacific Ocean. Specially interesting route for tourists, through grandest scenery on American Continent. Luxurious hotels. CANADIAN TOURS arranged. Shooting, fishing. For tickets, free illustrated books, time-tables, apply, CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67 and 68, King William-street, London, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

TRAVELLERS TO BRINDISI AND THE EAST
WILL NOW FIND
BOLOGNA the most convenient stopping-place.
Coupé-lits can be booked beforehand by Mr. FRANK, Hotel Brun, for DAILY EXPRESS TRAIN, leaving Bologne 6.55. p.m., arriving at Brindisi 10.50 a.m.

THE INTERNATIONAL SLEEPING CAR and EUROPEAN EXPRESS TRAINS COMPANY. TRAINS DE LUXE AND HOTELS.—SEASON 1893-4. MEDITERRANEAN EXPRESS EVERY SATURDAY and TUESDAY at 7.25 p.m. from the Gare de Lyons, Paris, arriving Nice 1.25 p.m. the following day. Special Ceinture Train from Gare du Nord on arrival of 8.0 and 10.0 a.m. trains from London. Dinner served on the Trains on leaving Paris. Through Sleeping and Dining Cars, with covered vestibule inter-communication between the cars. Only Dining Car service this year. Three other Daily Services to the Riviera.
The Company's RIVIERA PALACE HOTEL, NICE (Cimiez).
PENINSULAR EXPRESS EVERY FRIDAY 8.15 p.m., London to Brindisi. To Cairo under five days via P. and O. Steamers. Through Cars from Calais.
The Company's GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL, BRINDISI.
SUD EXPRESS.—MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS to Pau, Biarritz, Madrid and Lisbon, &c.
The Company's GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL (Terminus), LISBON.
ORIENT EXPRESS.—Daily to VIENNA, Three Times Weekly to CONSTANTINOPLE.
These Trains are composed exclusively of Sleeping, Saloon, and Dining Cars, comfortably warmed and thoroughly ventilated. For all tickets and full details of Trains and Hotels apply to Chief London Office, 122, Pall Mall, and City Office, 5, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY CHISTMAS HOLIDAY ARRANGEMENTS.
CHEAP RETURN TICKETS from London to the West of England, North and South Devon, Plymouth, the Somerset and Dorset Line (not on SUNDAY or CHRISTMAS DAY), Weymouth, Dorchester, Poole, Bournemouth, &c., will be issued by all trains on 22nd, 23rd, 24th, and 25th December, available to return up to and including 29th December.
To GUERNSEY and JERSEY on 22nd, 23rd, and 24th DECEMBER, at a fare of 25s., available by any train or boat for 14 days.
On FRIDAY, 22nd, SATURDAY, 23rd, and SUNDAY, 24th December, by all Trains at the following rates: Bournemouth (East), 28s. 6d. 1st class, 21s. 6d. 2nd class, 12s. 3rd class; Bournemouth (West), 29s. 8d. 1st class, 22s. 4d. 2nd class, 12s. 6d. 3rd class. The FIRST and SECOND CLASS TICKETS will be available to return by any Train up to and including the MONDAY WEEK following the date of issue, the THIRD CLASS TICKETS being available to return on any day up to the WEDNESDAY following the day of issue. They will also be available to return on the 28th or 29th December, on payment of 2s. extra at Bournemouth and 2s. 6d. extra at Parkstone.
CHEAP THIRD CLASS TICKETS will also be issued on CHRISTMAS DAY to Bournemouth, available to return up to 29th December, inclusive.
For further particulars of additional trains, facilities to the Isle of Wight, return special late trains from country stations, on TUESDAY, 26th December, &c., see programmes.
Tickets can be obtained beforehand at the South Western Company's West End Office, 30, Regent-street, Piccadilly-circus; the Central Office, 9, Grand Hotel Buildings, Charing Cross; the City Office, Exeter Building, Arthur-street West; Swan with Two Necks, Gresham-street, City; Dun Horse-yard, High-street, Boro', &c. PROGRAMMES can also be obtained at any of the above offices, or by post from G. T. WHITE, Superintendent of the Line, Waterloo Station, S.E.
CHAS. SCOTTER, General Manager.

SOUTH EASTERN RAILWAY.
CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS.
SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23rd, A FAST LATE TRAIN to CHISLEHURST, SEVENOAKS, TUNBRIDGE WELLS, HASTINGS, ASHFORD, FOLKESTONE, DOVER, CANTERBURY, RAMSGATE and MARGATE, leaving CHARING CROSS at 12.0 midnight, WATERLOO 12.2 a.m., CANNON STREET 12.8 a.m., and LONDON BRIDGE at 12.12 a.m.
SUNDAY, DEC. 24th, and CHRISTMAS DAY, A FAST TRAIN leaving CHARING CROSS at 10.0 a.m., and CANNON STREET at 10.5 a.m., for ASHFORD, CANTERBURY, DEAL, RAMSGATE and MARGATE. Several Extra Trains will run between other Stations, but the Ordinary Services will be as on Sundays.
BANK HOLIDAY, TUESDAY, DEC. 26th.—Several Trains will be withdrawn and altered. Late Trains will run from London. Continental Express, Mail, &c., Services as usual.
For full particulars of Extension of Time for Return Tickets and other information, see Bills and Holiday Programme.
MYLES FENTON.

£20 TOBACCONISTS Commencing ... free, "How to open respectably." Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, ...

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BATH.—LANSDOWN GROVE HOTEL.—Desirable residence, in beautifully wooded grounds, 400 feet above sea level, facing south, and protected from north and east. Air dry and bracing. Assembly and Pump Rooms within easy distance. Omnibus free to and from Hot Mineral Baths. Billiards. Tennis Lawn.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL METROPOLE.—On the East Cliff, facing the sea, three minutes' from East Station. The largest, and most magnificent Hotel in Bournemouth. Now open to receive visitors. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.

GEORGE ALEXANDER, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.

GEO. BECKFORD, Manager.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 12s. to 15s. per day.
According to position of rooms selected.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange.

H. T. GOULD, Manager.

CIMIEZ (Nice), RIVIERA PALACE HOTEL. Owned and managed by the International Sleeping Car Company. 10 minutes from Nice station. 200 apartments. Full south. Absolutely sheltered. English sanitation. Electric light. Lift. Pension.—Full particulars, & tariff, to reserve accommodation, and for tickets for the journey, apply I. S. C. CO., 122, Pall Mall, London, S.W.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m.

G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Leas. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee room) at Bates Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.

Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 789.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute), with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

LISBON.—GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL (Terminus). Owned and managed by the International Sleeping Car Company. Luxurious hotel. 160 apartments. Moderate tariff. Pension. English sanitation. Fronting the Avenida.—For full particulars, to reserve accommodation, and for tickets for the journey (Sud express), apply I. S. C. Co. 122, Pall Mall, London, S.W.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

PORT OROTAVA, Teneriffe.—HOTEL MARTIANEZ (late GRAND).—First class, standing in a beautiful garden. Shady verandahs, large public and private rooms. Billiards, tennis. Good cooking, good wines, excellent spring water.

Manager, J. R. EGGER.

PORTRUSH, co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL (B. and N. C. Rly). Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing; sea water baths. Table d'hôte dinner. French cuisine. Combined Railway and Hotel Tickets from Belfast.—Illustrated tariff on application to MANAGER.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hôte at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL.—First and leading hotel in St. Leonards. Unequalled position, detached, faces sea, due south. Modern improvements, passenger lift, electric light in every room, handsomely furnished. Home comforts. Terms moderate.—Address, MANAGER.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine English and French; Table d'hote, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

All applications for spaces in this List should be made to the
ADVERTISEMENT MANAGER,
"TRUTH" BUILDINGS, CARTERET STREET,
QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, S.W.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.

TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.

(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.

THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.

SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.

Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.

NO SUPPERS.

TELEPHONE No. 3,507.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn and Lincoln's Inn Fields. A high-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, happily situated, having all modern conveniences and a moderate tariff. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d., at separate tables. FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Write for tariff.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.

(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).
Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.

Address, MANAGER.

THE RUNNACLEAVE, ILFRACOMBE.—Highest average Winter Temperature in England. South aspect. 120 Beautifully-appointed rooms. Thoroughly warmed by hot water apparatus; the place is enclosed for yacht tennis, billiards, photographic dark room, and indoor skating rink free of charge. Moderate tariff.

LANGHAM HOTEL,
PORTLAND-PLACE, LONDON, W.

Situated in the most fashionable, convenient, and healthy locality. Artesian Well Water. Electric Light throughout. Moderate Tariff.
Table d'Hote 6.30 until 8.15.
Under the Management of WALTER GOSDEN.

WHERE SHALL WE SPEND 'XMAS?
At the GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.

Every home comfort. Inclusive terms, per day or week; per week, £3. Large Ball-room for use of visitors. Finest sea views in Jersey, and the largest and best-appointed Hotel in Channel Isles. Hot and cold sea water baths. Skating Rink. For tariff, address—

SYDNEY ROGERS, Manager and Secretary.

ILFRACOMBE.

Warmest Sea-side Winter Resort in England.

ILFRACOMBE HOTEL. The principal Hotel in Ilfracombe.

First-class return tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. Railway, from 1st November to 14th March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance at the ILFRACOMBE HOTEL, £5 5s. each. Available for one month. Express trains leave Waterloo 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Ask for Hotel Tickets, available by all trains.

— THE —

CAP MARTIN HOTEL,
Between Mentone and Monte Carlo,
IS NOW OPEN

(UNDER THE SAME MANAGEMENT).

Perfect Sanitation, Designed and Executed by GEORGE JENNINGS, London.

The Hotel has private Dairy and Laundry. Omnibus meets trains at Mentone.—Address:

MANAGER, CAP MARTIN HOTEL, MENTONE.

HOTELS.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL, 180 Apartments, Patronised by H.R.H. the Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne, K.T. Extensive Structural Alterations and Decorative Repairs have been carried out and 30 NEW BEDROOMS ADDED SINCE OCTOBER, 1891. The entire system of drainage has been remodelled and reconstructed, and the most improved sanitary appliances fitted to all Bath rooms, &c. The Hotel stands in its own private gardens of 2½ acres, faces the sea, and is only five minutes from the Harbour in the lower part of the town and Shorncliffe New West End Station, and is most convenient for Continental travellers. For tariff charges, &c., Please address the Proprietor.

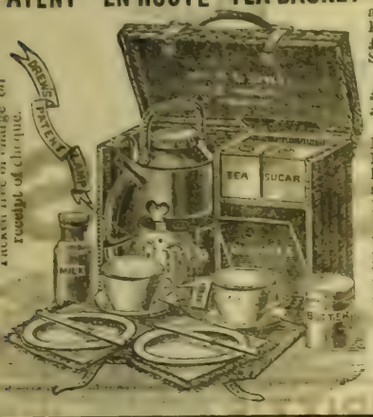
ALBANY HOTEL (ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.

Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Lifts to all floors. Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hôte 7 p.m. Moderate tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWABE, Manager.

MADEIRA. REID'S HOTELS, Santa Clara, Miles's Carmo Hortas, New Hotel. First class, in finest situations. Large gardens, tennis courts. Billiards. Sea bathing. Modern sanitation. All steamers meet. Pamphlet free. PASSMORE, 154, Cheapside, London, E.C.

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET



Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and tall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes.

A REALLY USEFUL CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

HALL'S COCA WINE

A MARVELLOUS RESTORATIVE

Strongly recommended by The Lancet, The British Medical Journal, and Medical Profession. Medical analyses and Testimonials Free by Post.

For SLEEPLESSNESS, MENTAL and PHYSICAL FATIGUE, ANÆMIA, INFLUENZA, CONVALESCENTS. A few glasses only will prove its efficacy.

Extract from Letter of Pharmaceutical Chemist:—

"I had an opportunity last night of testing the value of Hall's Coca Wine as a sleep producer. At 10 p.m. a dose of opium was administered, but at midnight there had been no effect. A glass of Hall's Coca Wine was given, and sleep was produced in half-an-hour."

Of Chemists and Wine Merchants, 3/6 per Bottle, or post free

STEPHEN SMITH & CO., Bow, London.

EXHAUSTION OF BRAIN AND MUSCLE; INSOMNIA.

These are some of the signs of NEURASTHENIA, or NERVE COMPLAINTS. The Modern Treatment is to RESTORE and BUILD UP the Shattered Nervous System by a daily use of COCA-TONIC-CHAMPAGNE (LAURENT-PERRIER).

"I consider it most beneficial to the health of all such "hard workers as myself. "It is a most delightful drink, "which leaves no injurious effects; and of its nerve-restoring "powers as a tonic, I cannot speak too highly."

George Augustus Sala

SOLD BY CHEMISTS AND WINE MERCHANTS.

Pints 45/- per Doz.; Half-Pints 24/- per Doz.

THE IDEAL TONIC FOR INFLUENZA.

Descriptive Pamphlet and Full Reports post free from the Sole Consignees—HERTZ & COLLINGWOOD, 4, SUSSEX PLACE, LONDON, E.C.

THE Best Genuine

THE 4711 BRAND

12/6 or 13/— carriage paid in U.K. Case of six bottles

EAU DE COLOGNE

INVIGORATING.

REFRESHING.

Indispensable for Toilet and Sick Rooms.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

Of most Dealers in Perfumes, or from

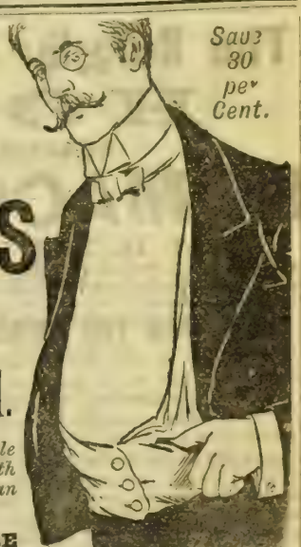
THE 4711 DEPOT, 62, NEW BOND ST., W.

Address, Mr. T. REUTER, Manager.

THE 4711 BRAND

PURE IRISH LINEN SHIRTS

Tailor-Made Direct from Ireland.



Made of the most durable Long Cloth, and fitted with the finest Linen Ireland can produce.

MADE TO MEASURE

FIT AND STYLE GUARANTEED IN THE LATEST FASHION.

Half-a-dozen Pure Irish bespoke Shirts, securely packed, delivered free to any address in the Kingdom for 33/-, 39/-, or 45/-. Foreign Postage Extra.

Sample Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 5/6, 6/6, or 7/6.

Dress Shirts with fine Irish Linen Fittings, Six for 39/-, delivered free. A Sample Dress Shirt to Measure, Post Free for 6/6.

Old Shirts re-fitted with New Irish Linen Fronts, Cuffs, and Neck-bands for 2/3 and 2/9 each. Returned Carriage Free. Coloured Shirts, best quality. French Cambric 30/-, Oxford Cloth 33/- per half-dozen. Patterns Free. Four-fold Irish Linen Collars, best quality, 7/6 per dozen. General Catalogue post free.

For Measure, send size of Collar, Chest, and Height, or an old shirt.

TAAFFE & COLDWELL,

Army Shirt Tailors, 81, Grafton St., Dublin.

CARPETS.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

AXMINSTER PILE CARPETS,
2/11 (American) 3/11 to 4/9

WILTON PILE CARPETS,
3/9 to 4/6

BRUSSELS CARPETS,
2/1 to 3/9

TAPESTRY CARPETS,
1/9 to 2/6

LINOLEUM,
1/- to 4/- per square yard.

DECCAN RUGS,
8/9 each.

CATALOGUES FREE.

TRELOAR & SONS

LUDGATE HILL.

The Burglar Bewildered.

HOW?

THROUGH THE

HOMACOUSTIC

WHAT IS THE HOMACOUSTIC?

The HOMACOUSTIC is a contrivance connected with Speaking Tubes, which entirely supersedes, for indoor purposes, not only the Telephone, but all other existing arrangements for indoor inter-communication.

HOW WAS THE BURGLAR BEWILDERED?

The owner of the house fortunately had a Homacoustic commutator fixed in his bedroom. This commutator placed him in direct communication, not only with his butler's rooms, but with seven other rooms in the house.

Directly he heard the Burglars he explained the state of affairs through the Homacoustic to his butler, and to the occupants of the other rooms; arranged what should be done, and they were thus all enabled to pounce on the Burglars together, and catch them red-handed, without their being even aware that their presence was so much as suspected. There was no ringing of electric bells, no creeping about the house to warn the inmates, NO PERSONAL DANGER.

The Homacoustic is far more dreaded by Burglars than any existing arrangement of "Protection from Burglary," for whereas when an electric bell rings, though it may probably arouse the inmates, it also acts as a warning to the Burglars themselves to be off.

NO HOUSE IS REALLY SAFE

— WITHOUT THE —

HOMACOUSTIC

Independent of its protective advantages, the Homacoustic is invaluable in all private houses for everyday use, and in all properly arranged business premises it is an absolute necessity.

The Homacoustic is automatic, not mechanical. Once fixed, always in working order. Its first cost is its last cost.

With the Homacoustic there is no blowing into pipes. The automatic whistle is always in position. One speaks and listens at the same time. The tube is closed when not in actual use. Ordinary speaking tubes can be utilised.

The HOMACOUSTIC SAVES TIME, TEMPER, & TROUBLE.

HOMACOUSTIC SPEAKING TUBE COMPANY
22, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.

LAIRITZ'S

CELEBRATED

Established 1853. Awarded 18 Medals and Diplomas. For the Relief and Cure of GOUT, RHEUMATISM, COLDS, &c.

Wadding in packets, Knee-Caps, Inside Soles, Oil, EXTRACT FOR BATH, Lozenges. Of all the LEADING CHEMISTS everywhere. Flannels, Underclothing, Knitting Yarn. Sold by all leading Drapers and Hosiers.

Wholesale Depot for Fabrics only: WELCH, MARGETSON & Co., 16, Cheapside, London.

Caution.—Observe the Tree Trade Mark with Signature on each piece.

PINE WOOL.

ATKINSON'S WHITE ROSE.

"A CHARMING SCENT."— H.R.H. The DUCHESS OF YORK. "THE SWEETEST OF SWEET ODOURS."

ATKINSON'S IS THE ONLY GENUINE.

Of all Chemists, Perfumers, and Dealers, and of the Manufacturers, 24, Old Bond Street, London.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

SIX GOLD MEDALS

Goddard's Plate Powder

Non-Mercurial.

THE BEST and SAFEST article for CLEANING SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE. Sold in Boxes, 1s., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each, by Grocers, Oilmen, Chemists, &c., everywhere.

SCOTT ADIE

THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE

115 & 115a REGENT STREET
LONDON W

For Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Maudes
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns

Telegraphic Address—Scott Adie London

Foreign Medicines
& Toilet Articles &c
Roberts & Co.
Chemists. 5 R. de la Paix Paris.
Keep at their London house
76 New Bond St. W.
French & Foreign
Medicines &c

NOALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES. Londonderry Wallsend, 34s.; tington Wallsend, 33s.; Primrose, 32s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 31s. 6d. per ton. h on delivery —Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

21/- 21/-

THE "CHELSEA" DINNER SERVICE.

Groups of Flowers in Electric Blue on Ivory Ground

21s.

"Cottage Set," as pattern (50 pieces) £1 1 0
Full Set for 12 persons (108 pieces) £3 3 0

If for the country, 1s. 3d. and 2s. 6d. extra for package

DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, AND TEA SERVICES

ALFRED B. PEARCE,
39, Ludgate-hill, London
Established 1796

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.
WHAT TO DRINK?

PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric states of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement, and biliousness.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.
" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W.

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

Adresse de M. SUEZ. 9 Rue de Penny PARIS

VINAIGRE LACTÉ de SUEZ POUR LA TOILETTE

EAU de SUEZ
VACCINE for the MOUTH
Strengthens the Gums
Perfumes the Breath
The only Dentifrice securing
BEAUTIFUL TEETH

POUDRE et PATE DENTIFRICES DE SUEZ

London Agents WILCOX & Co., 239, Oxford Street.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

events the Hair from falling off.
stores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.
ing delicately perfumed it leaves no unpleasant odour.
NOT a dye, and therefore does not stain the skin or even white linen.
ould be in every house where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.
k your Chemist or Hairdresser for

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per large Bottle.

Prepared only by the
GLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Ltd.,
33, FARRINGDON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.

IS THE BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE IN THE WORLD.

Prevents the Decay of Teeth.
Renders the Teeth Pearly White.
Is perfectly Harmless and Delicious to the Taste.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World
2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER.

Put up in Glass Jars, price 1s.

MAPPIN & WEBB'S
PATENT TABLE KNIVES.

SAMPLES & PRICES FREE.

"UNEQUALLED FOR HARD WEAR."

Only London Addresses,
2, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C.
(Facing the Mansion House)
158, OXFORD STREET, W.

MANUFACTORY—NORFOLK STREET, SHEFFIELD.

PUREST IN ENGLAND.

BOURNE TABLE WATERS

SODA, SELTZER, LITHIA, POTASH, LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, ETC.

Supplied in 6 Dozen Cases Carriage Paid by

Analysis, &c., on Application.

R. M. MILLS & CO., BOURNE, LINCOLNSHIRE.

West-End Agent, D. WHEATLEY, 16A, North Audley-st., W.
City Agents, ALEX. D. RAE & CO. (late Hardy & Co.), Chemists, 23, Fenchurch-street, and 6, Railway-place, E.C.;
And of all CHEMISTS, WINE MERCHANTS, &c.

JULES Established 1796. AY, FRANCE.

AMUSET'S CHAMPAGNE

The Lancet says: "We have analysed it, and are able to give it unqualified praise. It is free from adulteration of any kind, and possesses a very delicate flavour."

Price 72s. per Dozen, Cash.
Delivered at any railway station in U.K. From all Wine Merchants, or at 22, Great Tower Street, London, E.C.

FOR

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS &c.

SAVORY & MOORE'S

DATURA TATULA.

Cigars and Cigarettes—Boxes, 3s., 6s., 8s., and 15s., Tobacco—Tins, 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. For Non-Smokers, Pastilles and Powder for Burning and Inhalation, Tins, each containing a censer for burning, 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s. Of Chemists everywhere.

THE LATE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
SIR MORELL MACKENZIE,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,
MISS EMILY FAITHFUL,
THE LATE GEN. W. T. SHERMAN,

and many other persons of distinction, have testified to the remarkable efficacy of Himrod's Cure for Asthma.

Established nearly a Quarter of a Century.

Prescribed by the Medical Faculty throughout the world. It is used as an Inhalation and without any after bad effects. A free Sample and detailed testimonials free by post. In tins, 4s. 3d. British Depôt 46, Holborn Viaduct, London; and of NEWBERY & SONS, BARCLAY & SONS, LYNCH & CO., J. SANGER & SONS, W. EDWARDS & SON, JOHN THOMPSON, Liverpool, and all wholesale Houses.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE

"CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE is entirely free from any poison or metallic impregnation, does not contain any injurious ingredient, and is a good, safe, and useful medicine."

ALFRED SWAINE TAYLOR, M.D., F.R.S., Lecturer on Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology.

Warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities from WHATEVER cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Eczema, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Sores of all kinds its effects are marvellous. It is the only real specific for Gout and Rheumatic Pains, for it removes the CAUSE from the blood and bones. Thousands of testimonials. In bottles, 2s. 9d. and 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent for 33 or 132 Stamps by the Proprietors—THE LINCOLN AND MIDLAND COUNTIES DRUG CO., LINCOLN.

BEWARE OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS

FARM AND COLONIZATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

DIRECTORS:

WILLIAM WRIGHT, Esq., J.P., Wollaton, Nottingham, Chairman.
FRANCIS W. FOX, Esq., 14, Dean's Yard, Westminster.
HAROLD J. RECKITT, Esq., J.P., Winestead Hall, Hull.
JOHN BROOK BRAY, Esq., Clapham, Polegate, Sussex.
BENJAMIN GLASGOW, Esq., 77, Oxford-gardens, North Kensington, W.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of supplying RELIABLE INFORMATION to intending settlers abroad, and also to give them introduction to the Agents of the Company, who can assist them in any difficulty, and BEFRIEND them until they are sufficiently established to rely upon themselves.

EMPLOYMENT WILL BE FOUND where a living can be earned until the settler is able to farm on his own account.

ASSISTANCE WILL BE GIVEN in the choice of a farm for either special or general farming, also for cotton planting or orange growing.

The Directors and Secretary have a large experience in the requirements of settlers, both at home and abroad; the AGENTS ABROAD are men in good position, and are PERSONALLY KNOWN to the Secretary and some of the Directors.

For further information apply to
VICTOR M. HOLLINSWORTH, Secretary.
11, Charing Cross, London, S.W.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.

UNION DEPOSIT BANK.

No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.
[ESTABLISHED 1867.]

ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,
From £30 to £5,000,
To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their
NOTE OF HAND ALONE.

ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.

Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.

NO SURETIES REQUIRED.

Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.
FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.
A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.
Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.
Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.
Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.
Apply to the SECRETARY.

'Xmas and New Year's Gifts.

CARTER 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE
PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE

For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1.1s.

INVALID COMFORTS

Walking Machine for the lame
Adjustable Couches and Beds, £2.
Exercising Chairs £5. 5s.
Reclining Boards £1.1s. Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d. Easy Chairs £2. 10s.
Commode Chairs £2. 10s.

Carrying Chairs, £1.
Bed Tables 7s. 6d.
Crutches 10s. 6d.
Folding Couch Chairs 10s. Bed Rests 10s.

BATH CHAIRS

From £1. 5s.

SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS

£2. 2s.

Invalid Carriages

Perambulators

Rubber Tyres
From £1. 10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.
Telgrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

BOROUGH of DOVER. FIRST ISSUE of STOCK (Free of Stamp Duty).—Issue of £70,000 £3 per cent Redeemable Stock, under e Provisions of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, and the gulations made thereunder by the Local Government Board in pursuance of a ment order of that Board. Interest at £3 per cent. per annum payable half-arly. The first Dividend on the amount of Stock allotted will be payable on e 1st April, 1894, after which Dividends will be payable on the 1st April and October in each year. Minimum price of Issue to be at par, payable as lows:

On Application 5 per cent on the amount of the Tender, on Allotment 5 ach of the amount tendered for and accepted as when added to the deposit ll leave cse to be paid for each £100 of Stock allotted on Thursday, the 15th y of February, 1894 40 per cent., on Thursday the 15th day of March, 1894, per cent., payment in full may be made on allotment, if desired, in which se three months interest will be paid on the 1st April, 1894. Otherwise the st payment of interest will be calculated from the dates of the payment of the lotment and its respective instalments.

Dividend Warrants can, in accordance with the regulations of the Local overnment Board, be transmitted by post if so desired by any Stockholder, and ll be payable at the Head Office of the London and County Banking Company, mited, Lombard street, or at any of the Branches.

The London and County Banking Company, Limited, are authorised by the rporation of Dover to receive Tenders for the above £140,000 Dover rporation Stock, bearing Interest at £3 per cent. per annum, payable lf-yearly.

The issue of the Stock is required for the purpose of repaying £71,770, the lances of existing Loans borrowed at a higher interest, and to carry out Works Street Improvements and for Local Public objects sanctioned by the Local overnment Board.

The Stock and Dividends will be charged as follows:—

£1,780 Stock upon the Borough and Liberty Rates.
£14,580 Stock upon the Borough Fund and Borough Rates.
£147,700 Stock upon the District Fund and General District Rates.

The total Debt of the Corporation exclusive of the above £71,770 to be paid is £12,200, but of this amount £1,000 will be repaid by the Sale of Surplus nds within three years, and the balance is being repaid by regular annual talments.

The present rateable values are as follows:—

The Borough and Liberties £227,001.
The Borough £147,027.

The power of rating is unlimited. The population of the Borough at the last nsus was 33,300 and is steadily increasing.

The growth of the population and rateable value is shown by the following ures:—

1881. Population 30,270. Rateable value of the Borough £128,857
1891. 33,300. £145,466

Complete systems of Sewerage and Water supply were executed in the rough in the years 1853-5, and the whole of the original debt borrowed for ese purposes was extinguished in 1883. The Water Works have produced ring the past six years an average surplus and revenue of £1,000 in aid of the neral District Fund, while the Water Rates on houses rated at £60 and wards are less than 4d. in the £.

The General District Rate for 1893 is 1s. 6d. in the £, which is three-fifths 1d. above the average Rates during the past five years. It is believed that ere is no other Borough on the South Coast which has such low Rates as ese.

Among the Properties and Revenues of the Corporation charged by the ock are:—

1. The Town Hall and adjacent buildings and land, and sundry other properties used for Municipal and Sanitary purposes.
2. The Water and Drainage Works, which are above referred to.
3. The Coal Dues raised under Local Acts, which realise a nett Income of £4,200.
4. The Market and Museum buildings, and the Market Tolls, which produce a surplus revenue of £100 per annum.
5. Private Improvement Expenses raised under the Dover Corporation (Sea Defences) Act, 1877, charged on the properties specially benefited, and representing the interest and sinking fund on balance loans now due (included in the amount to be raised by Stock) of £7,200.

The Contributions in aid of Rates paid by the Treasury and County Council ring the last financial year ended 25th March last amounted to £3,800. This m was not exceptionally large.

The Stock will be redeemable at par, at the option of the Corporation after e expiration of 20 years from the creation thereof, provided the Stock is not oner extinguished by purchase, either in the open market or by agreement th the Stockholders. It must be redeemed or purchased and extinguished thin 50 years from the creation thereof.

The regulations of the Local Government Board require the Corporation to ovide a Stock Dividends Fund for payment of the Interest on the Stock and a ock Redemption Fund for the redemption and extinction and the purchase d extinction of Stock.

Returns relating to Stock and the Redemption Fund will from time to time made to the Local Government Board.

The Books of the Stock will be kept by the London and County Banking mpany, Limited, at 21, Lombard-street, London, the appointed Registrar, ere transfers of Stock will be made free of charge.

A quotation in the Official List of the London Stock Exchange will be applied r in due course.

Tenders, on the form accompanying the Prospectus with the required deposit, ust be delivered at the Head Office of the London and County Banking mpany, Limited, 21, Lombard-street, London, by Two o'clock on Thursday, e 4th day of January, 1894, at which time and place they will be opened in e presence of representatives of the Corporation and of such applicants as ay attend.

Tenders, with the relative deposit, must be enclosed in a sealed envelope and arked outside "Tenders for Dover Corporation Stock."

The Stock will be alloted to the highest bidder, but no Tender will be accepted a lower price than £100 per cent.

Tenders at different prices must be made on separate forms.

Tenders including fractions of one shilling other than sixpence will not be eferentially accepted. Tenders at the lowest price accepted will be subject proportionate diminution.

Tenders must be for sums of not less than £10, and in multiples of £10.

Where no allotment is made the deposit of £5 per cent. which must accom-ny each Tender will be returned in full, and in case of partial allotment the lance of deposit will be applied towards payment of the first instalment.

Scrip Certificates will be issued by the London and County Banking Company, mited, upon allotment.

If default be made in any payment at the proper date the deposit and instal-ents previously made will be liable to forfeiture.

The Stock will be inscribed in the Stock Registers on or after the 15th March, 94, but Scrip paid up in full, in anticipation, may be inscribed forthwith.

Prospectuses and forms of Tender may be obtained from the London and County nking Company, Limited, 21, Lombard-street, E.C., or any of its Branches, om Messrs. Grieveson Grant & Co., Stockbrokers, 61, Old Broad-street, ndon, and at the Offices of the Town Clerk, Dover.

Dover, 14th December, 1893.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to DVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than eir own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the ock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers ay be obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803. 1, Old Broad st., E.C. & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Capital £1,000,000. Paid up, £400,000. Total funds, £1,600,000. H. COLLINGRIDGE, Gen. Man.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited. No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.
General Accidents. | Personal Injuries.
Railway Accidents. | Death by Accident.
C. HARDING, Manager.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED. REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £10,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES.

LONDON OFFICE: 81, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

ASSETS OVER .. .. £31,000,000.
SURPLUS EXCEEDS .. .. £7,000,000.

This Society originated the Tontine System of Life Assurance, under which the premiums paid form a lucrative investment, and not an expense, affording provision for old age as well as immediate family provision in the event of death.

ABSOLUTE SECURITY. LOW PREMIUMS. LARGE PROFITS.

Before assuring elsewhere, send for Prospectus and Illustrative Pamphlets.

A. MUNKITTRICK, Manager for Great Britain and Ireland.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.
(FIRE.)

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.

The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

BUYERS and SELLERS of quoted and unquoted Commercial, Industrial, and Mining Securities should communicate with

THE COMMERCIAL STOCK and SHARE CORPORATION, Limited, Stock and Share Dealers, 10, Throgmorton-avenue, London, E.C. Telegraphic Address: "UNQUOTED, LONDON." All Mining Shares dealt in at close current quotations. Advances made on Stocks and Shares at moderate rates. Send for List, giving numerous quotations not published by any other firm, post free.

REVERSIONS.—The Reversion Mortgage Trust purchase reversions and life incomes, or lend thereon at 4 per cent. per annum. No charge made unless business results.—Apply to Messrs. FELDMAN, 34, New Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, London. Solicitors' and Estate Agents' attention particularly requested.

TO CAPITALISTS.—WANTED, a Gentleman, with £5,000 to £6,000, to FINANCE the ESTABLISHMENT of a Grand HOTEL, with Concert Gardens, &c., to suit English visitors, at Marienbad (Bohemia). There is at present a rare chance to acquire suitable premises at low price.—Write, F. K., care of Gould's Advertising Offices, 54, New Oxford-street, W.C.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT.

BEAUTIFULLY COOL AND SWEET SMOKING.

Sold only in 1-Ounce Packets, and 2, 4, 8-Ounce, and 1-lb. Tins, which ke the Tobacco in fine Smoking condition.

Ask at all Tobacco Sellers, Stores, &c., and take no other.

SMOKERS ARE CAUTIONED AGAINST IMITATIONS

The GENUINE bears the Trade Mark—"NOTTINGHAM CASTLE"—on every Packet and Tin.

PLAYER'S NAVY CUT CIGARETTES, in Packets containing 12,
And Tins of 24, 50, and 100.

By Royal Warrants of Appointment to HER MAJESTY the QUEEN,
H.R.H. The Princess of Wales; H I M. The Empress Frederick; H.M The Queen of Denmark; H.R.H. The Duchess of Teck, &c.; and under the Patronage of th Courts of Great Britain, Germany, Russia, Austria, Italy, Denmark, Spain, Sweden and Norway, and Greece, &c.

Egerton Burnett's Royal Serges

AND HIGH-CLAS DRESS
MATERIALS

For WINTER, comprise a large and choice collection of Hopsacks, Whipcords, Amazons, and all the Latest Novelties for the present Season for Ladies', Children's, and Gentlemen's Wear.
ANY LENGTH SOLD. NEW PATTERNS POST FREE. NO AGENTS.
The ROYAL NAVY BLUE SERGES will not turn a bad colour with Sun, Rain, or Salt Water.
Carriage Paid on Orders of £1 in value to any Railway Station in the United Kingdom. Goods packed for exportation.
SPECIAL RATES for the CONTINENT, INDIA, and the COLONIES. Mention this Magazine.

EGERTON BURNETT, Royal Serge Warehouse, Wellington, Somerset, Englan

PEARS

·ich· diene·

SOAP MAKERS
BY Special Appointment
To HER MAJESTY

The Queen

and HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS The Prince of Wales.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 773.—ACROSTIC ON CHRISTMAS.

R. F. (real name and address will be given next week) £2 2 0

"TRUTH" TOY AND DOLL SHOW.—SPECIAL NOTICE.

As this number of TRUTH will be in the hands of many London readers on Wednesday morning, the 20th inst., it may be well to mention here that the TRUTH Toy and Doll Show is open to-day, Wednesday, at the Royal Albert Hall between the hours of 10.30 a.m. and 10.30 p.m. The Exhibition is a first rate one, and it is hoped the attendance will be very large. Next week a full and detailed account of the Show will be published in TRUTH.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand: whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 778.

It seems certain that the present Government intends to increase the number of ships in our Navy to an appreciable extent. Various rumours as to the number of ships to be added have appeared in the papers, but in several quarters it has been stated that not less than seven first-class line of Battle-ships will be laid down. Assuming that this is to be the case, it is proposed to offer the usual Prize of Two Guineas this week to the competitor who suggests

THE BEST NAMES FOR THE SEVEN FIRST-CLASS BATTLE-SHIPS IN QUESTION.

It may be well to state that the suggestions should not be of a satirical or humorous kind, but such as could be, if necessary, turned to practical account by the Admiralty. Each competitor must only suggest seven names in all, and the lists must reach me at the latest by the morning of Monday, January 1.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 772.

I may say, in regard to this competition that the suggestions were not, generally speaking, of a very practical character. Some, however, may possibly be turned to account in connection with a future Toy Show, it was too late to act upon any of them on the present occasion. Meanwhile, it has been decided to divide the Prize between "MERLE" and "C."

PRIZE SUGGESTIONS.

I think that if the services of a good ventriloquist could be obtained it would be most amusing and interesting. He could make the dolls speak, from the smallest to the largest, and much merriment might be got in this way. Doubtless, if this idea was carried out, a request made in TRUTH would bring offers from some who would be very pleased to give their services gratuitously for such a good work.—C.

We have all heard and read of Edison's phonograph, but how few have had an opportunity of seeing and hearing it at work. I think if some well-known public personage could be induced to entrust one of these instruments with a short address appropriate to the occasion, that its reproductions to the audience would add immensely to the attractions of the Doll Show.—Merle.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 773.

The Prize in this competition has been awarded to TILLY SLOWBOY, who as Christmas presents for the given potentates (see TRUTH of December 14) suggested the following articles: 1. An Ottoman, to be sat upon as occasion requires. 2. A new and improved Sedan. 3. A medal from the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. 4. Barcelona nuts to crack. 5. A Dutch doll, a Holland pinafore, and a pot of Orange marmalade. 6. Smiles on Thrift. 7. A Russian bear with his claws cut. 8. A portrait of Alexander the Conqueror—up to date. 9. A bottle of Anti-fat.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

EAST ANGLIA. Thanks for your letter. I can assure you that there is in the present case no possibility of the collusion you fear. Special precautions are taken to guard against it.

M. W. The Puzzle was given about two years ago.

JINKS. It will be attended to in the general article next week.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 775.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

BOUTS-RIMES ON THE WORDS — MAXIM, TON, TAX HIM, RUN, STRIKING, SPOOK, VIKING, CROOK.

BUXTON'S ENTIRE GUIDE TO HOT GOSPELLERS.

Would you spread the British Empire and Christ's Kingdom here by Maxim?
First give some King in Africa bad rifles by the ton,
Swindle him, pick a quarrel, kill his envoys, and then tax him
With making war, and shoot his folk, like rabbits, as they run.
The Church will bless the likeness of your work to Paul's, as striking
(The Nonconformist conscience has gone hunting of the Spook*);
The Press will call you—Pirate?—nay, but "reincarnate Viking";
For money rules the world, nor stinks, though won by hook and crook.

* Personally conducted by Mr. Stead, M.S.H. Master of Spook Hounds).

Skriker.

THE NEW SCARE.

The B.P. must furnish the Maxim,
The cruiser, the eighty-one ton;
He cares not how much we may tax him,
To any extent he will run.
His patience is really quite striking,
He's mild as a seventh-rate Spook,
And will find (for he will be a Viking)
The money by hook or by crook.

M. T. P.

A CAPITAL OFFENDER.

"The devil take the hindmost," is his maxim,
He weighs his gains ill-gotten by the ton;
With broken faith or contract should you tax him,
He laughs: he takes such trifles in his run.
His conscience, though his starving hands be striking,
He scorns, as if the shadow of a Spook,
And, fit descendant of the robber-Viking,
Becomes a millionaire by hook or crook.

Arthémée.

The coal dealer said, "It's an excellent Maxim,
That nineteen hundredweight go to the ton."
I replied that I would 'fore a Magistrate tax him
With fraud. He immediately started to run;
What, then, shall we do, while the miners are striking?
(Say! shall I inquire through Planchette from a Spook?)
With such robbers, far worse than a Goth or a Viking,
When he must have fuel by hook or by crook!

C. G.

"Live and let live!" hug to heart the old Maxim!
Think of the miner while burning your ton.
Ride the good steed, but, ah! don't overtax him,
Lest at the fence he come down with a run.
Strike if you like, but there's measure in striking,
Fight your chimera, or flirt with your Spook,
Loud sings the surge, and the heart of the Viking
Laughs as he breasts it by hook or by crook.

Fairy Knowe.

A PESSIMIST'S VIEW.

Life, to its core, is but a bore, though led by line and Maxim,
Its pleasures drain but by the grain, its sorrows by the ton;
Hopes cheat man sore, spread wings and soar, hard toil for bread doth tax him,
Friends at his side have changed or died, as on its circles run;
He strives for fame, he's not to blame, but can do nothing striking,
Write fairy page, for youth or age, or legend grim of Spook.
Such then life's plan, yet faint not, man, stand strong like hoary Viking,
Who fought at odds, 'gainst man and gods—no lot but has its crook.

Percutor.

Come, all ye sucking Dramatists, and hear my golden maxim,
A pennyweight of foolery is worth of sense a ton,
Your patron, Bull, is scant of brains, be cautious how you tax him,
Or I bet my bottom dollar that your blooming piece won't run.
Why! dear old Will's a case in point, the work he did most striking
Was the story of the Danish prince and his paternal Spook;
Yet a little bird has told me he dropped money o'er that Viking,
While he pouched the "oof" with Falstaff and young Harry on the crook.

Mechanic.

THE AFTERMATH IN MATABELELAND.

Mow down your Matabele with a Maxim;
Scatter your shot and powder by the ton;
Then, when you've done that, "civilise" and tax him—
Whatever of him hasn't cut and run.
And if, some midnight, just as twelve is striking,
You're haunted by a Matabele Spook,
Call up the hardy spirit of the Viking
To banish him, by hook or else by crook.

Rabelais.

RECIPE FOR A MODERN NAVAL ENGAGEMENT.

If you like a varied flavour, mix the clatter of the Maxim
With the dull and heavy booming of the sixty-seven ton
(The dish is rather costly to John Bull, but we can tax him);
Add the splash and whirr of Whitehead speeding forth upon its run.
Use with care the shock and quiver of the ram as it is striking
(Just a touch is quite sufficient); beg from Borderland a Spook, Season freely with his wisdom, mixed with courage of a Viking,
Serve up hot to your opponent till he strikes, by hook or crook.

Jack.

RE LOBENGULA.

With shells convince, convert him by a Maxim,
Confirm his faith with round shot by the ton;
With every crime imaginable tax him,
Then "bind him over," he's too fat to run.
Put up your Dukes! strike hard, and keep on striking,
Till every brave he boasts turns to a Spook.
To-day we play the buccaneering Viking,
To-morrow raise the Gospel shepherd's crook.

Dandelion.

Here's a sound economical Maxim:
"If a man has got wealth by the ton—
Is in fact a monopolist—tax him!"
That's the way our finance should be run.
Your plutocrat's wrath will be striking,
He'll swear like a damnified Spook,
For his motto is that of the Viking,
"Get plunder—by hook or by crook."

Merton.

Kill them with powder and shot and your murderous Maxim,
What does it matter though blacks should be slain by the ton?
Cares not your chief though his country with murder should tax him,
Is there not gold to be got when the savages run?
Oh, not a cent! It's for England and glory you're striking!
Then bathe in their blood in a way that would frighten the Spook
Of a decent Fijian or semi-barbarian Viking,
For gold must be got, and you'll get it by hook or by crook.

Tor.

What! vi et armis! this your mode? Is this your Christian Maxim?
"All's fair in war." Is nigger's flesh, when felled, so cheap per ton?
The savage greedy? we, methinks, can ill afford to tax him
With lust of land or tyranny—this plea for years we've run.
Will no one show us what we are—in words convincing, striking?
O TRUTH, raise up some monitor, evoke some startling Spook,
The casus belli to declare—the ghost of some old Viking.
Aut ci aut dolis—Anglice!—of course, by hook or crook.

Danehill.

A SHORT WAY (THE BRITISH) WITH THE ABORIGINE.

We preach a God of kindness with a Maxim,
We flood his kraals with Bibles by the ton;
We take his land away, and then we tax him!
He cannot fight, we will not let him run.
We lay the blame—our honesty is striking!—
Upon our ancestors' collective Spook;
For, since we are descended from the Viking,
We needs must plunder still by hook or crook!

Tubs.

A MODERN MAN-O'-WAR.

Upon the mizen and the fore are Gattling guns and Maxim,
And in each turret, fore and aft, is a one-and-eighty ton;
To pay for such a Man-o'-War, the landsman, don't they tax him.
Yet, if the ship e'er puts to sea, perchance ashore she'll run.
When safely moored at anchor, the appearance is most striking;
And I am confidently told by my especial spook,
That such a sight was never seen in days of Norse and Viking—
But, in these times, show must be made by any hook or crook.
Ellon.

Though the Navy be our safeguard, though you recollect the Maxim,
"Penny wise and one pound foolish," still, at pounc sand pounds per ton,
Mighty warships weigh so heavy, when his rulers come to tax him,
That the Britisher may shirk it, and from such expenses run.
What shall be the nation's future? Who can tell? It would be striking,
If but 'Julia" could forecast it, Mr. Stead's familiar Spook!
Shall we rule the waves triumphant, like the old sea-roving Viking?
Or, disabled, shall we yield the sword and take the shepherd's crook?
Azzolino.

It will soon become a maxim,
"Coal will be two pounds a ton."
Poor consumer! how twill tax him,
Make him wish away to run;
While the colliers are striking,
He would fain become a spook,
But they'll bounce him like a Viking,
Have his cash by hook or crook.
Selah.

AN ELEGIAC.

Martyr'd Matabele! mowed down by the murderous Maxim,
Laid low by the lethal lead vomited forth by the ton;
Oh! brazen colossus of Rhodes, with murder and rapine we tax him,
Floating a company, making rivers of red blood to run.
Silent the moon looks down, his beams on dead warriors striking,
Spectres of slaughter'd are there, each shadowy form like a Spook,
Gaunt, and tall, and grim, like the ghost of an old Norse Viking,
Or shepherd seen through a mist, bearing a spear for his crook.
Hippo.

They are chasing poor old Lo Ben with a Maxim,
They've been firing bullets at him by the ton;
For with daring to reside at home they tax him,
But wouldn't I like to see him make them run!
Now this noble black presents a picture striking,
But his enemies of him would make a Spook;
Still his guards are each one bold as any Viking,
So I hope he'll get his rights by hook or crook.
Shlowmow.

Economy in '93 should e'er have been our Maxim,
Especially when coals were raised to "two pound and two" a ton;
But the ordinary Briton waxes wrathful when you "tax him,"
With his late financial failures which have had so long a run;
Then the progress made in psychical research is really striking,
For we've now a choice variety of every kind of Spook
From "the skeleton in armour" of a pre-historic Viking,*
To the up-to-date "Mahatma" that we raise by hook or crook.
Dick.

* Longfellow's poem of that name.

We have quelled the noble savage with our milita
Maxim,
That can rattle out its messages of bullets by t
ton;
Then when he's completely conquered we shall ta
and we shall tax him,
Give him Missionaries—and whisky—in t ordinary run!
On the "Nonconformist conscience" the effect really striking,
Every time we chance to change a Matabele t
spook;
"Such a massacre" it screams, "would shame t hardest-hearted Viking!
Oh! this bad old English policy of 'grab,' hook or crook!"
Burgage.

Stanzas have also been received (in addition those acknowledged last week) from A. A. A., Chi Nincompoop, Singelet, Nibs, Tulip, Hen Robi
Pen Insula, East Anglia, Sol, Crossways, A Con-Ra
Tiennius, Fay, Excelsior, Stanchion, Dabs, Ke
Usk, Sartor, Almaviva, Lunatic, Barnsdule, Sela
Danehill, Scio Marta, Cheficus, A. J. W., Bang
Comtesse Olga, L. S., E. N. S., Humanity, Zobeed
Ivy Leaves, Yunij, Geranium, Bulrushes, C. Reve
Solebar, Over Sixty, New Chum, Old Bird, Gracele
H. B. Aitch, Spookers, Attila, Santos, Hope, Nem
Spook, E. Culverhouse, Jubas, H. S. B., Sinona, V
Marshall, Shellback, Luna, Egavlas, Nasl, Felsber
Sofalit, Cochran Field, Sheedah, Esperanza, E
celsior, Fraser, Ivanhoe, Sibyl, Esau, Blarne
Fattymugg, Whig, Braeo, R. M., Infelix, Ara
John Ridd, Caterham, W. W., Anna, Peewi
Mostyn, Swish, J. B. B., Argentina, M. B., Hol
Berry, S. C., Jumps, Widder, Platinum, Cygn
X. P. A., Jabberwock, Democritos, Earnest Selin
Richman, Tousie, Hope, Jetithea, Phos, Moonshin
Espérance, Vox, Flicker, Maia, Thorgrim, Sema
Quartus, Nodding Violet, J. McGrigor Allan, V
taire, Gwynant, Bel Demonio, Ku-Klux-Klan, We Old Dutch, Malignant, Era, Lifting Jack, Chauc
Junior, Eva Charlotte.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON

Very agreeable to take.
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,
HÆMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.
Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists
E. GRILLON,
69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.

A PHENOMENAL SUCCESS.
FLOR DE DINDIGUL
AN EXCELLENT MEDIUM MILD INDIAN CIGAR.
A most delightful weed. Sample four or five 1s., or free by return post 12 stamps.
BEWLAY'S 49, STRAND, W.C.; 74, STRAND (EAST INDIA HOUSE); & 143, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.
For Christmas Presents par excellence. Descriptive Price List post free.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.
This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

BENGER'S FOOD.
For Infants, Children, and Invalids.
"Humanly speaking, 'Benger's Food' entirely saved baby's life. He could digest nothing until we began the 'Benger.' He is now rosy and fattening rapidly."—Extract from Private Letter.
GOLD MEDAL AWARDED
INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION.
TINS, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s., OF ALL CHEMISTS, &c.

HEALTHY FLESH
means life, energy, health and power to overcome or withstand disease. When we are losing in weight it is a sign something is wrong. We need flesh. We can have flesh by taking
Scott's Emulsion
Not loose, superficial flesh, but flesh that is solid and healthy. Thin, angular women ought to have the flesh Scott's Emulsion supplies. It makes angles give way to curves of beauty. Physicians, the world over, endorse it.
BRONCHITIS,
Coughs, Colds, and Throat Troubles are cured by Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with hypophosphites of lime and soda.
SCOTT & BOWNE, Lim., 47, Farringdon-st., London, E.C.
All Chemists, 2/6 and 4/6.

AN AROMATIC FRAGRANCE
is imparted to the mouth by the use of Sozodont. It is beyond doubt the cleanest, purest, and best tooth wash ever offered to the public. No lady ever used Sozodont without approving of its cleansing and purifying properties, and the flattering testimonials that have been bestowed upon it by eminent Dentists speak volumes of praise for its merits.
SOZODONT
though efficient and powerful is absolutely harmless, for it contains neither mineral nor acid; it is wholly vegetable in its origin.

USEFUL

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

VERY BEAUTIFUL.

"VINOLIA" SHAVING STICKS.

Yields a most soothing substantial lather.

TOILET, in Silver Metal Cases, 1/-, 1/6, 2/6
VESTAL, do. do. 2/6

VESTAL "VINOLIA" SOAP.

FOR PRESENTS.

Per Box of 3 Tablets 7/6

TOILET (OTTO) "VINOLIA" SOAP.

FOR THE TOILET AND NURSERY

Per Box of 3 Tablets 2/6

"VINOLIA" POWDER.

FOR REDNESS, ROUGHNESS, &c. &c.
Price 1/9 per Box.
In White, Pink, and Cream tints.

"VINOLIA" PERFUMES.

In nineteen kinds:
Vinolia Bouquet,
Marequil,
Jequilla,
Lovaria,
White Rose,
Wood Violet,
White Heliotrope,
Ess. Bouquet,
Musk,
Amaryllis,

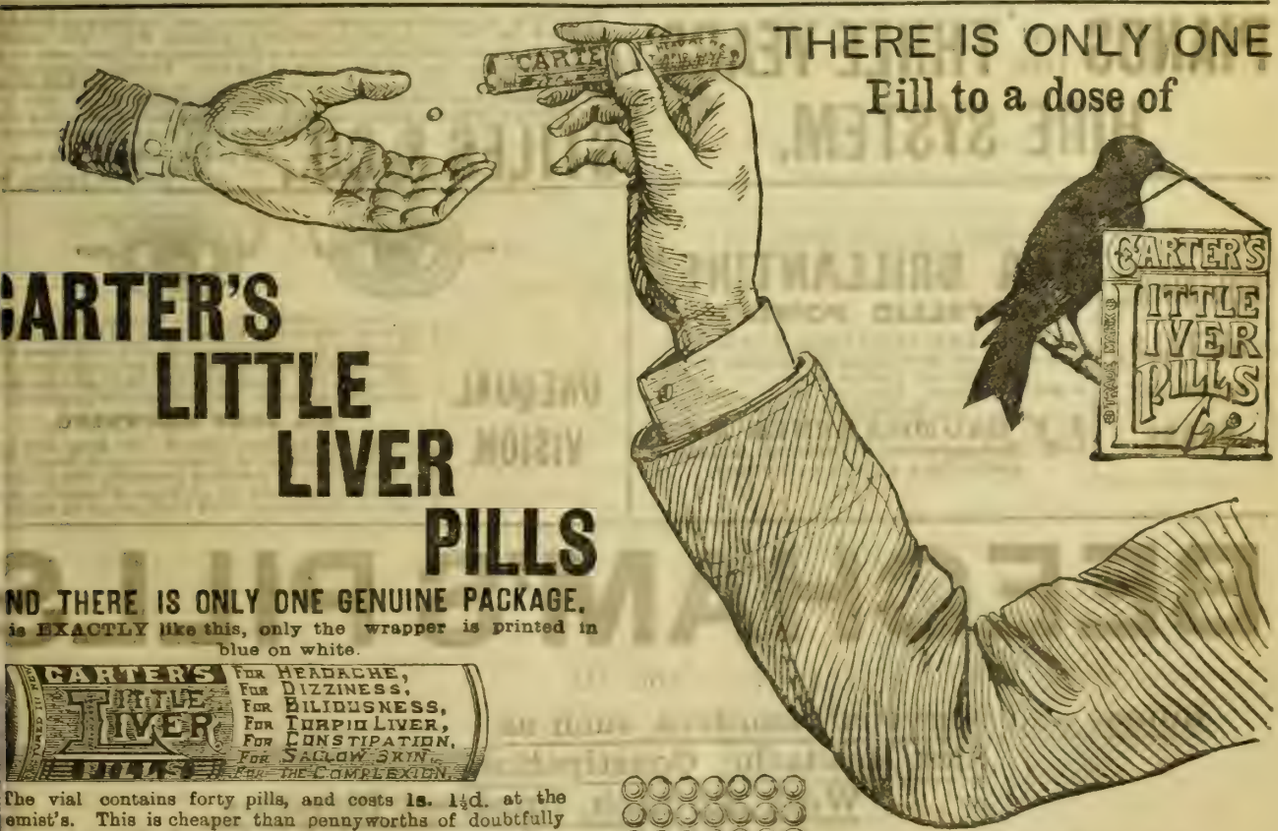
In nineteen kinds:
White Lilac,
Frangipanni,
Jockey Club,
Marechal Niel,
Millefleur,
Stephanotis,
Opoponax,
Ylang Ylang,
Ambergris,

Reduced from 1/9 to 1/3 per Bottle.

"VINOLIA" SHAVING SOAP.

TOILET, in Porcelain-lined Metal Boxes .. 2/-
Vestal, in Silver-Metal Boxes 4/6

BLONDEAU ET CIE., RYLAND ROAD, LONDON, N.W.



THERE IS ONLY ONE
Pill to a dose of

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

ND THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE PACKAGE.

is EXACTLY like this, only the wrapper is printed in blue on white.

The vial contains forty pills, and costs 1s. 1½d. at the emist's. This is cheaper than pennyworths of doubtfully npounded pills. It is but a trifle over a farthing a dose. ONE PILL IS A DOSE, though they are so small t FORTY-NINE of them only measure one inch uare.

Jure TORPID LIVER WITHOUT FAIL, CK HEADACHE, MALAISE, DISTRESS ROM EATING, and SALLOW OMPLEXION promptly done away with.

BRITISH DEPOT FOR
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS,
46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C.

The ÆOLIAN

is conceded by the WORLD'S BEST MUSICIANS to be without question

THE GREATEST MUSICAL INVENTION OF MODERN TIMES

THIS Unique and Wonderful Instrument is not only adapted to the wants of the Trained Musician, but can also be played by Anyone AFTER A FEW DAYS' PRACTICE; so that every home can have, by means of the "ÆOLIAN," any piece of music ever written—from the simple Psalm to the most intricate Opera, Waltz, March, or Dance. The Musical Expression, or Tone Colour, can be varied entirely at the will of the player, the "ÆOLIAN" responding as promptly to any change of tempo, or degree of power, as a well-drilled Orchestra.

Testimonials have been received from the following Eminent Artists and Musicians, viz.:—

Mons. Jean de Reszke; Mons. J. Lassalle; Mons. Edouard de Reszke; Signor Luigi Arditi; Senor Pablo Sarasate; Mons. A. Vianesi; C. W. Pearce, Mus. Doc., Cantab.; Madame Berthe Marx; Herr Anton Seidl; and many other prominent members of the Musical Profession.

A VISIT TO OUR SHOW ROOMS WILL BE ESTEEMED A FAVOUR.

Price from £25 to £104.

GEORGE WHIGHT & Co.

225, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.

(Sole Licencees for England.)

"IS STILL THE BEST COCOA."

SCHWEITZER'S NOURISHING, STRENGTHENING

Cocoatina

Reduced Prices: ¼ lbs., 11d.; ½ lbs., 1/9; 1 lbs., 3/4.

PIANOS ON THE THREE YEARS' HIRE SYSTEM.

This system is carried out extensively, liberally, and equitably by CHARLES STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, W.C. The pianoforte becomes the absolute property of the hirer at the expiration of three years, or may be returned at any time, at the option of the hirer. The rates charged are the same as for ordinary hire, and no addition is made to the price. PIANOS, GRAND and UPRIGHT, new and second-hand, by BORD, BECHSTEIN, and other high class Makers, at from 10s. 6d. to 100s. per month. Lists and all particulars will be forwarded post-free on application to STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, London, W.C.

FOR POLISHING METALS, ESPECIALLY BRASS,

THERE IS NOTHING BETTER THAN

"LA BRILLANTINE"

METALLIC POWDER.

TRY IT, AND CONVINCE YOURSELF.

It is used by the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, the Life, Horse, and Dragoon Guards, &c.

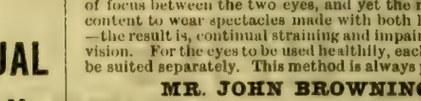
— Sold Everywhere. Boxes, 6d. and 1s. post free. —

PROPRIETORS—

J. F. BAUMGARTNER & CO.

15 (T.), Newman-street, Oxford-street, London, W.

ABSOLUTELY REFUSE IMITATIONS.



UNEQUAL VISION.

About 80 persons out of each 100 have some difference of focus between the two eyes, and yet the majority are content to wear spectacles made with both lenses alike —the result is, continual straining and impairment of the vision. For the eyes to be used healthily, each eye should be suited separately. This method is always practised by

MR. JOHN BROWNING,

Ophthalmic Optician (Author of "Our Eyes," 1s. 4d. Fourteenth Edition), at his only address, 63, Strand, W.C. where he may be consulted personally, free of charge respecting spectacles for all forms of defective vision between the hours of 10 and 4 daily except on Saturdays

BEECHAM'S PILLS

FOR ALL

Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as Sick Headache, Constipation, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Disordered Liver, and Female Ailments.

Prepared only by the Proprietor, THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helen's, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere, in Boxes, 9½d., 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each. with full directions.

The 1s. 1½d. Box contains Fifty-six Pills.

THE SALE IS NOW SIX MILLION BOXES PER ANNUM

Printed for the Proprietors by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BROOKE, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

· TRUTH ·

"Cultores Veritatis Fraudis Inimici."—Cicero.

No. 887. Vol. XXXIV. Thursday, December 28, 1893. Price Sixpence.

NOTICE.

THE SEVENTEENTH

CHRISTMAS NUMBER OF "TRUTH,"

"The Spookeries,"

IS NOW READY.

In a Special Wrapper,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Profusely Illustrated by F. Carruthers Gould.

The Illustrations include THREE DOUBLE-PAGED and FOUR FULL-PAGED CARTOONS, printed in colours :—

1. "Truth" Speaks about Spooks.
2. Viva el Toro.
3. A Demonstration of Loyalty (With a Collection).
4. Salisbury's Stuffed Geese.
5. Chamberlain's Dive.
6. A Royalty Raree Show.
7. Work for the Girl-Flogger.

All communications intended for the Editor should be sent direct to the Editorial Offices, Carteret-street, S.W., and not to the Publishing Offices in Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

No communication can be dealt with in the current issue of Truth if received later than the First Post on a Monday.

A Detailed Account of the Fourteenth "Truth" Toy and Doll Show will be found on pages 1401-1406 of this number.

ENTRE NOUS.

THE Queen and the Prince of Wales have been for some time contemplating an important alteration in the device of the Civil Division of the Order of the Bath. Instead of having only a plain gold medal, without any enamel, it is proposed to make the device the same as on the Military Division—i.e., a Maltese cross in white enamel, but without the wreath which that division has. The change would be a great improvement, as the present device of the Civil Division is by no means effective.

The Princess of Wales and the Princesses Victoria and Maud will probably go to Italy about the end of next month in order to recruit their health after the influenza, from which they have all been suffering at Sandringham, and they will afterwards proceed to Athens on a visit to the King and Queen of the Hellenes. The Princess and her daughters are most likely going to San Remo when they leave England.

It is probable that the Prince of Wales will postpone his usual trip to the Riviera until the middle of March, instead of going abroad towards the end of January, as H.R.H. has a number of engagements in London during the month of February.

The Dowager Lady Churchill, who is the Lady-in-Waiting on the Queen at Osborne, is to be replaced next week by the Dowager Lady Erroll, after whom will come Lady Ampthill.

I am not one of those who regard Royalties as more of angels than the rest of humanity. Therefore, far be it from me to blame the Duke of Saxe-Coburg for retaining £10,000 of his £25,000 annuity. If the country is prepared to give it, naturally he is prepared to accept it. With all respect, however, to his Royal Highness, I see no more reason that we should pay it than that the inhabitants of Saxe-Coburg should contribute to the maintenance of the Queen. I have always opposed the annuities. Those who take an opposite view in respect to them hold that they ought to be voted in order to enable their recipients to maintain the state and dignity of an English Prince. But on what theory we ought to contribute to maintain the position of a German Sovereign I fail to see. The Acts securing an annuity to the Duke of Edinburgh expressly state that if at any time he shall become a Sovereign, Parliament shall have the right to discontinue the annuity. This, of course, was a polite way of expressing the opinion of those who framed the Acts that in the event of this contingency occurring they ought to cease. The Government has a perfect right to hold a contrary opinion. But it has gone further than this. By a stretch of its executive authority it has declared that one annuity is to continue, and it has declined to allow Parliament to express an opinion thereon by submitting the issue to the House of Commons. This I could have understood had a Tory Government been in power. But from a Liberal Government it would have surprised me, were it not that I have arrived at an age when nothing does surprise me.

The Duke of Cambridge intends to proceed to Cannes about the middle of January, and he will remain abroad for several weeks, and proposes to visit Naples and Malta before his return to England.

As usual, the Castle Season will begin at the end of January or thereabouts. The same State Officials will re-assemble who have re-assembled for so many years to organise the usual Court ceremonials. There is no doubt that these latter will be held, nor that the veteran Household Officials will attend, as they have attended them each year for the last quarter of a century or more. The doubt only comes in when the attendance of Society in general is in question. To boycott or not to boycott the coming season? that is the question. Shall the next be as the last was? The answer remains in the hands of those in high places who, it is an open secret, worked the boycott of the Viceroy last year.

The usual unique Christmas party is being given this week by Lord Justice FitzGibbon, at his Howth Villa. These symposiums are remarkable for assembling under the roof of one of the most genial and liberal-minded amongst the occupants of the Irish Bench a very full representation of the wit and wisdom of Great Britain and Ireland. Amongst the guests who accepted the Lord Justice's hospitality are Lord Randolph Churchill and Mr. Morley, from the leisure of Monte Carlo; Mr. David Plunket, from the hard labour of Westminster; Lord Wolseley, Lord Morris, the Lord Chief Justice, Professor Mahaffy, &c. This example of mutual peace and goodwill, of social harmony notwithstanding political differences, is pleasing and valuable at this time. It might well and advisedly be said, "Irish society, please copy."

Large parties will be entertained for the Grantham Hospital Ball, on Thursday night, by the Duke and Duchess of Rutland at Belvoir Castle, and by Lord and Lady Brownlow at Belton Hall.

Mr. Algernon Peckover, of Wisbech, who died a few days ago, in his ninety-first year, was the father of the new Lord-Lieutenant of Cambridgeshire. He was all his life a banker at Wisbech. Mr. Peckover took a very warm interest in all the educational and charitable institutions of the district, and was a most munificent benefactor to them. He subscribed £5,000 towards a high-grade school, and gave £3,000 to the Wisbech Museum. Mr. Peckover, who was a staunch Liberal, and a prominent member of the Society of Friends, was a man of considerable literary culture, and distinguished as a botanist and as an antiquarian.

A weekly journal announces that "a lineal descendant of the great Warren Hastings" has just been sentenced to six months' imprisonment as a rogue and a vagabond at Wellington, New Zealand. Whoever this offender may be, he certainly is not "a lineal descendant" of Warren Hastings, who died s.p., leaving all his property to his widow, and after her death the beautiful domain of Daylesford, where he passed the last twenty-four years of his life, was sold, and it has since changed hands several times.

An Irish gentleman, describing himself as "a practical, large rent-paying farmer of thirty years' experience," sends me some results of sundry experiments which may be of interest to agriculturists in England as well as in Ireland. He seems to have had great success in growing flax, and he maintains, on the strength of his experiments, that, if the management of the crop were properly understood and a market for it created, flax could be grown more profitably in the South of Ireland than in the North. His own experiment, I should state, was made in County Cork, and northern labourers were imported to instruct his men in the art of raising the crop. By their testimony it was the finest crop they had ever seen, and was secured for half what it would have cost in the North. The crop was sold in Belgium at a large profit. My correspondent further claims to have shown by experiment that New Zealand oats can be grown with profit on the poorest soils, and that they can be sown as late as May. He further recommends New Zealand potatoes to the Irish farmer. Does the Department of Agriculture know anything about these things? If not, why not?

I declined some weeks ago to devote any more space to the subject of Australian and Tasmanian wool, but as a correspondent has taken the trouble to write all the way from the Antipodes in reference to what he has read in Truth on these questions, I have not the heart to refuse to add the following particulars which he contributes:—

> The "record" price given for a merino ram in Victoria was £3,000, and I heard of another being sold for £1,500. The 3,000-pounder was bred by the late Hon. J. Cumming, of Terrinallum station, and the competition for the ram was chiefly between his brothers Thomas and William. Eventually it was knocked down to Thomas. I am not sure whether the ram was bred on Terrinallum, but it was undoubtedly of Tasmanian descent. It is not true, so far as this Colony (Victoria) is concerned, that merino wool becomes hairy. Tasmanian rams, however, are brought in order to secure greater density.

To facilitate the slaughter of the pheasant species, some benefactor of the human species has, I see, invented a "Non-straying Mixture," warranted "to bring pheasants home and keep them there." This reminds me of some of the inventions in the Island of Laputa. Surely the best means to keep pheasants at home is to tie them by the leg or keep them under a coop until the time comes for them to be shot. All danger of these inconsiderate creatures spoiling "sport" by assuming the habits of wildfowl would thus be effectually eliminated.

Why, however, does anybody go to the expense and bother of hatching out birds and keeping them on the premises—whether by means of coops or "non-straying mixtures"—until they are ready for shooting, when they can be bought ready-made for the purpose? One enterprising tradesman was advertising the other day:—

> 2,000 full-wing young cock pheasants for shooting. Also 2,000 last season pheasants; price low this season.

"Cock pheasants for shooting," means, I take it, birds properly bred and fattened, and educated up to the business. And a great convenience it must be to those who have to entertain Royal and noble sportsmen, to be

---

For Amusements, see page 1417.
For the Truth Hotel List, see page 1418 in the present issue.
For Hospitals and Appeals, see page 1419.

able to lay in the raw material for big bags at a few days' notice. What I want to know is, why the shooting of beasts cannot be brought up to date, as the shooting of birds has been? Why does not the Zoological Society undertake to send out lions, tigers, and big game generally, properly fattened up, and not too fresh, to be "battued" in the parks of the aristocracy and plutocracy? Why should it be necessary to travel all the way to South Africa, and undergo all sorts of fatigue and inconvenience—possibly even personal danger—in the pursuit of "sport?"

At the German Imperial hunts it is now the practice to keep a careful record of the names of the sportsmen and of the game killed by each of them. A guest may get possession of the antlers of a stag, the horns of a buck, or the tusks of a wild boar, if he wants to carry any such mementoes of the sport; but the body of an animal cannot be obtained unless its full market value is paid to the Treasury of the Court Hunting Office. Even the Emperor is subject to the rule, and the whole of the game which is killed is sold en bloc to dealers, under the superintendence of the Chief Forester in whose district the hunt has taken place.

A correspondent writes from Paris:—

The right of shooting and hunting in the French State forests, in the departments of the Seine et Oise, Seine et Marne, and Oise, is to be let by auction in Paris shortly for a term of five years. These forests have been let for several years past to a number of tenants, the aggregate rental being upwards of £32,000 a year. Among them are St. Germain, Rambouillet, Compeigne, and Fontainebleau, which are about the best sporting domains in France, all kinds of game being very abundant in them.

The great forest of Chantilly, which was formerly the scene of the gorgeous hunting parties of the Princes de Condé, is now the private property of the Duc d'Aumale, and it is to be hunted in future by a pack of staghounds, of which the Duc de Chartres will be the master. The Prince de Joinville has for some years kept a celebrated pack of hounds at Arc-en-Barrois, in the department of the Marne, with which he hunts the wild boar, of which there are great numbers in his extensive forests.

I am sorry to find that I did some injustice to the people of Burnley and Mr. William Heaton, the champion slaughterman of the three Kingdoms, in the remarks upon Heaton's performance which appeared in last week's TRUTH. What Heaton did, it appears, was not to slaughter "one beast and five sheep" in forty minutes, but to "dress" the carcasses, which were brought in dead for the purpose. That, of course, is a very much more refined and elevating kind of entertainment. As the same time, I am bound to say that the blame for the misunderstanding lies less with me than with the announcements of the show, which certainly convey the idea that the beasts were to be slaughtered coram populo.

The Americans are a great nation. One World's Fair in twelve months is not enough for them. So no sooner are the shutters put up at Chicago than San Francisco is organising a show of the same kind on a suitable scale of magnificence, to be opened on January 1. On behalf of the people of California, the Editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, and President of the Exhibition, invites from me "an expression of sympathy with the effort of the State to place itself in line with the rest of the civilised world." I deeply sympathise with this laudable effort. A few words of congratulation from me, says my Californian contemporary, will heighten the local feeling of satisfaction on this great occasion. I hasten to congratulate everybody concerned. Not the least I congratulate myself on living in a land where two "World's Fairs" in half a century have been found more than enough.

I learn that the authorities at the British Museum have been so fortunate as to obtain a copy of Landor's "Simonidea," which has been for more than half a century the rarest of all his works. About fifteen years ago a distinguished expert reported so far as he could ascertain after exhaustive researches, not a single copy of "Simonidea" was in existence. This volume, which was published at Bath in 1806, contains a number of elegiac pieces, both in English and Latin, a selection of English love poems, and some Latin verses, described by Landor himself as "more pure in their Latinity than in their sentiment," of which he presently became so much ashamed that he destroyed every copy of "Simonidea" which he could lay his hands upon.

The following is the letter from Mr. John Murray which I was unable to publish last week. It is unfortunate that the efforts which I and others have made during the last three months to draw the Duke of Argyll's attention to this extraordinary literary coincidence, should have been so long in producing any result. This delay has contributed as much as anything else to strengthen Mr. Bain's case. In my first reference to the matter, I assumed that the Duke would say what he now says. It is not for me to anticipate Mr. Bain's rejoinder, but the coincidence was an extraordinary one, and he was fully justified in calling attention to it:—

50, Albemarle-street, W., December 18, 1893.

SIR,—In TRUTH of December 14 you call attention to an attack on the Duke of Argyll by a Mr. Bain. As publisher of the Duke's work, "The Unseen Foundations of Society," I would ask you to give publicity to certain facts bearing on Mr. Bain's charge of plagiarism, and would ask your readers to draw their own conclusion.

1. The Duke's book was offered to and accepted by my firm in May, 1891. It was then nearly completed, and had been "type-written."

2. Mr. Bain states that his book "must have been published in June, 1892." By that date eleven chapters of the Duke's book (360 out of 580 pages) were in proof or in the printer's hands. In other words, out of Mr. Bain's forty-six specific charges, thirty-four deal with passages which were actually in print, or with the compositor before Mr. Bain's book appeared.

The rest of the Duke's manuscript was practically completed by this time.

3. It would be wearisome to examine in detail all the passages quoted by Mr. Bain. By way of example I will merely cite the first, in which he accuses the Duke of borrowing his phrase "neglected elements."

This was the title of a lecture delivered by the Duke in Glasgow on November 15, 1889, and published shortly afterwards. Ex uno disce omnes.

4. When my attention was called to the publication of Mr. Bain's pamphlet, I bought a copy and sent it to the Duke of Argyll. Up to that time he had never heard of Mr. Bain; up to the present time he has not seen Mr. Bain's book.

These facts have been communicated to Mr. Bain, who is, I believe, in India. Doubtless an answer from him is on its way home.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN MURRAY.

AT BOSCOMBE, BOURNEMOUTH.—The HOTEL BURLINGTON, "Sunny Boscombe." A charming Hotel, luxuriously appointed, in acres of matured grounds sloping to the sea. Every comfort of home. Most moderate charges. Bournemouth East Station. Tariff of Manager, or at Burlington & Buckingham Palace Hotels, London

Mr. Charles Eastlake states, in a very interesting article in the Building News, that Greuze was paid only 18 gs. for his famous picture the "Cruche Cassée," which is now in the Louvre. His works have greatly risen in value, as fifty years later £700 was paid for one of them, and in 1846 the late Lord Hertford gave £1,050 for a "Psyche," while within the last twenty years another of his pictures has realised £6,720.

It has been definitely settled that the Bayreuth Festival Plays are to begin next year on July 19, and there will be twenty representations, the last being fixed for August 18. "Parsifal" is to be given nine times, "Lohengrin" six times, and "Tannhäuser" five times.

There is no grumbler like your disappointed actor. Mr. Richard Mansfield, an Anglo-American who failed to convince the English public that he was a Kean, Macready, or an Irving, and who played Richard the Third in the manner of Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde, seriously proposes a poll-tax on all distinguished actors who visit America. He thinks that a prohibitive tariff on the Pattis, De Reskes, Calvés, Kendals, Bernhardts, Coquelins, and Irvings will give work to the unemployed American actors and aggrandise the fame of Mr. Richard Mansfield. A more absurd proposition was never made. America is never likely to boycott artists of distinction, and the increased prices that they command is a perfectly natural feature in dramatic trade. The rule in America about prices is a very sensible one. There is a low normal price for every seat in a theatre, and it is increased whenever a star is announced. This is the rule that is observed in all provincial theatres in England. A special attraction commands special prices.

The best thing that has been said as yet on Mr. Richard Mansfield's boycotting proposition has been said by Mr. Stephen Fiske, the clever editor of the Spirit of the Times, an able journalist who once made a considerable mark in London:—

> Actors have no country. They are judged by their art, not by their nativity, and are equally applauded or ignored according to their abilities, whether they come from England, America, France, Italy, or Germany. Strictly speaking, there are no American actors, because we have not yet created a distinctively American school of acting. The large majority of our actors are either English or of English parentage. Booth and Jefferson were the sons of English actors; Fanny Davenport was born in London; Mansfield in Heligoland; McCullough was an Irishman; Mary Anderson has chosen England as a residence thus the principal professionals whose names have cropped up in the discussion are English, you know. The reason why foreign managers, actors, and actresses come here and make money is because they are better than we can yet produce. The reason why most American managers, actors, and actresses fail when they go abroad is because they are not yet up to the European standard. If Irving were an American, he would be a success in London. If Bernhardt were an American, she would be a success in Paris. Because the one happens to be English and the other French, there is no prejudice against them in America. For various reasons—and principally because our people are too independent to be satisfied with making believe to be other people on the stage—America has not yet devoted itself to the development of native actors. That will come later. In the meantime, we are like a boy at school who draws rough sketches on his slate. These make his schoolmates laugh or cry. But it would be very unfair to raise the cry of prejudice because the boy's slate was not admitted among the masterpieces of the galleries of Europe.

The following letter is deserving of attention, for it is addressed to me, not by the British Matron, nor by Mrs. Grundy, but by a French lady residing as a schoolmistress in England. What she says proves, not for the first time, that the French, although they make far less parade of them, have in some respects much stricter notions of propriety than ourselves—stricter even than those of Cambridge Dons:—

December 16, 1893.

Sir,—Does the University of Cambridge deserve to be called "Alma Mater," when her examiners in French implicitly recommend the reading of Molière's "Don Juan," Regnard's "Les Folies Amoureuses," Beaumarchais' "Le Mariage de Figaro," and La Fontaine's "Les Amours de Psyché"? Vide French papers set for the June and December (1893) Higher Local Examinations. Surely the candidates (of whom many are young ladies) should be given a chance to read the books, extracts of which they are likely to be called upon to translate. I ask the examiners, Are English young ladies supposed to read French books which our various councils of French secondary education d'outre-mer have never ventured to include in any programme?—Yours obediently, Anglo-French.

When noticing the other day a pamphlet in which a German Professor ridicules German grammars written by English schoolmasters, I remarked that equally good subjects for ridicule would probably be found in English grammars written by German professors. In support of this, a reader sends me the following samples of English "as she is wrote" in a grammar lately published at Berlin:—

To all my questions he told nothing.
I am not only looking at them, but I view them with all examination.
Speaker alouder.
Would it not be good if some ships more were put in?
All he sets to sale of meats is very attractive.

The following come from a new Austro-English grammar:—

I canot suffer that you deduct still 2 sh.
What a bird is that!
It is ¼ 9 o'clock.
Where is it said the spirit of the King to be?
Alpine flowers descend precipitately to its shores.

The moral of this is the old one, that the only safe guide to the language of any country is a native of that country.

The official list of proposed Select Preachers at Oxford during the next University year has just been drawn up, and it includes the names of the Bishop of St. Asaph, Canon Scott-Holland, and the Rev. Charles Gore.

Canon Scott-Holland is to be in residence at St. Paul's during January, and he will preach in the Cathedral on Sunday afternoons throughout the month.

The Bishop of Rochester has arranged to hold a visitation of the diocese in October next year, and he intends previously to visit every parish and mission district. It would be a good thing if other prelates would make themselves thoroughly acquainted with their dioceses in this way, for there is a great and manifest advantage in a Bishop paying a personal visit to every parish. The same course has been adopted by the Archbishop of York and by the Bishop of Winchester.

C.O.M. Whisky.—This well-known Brand, 50s. per case, free to every Railway Station.—Andrews & Co., Dame-st., Dublin, Proprietors C.O.M. brand.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer restores the colour, renews the growth, arrests the fall, cleanses the scalp.

It is seldom indeed that we hear of a benefice which has nearly doubled in value within a few years, but this is the happy case of the Lord Chancellor's rectory of Rawmarsh, Yorkshire, where the stipend has increased from £1,000 a year to about £1,900, through the investment of the proceeds of the rents of mines on the glebe land. This living recently became vacant by the death of Sir William Mahon, who was presented by Lord Lyndhurst in 1844. An excellent arrangement has been made by Lord Herschell and the Archbishop of York, the result of which will be the reduction of the stipend to £1,000 a year, while the surplus is to be apportioned among certain poor livings in the neighbourhood. The new incumbent is to be the Rev. T. P. King, Rector of Hanley, Staffordshire.

A good deal has been heard of late of the means taken by "depressed" clerics to augment their incomes, but the following statement made by a correspondent of a trade journal surpasses anything in this line that I have yet come across. The letter is dated "Sunderland":—

> There is a rector of a parish within four miles of here, the living of which is over £400 per annum, who regularly buys Ceylon or Assam dust (a chest or two at a time) from a firm in London, and he hawks it about amongst his parishioners out of a black bag—a pound or two here, there, and anywhere that he can propagate his doctrine of "domestic economy" to his own profit. "It is," he says, "so much better than the leaf tea sold by the local grocers."

For a Rector with £400 a year to go into the grocery line seems as unjustifiable as it is undignified. Possibly his reverence flatters himself that he is doing a service to his parishioners. In that case I would ask whether the local grocer, who will not get much benefit from the business, is not a parishioner also? But perhaps the grocer is a Dissenter.

A most extraordinary fiction about Bishop Blomfield, the Suffragan of the diocese of St. Albans, has been going round the papers. It is alleged that he is "a wonderful humourist," and he is credited with having in his more youthful days posed a Bishop at Fulham Palace by asking him, "How long he thought it took Nebuchadnezzar to get into good condition after being out at grass?" It is hard that a devout Prelate should be credited with this somewhat profane and far from brilliant jest. The real fact is that this question was put to the Bishop's father, the celebrated Bishop of London, by Wyndham Smith, the son of Sydney Smith, who was generally known as "The Assassin," and who figures in "The Book of Snobs." Wyndham Smith was a man of decidedly moderate humour, and his jesting usually took a very sour turn. On Thackeray asking him one day at the Garrick Club if the report was true that he (Smith) was really going on the Turf in earnest, he replied: "You may be quite sure that I shall not go on the Turf until my father is under it."

With reference to the attitude of the Roman Catholic priesthood towards lotteries, which has lately been the subject of much remark, a member of that Church writes to point out to me that gambling is not sinful, but only becomes so when indulged in to such excess as to produce injury, whether to the gambler or to other parties. As regards gambling generally, this is only the doctrine which was preached by the late Archbishop Magee, and which, as a humble disciple of that great man, I have on many occasions re-echoed. As regards lotteries, however, it has to be remembered that the State has made special regulations against them, on strong evidence that they have been the causes of widespread misery and demoralisation. It is illogical, as I have often said, to legislate thus against one form only of gambling; but, while the legislation stands, it seems to me that clerics, of whatever denomination, set a questionable example when they take the lead in breaking the law.

For a mere journalist to preach to a priest on the duties of the priesthood may seem incongruous, possibly presumptuous. We are all of us occasionally the better, however, for a little outside criticism, if it be delivered in the right spirit. I would, therefore, point out to the Roman Catholic lottery promoters that many things which are neither malum in se nor malum prohibitum are yet inexpedient for ministers of religion. It is neither contrary to law nor to morals to go to a race meeting or a music-hall. Yet, I take it, neither the Archbishop of Canterbury nor Cardinal Vaughan would consider it wise to drive a four-in-hand to Epsom, or take a front seat at the Alhambra. Though doubtless both would personally enjoy either position, they would forego their personal enjoyment out of regard for "the weaker brethren." In the same way many clerics, who would not dogmatically pronounce it wrong to taste alcohol, become abstainers as an example to their flocks. I think they are to be commended. So is the parson who abstains from cards and gambling on similar grounds. But, what, then is to be thought of the cleric, who, so far from abstaining, incites his flock to indulge in these dangerous pleasures in order to bring grist to the ecclesiastical mill? If it is expedient to run a lottery for the good of the Church, a fortiori it would be expedient to run a public-house, a gambling saloon, a race-course, or a music-hall for the same end. None of these things are immoral in themselves, and as compared with lotteries they have the advantage of being legal. I make these suggestions from no spirit of hostility to the Roman Catholic priesthood in the United Kingdom, for, doctrine apart, I highly admire their zeal and their self-sacrificing spirit.

I have received the following amounts towards this year's "Truth" Toy Fund:—

T. Walmesley, £10; A. Z., 10s.; A Few Admirers, S.-o.-M., £1. 10s.; Larry, 5s.; A. T., £10; C. H. T., 10s.; Ina, 5s.; W. M. Neill, 21s.; W. U., 10s.; Sir George Maude, £1; S. Lewis, £5. 5s.; H. D. and A. D., 10s.; R. W. S., 10s.; Betty, £1; Donald and Harry, £5; E. H. P., 10s.; Cicely and Philippe, 21s.; Joseph Pulitzer, £10; the Right Hon. Arnold Morley, £2; Gwendoline Wavell, 21s.; E. H. and L., 2s. 6d.; Officers of the 10th Royal Hussars, Cahir, £5; the Misses A. and W. Cookson, £2; A. M. B., £2. 2s.; Little Mary (Penzance), 5s.; John D. Watey, 100 threepenny-pieces; "A Mite," 4s.; E. P. S., 2s. Collected in the boxes at the Toy Show, Royal Albert Hall, £31. 10s. 0½d.

The Coupé Company's Telegraphic Address is "Coupé, London."

Here is a queer story about the Indian authorities and the Rupee. An officer married a lady who was entitled to a pension from the Madras Military Fund. On the lady proceeding to India, the pension was paid to her at the rate of one rupee for 2s. 3½d., or under nine rupees to the pound. Simultaneously, the lady's husband received a letter from the same office informing him that his marriage donation of £40 to the Staff Corps Pension Fund would be stopped monthly from his pay at the rate of one rupee for a fraction less than 1s. 3d., or almost sixteen to the pound. In other words, a rupee when you receive it is reckoned as worth just 1s. 1d. more than when you pay it. At this rate, somebody in India ought to be making a good thing out of the depreciation of the coin.

The Regulations with regard to remittances home by officers and soldiers serving in the East require (para. 260) that when depositing with the Paymaster the amount to be remitted, the officer or soldier shall specify "the full name and address of the person in whose favour the remittance is to be made." Until recently, all parties remitting were allowed to give, under this regulation, the name of an agent or bank. Within the last two or three months this privilege, though still continued to officers, has been refused to N.C.O.'s and privates, who are only allowed to give the name of the relative for whose benefit the remittance is made. What is the reason of this distinction, and what justification can be offered for construing the Regulations in one way in the case of officers and another in the case of N.C.O.'s and men? The question is of some moment, for I understand that where the money is remitted direct the payee, owing to the formalities to be gone through, often has a difficulty in obtaining payment.

The Broad Arrow surmised in a recent paragraph that subalterns would be vastly amused at the remarks in Truth on the subject of subalterns being charged for entertainments at the same rate as their superior officers. Reluctantly I must disclaim the humorous intentions credited to me, as well as that "acquaintance with ordinary mess life which is startling in its bold originality;" for the passage which the Broad Arrow found so entertaining was marked as a quotation, and was, in fact, written by one quite as fully acquainted with mess-life as the editor of the Broad Arrow is ever likely to be. What I should like to know, however, is where the humour of the situation comes in. A paragraph in the Queen's Regulations expressly provides that the expenses of entertainments shall be divided among officers in a progressive ratio, based upon the amount of their pay. Complaint is made to me that in a certain regiment this Regulation is disregarded, and that subalterns are compelled to pay as much as the Commanding Officer. Had it been said that this was a matter for the Colonel or the senior officers to laugh at, I could understand it. But why are the subalterns to laugh? Perhaps they will ask the editor of the Broad Arrow to show them the joke.

"A Parent," who, I may add, is a seasoned warrior himself, writes thus on the same subject:—

Anent your very timely remarks as to the injustice and illegality of subalterns being made to pay equally with their seniors for the extravagances which certain weak-knee'd Commanding Officers unduly favour, I may tell you that the Battalion to which you refer is not by any means the only sinner against paragraph 69, sec. vii., of the Queen's Regulations. . . . What is the use of this paragraph if the War Office authorities wink at its evasion? They shelter themselves behind inspection returns and reports which can be evoked at will, and no questions are asked. Were some of the offending Commanding Officers relieved of their commands for violating certain Regulations knowingly, and for the benefit of their own pockets, much good of a sorely needed character would accrue to the Army generally.

Here is another matter concerning the Broad Arrow. To save that journal from again falling a victim to its morbid delusion that a civilian is necessarily misinformed on all matters pertaining to the Army, I leave my correspondent to speak for himself. The letter refers to the Broad Arrow of December 16:—

Dear Truth,—The Broad Arrow this week gravely puts forward the statement of a correspondent which it thinks "throws a new light on the employment of Army Service Corps officers on the General Staff," viz., that "the best paid appointments are only given to the Senior Officers of the Corps, who accept them at a loss of pay." What are "the best paid appointments?"

I think I know what this correspondent was "driving at," but the Editor whom he addresses has evidently not the faintest notion. The former was, no doubt, referring to the senior officers of the Permanent List (not the senior officers of the Corps); but all the appointments held, or that could be held by them, are paid alike, as the Broad Arrow should have known, and the senior officers of the Corps suffer no loss of pay when on the Staff.

None of the Officers desired to "pose" as Staff Officers; but it is clear that the Editor of the Broad Arrow "poses" as an authority on matters which he knows nothing about, though he ought to.

He is an ancient Dogberry who seems determined that he shall be written down an ass.—Yours truly, Staff Officer.

It may be hoped that Mr. Campbell-Bannerman will take steps next year to abolish the Honorary Colonelcies, which are an abuse of the most flagrant description. A Parliamentary paper was issued the other day which shows that no fewer than sixty-six officers are receiving £1,000 a year each for doing nothing whatever. Let there be good-service pensions by all means, but every one knows that these Honorary Colonelcies are not usually obtained by the most deserving officers, but very much more frequently as the result of interest and favouritism. It is high time that such outrageous squandering of the public money should cease, and the abolition of these sinecures is a very proper work to be performed by a Liberal Ministry.

Some few months back a hint was given in Truth that there were certain matters requiring the careful attention of superior authority in regard to the management of the Station Hospital at Gibraltar; but, from the growls which Cremer's Entertainments.—Parkins & Gotto, of Oxford-street, having acquired the goodwill of the business of the late Mr. Cremer, of Regent-street and Bond-street, have re-engaged all the best artists, and are now booking orders for the holidays.

Pfungst Frères' Extra Quality Champagnes.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. Pfungst & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

continue to come in from that quarter, I perceive that no material improvement has yet taken place. Among matters specially deserving attention is the treatment of the nursing sisters, who seem of late to have been tyrannised over in much the same spirit as that by which the Indian nurses are threatened, orders having been issued which most unjustifiably interfere with their liberty when off duty. Inquiry will, however, show that a feeling which is certainly not one of contentment, prevails in most branches of the establishment.

Apropos to the Indian nurses, I have received a communication from a well-informed quarter which throws some light on the recent manifesto of the P.M.O. I gather from it that there have been for some time in the Service a few young ladies whose demeanour has not on all occasions been marked by the gravity and decorum appropriate to a serious profession; and that it is to be supposed that the wise virgins are suffering for these foolish ones. Granted that this is so, it is no justification of the order that has been referred to in TRUTH. If any damsels have conducted themselves at dances, dinner-parties, or elsewhere with unbecoming levity, such conduct, if repeated after due warning, may be a very good reason for removing them from the profession. But it is no reason for forbidding the whole body of nurses at large to participate in those amusements or entertainments which are open to ladies at large.

Two warriors at Gibraltar request me to settle a dispute for them. Warrior No. 1 asserts that if a soldier goes for treatment to a civil doctor, and, getting no benefit from the treatment, reports himself to the regimental medical attendant, "he is not liable to any punishment for having been treated by a civilian doctor." Warrior No. 2 says that under these circumstances the soldier "is liable to be punished for concealing his complaint." These two disputants, like a good many others, it will be seen, do not contradict one another in terms, but are each asserting different propositions, both of which may possibly be true. I never heard that a man can be punished merely for consulting a civilian doctor; on the other hand, he can undoubtedly be punished for concealing a disease. If a man really has a definite disease, and goes to a civilian doctor in preference to the regimental doctor, I suppose it would be considered that he had concealed his disease, and that he would be punished accordingly. It seems to me, therefore, that Warrior No. 2 is nearer the truth than Warrior No. 1. As a rule, I object to decide points of this kind, but I make an exception in this case, hoping that I may be the means of averting bloodshed.

By an order recently issued the privilege is, I understand, conceded to Staff-Sergeant-Farriers of wearing a crown above their former badges. The natural result is that Staff-Sergeant-Wheelers, Collar-makers, Rough-riders, and Heaven knows how many beside, are all clamouring to know why they can't have crowns too. I am very happy to make their wishes known. Now that the sovereignty of the people is established (nominally), I say let anybody wear the crown who has a fancy for it, though I have no aspirations that way myself.

At Shorncliffe the other day persons going in the afternoon to obtain medicines which had been prescribed for out-patients, found the compounder of medicines absent, and several applicants had to wait an hour or two before his return. This, it appears, was owing to the official in question being engaged drilling with a detachment of the Medical Staff Corps, including cooks, clerks, and orderlies. Surely, if a dispenser of drugs which may be urgently required, is taken away to be drilled, some one ought to be put in his place. I am told on what seem to be good grounds, that the whole work of the Corps for the afternoon is disorganised by this drill, which seems to be a very useless kind of performance at the best. It falls particularly hard on the orderlies, who are most severely worked. There were recently four orderlies of the M.S.C. in the hospital at Shorncliffe each with thirty patients under his care, and occasionally they are on duty for thirty-four hours at a stretch, which is in itself a most objectionable state of things.

One of the newspapers announces that the majority of the old huts at Shorncliffe have been replaced by brick buildings. The statement is not accurate, but even if it were, there is too much reason to believe that the change from the old huts to the new is not altogether a change for the better. I hear from Shorncliffe precisely the same reports that have previously been received from Aldershot as to the unfitness of the new buildings for the purpose they are designed to serve. A conspicuous defect is in regard to the heating. The old huts, if not always weather-tight, could generally be kept warm, but in the new ones the magnificent and highly-ornamental stoves supplied are said to be most ineffectual for practical purposes. In an exposed situation like Shorncliffe this is a most serious consideration.

I was asked the other day by an Artillery Officer why the illustrated papers, when depicting military manœuvres, always represent the horses as being either lashed or spurred, and generally urged onwards in the most reckless, not to say cruel, fashion. Perhaps the special artists implicated can explain this. I am bound to add, however, that having studied this aspect of illustrated journalism since the question was put to me, I find that it seems to be de rigueur to depict all drivers in the act of using whip or spur, or both, and all horses as prancing or plunging or dashing along at express speed, whether they be cavalry chargers or the poor beasts that draw the pirate 'buses.

An Irish Militiaman asks me why, out of the modest bounty of twenty shillings paid to him at the end of his training, five should be stopped for clothing. It is more than I can tell, and I doubt that any plausible answer can be given. A man can hardly take five shillings' worth of wear out of his uniform in twenty-seven days, and even if he could, it is a shabby thing to make a soldier pay for his clothing unless unreasonable damage is done. From the same source, I hear that instead of a shilling per day pay, the men only get 6d., and that of the 6d. stopped only 5d. is ever accounted for (4½d. for messing and ½d. for washing). Theoretically, this is precluded by the man's account for the month being presented to him for signature; but are the authorities aware that it is a common practice to obtain a man's signature to a blank sheet? If not, let them ask at the Curragh.

I may add that the Curragh is not the first place from which questionable practices in regard to Militiamen's pay have been reported to me. I have heard before now of Militiamen in English battalions—one with its head-quarters in London—being made to sign accounts drawn up in pencil, of their being simply bounced into signing fictitious accounts representing them as receiving more than the amounts paid, and so on. My information on these points comes, it need hardly be said, not from Militiamen, but from independent witnesses, and I have little doubt that inquiry conducted in the right way would show that a substantial portion of the money which the State supposes itself to pay its Militia finds its way into other pockets.

The growls which I continue to receive from the Royal Engineer Civil Staff point to a very unhealthy state of things in that corner of the Service, and I think that sooner or later the Staff will have to be mended or ended. In one case that has come under my notice a gentleman, supposing, in accordance with the official programme, that he had a certainty of gradual rises from £250 to £500 a year, married at an early stage of his career, and what is the result? By the time he reaches £280 he finds that he has little chance of getting beyond that point before he is forty, and then only a prospect of slow promotion from £300 to £400. In other branches of the Service persistent agitation generally leads to a redress of grievances of this kind; but the Royal Engineer Civil Staff are the pariahs of the Corps to which they are attached, being regarded with jealousy and disfavour by their military colleagues, and having consequently little hope of sympathy from the Commander-in-Chief, the honorary Colonel of the Royal Engineers. It is well that young Civil Engineers who meditate joining the Staff should appreciate all this.

Complaints of the detention of men abroad beyond the expiration of their eight years' service are not confined to India. I hear that in Egypt there are at present a considerable number of eight years' men who see no prospect of getting away, and many more who ought to be moving now if they are to be discharged by the expiration of their time. The position in Egypt seems to be specially hopeless because the troops there are dependent on the Indian troopships, which, of course, are all full up by the time they reach Egypt. A special vessel ought to be sent out to fetch these men home, and it is a mischievous as well as a dishonest policy which detains men abroad in this way when they have a legal right to be brought home.

The mischief which this system does is very clearly shown in a letter which I had the other day from a man who volunteered for foreign service: "I was warned by my friends," he says, "not to cross the sea on account of the uncertainty about getting back again, but I disregarded these warnings, and now I am paying the penalty by a year's service in India which I never bargained for. You will not be surprised to hear that I have done my best to dissuade my friends at home from being as foolish as I was." Far from surprising me, this is precisely what I should have expected. It never seems to occur, however, to gentlemen at Whitehall that by breaking faith with men in this way you give the Service a bad name. Not only do men like my correspondent exert themselves to warn their comrades against volunteering to go abroad, but all soldiers discharged under a feeling of resentment at unjust treatment become so many agents to counteract the efforts of the recruiting officer.

Much has been said in Truth at one time and another as to how Army Canteens ought not to be managed. Any one desirous of learning how the thing ought to be done could not do better than study a certain Canteen in the North-Western District, which is managed by a Captain in a crack Cavalry Regiment. The buying is all done in the best London and Liverpool markets, all middlemen's profits are saved, business is conducted on a strict and methodical system, which precludes all pickings and perquisites, and, as a result, highly advantageous terms are secured to the customers of the Canteen, without by any means sacrificing profits. It would add enormously to the comfort of Military life and the well-being of the soldier, if means could be found of securing something like a uniform system on these lines throughout the Army, and such uniformity could easily be secured if the matter were taken up in an intelligent spirit at the War Office.

A disposition is manifest, and ought to be peremptorily checked, to convert the Engineering Inspectors of the Local Government Board into a military force. This tendency is apparently due to Major Tulloch, for since that officer has been at the head of the staff none but Royal Engineers have been appointed, with the single exception of Major Tulloch's own son. The latter gentleman doubtless possesses such brilliant and matchless qualifications that it was deemed desirable in the public interest to suspend the elimination of civilians, rather than the State should lose the privilege of paying a salary to this phœnix. There can be very little doubt, however, that the public interest demands the appointment of Civil Engineers in all cases. The first qualification for the post is a familiarity with the municipal engineering work which it is the business of these Inspectors to inquire into. Military engineers cannot possibly possess this familiarity, while there can be no difficulty in finding civilians who do. I would, therefore, exhort Mr. Henry Fowler to take the earliest opportunity of reversing the course lately adopted.

24, Grosvenor-gardens.—To be Sold, or Let on lease, this Mansion, in perfect decorative and sanitary repair, containing 13 bedrooms, two drawing-rooms, boudoir on first floor, dining-room, library, billiard-room, and dressing-room on ground-floor. Stabling for five horses.—Apply, Messrs. Thompson, 6, Bruton-street; or on Premises.

With reference to the question of identifying recruits in order to check fraudulent enlistment an officer writes:—

> I am surprised that no one has suggested the Bertillon system of anthropometry. Properly worked it is, I believe, infallible in detecting individuality, for no two persons are at all points exactly the same. There ought to be no more difficulty in arranging in the Army for a central bureau where cards of measurement should be lodged on enlistment, and to which reference could be made in doubtful or suspicious cases, than there is in working the system in France, England, and India for the detection of criminals, who, in their struggle for existence, change their names, their venue, and even their personal appearance.

In point of fact, a suggestion in this direction was made in TRUTH, apropos to Mr. Grant Macdonald's idea of a central depot for recruits, where records for each man's identification would be kept.

I may add that I received the other day from Major W. B. Ferris a copy of a pamphlet, in which he advocates what is practically an adaptation of the Bertillon system, with finger-tip impressions substituted for photography. Major Ferris claims for his method that, besides affording, under a proper system of classification at a central bureau, a rapid and unerring means of identification of any man who has once been enlisted, it will involve very little labour—the necessary work being already half done in the measurements of recruits which are actually taken—and that the cost will be insignificant. He reckons it in India at half an anna per head. When such offers as these are made there can be at least no excuse for not giving them a trial in the face of the enormous loss now annually recorded from fraudulent enlistment.

A nautical correspondent tells me that, among the cargo on a British vessel which lately called at Beira, was a large bale of Army uniforms, comprising those of Guardsmen, Hussars, Lancers, Infantry, and almost every branch of the Service, the majority, however, being those of Line drummers. This is how "Fuzzy-Wuzzy" gets the martial habiliments on which I have recently discoursed. A traveller tells me that all up the coast, from Port Elizabeth northwards and in British, Boer, and Portuguese territory, he has seen the natives disporting themselves in the tattered and grimy garments which were once "the Queen's uniform."

At Pembroke Dock, where the Welsh Regiment is at present stationed, there is a Dockyard Church with a Naval Chaplain attached to it, and a very sparse congregation. There is also an Army Chaplain, but what he is supposed to do I have not been able to discover. Notwithstanding this plethora of official spiritual advisers, the soldiers on the station have been attending the services at the Parish Church, on account of which a payment of £36 per annum is, I believe, made to the Vicar. I do not quarrel with this payment; but I would ask, Why keep up a Military and a Naval Chaplain under such circumstances? At all the smaller dockyard and garrison towns a single Chaplain could perform the whole of the duty, and in many cases arrangements could easily be made for the parochial clergy to undertake it, as is now done at Pembroke Dock.

During the last two or three weeks I have received a number of valuable hints from different quarters as to possible economies in military and naval expenditure. As regards the Navy, which is the matter of chief interest at the present juncture, a point worthy of much consideration is the opening of the rank of Lieutenant to Warrant Officers. Two birds may be killed with this stone. The training of a Lieutenant costs the country about £1,200, exclusive of any special training in gunnery, navigation, or torpedo work. The training of a Warrant Officer costs the country £100 or £150. On every Warrant Officer promoted to the rank of Lieutenant, therefore, the country would save from £1,000 to £1,100. That is the first bird. The second is a double-headed one—the present dearth of Lieutenants, and the discontent prevailing among this class of officers. To meet the present deficiency, it is contemplated, I understand, to increase the number of cadets entered in the Britannia. That, however, only means additional expense, and my impression is, that if the supply of Lieutenants is to be kept equal to the demand, more money still will have to be spent in improving the pay and position of this rank.

It may be asked whether the Warrant Officers of the Navy are qualified to undertake the duties of a higher rank. On this point there can be no doubt, for, owing to the lack of Lieutenants, their duties have for many years past been actually filled in the manner proposed. Figures supplied to me show that nearly 8 per cent. of Lieutenants' places have been of late occupied by Warrant Officers. No evil consequences of any kind

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is, 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

MAX GREGER'S PURE HUNGARIAN WINES strengthen and sustain. The pure produce of the famous Carlowitz district.—MAX GREGER, LTD., Wine Merchants to the Queen, 2, Old Bond-st, W.

have been found to follow from this. It is a standing grievance in the Navy that there is no road open from the ranks to a commission, and this grievance represents a third bird which would be killed by this one stone. If the Naval Lieutenants themselves object to such a change, whether from snobbishness or from a fear that their ranks will become even more congested than at present, let a new commissioned rank, corresponding to that of the Army Quartermasters, be created for the benefit of the "rankers." It is quite certain that something of the sort will have to be done, for if we cannot get enough Lieutenants as things are, the difficulty will constantly increase with the increase of the Navy now being forced upon us.

It has just been officially announced at Portsmouth that in April an examination is to be held for second-class naval draughtsmen, and this arrangement of the Admiralty has caused very great surprise, which is a natural feeling, considering that there are at the present time between forty and fifty eligible candidates for such places who have already passed. Under these circumstances, it is in the highest degree foolish and absurd to hold an examination, and especially as there are not likely to be more than five vacancies during the next three years.

The alarmists who profess to be so exercised about the strength of our fleet in the Mediterranean would do far more good by turning their attention to the West and Southern coasts of Africa, where our naval force is apparently insufficient for the performance of its ordinary duties in time of peace. It is a statutory rule, embodied in a station order, that every ship on the West Coast is to do a cruise to St. Helena or Ascension once a quarter to give the crews a breath of fresh air and a run ashore; but, owing to the insufficiency of the ships on the station, it has lately been impossible to carry out this rule. As a consequence, the crew of H.M.S. Blonde, which arrived on the station in October, 1892, have only had two excursions of this kind in fourteen months, and one of these was an accidental visit to Las Palmas with an astronomical expedition. In June last the Blonde visited St. Helena, and there is no chance of her again leaving the West Coast till March, when she is promised a run to the Cape. By that time the crew will have been boxed up on board for nine months, the greater part of the time having been spent in mounting guard over one wretched trading house on the Liberian coast.

Any one can see that this is a pernicious state of things from every point of view. It plays the mischief with the physique of officers and men, and I am told that the average loss of weight on board the Blonde has been about one stone per man. It is the dullest and most demoralising work, if it can be called work at all, and must breed bitter hatred of the service. It has prevented, in the case of the Blonde, the ship's company going through the annual musketry course, and the annual prize-firing—the most important of all exercises. I have referred specially to the Blonde, but nearly every other ship can tell a similar tale. The Thrush, just ordered to the Cape, had had up to that time a wretched commission, and the Phœbe has not fared much better.

A Naval Officer gives me one or two promising suggestions for remedying these evils. In the first place, more ships are required, and to the provision of any needful number of ships of the kind required for such work no man of any party objects. In the next place, the West Coast of Africa should be made into a separate station, with its limit at Loanda, and a proper naval station and dock at Ascension. My naval friend would utilise St. Helena for leave-giving, preferring that the dockyard should be at a spot where there are no distractions on shore. The Cape and the East Coast, up to Zanzibar, including Madagascar and Mauritius, he would make into a separate station. Finally, no ship's company should serve on the West Coast for more than eighteen months, and no ship should be left there, or anywhere else, more than a year without going to the dockyard for a thorough overhaul. In view of the importance of the Cape route to India, now happily becoming more and more widely acknowledged, I trust that these suggestions will attract attention, for they are the first steps towards securing to us a commanding supremacy around the whole length of the African Coast—a matter of infinitely more consequence than the chimera of supremacy in the Mediterranean.

I hear that some time ago upwards of 50,000 lb. of Navy beef and pork were sent out to Sierra Leone, but it was then discovered that the meat was not required, and it was returned to Deptford, where it was forthwith condemned, the result being that provisions which a few months before had cost the country just £1,100 were sold for £100. It would be interesting to learn who were the purchasers of these stores, and by whom and for what reason they were condemned.

A few months back attention was called in Truth to the heavy cost of copying and parchment, and other needless extravagances in the Probate Registry. Since then a Departmental Committee has reported in favour of copying by typewriters on stout paper, and this change would effect a saving of nearly £1,300 per annum, but up to the present time no arrangements have been made for giving effect to the proposal. If the action

Winter Visitors to Bournemouth will find "The Imperial" one of the most complete residential establishments in the United Kingdom. Finest position on East Cliff. Luxuriously furnished, with appointments and cuisine of the highest order. Moderate tariff.—Apply, Manager.—W. H. Doré, Proprietor.

Typewriters of all makes for Sale or Hire. Machines bought or taken in part exchange for new ones. Documents copied with accuracy and despatch.—N. Taylor, Manager, National Typewriter Exchange, 74, Chancery-lane, London.

is to be taken at all, it should be taken forthwith, before another year's work is commenced upon the old lines.

In this connection I would also point out that the Chief of the Copying Department (salary £600 per annum) is a gentleman seventy years of age, with fifty years' service in the Department to his credit. Doubtless he is personally a worthy man, and officially a deserving servant, but it is contrary to public policy to keep any official at work to such an age, and the more deserving an official the stronger his claim to retirement and rest in his old age.

Among the humbler servants of the State who have a strong claim to better terms for their labour are those employed in the mechanical work in connection with the Post Office telegraph and telephone lines. The majority of them are merely casual hands, liable to dismissal at any time, and receiving on an average about 4s. a day, out of which have to be met the exceptional expenses attendant on an occupation involving perpetual changes of lodging. In view of the last condition and of the fact that the work necessitates severe exposure to weather, the pay is certainly poor, and a further grievance is that it is paid fortnightly. There ought to be an established staff sufficient to meet the ordinary requirements of the department, with a progressive scale of wages, paid weekly, and an assured pension, and all casual hands who may be from time to time taken on ought to be admitted to the staff at the first opportunity.

Although not myself an enemy of School Boards, nor apprehensive of their influence upon the happiness of the nation, I cannot refrain from reproducing the following advertisement, which appeared the other day in the Church Times:—

HASTE TO THE RESCUE! 'THERE'S NO TIME TO LOSE! THE LAST APPEAL! Wanted at once a Certificated TEACHER who, for the love of Mother Church and her little ones, is disposed to make sacrifice at first in undertaking the duties of a very small village school in a remote, poor country parish, to prevent a School Board, which is imminent. Better prospects when the school is once started.—Please communicate without delay with Rector, Thwaite, near Bungay.

Is it not, I would ask, an extraordinary thing that if School Boards are so inimical to the public welfare, and if the nation is only to be saved by keeping primary education in the hands of the Church of England, there should be no one to save us from the dreadful fate impending but the poor under-paid schoolmaster? Out of all the plutocrats who own (nominally) allegiance to the Church—out of all her well-paid army of officials—there is not one to whom this Rector thinks it worth while to appeal. No! The person to make a sacrifice for "Mother Church and her little ones" out of his modest pound or two a week is the luckless "certificated teacher."

One of the most outrageous abuses of the powers of Water Companies that have ever been reported has just been shown up by Mr. Archibald Dobbs. The offenders are the Southend on Sea Water Company, who, by some extraordinary oversight on the part of the Legislature, have the power to refuse to supply water except by special agreement in any case where any part of the premises is used for a trade purpose requiring water. The London Hotel at Southend came under this clause, and Mr. Brown, the proprietor, accordingly had to sign an agreement under which he took his water by meter, and paid about £20 a year. This went on for a time without objection. Then it occurred to the Water Company that they might as well have £40 a year from Mr. Brown as £20, so he was informed that the price of his water would be doubled, and a new agreement on that basis was presented to him for signature. He declined to sign, but was told that if he did not do so his water would be cut off. He still declined, and his water was cut off. He could not of course exist, or carry on his business without water, so he had to submit at this point, and pay the £40 demanded.

It appears, therefore, that this Water Company, armed with their statutory monopoly, have the power to extort from any customer who happens to carry on a trade, precisely what they like. They are in exactly the same position as if Parliament had conferred on them the power to point a pistol at the tradesman's head and demand his money or his life. And they are apparently not above using this power. Why did the Company suddenly double the price of this unfortunate publican's water-supply? There can be no pretence for saying that the cost of supplying him had suddenly doubled. The reason, doubtless, was that they perceived he was doing a good business and could afford to pay, so they determined to make him hand over a slice of his trade profits to them. An act of brigandage pure and simple! Such a state of things ought to be put right at once. I gather from what Mr. Dobbs says, that it must have been by an oversight on the part of the Local Government Board that such a clause was allowed to appear at all in a private Bill. The Local Government Board ought, therefore, to introduce a Bill repealing this clause. It is an intolerable state of things that the whole of the tradesmen of a flourishing town should be left, bound and helpless, at the mercy of a gang of incorporated banditti.

Is it possible that old people taking refuge in a workhouse are deprived of any flannel underclothing they may possess? A case has been brought under my notice from Norwood in which an old lady in a very infirm condition is deterred from going into the workhouse on account of an alleged rule to this effect. If such a rule exists, it is a detestable piece of inhumanity. If it does not, the fact cannot too soon be made known, for the deserving poor have already quite enough genuine grounds for dreading the workhouse. There is no need to add imaginary terrors.

SANITARY SURVEYS.—Fee for inspection and Report in London, 2Gs.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-st., Westminster.

A legal authority directs my attention to sundry questionable proceedings said to be common with trustee-solicitors, whereby both trust estates and the Inland Revenue must suffer considerably. As legal technicalties are involved, it will be safest to give my informant's allegations in his own language:—

> When on the death of a cestui que trust, succession accounts are rendered to the Inland Revenue Department, as far as I know the bills against the estate are not required to be taxed. Nor, again, are solicitor-trustees required to account for commissions received. It is all very well to say that the new cestui que trust can have this done. In most cases the new cestui que trust is absolutely in the hands of the trustee, and, as often as not, is a child or a woman.
>
> Within my own experience a trustee of this sort had paid himself or his firm £1,900 out of a not large estate. Of this amount, at a guess, £1,300 might represent his profit costs. No doubt he had also received commissions. The bill was left untaxed, the commissions were not accounted for, and the Revenue lost duty at 4½ per cent. on the amount which might have been taxed off the bill, as well as on the commissions.

I would suggest to the Inland Revenue authorities that they should at once insist on taxation in all such cases, and also upon a statutory declaration from every solicitor-trustee that neither his firm nor any individual member of his firm has received commissions without duly accounting for them. And there is no reason why the Revenue authorities, who are not generally at all delicate about standing on their legal rights, should not go back a few years, and look up some of the payments which have been thus evaded. But what I would chiefly advise is that people should not make solicitors trustees, except where they are near relatives who can be trusted to do the right thing, or are associated with other trustees competent to keep a tight hand upon them. Doubtless before long we shall have a public trustee, when many of the difficulties which now attend the creation and administration of trusts will be ended. The sooner the better.

A taxpayer who, like many of us, considered himself to have been arbitrarily and illegally assessed by the income-tax authorities, has been invoking all the powers of the State to upset a decision of the Special Commissioners of Income Tax. As might be expected, he was not successful, though he had a Cabinet Minister to back him up, and though he laid his case in turn before the Financial Secretary of the Treasury, the Chairman of the Board of Inland Revenue, and the Prime Minister. As Mr. Gladstone put it in a letter to the aggrieved taxpayer, "as the law now stands, the Commissioners are the only authority in whom is vested the power of determining the amount in which persons are to be assessed." Mr. Gladstone refrains, however, from expressing any approval of the state of the law, and if he and his colleagues would create some right of appeal from the decrees of these autocrats, I think it would be generally recognised as a salutary reform.

I remarked the other day that it was strange that any educated person should fall into the error of supposing that the present century ends in 1899, but there is no doubt that many who ought to know better do thus err. A correspondent tells me that among such is no less a person than the dramatist Kotzebue, who makes this mistake in his short play, "Das neue Jahrhundert." This only shows that one may be a great dramatist without knowing much about arithmetic. Ignorance often crops up in unexpected places. Miss Costigan, it will be remembered, was able to make a success as Mrs. Haller without ever having heard of Kotzebue.

The advertisement columns of the daily papers afford a perennial food for meditation. Here is an instance:—

> LADY HELP required, 21 to 28, or widow, 30 to 39, by an elderly Lady, where a servant is kept. Must be able to amuse by music, singing, a good reader, with little needlework. Wages £13; a rise after six months.—Apply, with music and songs, three to seven o'clock, &c.

Why this selection of the mystic seven years from twenty-one to twenty-eight in the case of a maid, or the period from thirty to thirty-nine in the case of a widow? But, above all, why a beggarly 5s. a week to a lady, who is expected to be not merely a servant, but a needlewoman, a cultured companion, and a vocal and instrumental musician? Why is an educated lady expected to work harder than a maid of all work, and to work for less?

Some of my readers doubtless recollect the man Kensit, of Paternoster-row, who was gibbeted in Truth some two or three years ago as a vendor of obscene literature in the Protestant interest. Of late this individual has been advertising a "Protestant Truth Society," with himself as Secretary. A lady who wrote to him for information about this concern received the following answer:—

> The Protestant Truth Society.
>
> Secretary, John Kensit.
>
> Object—The extensive circulation of Protestant literature. Means used—Public meetings, depots for the sale of Protestant literature, circulation through the post, aggressive action, and free distribution.
>
> 18, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.,
> October 15, 1890.
>
> Dear Madam,—The Society has not yet been in existence one year and, therefore, our first report is not yet ready. We are quite in infant form and cannot give President, although I hope very soon to give the name of an active, earnest, prominent man as such. Our funds at present have been very small, and I have held the office of both Secretary and Treasurer, honorary. The Society has been formed really to help me in the matter of free grants and otherwise assist the circulation of literature I have published. No money is paid for rent, salary, &c., but entirely given to the work.
>
> I enclose you prospectus, and will send you report, &c., when published.—Yours, [illegible] J. Kensit.

From this and "the enclosed prospectus" I gather that the "Protestant Truth Society" is J. Kensit, plus any noodles who will send him money for the objects of the "Society;" that the Executive of the "Society" is Kensit; and that the objects of the "Society" are to purchase and distribute the publications of Kensit. If sectarian bigotry induces "Protestants" to pay money to Kensit on such terms, they deserve to lose it. This, however, is by no means the same thing as saying that Kensit deserves to get it.

A Fair Beautiful Skin.—By washing with Sulpholine Soap the natural tint and peach-like bloom of a perfect complexion is ensured.

For Throat Irritation and Cough, Epps's Glycerine Jujubes will always be found effective. Sold only in boxes 7½d., or tins 1s. 1½d. labelled "James Epps & Co., Ltd., Homœopathic Chemists, London.

My readers will also remember one Davey. His exploits were described in TRUTH. Having swindled various persons, he became the tenant of a house in Portland-place, whence he attempted to rob several Members of Parliament by pretending that he was hindering the publication of defamatory libels concerning them. The last time that I heard about him he was in Chicago "on the swindle." He was there representing himself as an eminent medical man, and an intimate friend of the Prince of Wales. It would seem that Davey, on leaving Chicago, went to New York, where he resided at the Brunswick Hotel, and as a visitor frequented the Union League Club. From the New York papers I gather that an Englishman is now in the Toombs Prison under the name of Robert Williams, and they say that there is little doubt that this Robert Williams is Robert Williams Davey. The following is the description given of Williams or Davey :—

He is above middle height, portly and erect, and wears a tawny beard fashioned to a point. His face is one of intelligence and refinement, and only in his eyes is there any indication of obliquity of character. He is entered on the prison books as aged forty-seven.

If the American authorities have got hold of Davey I trust that they will keep him, for a viler and more pernicious scoundrel never landed on their shores.

Our old friend the Spanish prisoner, who holds the clue to a treasure which has been buried at different times in all parts of England, Ireland, Scotland, and the Continent of Europe, is a bold man. He is now addressing himself, with the same old tale, to various respectable citizens of Manchester and Salford. One of them writes :—

I don't know why the Spanish prisoner has singled us out for his attentions, unless he thinks that we must all be flats here because we return your friend, Sir H. H. Howorth, to represent us at Westminster.

This is unkind to Sir Henry Howorth. If I may suggest a more charitable explanation, perhaps the Spanish swindler thinks that in a Conservative constituency his circulars are not so likely to fall into the hands of readers of TRUTH. In this, however, I can assure my Spanish friend that he is mistaken.

The following mysterious advertisement has been appearing in certain provincial papers, e.g., the Bradford Observer and the Bradford Argus :—

The Directors notify the rate of interest to be allowed on deposits for the month of October, 1893, as follows :—

One month's notice	3 per cent.
Three months' „	4½ „
Six „ „	6 „

James Campbell, Secretary.

BROWNING SUPPLY CO.,
Goring, Sussex.

Lest any one should be moved by this announcement to entrust the Browning Supply Co. with deposits of cash, the following information concerning this institution may be of service. Goring is a small village comprising two shops, a public house, and a few cottages. The name of the "Browning Supply Company" does not appear there. A man named Clifford Clarke, however, who is also known as "Campbell," is reported to be the manager of this Company. He has lived in furnished apartments in Goring for the last eight or nine months. He does not openly carry on any business, and he has on several occasions figured in the County Court. These facts, few as they are, will, I trust, be sufficient not only to prevent the Browning Supply "Directors" from receiving any further deposits, but also to prevent newspapers at Bradford and elsewhere publishing any more of the "Secretary's" advertisements.

If our Post Office should ever adopt the United States law against using the mails for fraudulent purposes, there is another leaf which might with advantage be borrowed from the American Statute-book at the same time. This is a provision for checking the practice, which most swindlers adopt, of having their letters addressed to them at shops. It is thus described in an article by Mr. Willdey, of the General Post Office, on "Foreign Post Offices," published in the United Service Magazine :—

The Postmaster-General may, upon evidence satisfactory to him that any person is using any fictitious or assumed name, title, or address, in conducting by means of the Post Office any business scheme or device in violation of the provision of this Act, instruct the postmaster of any place at which letters arrive addressed to such fictitious names to require the person claiming or receiving them to attend at the Post Office and be identified; and if he fail to appear, and it be satisfactorily proved that the letters, cards, or packets are addressed to a fictitious, false, or assumed name or address, such letters, &c., shall be forwarded to the Dead Letter Office as "fictitious matter."

Mr. Willdey states that a flourishing American fraud, known as the "green goods" swindle, has been very successfully dealt with under this law, and hardly a day passes but what I have cases under my notice which show how useful a similar law would be in England.

I hear it frequently asked whether a man against whom a verdict of "not proven" is found can be tried again for the same offence. I am told by Scotch lawyers that this is as impossible as if the verdict had been "not guilty."

Among the usury performances that have lately come under my notice is one in which a youth, who was a clerk to a firm of stockbrokers, borrowed on October 12 £5 of one "Talbot," alias the "Moorgate Mutual Society," of 28, Finsbury Pavement, and gave a bill for £8, payable November 30. In addition to this, 5s. was deducted from the advance for "expenses," so that the victim was actually to pay £3. 5s. for a loan of £4. 15s. for seven weeks. This works out at the rate of considerably over 500 per cent. per annum. When the bill fell due, it was open to the debtor to renew it for a month by paying a further £3. A better instance of the pernicious trade done by sharks of the "Talbot" class could not be found; for this Shylock had a declaration from his victim that he was a clerk in a City house, and knew, therefore, the deadly temptation towards which he was driving the wretched lad.

It will be noticed that my Legal Pillory is this week conspicuous by its absence. In this season of peace and goodwill toward men I am loth to mar the enjoyment of my friends the Great Unpaid, and so, for this week only, I have decided to let their blunders go unchronicled. Those who ought to have been placed in the Pillory will, I trust, show their appreciation of my clemency by endeavouring in future to administer the law in a truer spirit of justice and mercy. Nothing will be more gratifying to me than to find evidences of improvement in this direction, and I shall be delighted to welcome the time when there are no longer any Magisterial mistakes or misdeeds to correct and censure. But I fear that time is not yet.

"It was stated that his family were in a state of starvation, having neither fuel nor food in the house." I quote this sentence from the report of a case recently heard by Messrs. C. Wykeham Martin, N. Story-Maskelyne, J. H. Sadler, and E. C. Trepplin at the Wootton Bassett Petty Sessions. The defendant, one Goulding, was summoned for non-payment of arrears of poor-rate, and it might be imagined that the disclosure as to his poverty and the suffering of his family was followed by the dismissal, or at all events the adjournment, of the case. But this was not what happened. If Messrs. Wykeham Martin and Co. experienced any feeling of compassion for poor Goulding and his family, they effectually smothered such unmagisterial sentiment, and "issued an order for distress" in the usual way.

On November 2 I referred to certain disclosures which were made at an inquest concerning the death of a lady inmate of a "Medical Boarding House," carried on by Dr. C. D. Sherrard at Avalon House, Eastbourne. Dr. Sherrard, it may be recollected, informed the Coroner that his treatment was "moral and spiritual," and a letter was read in which he said "he was sure God would not allow anything to happen in that establishment." I ventured to suggest that the Divine supervision of the establishment should be supplemented by that of the Commissioners in Lunacy. It is satisfactory to note that this suggestion has borne fruit, and that Dr. Sherrard has been committed for trial under a summons issued at the instance of the Commissioners for keeping a lunatic in his house without a licence.

There seems to be as much variety about the sentences passed on Naval deserters as in the decrees of Petty Sessions. For a seaman or marine tried and sentenced on the Victory at Portsmouth the regulation sentence is 28 days' hard labour. For a marine tried at headquarters at Plymouth or Chatham the sentence ranges from 56 days to 6 months; while men tried on their own ships at either of these ports usually get 90 days. All these anomalies can be verified from recent records at Lewes Gaol. There cannot possibly be any excuse for them.

It is high time that some practical steps were taken to put a stop to the operations of the gentry who go about collecting money for "Volunteer" Fire-brigades. The man Skevington, the ringleader in this line of business, is still as active as ever, notwithstanding the many warnings that have been published against him, and I hear from a gentleman in Marylebone that he has within the last week or two collected large sums in that neighbourhood. The County Council have been applied to again and again on the subject, but they are, of course, powerless to stop the touting business, and, limited as their powers are, I take it that they could not even provide money for the prosecution of any of the parties. What is required is a private citizen with sufficient public spirit to set the law in motion.

Bumble seems to regard any conveyance as good enough for a sick pauper. The other day a scandal occurred in a Suffolk Union through an aged and ailing couple having the bad grace to die soon after a bitterly cold journey to the workhouse in a tumbrel. Now the Bath coroner has had to inquire into the death of an old man who, whilst suffering from general debility and chronic bronchitis with an enfeebled heart, was removed to the workhouse in an open bread-cart. It was a miserable day, rain and snow were falling, and on the way the deceased complained of the cold. A short time after his admission to the workhouse he expired, and, although the doctor did not definitely say that his end was accelerated by the exposure, his removal in such weather in an open bread-cart was none the less reprehensible. It is made all the more inexcusable by the fact that the Bath Union actually possesses a special conveyance for sick and infirm paupers

---

A lady residing on the South-Eastern line asks me to make public the following information. I hope that it may prove useful:—

I constantly hear of people getting out at Cannon-street Station instead of Charing-cross, owing to the close resemblance between the two Stations. It would be very good of you to let people know, through the medium of your paper, that there is not any difficulty in distinguishing the two Stations if the lamps on the platforms are carefully noted. At Cannon-street each lamp has a single light, at Charing-cross each has three, arranged in the form of a cross.

A would-be corrector writes to inform me that I err in stating that an Out-door Officer of Customs cannot get beyond £100 per annum. After reaching that point, he says, the Out-door officer can pass another examination and become an Examining Officer. This is trumpery quibbling. My statement had reference to the class of Out-door Officers, and I gave correctly the limit to which that class can rise, contrasting it with the corresponding limits of an Excise Assistant. As I also pointed out, the entrance examination for Out-door Officers is stiffer than that for the Excise. Consequently, the fact that the former must pass a second examination in order to get into the next class only accentuates the contrast between their position and that of the Excisemen. In the Customs a man by every possible exertion, and with all possible luck in his favour, can only reach a salary of £110 in eleven years. An Exciseman would, in the ordinary course of things, reach £137. 10s. in the same time.

Ovoca.—A perfect Old Irish Whisky. Medically recommended. Absolutely pure, genuine. Thoroughly matured, palatable. Of all Wine Merchants. Wholesale only, A. Millar & Co., Dublin.

Annual Sale.—From 1st January until 6th inclusive, Messrs. Benjamin, of Ulster House, Conduit-st., W., will sell their sample garments at an average reduction of 50 per cent.

I have been asked to notice two little works by Mr. H. C. Richards, "The Candidates' and Agents' Guide in Contested Elections," and "The Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, Annotated and Explained." (Jordan & Sons, Chancery-lane.) The books are well written, and may be studied with advantage. Possibly it was thought that they would be rendered specially interesting to me by a recollection of my former encounters with the author at Northampton—though he did not, of course, acquire any experience of corrupt and illegal practices in that pattern constituency. Mr. Richards explains that his object is to be "the means of saving candidates and their agents from the pitfalls into which enthusiasm and lack of legal knowledge may otherwise lead them." That Conservative candidates and agents stand in urgent need of such salvation was conclusively shown by certain revelations before her Majesty's Judges at Rochester, Walsall, and Hexham; and Mr. Richards sets forth a good deal of information which may be profitably studied by those members of his Party who wish to walk in the path of electoral purity. It seems to me, however, that in the following passage he somewhat gives away the character of the Primrose League:—

> Yet so absolutely independent ought the Primrose League to be, that there never should be any chance given for holding the Member or Candidate responsible for the acts of the League or any of its members, either on the ground of Agency or otherwise.

The Editor of the Siam Free Press, I regret to learn, is again in trouble. The attempt to coerce him into silence by personal outrage having failed, he is now being harassed by a series of libel actions. These actions are brought by officials of the Siamese Government on the most flimsy pretexts; and from the particulars with which I have been furnished, it is pretty clear that the object of so much litigation is to suppress the paper. Fearless and independent criticism is, no doubt, badly wanted at Bangkok, but the powers that be are evidently determined not to permit it. I think if I were in my contemporary's position, I should seriously consider whether it was worth while continuing what must be, in such a country, a hopeless struggle.

A correspondent writing from Trinidad, apropos to the recent discussion of coolie immigration in TRUTH, points out that there is one aspect of the system on which nothing has been said—namely, its effect on the employer of coolies. We have almost forgotten nowadays the arguments which brought about the abolition of slavery in the British Empire, but one of the strongest of them was the demoralising effect upon the slaveowner of the exercise of proprietary rights over his fellow creatures. The evidence of this has always been visible enough wherever slavery has prevailed. The Trinidad colonist to whom I refer points specially to the fact that the master of coolies is next door to a slaveowner. It is true that, as the coolie is only bound for five years, the employer sees one-fifth of his slaves emancipated every year, but he is able at once to supply their places. It is also true that he cannot flog them to make them work; but he can send them to gaol if they refuse to do his bidding. He differs, therefore, from a slaveowner only in that the terror of the gaol is substituted for the terror of the lash. In this way, says my Trinidad correspondent, the tradition of slavery has been so kept alive among the governing class that if slavery itself were re-established to-morrow, it would be welcomed by most of them as an old friend.

History repeats itself. There is a letter of Charles I. to the Duke of Buckingham, in which there is a phrase in regard to Ireland which would fit in with the present state of things in Parliament:—

> As for hens, I can say but little yet, Ireland being the only egg we have yet sitten upon, and, having a thick shell, we have not yet hatched it.

Last summer Mr. Gladstone's exertions were prodigious. For months he held the field, night after night, in a discussion that tried the staying powers of younger men, but which apparently produced no ill effect upon him. But the laws of nature are unalterable, no force can be exerted without a waste of force. In youth, and, indeed, up to the confines of old age, abnormal exertion has no ill results, for it is met by recuperation. In extreme old age, it tells. No one can watch Mr. Gladstone in the House of Commons without perceiving that the work of the summer has greatly aged him. Now, although I do not always agree with him in everything, there is no man for whom I have a greater admiration, for I believe that no man has so truly devoted himself during a long life to his country's interests. I do, therefore, hope that his entourage will insist upon his passing the two most trying months of the winter—January and February—in a mild climate, as has been his wont in past years. That the House of Commons is apt to get out of hand in the absence of its Leader is true; for, whatever the ability and tact of his locum tenens may be, he is without the authority that is involved in actual leadership. But this consideration ought not to weigh in the balance against Mr. Gladstone's health. The Tories, though they attack him, are proud of him as a living evidence of the staying qualities of the Anglo-Saxon race, and they would be the last to wish that he should not continue to surprise the world by his perennial vigour for many a year, although possibly they might prefer that he should become the Patriarch of Hawarden rather than the Athlete of Westminster.

---

"TRUTH" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the MANAGER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

When Voltaire's admirers insisted upon his coming to Paris, and taking part there in theatrical performances and meetings of the Institute, we know what were the results. Yet Voltaire did not do in a week during his stay at Paris what Mr. Gladstone often does in a day. It is all nonsense to suppose that a man of eighty-five can incur the responsibilities and worries involved in the rule of an Empire, and the work of defending his policy in an Assembly where his opponents are nearly as numerous as his supporters, without serious risk, and I confess that I do not like to see Mr. Gladstone exposed to this risk. He incurs it from a sense of duty. I am by no means certain that the country has a right to demand that the risk should be continued, and I for one should—politics apart—rejoice were he to follow the example of other veterans who, when younger than he is, withdrew from the strife and turmoil of Party to a well-earned repose. At least, however, if he does insist on devoting himself to his country's service, we ought to see that the burthen lies as lightly upon him as possible.

Constantinople has not the importance it had in the days of Lord Stratford de Redcliffe. We spent one hundred millions on the Crimean War in order to restrain Russia from acquiring influence in Turkey, and we gave up subsequently all that we secured by that war. We are not likely to do the same again. At present, Russian war vessels in the Black Sea may not enter the Mediterranean; but I suspect that, in the event of a naval war between us and Russia, the Sultan would allow the vessels of the latter Power to pass the Bosphorus, assuming that Russia did not find her most prudent course to be that of making certain that our vessels could not enter the Black Sea. The Embassy at Constantinople, however, is an important one, and I think that Sir Philip Currie is an excellent selection as our Ambassador to Turkey. He has had a large experience, and has tact and ability. I see that certain Tory newspapers rejoice because, having been Lord Salisbury's private secretary, they feel confident that he will support a Tory policy. Our representatives abroad, they ought to have known, have no Party leanings. They honourably carry out the instructions transmitted to them from whomever may be Foreign Secretary.

Of course, every one who is not prepared to agree to any expenditure on armaments, no matter whether it be required or not, is reviled by the Jingo organs under the comprehensive epithet of a "Little Englander." It may be well, therefore, that one of these "traitors to the country" should himself explain his views. I—a "traitor"—will do so. I fully recognise that, being inhabitants of an island, which is the capital of a vast Empire situated in various parts of the globe, it is absolutely necessary for us that we should have a Navy adequate for the protection of our shores, and for keeping sea communications open between the component parts of the Empire. But I utterly and absolutely deny that this Navy must be so large that we shall be able to block all the ports of our opponents in a war, no matter how many the opponents may be. This would be to impose on us in peace the cost of war, and against this Sir Robert Peel—another traitor, presumably—always protested.

During the last few months the Conservative organs and the Conservative speakers have fanned the flames of a panic. What are the facts? They were explained by Sir William Harcourt. We have a Navy far superior in number of ships, in speed, in guns, and in tonnage to that of any two other naval Powers. In 1895 we shall have a Navy still superior in tonnage, but inferior in number of ships, assuming that we do not build one single vessel. But we shall during this time be building vessels. To this I have no objection; indeed, I regard it as a necessity of our geographical position. What I do object to is building more than are needed to maintain our present relative position with that of other Powers. If to hold this opinion is to be a traitor, I accept the term.

So, too, with regard to expansion of empire. Our Empire is the largest that the world has ever seen. The cost of defending it is thrown on the inhabitants of the British Isles. Assuredly it is possible to rest and be thankful for what we have, without endangering its safety by everlastingly grabbing more. Still more reasonable is it, in view of the want and misery that call aloud at home for redress, not to expend our means in meddlesome philanthropy outside the limits of our Empire; all the more as generally this philanthropy is a mere cloak for speculators to drag us into connivance with them in robbery and murder with the object of filling their own pockets.

What I would have is a reduction in our Army to meet extra expenditure on our Navy. Our Army is a toy, and an expensive one. With a strong and efficient Navy, it is not needed. All that is required is a sufficient number of soldiers to man our garrisons, and I believe that this demand would be satisfactorily met by having a body of marines that could serve alike in garrisons and on board ship.

Ovaline Toilet Soap, made with Yolk of Egg, is a wonderful discovery for the skin and hair. As a Shaving Soap it has no equal. 6d. & 8d. per tablet, 1/6 per box.—52, King-st., Regent-st., London.

Minton's (Limited). Minton's China.—A visit to Messrs. Mortlock's extensive collection in Oxford-st. and Orchard-st. will conclusively prove the superiority of taste and lowness of price for which this house has been so celebrated during the last century.

In the recent debate on our Naval armaments I observed that several speakers alluded to the necessity of remaining during a war masters in the Mediterranean, as though this were a matter of paramount importance to us. I should have said that it was far more important for us to remain masters outside the Mediterranean during a war, and in the Mediterranean after the war. Suppose a war with France and Russia. Both Powers have a seaboard in the Mediterranean; for the contingency of the Russian Black Sea Fleet passing through the Bosphorus would have to be regarded as a possibility. If, then, we wished to remain masters during the war, we should have to occupy the Mediterranean with such a force as would blockade Toulon, Ajaccio, Algiers, and the mouth of the Dardanelles.

How many ships would this require? Would it not be strategically wiser to blockade the Mediterranean itself, by a fleet at Gibraltar? for this is practically the only exit from that Sea, no ships being likely to pass through the Suez Canal if we retain our hold on the Red Sea. This plan of campaign I unhesitatingly assert is the only practical one that recommends itself to the minds of our Naval experts. Our remaining masters in the Mediterranean after the war would depend upon the outcome of the war, and not upon our being masters in it during the war.

But how about Egypt? Would not France land an Army there, if we had no Fleet in the Mediterranean? Unquestionably she would, and this is precisely the reason why we ought to bring our occupation of that country to an end. It is our strategical weakness; not our strength. Admit that it would be a blunder to endeavour to hold the Mediterranean, instead of blocking it and communicating with the East by the Cape, we should actually have to pursue a course fraught with danger, on account of this occupation. And yet the only plea for an occupation is that it would in the event of war prove useful to us!

It would seem that the Europeans in South Africa are not quite so unanimous in their enthusiasm for Mr. Rhodes as his friends here would have us believe. It would be odd if they were. Lobengula's territories extend over an area larger than France and Spain, and although some Europeans may have shares in Mr. Rhodes's Company, all have not. If Mr. Gladstone were to propose that he should kill off the inhabitants of some vast district and only allow in it such European settlers as might be ready to pay to a Company of which he was the financier a heavy price for carrying on any avocation there, the popularity of the G. O. M. would not long survive.

Here is an extract from a letter written by Mr. O'Reilly, one of the most respected members of the Cape Parliament, to the Rhodes Reception Committee at Cape Town:—

As it appears from a report of the proceedings, published in this morning's Cape Times, that the meeting was pleased, in my absence, to put my name on the Committee appointed to carry out arrangements for a public banquet to be given to the Hon. C. J. Rhodes on his return from Mashonaland, I am, now reluctantly obliged to ask you to have my name removed, and to state my reasons why. Personally, I have the greatest respect for Mr. Rhodes, and in my heart I am thankful for the escape, so far, of the Europeans engaged in the late operations in Matabeleland from any disaster; but I cannot familiarise myself with the thought that the destruction of many thousands of the Matabele nation in defence of their own country, and without, in my opinion, any sufficient cause or provocation, by the man slaying machines of the Chartered Company should be taken hold of as a fit occasion for the display of public rejoicings on the return of the Chief Director of the Joint Stock Company carrying on business under the style and firm of the Chartered Company of British South Africa, Limited. I feel the incongruity of such rejoicing all the more keenly when I contrast the truly noble and chivalrous bearing of the Matabele chief and nation protecting every white man and woman at Buluwayo, sending the missionaries away out of danger, and not only protecting their lives, but guarding the properties they had to leave behind against loss or injury, with the yet unexplained and uncontradicted atrocities of the force of the Chartered Company under Captain Lendy, within a few miles of Victoria, which were the precursors of the subsequent expedition against Lobengula, together with the infamous arrest and cruel shooting down at Tati, in the midst of an armed camp, held by a force of several hundred of Imperial troops, of two innocent ambassadors carrying messages of peace from the Matabele chief to her Majesty's High Commissioner, accompanied by a white man who had just been permitted by the Matabele chief to leave Buluwayo in safety, and by a brother of Lobengula, as a guarantee of their sacred character as truce-bearers. Under the circumstances, I cannot possibly allow my name to be connected with the public demonstration which you and others of the citizens of Cape Town have chosen to inaugurate on the occasion of Mr. Rhodes's return from the country where the above scenes were enacted.

Here, too, is an extract from an article in the Standard and Diggers' News, of Johannesburg, a newspaper which, from its well-known independence, and the ability with which it is conducted, carries great weight:—

SALVATION BY SLAUGHTER.

That picture of Fallen Majesty fleeing at snail's pace in a waggon of his, to which faithful subjects are yoked, his oxen having failed, has its own pathos; and once again the temptation is to sympathise with the foe, chivalrous to the last, upon whom the necessity to fight has been so ruthlessly forced by Cecil Rhodes and his Company-mongering colleagues. True, it is well that civilisation should take the place of savagery, and that the back-stretches of the Continent should be thrown open to the disciples of development and lovers of the methods of peace. But the manner of doing it, and the excuse for the shedding of blood, must always be considered before even Civilisation's Cause can be declared righteous, and before Civilisation's sword can descend with justice upon the Dark-skins. In the present instance, what has been the justification for knocking the Matabele nation to pieces? The Chartered excuse is that sundry Mashonas were ruthlessly slaughtered by assegais of the Matabele—at Victoria, before the eyes of the white men—a thing against which the soul of white men was, they say, bound to revolt. Perhaps true. But it was not enough, for this offence, that the Chartered revenge was taken by slaughtering the Matabele raiders before they could repent them of their sins and take themselves off. No! The revenge must be carried further—the Company being put to it for gold-ground—and the whole Matabele nation must be wiped out, notwithstanding its King offered cattle to expiate the misdeeds of the young men, notwithstanding the heads of his nation desired peace and were still content to let the white man wander their country wherever they would. Consequently, from the date of that Victoria episode—surely the place was unhappily named after a Sovereign lady so noted for peace and fair play in all things—the business of revenge-reaping has gone on apace, and a punishment has been meted out that has been more merciless than anything the sable savage himself could have contrived. Not an iota of mercy has been shown: the man-slaying machines of the Company have hewn down guilty

SELF GREY LAMB'S WOOL UNDERCLOTHING. English manufacture. Will not shrink and can be supplied in several substances. Price lists sent.—SAMPSON & Co., 268, 270, Oxford-street, W.

SUCCESSFUL BECAUSE OF SUPERIOR MERIT.—Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer has immense sales everywhere. It never fails to restore grey hair to its natural colour and beauty.

and innocent alike, and the Company now makes for its final triumph in the capture of Lobengula, the King.

The end, as an end, is perhaps well in its way. The means towards that end can never be justified, and certainly can never secure South Africa's approval—if we except, of course, the manufactured approval of the share-holding section at Cape Town where they made ready to fête Mr. Rhodes and his friends. Fortunately for the credit of the country, this has not, however, been a South African war, and South Africa is in no way committed. Cecil Rhodes and his Company have for the most part waged it, and South Africa has had, nolens volens, to look on, yet full of a sense of shame and disgust at the brutality of the whole business, and knowing all the time that the battling was but "business" under the thin disguise of necessity, the object of it all being to bring money into the coffers of a Company and to shed glory and greatness on a single man. That South Africa has disapproved the "war" from first to last has been manifested in many ways. Protests have gone up against it from Mashonaland itself, and in Colony and State not a pen, save those of a servile subsidised Press, has written a line of legitimate laudation. The fact is, South Africa has beheld slaughter for slaughter's sake, punishment for profit's sake, and war for wealth's sake; in short, has witnessed a scene that was not South African, a scene in which it saw neither justice nor generosity, and which it dared not condone. It has seen the Victoria raiders shot down before they could accomplish the distance of grace that was, in a weak moment and by way of display, granted them; it has beheld Lobengula's messengers to the white people murdered where they stood, mute, and full of dark dismay; it has seen a King forced into a quarrel which he would gladly have compromised, and all along the line advantage taken of the fiery mood of a few of his young men; to-day it beholds that same King hounded down in his helplessness, like a buck by dogs, while Rhodes sails south to take the credit of it all, and to prove to the Colonial mind that "alone he did it," that he has to thank the Imperial forces for nothing, that he has "saved South Africa."

Manifestly it is salvation of a kind which South Africa could very well do without. If, in its stead, Mr. Rhodes confined himself to the proper discharge of his official duties nearer home, and cared more for colonising than for Company-mongering, then the Colony would be much better pleased, and it would have been spared from witnessing with shame this scene of spoliation and slaughter for spoliation's sake—a scene that must for all time rest as a stain on South Africa's 'scutcheon—put there, not by its own hand, but by the red hand of the ruthless adventurer and the titled fortune-hunter, friends of Cecil Rhodes, for whom he stands as sponsor, and for whose benefit he makes South Africa a mere stepping-stone for selfish ends, sacrificing meanwhile the genius that is within him.

I was highly amused at the privilege debate last week, for had the Conservatives really known what Mr. Knox had said, their indignation would have been less, if, indeed, they had not commended him. Speaking at the Memorial Hall, Mr. Knox alluded to the supineness of Liberals in respect to the Matabele raid, both in the House and out of it, and suggested that, with regard to the former, this might be due to their having become shareholders of the Chartered Company by an allotment of shares, which, as the shares shortly after their issue were at a premium of 300 per cent., would have put in their pockets £3 per share, had they sold them. Mr. Knox distinctly disclaimed any implication of personal corruption, for he expressly said that these M.P.'s, if really they had obtained an allotment, paid, like all other allottees, the par value of the shares. The whole suggestion came, therefore, to this: That Liberal M.P.'s might have been allottees of shares of the Company, and, if they had been, and had sold at market price, they would have made £3 per share, and that, if so, a sense of gratitude towards the Company might have exercised an hypnotic effect on them. Mr. Balfour urged that Mr. Knox ought to withdraw this suggestion. How could he? for this would have been to have affirmed a negative.

Rimmel's Toilet Vinegar has for over Half a Century sustained its High Reputation as an Indispensable Toilet requisite. Rimmel's Perfumes, Toilet Soaps, Powders, &c.—London & Paris.

I really do not know whether any Liberal M.P.'s were allottees of the shares of the Company; whether, being allottees, they sold their shares or kept them; or whether they have trafficked in the shares. They may have done either, and they may have made money or lost money by the speculation, without any imputation of personal corruption. What I say amused me was that Mr. Knox made the suggestion not against Conservative M.P.'s but against Liberal M.P.'s, as a mode of accounting for the tacit support that many of them have given to the Company's war against the Matabele.

SCRUTATOR.

THE CHILDREN'S "CARR."

MR. J. COMYNS CARR is the true friend of the children. He has given them one of the most charmingly graceful and exhilarating entertainments that the stage has seen for many a long year. Those of us who have well-stored memories go back to the Planché-Vestris days at the Lyceum, others recall the fairy and children's scenes in E. L. Blanchard's early Drury Lane pantomimes, but nothing was ever better done than this version of the "Pied Piper of Hamelin," by Robert Buchanan, who has given us a far more poetical version of the old legend than Robert Browning did. Every child ought to be taken once or twice during the holidays to the morning performances at the Comedy Theatre. The artistic child will feast its little eyes on the pictures of old Germany and the exquisitely coloured Mediæval dresses designed by clever Mrs. Comyns Carr. Drawing-books and copy-books ought to be filled by the youngsters with sketches of the tiny inhabitants of this ideal Nuremberg. The sentimental child—for I presume there is such a thing as a sentimental child in these days tucked away in a silent corner—will never forget, whilst memory lasts, those two pictures, one of the enchanted children following dreamily in the wake of the picturesquely ragged Piper, the other of the released children chanting their song of joy, and striving to bind the dear old fantastic magician with rose-tendrils to this happy earth. Scenic charm, beauty of costume, allurement of poetry and melody of music have seldom been so happily combined as they are in these beautiful stage pictures. And then the little lame boy! Who will ever forget the effect of the tenderly-pathetic interludes in which he is engaged? Miss Gladys Doree is a little wonder. Mr. Comyns Carr has accidentally discovered a wonderful stage child, a child with a voice that has a throb in it, a child as natural and childlike as possible, and altogether distinct from the self-conscious little brat of the order of the infant phenomenon. There is not a trace of the Crummles family or the caravan about this genuine little artist, who seems to have come straight from the nursery, and as yet to be utterly uncontaminated by the tricks and artifices of the theatre.

Let all the children who have the innocence and faith of children hurry to see this little lame boy, before too much applause and adulation turns its baby head. The innocence cannot remain long; that is impossible. On the occasion of the first performance this child was simply a revelation. But let not the comic children despair. They are not all required to fill their drawing books with sketches, or to pipe their little eyes. Already they fill the theatre with the tiny treble of childish laughter when the dear little fat Mayor of Hamelin appears in the person of a clever descendant of the "great little Robson," and, take my word for it, when the fanciful part of the entertainment is over, there will be merriment and to spare over Mr. Lionel Brough as Mr. Barlow—the "Barlow in Maschera," as witty Frank Burnand calls him—and over little Tommy Merton and Harry Sandford in their early century costumes. Now that pantomimes are all procession, and the clown and hot poker and the sausages and the buttered slide are voted out of date, it is delightful to get one theatre where the children can enjoy that essence of all fun—mischief. How they roar when Tommy puts a squib into Mr. Barlow's egg; how they scream when the sand tumbles out of the tutor's University cap; how they yell when the pedantic Dominie sits down on a darning-needle; how they shout when Tommy has to kneel down and gets a taste of Dr. Barlow's birch! Pictures of pure mischief are just what the children enjoy to their hearts' content. Many a modern child may not have heard of Sandford and Merton, may never have read their catechisms, may never have delighted in the famous illustrations to the old book; but they cannot fail to be amused by the practical jokes played on their tutor by these audacious young rascals in the new stage version, or the shameful puns with which that arch-punster Mr. Frank Burnand decorates the text.

Much has been said about the music that has been used for the "Pied Piper of Hamelin." It may be very bad taste on my part, but I consider it most appropriate, and exactly the kind of music that such a subject requires when it is specially prepared for the edification of children. Those dreadful gentlemen, the critics, seem to be in a pother because the melodies are not up to the musical standard of Wagner, Brahms, or even Mascagni. If they were, in all probability the children would not either understand or appreciate them; but I will fairly confess that when I went out of the theatre I found myself humming over the song of the children, which is carefully introduced to the prettiest pictures of this enchanting little play. To have given elaborate or classical music to children would surely have been a mistake. What was wanted was attractive melody, and this is exactly what Mr. Allwood has supplied. But then I am told, "pretty, no doubt, but it has all been done before." But do children know that? Are their little brains the storehouses of musical melodies? Everything has been done before, and I cannot see why young children, or old children either, for the matter of that, should be solemnly told they ought not to enjoy that which obviously gives them pleasure. What is the matter with Mr. Allwood's music that it should be ridiculed or pooh-poohed, when the children are moved to tears by it, and go home humming the pretty intermezzo?

I am bound, in all candour, to confess that the majority of the company act their parts far better than they say them. Miss Lena Ashwell, who plays the Mayor's daughter in an enchanting robe of green and blue—who says that green and blue do not mix!—is a miniature Ellen Terry, with all her coaxing moods and gracefulness; but the poor girl was either horribly nervous at the outset or else she has no ear. No one ought to be allowed to sing out of tune where all is so harmonious and melodious, but certainly the maiden and her lover tenor set my teeth on edge. Poor Mr. Frank Wyatt looked the Pied Piper of Hamelin to perfection. He might have stepped out of Pinwell's famous picture, but this capital artist suffers from stage-fright, and he got it to such an alarming extent that he not only forgot his words, but actually could not read them off the printed text. The tenor was rather a heavy gentleman, and I kept wondering why the services of Mr. Jack Robertson could not have been secured for Conrad the Cooper. You all remember how charming he was in the opera that was presented at the Court on the first night of the last triple bill. It was natural when the play was so delightful that the audience should amuse themselves with selecting ideal representatives for the various characters. The choice for the Piper—failing, of course, poor Fred Leslie, who would have played and sung the part to perfection—fell pretty unanimously on Mr. Beerbohm Tree. Of course they remembered his Gringoire, and what a picture he would have made of the Piper! Yes, I think with Mr. Tree as the Piper, Mrs. Tree—who sings charmingly—as the Mayor's Daughter, and Mr. Jack Robertson as Conrad, a perfectly ideal cast would have been secured. But, as that was absolutely impossible, it is nonsense talking about it, "except for fun," as the children say, and the little ones are quite contented with the cast as it stands. The popular manager of the Comedy Theatre has this Christmas well earned the title of the "Children's Carr." The children will drag it cheerfully to success, pelting the popular manager with roses and greeting him with hearty cheers.

PITFALLS OF INSURANCE POLICIES.

A group of cases has recently come under my notice which contains lessons for insurers of all classes, and also suggests a doubt as to whether Insurance Companies always deal in the fairest possible way with their customers. In the case which I will describe first, Mr. W., a commercial traveller, was insured against death, and partial or total disablement, by a policy of the Accident Insurance Company, Limited. Among the conditions endorsed in the policy were:—(1) That the insured was not to travel beyond the limits of Europe without the permission of the Directors and the payment of any extra premium required; and (2) that in the event of any accident to the insured, notice in writing must be given to the Company at its London office within fourteen days of the occurrence. In the course of his business Mr. W. had to travel to Arabia and the Red Sea coast. He duly obtained permission of the House Drainage.—Sanitary work of every kind contracted for.—The Sanitary Engineering Co., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster.

Company and paid for the purpose an extra premium of £1, which transaction was embodied in a "Special Stipulation" attached to the policy. Mr. W. then proceeded to Aden, where he met with an accident which confined him to his room for five and a half weeks. At the end of that time he forwarded to London a medical report and certificate of what had occurred, and lodged with the Company a claim for compensation. After some preliminary communications, in the course of which the Company requested the attendance of Mr. W. at their office, though he was still engaged at Aden, the objection was raised that notice of the accident had not been given within fourteen days, as required by the policy. As a matter of fact, there being only one mail from Aden per week, and eleven days being occupied in transit, it was an impossibility for notice in writing to have been given within that period, except by the despatch of a special messenger by a special steamer. The Company, however, stuck to their point. In accordance with the clause to that effect, the dispute went to arbitration, and everybody unconnected with Insurance Companies will be pleased to hear that the arbitrator eventually gave his award in favour of the claimant, with costs. It must be borne in mind that at no time was any question raised by the Company as to the bona fides of the claim; reliance was placed solely upon the technical point that the condition in regard to notice had not been complied with, and this notwithstanding that this condition was clearly inapplicable to the policy as varied by the "Special Stipulation" permitting the insured to travel to Arabia and the Red Sea. It would be no impossibility for a traveller in some parts of Arabia to have no means of sending a written message to St. Swithin's-lane within a month. That is to say, if the condition as to notice was to be read as applicable to the "Special Stipulation," the policy was worthless for the purpose of a journey to Arabia, and the Company took the sum of £1 from the assured under an agreement which on their view of it might easily render the policy worthless. On this view of the matter, I think most people will share my surprise in finding that any Insurance Company should attempt to evade its liabilities by raising such a point.

In the second of the cases to which I have referred, a different question is raised. Here Mr. S., a tradesman, effected an insurance with the Goldsmiths' and General Burglary Insurance Association, Limited, of 85, Gresham-street, E.C. The policy contained an arbitration clause of the usual character. In the course of time, thieves broke in and stole. Mr. S. sustained a loss which he estimated at £32. 19s., and a claim to that amount was made upon the Company. The claim being disputed, Mr. S., in accordance with the Arbitration Clause, appointed an arbitrator, and, through his solicitors. Messrs. Steadman, Van Praagh, Sims, & Co., of Old Broad-street, gave the Association notice to do the same, In serving the notice the solicitors wrote:—

> In view of the smallness of the claim, we shall be glad if you will select a gentleman who will arbitrate without a fee, or for a nominal fee. Our client, in appointing the arbitrator he has, has had this in view.

In reply, the Secretary wrote that the Association had appointed as their arbitrator Mr. Bompas, Q.C., who had acted for them in that capacity before. Being doubtful whether Mr. Bompas, Q.C., was precisely the man who would act "without a fee or for a nominal fee," Messrs. Steadman & Co. wrote to inquire whether the Company had arranged any scale of fees with Mr. Bompas for references of this kind, and, if so, what the scale was. Here is the reply:—

> Dear Sirs,—We duly received your letter of the 23rd inst., and, in reply, I may say that no scale of fees has been arranged between this Company and Mr. Bompas, but we send you by separate post a copy of the Pawnbrokers' Gazette containing a reference to a former arbitration case, which will give you an indication of our procedure in such cases.—Yours faithfully,
>
> Jno. H. Haig, Secretary.

The "indication" thus afforded was as complete as Messrs. Steadman & Co. could possibly have desired. The copy of the Pawnbrokers' Gazette referred to (dated February 6, 1893) contained a report of an arbitration in a case of "Leapman v. The Goldsmiths' and General Burglary Insurance Association, Limited." It appeared that in this case Mr. Bompas, Q.C., acted as arbitrator for the Company, and Mr. Edward Pollock for the insured. After a four days' hearing, the arbitrators, being (as almost invariably happens) unable to agree, the question at issue went to Mr. Channell, Q.C., who had been appointed umpire. Mr. Channell gave his award in favour of the Company, and assessed the costs of the arbitrators and umpire at £283. 3s., which sum was to be divided between the parties, while the rest of the costs of the arbitration were to be borne by the unsuccessful party. It thus appeared that the costs of the arbitrators and umpire were at the rate of about £70 per day, apart from all the other costs incidental to the arbitration. Such was the significant "indication of our procedure in such cases," to which the Company now called the attention of Mr. S.'s solicitors. Not unnaturally a gentleman making a claim for £33 was not over-anxious to enter upon a "procedure" which, even in the event of his succeeding, would probably involve him in costs to at least the amount of the sum recovered, and which, in the event of his failure, would land him in an expenditure only to be reckoned in hundreds of pounds. As a matter of course, Mr. S. abandoned his claim without more ado.

Whether the Company anticipated such a result when they forwarded the Pawnbrokers' Gazette, and called attention to the case indicating their "procedure in such cases," I cannot say. Inadvertently or not, however, their Secretary has given an unfortunate opening to an unfavourable interpretation of their motives. It may be said, of course, that the Company possibly had had good reasons for trying to frighten the claimant. The force of that I fully appreciate. It is easy to understand that a Burglary Insurance Company undertakes a very peculiar risk, and must make it known that it will not be trifled with. But this is beside the point which I wish to raise. Given on the one hand a perfectly bonâ-fide claim, and on the other hand a perfectly bonâ-fide ground for disputing it, is it, I would ask, fair to the insured that the Company should have the power of holding over him such a weapon as was employed so effectually in the above instance? In my opinion nothing can be more unfair. If an arbitration is to mean an expenditure of £70 a day, no man in his senses will press a disputed claim unless his case is flawless—and what case ever was?—or the amount at issue is of serious magnitude. Here, again, the full effect of the policy could hardly have been appreciated by the insured at the time he entered into the contract. On the face of it, arbitration is a cheap and speedy mode of settling a dispute without recourse to litigation. As such the insured regards it; but in point of fact in the case of all small claims the arbitration clause sets up a tribunal which will charge £20 for doing what could be done in a County Court for 20s.

In a third case which has come under my notice a question arose as to the insurance of a horse. By the policy, which was granted by the Horse Insurance Company, of Queen Victoria-street, the animal was insured to the amount of £20 against accidental death, or "accident necessitating the immediate destruction of the horse," or death "from disease (glanders and farcy excepted)." While so insured, the horse was attacked by disease of the fetlock joint. Two members of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons pronounced the animal unfit for further work, and advised its destruction. Such was its condition that on its way to the Veterinary College to be examined, the police stopped the animal and threatened the owner with prosecution. The owner requested the Company to send a surgeon to examine the animal, but they declined to do so, and warned him that if he had the horse slaughtered without their consent he would forfeit all claim on the Company. The only concession they offered to make was to pay him £1. 4s. (subsequently raised to £2. 8s.) in settlement of all claims, the first offer being probably less than the market value of the carcass. Here, again, the insurance was rendered valueless in a manner never anticipated, although the assured fondly imagined that he was insured against the loss of the animal through disease as well as by accident. The occurrence of three such cases as these within a space of two or three months is highly significant. No doubt people accept insurance policies of all kinds—life policies, probably, more than any—with a culpable indifference to the precise conditions attached to them. At the same time insurance policies too often contain pitfalls which even the most careful may overlook, and which would not be there if Companies were more scrupulous in their dealings with the public. Some useful examples of pitfalls are shown in the above cases, and I hope that insurers and insured will give them attention.

PIANOS FOR CIVIL SERVANTS AND OTHERS.

On March 9 last, under the heading of "The Royal Arms and Civil Service Traders," I directed attention to the circulars which were being very widely disseminated by "The Civil Service Musical Instrument Association, Limited," then held (on one evening a week) at Exeter Hall, Strand. I pointed out that the document was headed with the Royal Arms, that on its face appeared the names of the directors—Messrs. H. Day, of the Office of Works and Public Buildings; E. T. A. Kennedy, of the Inland Revenue; and W. Russell, of the War Office—and that it was accompanied by various "Opinions of the Press," many of which it was afterwards admitted were not intended for the Civil Service, &c., at all, but had been given to some other Society, with which Mr. G. Russell Nash, the Secretary of the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association, Limited, had been connected. The objection chiefly then taken was against the use of the Royal Arms, combined with the announcement of certain Government Offices, the more particularly as "ladies and persons" were invited to deposit their money at 3 per cent. On March 16 I gave the gist of a lengthy letter which had been addressed to me by Mr. Russell Nash, in which he dealt with these and other points in a manner which he considered satisfactory, and I did not. I also then pointed out that some little time back piles of his prospectuses had been issued to postmasters for distribution, and one of the Post Office employés who wished to have a Broadwood pianoforte was recommended in preference an instrument of the house of Munt, the Munt piano being charged at £31. 10s., whereas the purchaser alleged that he had afterwards discovered that a Munt piano of the class he had selected was supplied to agents at 17 guineas. Upon writing to the Secretary peremptorily requesting a modification of the agreement, the purchaser received a reply "We cannot take any notice of your absurd letter of the 10th inst., addressed to Craig's-court, and it is unnecessary to say that we cannot allow ourselves to be blackmailed by any ridiculous threats."

The publicity thus given to these matters seems to have had a very good result, if only because it set in motion the Music Trades Association, a body which represents the leading dealers in musical instruments throughout the provinces. It should at the outset be admitted that these traders may have had some personal reason for objecting to the proceedings of Mr. Nash's Association, but they nevertheless appear to have set about their business in a perfectly proper manner. A catalogue of the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association was obtained, and it was found that upwards of seventy names appeared in it of manufacturers whose goods the Civil Service, &c., was supposed to supply at reduced prices. Mr. T. G. Dyson, secretary of the Music Trades Association, thereupon sent a circular letter to the manufacturers, or at any rate to most of the leading firms whose instruments the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association, Limited, pretended to supply. The first portion of the circular ran as follows:—

> I have before me the abridged price-list of the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association, Mr. G. R. Nash, Secretary. Your name and a list of a few of your styles, with prices, appears therein. Will you kindly say if this is with your sanction?

The abridged replies occupy a couple of pages of close print in a circular which has since been issued to the members of the Music Trades Association, and they seem to throw some little light upon the Munt-Broadwood incident. Out of forty firms who have replied to Mr. Dyson's circular, half of them disclaim having given any authority whatever to the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association. Mr. Nash would probably be indignant if it were suggested that the names of these firms, some of whom are among the leading manufacturers of the trade, were used merely as baits. But before going further it would, perhaps, be advisable to allow the manufacturers to tell their own story, so that between them and Mr. Nash the public can judge for themselves. Messrs. Broadwood & Sons' name, as we have seen, does not appear in the list at all, although Mr. Nash or his Association appears to have provided a substitute in Mr. Munt. Messrs. S. & P. Erard, who were established in the last century, and are one of the oldest firms in the pianoforte trade, write as follows :—

We are very much indebted to you for your courteous letter. We have immediately made inquiries, and regret to say we are unable to obtain a copy of the abriged price-list of the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association. We have, however, written to them to-day threatening proceedings unless the announcement to which you refer is immediately withdrawn.

Another of the oldest and most respected of the London pianoforte manufacturing firms, Messrs. Kirkman & Son, who were established as harpsichord makers in 1730, write :—

We beg to say that we know nothing of either Mr Nash or of the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association, and certainly the parties had no authority to advertise our name.

Herr Bechstein, one of the leading pianoforte manufacturers of Berlin and piano maker to the Emperor, writes on October 6, 1893 :—

The Civil Service Musical Instrument Association applied to me for my trade terms, and, as their circular (enclosed) had come to my notice, I replied refusing to quote them any terms at all or have anything to do with them.

Messrs. J. & J. Hopkinson, another old and leading firm of pianoforte manufacturers, write :—

We have given Mr. Russell Nash no authority to advertise our pianos in the price-list of the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association. We have supplied Mr. Nash with a few instruments, but we strongly object to his method of business. We have closed his account, and shall, therefore, refuse to let him have any more of our pianos.

Messrs. John Brinsmead & Sons seem also to have supplied instruments, although they disclaim having sold any pianos to the Association at trade price. They say :—

We know nothing whatever of the price list to which you refer, and we have never authorised Mr. Nash of the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association to use our name in any way. We refused to supply pianos to Mr. Nash at trade price, and we consider him entitled to 25 per cent. discount and 5 per cent. for cash only off the enclosed list prices.

Messrs. Challen & Son, another old and respectable firm of pianoforte manufacturers, established in 1804, had expressly forbidden the use of their name, although, according to the peculiar ethics of Mr. Nash, it nevertheless appeared. The correspondence is instructive as showing the manner in which these Civil Service people carry on their business. Messrs. Challen write to the Music Trades Association :—

We beg to state that the announcement in the said list respecting our pianos is not only without our sanction, but contrary to our expressed wish. Some little time ago Mr. Nash asked us to supply him with blocks, which we declined to do, and we therefore are unable to account for the way in which he has been able to insert our designs that you state are in the list. We have written to Mr. Nash requesting the withdrawal of any statement in his catalogue respecting our pianos.

Mr. Nash's reply to Messrs. Challen's letter is quite refreshing in its impudence. He says :—

I shall be glad if you will specify more particularly the reasons for your complaint, as I fail to see how the fact of the advertisement and sale of your instruments can be regarded as detrimental to your interests.

Messrs. Challen, in reply, rightly said they did not think it necessary to specify their reasons. The advertisement was inserted without their permission, and, "as we declined to supply you, we must request the withdrawal without delay."

The Estey Organ Company, one of the largest manufacturers of American organs, write :—

We beg to inform you that we have not given Mr. G. R. Nash, of the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association, any power to quote our organs in his list, nor do we intend to do so.

Herr H. Wolffram, the well-known pianoforte manufacturer, of Dresden, writes :—

I beg to inform you that the insertion of part of my price list in the catalogue of the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association has been done without my knowledge and consent, and I was not aware of it until I received your letter. I consider contact with the Association detrimental to my reputation with the legitimate trade.

Mr. Justin Browne writes :—

Mr. R. Nash has repeatedly written to me for price lists, &c., and in answer I have flatly refused to trade with him. From this you will know that certainly I have not sanctioned his placing my pianos on his list.

Messrs. Arthur Allison & Co. declare they have no knowledge whatever of the Association, and "consider it a most impudent proceeding" to publish their name. Messrs. Chappell & Co. were "not aware of our name appearing in the list named, and do not remember having given permission." Messrs. Robert Cocks & Co., music-sellers to the Queen, "have no knowledge of the particulars of our goods appearing in Mr. G. R. Nash's price list, consequently we have neither forbidden nor sanctioned the mention of the same." It would be mere waste of space to continue the list of more or less explicit denials which if these eminent manufacturers have written truly, and if the Secretary of the Music Trades Association has quoted correctly, would seem to indicate that many of the most prominent names in the catalogue have been placed there absolutely without the knowledge of the firms themselves, many of whom have declined to do business at all with these people.

I do not wish to do Mr. Nash or the Civil Service Musical Instrument Association, Limited, an injustice, and it is only fair to say that some of the names quoted in their catalogue appear to be printed with the more or less direct sanction of the firms. Messrs. Collard, for example, in declaring that they have not seen the price list to which Mr. Dyson alludes, ask, "Do you know anything detrimental to the general trade through the way in which Mr. Nash conducts his business?" Several other firms also ask for inquiries without giving a direct reply. On the other hand, the Smith Organ Company, Herr Ritmüller, the Neumeyer Piano and Organ Company, Messrs. Monington & Weston, Messrs J. Strohmenger & Sons, and others, frankly admit that they have given authority for the use of their names and the publication of their price lists. To these firms and their goods most right-minded people will, I think, be of opinion the operations of Mr. Nash and his Association should henceforward be limited. At any rate, it is without doubt a most improper proceeding that any Limited Liability Company which places the Royal Arms at the head of its prospectus, and boasts as its Directors members of the Offices of Works and Public Buildings, the Inland Revenue, and the War Office, should advertise the names of firms who absolutely refuse to supply them, and in some cases have—doubtless for very good reasons—directly forbidden the use of their names. What, for example, would be the proceeding of Mr. Nash and the Association if a person to whom their circulars had been addressed were to desire to buy through their agency a piano by Messrs. Erard, Messrs. Kirkman & Sons, Messrs. Hopkinson, Messrs. Challen, Herr Bechstein, or any of the other eminent houses who have declined to supply goods? In Messrs. Broadwood's case, as I have stated, the Post Office employé in the country was recommended in preference an instrument of the house of Munt, which, as I remarked on March 16, was "no doubt a highly respectable and honourable firm, but hardly as yet occupying the same position in the world as Messrs. Broadwood." Would Mr. Munt, again, serve for Messrs. Erard, or for Kirkman, Hopkinson, or Bechstein? And the pity of it is that by the use of the Royal Arms, and the mention of the names as Directors of gentlemen occupying posts in the Civil Service, buyers in the country, and, indeed, the public generally, might reasonably imagine that this enterprise was some sort of Government institution, instead of a mere Limited Liability Company, registered on November 2, 1892.

LETTER FROM THE LINKMAN.

I AM still pursuing, dear Lady Betty, the influenza microbe which, Livingstone-like, is exploring my interior. With the deplorable experience of Lobengula before me, I am not likely, I need scarcely say, to grant any voluntary concession, for concessions are the thin end of the wedge of conquest. I am harassing the microbe with medical Maxim guns and all the latest scientific appliances. It is said to be in full flight, and if I overtake it, whether wounded or otherwise, it shall receive no quarter. The latest intelligence from Dr. Monier Williams, who commands the expedition, is altogether reassuring. The medical artillery appears to have worked terrible havoc, and I am expecting at any moment to hear that either my microbe has surrendered, or that it has been slain. The full official account of the campaign will be issued at its conclusion under the alliterative title of "Marmaduke and the Microbe."

All the same, it is very annoying to have a vagrant insect wandering about one's system. I am not a public thoroughfare.

* * * * *

Before Sir Francis Clare Ford was offered and accepted the post of British Ambassador at Constantinople in succession to Sir William White, representations were made to Lord Salisbury—who was then in office—by the Turkish Ambassador, Rustem Pasha, recommending that Sir Philip Currie should be appointed to the post. When, then, a vacancy again occurred there a few weeks ago, on account of this, and for other reasons, it became almost certain that Sir Philip would be promoted to the Embassy. His appointment has, therefore, caused no surprise.

Sir Philip Currie is making arrangements to assume his new duties in the course of next month. Constantinople is perhaps the most important Diplomatic post in the Service, especially under existing circumstances, when the British Ambassador has to combat the united influence of Russia and of France. It has, however, material advantages, for the attractions of the post taken together are more considerable than those of any other Embassy. Besides the salary (£8,000 a year) there are two palaces, one in Pera, the other at Therapia, on the Bosphorus, kept up by a special delegate of the Office of Works, a steam launch, a magnificent ten-oared Caique, both maintained by the Government, and a number of gorgeously clad Cavasses, also paid for by the Department. It is, however, an expensive post, if administered in a becoming manner, and Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, the Prince of Ambassadors, spent both his public and private income in his hospitalities. In this respect Sir Philip Currie has the advantage of a considerable private fortune, for in addition to the legacy of his father, by which he substantially benefited, he inherited not long ago the fortune of his brother, the late Mr. George Currie. His brother, Mr. Bertram Currie, of Glyn, Mills & Co., is an intimate friend and adviser of Mr. Gladstone.

Though Sir Philip has never yet served abroad, his undoubted ability, his great knowledge of foreign politics, his experience of the world, and his tact, will together insure for him success in his new appointment. Sir Philip is, moreover, to be congratulated upon another event, which will almost at once take place, and which will make this assurance double sure.

The post of Permanent Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, rendered vacant by the resignation of Sir Philip Currie, will be given to Sir Thomas Saunderson, at present Senior Assistant Under-Secretary. By right, had the order of promotion not been interfered with, this should have fallen to Sir Henry Percy Anderson. It is only a fortnight ago, however, that Sir Percy was promoted to the Junior Secretaryship. Sir Thomas Saunderson possesses a marvellous memory, great mastery of detail, and is a rapid worker. He acted as British Commissioner in the recent Behring Sea Arbitration. He was also Secretary to the Alabama Arbitration, when he accompanied the late Lord Chief Justice Cockburn and Lord Tenterden to the Conference.

* * * * *

The concert given on Wednesday evening at the Imperial Institute appears to have been an unquestionable success. Over three thousand members and their guests were present besides the Prince of Wales, whose interest in the welfare of the Institute seems to grow in proportion with the opposition which it excites. A duet, "Aimer c'est Vivre," sung by Messrs. Fisher and Farkoa, elicited two encores. "Christmas Bells," sung by Mr. Norman Salmond, was also excellent.

* * * * *

For the fifth year wishing you the full realisation of all the delicious dreams and fancies that have naturally and artificially gathered around the season of Christmas,—Believe me to be, very truly yours,

MARMADUKE.

MAMMON.

From MOSES MOSS to BENJAMIN BOSS.

Sunday.

MY DEAR BEN,—I have but little to say to you to-day. In anticipation of a protracted holiday, hardly any business was transacted during the week, and with the end of the year approaching and the settlement imminent dealings will no doubt remain almost entirely confined to the balancing of accounts. The fast waning year 1893 does not close so satisfactorily as might have been hoped from the process of recuperation which appeared to be in progress at its commencement. The effects of the Baring collapse of November, 1890, were thought to be wearing off; but these hopes were disappointed, while, in the shape of the Australian Bank suspensions, the Liberator collapse, the break in silver, the American crisis, the coal strikes, and finally the troubles of the

CITY SAFE DEPOSIT & AGENCY CO., LD., Throgmorton-avenue. Safes from 1 guinea and Strong Rooms from 15 guineas per annum. Cards to view on application to R. SLAGG, Manager.

Trust Companies, fresh untoward events cropped up to keep the feeling of distrust alive amongst the public. Investors have accordingly remained out of the market for all but the gilt-edged stocks, which latter, as I explained last week, have appreciated to an extent which makes it almost impossible to obtain a decent return for money in this category of securities, and, as a consequence the members of the Stock Exchange were left in control of the more or less speculative securities, and, impoverished as they are, the result was not satisfactory. As soon as a buyer turns up the jobbers put prices up, only to lower them again at the double-quick as soon as a seller comes along. On balance the jobber has, however, kept on the "Bear" tack, and has thus, in his little way, and on the whole unwittingly, accentuated the depression. The future of the markets is, however, in the hands of the public. One of these days a strong revival will come about, and second and third-class stocks will appreciate, but I do not pretend to know when. What I do say, however, is that exceedingly cheap purchases are at present to be made in almost every department of the Stock Exchange, and that such stocks, well selected and taken up by the investor, will yield him a large profit in the comparatively near future. I do not advise speculation from account to account in the present state of uncertainty and of aggravated distrust. But the opportunities for the wealthy capitalist are exceptional for making, in addition to his holding in gilt-edged securities, some very promising speculative investments. As regards the small man, his opportunities are not so numerous, but, if he wants to have a little gamble, he will probably do better in cheap Mining shares than in any other stocks. He should, of course, keep well within his depth and venture but a small sum, paying for his stock and putting it by, prepared to exercise some degree of patience. While risking little, he would have the chance of making a good deal as soon as the market for these shares gets active, of which there are at present some distinct indications. And now, my dear Ben, as I shall not have an opportunity again of addressing you before the turn of the year, let me wish you and all those who honour me by reading my letters to you, a happy and prosperous New-Year. May, in the course of the year 1894, the balance at their bankers increase, so that they may be able to invest a portion of it in progressive stocks likely to rise to a higher level. And may we, before all, be spared such visitations of financial troubles in the New-Year as have deepened the depression during 1893.

My Letter Box.

The following are replies to inquiries from various correspondents:—

Government, &c., Bonds.

R. W.—Yes; both Costa Rica and Guatemala Internal are fair investments for a moderate amount. Spinster.—Western Australia will possibly benefit considerably by the new goldfields, and if she does not borrow too much, her finances would right themselves. I refer you to my remarks in last week's issue under "The Demand for Gilt-edged Stocks," and to the various tables of investment stocks therein mentioned.

Banks, Trusts, and Financial.

Nil Desperandum.—1. I should say that it would be desirable to wait until February with the remittance in question. 2. The bank in question is a good one. R. F. W.—Certainly not; have nothing to do with Richard F. Sinclair & Co., of 60, Fore-street, and read remarks in Truth of December 14 under the heading of "The Syndicate Touts Again." A. N., Bournemouth.—I see no reason for selling Invercargill Debentures, as New Zealand is doing well now; but the amount is somewhat large, and you had better refer to my article on "The Demand for Gilt Edged Stocks," in last week's issue, and to the tables of stocks therein mentioned for the reinvestment of a portion. The Trust Company's shares are at present greatly depreciated, and it would be advisable to await a recovery before selling. Argentine Funding bonds should be held as likely to go much higher. P., Glasgow.—Thanks for your information. I quite agree with you that the case against the Syndicate Touts should be taken up by the Public Prosecutor, and it will, no doubt, in time come to that. G. C., Boston.—If you are an old subscriber to Truth, as you say, you ought to have got a good many references to Percy Barclay and Co. They are Syndicate Touts. Have nothing to do with them! E. T. B.—I am inclined to say hold the Trust shares, as a recovery is not improbable. I cannot reply by letter. P. M., Newry.—Yes. Harvey, Macdonald, & Co., Limited, who have favoured you with a circular, are Syndicate Touts, to whom I have repeatedly had to refer in uncomplimentary terms. J. F. L.—If you were a regular reader of Truth you would be aware that my opinion of the Provident Association of London is not favourable, as they do not fulfil the promises made in their prospectus. You should try to get back as much as you can. G. M.—I am obliged for particulars of the case in question, but I cannot naturally form an opinion on this matter without the names of the parties. R. J., St. Bury.—The documents are returned, and I hope that you will bring these Syndicate Touts to book.

Home Rails.

R. W.—Your only course is to hold until the line is completed. Prospects appear to be fair enough. D. O.—Thanks. Yes, Brighton "A" have gone exactly as I anticipated in view of the large "Bear" account; but I should not buy at the advanced price. G. H.—1. I am glad to hear that you got into Brighton "A" as low as 143⅞ a few weeks ago. Don't you think that it is a good profit to take, as things go? 2. I do not think that either Great Northern Deferred or Great Eastern are very promising just now. 3. Hold these American Rails for the present for a recovery in January. 4. Yes, you can do it on a 5s. stamp by having it put as against a nominal consideration.

American and Foreign Rails.

Ubique.—1. It is a bad time for selling Brazilian Railway stocks now. You had better wait for a better opportunity. This also applies to No. 2. If you want to buy bonds, my tables of a few weeks ago will give you the necessary information. A Constant Reader.—Yes; the exchange into Canadian Pacifics would be desirable, although the latter Company is not doing well just now. Fin de Siècle.—Both Mexican Central Four per Cent. Gold bonds and Mexican National "A" bonds have been affected by the fall in silver. There seems a fair prospect of a recovery, especially as matters are righting themselves in Mexico. J. E P, New Wandsworth.—It is impossible, within the limits of a reply in this column, to give you all the information you seek. If you will call upon the Managing Director or Secretary of the English Association of American Bonds and Share Holders, 5, Great Winchester-street, you will receive the most detailed information. Emily.—The Romero-Rothschild convention has been ratified by the Chamber of Deputies, and the Senate will, no doubt, follow suit. Should no further revolutionary movement develop, there would be nothing surprising in a rise of 10 per cent. in the Funding bonds, provided that we do not get a fresh panic of some sort. E. D. B.—You ought to have told the brokers at the first that you intended to run a speculative account, although they certainly ought to have objected as soon as you informed them. I do not see that you have any remedy, although it was very sharp practice. Did you give them references? Not Caught.—1. Thanks, the matter will be attended to. 2. I am doing my best with repect to the Syndicate Touts, and I hope that eventually a prosecution will be instituted. There is, of course, a good deal in what you say with regard to those who are caught by these gentry, that "their extreme greed outweighs their commonsense and prudence."

Mining Shares.

M. H.—You should hold both Roodepoort and Clewer Estates for a recovery. I do not like the other Mine and South African Land Company, but Buffelsdoorn are a good purchase. Beer.—Yes, I consider Macate and Holcomb Valley shares a good purchase. I do not advise buying the third mining shares mentioned just now, although they may eventually come round. Cymro.—The capital of the South Simmer and Jack is £150,000, and they expect to strike the reef in about four weeks. I am sorry not to be able to recommend individual mining brokers. H. E. C.—There is no option but to hold Kimberley Roodepoort. The decline is not justified, and when the exceptional depression in South Africa passes away, they will recover. Shareholder.—They are now boring for the reef again on the Golden Gate (Charters Towers) Mine, and there seems a reasonable prospect of finding it. Hold! Lober.—The charges against Mr. W. J. Collins are being investigated, and you must have seen the full statement of the Directors of the Wentworth Company at the meeting. Whether the statements in question be true or not, however, there is no doubt that the Wentworth and Aladdin Mines have a great deal of rich ore, as shown by the crushings. You should not throw away your shares. Nemo, Stamford-road. Same reply respecting the Kimberley Roodepoort as above to "H. E. C." Parrhesia.—I fully agree with your remarks concerning the Oceana Company. These shares are certain to reach a much higher level again. Why not spread the amount over Oceana, Glencairn, and Buffelsdoorn? The latter mine will probably have a bumper crushing for December. Even with restricted labour (the floods preventing travelling), and the treatment of tailings interfered with by the same cause, they got 3,520 oz. of gold in November. Johannesburg papers report that the reef is 5 ft. wide in the development at the 460-ft. level. Don't you think Trunk First Preis, without the chance of a dividend, quite high enough? Buzz.—1. Yes. 2. You ought to get delivery in a fortnight,

Major Howe & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen. 16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Kleanrusha, Polish.)

unless the registration is done abroad. 3 and 4. Yes, this would show a profit. 5. Yes, in six months' time a dividend is probable. Peace Valley.—You should not sell Ripanji now; there seems to be some prospect of a recovery.

INDUSTRIAL COMPANIES.

Nitrate Rails will probably maintain their 20 per cent. dividend. The Deferred are, of course, more speculative. Sound, yes, but generally "Bearish." Westend. I am afraid that the prospects are not favourable. T. T.—Both these Companies are speculative industrial concerns, subject to some extent to the changes of fashion. Red. It is impossible for me to judge of the soundness of all the numerous Building Societies, and I know nothing about the one referred to. That really requires local knowledge. As a class, however, Building Societies are not to be recommended.

MIXED INVESTMENTS.

S. W.—No reason to sell Nos. 1 and 2 at present, the interest appears to be safe. No. 3 appears to be a fair speculative investment. Search. Nobody can guarantee you an advance of 10 per cent. in any stock, and I do not think Midlands will perform that feat yet awhile, in view of the dividend disappointment. The banks mentioned are high class London institutions, and you should hold the shares.

I must append to these replies to my correspondents the remark that, having, on account of the holidays, to conclude my letter earlier than usual, I shall have to defer the answering of the late arrivals amongst these communications until next week. I shall also have to put off the discussion of the various contentious subjects, such as Jarvis-Conklin question, the affairs of the Equitable Mortgage Company, and of various Trust Companies, as well as a further castigation of the Syndicate touts. We must all of us have our Christmas leisure, and Uncle Moses is no exception from the rule. —With best wishes, your affectionate Uncle,

MOSES.

P.S.—The markets finished up gloomily before the holidays, the American department being under the influence of a Bank failure in New York and of the death of Mr. George Magoun, the Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Atchison. This latter unfortunate event complicates the position of this Company, and may render a friendly receivership necessary; but holders of the Second Mortgage "A" and "B" bonds should remember that they have full foreclosure powers, so that in a reorganisation, which would, of course, follow, the full weight must fall upon the Ordinary stock, which would be heavily assessed. The bonds have already declined so much that a receivership appears more than discounted, the interests on these being fully safeguarded.

THE "TRUTH" TOY AND DOLL SHOW AT THE ALBERT HALL.

IN one of the many Christmas numbers of the season, in what purports to be an up-to-date continuation of the "Christmas Carol," we are introduced to old Scrooge (of the firm of Scrooge & Marley) in a very embarrassing predicament. Disturbed at his office on Christmas Eve by two emissaries of the Charity Organisation Society, who find him up to his knees in Christmas cards and barrels of oysters and prize turkeys, with which he is packing hampers for his life, he is sternly upbraided by his visitors for debauching the district with his ill-advised charity and open-handedness. In vain he alludes to the festive season as an excuse for his generosity. He is told in effect that the "Dickens'" Yule-tide is played out; that Society is far too advanced for such old-fashioned sentiment now; that Father Christmas is a boisterous old bore who ought to be summarily suppressed. Nor does he fare better when, depressed by these assurances, he goes round to see his once jovial friend, old Fezziwig. There, instead of the rollicking Christmas party he expected to find in progress, he is shown into a chilly drawing-room, in which the eldest Miss Fezziwig is reading Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" to a select circle of cultured acquaintances in black mittens and blue glasses. Even "Tiny Tim" has developed into a profound disciple of Schopenhauer, and gives pessimistic lectures at the Old-street Hall of Science, whilst honest Bob Crackit himself has joined the Anarchic wing of the Ball's pond Socialists. In short, it is on all sides impressed on Scrooge that Christmas, with its generous instincts and charitable impulses, is as much out of fashion as crinolines or hackney coaches. And undoubtedly this is what a noisy and persistent set of so-called "superior persons" is never tired of telling us. The young men who "sip absinthe and read Huysmans"; the young women who smoke cigarettes and call the author of "The Doll's House" "Master;" the neo-Pagans who swear by Mallarmé; and the Decadents who dote upon Verlaine—all these join in the assurance with wearisome iteration. But I fancy it would have somewhat staggered these exceptionally disagreeable and cocksure young persons if they could have been made to pay a visit to the Albert Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday last. I could not help wishing, in fact, as I looked down from the gallery on the scene in the arena, that the subscribers to the Independent Theatre (personally conducted, say, by Mr. William Archer) could have found it convenient to attend. For they would have seen a sight that could have scarcely failed to serve as a moral tonic for them. They would have had proof positive that Christmas, with its generous associations, so far from being played out, is more warmly cherished than ever; and they would have learned that, notwithstanding the morbid materialism they would thrust down our throats, there is still to be found in our century-end society disinterestedness and charity and sentiment enough to make TRUTH'S FOURTEENTH ANNUAL TOY AND DOLL SHOW an unequivocal and unprecedented success.

For let it be said at once that the forebodings expressed by Santa Claus in these columns a fortnight ago were not fulfilled. The necessary number of dolls and toys was, after all, forthcoming, and not one of the 27,000 expectant children in the Hospitals and Workhouses of London has been disappointed. In the appearance of the Show there was nothing whatever to even suggest that a crisis had been passed through. Never had the group of pyramids which rose from the table-land of the arena been more closely faced with dolls; never had the surrounding stands been more densely crowded with toys; never had the skill, and patience, and taste of the hundreds of contributors been more generally exemplified. The general verdict of the public seems to have been that the dolls were dressed better than ever. As usual, these dolls—some four thousand of them—were concentrated on the tables and pyramidal structures in the centre of the floor. All round, following the boundary-line of the amphitheatre stalls, were the home-made toys, the presentation toys, and those purchased with the TRUTH Toy Fund. In front of the organ towered a veritable trophy of toys, topped by the hundreds of boxes in which Tom Smith's crackers were contained, whilst at the base were arranged the gifts of Duke Alfred of Saxe-Coburg, of which I shall have more to say later on. Other prominent features of the Show were the glass cases containing the Prizes; and the eleven thousand newly-minted sixpences, which, as usual, attracted exceptional attention; whilst a dozen large boxes of currants and the pheasants sent for distribution amongst the London Hospitals were piled on either side. At the back of all, suspended high in the air, was an enormous banner bearing the legend, "TRUTH Annual Toy Show" in Brobdingnagian white letters on a red ground, and smaller flags profusely displayed round the arena added to the brilliancy of the coup d'œil. But it is not my intention to enlarge upon the general impression produced by the Show. I, in fact, exhausted all the adjectives available for such a purpose as this some years ago; so instead of trying to convey what would be at best a very imperfect impression of the inspiriting animation and kaleidoscopic brilliancy of the scene when the Show was at its height, I will follow the traditional maxim of Astley's, "cut the cackle and get to the 'osses:" that is to say, I will cut short my exordium and get to the dolls.

FEEDING DOGS.—Prof. Woodroffe Hill, F.R.C.V.S., writes: "A sound, well-balanced canine dietary is the secret of success with 'Spratt's Patent.' I have no hesitation in asserting, with regard to biscuit diet, SPRATT'S FIBRINE CAKE is far and away the best in the English market. Some of the dog biscuits I have examined might be composed of pipeclay and sawdust for the nutritive properties they possess. Cheap and dirty means expense and disease." See each "Dog Cake" is stamped "Spratt's Patent" and a "X." This is all important.

Of the very large home-dressed dolls which now form such a specially attractive feature of each successive TRUTH Show, the number exhibited was rather larger than that of last year, whilst the average of excellence attained in dressing them was assuredly as high as ever it has been. It fortunately does not rest with me to decide which of these dolls was the best. The delicate duty of judging between the rival belles of the Show is very properly considered too difficult a task for any one person, however well qualified, to attempt single-handed, and a jury of ladies takes this important work in hand. All I propose to do, meanwhile, is to allude, necessarily in a brief manner, to such of the dolls as for some reason or another attracted special attention. Amongst these, the two large dolls dressed by the Misses Glave to represent the Queen and a Débutante she is in the act of receiving deserve very early mention. Nowhere was the crowd of visitors thicker than in front of this interesting tableau poupée. The doll representing her Majesty was dressed after a well-known cabinet photograph of the Queen by Waléry. The black silk robes, lavishly covered with rich white lace; the ermine-trimmed train; the broad blue ribbon of the Garter; the Koh-i-noor, just a little, perhaps, "off colour;" the not too becoming diminutive crown, reproduced by the late Sir Edgar Boehm in the Jubilee coinage designs—every detail had been most carefully worked out. And behind her Majesty was a model of the Coronation chair, with a velvet cushion broidered with the Royal arms and cipher. Equal care had been displayed in dressing the débutante, who bent to kiss the Queen's hand; and it would be difficult to praise too highly the way in which this singularly happy thought was elaborated. Another doll that secured a large share of popular favour was Miss Mayhew's "Princess May on her Wedding Day," in the dressing of which the full details of H.R.H.'s hymeneal costume had been most carefully followed. Miss Mayhew, in fact, challenged criticism by boldly exhibiting side-by-side with her doll, a picture from one of the Ladies' papers of the Duchess of York in her bridal array, and the closest scrutiny only seemed to emphasise the exceptional fidelity of the copy she had made. Of what I may call current royalty there was no further specimen, but Miss B. Corey, a well-remembered contributor to former TRUTH Toy Shows, sent a delightful representative of legendary monarchy in the shape of "a rightdown regular royal Queen"—of Hearts. In her gorgeous robes, stiff with jewels and bullion, this sovereign lady looked so splendidly regal that it was perhaps a little difficult to fancy her indulging in the pastry-making proclivities attributed to her in the still popular nursery lyric. One could not, moreover, but pity the larcenous Knave who, by his appropriation of the royal tarts, so grossly abused the confidence reposed in him by his autocratic mistress. He must have been indeed a temerarious varlet to brave the displeasure of such a queen. The "Nini" doll is now expected year after year as a matter of course, and it is always eagerly looked for by connoisseurs in doll-dressing. This year it is called "Lady Lennie," and her ladyship is certainly worthy of the series of waxen grandes dames which have preceded her. "Nini's" dolls are always in the very latest fashion, and this year the vieux rose costume with its front of rich art needlework, and the Punchinello hat trimmed with sable, worn by "Lady Lennie," made her certainly the most stylish doll in the Show. Female critics who were well qualified to judge, spoke, too, with almost rapturous enthusiasm of those of her ladyship's garments which do not meet the eye. It was not all outward show with her, for her lingerie also was a dream of luxurious delicacy and taste.

In most striking contrast with "Nini's" lady of fashion was Miss M. Field's "Quakeress," a delightfully demure looking damsel in dove-coloured silk, with the orthodox poke-bonnet, and a handkerchief-bag depending from her neatly-mittened fingers. As it happened, doubtless by a humorous fancy of the "Hanging Committee"—I mean, of the ladies who arranged the dolls—Miss R. Behrend's "Eric" was placed between "Lady Lennie" and the unassuming "Friend"; and it was not difficult to imagine this dashing youth in doublet and hose, with his hat cocked most becomingly on his handsome head, being much exercised by the very different kinds of attractions at his either elbow. Like Garrick, wooed at once by Comedy and Tragedy, Master "Eric" must have found it hard to decide between the rival claims of the World and the Meeting-house; though I venture to think that had the dolls been left upon the tables at the Albert Hall until that legendary hour on Christmas Eve when they for a brief period come to life, it would have been to the fair Quakeress that he would have paid his suit. Another Quakeress was sent by Mrs. Arlosh, who labelled her doll "Mrs. Elizabeth Fry," the philanthropic lady upon whom it has always seemed to me Thomas Hood was unduly severe in his "Odes and Addresses." Mrs. Fry, it will be remembered, used to spend much of her time in visiting the prisoners in Newgate, and if she was half as pretty and fascinating as her representative at the Albert Hall last week, her popularity amongst the prisoners is readily accounted for. Miss F. Coe must be credited with having carried out a new idea most successfully in dressing her large doll as "An Acolyte." In his white, lace trimmed surplice, worn over a scarlet cassock, and with his censer swinging in his hand, he proved an undoubted attraction. Another original idea was capitally elaborated by Miss A. Levitt in her doll dressed to represent "A Compendium of Games," but I shall allude to this doll more particularly when I am dealing with the Groups. Nursery heroes and heroines were not quite so prevalent as usual; and Miss M. Solomon's "Jack and Jill" were, therefore, all the more welcome. Jack in corduroys, and his sister in pink, made a pretty and graceful couple as they jointly grasped the handle of their bucket. Strange to say, there was only one "Red Riding Hood" amongst the large dolls, a capital realisation of the character, sent by Mrs. Bowes. Floral dolls, on the other hand, were plentiful. Most noticeable in this latter class were two superbly-dressed dolls, labelled respectively "Pansy, dressed by May," and "Rose, dressed by Violet." The floral idea was worked out with such consummate skill and taste that it was almost possible to take au sérieux the intimation conveyed by the exhibitor that the dresses had in each case been "designed by the doll's fairy Godmother." These lovely dolls were, in short, exquisite works of art, and well deserved the places of honour accorded to them at one end of the central stand. Another very pretty floral doll was Miss M. L. Seligman's "Forget-me-Not," whilst Miss B. Swanston sent a charming personification—or, should I say, dollification?—of the Marguerite daisy. Miss E. Tollemache's "A Widow Indeed" in her costume of crape, with a black border even to her dainty pockethandkerchief, and a wreath of immortelles in her hand, may be considered to have played the part which the skeleton used to fill at the Egyptian banquets. In the midst of the brightly-clad dolls surrounding her the effect made by this decided note of black colour was almost startling in its intensity. No TRUTH Doll Show has ever been without its Puritan girls. This year there was a very seductive specimen of this popular type dressed by Mrs. M. Peet. I am not quite sure, however, that the pearl trimming was permissible. It made Miss Ruth look all the more winsome, it is true, but I am inclined to think that her iconoclastic papa—rejoicing possibly in the name of Captain Hew-Agag-in-pieces-before-the-Lord Potts, or Major Blow-the-trumpet-in-Jerusalem Brown—would have made short work with such "Babylonish" finery. A second Puritan maiden was most tastefully dressed for the Show by the servants at "Uplands." By way of contrast there was a doll beautifully dressed in blue and pink by Miss S. Baumann, as "A Lady in Vandyke Costume—Time of Charles I." A very stylish "Débutante" was sent by Miss A. Hurst Wright and Miss B. Gladden; whilst Mrs. G. N. Whittingham contributed a fashionable "Bride," in all respects up to the very latest hymeneal standard which those who go to the altar at St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, or St. George's, Hanover-square, are supposed to attain. Very seasonable was Mrs. H. Newman's "Winter" doll, in her warm tippet and fur-trimmed hat, and with her dress so cleverly painted by hand with sprays of holly and mistletoe in decorative combinations. I was very pleased, by the way, to notice that the robin-redbreast perched on the basket which Mrs. Newman's doll is carrying was not one of those real robins which it seems are being used wholesale for Christmas decorations this season.

Amongst other "character" dolls to which I noticed fond mothers paying special attention, with a view, no doubt, of getting some practical suggestions for the attiring of their children at the juvenile fancy-dress balls which are now so general, must be mentioned Mrs. F. Stringer's "Merry Zingara," Mrs. Pritchard's "Italian Peasant Girl" in fête-day dress, Miss D. Field's "French Nurse and Baby," the nurse being quite a typical bonne in walking-dress, with her jewelled hairpins, immaculate white cap, long ribbons streaming down her back, and all-enveloping cloak. Boy-dolls were unusually scarce this year, and therefore Mrs. Rawson's "Scotch Laddie," in his dark-green kilt and bonnet, with his eagle feather and sporran and all the rest of the Highland accessories complete, doubtless had it all his own way amongst the bevy of delightful girl-dolls by which he was surrounded. The practised skill of the indefatigable Miss M. Mayhew was again seen to advantage in a stylishly-dressed doll, all green velvet and chiffons, whose costume had been copied from one of the smartest fashion-plates of the autumn; and two of the most admired dolls of the period were Mrs. M. Gibbs's "Madame Alamode" and Miss T. Rogan's pink and blue doll with the puffed-out, wing-like sleeves to her jacket. Of the dolls which were dressed like ordinary English children the number was large, and if space permitted much might be said in praise of them. But it is obvious that in an exhibition where dolls are to be seen by the thousand, it is virtually impossible to pay due attention to all that deserve it. Room must be found, however, to welcome the second edition of "Muriel," sent by Mrs. Tomlin's Nurse to this year's Show. "Muriel," it may be remembered, endowed with a quantity of "portable property" sufficient to arouse the enthusiasm of Mr. Wemmick himself, was a great favourite at the Albert Hall last Christmas, and this year visitors were delighted to meet her again, grown but little older, apparently, in her seasonable travelling-dress, but with a box of such increased proportions, that it might fairly be called a Saratoga trunk. The curiosity aroused in the breasts of the public by this trunk, with "Muriel" painted in old English characters on its side, and duly labelled "Passage to TRUTH Doll Show," was extraordinary. There was not a girl who was able to pass it without a lingering look of envy; and I heard one enthusiastic lady say that she would give anything in reason to see the face of the child, whether in Hospital or Workhouse, whose happy lot it would be to first inspect that closely packed travelling trunk. And, indeed, I think the enthusiastic lady was right, for I happen to have a list of its contents, far too long to quote in full, but including such fascinating items as "Muriel's" dressing gown, her bronze shoes, her evening shoes, her bedroom slippers, her dressing case, her tam, her gloves, her muff, and her watch and chain! Many years ago I remember reading a pretty legend of Nuremberg, the City of Toys. There is a tradition that on the eve of Innocents' Day all the dolls in the place assemble in a meadow just outside the city gates and choose from amongst themselves a Doll Queen for the year. Who shall say that the dolls at the Albert Hall do not go through a similar ceremony? Unfortunately, however, if they do they keep their secret closely; and so there is no means of getting to know how the voting goes. But it would be indeed interesting to find out how the doll suffrages are cast; for then we could see how far their tastes and predilections coincide with our own. I am pretty certain, however, that had any such election taken place at Kensington Gore, Miss G. Molynenx's "Winifred" would not have been very far from the top of the poll. This dainty creature, in her dress of quilted sky blue satin with the plush pink bows, was a dream of loveliness. Another dangerous candidate, had the queen been chosen for her fresh young beauty, would have been Miss L. Bullock's "Una," attired not to ride upon a lion like her classic namesake, but to attend her first ball. And she would have been run close by Miss A. Steains's "Cynthia," a vision of childish innocence and beauty in white silk and swansdown. Then I am tolerably confident, too, that Miss D. Swanston's "Bebé," a flaxen-haired, chubby darling in a gossamer-like frock, tricked out with blue ribbons, would have been well up in the running, and would possibly have tied for a place with Mrs. FitzWilliams's doll in bluish-pink, with the fancy straw hat trimmed with big bunches of roses. Amongst the more matters-of-fact voters "Angelina," dressed by "Jack" in a sea-side costume of the most mannish cut, might possibly have found favour. Clearly, however, such conjectures as these are not very practical, especially when there are so many more large dolls awaiting notice. I find in my notes special reference to those dressed by Miss Beauclerk, Miss Barron, Lady and Miss Barnby, Miss C. G. Compton, Miss A. E. Potts, Mrs. A. W. Rowe, Miss A. Parker, Mrs. E. East, M. M. L., Miss Luck, Miss M. Barling, Miss Daniell, Miss F. Cross, Mrs. Majolier, Mrs. Rawley, Miss H. Wright, Mrs. H. St. Maur, Mrs. Woolcombe, and Miss M. H. White, but all I can do, in passing, is to include them in this one sentence of hearty commendation. And let me congratulate Miss M. Lyall, aged 9, the youngest contributor of a large doll to the Show, on her success. Miss B. Lyall, who is three years older, also dressed one with admirable taste. Unlimited joint-stock enterprises are not regarded favourably in the financial world, but at the Albert Hall, "A Joint-Stock Company, Unlimited," showed what excellent work can be done by such an agency in the world of charity. The doll in a white dress, with an old-gold sash and an embroidered sun bonnet, which was the outcome of the united labours of this anonymous syndicate, was generally admired. A second large doll, dressed in white by Mrs. J. W. Fitzwilliam, should also be mentioned, and one dressed in white and gold by Miss C. Davis. There remain to be noticed two of the very best of the large dolls in the Show, but these will be dealt with in writing of Mrs. H. P. Truefitt's exhibits.

FAMILY WASHING ONLY.—Collection and delivery twice daily. For families leaving Town, work delivered day following collection, and with three days' clear notice, household work collected and delivered prior to families arriving in Town. Under new management.—Belgrave Steam Laundry, 196, Ebury-st., Belgravia, S.W.

And now I come to the dressed dolls included in the second of the three classes into which the exhibits of this year have been divided—the dolls, that is to say, which were arranged in tableaux or groups. In connection with this class, two names have for several years past attained to special prominence, and it is these two names which will again be found in the position of honour this Christmas. They are those of Mrs. H. P. Truefitt and of the Misses Glave. These ladies have once more distinguished themselves in a very marked manner, having, on the present occasion, beaten their own record in the most indubitable manner. Last year, it will be remembered, the dolls dressed by them occupied the two ends of the central stand. But this year these ends were far too small for the exhibition of their dolls; and, as a consequence, the two sides of the rectangular stand were placed at their disposal. How they filled them I now propose to briefly describe. First of all let me again express my satisfaction that it is not I who have to decide between the merits of these exhibits on either side of the table. Were I called on to do so I can only see one way out of the difficulty in which I should be placed, and that would be to declare a dead heat between these ingenious, these tasteful, these generous, and these indefatigable ladies.

As I said last year in dealing with their handiwork, the dolls of each have their special and distinct qualities. One of the chief characteristics of those of Mrs. H. P. Truefitt is the exquisite taste—a taste suggesting French, perhaps, rather than British influence—with which they have been manipulated and posed. When one looked at them one thought of Watteau, and Le Petit Trianon, and the dantiest bonbonnières that Paris can produce. The colours for the costumes were themselves the most delicate that can be imagined, and the combinations were symphonic in their delightful effects. It was, indeed, almost impossible to believe that the dolls one saw arranged so artistically on their yellow stands were the dolls, costing but a few pence, which had been originally sent out from TRUTH office. But so it was. Mrs. Truefitt, in fact, is not prepared to take the dolls sent to her as she finds them. In every case she lengthens the arms, and wires them so that they can be bent in natural and graceful fashion. She takes an infinity of trouble, too, in padding the legs into comely shapeliness, and spares no pains in making the very smallest details of the costumes she selects as perfect as they can be made. Then I should be sorry to say how long her daughter was occupied in making the tiny but always well fitting gloves worn by many of the dolls, or to appraise the intricate and tedious labour involved in the making of the almost endless variety of boots and shoes they wore. The general effect of the dolls, grouped as they were with an excellent eye for the colour scheme of the exhibit as a whole, was most charming; but it was not until the dolls were examined carefully one by one that the full significance of Mrs. Truefitt's labours could be appreciated. Many of them, such as the "Dresden Shepherdess" for example, and the "Skipping-rope Dancer," were not so much dolls as divinities, to whom even the most prosaic of mortals might attempt to pen a sonnet. Perhaps the most delicately and fascinatingly beautiful of all the dolls was "The Princess Elizabeth." At first I should have been inclined positively to assert her claim to the golden apple of Paris, but after seeing the "Pierrette" at the other end of the table, equally seductive in an altogether different way, I think it safer to be more guarded in my statement. But it was not delicacy and refinement alone which Mrs. Truefitt's dolls suggested. There was humour, too, of a subtle kind in some of them. For instance, there was "The Breaker of many Hearts," a "masher" doll (temp. Charles I.) of irresistible airs and grace. The swaggering way in which he was posed and the indescribable self-conceit which was expressed in the process of drawing on his gloves was transcendently clever. And the attitude of the doll close to him, labelled "Coquette," for whose special benefit it was clear he was putting forth his power as a lady-killer, was in itself the most entertaining of jokes. There was quite a three-volume novel, too, suggested by the doll-couple labelled "May and December," and destined, if one might hazard a prophecy, to be some day separated by Jeune in other than a calendar sense. Another very humorous group was that described as "The Latest Scandal." In her historical dolls, such as Richard Cœur de Lion and Charlotte Corday, Mrs. Truefitt was not quite so successful; but her "Masters of the Ceremonies," her whimsically christened "Darby and Joan," her "Little Flower Seller" and her "Arcadian Shepherd" were simply perfect. In the centre of the dolls was arranged a tableau similar in design to that which was so highly appreciated last year, and consisting of a graceful go-cart profusely decorated with flowers, and drawn by two fairy-like doll-children; whilst another sat up in front as driver, and a fourth held over the satin sack which is in the cart a banner with the device, "TRUTH Toy Fund—Put your money in our bag!" And last, though evidently not least, let me mention Mrs. Truefitt's two large-sized dolls, which she transformed into a most charming realisation of the well-known "Where-are-you-going-to-my-pretty-maid?" idyll. Never, surely, did a daintier maid go a-milking, or a more handsome and debonair young man stop her en route with his inquisitive questioning.

Of the Misses Glave's large dolls, which represented the Queen receiving a débutante, I have already written, but they only formed the central group of their exhibit. On either side of her Majesty there were dolls well-nigh without end, dressed almost invariably in the richest of velvets and brocades, and forming the most interesting combinations. At the organ end of the stand was a most spirited representation of a Fancy Dress Ball, in which about a score of dolls took part in the most varied of costumes. There was Lady Teazle vis-à-vis to William Tell; and Sir Peter doing the gallant to a most bewitching Anne Boleyn. Hamlet was engaged in a hot flirtation with "Mrs. Wun Lung," the most charming of Chinese belles; Don José was securing the next valse from the daintiest of Pierrettes; whilst Henry VIII., like the insatiable old flirt that he was, was making eyes simultaneously at Dona Carmen and a waistless lady of the Directoire.

The next group represented a string detachment of the Scots Guards' band engaged in playing a selection from "Haddon Hall" on their violins and 'cellos, and I think that even Bandmaster Dunkerton himself would have been satisfied with the painstaking accuracy with which the uniforms of his musicians had been reproduced. An exceedingly well-managed tableau had been formed by the Misses Glave by grouping dolls representing Miss Loie Fuller and three other serpentine dancers; not only were their accordion-pleated skirts reproduced, but, by a very clever arrangement, these seemed to be actually whirling in the air. Another of the more important features in the "Glave" exhibit was a group of dolls taking part in "A Domino Dance." The costumes of the ladies and their partners thus engaged were exceptionally rich and well designed. Much admiration was expressed, too, for the doll in a dashing and daring toilet of cowslip-yellow and black that was labelled "To-day," and there were touches of clever satire in the modes of the dolls designated "Up to Date." The last of the Misses Glave's groups to which I can here allude consisted of a very cleverly modelled elephant and its sumptuous trappings, on the back of which, in a glorified sort of howdah, sat an Oriental princess, houri-like enough to have won the heart of Prince Camaralzaman himself. There was the black mahout, too, and several attendant nautch girls, the posing of the whole of the figures being admirably effective and life-like. Taking the dolls of the Misses Glave as a whole, it would be difficult to praise too highly the ingenuity and patience which must have been displayed in dressing and arranging them. Only those who examined them as closely as I did can have any adequate idea of the trouble that must have been taken by these two ladies, whose names have now become as familiar at our Truth Doll Shows as "household words."

At the end of the table facing the gangway by which the public entered the Show, a considerable space was worthily occupied by Miss R. Benjamin's "Children's Party," a spirited representation of a juvenile dance, evidently to be followed by a distribution of toys from the real Christmas tree that stood in one corner of the room, watched over by the attendant nurses. I say "room" advisedly, for Miss Benjamin had added much to the merit of her group by enclosing it on three sides with wooden walls, which served to keep the group together and to intensify its effect. In the immediate vicinity of this group was Miss M. Mayhew's realisation of an al fresco courtship, in which the lovers, cleverly dressed in costumes old-fashioned enough to be romantic, were shown us on an ivy-covered garden-seat. And immediately in front, in a well-deserved position of honour, was a group of floral dolls, exquisitely dressed by Miss Gwendolen Molyneux, to represent "Daisy," "White May," "Violet," "Forget-me-not," "Pink May," "Buttercup," and "Cherry Ripe!" Miss Gregory's group consisted of a Sussex ox-cart, laden with a mixed freight of timber and of hop-bines, and escorted by a number of Sussex labourers and their lasses, the former in their smocks and the latter in pretty rustic print-dresses and sun-bonnets. "A Lapland Encampment"—the work of a frequent contributor to Truth Shows, Miss May Streatfeild—was realistic enough to almost make the spectators shiver as they stopped to look at it. There was the tent pitched on the green ice, with snow-capped hummocks around it; whilst of the warmly-dressed Laplanders themselves, one was drawing a sledge and others were attending to the pot, in which doubtless an eagerly-anticipated stew of reindeer feet and whale's blubber was being cooked. Of the three groups sent by the Misses Edythe and Ruby Benjamin, the most elaborate was a capital rendering of a game of lawn-tennis, in which it could easily be seen that the "Deuce!" which had just been called, had been won by the brilliant way in which a weak return of the young lady in pink had been "smashed" by the gentleman with the moustaches and blue blazer. A second group of a less ambitious character showed us Mr. and Mrs. 'Enery 'Awkins as they appear when

> "Every evenin' on the stroke of five,
> They take in their cart their little drive," and "knock" the much-impressed residents in the Old Kent-road. The third group sent by these clever young ladies, who already exhibit much aptitude in their work, represented the "Man and Milking-maid" incident, also chosen by Mrs. Truefitt for one of her tableaux. A very original group, contributed by Miss H. D. Green, dealt with the christening of the infant daughter of Lady Patricia Howard by His Eminence the Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster, assisted by another high Church dignitary. The details of this ecclesiastical scene naturally afforded much scope for picturesque elaboration, and of this Miss Green availed herself very fully, such details as the mitre, crozier, and vestments of the Cardinal, and the dress of the attendant acolytes, being very carefully rendered. In a second effort the same lady attempted a much more dramatic scene, for she essayed to represent the murder of Thomas a'Becket as it was staged at the Lyceum. Becket was seen lying on the ground, with De Bracy's sword point in his breast, whilst Fair Rosamond is just emerging, horror struck, from behind an adjacent pillar. Close to this group was one by Mrs. John Mann, also inspired by a recent revival at the Lyceum, and comprising the figures of Henry VIII., Queen Katharine, and Cardinal Wolseley, dressed in each case with praiseworthy care and elaboration. Another "Garden of Girls" was sent by Miss Sybil Holland, whose dolls, most prettily grouped on a green baize-covered stand, were charming representatives of such familiar flowers as the poppy, the lily of the valley, the lilac, the rose, the forget-me-not, and the cornflower. I have again to thank Miss Teresina Haddaway for a very comical group. This year, as last, this young lady elected to illustrate with evident humorous appreciation and playful exaggeration an incident—apocryphal, no doubt, but none the less amusing on that account—in the life of our octogenarian Prime Minister. What she showed us was this: First of all, there was the G.O.M., still in his collars, though he had evidently been engaged in cutting down a sapling on which he had meanwhile hung his hat and coat. But it was also evident that he had been interrupted in his labours by a deputation typical of the Irish, Welsh, and Scotch nations, who had waited on him to solicit Home Rule. But alas! even whilst they were interviewing him a telegraph-boy has entered and handed the G.O.M. a telegram, on which he reads the sad news, "Home Rule Bill thrown out by Lords by majority of 428." The whole group was quite sui generis, and altogether unlike anything else in the Show, and I must repeat that I found it exceedingly amusing. And now, last of all, I come to one of the most ingenious groups in the Exhibition, in which Miss A. Levitt so very cleverly dressed a number of dolls to represent various well-known games. The "Lawn Tennis" doll, for instance, wore a grass-green dress trimmed with a fringe of white balls, and the lines of a tennis court braided on its front; whilst the net was fastened sash-wise across her shoulders. The "Billiard" doll had a green lamp-shade for a hat, and wore a green cloth dress with six visible pockets; whilst the "Backgammon" doll had her skirt "vandyked" like a backgammon board, with a dice-cup on her head and a draughtsmen trimming round her dice-adorned dress. The dolls representing Lotto, Chess, Dominoes, and the Race Game were attired with equal ingenuity; whilst the climax of Miss A. Levitt's skill was shown in the way in which the costume of a large doll, representing a "Compendium of Games," she combined the more salient features of the pastimes named above. This very meagre account of one of the most interesting groups in the Show may fittingly conclude my notes on a class of Exhibits which undoubtedly attracted more attention than any other.

And now I come to what is the most difficult portion of my task; I have to attempt to give some details of the 3,500 small and medium-sized dolls which were displayed on the six pyramids which rose from the arena of the Albert Hall. I have alluded on previous occasions to the fact that the ladies who arrange the dolls at the Truth Show are in very much the same predicament as the "Hanging Committee" at the Royal Academy. That is to say, they are unable to find space for all the deserving dolls "on the line." Some—nay, many—have to be inevitably "skied," and "skied" unmercifully, too, it must be admitted. And the worst of it is, of course, that when once they are placed in position near the apex of a pyramid it is virtually impossible for the most eager spectator to get more than a general impression of their costumes and the ability and taste displayed in dressing them. The Pyramids near Cairo can be climbed without much difficulty with the aid of helpful Arab attendants, but there is no getting to the top of Truth's Doll Pyramids, unless it be by adopting Mark Twain's method of mountaineering, and going up them with a telescope or good field-glass. Thus, whilst it is possible to go seriatim through such dolls as are well placed for observation, there are very many quite as worthy of examination which can only be scanned from a distance. The application of these remarks will be obvious. What I mean to imply is that all I profess to give here is a few rough notes of any dolls which attracted my attention by any special or original features. It by no means follows that the dolls not mentioned here were not worthy of notice. Indeed, I happen to know that with no appreciable exceptions the small dolls were dressed particularly well this year. Nor need I point out that the exhibition of the dolls each Christmas is after all only a very unimportant detail in their history. It is after they are distributed at the Hospitals and Workhouses that their real raison d'être commences, and once they are in the arms of their new mistresses it matters not one pin to the latter on what part of the Truth Pyramids they may have happened to be exhibited. But all this, I feel sure, the ladies who have so generously assisted in the doll-dressing year after year fully understand, and I need not enlarge upon the matter further. Truth was fortunate enough this Christmas to again secure the generous services of several ladies who have in successive years undertaken to dress an abnormally large number of dolls. Thus Lady Lange supplied the dresses for no less than 300 which occupied a considerable portion of one of the Pyramids, and made a brave show; whilst Mrs. B. Lindo, who has, I believe, been associated with every Truth Doll Show, dressed 200 with her usual taste and ingenuity. Another very kind supporter of the Truth Shows, Lady Sykes, sent 111 dolls, in costumes of the very latest fashion, amongst which such up-to-date items as gored skirts, frocks of shaded satin, gold bullion trimming, and the very newest style of coloured corsages were to be observed. Miss Coutts Fowlie also dressed more than a hundred dolls, whilst the Misses Benjamin sent 84, Mrs. Murray 72, Mrs. M. A. Tarry 72, Miss A. E. Smith 50, the Misses Beynon 50, Miss W. H. Wilton 48, and Mrs. Killingback 48. It has naturally become very difficult to hit upon novelties in the way of costumes for the dolls; and this year, as usual, those dressed in the fashions of to-day were mingled with an endless array of Nurses, Fairies, Sailor Boys, Flower-girls, Men-cooks, Soldiers, Juliets, Rosalinds, Fish-wives, Jockeys, Choir-boys, Nursery Heroes and Heroines, and Babies in long clothes. One of the most admired of the last-named class was Mrs. R. Trengrouse's "Baby Elsie," a beautifully-dressed doll, accompanied by a trunk which contained all the necessary garments for short-coating her. In several cases a number of ladies combined to dress a parcel of dolls between them, as, for example, "The Party at Broadlands, Ascot," and "The Danbury Competition Syndicate," to which Miss C. E. Pierce acted as secretary. The dolls dressed by Miss Thompson, of Leicester, will be especially prized by those little girls who may be lucky enough to get one of them; for each doll had pinned to its frock an envelope containing a directed post-card, and instructions that the latter should be posted as soon as the child into whose hands it had fallen had written on the back of it what she most wished for. Amongst Miss T. B. Davis's dolls were to be noticed one of the few Little Lord Fauntleroys of the Show (two years ago representations of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's popular little hero were to be found at the Truth Exhibition by the dozen), together with a capital "Morning" and "Night," and a doll representing Miss Letty Lind as Marguerite in "Morocco Bound." Mrs. H. F. Jacob's Nurses and Sailors; Mrs. B. Lee's pretty Pantomime Fairies; Miss M. K. Shuttleworth's Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette; Miss E. S. Slater's Fish-wives; Miss Bennett's long-clothes Baby dolls; Mrs. Tomlin's dolls in gauze and spangles; Miss Mahler's Hospital Nurse; Miss MacCombie's Bluecoat Boys and Charity Girls; Mrs. M. Peet's Red Riding Hoods; Miss B. Corey's Marie Antoinette, Mrs. Bramble's Baby dolls, Lady Fairbairn's "Music" doll, Miss E. Edwards's Cook and Pierrette, Miss Beauclerk's Clowns, Mrs. Laskie's Sailor Boys, Mrs. P. Green's row of pretty Quakeresses, Miss E. Mace's charming nursery heroines, the Misses Thompson's very realistic chimney-sweep, Miss Jackson's "Winter," and Mrs. Croxford's dashing young Jack Tars, may be mentioned with special commendation. I was glad to notice a new development of municipal charity in the shape of a long row of dolls dressed by "The Mayoress of Beverley." It would, indeed, be a good thing for the TRUTH Shows if in future years the Mayoresses of England generally were to enter into the friendly rivalry involved in this annual labour of love. Amidst the general blaze of bright colour Mrs. F. Stichel's group of thirty dolls all dressed in simple white dresses and sun bonnets seemed quite grateful to the eye, just as the white robed look of Bishops does on a gala day in the House of Lords. Miss E. Edward's dolls representing most of the nationalities of Europe would have made a capital group. Her Pole, Spaniard, Turk, German, and Alsatian were especially good. It was rather singular that only one "Daisy Bell" was to be found in the Show. This doll was prettily dressed by the Misses Marsland, who, by providing this heroine of the music halls with six bridesmaids, seemed to suggest that "Daisy" must have insisted on having "a stylish marriage" after all. A very pretty effect was produced by displaying Mrs. R. A. Bennett's charming "Ballet Girls" about half way up one of the Pyramids. In their wealth of tarletan petticoats they seemed to be flying in mid air. Much interest was taken in the tiny but ultra fashionable hats and bonnets with which Mrs. J. de Pass had provided her dolls; and it is to be regretted that the Misses Hope Johnstone's "Pas de Quatre" combination was not exhibited amongst the groups. The example set by "Natal" may be commended. Each of her dolls had a card pinned upon its frock on which was written such messages as, "I am Beryl, and can be undressed"; "I have been ill, and am in my dressing-gown," and so on. The dolls thus introduced go to their new possessors with a kind of personal identity which I am sure enhances the pleasure of their recipients. Other small and medium dolls which I marked for special mention were those dressed by Phyllis and Aubrey Harding's nurse, Mrs. W. Brew, Mrs. Bond, Miss La Roche, Lady Keyes, Mrs. Jardine, the Misses Lawson, Miss Staniforth, Mrs. E. Watson, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Boyes, Miss Knowles, Mrs. James Russell, Miss Johnson, Lady Kemball, Miss Baker, Mrs. Gilbey, Mrs. W. J. Clarke, Mrs. C. R. Durant, Mrs. E. R. Osborne, Mrs. Hutton, Mrs. Arlosh, Miss M. Dalby, Miss M. Paternoster, Mrs. H. H. Tankard, and Mrs. Usman.

The Home-made Toy Department of the Show was not, perhaps, quite so well filled as usual, though there were many very interesting exhibits on view. A prominent place, of course, was given to Mr. C. Rawson's strong and capitally-made model of a hansom, bearing the appropriate number "1894" on its plate. No detail had been omitted: the rubber tyres, the perforated mat, the lamp, the matchbox, the small oblong looking-glass of the well-appointed "Forder" or "S. & T.," were all there, while the cab was sufficiently large to serve admirably for taking the largest doll in the show to her destination. Very pretty indeed was Miss Birkenruth's model of a Japanese Tea House, with its paper lanterns hung out on projecting bamboos; its cushions, its screens, its tiny Oriental china tea-sets; its mural decorations of fans and masks; its bead jalousies, and its outside blinds of split cane. Most of the material used was undoubtedly Japanese—a fact which, of course, added considerably to the interest of this charming reproduction in miniature of one of the most popular institutions in the Great Britain of the Pacific. Then there was the Gipsy Caravan sent by Miss Gironci Dixon, a frequent contributor to the Home-made Toy department on previous occasions. The van, covered outside with tiny baskets, clothes-horses, brushes, and the other things which gipsies usually sell, and neatly fitted up within, was surrounded by a group of realistic Bohemians, one engaged busily in fortune-telling, whilst another was attending to the preparation of a doubtless savoury stew. The largest model toy of all was Miss M. Streatfeild's spirited and effective representation of one of those games of chess played with living chessmen, which are now so popular at bazaars and summer fêtes. On a board some three or four feet square this ingenious young lady had placed thirty-two dolls of various sizes, half of them dressed in white and half in red. The rows of little Pawns were especially pretty, and the Knights clad in silver-foil armour, the Bishops in their mitres, and the Castles, with doll faces peeping out from barred windows in their sides, made a most diverting show. The trouble involved in preparing this capital model must have been enormous. And yet this same exhibitor found time to exhibit a second model, which represented in most correct detail a railway-station bearing the name of "TRUTH Junction." Miss Higginson's "Old Mother Hubbard," a first-rate model doll made of rag, aroused additional interest from the fact that its clothes had been made entirely by Elementary School Girls under the age of thirteen, who had voluntarily stayed in on their Saturday afternoon holidays for this purpose. It was impossible not to be struck by the ball-game made by Mrs. H. Newman, in which the mouth into which the ball has to be thrown belonged to a very fierce-looking tiger, which had been painted with wonderful realistic effect by the lady in question. From a cleverly modelled and painted rag cat the ticket had, unfortunately, become detached, so that I am unable to mention the name of the skilful modeller. Amongst the smaller Home-made Toys were two quaint worsted dolls and an ingeniously-constructed suite of doll's furniture, sent by Miss Field Brook; another assortment of doll's furniture was most skilfully made of worsted and pins by Miss Beatrice Lange, and a most complete set of dishes for a dolls' dinner-party, of I don't know how many courses, was modelled and painted with great neatness by Miss Olivia Graham. Mr. O. W. Unna had the happy thought to ingeniously transform a number of cigar-boxes into combined desks and workboxes, each of which he had stocked with note-paper, envelopes, pens, pencils, needles, thimble, &c. Amongst the Home-made Toys, also, were the two cots which Mrs. Burnet-Geake had fitted up so completely and with such exquisite taste. Many an envious glance was cast at these [illegible] Legal Eyes, and happy indeed will be the lot of the little Hospital patient to whom Wood they have been sent.

Amongst the Presentation Toys the very large assortment sent from Germany by Duke Alfred of Saxe Coburg naturally attracted a large amount of attention. They were arranged, to the number of several hundreds, at the base of the Toy trophy which partly masked the organ, and included dolls of all shapes and sizes, model yachts and mechanical toys, musical toys and [illegible]thing of all kinds in profusion. The fact that two full sized violins in cases were to be found amongst them would seem to show that the Duke had himself a hand in their selection. Several of the most striking of the dolls were dressed as Red Indians, and there was, of course, one of the orthodox German Father Christmases, with a flying Angel to preside over all. Some of the dolls sent from Coburg arrived undressed, and these Mr. W. L. Cole, of Kensington, kindly undertook to get attired in time for the Show. Several of the largest of them were beautifully dressed by Madame Anna Williams, the well known vocalist, one being labelled "Signorina Amanina, her first and only appearance at the Albert Hall." Mrs. Hill, of Leamington, also dressed some of the Coburg dolls. Notable amongst the other Presentation Toys were the expensive mechanical and musical toys sent by "Georgette," and a large doll and her trousseau packed in a leather trunk, the gift of Miss Potter, Pau. A very novel toy, called "The Mountain Railway," was contributed by Mrs. Leila M. Ward, who has, I understand, patented the ingenious method by which the cars are worked. Master Pierre and Miss Jeanne Van der Neat sent a capital lot of toys selected from their own stores, including several unusually large and strong Dolls' Bedsteads and a Grocer's Shop. Presentation dolls were received from all parts of the world, some of the most interesting being those sent by Lady Oppenheimer from Frankfort; from St. Petersburg, in Russian national costume, by Mrs. Lily White; from Bombay, by Miss Ida Prager; and a fascinatingly quaint Chinese Bride and Bridegroom, from Mrs. R. Little, of Hong Kong. There was a capital Red Riding Hood sent by the proprietor of Bree's Royal Hotel, Jersey; and Mrs. A. Goldschmidt's doll, dressed in golfing costume, was especially interesting to the fair visitors to the Albert Hall, seeing that the said costume was modelled on that which has been designed for lady golfers by the Patent Shapely Skirt Association. Two capital character dolls, dressed by Mrs. P. Brown, representing "Sally in our Alley," and her 'prentice lover; the dolls sent by "Winnie and Annie"; and one from Miss Cockran, should also be mentioned. Mrs. W. L. Pogson had not only provided each of the seventeen dolls bought and dressed by her with a sack of sweets, but each sack contained a new silver sixpence, as seventeen lucky London children have doubtless by this time discovered. A model of the new Baker-street Station, made entirely of matches by Master Keinganum, must have involved the exercise of an abnormal amount of care and patience on his part. The little boys who sent all the way from Odessa no less than ninety-five sheets of postage-stamps of all kinds deserve special thanks for their happy thought and the way they carried it out. Messrs. Richardson, Glanville, & Co., of 114, Fenchurch-street, were kind enough to send a model of the Exhibition Buildings at Kimberley, which, as they suggest, can be readily turned into a capital doll's house. Of Scrap Books I am glad to say a goodly number was received from Miss Bella Sidney Woolf (an especially nice one), Mrs. Agelasto, the Misses MacNaughten, Mrs. Herskine, Miss T. English, J. M. T. "Yoko," "Stephanie and Oscar," and many other kind contributors.

And here, at any rate for the present, my discursive notes on the Toy Show must cease. This number of TRUTH, owing to the not unnatural wish of the printers to enjoy a prolonged and undisturbed Christmas holiday, has to go to press abnormally early, and it has been found impossible to deal with all the details of the Show which press for attention. That there are many omissions in this article, long as it is, is certain, and that mistakes have been made in it is not at all improbable; so let me say how pleased I shall be to supply the former and to correct the latter if those concerned will be good enough to call my attention to them. It has been found impracticable to print the List of Prize Winners in this issue, but the names of the succesful competitors will be published as soon as possible.

One very pleasant duty remains, and that is to thank most heartily every one who assisted in making this Fourteenth Annual Show so successful. The weather, unfortunately, did not prove very propitious, and the attendance was in consequence to some extent affected; but those who came to see the Show—and there were many thousands who did so—seemed to thoroughly enjoy the brilliant and animated scene. It is only due to the authorities at the Royal Albert Hall to again acknowledge the liberal way in which that building was placed by them at the disposal of TRUTH for a whole week without charge. Most cordially, too, have the permanent officials at the Hall assisted in every possible way. The Organ Recitals which Mr. H. C. Tonking gave on each day of the Show were thoroughly enjoyed, and he, too, must be specially thanked for the great service he thus rendered. And then there are the hundreds of kind friends who, by dressing dolls, by making toys, and by presenting money, really provided the Show. To them I will only say what has, in effect, been said in each successive year, that it is not in the grateful acknowledgment made by TRUTH that they will find their chief reward, but rather in the assurance, which all of them may confidently feel, that they have, by their gifts, caused delight this Christmas to many thousands of poor girls and boys in London whose pleasures are few, but whose capacity for enjoyment is unlimited.

FUR-LINED OVERCOATS, ULSTERS, OVERCOATS, and CAPES are kept ready for immediate use at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

Below will be found what is, I think, a complete list of the names of all those who assisted in dressing the dolls for the Truth Show, together with the number of dolls of various sizes —Large, Medium, and Small—which they dressed. In some few cases, I may add, the dolls sent out from this office were not returned in time for the Show, and have not, in fact, been received up to the present time.

The Misses Agelasbo, 24 s., 1 m.; Mrs. Arlosh, 42 s., 9 m., 1 l.; the Misses Antill, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. Ashton-Allen, 6 m.; Mrs. Ashworth, 1 l.; Mrs. B. Adair, 12 s.; Mr. W. J. Farmer Atkinson, 48 s.; Miss C. L. Ashford, 12 s.; the Misses Benjamin (3), 72 s., 12 m., 2 l.; Mrs. Boyes, 24 s., 4 m., 1 l.; Miss J. C. Beadon, 1 l.; Miss Benoliel, 24 s., 4 m.; Miss S. Baumann, 1 l.; Miss Barron, 6 s., 1 m., 1 l.; Miss L. M. Bullock, 1 l.; Miss Beauclerk, 12 s., 2 m., 1 l.; Lady Barnby, 1 l.; Miss M. Barnby, 1 l.; Miss Budd, 6 s. 1 m.; the Misses Beynon, 60 s.; Miss R. Behrend, 1 l.; Mrs. P. Bookless, 12 s., 1 m.; Mrs. R. A. Bennett, 24 m.; Miss L. E. Brown, 12 s, 2 m.; Miss M. Bramble, 12 s., 12 m.; Mrs. Barrett, 12 s., 12 m.; Mrs. E. Brew, 12 s.; Mrs. Ball, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss E. A. Banner, 12 s.; Miss Bennett, 6 s.; Mrs. Bond, 30 s.; Miss M. Chatteris, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss F. Coe, 12 s., 2 m. 1 l.; Miss Cartwright, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss C. G. Compton, 1 l.; Miss Croxford, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss F. Cross, 1 l.; Miss E. Corey, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. W. J. Clarke, 6s., 12 m.; Mrs. A. J. Cantain, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss E. Cary, 6 s.; Miss M. Dalby, 24 s., 4 m.; Miss Davis, 24 s., 4 m.; Miss Davies, 12 s., 2 m.; Miss Daniell, 6 s., 1 m., 1 l.; Miss C. Davis, 1 l.; Mrs. K. Duddell, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. C. Dawkins, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. Davis, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. C. Davies, 4 s.; Mrs. C. R. Durant, 12 s.; Mrs. Delaforce, 24 s., 12 m.; Mrs. Douglas, 12 s.; Mrs. E. East, 1 l.; Mrs. Eastwood, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss Elliott, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss E. Edwards, 24 s., 4 m.; Mrs. B. Enoch, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss Field, 1 l.; Mrs. G. W. Fitzwilliam, 1 l.; Miss Coutts-Fowlie, 95 s., 15 m.; the Misses France, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss D. Field, 24 s., 1 l.; the Misses Ford, 12 s., 2 m.; Lady Fairbairn, 8 m.; Miss M. Fry, 6 s.; Miss D. Fuller, 6 s.; Mrs. Foot, 6 s.; Mrs. Fussell, 25 s.; Mrs. Frisby, 12 s.; Mrs. S. Gore, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss M. Goodall, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss M. S. Gibbs, 12 s., 2 m., 1 l.; the Misses Glave, 36 s., 6 m., 2 l.; Miss H. B. Green, 3 s., 6 m.; Mrs. Godfrey, 12 s., 2 m.; Miss Gregory, 12 s., 2 m.; Miss Greaves, 6s., 1 m.; Miss Glover, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. J. P. Grant, 12 s.; Miss R. C. Garratt, 6 m.; Mrs. Grange, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. A. Gore, 12 s.; Mrs. P. Green, 12 s.; Miss H. Grant, 4 s.; Miss E. M. Gilbey, 24 s.; Mrs. Haywood (Nini), 1 l.; Mrs. Hutton, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss T. Haddaway, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. Henderson, 6 m.; Miss M. de Haviland, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. E. Hutton, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss P. Harding, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. B. F. Halford, 12 s., 2 m.; Miss Hampson, 13 s., 2 m., 1 l.; Miss E. Hull, 4 s.; Miss J. Honieve, 6 s., 4 m.; Miss Hoole, 6 s.; Mrs. H. C. Page-Henderson, 3 s.; Mrs. T. E. Hurt, 2 s.; Miss V. Henderson, 6 s.; Mrs. B. Harte, 6 s.; Mrs. A. H. Heath, 8 s.; Miss S. Holland, 9 s.; Mrs. C. J. Hill, 3 s.; Miss Johnson, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss Jackson, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss H. Jacob, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. Jardine, 24 s.; Mrs. Jarman, 6 s.; Miss C. Glenton Kerr, 1 m., 1 l.; Lady Kemball, 6s., 1 m.; Mrs. Killingback, 48 s., 8 m.; Mrs. Knowles, 12 m.; Lady Keyes, 1 s., 4 m.; Miss King, 25 s.; Miss M. M. Lamprell, 1 l.; Lady Lange, 250 s., 50 m.; Miss Luck, 1 l.; Miss L. Lawson, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss A. Levitt, 6s., 1 m., 1 l.; the Misses Lyall, 2 l.; Mrs. Laskie, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. B. Lindo, 176 s., 24 s.; Miss G. K. Lockwood, 12 s.; Miss B. Lee, 6 s.; Mrs. Majolier, 12 s., 2 m., 1 l.; Mrs. McClintock, 12 s., 2 m., 1 l.; Mrs. E. Manser, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. Murray, 60 s., 12 m., 1 l.; Mrs. Molyneux, 6 s., 1 m., 1 l.; Mrs. F. Morris, 12 s., 2 m., 1 l.; Miss Moorson, 12 s., 2 m., 1 l.; Miss K. Melksham, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss Martin-Edmonds, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss C. C. Mayhew, 12 s., 2 m., 1 l.; Miss M. Mayhew, 12 s., 2 m., 1 l.; Miss M. Morrison, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. Mann, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. R. Martin, 12 s., 2 m.; Miss Morgan, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss E. Meyer, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. Mansfield, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. H. C. Mayhew, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. McCombie, 20 s.; Miss B. Marler, 6 s.; Mrs. H. Newman, 1 l.; Mrs. Newstead, 6 s., 6 m.; Mrs. C. Oliver, 3 s.; Miss E. H. Osborne, 25 s.; Mrs. M. Peet, 24 s., 1 l.; Miss L. Pollard, 12 s., 2 m.; Miss A. E. Potts, 6 s., 1 m., 1 l.; Miss A. Parker, 1 l.; Miss M. E. Pierce, 18 s., 3 m.; Mrs. F. Pritchard, 1 l; Miss Player, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. Plant, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss Pearson, 4 s.; Miss E. Potter, 3 m.; Mrs. J. de Pass, 24 s.; Mrs. Pierse, 12 s.; Miss M. Paternoster, 24 s.; Mrs. Quick, 24 s.; Mrs. A. W. Rowe, 1 l.; Mrs. Rawley, 18 s., 1 l.; Mrs. A. Robinson, 24 s., 4 m.; Mrs. Rawson, 24 s., 2 m., 1 l.; Miss J. Rogan, 12 s., 2 m., 1 l.; Miss M. Renny, 4 m.; Mrs. Wynter Roberts, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. H. Miles Radcliffe, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss S. R. Ravenscroft, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. C. A. Raymonde, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. M. Hill Rennie, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss Radcliffe, 6 m.; Miss May Streatfeild, 6 s., 1 m., 1 l.; Miss M. L. Seligman, 1 l.; Miss M. Solomon, 2 l.; Miss C. J. Satchell, 12 s., 1 m.; Miss A. B. Steains, 1 l.; Miss B. Swanston, 1 l.; Miss D. Swanston, 1 l.; Mrs. Schloesser, 12 s., 2m.; Mrs. H. St. Maur, 12 s., 2 m., 1 l.; Mrs. F. M. Spinger, 1 l.; Mrs. E. F. Sichel, 30 s., 6 m.; Miss M. Stokes, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. M. Stoney, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. Sayer, 12 s., 2 m.; Miss E. S. Slater, 12 s., 2 m.; Miss A. J. Simmons, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss G. Stamforth, 6 s., 6 m.; Miss N. Kay Shuttleworth, 2 m.; Miss A. E. Smith, 50 s.; Lady Sykes, 111 s., 24 m.; Mrs. Strauss, 12 s., 1 m.; Mrs. B. A. Smith, 6 s.; Mrs. A. Shaw, 24 s.; Miss Saunders, 12 s.; Mrs. Scott, 25 s.; Mrs. M. A. Tarry, 60 s., 12 m.; Mrs. H. P. Truefitt, 36 s., 12 m., 2 l.; Miss E. Tollemache, 1 l.; the Misses Turton, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. F. Tomlin, 6 s., 1 m., 1 l.; Miss E. Thompson, 12s., 2 m.; Mrs. Tabernacle, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. H. H. Tankard, 30 s., 1 m.; Mrs. Treugrouse, 12 s., 2 m.; Mrs. Tonkin, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss Thorne, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. Tate, 6 s., 1 m.; Mrs. E. Trollope, 6 s.; Mrs. F. H. Thompson, 6 s.; Mrs. Trollope, 6 s.; Mrs. Usman, 24 m.; "Uplands" Servants, 1 l.; Miss H. Van Praagh, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss W. H. Wilton, 48 s.; Mrs. B. Woolcombe, 1 l.; Miss Hunt-Wright, 6 s., 1 m., 1 l.; Mrs. M. Whittingham, 1 l.; Miss M. White, 1 l.; the Misses E. J. and E. Wood, 12 s., 2 m.; Miss R. Weedon, 6 s.; Mrs. E. Ward, 6 s. 1 m.; Mrs. H. Walford, 3 m.; Miss J. Walker, 6 s., 1 m.; Miss A. Walker, 12 s.; Mrs. K. Welch, 12 s.; Mrs. Younger, 12 s., 2 m.

All Rights Reserved.]

QUEER STORY.

A SHOOTING FATALITY.

"GOOD business!" exclaimed Reggie Anstruther, delightedly, as he read a letter, just received, at breakfast one morning.

"What's good business?" inquired his mother, from the other end of the table.

"Why, this letter from Aunt Rashleigh. She asks me to run down there for a week before I go up to Oxford, as my uncle thinks I might like to have a go at the pheasants."

"And you would, I suppose?"

"You bet. The Rashleigh shooting is some of the best in the county; and, except for one poor day after the partridges, I have not had a chance of letting off my gun since this time last year. Go? I should think I shall!"

"Of course, I'm only too glad that you should get a little shooting, Reggie. But do mind and be very careful how you behave while you are at Rashleigh. Your uncle is so very particular, not to say crotchety, and a very little thing might offend him mortally; which, as your start in life depends greatly on his assistance, would be a terrible catastrophe."

"All right, mother. I'll be no end careful, I promise you. I know uncle Rashleigh is a cranky old gentleman; but he's a good sort at the bottom, all the same. My aunt, poor thing, is a nonentity, and don't matter one way or the other. But Nora—she's a regular champion, quite one of the best."

"Ah, that is just the point on which I want to warn you," said his mother, gravely. "Don't you get thinking too much about your cousin, Reggie. Your uncle and aunt expect great things for Nora, and certainly with her beauty, money, and position she ought to marry well. And there is nothing, I am sure, would anger them with you so much as anything in the shape of love-making between you two."

Reggie laughed, not quite comfortably, and his colour became a little heightened.

"Never fear, mother," he answered. "You don't suppose that Nora would regard otherwise than as a cousin my very penniless and ineligible self. Not she. She's a good sort and a brick, as girls go; but she's wide-awake is Miss Nora. You bet she knows well enough how many beans make five."

His mother smiled and looked fondly across the table at her handsome son. But she said no more on the subject, having the savoir faire to desist from what some one calls "the damnable vice of iteration," after letting drop the seed which she wished to sow. How few people there are—least of all women—who have this much sense.

A few days later Reggie started off on his visit to his uncle's, in high and jubilant spirits at the prospect of his week's enjoyment, having faithfully promised his mother to be on his very best behaviour during his stay there. It cannot be said that, even in spite of this promise, the good lady was quite at her ease about him, for though he would not intentionally break his word, yet he was too careless and impulsive to be implicitly relied upon. However, there was no good done by worrying over it, so, like a wise woman, she dismissed the subject from her mind until something should happen to make her recall it.

On reaching Rashleigh, a fine old place in South-east Berks, Reggie Anstruther found a house-party assembled there, mostly men, who had come for the shooting. But there was one of them, Reggie discovered in the course of his first evening, who had been drawn thither by another and a more potent attraction. He had never met this individual before, though he knew him well enough by name and by a reputation which was not quite immaculate. And it made our young friend nearly mad with jealous indignation to see the leering roué, prematurely aged at forty, with his abominable character clearly engraven on his face, taking Nora Rashleigh into dinner, and appropriating her, so to speak, to himself; and, what was worse, her father and mother openly aiding and abetting him in his designs, and affording him every kind of facility.

"It's a shame," thought Reggie to himself, as he looked across the table at his pretty cousin's far from happy face. "What if that blackguard is a smart man and has £30,000 a year! No pure-minded girl ought to be allowed in the same house with him. It's an awful shame of aunt and uncle; and I'd like to kick them both!"

When the gentlemen joined the ladies in the drawing-room after dinner the same sort of thing continued, Nora's admirer taking his seat beside her and practically monopolising her until the ladies retired to bed. The gentlemen then made a move to the billiard-room, and Reggie ran upstairs to change his coat and fetch some cigars. It so happened that the door of one of the bedrooms which he had to pass stood ajar, and the sound of voices from within was plainly audible.

"Really, Nora," he heard his aunt's voice say, in an angry tone, "the way you behaved to poor Sir Algernon Arnall this evening was quite disgraceful. You simply tried to look glum and sulky all the time he was speaking to you."

"So I was—and miserable into the bargain," sobbed Nora.

"I can't think what has come over you," continued her mother. "One of the most eligible men in England—a splendid match for any girl! And you turn up your nose at him."

"He's a horrid, fast, wicked man, Mamma; I'm sure he is. And I hate the very sight of him."

"Hush! hush! Norah. What a dreadfully unchristian thing to say," her mother reproved her. "Sir Algernon has sown his wild oats, perhaps, like other young men. But that will make him all the steadier when he marries and settles down."

"And it's not only that," protested the girl, paying no heed to her mother's words, "he has a temper like a fiend; I know he has. I heard him swearing at his poor valet yesterday, when he didn't know I was near. He used the most dreadful language, and looked—well I can't tell you how he looked. . . . . If I'd been the valet I'd have knocked him down on the spot. I wish he had."

"Silence at once, Nora! I never heard a girl say such dreadful things. I may as well tell you that your father has set his heart on this match, and he will not allow your silly girlish fancies to thwart him. Sir Algernon has to leave Rashleigh after the big shoot on Friday, and——"

"I wish somebody would shoot him!" broke in Nora, passionately, "I do, indeed."

Reggie did not stop to hear the angry tirade to which his poor cousin was subjected in punishment of her murderous wish (indeed he was rather ashamed of waiting to hear so much), but glided lightly on over the soft carpet, filled with righteous indignation. What a shameful thing to try and force Nora like that! He could not have believed that his aunt and uncle were capable of such conduct.

Down in the billiard room that evening, he watched Sir Algernon pretty closely, and the more he watched him the less he liked him. It did not require any very keen perception to notice in the baronet's face the signs of that violent temper of which Nora had spoken. His thin, cruel lips and scowling brow spoke pretty plainly. And when at pool the luck went against him and somebody fluked him down, he took little trouble to control his temper. It was a good thing for him—Reggie thought—that he was a rich baronet and a great parti, else old Rashleigh, himself a very choleric individual, would scarcely have borne his guest's ill-humour and bearishness with so good a grace.

The greater part of that night our young friend lay awake, tossing restlessly from side to side as he thought of his cousin, and wishing, with all his heart, that he was able to help her. Towards morning he subsided into a sort of uneasy dose; and while in that state, somewhere between dreaming and waking, a satisfactory idea seemed to drift into his semi-somnolent brain; for he chuckled to himself in a rather pleased manner, and muttered something which sounded like "worth trying, by Jove!" Then he fell quite fast asleep, and did not rouse again until one of the footmen brought in his hot water at eight o'clock.

During the process of dressing, and afterwards at breakfast, he was preoccupied and thoughtful, and every now and then a smile would break over his face, as though he were amused by some inward reflection. By-and-by, when the meal was over, he made his escape into the back part of the house, to renew his acquaintance with the old housekeeper, with whom he was a great favourite; and from her room he strolled out into the stable-yard, and there hobbed and nobbed awhile with the head coachman, also an old friend of his.

"Shall you turn out with the beaters to-morrow, Jenkins?" he asked him.

"That I shall, Master Reggie. You've never known me miss the first big shoot of the coverts, have you? And it's a hextra fine year for pheasants this is. Master's calculating on making the biggest bag that's ever been made on the Rashleigh estate."

"Well, there are some good shots among the party. I'm told that Sir Algernon is a regular crack."

"So he is; never see a better. For the credit of the estate, Barrells is goin' to put him in the best places all through the day; though it goes agin the grain with Barrells, it do, indeed."

"Why's that?" asked Reginald.

"Why's that?" repeated the coachman. "'Cos Sir Hawlgenon treats all us servants no better than nigger-slaves, and is just about as stingy as they make 'em. That's why. Just you harsk Sir Hawlgenon's man what he thinks of him—that's all."

"No man was ever a hero to his own valet," laughed Reggie. "But I say, I hope I shall shoot decently to-morrow; Uncle got's so awfully riled if you let off many birds, doesn't he?"

"Don't know nothing that irritates him much more. I remember, two years ago, there was a parson out with us as missed four birds out of five, at least. And Barrells—he takes things pretty easily, you know—he says to Master, by way of joke, like, 'Never mind, Master, there'll be all the more birds left for next time.' My eye, didn't the Squire pitch into him just; his language was worth hearing. And he said as how if Barrells hadn't been head-keeper on the estate for twenty-five years, he'd have give him a week's wages and shunted him on the spot. After that, says Barrells to me, confidentially, 'No more jokes on that subject for me, thank'ee; no, no, Jenkins.'"

Reggie laughed, and handed the coachman a cigar, which, when the latter had lighted, he became still more conversational, and they remained talking together for more than half an hour.

Directly after luncheon the young man disappeared, and did not turn up again at Rashleigh until just in time for dinner at eight o'clock. He looked flushed and excited, and in reply to a laughing inquiry from his aunt as to where he had hidden himself all the afternoon, he stated that he had been for a long country ramble and had missed his way. The air and the exercise had evidently freshened him up, for he was very talkative and in excellent spirits. Moreover, he took care to please both his aunt and uncle by being particularly civil to Sir Algernon.

The next day dawned, as perfect a day for covert shooting as late October could afford; fine, dull, mild, with the gentlest of winds and the greyest of skies.

"No excuse for not shooting well to-day," said old Rashleigh, rubbing his hands delightedly. "Reggie, my boy, that sun which was always in your eyes last year won't trouble you to-day, nor will that wind which would carry your shot wide."

"I'm rather sorry for it," laughed Reggie. "But I expect Barrells will send me into covert with the beaters, so what I do miss will be mostly rabbits."

By half-past ten the eight guns were ready to start, and by eleven they were duly posted round the first covert, which was within a short walk of the house. Reginald, as he had anticipated, was in covert with the beaters, while Sir Algernon, as Jenkins had prophesied, was put right forward where the largest number of birds would break. Nothing particular happened in the shooting of this first covert, except that Reginald heard his uncle call out to Mr. Barrells, in a voice of some annoyance—

"Who the dickens have you posted forward at Beechen Corner, Barrells?"

"Sir Hawlgenon Hawnall, sir."

"Sir Algernon Arnell, eh? Then what the devil's come over him, I wonder. More than three dozen birds have got away at that one corner."

"So I see, sir. And I can't make it out. Sir Hawlgenon's generally dead on."

When they had finished the covert, and the sportsmen gathered to see the birds laid out at the top end, Sir Algernon was noticed to look as sulky and black as thunder, while the face of Squire Rashleigh wore a far from good-humoured expression.

"Hem!" he growled. "Forty less than we reckoned on for that one covert—eh, Barrells?"

"Yes, sir. I calculated on a hundred; and there's only sixty-one. And them nearly all hens."

"If we don't do better than this," said the Squire, in an audible soliloquy, "our bag will be a disgrace. Well, hang it Barrells, let's get on to Lime Tree Bottom—sharp!"

Lime Tree Bottom was the largest and best-stocked covert on the estate; and on the sportsmen's success here the day's bag very largely depended. Sir Algernon, who had his valet with him to load for him, again went forward, and the Squire himself was posted next to share with him that angle of the covert; while Reggie, who looked a trifle nervous, was again in with the beaters.

As they drew near the top end of the covert the birds broke forward thick and fast, and bang—bang—bang—went the guns as fast as they could be loaded. But, again, at Sir Algernon's corner dozens and dozens of birds escaped; and Mr. Barrell's language became really dreadful.

"Master will be mad; stark, raving mad!" he said to Jenkins, who was next him.

"Shouldn't wonder," said Jenkins. "Nigh on a hundred have got away, right over Sir Hawlgenon's 'ead. Can't make it out. Must be horff his chump this morning. I must harsk Tummas 'ow many B. and S.'s he drank last night."

At the top end of the covert there was a space clear of trees and underwood, but grown all over with thick bracken. And it was here that Sir Algernon stood. As the beaters drew up to this point, there was a scrimmage and a rapid movement in the bracken, and some one sang out, "Hare forward!"

"Bang, bang," went both Reginald's barrels, simultaneously with Sir Algernon's, and the hare dropped with a thud.

"Mine," shouted the baronet.

"Yes; Sir Hawlgenon's 'are," bawled the latter's valet, at the top of his voice.

"Good thing 'e's 'it something at last," muttered Mr. Barrells.

Jenkins touched Reginald's sleeve and whispered hastily in his ear, "Don't claim it, sir. Mind, it is Sir Hawlgenon's!"

Before he had time to feel mystified by this extraordinary communication—which Jenkins had evidently some good reason for making—one of the beaters who who had run to pick up the hare, was heard to utter a loud cry of dismay.

"What the devil's the matter with you, you lubber?" demanded Sir Algernon.

"Why, it ain't a 'are wot you've potted," answered the fellow, holding up by the hind legs a small brown spaniel; "it's poor Dash!"

"What?" Mr. Barrells almost shrieked. "Do you mean to say he's shot the best dawg in our kennels?"

For answer, the beater held up the dead spaniel's carcase higher still. At that minute, the Squire, who had heard something of this, came rushing up with a truly awful look on his face.

"Who did that?" he asked, in a tone of suppressed fury, pointing to the spaniel's body.

"Sir Hawlgenon, sir," chimed three or four voices, not sorry to inform against the detested Baronet, who stood there looking sulky and savage, rather than at all apologetic.

Squire Rashleigh, already nearly wild with Sir Algernon for having missed so many pheasants and ruined the bag, could control himself no longer; and his temper, when it did break loose, was as ungovernable and reckless as that of a madman.

"Devil take you, Arnall, you demned clumsy idiot!" he roared (for he scarcely knew what he was saying). "You go and miss two hundred pheasants, all of them perfectly babyish shots, and then you wind up by shooting the best dog in my kennels! You'd better go home, sir, and take your infernal gun with you, for never a cartridge shall you let off in my coverts again."

The Baronet turned white with passion, and clenched his fist as if he would strike the Squire. But he checked himself thus far, and contented himself with merely turning on his heel, and retorting in a loud voice:—

"You're right. I shall leave for London by the next train, and damme if I ever come near this infernal hole again."

There was an evil, vicious look on his face as he said this, which showed that he would never forgive the Squire's insulting words.

* * * * *

That evening, after dinner, Reginald took the opportunity of a short tête-à-tête with his cousin in a corner of the drawing-room, while some lady guest was discoursing brilliant music on the piano, to say:—

"I expect you're not much grieved by Sir Algernon's abrupt departure, are you, Norrie?"

"Not I," answered the girl, smiling radiantly; "I am absolutely rejoiced about it. How luckily it happened, too, his enraging papa like that! It couldn't have happened better if it had been planned."

"It was planned," said Reginald, dramatically.

"What do you mean, Reggie?" ejaculated the girl in great wonder.

"Simply this. Your poor cousin is not quite such a fool as he looks; and he laid a deliberate scheme to drive away that cad of a Baronet from the house. Shall I tell you how?"

"Yes, yes!" she cried, her bright eyes dilating with excitement. "Go on. Let me hear."

"I know how riled uncle Rashleigh always gets when his guests shoot badly; so with the aid of old Jenkins and Sir Algernon's man (who doesn't love his master) I procured a specimen cartridge from the Baronet's store, took it up to the London makers and got them to load with dust shot 200 cases marked No. 5 (that's the size generally used for pheasants). These I brought back with me, and by the valet's help, substituted them for the proper ones at the top of Sir Algernon's box. The valet is a sharp fellow, and he took out a few loaded with the proper shot, to lull suspicion, in case it were aroused. But nearly every time the Baronet let off his gun, he was discharging dust shot, which, at thirty yards, has about as much effect on a cock pheasant as so much snuff. He did get mad when he found he couldn't hit 'em—didn't he just!"

And Reggie chuckled merrily.

"How splendid," gasped Nora, her eyes sparkling and her face flushing, "and how clever of you. But—but if his shot wouldn't kill the pheasants, how did it kill Dash?"

"Ah! Norrie. That little episode was the chef-d'œuvre of old Jenkins. He mistook Dash and sang out 'Hare forward!' then saw his error too late to stop me shooting. But as Sir Algernon fired at the same time, and from nearer, and claimed the hare (as he supposed it) for his gun, Jenkins twigged how well it suited our little game, and tipped me a wink to let Sir Algy keep the credit, which I promptly did,"

"What is this interesting discussion you are having with your cousin, Reginald?" his aunt's voice broke in at this point from the other side of the room. "You both seem quite excited."

"So we are," interposed Nora, simply. "Reggie has actually been trying to persuade me that there's more music in 'Daisy,' and those other horrid music-hall tunes, than in that beautiful thing of Schubert's which Mrs. Desart has just played. I can't think how he can have such taste—can you?"

Before buying Gentlemen's Fur-lined Coats and Ladies' Sealskin Jackets, see Phillips's fine stock. Everything guaranteed one half West-end price. Phillips & Co., 52 & 53, Newgate street, E.C. Sealskin Jackets remodelled and re-dyed to latest fashion. Perfect fit guaranteed. Caution, the only address. Other people are trading on our name.

"Truth" will be sent weekly to any address in the United Kingdom for 7s. for 3 months; 14s. for 6 months; or 28s. for 12 months. The subscription for the Continent, America, and the Colonies (India and China excepted) is 3 months, 7s. 7d.; 6 months, 15s. 2d.; 12 months, £1. 10s. 4d.; and to India and China, 3 months, 8s. 2d.; 6 months, 16s. 4d.; and 12 months, £1. 12s. 6d. All subscriptions are payable in advance, and cheques and P.O.O.'s should be made payable to the Manager, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-street, S.W.

ART NOTES.

THE Egyptian Hall is avowedly "the Home of Mystery," and it is possibly for this reason that the New English Art Club continues to hold its exhibitions there. For certainly none of Mr. Maskelyne's illusions is more incomprehensible than the reason of the continued existence of the Club in question. Its raison d'être when it first started was not difficult to understand. A number of young and enthusiastic artists wished to make a determined and visible protest against the conservatism and conventionality of the Royal Academy; and for a while they carried out their purpose with a pluck and an audacity which were decidedly interesting to the looker-on. True, their exhibitions were treated as a joke by a rather large proportion of those who visited them, but the joke, at any rate, was an original and entertaining one, and it served as a grateful relief to the wearisome banality of Burlington House. But, alas! the exhibition of the New English Art Club is no longer even a good joke. Those who go to it to laugh find themselves not a little bored. It has committed the unpardonable sin, and is now positively dull.

Under these circumstances one ought, perhaps, to be exceptionally grateful to Mr. Walter Sickert, who, "faithful amongst the faithless," still holds high the mahl-stick of rebellion. He, at all events, refuses to bow the knee to Baal, and, with what seems to be the courage of despair, exhibits his "Hotel Royal, Dieppe." No one can miss this extraordinary production. For one thing, it is, with that lingering sense of humour which the Hanging Committee of the N.E.A.C. appears still to possess, hung in the place of honour. But, were it hoisted up to the ceiling or displayed upon the floor, it would with equal certainty secure attention. For myself, I do not mind confessing that I got a chair and sat down in front of it in amused amazement. Some impertinences become fascinating by reason of their audacity. So it is with Mr. Walter Sickert's "Hotel Royal, Dieppe." It attracts by its very impudence. I really hardly know how to describe the picture. There is a good deal of an exceedingly unpleasant pink sky in it; there is a lot of flat white buildings, and a vast expanse of what I suppose is meant for a lawn, but which looks much more like an unintelligently-painted olive-green drugget. And over this drugget a number of marionnette-like women in enormous crinolines are walking! It is but mild censure to allude to this impossible picture as "an eccentricity and a divagation," and if I write any more about it I may be tempted to use much harsher terms. But I feel impelled to remind Mr. Walter Sickert, who is by no means without talent, that the best of causes can be ruined by injudicious advocacy, and that if he really wishes to suggest that his Dieppe picture is typical of what "New" English art ought to be, he is doing his best, or worst, to make every one but a few irresponsible faddists contented with the old.

The absence of pictures by Degas and Monet, and the fact that neither Mr. Furse nor Mr. Sargent exhibits anything, undoubtedly detracts from the interest of this Exhibition. Mr. Steer sends one picture only, and that a portrait, which by no means comes up to the standard he attained a couple of seasons ago. But Mr. Steer is, of course, reserving himself for the Goupil Galleries. Those who are interested in the weird and decadent, yet strikingly clever, art of Mr. Aubrey Beardsley should not miss the portrait of this perverse artist, which has been sent by Mr. Will Rothenstein. There are also two gruesome drawings by Félicien Rops (Nos. 7a and 7b) which may be recommended to those who find a pleasurable sensation in flesh creepiness. In his enigmatic watercolour (No. 33) Mr. H. B. Brabazon presumes somewhat on the strength of his recently acquired reputation. His drawing may be, as he says, "An Impression on the Alps," but it would have been equally convincing, it seems to me, had he called it an impression of a disintegrated rainbow or of a syllabub. Another impenetrable mystery in connection with the exhibition is the reason which could have led the Committee of Selection to accept and hang the portrait numbered 85. Why, I really believe that it would have been denied hospitality even in Suffolk-street.

LETTERS ON BOOKS.

MY DEAR MR. WYNDHAM,—Turn a pig into a garden and he'll find nothing but dung, and M. Paul Gaulot, rooting among the papers of the chivalrous Swede, De Fersen, has made discoveries characteristically French. Even French ingenuity, however, fails to convince you that the friendship recorded in "A Friend of the Queen" (1), between Marie Antoinette and Count de Fersen is of the kind which the decadent Parisian drama delights to honour. Do you remember how Peter, in "A Tale of a Tub," found at last the word "Shoulder-knots" in his father's will? As the whole word was not to be found in it, he searched for its separate syllables, and (failing to discover even these) for its separate letters, all of which except the "k" he traced out; but he argued as "k" and "c" are interchangeable in Latin inscriptions, it was enough for his purpose that "c" was discoverable. Q.E.D. Similarly M. Gaulot spells out an illicit intrigue between the Queen and the Swedish Count by piecing together a line of a song here with a word in a letter there, and by filling up blanks in the correspondence with unwarrantable French inferences. If M. Gaulot could only see it he is nearly as grotesquely ridiculous and prurient as the M. Pétion, of whose outrageous delusion that the saintly Madame Elizabeth made coarse love to him he makes such fun. Indeed, it is characteristic of M. Gaulot that he should give you in full this thoroughly French Malvolio's disgusting account of the advances made to him by the King's sister; but I admit that the humour of this inconceivable coxcomb's illusion helps to redeem its grossness. Malvolio, Bobadil, and Parolles, if rolled all together into one, would have been modest by the side of this M. Pétion. Was there ever anything in fiction more deliciously funny and French than this idiot's misgiving lest Madame Elizabeth meant to seduce him in order to ruin him? "May not Madame Elizabeth have consented to sacrifice her own honour in order to make me lose mine?" Surely you might say of this gentleman what M. Royard-Collard somewhere says of some one, "He is not an ass, he is the ass." Though, however, you are irritated by M. Gaulot's occasional pruriency, you cannot help being interested in his book. Since Don Quixote, surely there never was such suicidal chivalry as Count de Fersen's. He tilted his whole life through at windmills, and the insane encounters ended, as they could only end, in the destruction of both himself and his idol. Can you doubt, for instance, that the mad manifesto of the Duke of Brunswick to revolutionary France, of which Count de Fersen was the author, brought about all the horrors it was meant to avert, and sealed the Queen's terrible fate? The Count, who never recovered the shock of the Queen's death, must have

> Viewed his own feather on the fatal dart
> Which winged the shaft that quivered in her heart.

I wonder was the sagacious Fouché thinking of this Royalist boomerang, which recoiled so fatally upon the

China and Glass. — Messrs. Goode, Artists and Designers solicit an inspection of their collection in their recently-extended South Audley-street premises, now by far the largest and most important in Europe. Messrs. Goode guarantee the excellence of all their productions, and invite a comparison of their prices with those of any co-operative stores.

(1) "A Friend of the Queen." (Marie Antoinette—Count de Fersen.) From the French of Paul Gaulot. By Mrs. Cashel Hoey. With two Portraits. Two vols. (London: William Heinemann.)
(2) "Maxime Du Camp's Literary Recollections." Two vols. (London: Remington & Co.)
(3) "Memoirs by Charles Godfrey Leland." (Hans Breitmann.) Two vols. (London: William Heinemann.)
(4) "An Ancient Ancestor." A Tale of Three Weeks. By Charles E. Hall. Three vols. (London; Skeffington & Son.)

throwers of it, when, as I find in "Maxime Du Camp's Literary Recollections" (2), he made the following true prediction?—

When Louis XVIII. returned to France after the Cent-Jours, the Duc d'Otrante presented him with an essay which contains these words: "It is possible to imagine in the future a conspiracy which would be irresistible, and which could neither be foreseen nor averted: I mean a conspiracy formed by a Ministry or a Party at Court which should favour or advise, through gross ignorance or blind devotion to the cause of Royalty, a counter revolution. Any such plan would again inevitably overturn the throne, and perhaps destroy even the last hopes of our dynasty."

Indeed, all such institutions have a fortunate tendency to fall at last, overbalanced by their own dead weight. Fortunately, I say, since, as M. Du Camp remarks, apropos of the coup d'état of December 2—of which he gives a singularly-interesting description—

Despotism is not the outcome of the will of one man, but is the product of the servile spirit of the community. Did not Tacitus say of the consuls, knights, and senators after the death of Augustus, "Et ruerunt ad servitium?"

"I sometimes imagine," says Heine, "that the devil, the nobility, and the Jesuits exist only so long as they are believed in. As for the devil, this is certainly the case, for only believers have seen him. With respect to the nobility, we shall some day find that the Upper Ten will cease to be the Upper Ten whenever it pleases all worthy citizens to cease to kotow to them. But the Jesuits?" Thus every people in the long run gets such government as it deserves to get—no better and no worse—and to this both M. Maxime Du Camp's exceedingly interesting "Recollections" and Mr. Charles Godfrey Leland's delightful "Memoirs" (3) testify incidentally. In "Hans Breitmann's" pages you get a vivid picture of the earlier French Revolution of 1848—"quorum pars magna fuit!"—but the most startling, perhaps, of his many striking pictures is that of the slave-captain, "the mildest-mannered man that ever scuttled ship or cut a throat":—

He was a real old-fashioned slaver, who is fully a hundred times worse than an average pirate, because he was the latter whenever he wished to rob, and in his business was the cause of far more suffering and death. He was very fond of reading poetry, his favourite being Wordsworth. This formed quite a tie between us. He was always rather mild, quiet, and old-fashioned—in fact muffish.

But here was one of the stories this meek little muff told his fellow-Wordsworthian:—

Compared to the awful massacres and cruelties inflicted by the blacks on one another, the white slave-trade seemed to be philanthropic and humane. He had seen at the grand custom in Dahomey 2,500 men killed, and a pool made of their blood into which the king's wives threw themselves naked and wallowed. One day fifteen were to be tortured to death for witchcraft. I bought them all for an old dress-coat. I didn't want them, for my cargo of slaves was made up—it was only to save the poor devils' lives. If a slaver could not get a full cargo, and met with a weaker vessel which was full, it was at once attacked and plundered. Sometimes there would be a desperate resistance with the aid of the slaves. I have seen the scuppers run with blood, said the captain.

This gentleman, suggests Mr. Leland, probably if he escaped hanging, settled down in some English coast village where he read Wordsworth, attended church regularly, and was regarded as a gentle old duffer by the younger members of society. In truth, human nature, which the novelist represents as homogeneous, is often, so to say, built in water-tight compartments, with no intercommunication between them. Who, after reading Mr. Leland's description of this gentle slave-captain, will doubt the incident of the pirate-ship in Mr. Charles E. Hall's stirring novel, "An Ancient Ancestor" (4). It is a most promising first novel, but I have time to do no more than commend it to you.—Believe me, my dear Mr. Wyndham, ever yours very sincerely,

DESMOND O'BRIEN.

GIRLS' GOSSIP.

DEAREST AMY,—Are you glad that Christmas is over? I am at least willing to confess that I am delighted that the shortest day is past. Oh, these cold, dark mornings! Are they not dreary and depressing? We have to breakfast at eight, the Pater liking a good half-hour by the fire after the meal to read his paper. I do not know anything more gloomy in its way than dressing by gaslight in the early morning. It is lovely, however, to come into the warm, cosy dining-room, bestow a kiss upon father's dear old white head, and then elicit fragrant odours from the coffee-pot and ply the dear man with something nice to support him until luncheon hour. One of the advantages of having a man on the premises is that it makes women attend to the food supply, which would otherwise be sadly neglected.

London has been full of roses lately, and they were sold at a price so low that even the poorest might secure one or two of these beautiful companions for a day or two. They do not last long, unfortunately, whatever care may be bestowed upon them, but the perfume is perfectly delicious. Harry says that he bought some in the City four for a penny; another friend says that they were sold at twopence a bunch in the West-end; but whenever we have tried to get them so cheap they have eluded us. However, we secured a vase full the other day, and have adored them ever since. Mary has had some lovely roses and carnations sent from Nice, and it was quite difficult when we were calling on her the other day not to steal a few of them. I longed to, but I knew that if I asked her for one she would have bestowed ever so many upon me, and I should then have felt a thief, indeed.

I have seen some lovely ball dresses lately. One was in pale sea-green satin trimmed with pink roses, pink chiffon, and old Alençon point, a perfect dream of a dress. Another was in brocade with a pink ground and sewn over with small flowers in palest tint of mauve, turquoise blue, ruby red, and topaz yellow, with foliage in grey green and soft brown. This lovely brocade was cut up the seams and slashed with pink satin. The bodice was a mixture of brocade, pink satin, sable, and old lace, with a couple of fine old paste buckles at the waist. You can fancy what a delightful possession such a gown must be.

I cannot bear the neck boas that are made of the whole skin of some poor little furry animal. Can you? I see in the drapers' shop-windows now that these can be had at something three-farthings each. But apart from that, the suggestion that they carry of a slain victim is opposed to any pleasant association. I must say I do like the little round fur boas which fasten under the chin with a bow of ribbon, but we have recently seen some of such exaggerated size, that they were simply burlesques. A very small girl who sits near us in church wears a boa, the circumference of which increases as it approaches the back of her head. I am sure it is not exaggeration to say that at that point it must have measured three-quarters of a yard. Viewed above it, her head, hat and all, resembles the head of a bonnet-pin, so far as size is concerned. The boa puts her whole little person out of drawing. I am told that ostrich-feather boas and ostrich-feather fans are going out of fashion, but I accept this statement with a copious helping of salt, for I see the feather-fans in all the glove shop-windows, and I see the feather-boas on every third woman I meet. On our At-home day, our doorstep is strewn with isolated feathers, so that evidence collected by ourselves goes strongly to prove that the ostrich, by reason of its feathers, goes into society as much as ever.

Do you know the horrid smell of heated sealskin? Mingled with the odour of toasted muffins and Russian tea it pervades every house one enters between the hours of four and seven. I think there should be an edict compelling callers to leave their coats, if made of or trimmed with fur, in the outer hall, or, as Ouida would say, in the antechamber. Sealskin is bad enough, but kauk is worse, and musquash is simply unbearable. I cannot find an adjective strong enough to suit bear and wolf, and when Charlie next comes I shall apply to him for a graphic expression. Directly I secure it I will send it on to you. Is there anything more refreshing when annoyed than to find a violent adjective on the spot, which precisely suits one's needs? Father tells the story of having been in an omnibus one day, and hearing the conductor try to explain to a French passenger that he ought to pay a penny more. The man either could not, or would not, understand, and walked off, owing the conductor the penny. The latter thrust his head into the omnibus and said, "Will any lady or gentleman give me the French for d—— fool?" No one obliged him, and when the pater told us the story, we none of us could remember what is the equivalent expression of opinion in the Gallic tongue. A Frenchman, when he is in a rage, seems quite contented if he calls his opponent bandit, but that word in English is simply harmless.

Messrs. Harborow, Hosiers, Glovers, and Shirtmakers by appointment to the Royal Family, have opened new premises, 6 and 7, New Bond-street, in connection with their old-established business, 15, Cockspur-street.

Hunting Season, 1893-4.—Busvine's new designs and materials for this year include several special novelties in Riding Habits, Coats for Walking and Driving, Walking Jackets, Gowns, &c. Can be seen at 4, Brook-street, or will be sent by return of post.—John Busvine, by special appointments to the Princess of Wales, the Empress of Germany, the Empress of Austria, &c., &c.

I must tell you something funny that happened to ourselves at the South Kensington Railway Station last week. I had a long fur boa, and as Maud had none, and it was very bleak and cold outside, I persuaded her to twist the end of mine round her neck. As we were running up the platform to catch our train, we were suddenly stopped, and I could not think why, until I saw in front of Maud and myself a wretched woman whom our fur had caught across the back of her head and simply bonneted. Maud had taken one side of her and I the other, forgetting our bond of fur. We apologised, and she was extremely good-natured, and forgave us on the spot; but I really wonder that she did, for we were in perfect fits of laughter—and so, indeed, was she.

Maud and I happened to see some very pretty dresses prepared for a trousseau at Mrs. Batley's, of St. George's-road, Eccleston-square. I am sure you will be interested in a description of them. A lovely evening dress was in pale blue brocade with a panel of pale pink silk embroidered in pink flowers and pale green leaves. Rosettes of blue ribbon were arranged round the waist and at the side of the panel. The bodice was draped with brocade which tied in a bow under a kind of berthe of jewelled lace. Another evening dress was in yellow satin, the whole bodice being covered with pearls and draped with soft French silk blond lace. Straps of pearl embroidery caught it over the shoulders, ending in tassels of pearls. The skirt was draped with festoons of lace caught with ornaments of pearl.

The petticoat to be worn with the bridal gown was made of white moiré, with pinked-out flounces of silk and one or two of Valenciennes lace. A novel and very handsome afternoon dress was in green cloth of a rather dark serpent tone, the skirt made without a seam, but varied by perpendicular lines of openwork, in the style of Madeira embroidery, through which showed a shot blue and green silk underskirt. Graduated squares of the openwork showed the shot silk again below the waist. The effect was excellent.

We saw some lovely hats and bonnets at Miss Westropp-Dawson's, at 43, New Bond-street. A large picture hat was in biscuit felt, bordered with sequins and trimmed with black ostrich tips. It curved up at the left side, and was most deliciously becoming. Another was in cream-coloured cloth, with a beaver-coloured velvet crown, and a large bow of the same as trimming, with feather to match, and beaver balls, steel tipped. A Devonshire hat in black velvet was made with a transparent lace crown, and trimmed with many feathers. A Gainsborough was in black satin, with high, conical crown and lob feathers, edged with jet. Of the toques, one was in purple velvet, with a black crown embroidered in steel; another in tan velvet, trimmed with shaded ribbon shot with green, and bunches of violets; while a third was in green velvet, the brim cut up in sections, and gold and bronze roses forming the floral additions. Very sweet was an old rose velvet bonnet, with jet over the crown and a trimming of openwork jet leaves, sequins, and roses.

Zouaves are a specialty of this establishment. They are in velvet and jet of any colour. We liked a tea jacket of grey crépon with purple velvet zouave, collar, and belt, the sleeves being finished at the top with three frills. A lovely black velvet cape was trimmed with jet and feathers.

This reminds me to tell you that one of my Christmas boxes was an Elderdon cape from Boyd's, of Belfast, in thick, soft, fleecy cloth, one of the most comfortable wraps you can imagine. It has a high collar, which can be strapped up under the chin or worn turned down at will, a hood which covers the hair or hangs at the back which ever may suit the exigencies of the moment—straps which hold it on without buttoning the fronts, and large and liberal "patch" pockets inside which answer all the purposes of a muff, besides holding one's handkerchief, purse, and other trifles.

I am sending for a paper containing a description of the TRUTH Toy Show at the Albert Hall. That dull and dim arena never looks so bright and cheery as when filled with the thousands of toys that mean so much happiness to poor and suffering little ones at Christmastide.

The annual sale of artistic and useful work done by the members of the Children's Salon was held at St. Martin's Town Hall on Wednesday and Thursday afternoon. The object of the efforts of the graduates and associates is to endow a Children's Cot in North-West London Hospital. They have already endowed in perpetuity a cot in the Victoria Hospital for Children, in memory of the late Duke of Clarence, the deed of which has been accepted by the Princess of Wales. Among the work on sale were two little petticoats crocheted by Princess Victoria of Wales, one in pink and white, the other in biscuit colour and brown. The needlework on the little frocks at this stall was very fine and beautiful, and the prices were remarkably moderate. Think of a little white silk frock, smocked, for 6s. 6d. Sweets done up in bags of brocade lined with satin seemed to find a ready sale. In the large tea-room, set with round tables, the youthful associates and members served the cheerful beverages, with bread and butter and cake, in cook's caps, white aprons, and long white cuffs, a very becoming costume.

Clare sends me the following from Dublin:—

DEAREST MADGE,—Don't you think that Christmas Day is the most difficult day in the world to get through? How much we are helped through the long hours by the thought of the coming feast, the Christmas dinner, with its family party and conventional menu, far be it from me to say. The day and the dinner are over now. They are gone, "so is my enmity." I am not a pessimist. Heaven forbid that I should ever join that gloomy horde who walk in darkness of their own creating, and, if they cannot destroy the eternal spring of hope within their breasts, at least disuse it. Life has shadows and illusions, but surely there is no greater illusion than to think that it is all shadow and illusion. May not, however, the most cheerful of optimists grumble at the association of over-eating with Christmas? The tradition is not dying out either. Does not each season add to the long-established list of comestibles and luscious inventions in bon-bons and cakes? The Christmas afternoon tea-cake is second to none—not even to the wedding-cake—in deadliness. Comparatively new, it is, as Fred says, "decidedly up to weight," and holds its own in the most undeniable manner with the oldest institutions on the Christmas bill of fare.

Well, the feast is a thing of the past, not to be gone through again for the whole long year! Notwithstanding all the greetings given and received, I wonder if anyone—children excepted, of course—has spent a Merry Christmas? Did you ever know a person who experienced one? Who had been really and truly merry at that particular season? Is not such a one very hard to come into actual contact with, like the people who see ghosts? Everyone knows "lots of people," so they say if you ask them, "who, of course, are merry and happy, and all that kind of thing," but somehow or other, taking each lot separately and singly, the merry

RIDING HABITS.—A speciality in Riding Habits. Has been declared the best, without exception, by all ladies who have seen it. Quite new. Patented. Made only by G. S. WOLMERSHAUSEN & CO., LTD., 16, Gt. Marlborough-street, Regent-street, London, W.

REDFERN'S SALE. Preparatory to taking possession of their new Premises, the Messrs. Redfern will sell, regardless of cost, all their original models of GOWNS, COATS, MANTLES, WRAPS, and MILLINERY, designed and produced by them during this season. Commencing Monday, January 1st, and continuing for two weeks. All Furs at sale price.—27, New Bond-street, London, W.

and happy one is never actually hit upon. How interesting and unique a true autobiography would be of "How I spent a Merry Christmas." Even in the overcrowded market of books such a novelty could not fail to attract attention; though possibly the author might have to publish it at his or her own expense; a fashionable publisher could, just now, hardly commit himself—at his own risk—to any such cheerful title.

Lord Houghton dutifully patronised Irish industries, and no doubt gave many Irish Christmas presents. Don't you think that the recipients of our home-made lace and crochet have every reason to be happy? Every one knows how beautiful Irish lace can be; the crochet is even a greater wonder to me, in the way of being a thing of artistic beauty. A few dinners have been given at the Viceregal Lodge, the guests being principally military. The soldiers are, you must know, under orders from their commanding authorities to accept all proffered Viceregal hospitality—a case in which the duty of obedience wears no very stern aspect, I should say.—Yours ever,

CLARE.

I expect you are tired by now of ordinary roast turkey. Try, then, this recipe for turkey stuffed with sweetbread ragout:—

Order a young, but not a small, turkey, ready dressed for roasting. Put a lump of butter into a stewpan, and set it over a charcoal or very clear fire. Lay in the bird for ten minutes, turning it often. Have ready a sweetbread ragout, take up the turkey, split it down the back, and fill it with the ragoût. Close the bird, sew it up, then lard the breast with alternate rows of bacon and ham cut in narrow strips. Lay at the bottom of a deep stewpan thin slices of fat ham and veal, with a portion of beef kidney cut into dice-shaped pieces, and an ounce of butter. Place the turkey upon this, strew over it a handful of sweet herbs and parsley mixed. Cover the pan closely, and set it over a steady fire for about an hour. When ready, take up the bird, and pour into the stewpan one pint of good stock, stir well and strain off the liquor. Remove every particle of fat and pour the gravy into a clean saucepan. Add a glass of sherry and the juice of a lemon. Let all simmer until thick, then put in the bird to re-heat for a few minutes. Take it up and lay it on a hot dish which has been screened with ham essence. Pour over it the remainder of the glaze, garnish with small moulds of sausage meat. Oil or grease as many moulds as you require. Press the sausage meat into each and bake in a quick oven for a few minutes. Turn out carefully.

And this is the way to make the sweetbread ragout:—

Wash a calf's sweetbread well; blanch it in boiling water, then set it in cold, take it out and wipe it dry. Put the sweetbread into a stewpan with grated bacon, a cluster of sweet herbs, a dozen mushrooms and an ounce of truffles cut into slices. Season with pepper and the grated rind of a lemon. Set the pan over a clear fire for ten minutes, add a gill of good stock, a glass of white wine, and let it stew slowly for an hour. When ready skim off all fat and thicken the gravy with a coulis. See that it is a good flavour.

Ever, dear, your loving cousin, MADGE.

CIGARES DE JOY cure ASTHMA.

JOY'S CIGARETTES afford immediate relief in cases of ASTHMA, WHEEZING, WINTER COUGH, and HAY FEVER, and, with a little perseverance, effect a permanent cure. Universally recommended by the most eminent Physicians and Medical Authors. Agreeable to use, certain in their effects, and harmless in their action, they may be safely smoked by ladies and children. All Chemists and Stores; Box of 35, 2s. 6d., or post free from WILCOX & CO., 239, Oxford-street, London, W.

MOURNING FOR IMMEDIATE WEAR.

Messrs. JAY'S

Large and well-assorted STOCK includes a choice and varied selection of COSTUMES, MANTLES, and MILLINERY, suitable for any degree of Mourning, and ready for IMMEDIATE WEAR. Orders to special instructions are executed in a few hours, and Ladies are Waited Upon in any part of the country without any extra charge whatever.

JAY'S,
REGENT STREET, LONDON.

EXSHAW'S No. 1 BRANDY,
66/- per dozen.
SUPPLIED DIRECT TO THE PUBLIC.

CHAMPAGNES.
JULES CHAMPION & CO.'s (in All Sizes), 68/- Per Doz.
Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1884 (in Bottles only) 105/- per doz. Moet & Chandon's Dry Imperial 1889 (in all sizes) 84/- per doz.
Lebeau & Co. Vintage 1889, 54/- per doz.

POWELL, TURNER, & CO.,
28, KING STREET, ST. JAMES'S, S.W.; & 23, FINCH LANE, E.C.

CHUBB'S 128, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, LONDON, E.C.
FIRE RESISTING. JEWEL THIEF RESISTING.
WEST END BRANCH—
68, ST. JAMES'S STREET, PALL MALL, S.W. SAFES.

THE CRITERION RESTAURANT, PICCADILLY CIRCUS.
DINNERS AND SUPPERS A LA CARTE IN THE CELEBRATED EASTROOM, AND AN EXCELLENT 4s. SUPPER is now served from 10.30 to 12.30 in the West Room
BOTH ACCOMPANIED BY INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

"Johannis Water is of exceptional purity and excellence."—THE LANCET.

"Johannis"

THE KING OF NATURAL TABLE WATERS.

PROMOTES APPETITE. ASSISTS DIGESTION. PROLONGS LIFE.

To be obtained from all Chemists, Wine Merchants, and Stores at the following prices per Dozen, Delivered:

	Bottles.	Half Bottles.	Quarter-Bottles.		Bottles.	Half Bottles.	Quarter Bottles.
London:	6/-	4/6	3/6	Country:	6/6	5/-	3/9

Springs: ZOLLHAUS, GERMANY. London Offices: 25, REGENT STREET, S.W.

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.

300 & 302, OXFORD STREET, W.

ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS.

Weavers of Dress Silks,

Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

TRIPLE SPLICED HOSIERY.

PATENT NO. 20,778.

For Ladies and Children.

For Comfort, Elasticity, and Wear-resisting qualities these goods are the best produced. They are SPLICED AT THE INSTEP, where stockings, when worn with lace-up boots and shoes, first show signs of wear. In the heels and feet there is also a splicing thread more than is found in ordinary Hosiery. Registered Trade Mark, "Musa Dye," on each pair. Colours guaranteed absolutely fast and clean.

Made in Cotton, Lisle Thread, Summer and Winter Cashmere, Spun and Pure Silk.

To be obtained of ALL FIRST-CLASS DRAPERS & HOSIERS and WHOLESALE ONLY from the Patentees, DEBENHAM & FREEBODY, FLETCHER GATE, NOTTINGHAM.

MELLIN'S FOOD

For INFANTS and INVALIDS.

MELLIN'S EMULSION

of COD LIVER OIL

CURES COUGHS, COLDS, BRONCHITIS, &c.

For Children and Adults.

Price 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per Bottle. Sample Size, 1s.

OF ALL CHEMISTS AND STORES.

MELLIN'S FOOD BISCUITS

(Manufactured by Carr & Co., Carlisle, specially for G. Mellin.)

DIGESTIVE. NOURISHING. SUSTAINING.

For Children after Weaning, the Aged, Dyspeptic, and for all who require a simple, Nutritious, and Sustaining Food.

Price 2s. and 3s. 6d. per Tin.

AN ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET ON THE FEEDING AND REARING OF INFANTS,

A Practical and Simple Treatise for Mothers, containing a large number of Portraits of Healthy and Beautiful Children, together with facsimiles of original testimonials which are of the greatest interest to all mothers, to be had, with samples, free by post on application to

Mellin's Food Works, Stafford Street, Peckham, S.E.

The Original Firm, Established 1810.

MAPPIN BROTHERS'

"Queen's" Plate.

(PROTECTED)

For TABLE FURNISHING, &c.

By Her Majesty's Special Warrant.

Queen's Plate is the finest in the World. Has stood the test of over 60 years, and is supplied direct to the public by the actual Manufacturers

From Queen's Works, Sheffield.

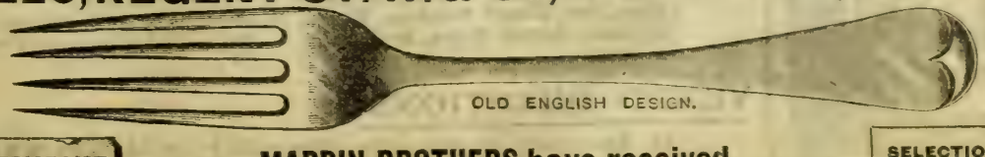
Mappin Brothers' Corporate Trade Mark is on all Plate and Cutlery in Queen's Manufactures

Only London Show Rooms: 220, REGENT ST. W. & 66, CHEAPSIDE, E.C. (Next Sir John Bennett's.)

OUTFITS OF "QUEEN'S" PLATE.



"QUEEN'S" TABLE CUTLERY.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST and SAMPLES POST-FREE.

MAPPIN BROTHERS have received THE HIGHEST AWARDS at the CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

SELECTIONS of Goods forwarded to the Country on APPROVAL.

Hurst & Blackett's Publications.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.

NOW READY, 63rd Edition, 1 vol., royal 8vo, with the Arms beautifully engraved, 31s. 6d. bound gilt edges.

LODGE'S

PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE

For 1894.

CORRECTED BY THE NOBILITY.

FOUR NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NOW READY AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

BROKEN FORTUNES. By HENRY CRESSWELL, Author of "A Modern Greek Heroine," "A Wily Widow," &c. 3 vols.

IN AN ALPINE VALLEY. By G. MANVILLE FENN, Author of "Mahme Nousie," "The Master of the Ceremonies," &c. 3 vols.

AT SOCIETY'S EXPENSE. By ALGERNON GISSING, Author of "A Moorland Idyl," "A Village Hampden," &c. 3 vols.

SECOND EDITION OF

TO RIGHT THE WRONG. By EDNA LYALL. Author of "Donovan," "We Two," "Knight-Errant," &c. 3 vols.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, Ltd., 13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

Now on Sale, Leatherette, Price 1s., fcp. 8vo.

CLUBS.

A List of 1,000 Clubs frequented by the English in all parts of the World, for 1894.

By E. C. AUSTEN LEIGH.

London: SPOTTISWOODE & CO., New Street-square, E.C.

T. J. & J. SMITH'S

Clerical, Professional, Commercial, Pocket, & Scribbling

DIARIES for 1894.

In every variety of Size, Style, and Binding.

To be had of all Booksellers and Stationers in Great Britain and Abroad, and at the Railway Bookstalls.

A Most Acceptable NEW YEAR PRESENT is

T. J. & J. SMITH'S

ILLUMINATED RUSSIA-BOUND DIARY.

To be had of all Booksellers and Stationers.

THE ARGOSY

FOR JANUARY.

THE GREY MONK,

A New Serial Story of Powerful Interest, commences in

THE ARGOSY for JANUARY.

LETTERS FROM SOUTH AFRICA,

By CHARLES W. WOOD, commence in

THE ARGOSY for JANUARY.

NOW READY.

THE ARGOSY FOR JANUARY.

CONTENTS.

1—The Grey Monk. Chap. I.-IV. A New Serial Story. Illustrated by M. L. Gow.
2—Personal Recollections of Sir Walter Scott.
3—The Law of Life.
4—Country Lovers.
5—Letters from South Africa. By CHARLES W. WOOD, with nine Illustrations.
6—The Christmas Knock.
7—Clough na Molla! By JULIA KAVANAGH.
8—The Old Lady in Black.
9—Lines on a Nun. By C. J. LANGSTON.

SIXPENCE MONTHLY.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, 8, New Burlington-st., W.

LONDON LIBRARY

ST. JAMES'S SQUARE, S.W.

PRESIDENT ..... LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

The Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE, M.P. | The Very Rev. the DEAN of LLANDAFF.
Sir E. H. BUNBURY, Bart. | Sir HENRY BARKLY, K.C.B.

TRUSTEES.

Right Hon. Sir M. GRANT DUFF. | Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart.
Right Hon. Earl of ROSEBERY.

The Library contains 130,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various languages.

Subscription £3 a year. Life Membership according to Age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-room open from Ten to Half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo, price 21s.; to Members, 10s.

C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

NOW READY.

PALL MALL MAGAZINE

ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY. PRICE ONE SHILLING.

NEW YEAR'S NUMBER, JANUARY, 1894. No. 9.

EDITED BY LORD FREDERIC HAMILTON, M.P., & SIR DOUGLAS STRAIGHT.

— CONTAINS —

Coloured Frontispiece—"A New Year's Morning."

SERIALS

By George Meredith, Frank R. Stockton.

ARTICLES

By Lord Wolseley, Lord Ernest Hamilton, Albert Vandam, W. H. Mallock, Lloyd Bryce, Archibald Forbes.

STORIES

By E. Lester Arnold, Robert S. Hichens, W. L. Alden.

POEMS

By May Sinclair, Arthur Law, Herrick.

Illustrations by A. L. Bowley, G. L. Seymour, Arthur Jule, Goodman, Cecil Aldin, and "Rab."

VEXED QUESTIONS

"Is Anonymity in Journalism Desirable?" CHARLES WHIBLEY, E. B. IWAN MULLER.—"Without Prejudice." By I. ZANGWILL.

Copies on sale at all Booksellers, Newsagents, and Railway Bookstalls in Great Britain and Ireland. Editorial Offices: 18, Charing Cross-road, W.C. Publishing Offices—London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Limited, Broadway, Ludgate Hill, E.C.; Manchester: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Limited, 16, Jackson's-row; New York: The International News Company; Toronto: The Toronto News Company; Montreal: The Montreal News Company.

IN EVERY HOME A USE IS FOUND FOR ELLIMAN'S.

For Aches and Pains

ELLIMAN'S UNIVERSAL EMBROCATION

AN EXCELLENT GOOD THING

One Shilling and Three halfpence

PREPARED ONLY BY ELLIMAN SONS & CO. SLOUGH, ENGLAND.

ELLIMAN'S IN MASHONALAND.

Read the following extract from the Journal of Bishop G. W. KNIGHT-BRUCE, Bishop of Mashonaland, 1892:—

"I offered a man £1 for half a bottle of Elliman's Embrocation, but he strongly preferred the Embrocation to the £1, as one might be replaced, the other not."

ELLIMAN'S IN MASHONALAND.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY,

FOUNDED IN 1842. LIMITED.

For the CIRCULATION and SALE (either New or Second-hand) of the BEST ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from One Guinea per annum. LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for books exchangeable by the Library Messengers) from Two Guineas per annum. COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from Two Guineas per annum. N.B.—Two or three friends may unite in One Subscription, and thus lessen the cost of carriage. LIBRARY BOXES GRATIS.

TOWN AND VILLAGE CLUBS SUPPLIED ON LIBERAL TERMS.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books Gratis and post free.

SALE DEPARTMENT.

All the Leading Books of Past Seasons are on Sale, second-hand, at greatly Reduced Prices. LISTS GRATIS AND POST FREE.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

30 to 34, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON;

241, BROMPTON ROAD, S.W.; and 48, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. (Mansion House End).

NEW NOVELS AT THE LIBRARIES.

DIANA TEMPEST. By Mary CHOLMONDELEY, Author of "The Danvers Jewels," "Sir Charles Danvers," &c. The Second Edition. In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

The SWING of the PENDULUM. By FRANCES MARY PEARD, Author of "The Baroness," &c. In 2 vols., crown 8vo.

TEMPE. By Constance Cotterell, Author of "Strange Gods." In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

A HEROINE in HOMESPUN: By FREDERIC BRETON, Author of "The Crime of Maunsell Grange," &c. In 2 vols., crown 8vo.

BRITOMART. By Mrs. Herbert MARTIN, Author of "Bonnie Lesley," &c. In 3 vols., crown 8vo.

MOLLY and her MAN-O'-WAR. By Dr. ARABELLA KENEALY, Author of "Dr. Janet of Harley-street." In 1 vol, crown 8vo, 6s.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street, W.

Dr. YORKE DAVIES'S WORK on CORPULENCY. Sixth Edition, Sixteenth Thousand, revised, 1s., cloth 1s. 6d.

FOODS FOR THE FAT. The Dietetic Cure of Obesity. By N. E. YORKE DAVIES, L. Roy. Coll. Phys., Lond. London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 214, Piccadilly, W.

STERILITY IN WOMEN: Its Causes and Curative Treatment. By J. B. RYLEY, M.D., M.R.C.S., London.—A New Illustrated Edition of this work is Now Ready. Price 3s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 8d. London: HENRY RENSHAW, 356, Strand.

G. TANSLEY & CO.,
BALL AND CONCERT FURNISHERS,

16, WIGMORE STREET, CAVENDISH SQ., W.
AND
91, GLOUCESTER ROAD, QUEEN'S GATE, S.W.

SUPPLY ON HIRE

For BALL CONCERTS, CHRISTMAS PARTIES, &c. TABLES, SEATS, CHINA, PLATE, GLASS, &c. BALL ROOMS LIGHTED BY ELECTRICITY OR CANDLES. TEMPORARY ROOMS ERECTED WITH PATENT CEILING AND SPECIAL POLISHED FLOOR. DOORWAY AWNINGS. STALLS FOR BAZAARS. ENTERTAINMENTS AND MUSICIANS PROVIDED.

PRICE LISTS SENT FREE ON APPLICATION.

THE WINDOW

Is the most important thing to be considered in the decoration of a house. The eye naturally turns to the opening by which light enters the room; and in the ideal home the view from that opening, and everything that serves to frame it, should be attractive. The most beautiful thing to be seen through a window is a garden of flowers, but nine-tenths of human habitations in civilised countries are so placed that their windows overlook scenes very different—sometimes dreary streets, stables, and chimney pots. Glacier Window Decoration will add beauty to the window, it is not costly, and no alteration of sashes is required. It is the only effective and reliable substitute for stained glass.

Hundreds of specimens can be seen, and all information can be had at

THE GLACIER DEPÔTS,
153, Piccadilly, W., and 56, Queen Victoria St., E.C.

THREE GOLD MEDALS

The Y & N Exquisite Model. Perfect Comfort. Guaranteed Wear.
Patent Diagonal Seam Corset
Will not split in the Seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the fashionable colours and Shades in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil; also in the New Sanitary Woollen Cloth. 4/11, 5/11, 6/11, 7/11 per pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped "Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam No. 116," in oval on the lining.

Sold by Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES. — Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

A LADY is anxious to hear of a post as COMPANION or SECRETARY, for a young lady of good birth and education. Musical (piano and singing). Good amanuensis and excellent traveller. Highest references given.—Address, L. C. T., care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN, in all parts, willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent Gratis. The List includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended—Address, Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C

C. P. R. SERVICES.
CHINA, JAPAN, AUSTRALIA, ROUND the WORLD } MONTHLY vid VANCOUVER.
Fastest, finest, only twin-screw Steamers on Pacific Ocean. Specially interesting route for tourists, through grandest scenery on American Continent. Luxurious hotels. CANADIAN TOURS arranged. Shooting, fishing. For tickets, free illustrated books, time-tables, apply, CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 67 and 68, King William-street, London, E.C.; 7, James-street, Liverpool; 105, Market-street, Manchester; 67, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow.

TRAVELLERS TO BRINDISI AND THE EAST
WILL NOW FIND
BOLOGNA the most convenient stopping-place.
Coupé-lits can be booked beforehand by Mr. FRANK, Hotel Brun, for DAILY EXPRESS TRAIN, leaving Bologna 6.55. p.m., arriving at Brindisi 10.50 a.m.

THE INTERNATIONAL SLEEPING CAR and EUROPEAN EXPRESS TRAINS COMPANY. TRAINS DE LUXE AND HOTELS.—SEASON 1893-4. MEDITERRANEAN EXPRESS EVERY SATURDAY and TUESDAY at 7.25 p.m. from the Gare de Lyons, Paris, arriving Nice 1.28 p.m. the following day. Special Ceinture Train from Gare du Nord on arrival of 8.0 and 10.0 a.m. trains from London. Dinner served on the Trains on leaving Paris. Through Sleeping and Dining Cars, with covered vestibule inter-communication between the cars. Only Dining Car service this year. Three other Daily Services to the Riviera.

The Company's RIVIERA PALACE HOTEL, NICE (Cimiez).
PENINSULAR EXPRESS EVERY FRIDAY 8.15 p.m., London to Brindisi. To Cairo under five days viâ P. and O. Steamers. Through Cars from Calais
The Company's GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL, BRINDISI.
SUD EXPRESS.—MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS to Pau, Biarritz, Madrid and Lisbon, &c.
The Company's GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL (Terminus), LISBON.
ORIENT EXPRESS. — Daily to VIENNA, Three Times Weekly to CONSTANTINOPLE.
These Trains are composed exclusively of Sleeping, Saloon, and Dining Cars, comfortably warmed and thoroughly ventilated. For all tickets and full details of Trains and Hotels apply to Chief London Office, 122, Pall Mall, and City Office, 5, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

TRIP TO THE MEDITERRANEAN.

The Yacht Owners Association,
28, ALBEMARLE STREET,
ARE ARRANGING

A voyage to the Mediterranean in the Steam Yacht, CEYLON, which they are taking for the purpose, to start on FEBRUARY 1st, going to Lisbon, Gibraltar, Marseilles, Monte Carlo, Geneva, Naples, Malta, Athens, Constantinople, Joppa, Port Said, Alexandria, Algiers and Tangiers, occupying about sixty days.

Price of a Ticket 100 guineas, including everything but wine.

Applications for Tickets to the Offices of the Association.

A well-known London Doctor has been engaged for the trip.

AMUSEMENTS.

CONSTANTINOPLE OLYMPIA TWICE DAILY.

CONSTANTINOPLE .....OLYMPIA.
TWICE DAILY.
12 Noon 6 p.m.
THE ONE GRAND AND INCOMPARABLE CHRISTMAS ATTRACTION.

CONSTANTINOPLE .....OLYMPIA.

A Marvellous Spectacle.
Magnificent Palaces.
Glorious Mosques.
Picturesque Bazaars.
Cosmopolitan Population.
A Real City.
Oriental Warmth and Comfort.
Most Gigantic Scenic Effects.
Fleets of Real Turkish Cruisers.
The Waters of the Bosphorus.

CONSTANTINOPLE ..... OLYMPIA.

Marvellous Reproduction of
The Hall of 1,001 Columns.
Illuminated Fairy Palace.
Tower of Galata.
Delightful View of Golden Horn.
Great Bridge of Boats.
Fully-Rigged Turkish Vessels.
Floating in the Harbours.
Gorgeous Palaces of the Sultan.
Vividly illustrating the Tales of the Arabian Nights
In all their Eastern Opulence,
Filling the world with wonder.

CONSTANTINOPLE; or, REVELS OF THE EAST.
BOLOSSY KIRALFY'S Gigantic Production.
2,000 Performers.
Marvellous Dances; Sports and Pastimes.
Grand Slave Ballet by real Negresses.
Magnificent Water Carnivals.

CONSTANTINOPLE .....OLYMPIA.

Special Covered Way direct into the Building from Addison-road Station. Visitors from all parts of London independent of weather. Special trains. Thousands of 1s. Tickets, which include a Reserved Seat, and Admit Everywhere. Positively No Extra Charges. Admission (including Reserved Seat):—1s., 2s., 3s., 4s., 5s.; Private Boxes (hold six), £3 3s. Seats from 3s. booked at all Box Offices, and at Olympia.

NIAGARA HALL, St. James's Park Station, Westminster.
"NIAGARA IN WINTER"—Panorama.
"ICE PALACE AT MONTREAL"—Diorama.
Front Hall—Philippoteaux's Masterpiece "Christ entering Jerusalem."
2,000 Stereoscopic Views of America.
Lower Hall—Congress of Nations Exhibition; Mdlle. Patrice, Conjuress and Illusionists; Lantern Exhibition, Egypt, Palestine, Worlds's Fair. Daily 10 to 10.

WULFF'S GREAT CONTINENTAL CIRCUS, at HENGLER'S, Argyll-street, W.—Twice Daily, at 2.30, doors open at 2, and Evening, at 8, doors open 7.30. At every performance the SIXTY HORSES performing in the arena at one time, introduced by HERR ED. WULFF. Twenty Clowns. The Singing Pony "Punch." Box-office open 10 till 4. Prices: Boxes, £2 and £1. 10s.; Stalls, 5s. and 4s.; Chairs, 3s.; Parterre and Balcony, 2s.; Pit, 1s. And at Libraries. Telephone No. 35,222.

LAWRIE & Co., 15, Old Bond-street, W.
EXHIBITION OF CHOICE PICTURES,
including
"THE BATH OF VENUS,"
by
E. BURNE JONES.
NOW OPEN FROM 10 to 6 DAILY.

ELOCUTION, EXTEMPORE SPEAKING, ORATORY.—Professor HAYSACK, whose Pupils are among the first clergymen, doctors, barristers, solicitors, public personages, and nobility, GIVES INSTRUCTION. Voice strengthened, defects corrected.—70, Talbot-road, Bayswater.

STATHAM'S WATERPROOFS.

Chesterfield Coat 21/- Regulation (Cape all round) 30/-
CARRIAGE PAID.
Any size up to 52 inches long. Larger sizes, 1/- extra for every two inches.
Best make, thoroughly Waterproof, and adapted for any climate.
Book of Patterns of all kinds of Tweed, Cashmere, and other Waterproof Cloths post free for 6 stamps (returnable).

H. STATHAM & CO.,
11, CORPORATION STREET, MANCHESTER.

HALL'S COCA WINE
A MARVELLOUS RESTORATIVE

Strongly recommended by The Lancet, The British Medical Journal, and Medical Profession. Medical analyses and Testimonials Free by Post.
For SLEEPLESSNESS, MENTAL and PHYSICAL FATIGUE, ANÆMIA INFLUENZA, CONVALESCENTS. A few glasses only will prove its efficacy.
Extract from Letter of Pharmaceutical Chemist:—
"I had an opportunity last night of testing the value of Hall's Coca Wine as a sleep producer. At 10 p.m. a dose of opium was administered, but at midnight there had been no effect. A glass of Hall's Coca Wine was given, and sleep was produced in half-an-hour."
Of Chemists and Wine Merchants, 3/6 per Bottle, or post free
STEPHEN SMITH & CO., Bow, London.

DRURY LANE THEATRE ROYAL. Sole Lessee and Manager, Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS. Twice Daily, at 1.30 and 7.30 the grand Christmas Pantomime ROBINSON CRUSOE, by Henry Sl[illegible] and Sir Augustus Harris. (For full particulars see Daily Papers.) Box-office open to-day.

HAYMARKET THEATRE. MR. TREE,
Sole Lessee and Manager.
EVERY EVENING (for a limited number of Nights), at 8.30,
CAPTAIN SWIFT.
Preceded, at 8, by SIX PERSONS—a Duologue, by I. Zangwill.
MATINÉE of CAPTAIN SWIFT SATURDAY NEXT, December 30, at 2.30.
Box-office (Mr. Leverton) from 10 till 5. HAYMARKET.

LYCEUM THEATRE. Sole Lessee, Mr. HENRY IRVING.
On TUESDAY EVENING NEXT, December 26 (BOXING NIGHT), at 7.30, and TWICE DAILY, at 1.30 and 7.30,
Mr. OSCAR BARRETT'S FAIRY PANTOMIME,
CINDERELLA.
Box-office open daily 10 to 5. Seats can be secured by letter or telegram.
Mr. Joseph Hurst, Acting Manager.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S THEATRE.—Under the Management of Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—Nightly, at 7.30, A LIFE OF PLEASURE, by Henry Pettitt and Sir Augustus Harris. Transferred from Drury Lane Theatre (full particulars see Daily Papers). Box-office open all day.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—A. & S. GATTI, Sole Proprietors and Managers. A New Drama of Real Life, by Henry Pettitt, entitled A WOMAN'S REVENGE, Every Evening, at 8. Messrs. Charles Warner, Charles Cartwright, Herbert Flemming, R. Harding, J. Carter, H. Russell, and Arthur Williams; Mesdames Mary Rorke, Alma Stanley, and Agnes Thomas.—Box-office 10 to 6. Doors open at 7.30.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER.—EVERY EVENING, at 8.10,
THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY,
By Arthur W. Pinero. Doors open 7.45; carriages, 11.
MATINÉES EVERY SATURDAY,
SPECIAL MATINÉE WEDNESDAY NEXT, January 3, at 2.30
Box-office open 10 to 5. Seats may be booked by letter, telegram, or telephone. ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

COURT THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ARTHUR CHUDLEIGH.—To-Night and Every Evening, a New Triple Bill. At 8.15, GOOD-BYE; at 9, FAITHFUL JAMES; and at 10, UNDER THE CLOCK. Box-office open 10 to 5. Telephone No. 3,031. Matinée Saturday Next, at 2.30. Doors open 2.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.—MRS. OTHELLO, Boxing Night, and Every Evening, at 9. Messrs. Charles Glenney, Julian Cross, J. G. Grahame, G. Raiemond, Percy Marshall, Cecil Crofton; Misses Cicely Richards, Blanche Horlock, Irene Rickards, Alice de Winton, Florence Melville, and Miss Fanny Brough. Preceded, at 8.15, by THE BROTHERS. Seats at all Libraries. Box-office open daily. MATINÉE EVERY WEDNESDAY and SATURDAY, at 3.

DALY'S THEATRE, Leicester-square.—Mr. Augustin Daly's Company. Every Evening at 8, THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL. Miss Ada Rehan as Lady Teazle; Mr. Wm. Farren as Sir Peter Teazle. Last Matinée of THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL Saturday Next, December 30, at Two. Monday, January 1, THE COUNTRY GIRL. Miss Rehan as Peggy, Mr. Farren as Moody. Box-office daily 9 to 5. Seats also at all Libraries.

PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Every Evening, at 8.30, Musical Comedy, words by Owen Hall, Lyrics by Harry Greenbank, Music by Sydney Jones, entitled A GAIETY GIRL. The most powerful cast in London. At 7.45, SIXES. Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

THE TRAFALGAR THEATRE.—Sole Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. FRANK WYATT (Miss Violet Melnotte). Under the Management of Mr. CHARLES H. HAWTREY.—Every Evening, at 9, a New Farcical Comedy, entitled TOM, DICK, AND HARRY, by Mrs. R. Pacheco. Preceded, at 8.10, by PICKWICK. Mr. Charles Hawtrey, Mr. C. P. Little, and Miss Jessie Bond. Matinée Every Saturday, at 3 o'clock. Box-office open from 10 to 10.—Business Manager, Mr. E. F. Bradley.

SHAFTESBURY THEATRE.—Manager, F. J. HARRIS.—Every Evening, at 8.15, Vol. II. of MOROCCO BOUND. John L. Shine, H. Haslem, and Charles Danby; Misses Jennie McNulty, Agnes Hewitt, Maggie Roberts, and Lettie Lind. Preceded, at 7.45, by Rex Harley, the inimitable Mimic of Popular Actors. Box-office 10 to 10. Doors open 7.30.—Matinée Every Saturday, at 2.30.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Open 7.30.—DON QUIXOTE, at 10 o'clock, New Grand Dramatic Ballet, in Four Tableaux. At 8.30, CHICAGO, and Grand Ballet of Nations. Operatic Music, Varieties, and Specialities. Frequent Change of Programme. Telephone 35,065.

THE EMPIRE.—Two GRAND BALLETS.—At 7.50, KATRINA, and at 10.15, THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME. Grand Varieties. The new entrance from Leicester-street is now open. Doors open at 7.30.

PALACE, Shaftesbury-avenue.—The HANDSOMEST THEATRE in EUROPE. The finest Variety Entertainment in London. Full Licence. Prices from 6d. Doors open 7.30. Manager, Mr. CHARLES MORTON.

LONDON PAVILION.—Grand and Unsurpassed Christmas Programme.—Albert Chevalier, Charles Godfrey, Fannie Leslie, Howard Reynolds, Kate James, F. H. Celli, Marie Collins, Sam Redfern, Sybil and Grace Arundale, Minnie Cunningham, Charles Ross, Little Chip, Florrie Gallimore, Harry Atkinson, Evans and Luxmore, The Kellinos, Sisters Devan, Bros. Horne, G. W. Kenway, Jenny Valmore, Dutch Daly, Marie Le Blanc, The Three Delevines, Hyram Travers, Nellie Navette, Ada Lundberg.—Doors open at 7.30. Admission from 1s.—Manager, Mr. EDWARD SWANBOROUGH.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, Baker-street Station, in connection with all railways. Through bookings at all Metropolitan stations.—New Portrait Models of the late PRINCE ALEXANDER OF BULGARIA and their Majesties the EMPEROR of RUSSIA, the EMPEROR of GERMANY, the EMPEROR of AUSTRIA, and the KING of ITALY. Music all day. Admission, 1s.; Children under twelve, 6d. Chamber of Horrors, 6d. Open 9 to 10.

TIVOLI, Strand, London.—Cool and Well Ventilated.—Open EVERY EVENING, at 7.30, and SATURDAY MATINÉE, at 2.30, with a STAR PROGRAMME, embracing every Artiste of note now in London.—Manager, Mr. VERNON DOWSETT.

CONJURERS, PUNCH & JUDY, MAGIC LANTERNS, VENTRILOQUISTS.
Professors Bellairs, Hilton, and 1,000 Refined Entertainers.
Send for Illustrated Price List, gratis.
THE SOCIETY OF ENTERTAINERS,
Mention this Paper.] 44, Upper Baker St., London, N.W.

£20 TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING. Illd. guide, post-free, "How to open respectably £20 to £1,000." Tobacconists' Outfitting Co., 186A, Euston-rd., Ldn. Mngr. H. MYERS, Est. 1886.

"TRUTH" HOTEL LIST.

BOURNEMOUTH.—NEWLYN'S ROYAL EXETER HOTEL. In a beautifully sheltered position and its own private grounds. Only 100 yards from the lovely Pavilion Gardens, and two minutes from the Pier. Accommodation, appointments, and views unsurpassed. Excellent cuisine. Table-d'hôte at 7 p.m. Omnibus at East Station.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HÔTEL METROPOLE.—On the East Cliff, facing the sea, three minutes' from East Station. The largest, and most magnificent Hotel in Bournemouth. Now open to receive visitors. Inclusive terms from 10s. 6d. per day.
GEORGE ALEXANDER, Manager.

BOURNEMOUTH.—HOTEL MONT DORE.—"The finest Hotel on the South Coast."—L. & S. W. Railway Guide. Adjoining the hotel is a large Winter Garden, containing a covered tennis court, lounge, and a unique Bath Establishment, comprising Turkish, sea-water, pine, and other Baths. For tariff and full particulars, address THE MANAGER.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND HOTEL.
Splendid position facing the sea.
BOARDING TERMS
from 12s. to 15s. per day.
According to position of rooms selected.

BRIGHTON.—BEDFORD HOTEL.—Old-established. Unequalled in situation; opposite West Pier. Spacious coffee and reading rooms; sea-water service; unequalled cuisine; great variety of excellent wines. Moderate tariff. Electric light in all rooms.
GEO. HECKFORD, Manager.

CHESTER.—QUEEN RAILWAY HOTEL, connected with the General Station by covered way. Porters in scarlet livery on the platforms attending trains day and night. Billiards. Lifts to all floors. Telegraph office in the Hotel. Telegraphic address, "Queen, Chester." Telephone, No. 27, Chester Exchange. H. T. GOULD, Manager.

CIMIEZ (Nice), RIVIERA PALACE HOTEL. Owned and managed by the International Sleeping Car Company. 10 minutes from Nice station. 200 apartments. Full south. Absolutely sheltered. English sanitation. Electric light. Lift. Pension.—Full particulars, & tariff, to reserve accommodation, and for tickets for the journey, apply I. S. C. CO., 122, Pall Mall, London, S.W.

FOLKESTONE.—BATES' HOTEL, West Cliff Gardens, and LONGFORD PRIVATE HOTEL, The Leas. Oldest established and most select Family Hotels in Folkestone. Reduced terms during Winter and Spring months. Pension (new Coffee-room) at Bates' Hotel.—G. L. HART, Proprietor. Sanitation Certified.

FOLKESTONE.—ROYAL PAVILION HOTEL, facing Sea. 200 Apartments. Near landing-stage for Continent. Large winter garden. Table d'hôte at 7 p.m.
G. SPURGEN, Proprietor.

FOLKESTONE.—THE LEAS HOTEL, situated in private grounds, adjoining fashionable promenade. Sea views. Redecorated and newly-furnished throughout. Passengers' lift. Certified sanitation. Excellent cuisine. Moderate tariff.

GRAND CANARY.—THE METROPOLE.
Newest and best Hotel.
Delightful position, fronting the sea.
Terms most moderate.

LONDON.—QUEEN'S-GATE MANSIONS, South Kensington, S.W. (close to Hyde Park, Albert Hall, and Imperial Institute) with all the advantages of a first-class residential hotel; public dining, drawing, billiard, and smoking rooms; hydraulic lift to every floor; electric light throughout.—Tariff on application to MANAGER.

LONDON.—The COVENT GARDEN HOTEL, Covent-garden.—Most central FAMILY HOTEL, within five minutes' of Law Courts and Somerset House. Hydraulic lift. Quiet rooms. Electric light. Table d'hôte, 6.0 to 8.30 (open to non-residents). Moderate charges. Night porter. Telegrams, "Replete, London," Telephone 783.—M. A. S. BROWNE, Proprietor.

LISBON.—GRAND HOTEL INTERNATIONAL (Terminus). Owned and managed by the International Sleeping Car Company. Luxurious hotel. 160 apartments. Moderate tariff. Pension. English sanitation. Fronting the Avenida.—For full particulars, to reserve accommodation, and for tickets for the journey (Sud express), apply I. S. C. Co. 122, Pall Mall, London, S.W.

MALVERN.—The Most Charming Luft-Kuhr Ort in England. THE IMPERIAL HOTEL offers every modern comfort, is surrounded by its own grounds, and commands splendid views. Brine (Droitwich) Baths now open for the season.—For tariff, apply to the Lessee and Manager, F. MOERSCHELL.

PORT OROTAVA, Teneriffe.—HOTEL MARTIANEZ (late GRAND).—First-class, standing in a beautiful garden. Shady verandahs, large public and private rooms. Billiards, tennis. Good cooking, good wines, excellent spring water.
Manager, J. R. EGGER.

PORTRUSH, co. Antrim.—NORTHERN COUNTIES HOTEL (B. and N.C. Ry). Facing the Atlantic. Bracing air, magnificent scenery; tennis; Golf links, the finest in Ireland; surf and deep sea bathing, sea-water baths. Table d'hôte dinner. French cuisine. Combined Railway and Hotel Tickets from Belfast.—Illustrated tariff on application to MANAGER.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA. — ROYAL VICTORIA HOTEL.—First and leading hotel in St. Leonards. Unequalled position, detached, faces sea, due south. Modern improvements, passenger lift, electric light in every room, handsomely furnished. Home comforts. Terms moderate. —Address, MANAGER.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA. — The ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Eversfield-place, due south, facing the sea. Hydraulic lift to all floors. Billiard-room. Conservatory. Electric light in all public rooms. Table d'hôte at separate tables, at 7.—Under the Management of Mr. and Mrs. PERCY BEER (Late of Bailey's Hotels, London).

TUNBRIDGE WELLS. — WELLINGTON HOTEL, Mount Ephraim. Under the distinguished patronage of his Grace the late Duke of Wellington, K.G., the leading nobility and gentry, &c. 422 ft. above sea level, south aspect; elegantly furnished; piano in every sitting-room. Cuisine, English and French; Table d'hôte, large Dairy Farm.—BRABY, Proprietor.

THE GROSVENOR HOTEL
BELGRAVIA, LONDON, S.W.
Well known for Wedding Breakfasts and Dinner Parties.

TABLE D'HÔTE OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.
Covered Communication to three Railway Stations.
The only Terminus Hotel of the Brighton Railway Company in London.
Electric Light throughout.

BRISTOL HOTEL,
Burlington Gardens, London, W.

(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.

THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.

SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.

Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.

NO SUPPERS.

TELEPHONE No. 3,507.

ST. JAMES'S PARK, S.W.
QUEEN ANNE'S MANSIONS.
(QUEEN ANNE'S GATE, OPPOSITE ST. JAMES'S PARK STATION).

Finest view. Most central position. Near Houses of Parliament, Victoria, and Charing Cross. Suites of Rooms, Furnished or Unfurnished, having all comforts and privacy of home, at moderate outlay compared with expense of keeping house. All servants supplied and catering done by the Management. Rents include attendance, electric light, lifts, hot and cold water, &c.
Address, MANAGER.

INNS OF COURT HOTEL, Holborn and Lincoln's Inn Fields. A high-class Family Hotel, with 200 bedrooms, happily situated, having all modern conveniences and a moderate tariff. Electric lights, lifts, &c. Banquets arranged. Masonic lodge, public meeting rooms, &c. Table d'hôte, 6 to 8, 3s. 6d., at separate tables.—FRANK BLACKLEY, Manager. Write for tariff.

ALBANY HOTEL
(ROBERTSON TERRACE), HASTINGS.

Finest position on the whole sea front. Enlarged and superbly furnished. Only Hotel with Electric Light in every room. Passenger Lift. Dining, Drawing, Reading, Writing, Smoking, and Billiard Rooms. Table d'Hote 7 p.m. Moderate Tariff. No charge for attendance. C. A. SCHWADE, Manager.

ILFRACOMBE.
Warmest Sea-side Winter Resort in England.

ILFRACOMBE HOTEL. The principal Hotel in Ilfracombe.

First-class return tickets issued from London (Waterloo), L. & S. W. Railway, from 1st November to 14th March, including seven days' bed, board, and attendance at the ILFRACOMBE HOTEL, £5 5s. each. Available for one month. Express trains leave Waterloo 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. Ask for Hotel Tickets, available by all trains.

WHERE SHALL WE SPEND 'XMAS?
At the GRAND HOTEL, JERSEY.

Every home comfort. Inclusive terms, per day or week: per week, £3. Large Ball-room for use of visitors. Finest sea views in Jersey, and the largest and best-appointed Hotel in Channel Isles. Hot and cold sea water baths. Skating Rink. For tariff, address—
SYDNEY ROGERS, Manager and Secretary.

FOLKESTONE.—WEST CLIFF HOTEL, 180 Apartments, Patronised by H. R. H. the Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne, K.T. Extensive Structural Alterations and Decorative Repairs have been carried out and 80 NEW BEDROOMS ADDED SINCE OCTOBER, 1891. The entire system of drainage has been re-modelled and re-constructed, and the most improved sanitary appliances fitted to all Bath-rooms, &c. The Hotel stands in its own private gardens of 2½ acres, faces the sea, and is only five minutes' from the Harbour in the lower part of the town and Shorncliffe New West End Station, and is most convenient for Continental travellers.—For tariff charges, &c., please address the Proprietor.

THE RUNNACLEAVE, ILFRACOMBE.—Highest average Winter Temperature in England. South aspect. 120 Beautifully-appointed rooms, thoroughly warmed by hot-water apparatus; theatre in constant use; yacht, tennis, billiards, photographic dark room, and indoor skating rink free of charge. Moderate tariff.

EASTBOURNE.—CAVENDISH HOTEL stands alone in the centre of the Grand Parade. Pleasant sea and land views. Patronised by many of the Royal families of Europe. Appreciated for its first-class appointments and homely comforts. Elegant public rooms, convenient family suites, &c. Passenger lift. Table d'hôte. Moderate charges.
G. LOWMAN, Manager.

OATLANDS PARK HOTEL, Walton-on-Thames, 17 miles from London (Waterloo Station)—Most comfortable and homely winter residence, warmed throughout. South aspect. Boarding terms, 10s. 6d. to 12s. per day. Capital stabling.—Postal address, Weybridge.

MADEIRA.—REID'S HOTELS, Santa Clara, Miles's Carmo Hortas, New Hotel. First-class, in finest situations. Large gardens. Tennis courts. Billiards. Sea bathing. Modern sanitation. All steamers met. Pamphlet free.—PASSMORE, 124, Cheapside, London, E.C.

HOSPITALS AND APPEALS.

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL, PADDINGTON, W.

Is striving to do its Great Work WELL, with INADEQUATE MEANS.

Even the smallest addition to its funds will be welcomed, and will be most gratefully acknowledged by the Secretary, Mr. THOMAS RYAN, at the Hospital.

THE NATIONAL REFUGES FOR HOMELESS AND DESTITUTE CHILDREN

And "ARETHUSA" and "CHICHESTER" Training Ships,

164, SHAFTESBURY AVENUE, W.C.

PRESIDENT - - - THE EARL OF JERSEY, G.C.M.G.

As this Society is a National one, not simply Metropolitan, admission is ensured to a destitute child from whatever part of the kingdom it may come.

900 CHILDREN MAINTAINED. FUNDS URGENTLY NEEDED.

H. BRISTOW WALLEN, Secretary. HENRY G. COPELAND, Finance and Deputation Secretary.

NATIONAL SOCIETY for the PREVENTION of CRUELTY to CHILDREN.

The object of the Society is that no British child's life shall be unendurable.

Patron—The QUEEN.

250 branches of the Society exist in England, Wales, and Ireland.
20,000,000 of population is embraced in those branches.
£45,000 a year is expended in them.
The Society has investigated:—
9,517 cases of violence.
23,621 cases of neglect and starvation.
4,800 cases of exposure for begging.
1,676 cases of immorality.
1,241 cases of dangerous performances, &c.
24,407 of these cases it has warned.
5,689 it has prosecuted.
4,793 of which resulted in convictions.
These were in all ranks of life.
33,859 children were involved in the cases—all of whose lives have been rendered happier; who have been better clothed and fed and better treated.
The vastness and blessedness of the work should commend itself to every man and woman in the land.
The work is urgent and greatly increasing.

Hon. Director—Rev. BENJAMIN WAUGH, 7, Harpur-street, London, W.C.
Treasurer—J. H. B. Ryder.
Auditors—Gerard Van De Linde & Son.
Bankers—Coutts & Co.

North-West London Hospital,
Kentish Town Road.

Patron.
H.R.H. Princess Christian.
Chairman.
Rev. F. J. Ponsonby.
Treasurer.
George Herring, Esq.

The only Institution of the kind in this densely-populated district. Last year there were 855 In-patients and 39,606 cases as Out-patients.
Income from Annual Subscriptions is less than £900; yearly expenditure, £3,500; leaving a deficiency of over £2,600 to be made up each year by special benefactions.
FUNDS ARE GREATLY NEEDED.
ALFRED CRASKE, Secretary.

TO THE CHARITABLE.—FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED for the

BRITISH HOSPITAL FOR MENTAL DISORDERS AND BRAIN DISEASES

(Forbes Winslow Memorial), 208, EUSTON ROAD, N.W.
President—THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE.
Vice-Presidents—The Earl of Hardwicke, Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, M.P., Alfred de Rothschild, Esq., Dr. Hermann Adler, Chief Rabbi, Rev. R. W. L. Tollemache Tollemache, M.A., &c.
ENTIRELY FREE to the POOR. 15,000 Attendances Registered.
WILLIAM J. WHELAN, Secretary.

LONDON FEVER HOSPITAL, Liverpool-road, Islington, N.—The long-continued prevalence of scarlet fever is causing a heavy strain on the resources of this Hospital. The benevolent are earnestly asked for HELP. Annual subscribers of a Guinea and upwards for more than a year, as well as donors of Ten Guineas or more in one sum, are Governors, and are entitled to free treatment for their domestic servants. Sufferers residing outside the metropolitan area can only be received into the Hospital from the families of Governors.
Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by the Secretary, at the Hospital, MAJOR W. CHRISTIE.
Bankers—Prescott, Dimsdale, & Co., 50, Cornhill.

INSTITUTED 1740.

LONDON HOSPITAL, WHITECHAPEL, E.

776 BEDS.

Funds Urgently Needed.

£40,000 Required Each Year from Voluntary Contributions.

BANKERS { ROBARTS, LUBBOCK & CO. / GLYN, MILLS, CURRIE & CO.

J. H. HALE, Esq., Chairman. ... G. Q. ROBERTS, House Governor.

ALEXANDRA HOSPITAL FOR CHILDREN WITH HIP DISEASE,

QUEEN SQUARE, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

The Committee earnestly APPEAL for AID on behalf of this Charity, which ministers to a class of sufferers unsuitable for general hospitals. New annual subscriptions urgently needed.
Further information will be gladly furnished on application.
Bankers: Messrs. HOARE and Messrs. DRUMMOND.
STANLEY SMITH, Secretary.

METROPOLITAN HOSPITAL, Kingsland-road, N.E.
Patron: H.R.H. The PRINCE of WALES.
Chairman: JOSEPH FRY, Esq. Treasurer: The Right Hon. Lord BATTERSEA.
Hon. Treasurer: Sir E. HAY CURRIE.
The Committee most earnestly appeal for Funds to pay off pressing liabilities and to re-open the 24 beds closed during the past year. The hospital could accommodate 160 in-patients, but only 54 beds are at present available.
Bankers { GLYN, MILLS & Co. / LLOYD'S BANK, LTD. CHARLES H. BYERS, Secretary.

CANCER WARDS at the MIDDLESEX HOSPITAL, Mortimer-street, W.—The WEEKLY BOARD make an URGENT APPEAL for FUNDS in Aid of these Wards. There are 24 beds set apart for patients suffering from this terrible malady. They are admitted without letters of recommendation. Everything that human skill and kindness can suggest is provided, and sufferers are permitted to remain until relieved by art or released by death. Bankers, Messrs. Coutts & Co.
F. CLARE MELHADO, Secretary-Superintendent.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL.

CONTRIBUTIONS are EARNESTLY SOLICITED towards meeting the EXPENSES of this unendowed Hospital, and will be gratefully received by the Bankers, Messrs. Drummond, or by the Secretary.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM for IDIOTS.
Nearly 600 afflicted cases are receiving special care and education.
FUNDS urgently REQUIRED.
Special provision is made for the reception of Private Cases on payment.
H. GERARD HOARE, Esq., J.P., Treasurer.
JAMES DOWNING, Secretary.
Cheques or Postal Orders may be crossed Messrs. Hoare, Bankers, 37, Fleet-street, E.C.
Offices, 88, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

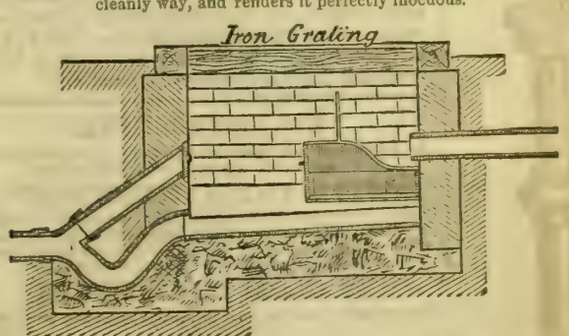
MRS. HILTON'S CRÊCHE.—To Mothers who know all that babies need. Will you kindly send Christmas gifts to my babies, who need everything?—Address, Mrs. HILTON, The Crêche, 12, 14, and 16, Stepney-causeway, Commercial-road, E.

THE FRIEND IN NEED.—TO GENTLEMEN.—The Managers of a Refuge in Whitechapel, which shelters 160 homeless men nightly, earnestly APPEAL for GIFTS of CAST-OFF CLOTHING.—Address, SECRETARY, 27, Kilburn Park-road, London, N.W.

NO CESSPOOLS. NO SEWER GAS. NO DISINFECTANTS REQUIRED.

NORRIS' PATENT SEWAGE STRAINER AND FRESH-AIR INLET CHAMBER.

Effectually supersedes the use of the dangerous Cesspool and entirely prevents the accumulation of Sewer Gas, and disposes of the soil in a quick and cleanly way, and renders it perfectly inocuous.



Suitable for VILLAGES and HAMLETS, PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS, COLLEGES and SCHOOLS, MANSIONS and VILLAS, VICARAGES, &C.

Is now in extensive use, and gives perfect satisfaction.

Telegraphic Address, "SUNNINGDALE."

Estimates and all Particulars on Application to the Patentee—

J. NORRIS & SONS

(ESTABLISHED 1857),

BUILDERS & SANITARY SPECIALISTS,
SUNNINGDALE, ASCOT.

CARPETS.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

AXMINSTER PILE CARPETS,
2/11 (American) 3/11 to 4/9

WILTON PILE CARPETS,
3/9 to 4/6

BRUSSELS CARPETS,
2/1 to 3/9

TAPESTRY CARPETS,
1/9 to 2/6

LINOLEUM,
1/- to 4/- per square yard.

DECCAN RUGS,
8/9 each.

CATALOGUES FREE.

TRELOAR & SONS

LUDGATE HILL.

THE HOMACOUSTIC.

WHAT IS THE HOMACOUSTIC?

THE HOMACOUSTIC is a contrivance connected with Speaking Tubes, which entirely supersedes for indoor purposes not only the Telephone, but all other existing arrangements for indoor inter-communication.

THE HOMACOUSTIC
Is Automatic, not Mechanical. Once fixed always in Working Order. Its first cost is its last cost.

WITH THE HOMACOUSTIC
There is no blowing into pipes. The automatic whistle is always in position. One speaks and listens at the same time. The tube is closed when not in actual use. Ordinary speaking tubes can be utilised.

ONE (No. 4) HOMACOUSTIC
Places the speaker in communication with any Number of Rooms.

THE HOMACOUSTIC
Is of special value and inestimable convenience not only in business establishments, but in all Private Houses.

The Homacoustic Saves Time, Temper, and Trouble.

For Detailed Particulars, Copies of Testimonials, &c., write to the MANAGER,

Homacoustic Speaking Tube Co.,

22, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Where every description of Homacoustic Instrument is on view.

The Burglar Bewildered.

HOW?

THROUGH THE

HOMACOUSTIC

WHAT IS THE HOMACOUSTIC?

The HOMACOUSTIC is a contrivance connected with Speaking Tubes, which entirely supersedes, for indoor purposes, not only the Telephone, but all other existing arrangements for indoor inter-communication.

HOW WAS THE BURGLAR BEWILDERED?

The owner of the house fortunately had a Homacoustic commutator fixed in his bedroom. This commutator placed him in direct communication, not only with his butler's rooms, but with seven other rooms in the house.

Directly he heard the Burglars he explained the state of affairs through the Homacoustic to his butler, and to the occupants of the other rooms; arranged what should be done, and they were thus all enabled to pounce on the Burglars together, and catch them red-handed, without their being even aware that their presence was so much as suspected. There was no ringing of electric bells, no creeping about the house to warn the inmates, NO PERSONAL DANGER.

The Homacoustic is far more dreaded by Burglars than any existing arrangement of "Protection from Burglary," for whereas when an electric bell rings, though it may probably arouse the inmates, it also acts as a warning to the Burglars themselves to be off.

NO HOUSE IS REALLY SAFE
— WITHOUT THE —

HOMACOUSTIC

Independent of its protective advantages, the Homacoustic is invaluable in all private houses for everyday use, and in all properly arranged business premises it is an absolute necessity.

The Homacoustic is automatic, not mechanical. Once fixed, always in working order. Its first cost is its last cost.

With the Homacoustic there is no blowing into pipes. The automatic whistle is always in position. One speaks and listens at the same time. The tube is closed when not in actual use. Ordinary speaking tubes can be utilised

The HOMACOUSTIC SAVES TIME, TEMPER, & TROUBLE.

HOMACOUSTIC SPEAKING TUBE COMPANY,
22, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.

SCOTTADIE

THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE

115 & 115a REGENT STREET
LONDON W

For:—
Coats & Ulsters.
Travelling Cloaks.
Carriage Rugs.
Travelling Wraps.
Shawls. Plaids.
Shetland Shawls.
Shooting Stockings.
Scotch Tweeds & Homespuns for Suits & Gowns

Telegraphic Address—Scott Adie, London

ESTABLISHED 1818.
Ten Prize Medals.

PETER F. HEERING'S

COPENHAGEN

CHERRY BRANDY.

Sold by all Wine Merchants, and at all Bars and Hotels

PINE × WOOL × PRODUCTS
TRADE MARK
1st Lanf.

LAIRITZ'S

CELEBRATED

Wadding in packets. Knee Caps. Ankle Belts. Pine Wool. Extract for Bath. Extract of all the Products. Chemical Ventilators. Lambs' Wool Pants. Knitting Yarn. Sold by all leading Druggists and Hosiers. Wholesale Depot for Fabrics only: WELCH, MARGETSON & Co., 15, Cheapside, London.

Caution.—Observe the Free Trade Mark with Signature on each piece.

PINE WOOL.

COLEMAN'S WINCARNIS

In Bottles, 2/9 and 4/6. Sold Everywhere.

LIEBIG'S EXTRACT OF MEAT AND MALT WINE.

HIGHEST AWARD AT THE CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

Over 2,000 Testimonials received from Medical Men

SOLE MANUFACTURERS,
COLEMAN & CO., LTD., NORWICH & LONDON.

EXHAUSTION OF BRAIN AND MUSCLE; INSOMNIA.

These are some of the signs of NEURASTHENIA, or NERVE COMPLAINTS. The Modern Treatment is to RESTORE and BUILD UP the Shattered Nervous System by a daily use of

COCA-TONIC-CHAMPAGNE

(LAURENT-PERRIER).

"I consider it most beneficial to the health of all such "hard workers as myself. It is a most delightful drink, "which leaves no injurious effects; and of its nerve-restoring "powers as a tonic, I cannot speak too highly."

George Augustus Sala

SOLD BY CHEMISTS AND WINE MERCHANTS.
Pints 45/- per Doz.; Half-Pints 24/- per Doz.

THE IDEAL TONIC FOR INFLUENZA.

Descriptive Pamphlet and Full Reports post free from the Sole Consignees—HERTZ & COLLINGWOOD, 4, SUSSEX PLACE, LONDON, E.C.

MAPPIN & WEBB'S PATENT TABLE KNIVES.

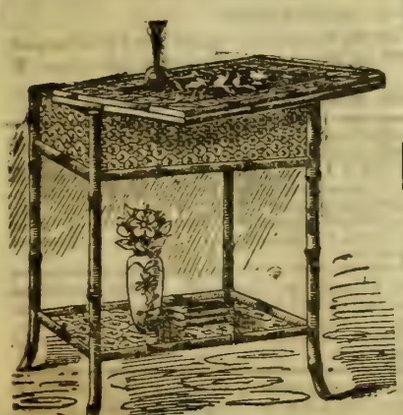
SAMPLES & PRICES FREE.

"UNEQUALLED FOR HARD WEAR."

Only London Addresses,
158, OXFORD ST. W.
2, QUEEN VICTORIA ST. E.C.
(FACING THE MANSION HOUSE.)

MANUFACTORY—NORFOLK STREET, SHEFFIELD.

BAMBOO FURNITURE
(SUPERIOR QUALITY)



MAPLE & Co LTD.

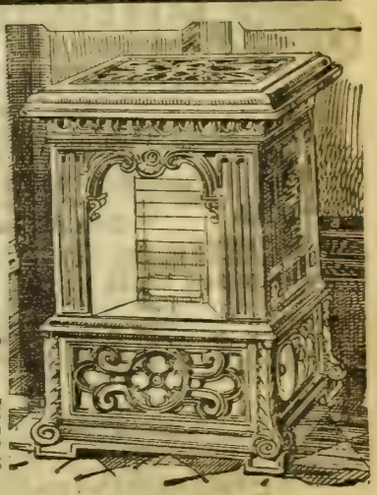
TOTTENHAM COURT RD LONDON

The Largest and Most Convenient

FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT
IN THE WORLD

BAMBOO AND WICKER FURNITURE

SPECIAL CATALOGUE OF NOVELTIES FREE



THE NORHAM CARD TABLE in bamboo, with lacquered top; lined cloth; well for cards or papers, and undertray; top measures 24 by 14 in.; if open, 28 by 24 in.; 30 in. high.
£1. 9s. 6d.

THE ARCADIAN OIL WARMING STOVE, in glazed Doulton ware, constructed on scientific principles, absolutely safe, entirely free from smell; costs one farthing per hour.
£2. 18s. 6d.

FLORILINE

FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH

Is the BEST LIQUID DENTIFRICE in the WORLD.

PREVENTS THE DECAY OF THE TEETH.

Renders the Teeth Pearly White.

IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND DELICIOUS TO THE TASTE.

Is Partly Composed of Honey, and Extracts from Sweet Herbs and Plants.

Of all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the World.

2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE TOOTH POWDER,

Only put in Glass Jars, Price 1s.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

Prevents the Hair from Falling off.

Restores Grey or White Hair to its ORIGINAL COLOUR.

Being delicately perfumed, it leaves no Unpleasant Odour.

IS NOT A DYE.

Should be in every House where a HAIR RENEWER is needed.

ASK YOUR CHEMIST OR HAIRDRESSER FOR

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

Price 3s. 6d. per bottle.

DREW & SONS, PICCADILLY CIRCUS, LONDON, W.

PATENT "EN ROUTE" TEA BASKET

Two-person size, complete, as sketch, with Silver Plated Kettle Regd. Spring Screw Cap, £2. 17s. 6d., or all fittings Silver Plated, £4. 10s.

Four-person size, Plain Metal £4. 14s., in all Silver Plated, £6. 10s.

N.B.—Either of these "En Routes" fitted with Drews' Patent Railway Attachment, lid and fall tray. Two-person size, 7/6; Four-person size, 10/6 extra to above prices.

NOTE.—All "En Routes" are now fitted with Drews' new patent sponge-packed lamp, with entirely new system of burner, specially adapted for travelling purposes.

A REALLY USEFUL

CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

'Xmas and New Year's Gifts.

CARTER ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST POST FREE. 6A, NEW CAVENDISH ST. PORTLAND PLACE, LONDON, W.

LITERARY MACHINE

For holding lamp, meals, &c. in any position over an easy chair, bed or sofa. Deliciously luxurious. A most useful gift. PRICES from £1.1s.

INVALID COMFORTS

Walking Machine for the lame

Adjustable Couches and Beds, £3. Exercising Chairs £5. 5s. Reclining Boards £1.1s. Commodes £1. Leg Rests 10s. 6d. Easy Chairs £2. 10s. Commode Chairs £2. 10s.

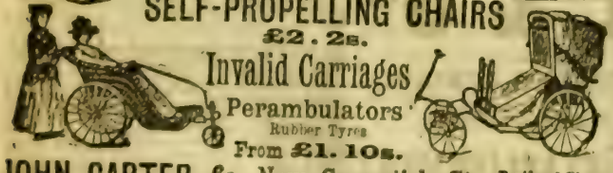
Carrying Chairs, £1. Bed Tables 7s. 6d. Crutches 10s. 6d. Folding Couch Chairs 10s. Bed Rests 10s.

BATH CHAIRS

From £1.5s.

SELF-PROPELLING CHAIRS

£2.2s.



Invalid Carriages

Perambulators

Rubber Tyres

From £1.10s.

JOHN CARTER, 6a, New Cavendish St., Portland Place, London, W.

Telgrams—BATH CHAIR, LONDON. ILLUSTRATED PRICE LISTS POST FREE.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without change of Diet. An English Countess writes: "Your Trilene Tablets act admirably." Send 2s. 6d. to THE TRILENE Co., Sole Proprietors, 70, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON.

FOR

ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS &c.

SAVORY & MOORE'S

DATURA TATULA.

Cigars and Cigarettes—Boxes, 3s., 6s., 8s., and 15s., Tobacco—Tins, 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s., and 18s. For Non-Smokers, Pastilles and Powder for Burning and Inhalation, Tins, each containing a censer for burning, 2s. 6d., 5s., and 10s. Of Chemists everywhere.

JEWSBURY & BROWN'S

White, Sound Teeth, Healthy Gums to Old Age.

Oriental Tooth Paste.

CAUTION.—The only genuine is JEWSBURY & BROWN'S.

Pots 1/6 and 2/6. All Chemists.

60 YEARS IN USE.

THE GREAT QUESTION OF HEALTH.

WHAT TO DRINK?

PITKEATHLY TABLE WATER.

As a remedial agent in cases of sluggish liver, plethoric state of the system, chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation, gastric derangement, and biliousness.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

London: INGRAM & ROYLE, 52, Farringdon-st., E.C., and at Liverpool.

" WM. BEST & SONS, 22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square, W

Sole Proprietors, REID & DONALD, Perth.

BUYERS and SELLERS of quoted and unquoted Commercial, Industrial, and Mining Securities should communicate with THE COMMERCIAL STOCK and SHARE CORPORATION, Limited, Stock and Share Dealers, 10, Throgmorton-avenue, London, E.C. Telegraphic Address: "UNQUOTED, LONDON." All Mining Shares dealt in at close current quotations. Advances made on Stocks and Shares at moderate rates. Send for List, giving numerous quotations not published by any other firm, post free.

REVERSIONS.—The Reversion Mortgage Trust purchase reversions and life incomes, or lend thereon at 4 per cent. per annum. No charge made unless business results.—Apply to Messrs. FELDMAN, 34, New Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, London. Solicitors' and Estate Agents' attention particularly requested.

COALS.—The Marquis of Londonderry supplies SEA-BORNE COAL from his DURHAM COLLIERIES. Londonderry Wallsend, 34s.; Pittington Wallsend, 33s.; Primrose, 32s. 6d.; Seaton Wallsend, 31s. 6d. per ton. Cash on delivery.—Seaham Wharf, Nine Elms-lane, Vauxhall.

SUN LIFE OFFICE

FOR BUSINESS FACILITIES

LARGE CASH BONUSES

AND SPEEDY SETTLEMENTS.

ESTD. 1810.

Apply for NEW PROSPECTUS at the Chief Office, 63, THREADNEEDLE STREET, E.C.

HARRIS C. L. SAUNDERS, General Manager.

FARM AND COLONIZATION COMPANY, LIMITED.

DIRECTORS:

WILLIAM WRIGHT, Esq., J.P., Wollaton, Nottingham, Chairman.
FRANCIS W. FOX, Esq., 14, Dean's Yard, Westminster.
HAROLD J. RECKITT, Esq., J.P., Winestead Hall, Hull.
JOHN BROOK BRAY, Esq., Clapham, Polegate, Sussex.
BENJAMIN GLASGOW, Esq., 77, Oxford-gardens, North Kensington, W.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of supplying RELIABLE INFORMATION to intending settlers abroad, and also to give them introductions to the Agents of the Company, who can assist them in any difficulty, and BEFRIEND them until they are sufficiently established to rely upon themselves

EMPLOYMENT WILL BE FOUND where a living can be earned until the settler is able to farm on his own account.

ASSISTANCE WILL BE GIVEN in the choice of a farm for either special or general farming, also for cotton planting or orange growing.

The Directors and Secretary have a large experience in the requirements of settlers, both at home and abroad; the AGENTS ABROAD are men in good position, and are PERSONALLY KNOWN to the Secretary and some of the Directors.

For further information apply to

VICTOR M. HOLLINSWORTH, Secretary.

11, Charing Cross, London, S.W.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

MEMBERS OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE are NOT ALLOWED to ADVERTISE for business purposes, or to issue circulars to persons other than their own principals.

Brokers or Agents who advertise are not in any way connected with the Stock Exchange, or under the control of the Committee.

List of Members of the Stock Exchange who act as Stock and Share Brokers may be obtained on application to

FRANCIS LEVIEN,
Secretary to the Committee of the Stock Exchange.

Committee Room, The Stock Exchange, London, E.C.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

CASH ADVANCED PRIVATELY.
UNION DEPOSIT BANK.

No. 17, KING WILLIAM ST., Charing Cross, London, W.C.

[ESTABLISHED 1867.]

ADVANCES MADE in TOWN or COUNTRY at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE, Without Public Enquiries, for Short or Long Periods,

From £30 to £5,000,

To Ladies and Gentlemen, Merchants, Farmers, Traders, or any responsible persons upon their

NOTE OF HAND ALONE.

ALL TRANSACTIONS STRICTLY PRIVATE.

Also upon security of Furniture, Stock-in-Trade, Reversions, Deeds, Leases, Life Policies, Legacies, Jewellery, Silver Plate, Farm Stock, &c., without mortgage expenses, from one to 15 years, repayable by easy instalments, or so long as the interest is paid, the capital may remain.

NO SURETIES REQUIRED.

Distance no object. No delay, and no unnecessary expenses charged.

FIRST LETTER OF APPLICATION IMMEDIATELY ATTENDED TO.

A Gentleman sent direct from the Bank to carry out all advances.

Current accounts opened in accordance with the usual practice of other London Banks.

Prospectus gratis, or post free on application. Personal visit preferred.

Interest allowed on deposits, 4½, 5, and 6 per cent.

Apply to the SECRETARY.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY, Limited,
No. 10, ST. SWITHIN'S LANE, LONDON, E.C.
General Accidents. | Personal Injuries.
Railway Accidents. | Death by Accident.
C. HARDING, Manager.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

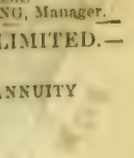
Invested Funds, £16,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES TO PRIVATE INSURERS.

THE IMPERIAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. FIRE. Est. 1803, 1, Old Broad-st., E.C., & 22, Pall Mall, S.W. Subd. Capital, £1,200,000. Paid-up, £300,000. Total funds, £1,600,000.—E. COZENS SMITH, Gen. Man.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE
63, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C.
FOUNDED 1710.
THE OLDEST PURELY FIRE OFFICE IN THE WORLD.
SUM INSURED IN 1892,
£391,800,000.



(FIRE.)

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY
INSURES AGAINST
RAILWAY ACCIDENTS, PERSONAL ACCIDENTS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY.
Capital £1,000,000. Established 1849.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. W. D. MASSY. A. VIAN. } Secretaries.

BIRKBECK BANK.—(Estab. 1851). Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane. Two and a-half per cent. interest allowed on deposits, repayable on demand. Two per cent. on current accounts, calculated on the minimum monthly balances when not drawn below £100.

The BIRKBECK ALMANACK, with full particulars, can be obtained, post free, on application to FRANCIS RAVENSCROFT, Secretary.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK & SHARE DEALER.

HEAD OFFICE:—
WARDROBE CHAMBERS, DOCTORS' COMMONS, LONDON, E.C.

BANKERS:—
CAPITAL AND COUNTIES, Ludgate-hill, Long Acre, Piccadilly, and Brighton Branches.
LONDON AND MIDLAND, Newgate-street and Tooley-street Branches.

DIRECT PRIVATE TELEGRAPH WIRE between LONDON and BRIGHTON Offices.

FULL PARTICULARS of SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS for DEALING sent post free on application.

COVER SYSTEM.—The loss is limited, the profits are unlimited, and there is such an independence in acting that the principle must and does recommend itself to business men—indeed, it is the only method on which they deal—for speculative accounts.

£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 COMMANDS £1,000 STOCK.
£50 COMMANDS £5,000 STOCK.
£500 COMMANDS £50,000 STOCK, and so on in proportion.

NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.

JOHN SHAW, STOCK AND SHARE DEALER,
LONDON, BRIGHTON, MANCHESTER, AND DUBLIN.

CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL

TESTIMONIALS.

INFLUENZA.—LADY BAKER writes from Blandford, January 19, 1892, when ordering another Smoke Ball:—"I and the children have hitherto escaped Influenza, though in the thick of it, owing entirely, I believe, to the good effects of the Carbolic Smoke Ball. I am recommending it to every one."

INFLUENZA.—Colonel COX writes from Limmer's Hotel, W., 29th October, 1892:—"I have used your Carbolic Smoke Ball for over a year and cannot speak too highly of it. I believe the steady and regular use of it affords immunity from Influenza."

COLDS.—LADY LYONS writes from Kilbrough, Swansea, 25th October, 1892:—"She wishes another Carbolic Smoke Ball sent her, as she found the one she got from them in the summer most useful for warding off Colds."

CATARRH.—Rev. Dr. LUNN, M.D., writes from 5, Endsleigh Gardens, London, N.W.:—"I have much pleasure in testifying to the great value of your Carbolic Smoke Ball. It has been used in my household with the best results in cases of bad Catarrh."

ASTHMA.—Captain C. N. ROBINSON writes from Aldemay Park, Bromley, Kent, 1st January, 1893:—"I may say that I have found the greatest relief from Asthma of a most troublesome nature by the use of your Carbolic Smoke Ball."

Price 10s. Post Free. Can be refilled when empty for 5s.

TO BE OBTAINED FROM ALL CHEMISTS AND DRUGGISTS.

CARBOLIC SMOKE BALL CO., LIMITED,

27, PRINCES STREET, HANOVER SQUARE, LONDON, W.

Vinolia (SOOTHING)

(EMOLLIENT) Cream

ITCHING
ITCHING
ITCHING
ITCHING
ITCHING
ITCHING

FACE SPOTS
FACE SPOTS
FACE SPOTS
FACE SPOTS
FACE SPOTS
FACE SPOTS

FOR CHAPS, CHILBLAINS, ITCHING, FACE SPOTS, &c.

The "LANCET" reports:—"An emollient cream for the skin in eczema, rash, eruptions, &c." 1/1½ and 1/9.

"VINOLIA" POWDER (For Redness, Roughness), 1s. & 1s. 9d. "VINOLIA" SOAP, 4d., 6d., 8d., 10d. & 2s. 6d.

OUR PUZZLES.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 772. SUGGESTIONS FOR TOY AND DOLL SHOW.

MERLE (real name and address will be given next week) £1 1 0

C. (" " " ") £1 1 0

'TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 774.—SUGGESTED CHRISTMAS PRESENTS FOR EUROPEAN AND OTHER POTENTATES.

TILLY SLOWBOY (real name and address will be given next week)... ... ... £2 2 0

SPECIAL NOTICE.—"TRUTH" HOME MADE TOY AND DOLL SHOW.

In another part of this number of TRUTH will be found a detailed description of the very successful Show which was held at the Albert Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 19th and 20th inst. It is hoped that the List of Prizes awarded to the competitors will be published next week.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 779.

The usual Prize of Two Guineas is offered this week for

THE BEST ANSWER TO THE CONUNDRUM, "WHY IS THE COMING NEW YEAR'S DAY LIKE THE PARISH COUNCILS BILL?"

I may say that I have myself no preconceived idea of what the answer to this conundrum is. I shall, in fact, possess a perfectly open mind on the matter until I receive the replies which may be sent in by those who take part in this competition. These replies must reach me by the morning of Monday, January 8, at the latest.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 775.

As a further selection of the "Bouts Rimés" is to be published, the Prize will not be awarded until next week.

CONDENSED RULES.

All answers to the current Puzzle must be sent in on or before the morning of the Monday week following the date of that Puzzle's publication to the PUZZLE EDITOR, TRUTH Buildings, Carteret-street, Queen Anne's-gate, London, S.W. The answers must be signed by a nom de plume of not more than twelve letters, and must not be sent on post-cards, nor by telegraph, nor by hand: whilst in the case of new competitors the real name and address must be forwarded with the first reply sent.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

 In consequence of going to Press exceptionally early this week, it has been found necessary to hold over a number of answers to correspondents.

THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 776.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

SUGGESTED RESOLUTIONS TO BE TAKEN FOR THE NEW YEAR BY—1. MR. GLADSTONE; 2. LORD SALISBURY; 3. LORD ROSEBERY; 4. MR. A. J. BALFOUR; 5. MR. CECIL RHODES; 6. LORD R. CHURCHILL; 7. MR. H. IRVING; 8. SIR F. LEIGHTON; 9. PRINCE BISMARCK; 10. THE GERMAN KAISER; 11. THE TSAR; 12. MR. JOHN BURNS.

1. To pass the Home Rule Bill, and retire. 2. To refrain from epigrams. 3. Not to be Chairman of the "Board of Conciliation." 4. To get married. 5. To keep within Cape Colony. 6. Not to go exploring any more. 7. Not to go to America again. 8. Not to paint any more wax dolls. 9. To preserve a dignified silence. 10. To stay at home. 11. To find out things for himself. 12. To make friends of the other "labour leaders."—Leaf Rule.

1. To take more care of himself than ever. 2. To lecture on chemistry at the Royal Institute. 3. To go further, and fare no worse. 4. Not to fidget. 5. To stay where he is. 6. To try to be original. 7. To try not to be original. 8. To write a book on "British Art and Latter-Day Artists." 9. To write an autobiography, or prepare copious notes for a posthumous biography. 10. To beware of cant. 11. To have the parable of the Good Samaritan abolished from the Gospel of the Orthodox Church. 12. Never to be persuaded to become a Member of Parliament. —Med. Stud.

1. To leave Home Rule for home. 2. To continue being a pattern to his peers. 3. To read "The Miner's Right." 4. To make fresh Conservative "links." 5. To punish the Impi-ous. 6. To escape the influenza. 7. To play the man. 8. To continue canvass-ing. 9. To live forgetting, by the world forgot. 10. To seek peace, not eschew it. 11. To strengthen his armaments. 12. To be the people's "light" and leader.—Malignant.

1. To abandon the "suaviter in modo" for the "fortiter in re." 2. To personally inspect his London rookeries and reduce his avoirdupois. 3. To give a "striking" realisation to "The Miner's Dream." 4. Not to play second violin to Chamberlain on any account, and to stick to the "tee caddie." 5. To cultivate the Truth, and to polish up the Companies' accoutrements without the aid of black-king brushes. 6. To form a fifth party and recover his lost prestige. 7. To maintain his interest in the silver question, and to relieve Uncle Sam of his dollar-us troubles. 8. To revise the rules of the R.A., and to bid the deserving "go hang." 9. To play Brer Rabbit for the future. 10. To get more like his dad every day. 11. To give the people political representation, and not to have a surfeit of Turkey. 12. To have another try for the Albert Palace if any one will Passmore ha'pence along.—Shellback.

1. To continue keeping his own counsel and giving others Councils. 2. To learn that politics, like charity, begin at home. 3. To try hard to make arbitration strike a final blow at strikes. 4. To wait, and wait, and wait till Home Rule shall end the strife. 5. "To shun sack and live cleanly." 6. To remember that it isn't the hen that cackles the loudest that lays the largest egg. 7. To remain in his own tent, and follow Booth no more. 8. To try to brighten up his figures a bit. 9. To shun the Court, and court the soothing pipe. 10. To think twice before he speaks once. 11. To see what can be done to improve his constitution. 12. To remember that for every payee there must be a payer. —Stanchion.

1. To benefit the poor unemployed. 2. To make Gladstone a Peer. 3. To be Prime Minister. 4. To "buck up." 5. To become a "chartered accountant." 6. To enter the den of lions (Imperial and Colonial Institute)? 7. To tutor his successor. 8. To photograph the Queen. 9. To meet Gladstone somewhere shortly! 10. To congratulate the "Empire" (!). 11. To live. 12. To keep alight.—Hopeless.

1. Give up post-card correspondence. 2. Avoid going on the stump. 3. Open a new chapter on conciliation. 4. Stick to golf. 5. Realise his shares in the Charter Company. 6. Bide his time. 7. Continue to elevate the character of the English stage. 8. Return to his earlier style. 9. To remember that speech was given to hide one's thoughts. 10. Take the advice of his mother. 11. Live and let live. 12. Stick to betterment,—Ross.

1. To drop his Home Rule fad, and conciliate Dissenters by a Bill for Disestablishment. 2. To undertake the Herculean labour of reforming the House of Lords, beginning by abolishing voting by proxy. 3. To avoid compromising alliances, and keep us out of the coming European war. 4. Not to hit a falling foe too hard. 5. To claim to be elected, by acclamation, perpetual President of the Society for the Protection of the Aborigines. 6. Resolves, in the words of Lear: "I will do such things—What they are yet I know not; but they shall be The terrors of the earth." 7. To prevent playing to the gallery by building a theatre, with one price to all seats. 8. To try and develop a good impasto, and paint his nude figures white, not yellow. 9. To repent his "blood and iron" policy, which caused three wars, and has made Europe an armed camp. 10. To restore, or neutralise, Alsace-Lorraine, and thus produce general disarmament and lasting peace. 11. To govern constitutionally, end Nihilism, and enjoy life. 12. To study the precept, "Speech is silvern: silence is golden."—J. McGrigor Allan.

1. To "Never say die." 2. To observe strict economy. 3. To keep the key of the coal cellar. 4 To always say "Not for Joe." 5. To make friends of Lobby and Labby. 6. To erect a dam against bad language. 7. To keep on "playing high." 8. To make better figures than ever; and keep a-head. 9. To smoke Fred's cut: cool and sweet. 10. To try not to be the wisest fool in Europe. 11. To annihilate Nihilism by liberty. 12. To resolve to be still the "People's Dear."—Sigma.

1. To mind not high things, but to condescend to men of low estate (Rom., xii., 16). 2. To be patient in tribulation (Rom., xii., 12). 3. To put not his trust in Princes (Ps., cxlvi., 3). 4. To avoid profane and vain babblings and oppositions (I. Tim., vi., 20). 5. To provide things honest in the sight of all men (Rom., xii., 17). 6. To let his moderation be known to all men (Phil., iv., 5). 7. Be of good courage and play the man for our people (II. Sam., x., 12). 8. To return to days of his youth (Job, xxxiii., 25). 9. To remove not the ancient landmarks (Prov., xxii., 28). 10. To rest yet for a little season (Rev., vi., 17). 11. With good advice to make war (Prov., xx., 18). 12. Not to raise false report (Ex., xxiii., 1). —Sofalie.

1. To rest on his laurels. 2. To set his house in order. 3. Not to have his head turned by Tory blandishments. 4. To join the Commons Preservation Society. 5. To wind up under the Companies Act. 6. To try a new tack as the wind seems to have left his sails. 7. To enlarge the sphere of the stage as a teacher by lowering the school fees. 8. To brush himself up and the "easely chief" take "Excelsior" for his motto. 9. To follow the example of Cincinnatus. 10. To abandon the study of perpetual motion and try to square the circle. 11. To take out an accident policy. 12. Not to give occasion for a too literal interpretation of his "striking attitude."—Opera.

1. To stick to Horace and eschew politics. 2. To take care of his chest out of England. 3. To carry on his striking policy. 4. To keep out of Ireland. 5. To learn the text, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." 6. To cultivate orchids instead of duchesses. 7. To be faithful to the immortal bard. 8. To paint Greek beauties and forswear in future Scriptural subjects. 9. To reflect on his latter end. 10. To meditate on "A little learning is a dangerous thing." 11. To banish dirt from Russia, the Jews will go with it. 12. To retire into his native obscurity.—Ivy Leaves.

1. To carry out the Newcastle programme. 2. To keep his eye on Devonshire. 3. To take Punch's advice with regard to marriage. 4. To drop the bimetallism craze. 5. To keep well posted up in TRUTH. 6. To stick to North Kensington. 7. To stay at home. 8. To send something good to the '94 Academy. 9. To be at peace with all the world. 10. To avoid egotism. 11. To establish a Parliament. 12. To make no rash promises.—Daft Scot.

1. (To Sir W. H.) "Yes, friend, I've resolved that I will, Early this year be on the Parish, Bill." 2. To beat friend G—— will be my hobby, So on this "beat" you'll always find a Bobby. 3. Masters and miners I'll pat upon the back, Then coals will not always be slack. 4. To "drive" out the Government I will try, By "putting" my finger in every pie. 5. Old Lobengula I must make understand, It's right to see roads in his land. 6. On different subjects I'll try to be handy, But the monkey one, not for Randy. 7. I'll robe my legs remarks to stem, So do not lie if you cannot see 'em. 8. No longer for their "bobs" shall people stare, On photos of whom they neither know or care. 9. From my views I'll not allow one to entice, Whose grandfather ran to me for advice. 10. If Queen Victoria I visit in '94, I'll be more active than I was of yore. 11. France said, "If you want a nap o'lean on me," And you may bet I will after '93. 12. I speak my mind wherever I be, If you don't believe it, you'd "batter" see.—The Ghost.

1. Add to my score of deeds already done, by husbanding the strength of number one. 2. No stone unturn next year at every hour to lift the Tories once more into power. 3. Though young I am, and hearty too—no wrinkles, no grey hairs—I'll undertake no worries more than Foreign Sec.'s affairs. 4. By linking strength, from golf's good link, with Unionistic brains, I am resolved to dish the Whigs and scatter their remains. 5. Resolved I am yet to be Afric's ruler, when once I've caught and conquered Lobengula. 6. Should e'er again the chance to me of leadership revive, I'll not yield aught of power or place to any man alive. 7. Whatever be the Queen's intent of honours I m deserving, preserve I will my nom-de-théâtre, id est "Henry Irving." 8. When first of merry May arrives, and R. A.'s come to dine, the poorest artists wanting bread shall feed with me and mine. 9. On New Year's Day, ere Fool's Day* next, I'll ask my Imperator to pray for birthday blessings from our great and wise Creator. 10. Though a bellicose belligerent the world has writ me down, my motto shall be "peace anon for Fatherland and crown." 11. Withdraw I will my heel from Poles (a diplomatic failure) could I but briefly crown assign, with sceptre inter alia. 12. Hard as we've fought for long to form a perfect labour bureau, much harder still I'll fight next year and more so in futuro.—Edgcome.

* My birthday.

1. To hew down no more of the British Empire's ancestral trees. 2. To count the cost of biting sarcasms before they are uttered. 3. To guard carefully and not overtax a life of greatest value. 4. To possess his soul in patience, knowing that "all things come to him who waits." 5. To love his neighbour as himself. 6. To know his own mind, and fritter away no more opportunities. 7. If possible, to live for ever, and go on following his own example. 8. To hasten on the time when the best shall be first, and the worst last. 9. Never to forget that "noblesse oblige." 10. Not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think. 11. To deserve success if he cannot command it. 12. To cultivate long sight, and to take broad views.—Neptune.

1. To keep his head cool and feet warm. 2. To put a stout heart to a steep hill, and to be at the top first. 3. Not to mock a cobbler because of his black thumbs. 4. To avoid himself what he thinks wrong in a neighbour. 5. To thrive by honesty or remain poor. 6. To learn something by his own failures. 7. To keep on in the same way. 8. Never to forget that beauty is a good letter of introduction. 9. To look on the bright side of everything. 10. To keep on good terms with his wife, his people, and his own conscience, if he has one. 11. To do well by doing good to those of his own brotherhood. 12. That truth shall be his guide.—Independent.

1. To resolve that he will bury the hatchet, and, sparing that good old tree the Union, will cut his sticks from political life. 2. To resolve that he will open the New Year with afternoon smoking teas, the calumet of peace being the principal narcotic. 3. To resolve that he will go in for arbitration. 4. To resolve to renounce golf and take to cricket, as he is assured that he is A 1 at bowling over his adversaries. 5. To resolve that he will retire from Matabeleland, and seek pastures greener. 6. To resolve to forsake the African lion, and go in for drawing the British Lion from his Radical den. 7. To resolve that he will give up America in favour of the United Kingdom for his after-season tour. 8. To resolve to renounce the study of the nude, and cultivate Art decorations. 9. To resolve to retire with peace and honour. 10. To resolve on his next visit to England to abjure speeches and refrain from cheek. 11. To resolve to abolish the knout, and to temper his justice with mercy. 12. To resolve to turn over a new leaf, and appear at St. Stephen's in a clean collar at least once a week.—Bel Demonio.

1. To pass Home Rule. 2. To return to power. 3. To maintain peace with honour. 4. To return to his old post in Ireland. 5. To finish up with his blacks. 6. To make a speech worthy to be handed down to posterity. 7. To bring out a greater success than ever. 8. To have the most brilliant Academy on record. 9. To die in harness. 10. To upset Europe, or build a smarter yacht. 11. To upset the standing arrangements in the Mediterranean. 12. To multiply strikes.—Blossom.

1. I resolve to leave the small fry of the Opposition to be answered by some one less important than myself. 2. By way of reform, I will alter the word "circus" to "merry-go-round." 3. I will not allow the coal-owners and miners to fall out over my Board of Conciliation. 4. From the New Year I will be the real Leader of the Opposition. 5. For the future I will not make in-Rhodes (roads), tracks, nor trekkes into other people's countries. 6. I will endeavour to become a serious politician, and not a mountebank. 7. I resolve to ventilate the stalls of the Lyceum a little more. 8. I shall endeavour for the future to prevent the Royal Academy becoming a mere portrait gallery. 9. I am determined from to-day to leave politics alone. 10. I resolve to forget there is a letter I in the alphabet, and think less of myself and more of others. 11. I shall try to learn the maxim, "Live and Let Live." 12. I shall endeavour to cut all connection between the Keir Hardie crew and myself.—Calcutta.

1. To go ahead—trust the people, and not to forget that fifty years ago he was younger. 2. To not tell more Salisbury's than he can help. 3. To always keep well with the Court, and well to the front. 4. To keep his eye on Randy, and not to trust J. Chamberlain. 5. To never forget, blacks, too, are brothers. 6. To keep his eye on Balfour, and only back certainties. 7. To never fail to blow his own trumpet. 8. To only try to paint masterpieces. 9. To try to forget, and not worry. 10. To count always 100 before he speaks. 11. To never trust his officials, but to do what's right and be merciful, and never mind the rest. 12. To not forget, but always bear in mind that the idlers (whatever their political professions) must always be opposed to the workers.—Jack Cade.

1. To retire. 2. To take his place. 3. To help his nephew. 4. To rat. 5. Smash TRUTH and Labby. 6. To take a back seat. 7. To open his theatre to the poor for a week or two before a general election at the request of Primrose League. 8. None necessary that he knows of. 9. To smoke it out. 10. To keep the people in their proper place. 11. Ditto. 12. To retire from Parliament and go to America.—A Tory.

1. As head of a Liberal Government, to allow no wars to be waged against native races, in the interest of Companies. 2. Set his House (of Peers) in order. 3. Act as pacificator abroad, as at home in the Coal Strike. 4. To leave in the hands of his underlings all unjustifiable obstruction he cannot check. 5. To settle by single combat any difference between a savage chief and himself, the weapons chosen by his opponent. 6. To try to regain his former position among the Tories, by exhibiting in his speeches more statesmanship, and less vituperative energy. 7. To act chiefly in cardinal rôles. 8. To limit his exhibition at the Royal Academy to one picture. 9. To be content with his high rank and with what he has done. 10. Not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think. 11. To try and learn if the accounts in foreign papers are true respecting the state of the prisons in Russia and Siberia, and try to crush out Nihilism by righteousness and justice. 12. Not to be spoiled by popularity, but continue an honest helper of the workman.—Esperanza.

1. To discover a birthplace in Ireland. Query—Blarney. 2. To give up the Bantering and try the Banting system. 3. To go on strike if the "boss" interferes with him, and get himself appointed arbitrator. 4. To appropriate a pair of Uncle Roberts' shoes for present practice and future use. 5. To translate the golden rule into Matabele and enforce it by example. 6. To write a moral essay on the text, "Be clothed with humility." 7. To save his reputation by proving that he never was an "Irvingite." 8. To study the art of draping. 9. To have in readiness another snub for the Kaiser. 10. To elaborate another impromptu attempt to conciliate the ex-Chancellor. 11. To compare the trade lists of firms whose speciality is the construction of "river dredgers." 12. To organise a strike amongst the "inferior" planets for shorter hours, revolution twice a day at least, and total abolition of the invidious terms "inferior" and "superior."—Tilly Slowboy.

Gladstone should resolve to pass his great Bill,
Lord Salisbury resolve to swallow the pill,
Rosebery resolve to be cautious next year
And Balfour resolve to wed a sweet dear.
Rhodes should resolve not to court a great fall,
Churchill resolve not to heed Ulster's call,
H. Irving resolve to retire for aye,
And Leighton do likewise on New Year's Day.
Prince Bismarck resolve to give no more fun,
William resolve not to speak of a gun,
The mighty Czar should resolve to be good,
And Burns resolve for the poor to gain food.
Geranium.

1. Never to speak from a railway-carriage window again. 2. To mend the House of Lords before again amending the resolutions of the Commons. 3. To strike as often as he can when the iron (coal) is hot. 4. To ignore lads in the House and stick to laddies on the Links. 5. To try and define the difference between a chartered libertine and a chartered company. 6. To use the same good judgment in the great game of politics as he exercises in that of racing. 7. To stick to the play in England and not forsake it for the pay in America. 8. To think a little less of the capital realised by the Exhibitions of the Royal Academy and a little more of the capital A in Art. 9. To ponder over a certain quotation, which, in his case, should read as follows:—"If I had served my Prince as I have served an Emperor he would not have ignored me in my old age." 10. To study my people more than myself. 11. To try and solve the Latin motto "Ex nihilo nihil fit," and improve the same if possible. 12. To stick to his last in the House of Commons, especially when the burning question of Labour v. Capital comes to the front.—East Anglia.

"TRUTH" PUZZLE, No. 775.—ASSORTED SPECIMENS.—GOOD AND OTHERWISE.

BOUTS-RIMES ON THE WORDS — MAXIM, TON, TAX HIM, RUN, STRIKING, SPOOK, VIKING, CROOK.

 Having some space to spare, a further selection of Bouts-Rimés is inserted.—THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

Life on the ocean wave was aye my maxim,
A saucy craft of half a hundred ton.
No rent, no rates; the sailor, who shall tax him!
Begone dull care; set sail, and off we run!
I mused, and lo!—the midnight clocks were striking—
Rose from the waves a sad-eyed seaman's spook;
"Vain hope," he sighed, "no Argonaut nor Viking
But sailed with care—each lot must have its crook!"
Eva Charlotte.

"Forewarned is forearmed." Spencer, act on this maxim,
And add to our naval strength many a ton.
For that John Bull lets you—nay, asks you to tax him;
Let naval supplies, then, go up with a run!
If England should fail when the time comes for striking
A blow, safety, prestige, would melt like a spook;
Then awake from your lethargy, sons of the Viking!
Get ships, men, and money by hook or by crook.
Nodding Violet.

"ULTIMA RATIO REGUM."

Our ultimate reason with Blacks, is the Maxim;
An argument weighty, though scarcely a ton,
We'll spare Lobengula, enslave him, and tax him,
From our Christian embrace the poor savage has run.
Like Rob Roy's, our system is taking and striking,
Open "doors into soul-land" fine field for a spook—
In plunder and slaughter, true sons of the Viking;
Wolves parading as shepherds, with bay'net for crook! (*)
J. McGrigor Allan.

(*) "The English nation, like its language, is a strange mixture of a variety of others. When I behold an Englishman fond of the tricks and chicanery of law, I say there is a Norman, who came over with William the Conqueror. Another, affable and polite, has the manners of a Plantagenet; a third, outrageous and brutal, is a Dane."—Voltaire.

Captain Lendy went out with a Maxim,
Matabeles were slain by the ton;
'Twas because they want more than to tax him
That poor Lobengula has run.
Now Rhodes and his robbers are striking,
They want Lo Ben's land, not his "spook;"
And though they've no right, à la Viking,
They'll grab it, by hook or by crook.
Weg.

Some niggers I'd shot with a Maxim,
When their chiefs brought me tusks, quite a ton.
But the King was afraid I would tax him,
So they bolted like bulls on the run.
I followed them shooting and striking,
Till they thought me a "Borderland" spook,
Then I collared the "oof" like a Viking,
Which I'd squeezed out by hook or by crook.
Chaucer Junior.

CECIL RHODES.

The guns he used were Maxim,
And weighed full many a ton;
The Impi's strength did tax him,
But at last he made them run.
Yet see, they fall still striking,
Till at last there's ne'er a spook—
Bold as a brave old Viking,
They fight by hook and by crook.
Era.

With Winchester, Hotchkiss, and Maxim,
Protecting their lead by the ton;
With fire which sorely doth tax him,
We force Lobengula to run;
The wild Matabele down striking,
Unscared by the swart victim's spook,
We gather our spoil like the Viking,
We'll have it, by hook or by crook.
Lifting Jack.

1893.

Yes, we've got a new gun called the Maxim,
But our coals cost two pounds for the ton;
And you'd think a man's use was to tax him,
That our men might make savages run.
The last hour of the year is nigh striking,
And I wish I were only a Spook,
Or had lived in the times of the Viking,
Or th' Arcadian days of the crook.
Quartus.

In olden days, it was the warrior's maxim,
To wear an armour weighing half a ton,
And wield a spear whose length did no doubt tax him,
He fain did fight because he could not run.
But in these days of bullets far off striking,
A soldier should be light as any spook;
The heavy arms of Roman, Goth, or Viking,
Are not more useful than a shepherd's crook.
Old Dutch.

"All's well that ends well," we hold a happy maxim,
And now coal is down to a fair price the ton;
But what will the ratepayer say when you tax him
To make England's Navy all others outrun?
Our Cabinet Council, when midnight is striking,
Should question that up-to-date oracle "spook,"
If England's great Navy should, like the old Viking,
Reign supreme o'er the seas by hook or by crook.
Bel Demonio.

"Peace and scuttle," says TRUTH, "is a very sound maxim;
Why purchase your safety at so much a ton?
The worst use to put a man to is to tax him;
'Tis silly to fight when you're able to run!'
'Tis miners, not soldiers, I love to see striking,
For honour's a bubble and glory a spook.
Britannia, ashamed of descent from the Viking,
Should lay down her trident and shoulder a crook!"
Ku-Klux-Klan.

We're giving his "Impi" a taste of the "Maxim"—
They're feeling hot iron at so much a "ton;"
The result of this being that soon we shall "tax him,"
Provided he gives us a fairly good "run."
But after we've had quite a surfeit of "striking,"
We'll find we've to do with the Company's "spook;"
And e'en whilst we feast in the "halls of the Viking"
They'll wrest all we've conquered by hook or by "crook."
Malignant.

A PHENOMENAL SUCCESS

FLOR DE DINDIGUL

AN EXCELLENT MEDIUM MILD INDIAN CIGAR.

A most delightful weed. Sample four or five 1s., or free by return post 12 stamps.

BEWLAY'S 49, STRAND, W.C.; 74, STRAND (EAST INDIA HOUSE); & 143, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON.

Established 1750. Descriptive Price List post free.

SUGG'S PATENT GAS BURNERS.

The best Burners that have ever been invented.

BRILLIANT, WHITE, SILENT LIGHT.

GAS LAMPS, GAS FITTINGS, GAS FIRES, &c.

Send for Price List, Grand Hotel Buildings, Charing Cross, W.C, 1a, Ludgate Hill, London, E.C.; also at Liverpool and Amsterdam.

HOT MINERAL BATHS OF BATH.

Daily yield 507,600 gallons F. at 120.
FOUNDED BY THE ROMANS IN THE 1st CENTURY.
APIXTON MEN TAUP.
BATHERS DURING 1890—97,299.

These Baths are unrival ed in Europe for luxury and extent, and contain all that modern improvements can provide for the comfort and relief of the invalid or the enjoyment of those in health.

Reclining, Deep, and Swimming Baths. Thermal Vapour Baths, for Painful conditions of Joints, &c. Douche Inhalation, Aspiration, Pulverisation, &c., and Ear, Eye, Throat, &c. The Aix les Bains Massage System and Douches.

The Medical profession sends patients who suffer from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Dyspepsia, Eczema, and other skin affections.

Letters to the General Manager will receive every attention.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON

Very agreeable to take.
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE FOR CONSTIPATION,
HAEMORRHOIDS,
BILE,
HEADACHE,
LOSS OF APPETITE,
GASTRIC AND INTESTINAL TROUBLES.
Box 2s. 6d., stamps included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists
E. GRILLON.
69, Queen-street, Cheapside, London.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.

This most excellent Liqueur, the great preventive of Indigestion, and almost certain remedy for sea-sickness, can now be had of all Wine Merchants, and at prices much lower than formerly.
Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

JULES CHAMUSET'S CHAMPAGNE

Established 1700. AY, FRANCE.

The Lancet says: "We have analysed it, and are able to give it unqualified praise. It is free from adulteration of any kind, and possesses a very delicate flavour."

Price 72s. per Dozen, Cash.
Delivered at any railway station in U.K. From all Wine Merchants, or at 22 Great Tower Street, London, E.C.

WOODS' PATENT GALVANISED STEEL WIRE MATTRESSES & BEDSTEADS

Carriage Paid, and Liberal Cash Discount allowed.

Guaranteed for Five Years.

EXHIBITED CARRYING ONE TON
At LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and other EXHIBITIONS.
SHOW ROOMS:
128, BOLD ST., LIVERPOOL.
Catalogues and Prices free on application to the
LONGFORD WIRE, IRON & STEEL CO., LTD.
WARRINGTON.
Please mention this Paper.

You Want a Typewriter.

TRADE MARK.

REGISTERED.

Does it not strike you that a machine invented by one of the first mechanical geniuses of the day,
That in two years has obtained an unprecedented sale,
That has been adopted by one Emperor, one King, several Princes and Princesses, and 20,000 ordinary users,
That has obtained the highest awards wherever exhibited,
That has gained Five Gold Medals,
That has even found its way into the Vatican at Rome,
That has received hundreds of testimonials,
That has found profitable occupation for thousands of operators,
That has been adopted by the principal Railway Co.'s, Chief Engineering Firms, Technical and other Schools,
That is the easiest to learn, does the best work, and
Has no filthy ink ribbon,

Is the Typewriter you Want?

THE YŌST IS ALL THIS AND MORE.

Contractors to

Her Majesty's Government,
The Colonial Governments,
The Indian Government,
The French Government,
and others.

Full Particulars from—
YŌST TYPEWRITER COMPANY, Limited, 40, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.
BRANCH ADDRESSES:—MANCHESTER: 3, Deansgate. BIRMINGHAM: 73, Temple-row. LIVERPOOL: 67A, Lord-street. GLASGOW: 112, St. Vincent-street. BELFAST: 9, Rosemary-street. LEEDS: 21, New Station-street. PARIS: 36, Boulevard des Italiens.

THE GIFT OF THE SEASON: A CASE OF '86

Of all Wine Merchants

AGE and GENUINENESS GUARANTEED by the Excise Department of the Canadian Government by Certificate over the Capsule of every Bottle.

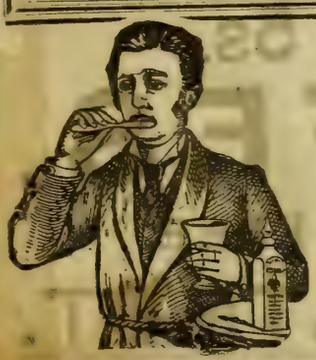
AN UNIQUE AND ABSOLUTELY PURE SPIRIT.

GOLD CAPSULE, 1886 make.—Bottled at the Distillery in Bond and under Government supervision, whereby the age and genuineness are guaranteed by an official certificate over every capsule.

WHITE CAPSULE.—Bottled by the Wine Merchants in England.

London Offices: 69 & 70, MARK LANE, E.C.
Branches and Agencies throughout the World.

Of all Wine Merchants



PERSONAL LOVELINESS

is greatly enhanced by a fine set of teeth. On the other hand, nothing so detracts from the effect of pleasing features as yellow or decayed teeth. Don't lose sight of this fact, and remember to cleanse your teeth every morning with that supremely delightful and effectual dentifrice

FRAGRANT
SOZODONT

which imparts whiteness to them, without the least injury to the enamel. The gums are made healthy by its use, and that mortifying defect, a repulsive breath, is completely remedied by it. Sozodont is in high favour with the fair sex, because it lends an added charm to their pretty mouths.

MANUFACTURERS TO HER MAJESTY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR

HAS 35 YEARS' WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

FOR ALL

Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as
Sick Headache, Constipation,
Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion,
Disordered Liver, and Female Ailments.

Prepared only by the Proprietor, THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helen's, Lancashire.

Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers everywhere, in Boxes, 9½d., 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. each, with full directions.

The 1s. 1½d. Box contains Fifty-six Pills.

THE SALE IS NOW SIX MILLION BOXES PER ANNUM.

PIANOS ON THE THREE YEARS' HIRE SYSTEM.

This system is carried out extensively, liberally, and equitably by CHARLES STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, W.C. The pianoforte becomes the absolute property of the hirer at the expiration of three years, or may be returned at any time, at the option of the hirer. The rates charged are the same as for ordinary hire, and no addition is made to the price. PIANOS, GRAND and UPRIGHT, new and second-hand, by BORD, BECHSTEIN, and other high-class Makers, at from 10s. 6d. to 100s. per month. Lists and all particulars will be forwarded post-free on application to STILES & CO., 40 and 42, Southampton-row, Holborn, London, W.C.

S. Sainsbury's Lavender Water

SOLD THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY. Prices, 1s. to 16s. 6d., &c.
MANUFACTORY: 176 and 177, STRAND, LONDON.
ESTABLISHED 1839.

IZOD'S PATENT CORSETS Are the Best.

Prepared by a New and Special Scientific Process.

Medical opinion recommends them for THE HEALTH.
Public opinion all over the world unanimous that they are unsurpassed for COMFORT, STYLE, AND DURABILITY. Sold all over Europe, and everywhere in India and Colonies. Name and Trade Mark, Anchor, on every pair and box. Ask your Draper or Outfitter for IZOD'S make: take no other, and see you get them, as bad makes are often sold or sake of extra profit.
Write for our sheet of Drawings.

E. IZOD & SON,
30, Milk St., London.
Manufactory: LANDPORT, HANTS

SETTLEMENT ASSURANCES.

NO TRUSTEES required.
Avoiding Risk, Trust Expenses, and Small Income.

EXAMPLE.—A Husband, aged 30 (whose Wife is aged 25) paying £24 7s. 4d. per annum can secure £50 per ann. guaranteed to his Widow and £1,000 to his Children on the death of Parents.

If desired the Income can also be secured to the Husband during his Old Age.

For Rates and Prospectus apply to the Secretary.

ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE,
ROYAL EXCHANGE, LONDON, E.C.
Or to West End Branch, 29, Pall Mall, S.W.

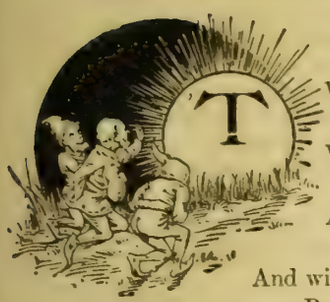
TANN'S £5 5s. SAFES.

LISTS FREE.

NEWGATE ST.

Printed for the Proprietors by WYMAN & SONS, Limited, Great Queen-st. W.C. and published at 10, Bolt-ct. Fleet-st. E.C. in the Parish of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, in the City of London. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to REGINALD E. BOOKER, "Truth" Buildings, Carteret-st. Queen Anne's-gate, S.W.

A Spookish Epidemic.



'TWAS last October, t'wards its end,
When days to fog and darkness tend,
And spirits droop, and coals ascend,
And winter, which we all forfend,
Begins to clank its fetters;
That TRUTH, upon her daily round,
Amongst her correspondence found
Some very curious letters
From Statesmen worthy of the name,
From sages of extensive fame,
From public characters they came,
From men of light and leading,
All hinting at some influence new—
Though giving but the slightest clue
From whence it came, or how it grew—
And for a private interview
Politely interceding.

Of course, TRUTH could not well refuse
To grant these wished-for interviews;
She could not otherwise than choose
To suffer the invasion;
And so each morning Carteret-street
Was crowded with the land's élite,
All eager counsel to entreat
Befitting the occasion.

Day after day the high and great,
Nobles, Professors, Men of State,
Doctors of worth, Divines of weight,
Savants renowned and up to date,
Too many far to numerate,
At intervals kept calling.
All, as it presently turned out,
Possessed by one identic doubt,
And all intent to talk about
Experiences appalling.

For, in succession, each turned pale,
And told to TRUTH the self-same tale
Of awe and consternation.
A tale of flapping, ghostly wings,
Of spectral raps, and phantom rings,
In short, of everything that springs
FROM SPOOKISH VISITATION!

TRUTH made to each the same reply,
"Leave me," said she, "and I will try
To find the wherefore and the why
Of these odd things you testify;
Leave me, and in the meantime I
Will make investigation;
And if you'll call to-morrow week,
Then of the things of which you speak
I'll give an explanation!"

THE morrow week came quickly round, and at the hour expected
A company unparalleled in TRUTH'S large room collected.
The best-known notables in town, the leaders of society,
Chiefs of the State, the bar, the stage, all shared the same anxiety,
And filled the chairs, row after row, and eagerly awaited
The statement which, as here set down, TRUTH then communicated.

"Since you consulted me," said she, "I've done my very best
To probe the secret of the things which you to me confess'd.
The samples of the air that fills the houses you reside in,
Sent to bacteriologists that scientists confide in,
Has been, according to my wish, expressly ana*lysed* by them.
And this is what in consequence I since have been advised by them.

Professor Henn, of Potsdam, writes:—'Treated with gelatine
Each sample of the air you sent turned to a bluey-green;
A certain proof—I'll spare you all the scientific terms—
That it was teeming with some sort of protozoic germs.
These propagated in beef-tea became a bright vermilion,
Proving typhoid bacteria swarmed—well, simply by the billion.
Two guinea-pigs, into whose veins I several germs injected,
Came out in spots as soon as I my purpose had effected.
Whilst still a stronger proof of my conclusions, you'll allow,
I, after inhalation, am in bed with typhoid now.
Examined in the microscope, the germs appear to be
In shape most singularly like a very big, big D.'

A second savant," TRUTH went on, "declares the air I sent
To be devoid of any germs to quite a rare extent;
Whilst Doctor Virchow finds in those six tubefuls sent to him
A cochineal bacillus with a rudimentary limb.
'A great discovery,' he adds, 'for here we have at length
The germ of tonsilitis of a quite uncommon strength.'

But," TRUTH continued, "I have still another note to read,
Showing that doctors on this point are strangely disagreed.
'The air you send,' writes Doctor Koch—eager, 'twould seem, to thrill us—
'Contains in quantities immense the deadly "Spook-bacillus."'
Each sample has been subjected by me to action chemic,
And each has germs enough to cause a Spooky epidemic.
From the small drawing I enclose, made from close observation,
You'll see the germs in shape are like—notes of interrogation.'

And now," said TRUTH, "prepare yourselves for an unpleasant shock:
I'm bound to say at once I quite agree with Doctor Koch;
For, though I've hidden this so far, I have myself gone through
The very same experiences that have occurred to you;
And, having all the evidence available threshed out,
My inf'rence is that all of us are 'Spooked' without a doubt!"

"Spooked!" from the awe-struck visitors like a weird echo burst,
"Spooked!" and they heaved a heavy sigh, as men who know the worst.
"Yes," TRUTH went on, with waving hand, "Spooked! every one of you!"
And from the Cat upon the hearth there came a gleeful mew.
Then from TRUTH'S visitors arose a cry both loud and deep (Save from two well-known noblemen who both seemed fast asleep).
All tried to talk together, and, with faces ghostly white,
Like men by sudden terror seized, for aid turned left and right;
Old foes forthwith forgot the stress of former fight and tussle,
For Saunderson McCarthy clutched, and Halsbury cuddled Russell;
Lowther laid hold of Harcourt's arm, and, as the air grew darker,
The Primate in a tight embrace enfolded Doctor Parker;
Whilst Joseph, in a fit of fear he tried in vain to check,
Stretched out his wildly trembling arm and circled Gladstone's neck.
For all recalled the gruesome times through which they'd passed of late,
And shivered at the thought of what ere long might be their fate.
And presently from out the gloom, which yet appeared to spread,
A changed, though still remembered, voice in quavering accents said:—

For night after night I've been wakened from sleep,
By roars round my bed most alarmingly deep;
And I've seen fiery eyes, and I've felt fiery breath,
Till I've almost been frightened, I own it, to death.
To interpret the vision I tried all in vain,
But TRUTH'S explanation has made it quite plain—
It points to a Nemesis—yes, it's my lot
To be spooked by the lions I said I had shot!

Another and a sterner voice, suggesting martial glory,
Then, in a tone of grim complaint, thus told its owner's story:—

My Spook was alarming enough, you'll infer,
For it spoke with the accents of Bobs Bahadur,
And it crooned in my ear, till I shuddered aghast,
"Your innings is over, your long day is past!
Advertise as you may, no more kudos you'll earn;
For now you will find it's a better man's turn!"

Next, from the corner near the fire, in tones of sore dismay,
A voice, no longer self-assured, was faintly heard to say:—

Every time that my head on my pillow I place,
At the foot of my bed there appears a stern face;
And a voice cries, "Friend Joseph! thou'rt painfully smart,
But thou'rt also a renegade, that's what thou art!
The cause of the people thou should'st have helped on,
But thou hast perverted the counsels of John;
So beware! for the higher thou'rt fated to rise,
The lower thou'lt sink in all honest men's eyes!"

"Lilla is as stout as ever, but in her new habit from BUSVINE she looks a lovely figure. I cannot think how it is done. It is pure skill on the part of the builder of that most delightful of garments."—Truth. "The great Busvine has a knack of moulding you to your habit, instead of your habit to you, which has gone far to make his name and fame. . . The habit represented the last chef d'œuvre of Busvinecian art."—The World.

"Two ladies wore the livery of Diana—'divine figures,' quoth a critic of the scene. 'Well, yes; divine and Busvine' was the ready reply."—The Field. "It is not to draw attention to one particular maker that we allude to BUSVINE'S safety skirts, but only on the same principle that we would wish to throw a life-buoy to a drowning sailor."—The Queen.

A Marquis who had slept so far, and snored with all his might,
Just then woke up, looked wildly round, and said, with sudden fright :—

I am haunted by day and I'm haunted by night
By a wholly malign and most mischievous sprite.
For example, amongst other impudent things,
"Come, uncle, make room for your nephew!" it sings.
It scribbles strange messages, too, on my slate,
In which I am warned of my imminent fate,
And am told that in Ireland I'm soon to be resident,
And of its Republic the very first President!

And then a little man explained, in accents most distress'd,
How a gorilla fierce had danced on his recumbent chest;
And yet a smaller jackanapes, with trembling lips declared
How badly at the hands of his vindictive Spook he'd fared.
"As a mere rude and naughty boy," he groaned, "that spirit ranks me,
And, putting me across its knee, with all its might it spanks me!"

Thus all TRUTH's visitors went on their stories to unfold,
Till each some tale of Spookery most singular had told.
And as they spoke in turn of those strange things which had occurr'd,
The Cat blinked steadily at TRUTH, and very softly purr'd.

Meanwhile, the room had grown more dim, and from the fire there came
A ghostly light, which waxed and waned as soared or sank the flame.
A Spookish thrill was in the air, deep silence reigned around,
Save for the purring of the Cat there was no mundane sound;
When TRUTH said solemnly, "You'll guess what 'tis that I design—
You've told me your mysterious tales; well, now, I'll tell you mine!"

DETAINED one evening at the Law Courts late,
Whilst settling there a new impostor's fate—
One of the many rogues of London town
Who have by me, in turn, been hunted down,—
I issued from the Central Hall to find
The outer world to Fog's embrace consigned.
A murky mistiness the prospect gloomed,
Like ghoulish eyes the blotted gas-jets loomed;
Uncanny forms from out the fog emerged,
As ghostly drivers spectral horses urged.
Like Will-o'-the-Wisps the elvish link-boys sped,
Each hearse-like 'bus seemed freighted with the dead;
Through the thick air came from the wraith-like train,
Shrill shrieks suggesting cries of souls in pain;
Whilst high above, like stars of baleful hue,
Electric lights burnt choleraic blue.

'Sooth, 'twas a gruesome night, the foggy cloud
Clung round one like a clammy funeral shroud;
One's blood ran cold, one well nigh gasped for breath,
And, shudd'ring, mused on "Drelincourt on Death."
The muffled church bells seemed to toll out doom,
The clay-cold air the street made like a tomb.
One thought of vampires and unhallowed things,
Which from the grave the hour of midnight brings;
Of gibbering goblins, and white-sheeted ghosts,
Of Spooks unsepulchred in wandering hosts;
Of misty phantoms, forced on earth to stay,
Of tireless ghosts that walk the world alway;
Of wraiths and banshees with their scream so dread,
And all the grim attendants of the dead!

And whilst thus musing, blundering through the Strand,
From the thick fog that closed on either hand
All suddenly a spectral shape appeared,
So very grizzly, and so strangely weird,
That when its bony fingers beckoned me,
I felt a nervous weakness at the knee;
But, none the less, although with trembling feet,
Followed its ghostly lead down Norfolk-street.
And even as I went, half-numbed with fear,
An eerie voice sang softly in my ear :—

Come! where the Spook abideth,
Come! where the spirits tap;
Come! where the phantom glideth,
Come! where the tables rap;
Come! where the medium floateth,
Come where the palm is read;
Come to that door
On the second floor—
Come to the rooms of Stead!

And so, no doubt by psychic force impelled,
Down Norfolk-street my unwilling way I held,
Till, gleaming ever in the dubious light,
My guiding spectre pointed to the right;
And by the clammy fog-wave chilled and sopped,
Before the door of Mowbray House I stopped.
But not for long, for on my guide intent,
Up the stone steps I willy-nilly went.

I had scarce got inside,
When in wonder I cried
At the very odd sight which around me I spied;
For, in numberless hosts,
Most diversified ghosts
Were gliding about 'mongst the pillars and posts.
Some with squalling and squealing
Rose up to the ceiling,
Some were walking about, some in corners were kneeling,
Some in shrouds, ghastly pale,
Some in full suits of mail,
And some (fie! oh, fie!) in a thin gauzy veil.
There were sibylline Fatmas,
Thibetan Mahatmas,
Faith-healers, Clairvoyants, Telepathists, too,
With an augur (from Bristol)
Who looked in a crystal,
And had all the future revealed to her view.
There were mediums by dozens,
And Scotch country-cousins,
Possessing (they said) an acute second sight;
With electro-biologists,
Clever psychologists,
And hypnotists eager their skill to recite.
Whilst away in the dark, by a post half concealed,
A glance the ambiguous Baldwin revealed,
With a look in his face which, though sinister,
Seemed much to attract a disciple close by,
Who appeared, from the cut of his coat and his tie,
To be some description of minister.

"Now what," I exclaimed, much amazed at the scene,
"What, what does this sight, so remarkable, mean?

BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOTEL, overlooking Royal Palace and Parks, and the BURLINGTON HOTEL, Cork-street, close to Bond-st., Piccadilly. Each Hotel is in the heart of the West-end, and contains 150 rooms. Tariff exceedingly moderate. Fine public rooms. Table d'hôte. Electric light and new sanitation. GEORGE COOKE, Manager.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.—Patterns now ready and sent post free of these new and fashionable Cards for Christmas (specially printed), a most complete collection, amongst them many striking novelties.—PARKINS & GOTTO, Court Stationers, 54 to 62, Oxford-st., London.

Why are all of you here?" And their answer they gave
With an energy marked in the following stave:—

You ask us why we gather here?
What means our present attitude?
And our response is very clear—
We're here to show our gratitude!
We were in very grievous case,
The busy world gave us no place,
And we were dying out apace,
On all sides burked and bann'd, O!
When to our aid came Mr. Stead,
The bold, the sanguine, widely-read,
The credulous, Quixotic Ed-
Itor of "Borderland," O!

He took us up with all his might,
He helped us con amore,
He means before he's done his fight
To bring us back our glory.
So we've a debt to him to pay,
And that is why it is to-day
We've found to Mowbray House our way
From out the foggy Strand, O!
We've come to kneel to Mr. Stead,
The fertile, fecund, talen-ted,
Utopian, high-flown, flighty Ed-
Itor of "Borderland," O!

He's found a gold-mine, that is clear,
Though science tries to burke it;
And most of us whom you see here
Intend to help him work it.
So do not wonder at our glee,
For, after years of penury,
We hail the chance of £. s. d.,
We see the Promised Land, O!
And shortly hope to there be led
By our new Joshua, Mr. Stead,
The versatile and knowing Ed-
Itor of "Borderland."

As they sang I had time to examine them all,
And one notable fact seemed for comment to call.
It was this—though the costumes they wore varied much,
There in all was one striking, identical touch;
Every one of the gang gathered there at their leader's—
The mediums, the palmists, faith-healers, thought-readers—
All, in short, who propose to instruct and reform us,
Were provided with pockets in size quite enormous!

They would p'rhaps have sung more,
But just then from the floor,
In a manner surprising I felt myself soar
Up, up, like a bird
(Do not deem it absurd
Or my story with falsehood be branding),
Up, up, from the hall,
'Till I passed through a wall
To the right, on the second-floor landing.

My heart went thump, thump,
In my throat came a lump,
As down on a sofa I felt myself plump;
But I stifled my cries,
And concealed my surprise;
For, to steady my nerves so unstable,
There, opposite me,
I distinctly could see
Mr. Stead writing hard at a table!

Writing hard, do I say?
Well, these words don't convey
But a half of the fact I'm reciting,
For this strangest of men
In each hand held a pen,
And with both was most rapidly writing.

So fix'd was his gaze, as he sat in his chair,
So oddly distraught, so abstracted his air,
So sealed to the ceiling his rapturous stare,
That until I coughed loudly to say I was there,
He was not, it would seem, of my presence aware,
My cough, though, his notice securing,
He said "How d'ye do?" put a pen in each ear,
And adding, "I wonder how long you've been here?"
Vouchsafed me a smile re-assuring.

"Did you knock more than once?"

"I did not knock at all;
But in some occult way floated in through that wall,
Having soared, willy-nilly, right up from the hall—
The sensation, believe me, was frightful,
For I seemed to be urged on my hazardous course,
By some undefined impulse of psychical force."

"Delightful!" cried Stead, "most delightful!
This is excellent news thus to find my friend Truth
Displaying a personal knowledge of 'Throughth.'
Most readable copy I'm sure it will make,
Say precisely what happened, and notes I will take."

"Wait a bit," I replied, "I'm a journalist too,
To my own publication my first thoughts are due;
Any 'copy' that's good,
Be it well understood,
I am not very likely to pass on to you."

"Be it so," was the answer, "but, oh! do not fail
To widely make public your marvellous tale."

"I mean to," I said,
"But you see, Mr. Stead,
At this sort of thing I'm a tyro—no better;
So instruct me, I pray,
In the right psychic way,
And make me henceforward your much-obliged debtor."

"That I will," he rejoined, "and the first thing to do
Is to find an intelligent Spookess for you—
A soul disembodied to take you in tow,
Explaining the matters you're yearning to know,
Subduing those doubts that you find so unruly—ah!
What you require is, in short, friend, a Julia!

"A Julia?"

"Yes; and acquit me of blame
If I burst into song at the sound of that name;
For, as to the wonders I work, I aver
That all my proficiency's owing to her.

Who is the prime undoubted source
Of my peculiar odic force?
Who speeds me on my mystic course?
My Julia!

Who stoops my fingers to incite
When automatic'lly I write?
Who guides my pen when I indite?
My Julia!

Who from her 'heavenly' mansion slips
To send me useful mundane tips;
And but occasion-ally trips?
My Julia!

Who chatters by the hour to me,
In terms affectionately free,
Of Spirit-land and Spookery?
My Julia!

Who holds me in a sweet regard
That by disputes is never marred,
And gives me 'copy' by the yard?
My Julia!"

Messrs. Redfern beg to announce that the models of Gowns, Coats, Mantles, &c., designed and prepared for winter wear, are now ready, and display the combined ideas of the latest London and Paris Houses.—27, New Bond-street, W.

Major Howe & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen—16, Coventry-st, W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

"Stay a minute," I cried, "ere more verses you sing,
And just tell me this—do you think it's the thing,
This Spooky attachment, which on your own showing
Already to lengths somewhat marked has been growing?
It's by no means my wish your new friendship to ban,
But remember, dear Stead, you're a family man,
A householder, too, and, I fancy, a deacon,
And, perforce, from your very position, a beacon;
So tell me this—that question I put for your good—
Are you sure that your course won't be misunderstood!"

Stead was very indignant. "Entirely," said he,
"You the motives misjudge that now animate me."

"Not at all," I replied; "but remember, I pray,
That some of your sceptical enemies may.
The world may be tempted to think something wrong
If this Spookish attachment you further prolong."

"I will risk it," cried Stead, "of my innocence sure,
I am ready the gibes of the world to endure."

"Very well, then," said I,
"But the minutes slip by,
So suppose you some more information supply.
When I entered this room, through the wall as you know,
You'd a pen in each hand."

"You are right, that was so.
For anxious, of course, not to keep spirits waiting,
I was writing the messages two were dictating."

"Two Spooks?" I exclaimed. "Fie! oh, fie! selfish man!"

"Yes," groaned Mr. Stead, "there is now Mary Ann;
A most forward minx,
Who all etiquette sinks,
And pushes herself, well, as much as she can.
My Julia, as 'twas, made my hand fairly ache,
But I put up with her for my 'Borderland's' sake.
But I don't think I can
Also stand Mary Ann.
No, the strain is too great; and besides, I may mention,
Already it's led to no little dissension;
For Julia is jealous, and, first in the field,
Is determined that she to no rival will yield.
So between them," said he,
"You can easily see
I am worried to death. By the way—happy thought!—
If you're anxious, indeed, to be properly taught
In what you define as the right psychic way,
Mary Ann will just do:
I'll transfer her to you—
I can spare her with pleasure. Come, what do you say?"

I shook my head firmly: "No, no!" I exclaimed,
"Mary Ann will not do for the purpose I named.
Just think what might happen in case you transferred her—
Spite, jealousy, anger, and possibly murder.
Mary Ann is your Spook, as most clearly she's shown,
And I want to develop a Spook of my own.
Do explain, then, the mode,
Point me out the right road,
Throw some light, I entreat, on the Spiritland code;
So that I, too, may try
Time and space to defy,
And a Julia secure as a mystic ally."

"By all means," said Stead, "if you'll give your attention,
The principal points of procedure I'll mention:—

The very first essential,
If you wish to be potential
In Spookland and to gain a Spook's esteem,
Is to cease with pride to swell up,
And to carefully develop
A modesty transcendent and supreme.

You must practice self negation,
Never countenance sensation,
Nor chances of publicity embrace;
But with proper baleful feeling,
Your identity concealing,
Must try yourself to utterly efface.

You must sit on your ambition,
Never hear about your mission,
Nor put a meek heroic pictures fall,
Nor with loud ejaculation
About moral reformation,
Assure your fellow men you have a call.

If your spirit's meek and lowly
You must not proclaim it solely
To heighten the success you have obtained;
Nor in egotistic manner
Flaunt your talent like a banner—
That tendency must always be restrained.

Pharisaic vaunts of virtue
Will not aid you, nay, they'll hurt you;
And, in short, I can't do better than repeat
That the way to Spookish favour
Is your daily life to flavour
With a modesty and diffidence complete.

Or, in other words, provided
You'd infallibly be guided
When you launch your bark upon the Spooky Sea,
There is only one thing needful—
To my history be heedful,
And, as closely as you're able, copy me!"

"Thanks! thanks!" I exclaimed, "for your excellent tip—
With such an example I surely can't trip,
Unless—and of this there's some danger, indeed—
I find I'm unable to follow your lead;
For by very few mortals, I fear, can be gained
Those heights transcendental to which you've attained."

Mr. Stead bowed his head.
"I'm delighted," he said,
"That you have by prejudice not been misled.
It is pleasant to find
One, at least, who's not blind
To the principles I in my life have entwin'd;
One, at least, who will own
That I always have shown
A zest for supreme self-effacement alone.
All the same, though," said he, "as the matter now stands,
I wish you would take Mary Ann off my hands.
One Spook is enough; and with Julia, you know,
I find that a second one's sadly de trop.

Take, oh! take my Mary Ann,
Don't, oh! don't refuse her lightly;
You will find her, for a Spook,
Quite exceptionally sprightly.
Wayward?—Yes; sometimes she snaps,
If you seem at all to slight her.
Forward?—Well, a little p'rhaps—
But such a telepathic writer!
Come, dismiss your other plan,
Take, oh! take my Mary Ann!

She is not so strict as Julia,
Nay, she has in several cases
Given me, the day before,
Tips (quite straight) for coming races;
She, in short—and this is what Makes me press so my petition—
Most undoubtedly has got
A somewhat sportive disposition.
Therefore barke your other plan,
Take, oh! take my Mary Ann!"

PEUNGST FRÈRES' EXTRA QUALITY CHAMPAGNES.—This select brand can be supplied through any Wine Merchant, or by the Agents, J. L. PEUNGST & Co., 23, Crutched Friars, E.C.

JOHANNIS, King of Natural Table Waters, promotes appetite, assists digestion, prolongs life. The Lancet says, "Johannis Water is of exceptional purity and excellence." Springs, Zollhaus, Germany. London Offices, 25, Regent-street, S.W.

Spooks, you see, are moved by motives
Just like those which here impel us;
And, to tell the simple truth,
Julia's just a little jealous.
Two is company, you know,
Whether on this earth or off it;
So, as Mary Ann must go,
Why not make my loss your profit?
Come, dismiss your other plan,
Take, oh! take my Mary Ann!"

"You seem very anxious indeed," answered I,
"That the skill of your Spook Mary Ann I should try;
But from all that you've said and have hinted of her,
It is Julia, I think, as my Spook I'd prefer."

Then the features of Stead grew portentously stern,
And a fire as of wrath in his eyes seemed to burn;
And his nostrils they quivered, his bosom it heaved,
And with almost a snort he his feelings relieved,
As he cried, whilst he brought down his fist with a blow,
"What, give up my Julia? Oh, never! Oh, no!"
And whilst I sat silent his face seemed to change,
In his eyes came a look of far-offedness strange,
And an exquisite smile all his features suffused
As low to himself in a murmur he mused:—

Again that face I seem to see,
Again that well-known look;
And by the pricking of my thumbs
Full well I know 'tis she who comes—
My own, my guiding Spook!
Spookylujah!
'Tis my Julia!
My own special Spook!

In the mists that o'er me float
I a face can see,
'Tis a face I know full well,
Though 'tis crown'd with asphodel,
Oh, my Spook! 'tis thee!
Spook "peculiah,"
Faithful Julia!
Thee, and only thee!

"Backward," Stead added, "old Time takes its flight,
Methinks I'm a boy again just for to-night;
Jacket and knickers once more I am wearing,
And, my school book in hand, I am taking an airing.
Sharp-cut on my brain is the well-recalled scene:
Look! yonder's a lassie, not more than thirteen.
Still swiftly the tide of old memories sets,
To that meekest, demurest, that coyest of pets;
And that bad, mocking boy, somewhat smaller than I,
Whom I laid in the dust—him I also descry.
And e'en as I gaze on that little girl's face,
The features of Julia I'm able to trace.
No insult to her was I able to brook:
Her knight-errant was I, and she now is my Spook!
But what am I saying?—what's this that I do?
I'm a staid married man—very true, very true!
But yet after all I need feel no alarm,
To dote on a spirit can't be any harm.
No, no, as I told you so sternly just now,
The slightest reflection I will not allow;
To the world I the charms of my Spook will proclaim,
All England shall echo with her honoured name;
I'll tell to the universe all that I feel,
I will not my Spookish attachment conceal.
It is innocent quite, I can safely disclose it,
Nor take it to heart though all Wimbledon knows it!

"Quite so," I replied, "there is nothing Byronic
About a connection so purely platonic,
But you've made it quite clear that I'm pleading in vain,
When the transfer of Julia I try to obtain."

"Can you wonder," asked Stead, "that I treasure her so?
For more like myself she seems daily to grow.
Whate'er she dictates is quite certain to please,
For she frames all her thoughts in the purest Steadese.
Her style is my own, and her sentiments, too;
We hold on all points an identical view.
She likes what I like—hence she dotes upon me,
And if I have a prejudice so, too, has she.
Whereas Mary Ann is my opposite quite—
A froward, provoking, and harassing sprite,
Who loves to recall days I wish to forget,
And the troubles I had at the Pall Mall Gazette.
In short, I her messages dread with alarm strong,
For she frequently makes me write 'Thompson' and 'Armstrong!'"

"Ah," said I, "I believe that I too can throw light
On the doings of your very mischievous sprite.
She's been rounding on you, my dear Stead, I'm afraid
In a way that must damage your Spooky crusade."

"Then you've met with her, eh?"

"Not as yet, face to face,
But with something in which I her action can trace.
You know that man 'Baldwin'?"

(Stead turned very white.)

"And the Parson who tested his strange second sight?
You have heard of him also?"

"Yes, yes! What of him?"
Cried Stead, in a voice most suggestively grim.

"Simply this," I replied. "I have heard of them, too,
And the more that I learn of their odd interview,
The more I'm convinced 'twas arranged by the plan
Of your skittish and mischievous Spook, Mary Ann!
The fiasco and scandal are due to her jinks."

"To be sure!" exclaimed Stead, "it is just like the minx!
It is part of her plot to compel me to take her,
And a kind of a duplicate Julia to make her."

Just then, though, there came from the walls a loud tapping,
And two easy-chairs commenced noisily rapping,
Whilst (I tell you no fable)
The large office table
Began to ascend with a weird kind of flapping.
And a footstool, agog,
Leaping first, as a frog,
Went bounding along at Stead's heels like a dog.
Then the gas-jets turned blue,
And a pallor undue
Imparted to Stead such a "Burne-Jonesy" hue,
And the rattling of bones
As they clanked over stones,
And a constant succession of blood-curdling moans
So preyed on my nerves, that I bounced from my seat,
And exclaimed, "I must go," as I got on my feet.

"Nay, be seated," said Stead,
"There is nothing to dread;
This is merely a little reception of mine.
To all kinds of ghosts
From all parts of our coasts,
I'm 'At Home' ev'ry Tuesday—six-thirty till nine.

I have also arranged that to-night I'll receive
Those people who in my new 'daily' believe,
And who're only too glad to be able to chance
The twelve months' subscription I ask in advance;

"Euxesis," a delightful shave without Soap; a tube of Euxesis and razor being the only necessaries. It softens the stiffest beard, and leaves the skin cool, smooth, and free from irritation. The genuine bears signature A. S. Lloyd in black, and Aimée Lloyd in red ink. Sold by chemists and Stores. Manufactory, 3, Spur st., Leicester sq.

Hôtel Burlington, Boscombe, Bournemouth. Perfectly unique!!! Over 200 rooms, practically designed, sumptuously appointed, and fitted throughout with all the comforts of a well-arranged country mansion. Electric light. Passenger lift. Acres of matured grounds sloping to the Pier. Most moderate tariff, forwarded by Manager, or obtainable at the Burlington and Buckingham Palace Hotels, London. Bournemouth East Station.

Do stay, then, awhile, for I'd like you to see What thousands there are believe dollars in me."

But his plea was in vain,
I refused to remain.
"Very well, then," said he, "since I can't you detain,
And since naught I can say
Can make you give way,
Or consent to take over my Spook Mary Ann,
I the point will not press,
But will wish you success
In evolving a Spook of your own—if you can."

Then he bade me "good bye";
"Good-night," answered I,
And, without further talk, my departure I took,
Resolved not to rest
Till I also possessed,
That up-to-date adjunct, a dictating Spook.

In descending the stairs
I had one or two scares,
As some very odd Spooks hurried by me in pairs!
But I managed to crawl,
Keeping close to the wall,
Till I'd made my way down once again to the hall;
And then, when the mediums and others began
To hustle me, p'rhaps on some pre-arranged plan,
I had merely to shout the word "Maskelyne!" twice,
To make them creep scowling away in a trice!

Out again in the street
Still a fog most complete
Filled one's nostrils and mouth with a savour bituminous,
But I saw from the road
That above Stead's abode
There hovered a halo—suggestively luminous.

TRUTH at this juncture paused awhile, intending to resume,
But looking up observed a great excitement in the room;
Chaplin was running sharply off impelled by some strange force,
Lowther and Sir Charles Russell, too, were bent on the same course;
Whilst Randolph, Joseph, Jesse, and at least a dozen more,
With curious unanimity were hedging t'wards the door.

"Stay, stay," cried TRUTH, "my narrative by no means yet is finished,
And what I've still to tell you'll find of int'rest undiminished.
Come, Mr. Chaplin, can't you wait? Are you compelled to go?"

The Squire of Blankney halted dead, and muttered, "Oh, dear, no!
In fact, I—that is—don't you know—was thinking"——

"Well, Sir, what?"

"Why, that as Stead, you say, no use for 'Mary Ann' has got;
He might the offer made to you repeat, perhaps, to me,
And just pass on that Sportive Spook, if she should still be free!"

"Yes," said Lord Randolph, "what you said of Mary Ann just now
Implied that she's a useful Spook, and I, let me avow,
If I must have a Spook—and 'tis the fashion now, I find—
Most certainly would one prefer that's sportively inclined."

"I gather, then," TRUTH made reply, "from what has been confessed,
That many here are with the chic of Mary Ann impressed,
And that these, therefore, wish at once to Mowbray House to go
To see if she is still on hand—now, tell me, is it so?

Cried many voices: "Yes, it is!"

Said TRUTH, "Then, in that case,
You'd better start away at once upon your Wild Spook chase."
"One moment," Doctor Parker said, "no favour should be shown.
For Mary Ann I also have an inkling strong, I own;
I think she might by discipline be very useful made,
And at the City Temple could in many ways lend aid;
My proposition, therefore, is that none of us shall stir
Until TRUTH gives the word—that is, we'll leave the start to her."

"Agreed! Agreed!" a chorus came, and so, without delay,
As soon as all were ready, TRUTH cried, "One! Two! Three! Away!"
Who shall describe the fierce stampede that instantly ensued?
Who shall relate the eagerness of that wild multitude?
Out into Carteret-street they rushed, at quite a breakneck pace;
By the Aquarium kept up a well-contested race.
The public, as the runners passed, much wondered what their prank meant,
And with amazement saw them turn, all panting, down the Embankment.
On, on they pressed, with Chaplin, Joe, and Randolph in the van,
En route for Mowbray House and Stead, and, p'rhaps for Mary Ann!
And, just as they were lost to view, up Norfolk-street proceeding,
'Twas noticed, marvellous to state, that Chaplin still was leading.

* * * * *

TRUTH, of her audience deprived, of course did not conclude
The story that she had to tell in virtual solitude.
Still, the strange scenes through which she'd pass'd with enterprise so bold Deserve narration, and her tale shall, therefore, now be told.

"Truth" Tries to Raise a Spook.

LIKE strokes of doom, with solemn boom, Big Ben had struck eleven;
Above—a cloak of murky clouds shut out the light of Heaven;
Below—save for the measured tread of p'liceman on his beat—
There was from end to end no sign of life in Carteret-street;
Till came the sound of wheels, and then of carriage-lamps the loom,
As at TRUTH Office-door there stopped a natty single brough'm.
The footman bounded from the box, the door was opened wide,
And TRUTH's ethereal form thereon emerged from the inside;
Her lamp, as ever, in one hand, her other held a key,
With which she gained admission to her home all noiselessly,
Then putting up the chain with care, and bolting fast the door,
She held her lamp aloft and gained her room on the first-floor.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.—10,000 at moderate prices, at PARKINS & GOTTO'S, Oxford-st. Novelties in silver, best electro, & new leathers, card-cases, purses, pocket-books, cigar-cases, games, toys, children's books, bibles, prayer-books, church services, &c. Catalogue free.

"And now," thought she, as down she sat, "the fateful hour is nigh
When I my first experiment in Spookery must try.
Is all prepared? Now, let me see, there has been much to think of.
And one omission may dash down the cup I yearn to drink of.
Imprimis—most important this—I've had a first-class dinner:
A quite essential point, I'm told, for every young beginner.
Next, I in ghastly literature myself for days have steeped:
Poe, Le Fanu, and Mrs. Crowe, each upon each I've heaped;
Materialistic principles, I've left them in the lurch,
I've joined, too, the Society for Psychical Research;
And need I say, in order to evoke a Spook more readily,
I've conned each page of 'Borderland' most steadfastly and steadily.
So far so good; the only thing that I have still to do
Is to prepare this room, and then attempt my daring coup."

With that of windows and of doors she took most careful stock,
Saw that each curtain close was drawn, each key turned in its lock;
The fire still glimmering in the grate, with screen shut out from sight,
And turned the gas out—leaving but one burner just alight.
Even her lamp she left untrimmed, and, thoroughly to mask it,
Placed over it, upon her right, a large waste-paper basket.
Then, wheeling up her easiest chair close to her writing-table—
(The sheets of paper there spread out to see she just was able)—
She took her seat, and, having seized a fountain-pen, began
In whispers hoarse to thus invoke the spirits' ghostly clan:—

Spooks! wherever you may be,
Spooks! whatever your degree,
Spooks! in pity look on me,
See me waiting here.
Come! ye Julianic band,
Come! and use my willing hand,
Come! at once, you understand—
Oh! appear! appear!

By the shrouds that wrap the dead,
By the corpse-light round them shed—
In the name of William Stead
Tell me you are near.
Come! and make this table rap,
Make these chair-legs tip and tap,
Give my cheek a phantom slap—
Oh! appear! appear!

Let your spirit hands be seen
Waving over yonder screen.
Come! and smack the tambourine
In my listening ear.
Come! and banish all my doubt,
Come! and blow this gas-jet out
And bang the furniture about—
Oh! appear! appear!

Big Ben boomed twelve—the spectral hour; the hour when graveyards gape;
When wraiths are seen, when vampires fly, and ghosts take human shape;
When apparitions gleam and glide, when grisly wehr-wolves prowl;
And when, above the ban-dog's yelp, is heard the banshee's howl.

What wonder, then, that as the stroke of midnight reached her ear,
Truth, though in her experiment resolved to persevere,
Felt just a little creepiness, and, fearful what was there,
Was not at all inclined to cast a glance behind her chair.
Moreover, as she watched the spot whereon her mirror lay,
She noticed that a spectral light above it seemed to play.
And, even as she longer looked, the phosphorescence grew
'Till all around her spread a mist of pale, unearthly blue.

Then a long-sustained groan
Turned her heart to a stone,
Whilst her pulse waxed most wildly unstable,
For out of the cloud
Came of phantoms a crowd,
All circling in turn round the table.
At each one she clutches,
But nothing she touches,
Save the air, which is chill as an icicle;
Whilst the ghosts, with much squealing,
Float up to the ceiling,
Where each disappears on a bicycle.
With a whirr and a spin
Yet another creeps in,
And circles the table on all-fours,
And it's easy to trace
It has Chamberlain's face,
Though its legs are undoubtedly Balfour's.
Then this Spook splits to four,
Who stand out on the floor,
And Gladstone and Balfour advancing,
A most lively quadrille,
Marked by wonderful skill,
With Joseph and Harcourt are dancing.
Then they melt through the wall,
With a whoop and a call,
And return with a comical caper,
As down with a thump
On the table they dump
A parcel wrapped up in brown paper.
Some one shouts "Dynamite!"
But the Speaker cries "Right!"
In the "Journals" the fact duly noting;
And ere Truth can think,
In a sea of blue ink
The Victoria before her is floating;
And there on her deck,
In a suit of loud check,
And his eyes to his telescope glueing,
The Kaiser, 'midst cheers,
All the Unionist Peers
Who "sat on" Home Rule is reviewing.
"Re-form!" he exclaims,
And the ship is in flames;
But instantly out of the embers
A new House is there,
With the Queen in the chair,
And the Peers changed to Radical members,
Who vote with a will
An improved Home Rule Bill;
And before the poor Tories can rally
They are borne from their feet
By the crowd of élite,
Who are rushing to Vine's Royal ballet.
And the neighbourhood yells,
For the Institute bells
Are brazenly chiming out, "Daisy!"
And before they are stopped,
A fat Rajah has dropped,
And half Cromwell-road has gone crazy.
Then the Institute fades,
And some sensitive shades
Cry "Fie!" and put up an umbrella;
For the Marquis of Lorne
In a kilt, somewhat torn,
Is dancing a wild tarantella!
But Truth chuckles gaily,
And then the Old Bailey
Is opened, 'twould seem, for the season;

Lennox's Whisky.—Special, 48s.; Choice, 42s.; Highland, Malt, and Scotch, 36s. per dozen each. Dumfries, N.B., and 41, Pall Mall, London, S.W.

A ROYALTY RAREE SHOW.

For Rhodes and H. Loch,
Standing both in the dock,
Are tried by Lo Ben for high treason.
TRUTH appears in full fig
In a robe and a wig,
Sums up in some sentences "stilty."
When the jury exclaim,
"It's a very old game!"
And bring in the mine owners "Guilty!"
Says TRUTH, "I concur,"
And before she can stir
Mrs. Grundy cries out "I am *un*done!"
For a cortège approaches
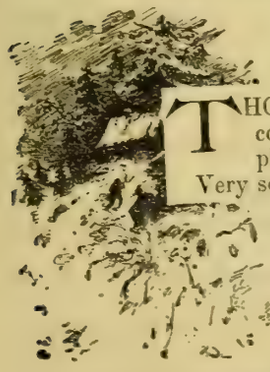
In gilded State coaches,
And Zola is Lord Mayor of London!
There's a humming and drumming
And lively tum tumming
And the strain on TRUTH'S nerves grows yet tauter;
And her brain seems to spin
As the ceiling falls in
And she screams for fresh air and for water!
Bang, rattle, and smash –
"Oh! What is that crash?
Why, why the superlative quiver?"
There's no time to ask more,
For prone on the floor
TRUTH awakes with a shudder and shiver.

She is stained with the ink
She's been trying to drink;
She is greasily damp
With the oil of her lamp;
Her arm is asleep,
Her flesh is a-creep;
In her neck she's a crick,
In her shoulder a rick;
In her ankle a pain,
The result of a sprain;
And it can't be denied
She's a stitch in her side;
And, in short, what she feels
From her head to her heels,
Her stiffness and soreness,
And sort of all-o'erness,
Suggest the sad plight
Of those who all night
Push through crowded "At-Homes" and hot crush-rooms;
"What is it?" says she,
"And oh! where can I be?"
Then her thoughts she collects,
And the truth she suspects.
"Yes," she cries with much force,
"It was nightmare, of course;
It's as clear as the day
Why I've dreamt in this way——
Oh! why did I eat all those mushrooms?"

"Truth" Raises a Spook.



THOUGH at first she was discouraged by the failure of her plan,
Very soon fresh preparations for a séance TRUTH began.
But, meanwhile, she'd learned a lesson, and there's little need to tell
That before her second vigil she did not dine late and well.
For success she was so eager that in no way would she risk it,
So she merely took black coffee and an Abernethy biscuit;
And her lamp and inkstand putting where they could not come to grief,
Sat her down to test still further Mr. Stead's most strange belief.
Every thought of worldly matters to eliminate she tried,
Doubt, misgiving, and suspicion put completely on one side.
And upon her Spookish venture most desirous to embark—
Eager, earnest, and expectant, watched and waited in the dark.

Ticked the clock and sped the moments, minute after minute past,
'Till the oddest of sensations she began to feel at last.
It was not that she was drowsy, it was not that she was dazed,
Yet a strange hypnotic feeling came upon her as she gazed;
And upon the sheets of paper on her writing-table spread
A mysterious phosphorescence most undoubtedly was shed.
Still she sat there without motion, and a blue and flickering flame
Played above those sheets of paper, and they crackled as it came;
But she only sat and wondered till her cheek was lightly smitten,
And a voice like liquid music said, "Oh, read what we have written!"
With the same a light shone brightly all around and overhead,
And this is what before her on her writing-pad TRUTH read:—

To Truth.

Take courage, have no kind of fear!
In Spookland thou'rt well known;
Thy deeds most worthy ones we deem
For years and years in Spook esteem
Thy reputation's grown;
'Tis not in vain, then, thou appealest,
Of course, we've put thee on our free-list!
Yes, TRUTH, nem. con.,
We've placed thee on
Our most exclusive free-list!

A score of "Julias" gladly wait
To carry out thy plans;
If thou the word wilt only say,
Thou canst command without delay
A thousand "Mary Anns;"
We gladly listen when thou kneelest,
Henceforth thou'rt on our Spookland free-list!
Yes, TRUTH, nem. con.,
We've placed thee on
Our highly-privileged free-list!

And when in future thou may'st wish
For us your Spooks to be,
These are the simple rules by which Thou may'st at any season switch
A spirit on to thee;
For we have heard when thou appealest,
And we have put thee on our free-list!
And this is all
For which we call
From thee upon our free-list!

Shirts for Evening wear, with Pique and Fancy Fronts Shirt Tailors.—SAMPSON & Co, 270, Oxford-street, W.

"HEADACHES CURED."—BISHOP'S GRANULAR EFFERVESCENT CITRATE OF CAFFEINE perfectly removes pains in the head, arising from biliousness and headaches of every description. Prescribed by all the medical profession as the safest and surest remedy for this distressing ailment. A grand morning restorative. Can be had of all Chemists. See that you get "Bishop's" the original inventor.—A. BISHOP & SONS, 48, Spelman-st., London, E.

The Simple Rules.

First of all, then, to begin,
Do not think of Maskelyne.

Lift your chair from off the ground,
And turn it twice completely round.

Over your left shoulder throw,
Of black ink six drops or so.

Let no thought of yours recur
To Huxley or Ray Lankester.

When you feel the influence coming,
With your heels keep up a drumming;

And when your elbow gives a jerk,
Square your arms and set to work.

Much delighted at receiving this high mark of Spookish favour,
Truth resolved at once to act on the encouragement it gave her.
So without delay proceeded, her excitement growing warm,
All those little points of detail, just suggested, to perform.
Nor was she for long kept waiting, for the pin-and-needle feeling
Was so rapidly developed that it almost set her squealing,
Whilst the jerking of her elbow was so purposelessly rough,
That with rising indignation she exclaimed, "Come! that's enough!"
For her pen, instead of writing, made successive vicious dots,
Digging sharply in the paper, and producing endless blots.
Scratching here and skating thither, faster far than she could think,
But resulting—well, in nothing but a wicked waste of ink.
Meanwhile the pins-and-needles up her arms grew more acute,
And the jerking of both elbows, still more wildly absolute,
Till unable to endure it, she bounced sharply from her chair,
And exclaimed, "This is outrageous, and I will not stand it there!
Spooks you may be, but decorum there should surely be in Hades.
Spooks you may be, but no matter, do be gentlemen!—and ladies!
I may be myself a tyro, but each one of you's a dunce,
If you think that twenty spirits can employ my hands at once.

Spooks! who would my fingers use,
Don't your privilege abuse.
Don't for pity's sake forget
There's a thing called etiquette;
If you answer to my call,
Come in turn or not at all;
Form in line and make a queue,
Or I'll have naught to do with you.

This expression of opinion, with much emphasis declaimed,
Of their boorish impoliteness made the spirits so ashamed,
That in less than half a minute Truth perceived a great improvement,
For her arms, as though by magic, ceased their rough and jerky movement;
The sharp prickings came no longer, as she took her seat again,
And of all these Spooks impatient none now tried to use her pen.

Pleased to find that her remonstrance had not been without effect,
She resolved by further caution her position to protect;
So the Spooks again addressing, rather sternly, she began
For the future 'twill be better to proceed upon a plan.
Understand, then, please, quite clearly that I never can allow
You to rush at me at random as so many did just now.
I will take you in succession, if you've anything to say,
And to those I wish to talk with, intimations will convey.

A Spook writes about Royalty.

"First," said Truth, "I'd like a message from that Spook, whoe'er it be, That's best qualified to speak about our Royal Family."
And she was not long kept waiting, for at once she felt a jerk,
And her pen with just one splutter set impulsively to work.
"In Spookland," so the message ran, "existence to us brings Repeated chances to observe most closely Queens and Kings.
They positively swarm up here, and as they keep no more
The Royal attributes they had upon an earthly shore,
With every kind of potentate in daily life we mix,
And with a freedom quite unknown upon your side the Styx
Brought, then, with crowds of Sovereigns diurnally in touch—
I'm bound to say that, as a lot, they don't impress us much.
Divested of their crowns and robes in which they used to figure,
They rouse more pity than respect, and sometimes cause a snigger.
Your English Kings, especially the ones of later date,
Adapt themselves but poorly to an immaterial state.
I often meet the Georges of your present reigning line,
And, in candour, I must tell you that as Spooks they do not shine."

"Never mind about the Georges," murmured Truth; "they've had their day;
But what have you about the Queen still ruling us to say?"

"Nothing but good," the Spook wrote on, "she, as from Spookland seen,
Appears to us to be a wise and most sagacious Queen.
A Queen who is the mother of the land o'er which she's reigning—
One of the strongest arguments for Monarchy remaining."

"And what about the Prince of Wales?" Truth mentally inquired,
"What are the sentiments that he in Spookland has inspired?"

Major Howe & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

Christmas Presents.—10,000 at moderate prices, at Parkins & Gotto's, Oxford-st., W. Novelties in silver, best electro, and new leathers, portrait frames, albums, writing-cases, dressing-cases, bags, blotters, ink-stands, desks, opera-glasses, purses, &c. List free.

"The Prince," the pen went on to write, "too oft in days gone bye
Has caused the loyalest of Spooks a not infrequent sigh.
We've seen him, quite regardless of his name and rank and fame,
Too prone to make enjoyment his first thought, and end,
and aim.
We've seen him — "

TRUTH laid down the pen. "What's past is past," said she,
"It's not a bit of good to write of bygone things for me.
This raking up of gossip old I can't and won't allow.
If you must write about the Prince, describe what he is now.
For instance, I should like to know how you up there compute
The value of his latest scheme, the Imperial Institute.
Come, will some Spook oblige me?"

Then she felt a different thrill,
And her hand, now freshly guided, wrote:—"Oh, TRUTH,
I can and will.
I, for reasons I am anxious not to publicly make known,
Have observed with special interest how that edifice has grown.
I remember the old gardens which have now become its site,
And I watched their abolition with unspeakable delight,
For (again I hide my reasons) to the heart I oft was torn
When I saw those sacred Gardens made a glorified
Cremorne;
And I moaned the zeal mistaken which had laboured to install
Such a haunt of giddy pleasure, oh! so near the Albert
Hall.
And I saw with satisfaction that, though many tried so hard
The al fresco entertainments still to cherish and to guard,
Yet that others, far discreeter, very sternly set their face
'Gainst the permanent retention of so frivolous a place;
And I'll not attempt to tell you what my feelings were that day
When I found the wiser section were allowed to have their way.
And still livelier my joy was when—those horrid gardens
bann'd—
I received the blithesome tidings that the Imp. Inst. had been planned.

'It is better late than never,' I exclaimed, 'for now at last
There is to be atonement for the follies of the past.
On the spot where coloured fountains splashed o'er revellers their spray
Soon the pundits of the Empire will assemble day by day;
Where the strains of Strauss's music made the classes
pirouette
There the scientific show-case shall in evidence be set;
Where Society assembled in an after-dinner mood,
Shall be seen Colonial fossils and (in tins) Colonial food;
And upon the very terrace where the laddies wooed their lasses
Mrs. Grundy soon will listen to Professors in blue glasses.'

"Such were my anticipations, as I gazed upon the scene;
Fancy, then, my disappointment, how uncomfortably keen,
When I saw the Imp. Inst. open, and the truth upon me came
That it would be Scientific and Imperial but in name.
You have doubtless been to see it, tell me, then, do people go
To examine the collections?"

TRUTH responded with a "No!"

"Do they go to solve the problems of the Empire day by day?
Do they go to study blue books?"

"No, indeed," cried TRUTH, "not they!"

"Does the Newfoundlander hie there the New Zealander to meet?
Does the Demerara planter go Sir Baden Powell to greet?
Do the Matabele go there to acquire our modern modes?
Does Lo Ben the situation there discuss with Cecil Rhodes?
Are his Envoys warmly welcomed by Lord Ripon in the hall?
Do they settle there the questions that for settlement may call?
Do Ulstermen go down there with the men of Cork to smoke?
Are Kanakas ever brought there Freedom's spirit to invoke?
Do our Indian Officials with the hill-men there debate?
Do Lord Cromer and the Mahdi there engage in tête-à-tête?
Do the Cannucks seek the Cornstalks to talk over 'Federation'?
Do the Council Chambers echo with new schemes of legislation?
Tell me, will they ever echo?"

"P'rhaps they will and p'rhaps they won't,
But at present," TRUTH responded, "most decidedly they don't!"

"You are right," the Spook indited, with a very vicious stroke;
"All the edifying features of the building are a joke.
The Museum is deserted though the dining-room is full;
No one gazes at the samples of jute-fibre and of wool;
There's no crowd to note the flora (dried and pressed) of Pondoland,
For the Papuan statistics there's, so far, been no demand;
And those somewhat risqué figures which depict the Punjaub races
Have been only seen at present by the men who dust the cases.
And who can say the building has improved the chance of peace?
Or, in Africa for instance, has caused massacres to cease?
Who can say it has cemented—save, alas, with blood it be—
The possessions of your Empire that are found across the sea?
Who, in brief, can fail to notice, if he use his commonsense,
That this latest costly hobby is a Palace of Pretence?

"Now I'm very, very anxious moderation to evince,
And I do not wish too harshly for all this to blame the Prince.
But I think that in all fairness he at least should take some share
In the censure the promoters of this failure have to bear.
He two managers appointed, Sir F. Abel and S. Vine,
But I fear 'tis to the latter that his sympathies incline;
For it seems to me past question that whilst Abel tries in vain,
Any special recognition for his efforts to obtain;
Sir S. Vine, who is a showman of a very pushing sort,
Can the Institute's prime purpose in a way most marked distort.
I, in short, though such an effort by a Spirit may seem queer,
Have embodied in some stanzas how the facts to me appear.

JOHANNIS, King of Natural Table Waters, promotes appetite, assists digestion, prolongs life. The Lancet says, "Johannis Water is of exceptional purity and excellence." Springs, Zollhaus, Germany. London Offices, 25, Regent-street, S.W.

LIQUEUR OF THE GRAND CHARTREUSE.—This delicious Liqueur, which has come so much into public favour, on account of its wonderful properties of aiding digestion and preventing dyspepsia, can now be had of all the principal Wine and Spirit Merchants throughout the kingdom.—Sole Consignee, W. DOYLE, 35, Crutched Friars, London, E.C.

Vine and Abel at the entrance of their shows I seem to see,
Whilst the Prince, high up between them, beats his drum and cries with glee :—

Rub-a-dub! Rub-a-dub!
Come, join my new Club!
The mixture inside may be funny,
But it's easy to choose
Only what will amuse,
As soon as you've paid down your money.

Abel's stuffy museum,
And dull Athenæum,
They need not annoy you new comers.
They are here for a blind,
And they are not designed
To at all interfere with Sir Somers.

Sir F. Abel. This way! This way! Imperialists! This way
let me direct you all!
My exhibition you will find most highly intellectual.

Sir S. Vine. Walk up! walk up! This side! this side! to show your ardent loyalty;
This side for music, coloured lamps, al fresco fun, and royalty!

Sir F. Abel. This way for object lessons in your Empire's wide immensity!

Sir S. Vine. This way! This way! if you'd indulge a frolicsome propensity.

Sir F. Abel. This way! for specimens of all the Empire's chief commodities!

Sir S. Vine. This way to see the latest fads of all the social oddities!

Sir F. Abel. This way for diagrams and charts and up-to-date blue-bookery!

Sir S. Vine. This way for suppers à la carte, with most recherché cookery.

"What ensues," the Spook said sadly, "you can readily surmise,
Sir F. Abel is thrown over and without the least disguise,
'Tis in vain on his collections that he places his reliance,
For the Fellows won't be bothered with his lectures or his science;
They prefer about the Gardens, cheered by melody, to wander,
And deserted by the public, poor Sir F. has time to ponder
On the history of Cordite, and to think that on the whole
He'd explosives rather trade in than an Institute control.

"Can you wonder, then, that sadly I regard the Prince's fad?
For although a rare and splendid opportunity he had,
He quite lost it when he weakly let his underlings create
This most vulgar imitation of a Vauxhall up to date;
Instead of wisely founding what, past question or dispute,
Would in the highest sense be an Imperial Institute!"

"Spook," said Truth, "with your forebodings and your censures I agree,
I fear that our new Institute's a failure bound to be.
And that it is too certain it will be its fate to fall
To a sort of Royal Circus and Imperial Music hall.
Thus indeed I cannot wonder you should sorely count the cost
Of so rare an opportunity deliberately lost."

For Chaps, Roughness of Skin, &c., use "Glycerine and Honey Jelly." Sold by Chemists in Metallic Tubes, 6d. and 1s.; or post free 6 or 12 stamps, from the Sole Manufacturers, Osborne, Bauer, & Cheeseman, Sole Proprietors of "The Incomparable Smelling Salts," as supplied to the Queen.—19, Golden-square, Regent-street, London.

The Royal Marriage from a Spookland Point of View.

"In the next place, I wish some Spook-comments to get"
(Thought Truth) "on that striking event
Which enlivened last season, and sent England mad
To so wide and so great an extent.
Need I say what I mean? No, of course you will guess
'Tis the Wedding I have in my eye;
And some competent Spook, I have not the least doubt,
With my wish will be pleased to comply.
My views on the subject, already well known,
There is now no occasion to state;
But I think it may serve a most excellent end
If the views of Spook-land we collate."

Scarce a minute had passed when a thrill down her arm
Told Truth that her thoughts had been read,
And this is the answer that flowed from her pen
To the writing-pad under it spread :—

"Our notion is that, as a rule" (the message thus began),
"All Royal weddings are arranged upon a foolish plan.
We think the Royal personage has but a sorry fate,
He must not even be allowed to choose himself a mate.
The Duke, and Earl, and Commoner may marry whom they please,
But Royal Princes, they are hedged about with strict decrees,
The eligible brides for them are few and far between,
Nor dare they farther go afield lest statesmen intervene.
Nor must they single men remain, that refuge, too's,
denied them,
Reasons of State demand that they should have their wives beside them;
And so, compelled to marry, yet restricted in their choice,
In that which life may make or mar they've virtually no voice.

"What's the result? Look Europe through, and many a Royal line
You'll light on in most woful state of weakness and decline.
In-and-in breeding tells its tale in many a shocking
way—
In atrophy, in feebleness, in premature decay;
Nature to those who break her laws sure retribution deals,
There's scarce a Royal cupboard but some skeleton conceals.

"Amongst your aristocracy this truth has long been known,
And many noble houses to the winds caste-laws have thrown;
Lords have sought brides upon the stage, Ladies have stooped to trade,
The bluest blooded dukes and earls mésalliances have made.
May Fair's gone to the Mansion House; Belgravia's linked with Bow,
Blue blood has mixed with soap, and coal, and beer, and calico;
And with most excellent results to lineages of length,
New blood transfused into their veins has brought new vital strength.

Two Truefitts in Bond st. H. P. Truefitt, 13 & 14, Old Bond-st.
Two Truefitts in Bond-st. H. P. Truefitt, 13 & 14, Old Bond-st.

The fluid that so feebly flowed now courses on apace,
New grafts upon an ancient stock have saved full many a race;
Whereas in those old families, exclusive in their caste,
That live in high-bred solitude and mumble o'er the past,
We see the splendid gifts which brought their ancestry such fame,
Die feebly out in scions who inherit but a name.

Thus, a very famous war man was Fitz-Roderick the Norman,
And a very great Statesman, too;
He had courage to act,
He had brains, he had tact,
And grit to carry things through.
He was stalwart and renowned for his agility;
In God and in himself he put his trust;
He was loyal but no trace had of servility,
Strong-willed, but, in his fashion, strictly just.
And he founded a family strong and great
That in many capacities served the State.

In the records of past ages, you will light on frequent pages,
Which tell of its deeds of worth;
And strong in its pride,
It was never allied
Save with those of noble birth.
But who is there that can't its fatal folly see,
In trying thus distinction to secure?
For thanks to this most suicidal policy
It's unreplenished blood's grown thin and poor.
Aye, sad is the state one must avow,
Of the head of that high-bred family now.

He's a weedy little fellow, with a nose like Punchinello,
And a sloping Aztec chin;
He's a neck too long,
He has nerves all wrong,
And a fixed and vacuous grin.
He's anæmic, and averse to all society,
He has scarcely brains enough to feel regrets;
And his stunted little taste soon finds satiety
In pints of sparkling hock and cigarettes.
Just look at this puny aristocrat
And the moral is obvious.—Verb. sap. sat!

"The moral, I repeat, is clear—let Nature have her way;
Do not the progress of true love with harsh restrictions stay.
Do not coerce your Royalties? Are they not human, too?
Have they not all propensities and impulses like you?
Have they not hearts that palpitate, and souls that feel desire?
And yet you turn the throne into a sort of funeral pyre,
On which, too often, all for which youth in its zest has yearned
Is, to the sound of marriage-bells, unnaturally burned."

"Too true! too true! O Spook," cried TRUTH, "yet very much, I fear,
The happy change of which you write is anything but near;
Dynastic reasons, State affairs, will still, methinks, prevail;
Cupid, bound tightly with red tape, is destined still to fail.
Princes may, as you say, have hearts, exactly like us others,
But cunning Statecraft won't admit that they are men and brothers.
However, I am glad to think our future King has found—
Or, stay! has been allowed to find—a bride on English ground;
It's something, surely, in these days, when Germans are so rife,
She even should approximate unto an English wife."

"Precisely" (so the Spook wrote on), "I quite agree with you,
And of the wedding, we up here, should take a sanguine view;
Should think 'twas destined happiness from Fortune to exact,
But for one sad and sinister and inauspicious fact.
I mean the evil influence, strong in malefic might,
'Gainst which Prince George and Princess May incessantly must fight.
Had they but coursing in their blood a strong plebeian strain,
Then they might hope successfully the struggle to maintain;
But nurtured, as they both have been, to look on Royal birth
As something wisdom far above, and far transcending worth;
Breathing a tainted atmosphere of legalised misuse,
Where loyalty's a pretext made for flattery profuse;
How can these two young people hope to ever hold their own
Against the creeping, crawling set that grovel round the throne?
How can they rise superior to the fawning, toadying crew
Who in such numbers help to swell the Royal retinue?
Think of what happened when they wed; think of those shameful days
When all the land was maddened with the wedding-present craze.
Think of the rampant snobbery, the woful lack of taste,
The shameless sending round of hats, the wicked, wanton waste.
Oh, 'twas a cruel thing to see! When two young people pair,
We like to think of all that's pure and innocent and fair.
The music of the marriage bells that gaily floats around
Assuredly should be disturbed by no discordant sound;
Good wishes, sweet as summer flowers, the bridal path should strew;
No sordid clouds should dim the star of Hope that shines in view;
Near Hymen's Temple there should be no room for Mammon's shrine;
No yellow king-cups should debase the orange wreath we twine;
And Cupid, left in sorry case, can only sulk and pout
When Psyche's path is pestered by a pushing goldsmith's tout."

TRUTH read so far, and then she said, "But come, you must admit
For what occurred it's hardly fair the Royal pair to twit;
'Twas their misfortune, not their fault, you surely will confess;
They were the victims of a craze which they could not repress."

"Ah," wrote the Spook, "in Spiritland, all human hearts we read;
The Royal couple cannot be from blame entirely freed.
Victims, no doubt, they were, but still they might have helped to stay
The flood of snobbery by which they both were swept away;
Or, rather, their advisers should have told them how to act,
And how to dam the stream which soon became a cataract;
But, as it was, the rising tide with no resistance met,
And how it surged throughout the land you never will forget.

As soon as 'twas known that the wedding was fixed,
The toadies were all in a fluster,
The lickspittles, too,
And the toad-eating crew,
Were shamelessly eager to muster.
The self-seeking snobs who had axes to grind,

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.—10,000 at moderate prices, at PARKINS & GOTTO's Oxford-st, London, W. Illustrated Catalogue post free.

Woollen and Silk Underwear of fine texture, will not shrink. Price Lists sent.—SAMPSON & Co., 268, 270, Oxford-street.

Forthwith to their task fairly buckled;
The flunkies came out
With a rapturous shout,
And loudly the parasites chuckled.
'We must all,' they said, 'be in it,
Let us set to work this minute,
And arrange our truly loyal labours.
There is seldom such a chance,
Our own interests to advance,'
So off they went at once to dun their neighbours.

The Aldermen met with the Mayor in the chair,
And out of the rates bought a present;
And the 'Dear Countess' wrote
Such a nice little note,
Soliciting pence from the peasant.
The Parsons went round to collect from their flocks,
The Play-actors had their own Fund, too;
Even Poverty's tribe
Was adjured to subscribe,
For the Paupers, God help them! were dunned, too.

Tommy Atkins, poor fellow, was dunned for his pay
(And we know how perforce he must weigh pence)—
Ragged urchins at school,
By an irony cool,
Were cruelly dunned for their ha'pence;
And our Sailors were dunned in her Majesty's ships
To purchase gold salvers and ladles;
And the rumour has spread
That one lady high-bred
Dunned even the babes in their cradles!

But what, pray, of that? Just recall the result—
The pence cadged in workhouse and hovel
Gave a chance to some snob
At St. James's to bob,
Or even at Windsor to grovel.
Whilst the money coerced from the children at school
P'rhaps enabled some sycophant supple
To bend 'neath the weight
Of a huge piece of plate,
At the knees of the newly-wed couple.

That thousands of folks have been bled, it is true,
Is that, though, a cause for reproaches?
It's a pity? Well—yes,
But, you see, the Princess
Has all the more bracelets and brooches.
In short, it would seem from Court Etiquette's rules—
And loyalty's said to inspire them—
That by those who have naught
Lavish gifts should be bought
For those who can never require them.

For this is the way pushing nobodies get
Their names into pars. in the papers;
This is how parvenus,
'Cutely taking their cues,
Appeal to the groundlings and gapers;
And till such endeavours arouse the disgust
Of a hitherto complaisant Royalty,
Shameless deeds without end
Still themselves will commend
To unscrupulous traders on loyalty.

If they get but half a chance
Their own interests to advance,
They will stoop to any sorts of fulsome labours;
Aye, they'll push, and press, and battle,
And the money-box will rattle,
And without the least compunction dun their neighbours."

MAJOR HOWE & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 409, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

Said TRUTH, "From your description I can tell you were well placed
To observe the snobbish orgie which Society disgraced.
'Twas indeed a sorry spectacle, as many now admit,
And I'm sure the Royal couple were themselves much pained at it.
In their hearts they must have hated all the cringing deputations
Which almost crawled before them with their sordid presentations;
They must have scorned and loathed the way in which, in their joint names,
Persistent cadgers recklessly promoted their own aims;
So I've not the heart to blame them for the weakness they displayed;
I'm reluctant to reprove them for the great mistake they made;
But I think it is my duty very strongly to repeat
My old warning that, in future, they should both be more discreet.
They must act upon the impulses their own young hearts inspire;
They must not let bad advisers drag their instincts through the mire;
They must shun with lively horror any tendency to greed;
They must strive till from the shackles of Court etiquette they're freed;
And they then, with hopeful ardour, may the distant days await
When, beloved by all the nation, they are called to rule the State.

And now," said TRUTH, "pray write me the prevailing Spookland view
About our other Royalties, and what they say and do."

"Duke Alfred," was the answer, "now has come into his own,
And sits as reigning sovereign, as you know, upon a throne.
This fact, I may inform you, has delighted us up here,
For a reason which, I fancy, will at once to you appear.
German Princes by the dozen, as you know, TRUTH, to your pain,
Out of England have been able lots of plunder to obtain;
But there's never been an instance, or at least I can't affirm any,
In which an English Prince before got anything from Germany!"

"'Tis a fact well worth recording," TRUTH exclaimed.

"We've also noted"
(Wrote the Spook) "your Duke of Connaught has been recently promoted."

"Nay, on that," TRUTH interrupted, "it's not needful you should dwell.
If you blame his new appointment, why, we blame it here as well;
Whilst, provided you approve it, why, all Spookland, though combined,
'Bout a job so very flagrant could not make us change our mind."

"Next, we come," the Spook continued, "to Prince Christian and to Lorne,
And to all the other Princes who your island home adorn.
There is Battenberg, for instance."

"But," said TRUTH, "in any case
I am sure these minor princes are not worth a line of space:
Let us leave them in oblivion, with their perquisites and pay,
For I think of Spooky writing I have had enough to-day."

Ulsters, Overcoats, and Capes are kept ready for immediate use at Ulster House, Conduit-street, W.

El Toro Spooko.

WHEN "Borderland," Part II., came out, TRUTH there,
On crystal gazing,
Perused an article so full of incident amazing,
That she, to give the Spooks a rest, and wishful for a change,
Resolved on an experiment in this procedure strange.
So, taking from the mantelpiece the water bottle there,
She placed it on the table, and then drawing up her chair,
Sat down and stared intently on the bottle's side convex,
In accordance with the rules that had been printed by "Miss X."

For full five minutes nothing came responsive to her gaze,
Except about the bottle's side a sort of filmy haze;
But, then, just when she felt inclined to think she'd failed,
She in the bottle's depths beheld a picture dimly veiled,
Which presently developed in a most surprising way
Into what appeared a desp'rate and most sanguinary fray.
Atoms shaped like gruesome monsters, by ten thousands fiercely fought,
Rushing here and charging thither with the quickness shown by thought.
Germs, with heads like fabled dragons; awful sea-snakes bit and worried;
Slimy lizards squirmed and squatted; flying beetles wildly scurried;
And whilst hideous rival kraken planned another new campaign,
Bloated toad-like creatures battened on the myriads of the slain.

"What, oh! what can be the meaning of this very loathsome sight?"
TRUTH exclaimed, not altogether free from nausea and fright.
"Is it typical, I wonder, of our Parliamentary strife,
Or a kind of allegory of the incidents of life?
Does it symbolise the struggle for existence in the Strand?
Or our massacre of natives in far Matabeleland?"

Then she gazed again in silence, till she heard a spirit call—
"TRUTH, the picture that you look at 's no significance at all,
All that ferment and that flurry, all that rout and all that slaughter,
Only means that in your bottle you've unfiltered London water!"

Much relieved, TRUTH moved the bottle, which her thoughts had thus misled,
And now gazed into a syphon filled with Eau de Seltz instead;
And her trouble was rewarded, for she'd hardly gazed a minute,
When she saw, though indistinctly, something like a picture in it.
Cloudy at first, it clearer grew, until from out the gloom,
There came the vivid image of a House of Commons room.
The furniture was massive oak, upholstered in dark green,
And stretched upon a sofa a familiar form was seen.
A long and somewhat limpish form with neatly-spatted toes,
A figure lackadaisical, with pince-nez on its nose;
In short, a very neatly dressed and stylish apparition—
The much-enduring leader of the Tory Opposition!
And even as TRUTH gazed on him, his voice fell on her ear,
And these ingenuous lines he sang in accents strangely clear:—

The post that I hold I am frequently told—
And, in fact, it's a popular rumour—
Is one of delight, which, from morning to night,
I'm expected to fill with good humour.
I must sit in my place with a smile on my face,
Prepared to the foe to give battle;
And, in spite of defeats, still with quips and conceits
Must be ready to merrily prattle.
To be hipped with the blues, or my temper to lose,
Would be deemed an unseemly transgression,
And it wouldn't, you know, be at all comme il faut
To employ an improper expression.
Pity, then, poor A. J. B.,
Flouted, vexed, and harassed,
Think of what
Has been his lot,
Hampered and embarrassed.
Fated not to have his way,
Bound to second-fiddle play!
Miserere-rere me!
Poor down-trodden A. J. B.!

In vain have I tried any point to decide,
Or attempted to pose as a leader;
If I dared to begin, I'd at once to cave in
To Joseph, that brazen seceder;
My plan of campaign's failed again and again,
Though fashioned exceedingly smartly;
For how could I hope with our foemen to cope,
If baulked by the antics of Bartley?
The youngest M.P.s have contemned my decrees,
And openly sought to deride me,
Whilst, of all things the worst in this Session accurst,
That absurd Tommy Bowles has defied me.
Pity, then, poor A. J. B.,
Flouted, vexed, and harassed,
Think of what
Has been his lot,
Hampered and embarrassed.
Doomed to never have his way,
Forced to second-fiddle play!
Miserere-rere me,
Poor down-trodden A. J. B.!

To sit as I did, to be openly chid
By such Mohocks as Lowther and Carson;
To be often pooh-poohed, in their method so rude,
Would the temper have tried of a parson.
To be never quite sure what I'd next to endure
At the hands of some Brummagem traitor,
To find at my back, after each fresh attack,
Yet a new self-created dictator;
By my foes to be drubbed, by my friends to be snubbed,
To be thrown by my own party over—
Oh! it cannot be said the existence I've led
Has been one passed entirely in clover.
Pity, then, poor A. J. B.,
Flouted, vexed, and harassed,
Think of what
Has been his lot,
Hampered and embarrassed.
Doomed to never have his way,
Forced to second fiddle play!
Miserere-rere me,
Poor down-trodden A. J. B.!

LENNOX'S WHISKY.—Special, 48s.; Choice, 42s.; Highland, Malt, and Scotch, 36s. per dozen cash.—Dumfries, N.B., and 41 Pall Mall, London, S.W.

A SOFT WHITE SKIN, by using MME. AIMÉE LLOYD'S OTTO DE ROSE COLD CREAM. A most delightful adjunct to the toilet, free from stickiness. Sold in pliable tubes (post free for 1s. stamps) by MME. LLOYD 3, Spur-street, Leicester-square, London.

This picture slowly faded out, but soon it was replaced,
And in the seltzer syphon's depths the House of Lords TRUTH traced.
There was the Gilded Chamber, there the Peers of all degrees,
Bustling and buzzing on the floor like very busy bees.
Or, rather, like unnatural drones, who viciously essayed
To spoil the honey and the wax the Commons bees had made.
And even as TRUTH gazed and gazed, in chorus loud and shrill,
She heard them cry, "Now who will lead us 'gainst this Home Rule Bill?"

At first there was confusion,
For, whilst some Peers held back,
And others, loudly shouting,
Declared for an attack,
A group of rival nobles
Of very high degree
Were fighting out the question,
"Who shall the leader be?"

The Marquis urged with ardour
The magic of his name;
The Duke, in sullen manner,
Pressed his "undoubted claim";
Whilst several Earls contended,
Though few to them paid heed,
That in an Irish battle
'Twas theirs by right to lead.

But the Tory Peers grew restive,
Though their muttering was low,
As they looked across the matting
At their sternly waiting foe;
And the Bishops, too, were eager,
As too frequently they are,
When abuses they can strengthen,
Or reforms they can debar.

Then out spoke Howard de Walden,
That Baron good and great,
"My name, much mentioned months ago,
Has not been heard of late.
The record of my doings
The papers used to fill;
Come, fellow Peers, I'll lead you
Against the Home Rule Bill!

"You know what reputation
I've earned in my past life,
You know how sternly thorough
My way was with my wife.
'Coercion in excelsis!'
My motto well might be.
Come, who will stand on either hand,
And smash this Bill with me?"

At first some Peers drew backward,
As by disgust impelled,
And several High Church Bishops
Their reverend noses held;
Whilst good and grave Lord Selborne,
Distressingly amazed,
His hands and eyes together
In holy horror raised.

"What rubbish!" cried de Walden,
"Whatever are you at?
This is no time, believe me,
For squeamishness like that.
Whate'er you've read about me,
I am, I pray you note,
Like you, a legislator,
Who, like you, has got a vote!

"This is no time, I tell you,
To characters o'erhaul,
Shoulder to shoulder we must stand,
Bishops, black sheep, and all!
No Puritanic nonsense
Will serve our cause to-night.
Unless you stow your scruples
Might will not conquer right!"

Awhile the Bishops wavered,
Awhile Lord Selborne's eyes
Continued to be lifted
In horror towards the skies;
Awhile Argyll, with groaning,
On de Walden turned his back,
Awhile Lord Grimthorpe's frown was Indubitably black.

But even whilst they wavered,
"Division!" was the cry,
And all the Home Rule champions
Stepped forth to do or die;
"How, now?" exclaimed de Walden,
"If victors we're to be,
Who will abide at my right side
And smash this Bill with me?"

Then loudly spake a Bishop—
One of a well-known See—
"Lo, I will stand at thy right hand
And smash this Bill with thee!
I cannot say I relish
The things of you I've heard,
But at so grave a crisis
Scruples would be absurd.

"Your record may be shady,
But, after all, who cares?
We must unite to rivet tight
The fetters Ireland wears;
To crush the cause of Freedom,
To bar the reign of Right,
We must not care a tittle
With whom it is we fight.

"Besides, Lord Howard de Walden,
Whatever his career,
By birth's a legislator,
By birth's an English Peer,
And if in legislating
No active part he take,
He can, at least, help shatter
The laws that others make.

"Moreover, pray remember,
That if we him forswear,
We should to him be meting
A punishment unfair;
For granted he's unworthy
To fight with us to-day,
How about S and D and T
And C and B and A?

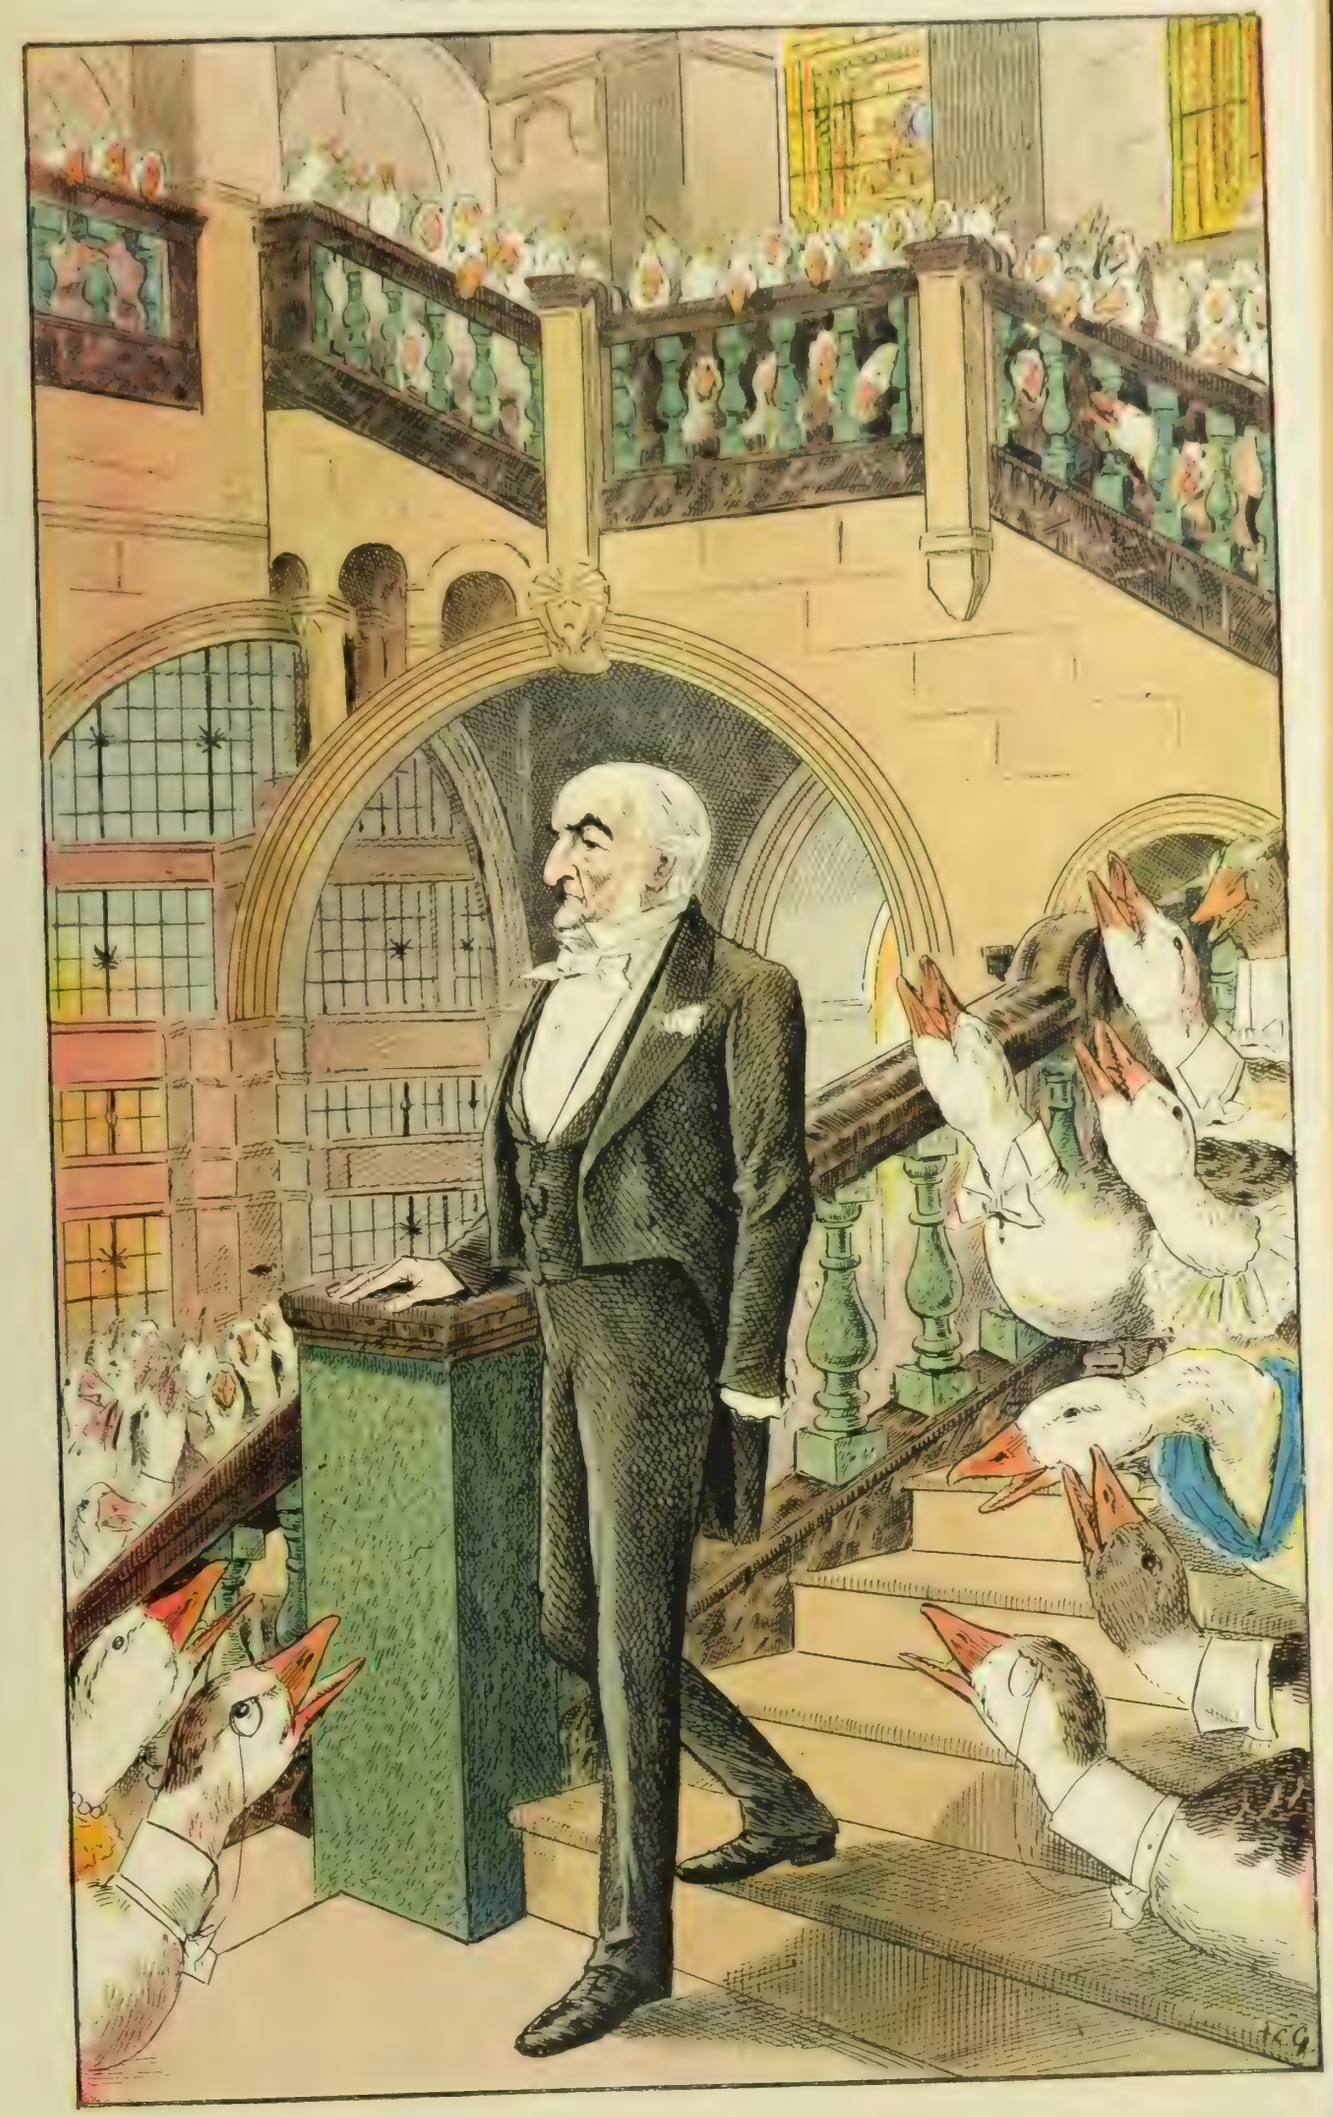
"No, no, on this occasion,
We can't, my lords, despise
The blackest sheep, provided
They'll fight as our allies.
So this is my last counsel—
Coercion to promote,
Let's sink all hesitation,
And simply go and vote!"

Lord Selborne nodded gravely;
"Agreed!" he sighed, "Agreed!
Go on! right reverend father,
I'll follow where you lead."

JOHANNIS. King of Natural Table Waters, promotes appetite, assists digestion, prolongs life. The Lancet says, "Johannis Water is of exceptional purity and excellence." Springs, Zollhaus, Germany. London Offices, 25, Regent-street, S.W.

SANITARY ASSURANCE.—Drainage Alterations carried out to estimate by specially-trained workmen, under engineer's supervision, and certificate given; also periodical examination and cleansing of drains and cisterns.—THE SANITARY ENGINEERING COMPY., 65, Victoria-street, Westminster (next the Meteorological Office).

CHAMBERLAIN'S DIVE



SALISBURY'S STUFFED GEESE.

And so with rush impulsive,
As of a turning tide,
The waverers all hastened
To Howard de Walden's side.

And when the host was marshalled,
A curious sight was seen,
The chivalrous de Walden
Two prelates stood between;
The Primate and a Sportsman
Together took their stand,
And Crœsus had a bankrupt
Upon his dexter hand.

Bible and Beer united,
Oxford with Earlswood walked;
And Judges, in grim silence,
By light-weight jockeys stalked;
The Church, the World, the Devil
Joined with a right good will
To crush the hopes of Ireland,
And burke the Home Rule Bill.

Then this picture also faded, melting slowly from the sight,
And instead of it TRUTH witnessed quite another sort of fight.
'Twas a contest in a Bull-ring, by spectators hemmed around,
Where shouts and cheers and vivas she could clearly hear resound.
Whilst within the great arena, head low down, prepared to toss,
Pawing fiercely at the sawdust, was our country's Grand Old "Bos."
Then the banderillos entered and commenced their little parts,
Running round and round and aiming at the G.O.B. their darts;
Tried to tease him and provoke him, tried to tempt him to retort,
Taking care to scatter wildly every time he gave a snort.
Then the picadors came bravely, till the "Bos" lashed out his tail,
When 'twas comical to witness how they trembled and turned pale.
Still they ambled round the bull-ring in a scrambling sort of way,
Watching eagerly and waiting for some chances of foul play;
Waving mantles, marked "Amendments," making lunges with their spears,
And indulging in a volley of unseemly gibes and jeers.
But the "Grand Old 'Bos,'" though angered, in the centre still remained,
And to notice his tormentors but occasionally deigned;
Till, mistaking his forbearance, they came closer and began
To molest him and to bait him on a systematic plan;
Others also flocked to help them till the ring was nearly full
Of the nondescript assailants of the "Grand Old British Bull."
Then with a sudden bellow that loudly echoed round,
The G. O. B. leapt forward with one impetuous bound;

And away they all rushed in a terrible scare
As the Prime Matadore was pitched up in the air,
And Joseph, consid'rably out of repair,
Went down with a bang 'gainst the boarding;
Don Goschen and Lowther rode wildly away,
And Bolton collapsed in a fit of dismay,
Whilst Argyll fell into complete disarray
As he tumbled pell-mell o'er the hoarding.

Chaplin goaded his steed with some desperate thwacks,
And Russell and Saunderson quickly "made tracks,"
Whilst Devonshire's face was the colour of flax
As he fled from the "Bos" helter-skelter.
Jesse ran to help Joe, with a dry little cough,
And Randolph, who used at the lions to scoff,
Just glanced at the Bull, and exclaimed "I am off!"
As he spurred on his steed to find shelter.

In short, 'twas a wild sauve qui peut which took place
As the Bull, with the light of success in his face,
Turned hither and thither to scatter and chase
Every one from the hitherto full ring;
And loud were the cheers and the vivas that came
From the crowd as they rose to applaud and acclaim,
And to sound the oft-proved and invincible fame
Of EL TORO—the Bos of the Bull-Ring!

Again the vision faded out, and, gazing as before,
Inside the seltzer syphon TRUTH a picture saw once more.
There, in most vivid colours of red and white and blue,
From a firmly-planted flagstaff a British Ensign flew;
And round it, shouting loudly in an ecstasy entrancing,
Taff and Sandy, John and Pat, all hand-in-hand were dancing,
Extolling in a chorus blithe, of no uncertain sound,
The virtues of the system that they called "Home Rule all Round!"

"What's good for Pat is good for me,
Yes, good for me!" cried Sandy.
"And 'Gallant little Wales,'" cried Taff,
"Will find it very handy."
Cried John, "Then it is only fair,
If this for which you call so
Is such a very splendid thing,
That I should try it, also!"

Omnes.—So we won't take four bites at one cherry;
Such a policy wouldn't be sound;
But clearly and plainly,
And sagely and sanely,
We'll go for—
HOME RULE ALL ROUND!

Said Sandy: "In my native land
We keep ourselves in order
With laws that differ much from those Upon John's side the Border.
And Taff and Pat and John all own
They cannot comprehend them;
Then why not let me have the power
Myself to make or mend them?"

Omnes.—So we won't take four bites at one cherry;
Such a policy wouldn't be sound;
But clearly and plainly,
And sagely and sanely,
We'll go for—
HOME RULE ALL ROUND!

Said John: "With business not my own
Too long have I been worried;
Too long by Sandy I've been bored,
By Pat and Taffy flurried.
By all means let them stay at home
And make the laws they mention,
For I to my own business then
Can give my whole attention."

Omnes.—So we won't take four bites at one cherry,
Such a policy wouldn't be sound;
But clearly and plainly,
And sagely and sanely,
We'll go for—
HOME RULE ALL ROUND!

TRUTH, as to this she listened, could not herself refrain
From joining in so sensible and excellent a strain:

"Of course that is the course to take,
It is a grand idea;
For all four countries it would prove
A welcome panacea!
Yes, John and Sandy, Taff and Pat,
Their wrongs, at length, all righted,
Would then four brothers be, indeed,
Inseparably united!
So don't take four bites at one cherry,
Such a policy wouldn't be sound;
But clearly and plainly
And sagely and sanely,
Just vote for—
HOME RULE ALL ROUND!"

And as Truth her stanza finished, all the brothers gave a shout,
After which, this picture also from the syphon faded out;
And no further signs perceiving of another in its stead,
Truth drank the seltzer-water, and soon after went to bed.

The Speaker, the Spooker, and the Spook.

"IT is my duty," wrote the Spook who next inspired Truth's hand,
"To watch the People's Chamber of your highly-favoured land;
For when I was on earth I was myself for years M.P.,
And thus am fitted specially for what devolves on me.
What, then, has struck me most of all during the present session
Is that the manners of the House show further retrogression.
I know the Irishmen are blamed, but this is most unfair,
The Tories of the blame should get by far the larger share.
They give themselves the haughtiest airs, they're shamelessly abrupt;
Statesmen of credit and renown they rudely interrupt;
Sounds inarticular, they think, can arguments confute;
To their opponents one and all vile notions they impute.
They aggravate the other side in twenty spiteful ways,
And when the latter turn on them their hands in horror raise.
For instance, on the night the House in fisticuffs engaged,
It was the Tories' fault alone that conflict ever raged.
I, in my spirit form, of course, with special case could scan it,
And this I'm ready to declare—Hayes-Fisher 'twas began it;
Then Carson took his cue at once, and in the roughest fashion
Forthwith a gang of Tory bloods struck out, half-blind with passion;
In fact, they hit wherever there were any heads to crack—
So can you wonder that at last the other side hit back?
Then, when they found they'd raised a storm they could not well withstand,
Why quite another policy inspired that Tory band.
Like tell-tale sneaks who when at school they have provoked disaster,
Run off like whining little curs, and meanly 'tell the master,'
So did these Tories, when they found their side was much the weaker,
Rush off with horror well assumed and promptly tell the Speaker.

The 'gentlemen' of England,
So Joseph says, with pride,
Are found, without exception,
Upon the Tory side.
But if these are the gentlemen,
These men of kicks and cuffs,
P'raps somebody will tells us
Where we shall find the roughs?

If these are England's gentlemen,
So loyal and so liege,
Who in this way interpret
The words 'Noblesse Oblige!'
If these be the proud Bayards
To which our foe refers,
Then in the name of reason
Where are the sneaks and curs?

"No doubt, though, 'tis the Orangemen who are the House's curse—
It is their rabid bigotry which makes the Tories worse.
They see that their ascendancy is threatened by Home Rule,
And so go vapouring about, unable to keep cool—
Declaiming, boasting, threatening, to quite a comic pitch,
And always ready, so they say, to die in their last ditch.

We are sick of these Orangemen's bluster,
Their fuss and their fanfaronade,
Their intention at midnight to muster
Their mythical loyal brigade;
We are sick of their ranting and canting,
With which they the groundlings bewitch,
But we're sickest of all
Of the rubbish they bawl
Concerning their ultimate ditch!
Their oft-quoted ultimate ditch,
Their illusory ultimate ditch,
Their absurdly fantastic,
And wholly bombastic,
Insuff'rable ultimate ditch!

We are sick of the truculent manners
With which they their loyalty vaunt;
We are sick of the waving stage banners
That they at their gatherings flaunt;
We are sick of the fifing and drumming
For which they possess such an itch,
But we're sickest of all
Of their meaningless bawl
Concerning their ultimate ditch!
Their wearisome ultimate ditch,
Their odious ultimate ditch—
In which, by the bye,
They do not mean to die—
Their rhetorical ultimate ditch!

"When the Irish Church was threatened just as noisy was their cry;
'We will die,' they vowed, 'to save it!' but, of course, they didn't die.
When the time came round for action they turned tail and ran away;
And thus it is they're living to repeat their threats to-day.

"But the Tories, quite unable in the House to stand alone,
Even Orangemen are willing as allies of theirs to own;
In the depths of Opposition, in destruction's very jaw,
They, to save themselves from drowning, snatch at any passing straw.

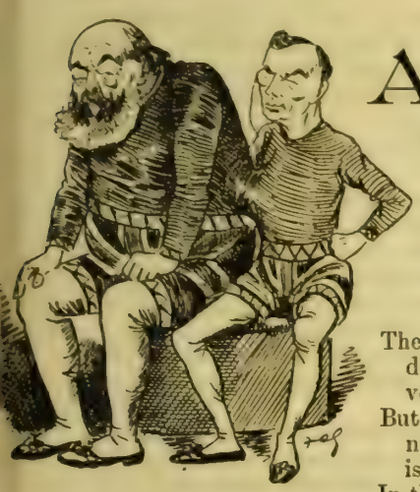
"Not long since they snatched at Rosebery. 'Oh!' said they, 'he undertands—
He's a watch-dog for the Marquis, he's a puppet in his hands,
And will do his Tory bidding in the manner he requires,
For, though Gladstone does the piping, it is Salisbury pulls the wires.'
But how great their disappointment, for Lord Rosebery quickly showed
That it was not to the Jingoes that obedience he owed.
And though somewhat disappointing to the Radicals at first,
Very soon from his Court fetters he, with well-timed effort, burst.
Yes, he's proved that he has courage, and a strong will of his own,
And the Tories now describe him in a strangely altered tone.

Two Truefitts in Bond-st. H. P. Truefitt, 13 & 14, Old Bond-st.
Two Truefitts in Bond-st. H. P. Truefitt, 13 & 14, Old Bond-st.

Obstruction was another straw the Tories tried to clutch,
But despite their desperate struggles—well, it did not help them much.
For they very soon discovered, quite defeated and depress'd,
That the Closure, their own weapon, a keen double edge possessed;
And that they themselves had sharpened, not too wisely but too well,
The Guillotine that on them with such fatal sharpness fell."

"Yes," said TRUTH, "those crafty plotters came to grief the most complete,
But indeed you need not trouble their experience to repeat;
For the country shrewdly noted how they played their factious part,
And the country in due season for their deeds will make them smart."
So the Spook at once dismissing TRUTH indulged a passing fancy
By studying for an hour or two a work on Chiromancy.

The Hyde and Jekyll Spook.



ACCORDING to the theory which Mr. Stead professes,
Each one of us whilst here on earth two different selves possesses.
One is the good, the real self — for worthy ends asserted—
The other is a second self, distorted and perverted:
But surely this is nothing new, this view which is implied
In the tale of Dr. Jekyll and his wondrous double, Hyde.
That we contain a double self a short reflection shows;
It did not need a Stead to tell what everybody knows.
For instance, look at Stead himself and say could there be found
A better proof that what he says has a foundation sound?
His real self is clear enough, if we his record scan,
It is an honest, kindly, bold, sincere, quixotic man.
But then there's his perverted self—and that suggests, alack!
The makings of an empiric, the methods of a quack!
And so, take any well-known types, and we in them shall find
The real and perverted selves thus strikingly combined.

For instance, say that the real self,
  Is a Radical People's Leader,
Eager to do his country good,
  With a soul untouched by guile;
The distorted self it is clear enough
  Is a Brummagem seceder,
Who has often played the people false
  For the sake of a ducal smile.

Say, again, that the real self
  Is a General shirking pageant,
And fond of honest, thorough work,
  And a soldier staunch and bluff;
The distorted self is a General
  Plus advertising agent,
Whose every act's for effect designed,
  Whose life has been one long puff.

Take a Statesman, too, for this real self,
  A man of both light and leading,
Who guides the helm of this ship of State,
  And the land's esteem can claim;
At once you have the distorted self
  Displayed to a point exceeding,
In a talkative whipper snapper
  Whom it's easy enough to name!

For the real self a Lord Chancellor take,
  A just and impartial Keeper,
Who scorns to act as a partisan,
  And is high in the land's esteem;
And then, as a most distorted self—
  Could the contrast well be deeper?—
Just take the egregious, you know who—
  That Jobber of Jobs supreme!

The real self is a Poet true,
  One of Nature's rarest masters,
Who scorns to stoop to a hireling's pay,
  Or to slobber in Courtly phrase;
The distorted self for yourself pray find
  'Midst that mob of poetasters
Ready to climb Parnassus' slopes
  By circuitous back-stair ways!

For the real self take a Journalist,
  A man of approved discretion;
Who neither is reckless in what he writes,
  Nor in dirt his fingers delves;
The distorted self may be found at once
  In that type of unfair aggression,
That heedless spreader of libels foul,
  The—fix on the name yourselves!

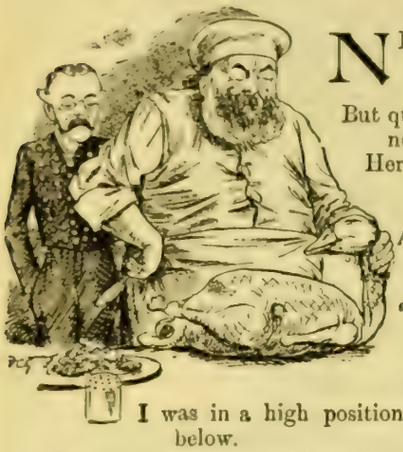
For the real self take a Modest Man,
  Possessed by no craze eternal
To see his doings proclaimed in print
  With a prominence undue;
The distorted self will occur at once—
  It's a most uncertain Colonel!
Consumed by a never-ceasing rage
  To pose in the public's view.

But why examples multiply when with an effort small
The public striking instances can for themselves recall?
In such a task they will not need TRUTH'S prompting or her guiding,
They'll find the process easier far than "Missing Words" providing.
Here is a case or two in which the answers must come pat:
The Real Self's a Learned Judge—what's the D.S. of that?
The Real Self's a Dramatist, a man of master mind:
Who can't—of the Distorted Self—a score of samples find?
Again, take for the Real Self a True Philanthropist:
Who's the Distorted Type of that? The owner can't be missed.
The Real Self's an Actor, free from rant and "gas" and bounce:
Come, surely his Distorted Self it's easy to announce.
Once more, who's the Distorted Self of a thorough-bred Patrician?
And who suggests the other Self of a wise and good Physician?
But why continue? We have said sufficient to suggest
A Christmas pastime which can't fail to prove of interest.
Go to, then, gentle readers, and yourselves supply the heckling,
Which is all you need for playing this new game of "Hyde and Jekylling."

CHRISTMAS CARDS.—1,000,000 Christmas Cards, collected from all the best publishers. Greeting Cards printed to order in the most fashionable style, patterns free.—PARKINS & GOTTO, Oxford-st., W.

Poultry during winter should have SPRATT'S PATENT POULTRY MEAL as a warm food in the morning and grain at night. Accept only in sealed bags or 3d. and 6d. sample packets. Samples of food and Pamphlet on Poultry Rearing post free one stamp.—SPRATT'S PATENT, LIMITED, Bermondsey, London, S E.

The Geese and the G.O.M.



NEXT night when Truth drew up her chair she had not long to wait,
But quickly felt a Spook was near, all eager to dictate:
Her hand began to twitch at once, and on the paper white,
As soon as she had grasped her pen, the Spook began to write:—

"Who I am I will not tell you; this, at least, though, you should know:
I was in a high position when I lived with you below.
I was very nearly worshipped by the Tories of my day—
This will give a force emphatic to the things I mean to say.
Yes; I finished as a Tory, for, reviewing my position,
I found the Tory party gave more scope to my ambition;
And so, of course, it happened that in verbal fence and fight
Often I 'gainst William Gladstone had to strive with all my might.
When I had the chance, I smote him; when he could, he wounded me;
Stronger rivals, stouter foemen, than we were there could not be.
I am gone, but William Gladstone lingers still upon the stage—
Still a paladin of talent, still the wonder of his age;
Still the servant of his country, fighting still, well in the van;
Still to all intent and purpose 'England's Great and Grand Old Man!'

"Yet when he attends a function—goes as Premier, bear in mind—
Goes to do a graceful duty, leaving politics behind,
Goes, a national occasion with importance to invest—
Goes to represent his colleagues, to be the Prince's guest—
He—oh, shame it is to tell it—as he on the scene appears,
Is received with spiteful hisses and with oft-repeated jeers;
Yes, by crowds of brainless boobies, past all possible dispute,
He was hooted on the staircase of the Prince's Institute.

"At the moment when they hissed him, we were floating o'er the scene,
I, and Wellington, and Derby—'tis the old Lord D., I mean,—
And I wish you had been present to have seen the look of shame
And of wrathful indignation that upon our faces came.

"For a space, the Duke was speechless, then he muttered, with a frown:
'Oh! the blackguards! If I'd my way, I should like to shoot them down.
I myself was an old Tory when I lived on earth, but then,
I am glad to say that Tories in my days were gentlemen.'

"Then Lord Derby, almost choking with the feelings he repressed,
Cried, 'The man these geese are hissing is the Prince of Wales's guest!'

'Nay, to call them geese,' I murmured, is a simile absurd,
It's a most unworthy insult on a very blameless bird.'

"'Bah!' the Earl of D. continued, 'how can one find similes
Harsh enough to suit the cases of such vicious snobs as these?
All in vain 'mongst tropes and figures one for fit expressions delves,
For these sibilant rapscalions are like nothing but themselves.'

"'Yes,' said I, 'these hissing Jingoes, these be-knighted, purse-proud boors,
Are the lamentable product of a later date than yours.

They are low-bred men who have made their pile
In soap, or shellac, or candles;
Or have had good luck in 'striking ile'
In current financial scandals.
And on the strength of their dirty gold
(I recall no fact that's sadder),
They have forced themselves with effront'ry bold,
Up the rungs of the social ladder.

Coarse, narrow-minded, and bigots intense;
Spiteful, cold-blooded, black-hearted, and dense;
Of impulses good quick dismissers;
Thick-skinned, unfeeling, as brazen as brass,
Naught can the truculent vileness surpass
Of these rowdy South Kensington hissers!

They have no good points, they are wholly vile,
And the City their Paradise is;
There's naught they touch they don't defile,
They have no redeeming vices.
And it shows what gold can do to-day,
When, spite of the moralists' mutter,
It enables such men to buy their way
From out their congenial gutter.

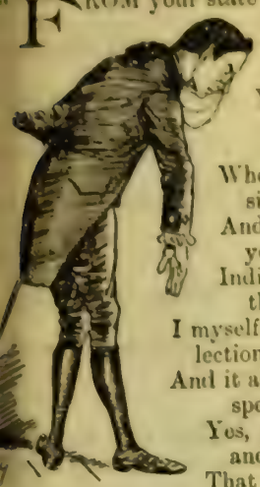
Harsh, evil-minded, of meanness intense,
Vicious, malevolent, brutal, and dense;
Of impulses good quick dismissers;
Obstinate, ignorant, brazen as brass,
Types the most base of a pitiful class,
Are these rowdy South Kensington hissers!

"'You have used some roughish language,' said the Duke, 'but not too rough,
For no verbal castigation can be half severe enough
For a herd of braying asses, whom I will not Tories call,
Since I'm sure that such base wretches have no politics at all.
When the Prince first heard them hissing, I observed he blushed for shame,
And was naturally anxious such behaviour to disclaim;
And I think it is a pity that the Tory party, too,
Did not show they shared entirely in the Prince of Wales's view.
'Twould have been more to their credit if such blackguards they'd disowned,
For by this repudiation they would partly have atoned
For an act which brands the Party that approved it with disgrace,
Such as even time 's not likely quite completely to efface.'
And with that we, much disgusted at this infamous display,
Spread our wings again for Spookland without any more delay."

Major Howe & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

Folkestone. — West Cliff Hotel (180 Apartments). Extensive structural alterations and decorative repairs have been carried out and 30 new Bed-rooms added since October, 1891. New system of drainage constructed, and all new sanitary appliances in Bath-rooms and w.c.'s. For tariff please address the Proprietor.

From Democracy to Dives.



"FROM your state of mind, dear Madam," wrote the Spook TRUTH summoned next,
"'Tis not difficult to gather that of late you have been vext.
You've been thinking of a statesman—so he deems himself, at least—
Whose reputation has of late considerably decreased,
And it's not at all surprising that your recent train of thought
Indignation, hot and thorough, in the wake of it has brought.
I myself remember Joseph, with no recollection dim,
And it always makes my blood boil (so to speak) to think of him.
Yes, for years on earth I knew him, and I readily confess
That the longer that I knew him, why, I trusted him the less.
Our two lots fell much together, I could study him at leisure,
And with very little trouble I soon took his proper measure.
I foresaw what was to happen; I his lack of ballast noted;
I observed, whate'er his tactics, his own ends 'twas he promoted;
And in my own mind determined that, p'rhaps sooner or p'rhaps later,
But assuredly at some time, to his friends he'd play the traitor.

"You have seen the way some people, who more notice would engage,
Will wear jewels (made at Brummagem) whilst strutting on life's stage;
In themselves not worth attention, they put on most massive rings,
Gorgeous brooches, flashing pendants, and a wealth of such-like things,
So it was with Master Joseph, he was shrewd enough to see
He must cause some new sensation if notorious he would be;
So with Radical adornments he himself tricked gaily out,
And, like daw in peacock-feathers, went conceitedly about.
It's no wonder he got noticed, for the ornaments he wore
Were more striking and more dazzling than the world had seen before;
And the masses when they saw them stared with gaping admiration,
And received the man who wore them with approving acclamation.

"This, alas! was Joe's undoing, for supremely self-deceived,
He put down to his own talents the success he had achieved.
'Twas his own intrinsic value which was recognised, he thought,
'Twas his unaided genius which the public taste had caught;
And, misled by this assumption, it need cause us no surprise,
That this shoddy politician in the world resolved to rise.

Some folks are never satisfied,
For if they have a horse to ride,
They're sure to want a coach beside—
And so did Master Joseph.

As soon as they, their hopes to crown,
Have climbed their way up to renown,
They like to kick the ladder down—
And so did Master Joseph.

For praise and flattery they yearn,
And if position they can earn
By turning on old friends, they turn!—
And so did Master Joseph.

"Yes, he saw that 'mongst his comrades there were greater men than he,
Men whose better or whose equal he could never hope to be;
Whilst amongst the Tory Party it was easy to divine
That his chance would be much brighter by comparison to shine.
He moreover liked the notion—and what parvenu would not?—
Of the social recognition that thereby would be his lot
To be asked by Dukes to dinner, by a Duchess to be patted—
He could not resist the prospect—or, in other words, he ratted!

"Now the Tories, not unwilling to obtain a new recruit,
So unscrupulously clever, so insidiously acute,
Said, 'It's true' ('twas thus they put it) 'Joe's a very rank outsider,
But in days like these the platform of our party should be wider.
We've been just a bit too squeamish, and have suffered for our pains,
We have got the rank and breeding, but, by Jove! we must have brains.
The exacting claims of party for heroic measures call;
Come, then, let us swallow Joseph, Democratic views, and all.'

"So they gulped, and gulped—'twas useless—Joseph still stuck in their throat,
For although with ostentation he had turned for them his coat,
He persisted still in wearing, though so clearly out of place,
The old Radical adornments which his person used to grace.
Still he wore his 'Free-School' bangle and his 'Disendowment' chain,
And allowed his 'Ransom' breast-pin in his necktie to remain.
And the Tories spoke out plainly, 'Come, old fellow, don't-cher-know!
These odd ornaments you're wearing make you look an awful show?
Such strange democratic gew-gaws for a Tory will not do,
And, as you are now a Tory, why they will not do for you.'
Then as Joseph still was silent, to persuade him to reply,
With the following inducements they proceeded him to ply.

Think of what we'll do for you,
When you're 'One of us;'
Life will yield you pleasures new
When you're 'One of us;'
Your reward will then be rich,
Duchesses will you bewitch,
Dukes their arms in yours will hitch
When you're 'One of us!'

You to nod to Lords will dare
When you're 'One of us;'
You will lunch in Grosvenor-square
When you're 'One of us.'
Countesses your hand will squeeze,
You will go to swagger teas—
Dine—well, almost where you please,
When you're 'One of us.'

No reflections shall be cast
When you're 'One of us.'
We will quite forget your past
When you're 'One of us!'

OUR DOGS are kept in health by NALDIRE'S PRIZE MEDAL DOG SOAP. All irritating insects destroyed, skin cleansed, doggy smell removed, and the animal soothed & refreshed. "Harmless to Dogs, but Fatal to Fleas."—FRANK BUCKLAND. Of Chemists & Stores.

Howsoever high you pile
Your quaint oddities of style,
Still we promise not to smile
When you're 'One of us!'

You shall get 'State Concert' cards
When you're 'One of us!'
You shall meet men in the Guards
When you're 'One of us!'
Nay, as you in favour grow,
You to Marlborough House shall go,
You the Prince of Wales shall know
When you're 'One of us!'

"Such a prospect was resistless; in the face of what was tendered
Joseph could hold out no longer, but immediately surrendered.
'No,' he cried, 'you've overwhelmed me; I will now throw up the sponge.
On the brink no more I'll shiver; I will make the final plunge.'

"So, upon the day appointed, when the dive was to be made,
Very general was the interest which on all sides was displayed.
Quite a mighty concourse gathered, for front places to compete,
So that they might see how Joseph managed his great diving feat.
Tories came, of course, in numbers, half expecting he would fail,
Though most ready, if he didn't, his success to loudly hail;
Unionists were also present his tremendous dive to view,
Knowing well that if he did it they would have to do it, too;
And of Radicals a sprinkling, who could not forget the past,
Came to see a former leader crown his perfidy at last.

"But the fateful hour is striking—there is silence everywhere,
Whilst a band—(of Tory members)—loudly plays a Jingo air.
Then the hum becomes excited, for up near the roof is seen
Joseph standing on a platform, pale, though seemingly serene;
Down upon the crowd beneath him he takes one long, lingering look,
And as his old friends he noticed, very palpably he shook.
But the band played out yet louder—'twas a very brazen band—
And, as though to cheer his master, fatuous Jesse waved his hand.

"Then Lord Salisbury, stepping forward, 'Are you ready?' queried he;
And as soon as Joseph nodded, shouted loudly—

'One!
Two!!
THREE!!!'

"Scarcely was the last word uttered, when, without the least delay,
Joseph, screwing in his eyeglass, from his platform plunged away.
Down he went, swift as an arrow, but about half-way, alack!
In the air he turned and twisted, and—fell badly on his back.

With a shout the eager Tories and the Unionists rushed round,
But poor Joseph, stunned completely, lay unconscious on the ground.
Up a Duchess ran with water, whilst another o'er him bent
With a bottle boldly labelled 'Social Tory Liniment,' Whilst the ever-faithful Jesse, in a well-nigh desperate case,
With a copy of the Standard fanned his senseless master's face.

"When at last his eyes he opened, 'Where am I?' Joe feebly said,
And they told him he had fallen, and then bore him off to bed.

"And upon examination, which was shortly after made,
Though there was no spinal fracture as at first they were afraid;
It was found that, even granted he'd the accident survive,
He would never be the Joseph that he was before his dive.
For the clumsy way he'd fallen, on the concrete Tory floor,
Had quite smashed his reputation (very badly hurt before),
And had damaged so his credit that 'twas easy to foresee
That a limping politician he was bound at best to be.

"So they left him to recover; and the bulletins now tell
That, upon the whole, the patient is not doing very well;
And, in short, imply most clearly that as long as he alive is He'll repent the plunge he's taken from 'Democracy to Dives!'"

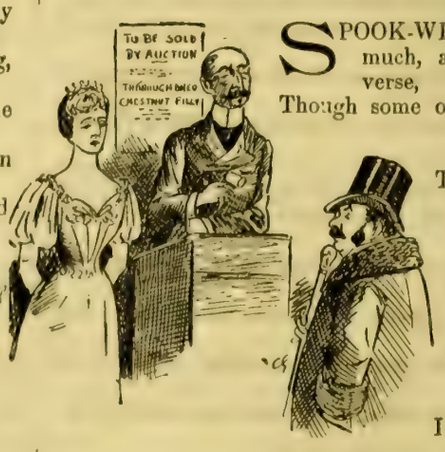
Society as seen through Spook Specs.



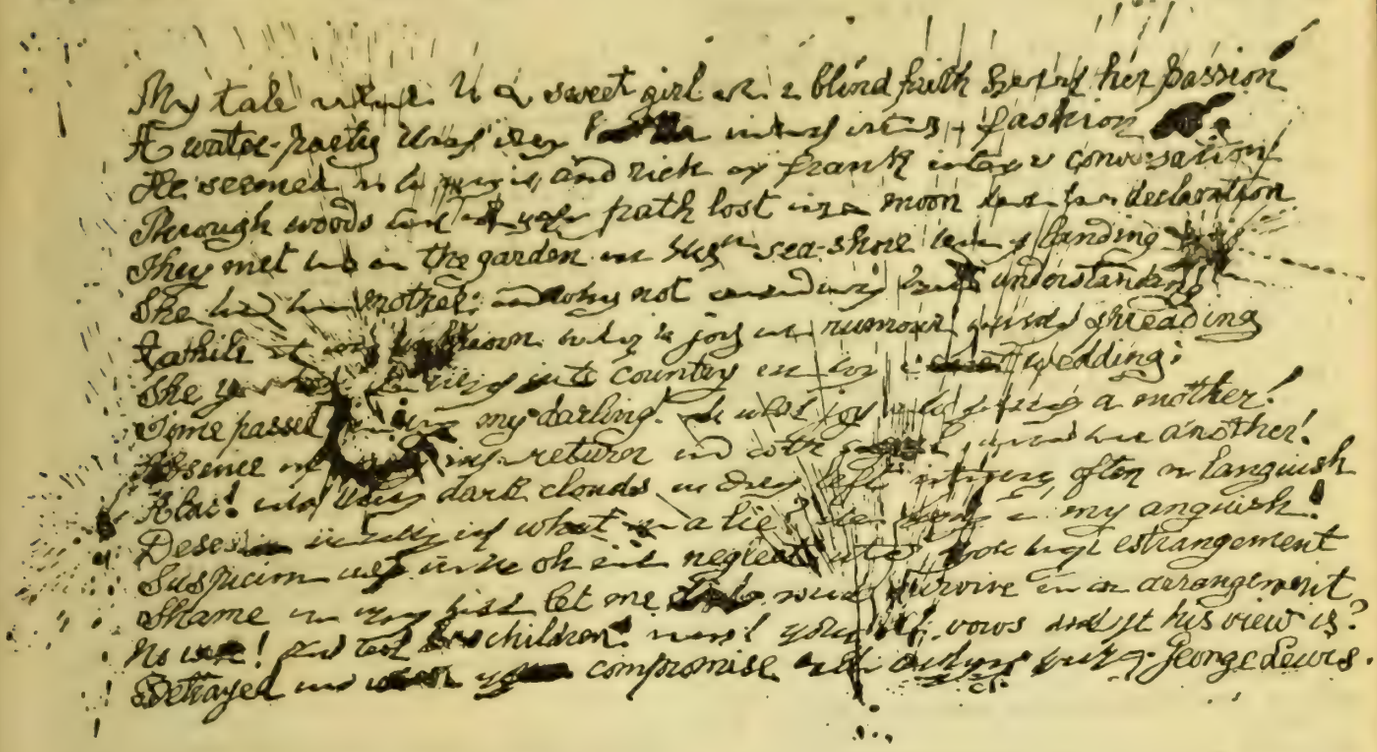
SPOOK-WRITING varies very much, and, like our modern verse,
Though some of it is only bad, a great deal more is worse.
Thus, when the Spooks employ Truth's hand to write for them at night,
It's very hard to read next day the messages they write.
Spirit caligraphy, in fact, is smeary and it's spotty;
Inevitably indistinct, and not unseldom blotty.
Still, as a rule, by taking pains and trying many times,
Truth's managed, as these pages show, to read the Spooky rhymes.
One morning, though, on sitting down as usual to transcribe
The manuscript in which was penned the Spook's last diatribe,

Irish Distressed Ladies' Fund, 17, North Audley street, W.

Christmas Cards, Season Cards, &c.—Beautiful photographs of scenery in Palestine, Greece, Italy, Egypt. Specimen and list 1s. 1d.—Darlington & Co., Llangollen.

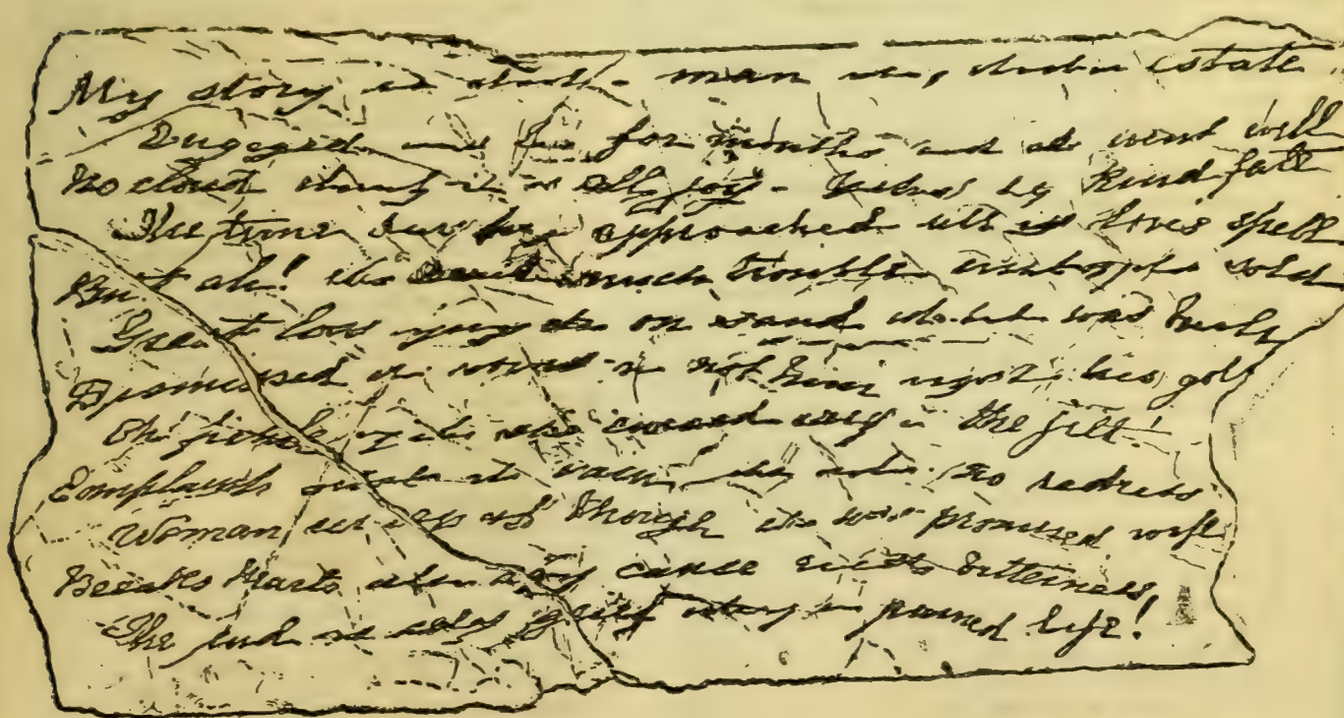
She found it quite impossible, though pains she did not spare,
To at the most decipher more than words just here and there.
Repeated efforts being vain, she finally resolved
To publish in facsimile this message so involved;

The more so, seeing that in spite of its Sloperian look,
It was dictated by a high and most important Spook.
Here is the message, then, which TRUTH has vainly tried to read,
Her readers, if they've time to spare, may better p'rhaps, succeed.



And, also in facsimile, here is one more Spook letter,
Which TRUTH was able to make out but very little better,
And which, in fact, she'd thrown away, thinking it not much good
To publish what she scarce could hope would be well understood.

On second thoughts, though, here it is, snatched from the paper basket,
So that, if meaning it possess, TRUTH'S readers may unmask it.
Meanwhile, they'll understand why 'tis so crumpled and so worn,
And why some parts of it have got unfortunately torn.



After the riddles here set down, another Spook dictated
A lively message which upon Society dilated.
"Up here," it said, "we closely watch, though in your world no more,
Most things that hap from day to day upon your island shore;

And what our rapt attention claims perhaps the most of all
Is that agglomeration which Society you call.
During the Season lately past, as you need scarce be told,
La Belle Americaine has lost the place she used to hold,

And we have with amusement seen, as London we survey,
That even 'Silver Queens' with you at last have had their day.
Just as upon your Stock Exchange most Yankee stocks and shares
Have been exceedingly depressed, rejoicing much the 'Bears,'
So in your social Capel Court—there is no doubt of that—
'Americans' of every kind have ruled intensely flat.
Upon fresh imports, so to speak, you've placed a strict embargo,
There has been no demand at all for 'parcels' from 'She-car-go.'
'Nevada Beauties' dull have been, 'Virginians' have been flagging,
And even 'New York Heiresses' have symptoms shown of sagging.
You're weary of the 'Yankee Gell' so piquantly improper,
And, therefore, need not tolerate her 'Mommer' and her 'Popper.'
Thus, where they used to stalk your Dukes and boldly bag your Earls,
The British matron once again her battle-flag unfurls,
Rallies her daughters as of yore, and with her failing breath,
Urges them on with her old cry of—'Marriage, girls! or death!'

"But though the Americans have gone, and with but scant regret,
It can't be said Society's itself again as yet.
Those who should lead it still perforce must sulk within their tents,
And by retrenchment try and meet the falling off of rents;
Those who should give the right key-note still o'er their losses croon,
And so your social symphony's played sadly out of tune;
Since, though the executants are 'smart,' and lavish, and bizarre,
Their most egregiously 'false notes' upon the listener jar.
For 'smartness' means expenditure upon a lavish scale,
And so 'tis wealth, and wealth alone, can hope to now prevail.
The consequences are too clear: parade and ostentation
Are now the passports that admit to high consideration;
Reckless extravagance and bounce attention now compel,
Gold is the key that now unlocks the social citadel.
What wonder, then, Society, thus cankered at the core,
Should grow more callous, more hard-grained, more heartless than of yore.
What wonder it should victims crush without a passing thought,
As devoid of pain or pity as the car of Juggernaut?
What wonder we, observing it, this set of rules should frame
For those who're anxious in its ranks a foremost place to claim?

In case you are anxious your way to press
In Society, with a big, big S;
You need no conscience, you want no heart,
But you must, you must, you MUST be smart!
Reckless extravagance, loud display,
These are the things you want to-day;
'Side' and impertinence always pay,
For they bring you notoriety,
And so if you try you will soon mount high
In your S-O—So, and your C-I—ci,
And your E-T-Y—
Society!

For Society with a big, big S,
You must first of all have a smart address;
You must give such dinners that those who dine
Will talk of your chef and be-puff your wine;
You must just let out in a casual way
What you've had for your table-flowers to pay;
You must choose your guests so that they convey
A notion of chic variety.
And thus your place you will justify
In your S-O—so, and your C-I—ci,
And your E-T-Y—
Society!

In Society, with a big, big S,
You must not display any squeamishness;
You must play the game, and must not excuse
A doit of the stakes to those who lose;
You must trample on those, en route, who fall,
You must force the weaker to take the wall,
You must no compunction exhibit at all.
No pity, and no anxiety,
For then your rivals you'll soon outvie
In your S-O—so, and your C-I—ci,
And your E-T-Y—
Society!

For Society with a big, big S,
You must risk your all with eagerness,
Your honour, honesty, home, and wife,
Your health, your wealth, and your very life;
All these on the table you must lay
When you for social distinction play,
And if you lose—why your 'friends' will say—
With a shrug of smart dubiety—
'Poor devil! he never was fit to try
For our S-O—so, and our C-I—ci,
And our E-T-Y—
Society!'

"In such a social state as yours it is not strange to find
That English girls are also now to smartness much inclined;
Modesty, quite old-fashioned grown, has had to abdicate;
Blushes, save artificial ones, are wholly out of date.
Timidity and diffidence are voted idiotic,
Even small-talk must be well-spiced and duly escharotic;
In short, the modern English girl, if she no chance would miss,
Assuredly must modelled be in some such way as this:—

A wonderful sight your eyes to bless
In her artful, made-up loveliness,
Is an English girl of the smartest cru,
Unmarried, tight-laced, and twenty-two.
She has no heart, but she plays her part
With a zest that no rebuffs diminish;
She hunts the heir with consummate art,
With skill unmatch'd, from find to finish.
At ball or rout she'll ferret him out,
And when to the smoking-room he doubles,
She'll run him down with a sportive shout
That the heart of her dearest rival troubles.
Go search from Bow to Belgra-vie
Then come you back and own to me,
There's none can hunt a Duke or Earl
Like a smart Society English girl.

She's up in the very latest slang,
She can play the banjo—tang-ting-tang;
She rides, she drives, she can take a cue,
And she smokes cigarettes till all is blue.
At drum or at dance, when she has a chance,
As soon as the zither tinkle-tankles,
She her skirts will twirl as a dancing-girl—
And she takes good care to show her ankles.
There is wonderful art in the manner smart
In which she will indicate a stocking;
And she'll sing a song, just a wee bit strong,
In a style that's delicately shocking.
Go search from Bow to Belgra-vie,
Then come you back and own to me,
There's none can set man's brain awhirl
Like a smart Society English Girl!

WORK FOR THE GIRL FLOGGER.

Her mind is fixed on the main, main chance,
She scoffs the thought of a love romance,
And it's part of her well considered plan
To marry an income and not a man
For a Mayfair house and a moor (with grouse),
And a swagger yacht in the Solent's waters,
She her cards will play in an artful way
Like the canniest one of Eve's fair daughters;
While, the bait increase with a villa at Nice,
And a Highland river or loch, with salmon,
And she'll sell herself for the sake of pelf,
Like one who worships no god but Mammon!
Go search from Bow to Belgravie,
Then come you back and own to me,
There's no worse mate for Prince or churl
Than a smart Society English girl!

"Now," wrote the Spook, "it may amuse and edify as well,
If of the season's chief events a few I try to tell.
My list must needs a short one be, not because subjects fail,
But lest my message I prolong into an endless tale.
Your hand, as 'tis, must weary be,"

Sighed TRUTH, "It is; quite true!"

"So this, I promise you, shall be a very short review:—

A Lord, who believed in the virtue of force,
Made a very hard try to obtain a divorce;
There was perjury—that was a matter of course—
So we paid small attention to that.
The man and the maid who will anything swear,
As in most divorce cases, were very much 'there,'
And though they were champion liars, this pair—
We paid small attention to that;
Such a thing, we Spooks know,
Often happens below—
So we paid small attention to that.

A Duchess's husband his fortune deplores,
For her Grace all at once, to pay off her old scores,
Takes the law in her hands and—he's kicked outdoors—
But we paid small attention to that.
For Youth, as we know, will insist on its fling,
Whilst Age to its rights is accustomed to cling;
And what has ensued—well, it's just the old thing—
So we paid small attention to that;
Such a thing, we Spooks know,
Often happens below—
So we paid small attention to that!

A Duchess committed to Holloway Jail
Had her 'cell' fitted up on a sumptuous scale,
On the fat of the land, too, they let her regale;
But we paid small attention to that.
For of course she was favoured to such a high pitch,
Since Justice, though blind, can tell t'other from which,
There are always two laws for the poor and the rich—
So we paid small attention to that;
Such a thing, we Spooks know,
Often happens below—
So we paid small attention to that!

In Ireland a very sad sight has been seen,
For 'ladies' and 'gentlemen' eager have been
To boycott the Lord who is Vice for the Queen—
But we paid small attention to that.
For the loyalty Orangemen seek to un-dam,
And down British throats try so often to cram,
Is a hollow pretence, and a palpable sham,
So we paid no attention to that;
Such a thing, we Spooks know,
Is a part of the show—
So we paid no attention to that!

A Tory, and 'gentleman' also, forsooth!
Revived 'gainst his rival, regardless of truth,
A foul, lying story concerning his youth
And we paid some attention to that.
For even when Tories, elections amid,
For victory make a most strenuous bid,
They don't stoop as low as that slanderer did—
So we paid some attention to that.
Such a thing, we Spooks know,
Rarely happens below
So we paid some attention to that.

A woman who bore t'wards her husband a grudge
Brought her case for Sir Francis—poor fellow!—to judge,
And when in due course 'twas dismissed, as all fudge—
Why, we paid no attention to that.
But when we observed that, with no show of right,
This woman four others could legally spite,
And force them, at very great outlay, to fight—
Why, we did pay attention to that;
Such proceedings below
Work much undeserved woe—
So p'rhaps you 'll pay attention to that.

When dear Mrs. Grundy, incensed at the sale
Of some very French novels, emitted a wail
And had the poor publisher sent off to jail,
Why, we paid small attention to that;
For to hot fits of morals you're frequently prone,
And, too often assuming a Mawwormish tone,
You will one day condemn what the next you condone,
So we paid small attention to that;
Such a thing, we Spooks know,
Often happens below,
So we paid small attention to that!

But when to your City M. Zola you bade,
And for him such great admiration displayed;
And by your Lord Mayor he so welcome was made,
Why we paid some attention to that;
For to make of an author so honoured a guest,
After putting his publisher under arrest,
Is such gross inconsistency, even at best,
That we paid some attention to that;
For even below,
'Twas a 'record,' you know,
So we paid some attention to that.

When an actress——"

But at this moment TRUTH'S right hand incontinently struck,
The pen she held with vicious dig into the paper stuck,
In vain the Spook sent down her arm the mystic influence still,
In vain imparted to her hand the telepathic thrill:
"It's not a bit of use," cried TRUTH, "I won't be made a drudge;
Try as you will, my pen to-night another inch shan't budge.
We've done enough, so never mind about the actress now,
I'm very much too tired to write another line, I vow.
No doubt, of scandals you have still a very fine selection,
But they must for the present wait, if you have no objection."
So saying, she the séance closed, it being understood
She would resume "Society" as quickly as she could;
Thus Social Sinners who've escaped need not be frolicsome,
For they are only respited—their time will shortly come!

TOYS! TOYS!! TOYS!!!—PARKINS & GOTTO, 60, Oxford-street, W. for best toys. Every novelty. Indoor Games all kinds. Catalogue free.

MAJOR HOWE & CO.'S fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st, City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

A Word for Tommy and Jack.

A CHERUB (so the poet says), when times may seem most black,
Is always sitting up aloft and looking after "Jack."
And "Tommy," though no cherub, p'rhaps, after his interest looks,
May now as guardian angel claim the cheeriest of Spooks.

This Spook, in fact, by TRUTH switched on, so freely spoke its mind,
And was to critical remark so merrily inclined;
That all which it was pleased to state, or guardedly to hint,
Is, both for Tommy's sake and Jack's, here reproduced in print.

"Tommy and Jack," the Spook began, "are both old friends of mine,
And, if I can, to help them both is what I now design,
Jack, of the two, 's the better off; but even Jack must find
Too many details of his life but little to his mind.
When, recently, a ship went down, you know the one I mean,
Jack died without a murmur for his country and his Queen;
But surely it was hard for such a sacrifice to call,
When there was not the slightest need for Jack to die at all.
The foundering of that ship, indeed, upon my mind so preyed
That à propos to that event a ballad I have made,
Tending to show (or so I hope) in way not unconcise
That discipline may be maintained at far too great a price.

The Admiral sails in his flagship taut,
In his flagship taut sails he;
And he stands alone in the conning-tower
In a sort of reveree-er-ee—
In a sort of reveree.
And he telegraphs down to the engine-room,
'Go ahead at full speed!' says he,
For the rocks that lie in the flagship's course
He utterly fails to see—to see—
He utterly fails to see.
And the look on his face is very grim,
And his lips he seems to strain,
For his motto, you know,
Blow high, blow low,
Is, Discipline we must maintain.
Yo-ho!
Strict discipline we must maintain.

Says the gallant Tar to the Bosun bold,
'Well, as far as I can see,
There is rocks right ahead in front of our bows,
And there's likewise rocks on our lee—our lee—
There is likewise rocks on our lee.
And the way as we steers at the present time,
By the bearing of yonder light,
Why, if this yeer wessel ain't soon aground,
Why, avast! and blow me tight!—me tight!—
Why, avast! and blow me tight!'

And the Bosun said, 'You are right, my boy,
But your words they gives me pain,
For you ought to know,
Though you say "Yo-ho!"
That discipline we must maintain,
My boy,
That discipline we must maintain!'

But the Bosun, he ups to the Midshipmite,
And he touches his cap, does he—
'Your honour,' he says, 'we are bound to ground,
There is breakers all round you see—you see,
There is breakers all round, you see.
If the engines were turned a-starn right off,
We could manage for to just scrape clear;
But if we goes on, it's to Davy Jones
As we're all on us bound, I fear—I fear—
As we're all on us bound, I fear!'
And the Middy, he said, 'You are right, old man,
But such words I hear with pain;
For a Bosun should know
That, however things go,
Still discipline we must maintain,
Yo-ho!
Strict discipline we must maintain.'

But the Middy he runs to the ship's First-Luff,
And 'Your pardon, Sir, I beg,' says he,
'But if something's not done we shall come to grief
In a minute most awfullee—ful-lee,
In a minute most awfullee!
As no doubt you've observed there's a rock ahead
Rather bigger than Trafalgar-square,
And I fail to see why the Admiral
Should be ramming such a rock—so there!—so there!
Should be ramming such a rock—so there!'
Said the smart First-Luff, 'You are right, my lad,
But your words I remark with pain,
For a Middy should know
That though down we go
Strict discipline we must maintain,
Yo-ho!
Strict discipline we must maintain.'

But the smart First-Luff to the Skipper he hies,
And it's 'Captain, if you please,' says he,
'In less than half a minute we are bound to sink
To the bottom of the deep blue sea—blue sea—
To the bottom of the deep blue sea.
Don't you think it would be well?—there is just one chance—
If the proper thing at once you do—
Don't you think it would be well to signal "Hard-a-port?"
And to save this ship and crew—and crew—
And to save this ship and crew?'
And the Captain he said, 'You are right, First-Luff,
But I never felt so sorely pained.
For you ought to know,
Ship and crew must go,
So long as strict discipline's maintained,
Yo, ho!
So long as strict discipline's maintained.'

So the Skipper he looks at the Admiral,
But it's never a word says he;
And he tightens his belt as the ship goes ahead,
And on to the rocks bangs she—bangs she—
And on to the rocks bangs she.
And, as she sinks, as of course she does,
To the bottom of the deep blue sea,
With the gurgles in his throat that Captain cries,
'Tell my Lords from me,' says he—says he,
'Tell my Lords from me,' says he—
'That, though the loss of my ship and crew
To report I am deeply pained,
Yet I'm pleased to state
That, at any rate,
Strict discipline has been maintained,
Yo-ho!
Strict discipline has been maintained!'

The Oldest Glass and China Shop in London (Est. 1760).
Alfred B. Pearce, 39, Ludgate-hill, London, E.C.

"For my part," so the Spook went on, "my faith I do not pin
To such a very purposeless display of discipline;
By all means let a skipper try to discipline promote,
But surely his first duty is to keep his ship afloat,
For 'tis but very little good the costliest ships to build,
And man them with the bravest tars and officers most skilled,
If in the hour of peril they are helplessly to sink,
Because no officers dare tell an admiral what they think!"

"Strict discipline, in fact," cried TRUTH, "should not be a pretence
For sitting on intelligence and stifling common sense.
Surely it's too ridiculous that we should lose our ships
Because the claims of discipline keep closed a Captain's lips.
If Admirals say two and two are five, or even more,
Their Captains ought to boldly state that two and two are four.
Yes, discipline is well enough applied in moderation,
But carried to excess it ends in wide-spread devastation.

"In both our Services of it a fetish now is made;
Injustice and incompetence bespeak its useful aid.
It's used to crush the men who dare of crying ills complain,
It's used to help the martinet his savage rule maintain;
Instead of judgment it is used, it takes the place of tact,
It serves abuses to defend, and evils to protract;
And as too frequently of late we've but too clearly seen,
It sits upon the safety-valve, and blows up the machine."

"And Tommy," wrote the Spook, "has still more reason to resent
The way in which 'strict discipline' ignores his discontent;
For Tommy corresponds with you, and letters by the score
Tell you each week the grievances 'bout which he is so sore.
They may be petty, some of them, but, be they large or small,
There is no valid reason why they should exist at all.
Tommy wants justice—wants to feel that, whether wrong or right,
He's safe from brutal prejudice and arbitrary spite;
He wants his case, whate'er it be, dispassionately judged,
He wants, in short, that treatment fair which now he is begrudged.
'Tis true that they have sung of him of late at Music-halls,
'Tis true his praises titillate smart people in the stalls;
But all this Jingo gush and rant, which Mr. Kipling started,
Won't help poor Tommy on a bit, or make him more light-hearted,
Unless the Press and Parliament his case will take in hand,
And get for him that justice he's good reason to demand.

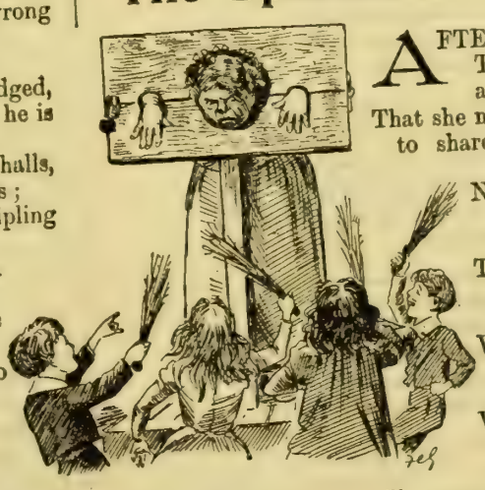
Oh, you write about his humour and his jokes,
And you make of him a hero for your plays,
And to mention him a round of cheers evokes,
For Tommy has of late become a craze.
And you tell him he's a paladin in fight,
And as happy as a sandboy and as gay
As he goes and does his duty,
All for England, Home, and Beauty,
And the noble sum of thirteen pence a day!
Yes, you say, 'Oh, Tommy Atkins, you're a good 'un heart and hand,
You're a credit to your calling, and to all your native land;
May your luck be never failing, may your Poll be ever true,
God bless you, Tommy Atkins!
Here's your country's love to you!'

But Tommy he has sense enough to know
That all this silly claptrap is no use,
Whilst he's bullied and is hustled to and fro,
And exposed to every species of abuse.
Yes, he knows that whilst the last new tenor sings
Of how dear he is to country and to Queen
That his meagre pay is dwindling,
Thanks to mean official swindling;
And that daily he is done at his canteen.
And he sings, 'If you love Tommy in the way that you make out,
You would do him better service if you ceased to gush and shout;
And endeavoured to make brighter that existence which you say,
With such very little reason, is so rollicking and gay!'

Never mind about that high falutin rant,
Of which poor Tommy's heard too much of late,
Just stow that hyperbolic Kipling cant,
And try to bring his comforts up to date.
Cease to worry him with drills that are no use,
And grant him this small boon without delay;
Stop those 'stoppages' which fret him,
And in future, oh! do let him
Get intact his paltry thirteen pence a day.
For if you love Tommy Atkins, in the way that you make out,
You will do him better service if you cease to rave and shout;
And, instead of that, endeavour to make better day by day
That existence which at present is by no means bright and gay.

"Bravo!" was TRUTH'S rejoinder, "you my sentiments express
With a marvellous exactness; and I fully acquiesce
In your very telling stanzas, which I'll publish without fail,
In the hope the cause of Tommy may right speedily prevail;
For Pall Mall officials, even, may with favour tend to con them,
When they know a Spookish critic has his eyes now fixed upon them."

The Spookiest of Spooks.



AFTER a week's experiments TRUTH grew so much adepter,
That she might well have claimed to share with Mr. Stead his sceptre;
Nay, she so quickly progress made after her first disaster,
That she in Spooking soon bid fair to quite surpass her master.
With all his aptitude he'd but one "Julia" at most,
Whilst TRUTH of twenty "Julias" with reason good could boast.

And, what is better still, to mar her well considered plan
She was not bothered, like poor Stead, with any Mary Ann!
In brief, devoted Spooks they were that hovered near in bands,
At shortest notice quite prepared to freely use her hands;
And ever emulous, when she for Spookish aid appealed,
By telepathic writing information full to yield.

Thus, when, prepared for duty, she each night took up her place,
Almost before her thoughts got fixed, her pen began to trace.

JOHANNIS, King of Natural Table Waters, promotes appetite, assists digestion, prolongs life. The Lancet says, "Johannis Water is of exceptional purity and excellence." Springs, Zollhaus, Germany. London Offices, 25, Regent-street, S.W.

Dressing Gowns, Dressing Jackets, At-home Dinner Jacket Gentlemen's Outfitters.—SAMPSON & Co., 268, 270, Oxford-stree

So 'twas the evening of the day when she from Hounslow brought
The story of the deeds of shame its Woman-Flogger wrought;
Of course, her thoughts were full of what that day she'd heard and seen;
Of course, her heart was throbbing yet with anger hot and keen;
And ere she'd even time enough her wishes to suggest,
She felt the hand that grasped her pen, upon the paper press'd.

"In Spookland," so the Spirit wrote, "for reasons evident,
We can't inflict what you on earth call corporal punishment;
Our form's impalpability the flogger must defeat,
No part of us is tangible enough for one to beat;
But none the less we share with you the indignation fierce
With which you have denounced that worst of hell-cats, Mrs. Peirce.
For, whether flogging's bad or good, there's one thing all must see,
It can't be good administered by such a fiend as she;
It must be bad when it involves the handcuffs and the gag,
Of such a drunken, vile, obscene, and hell-begotten hag.
What can we deem those parents, then, but, past expression, base,
Who their young daughters in the hands of Woman-Floggers place?
What words the moral turpitude can fittingly describe,
Of those who Mrs. Peirce employ, or any of her tribe?

"In sooth it's very hard to think such parents realise,
What the employment of these brutes too certainly implies;
And possibly it may do good if I the sketch repeat,
Of that foul beldam lately tracked by Truth to her retreat.

At Hounslow, girt by shrub and tree,
The Flogger's villa stands;
The Flogger short and thick is she,
With large and sinewy hands,
And the muscles of her cruel arms
Are strong as iron bands.

Her hair is scant and grey with vice,
Her mouth is wide and hard,
Her face is red, and coarse, and bad,
And deeply seem'd and scarr'd,
And her eyes with vile suggestive leers
Her customers regard.

Week in, week out, from morn till night,
She has plied her brutal trade;
She has hurried round with tawse and cane
To torture and degrade;
And, like the bestial ghoul she is,
On her victims' flesh she's preyed.

Canting, handcuffing, torturing,
Onward through life she's gone;
To some new deed of lust or blood,
Awaking every dawn.
Flogging, defiling, pandering,
Till night its veil has drawn.

This is the woman—save the mark!
Who Hounslow still infects;
This is the harridan who still
Fresh villanies projects;
This the she-devil whom the Law
So carefully protects!

s strange such creatures should exist; that woman's form should clothe wretch unworthy woman's name—a hag we scorn and loathe.

What purpose can such harpies serve? What end fulfil?
Yet stay!
There is one task which Mrs. Peirce could suitably essay—
There is one form on which she could with justice vent her spite,
One culprit whom we'd see her flog with boisterous delight.
Let Argentina from its shores that swindling Jabez pack,
And Mrs. Peirce might fitly seam and score that rascal's back.

For scoundrels of most varied sorts,
The merest ignoramus
Knows well, from what the Press reports,
That Argentina's famous;
But of the more disgraceful knaves
That flourish on that shore, O!
By far the worst
And most accurst
Is Jabez S. Bal-four-O!
Where rascals are in vogue, ha! ha!
He is the vilest rogue, ha! ha!
That sanctimonious,
Most felonious
Jabez S. Bal-four-O!

Most villains, howsoe'er with shame
Their daily lives are teeming,
May with a show of reason claim
Some points which are redeeming.
But, utterly unscrupulous,
A blackguard to the core, O——
A scurvy thief,
Without relief,
Is Jabez S. Bal-four-O!
A hypocrite is he, ha! ha!
Of infamous degree, ha! ha!
That oily canting
Now levanting,
Jabez S. Bal-four-O!

The wonder is that any land,
Though it in vice may welter,
To such a wretch should hold a hand,
Or care to give him shelter.
And Argentina cannot hope
Her credit to restore, O!
Till with a shout,
She bundles out
This Jabez S. Bal-four-O!
Till with a kick and cuff, ha! ha!
She takes him by the scruff, ha! ha!
This most pernicious,
Wholly vicious
Jabez S. Bal-four-O!"

"Yes," shouted Truth, unable now her feelings to restrain,
"What is there that I would not give to get him here again?
Then Mrs. Peirce might fitly be employed, as you suggest,
To flog with all her fiendish might this fat and unctuous pest.
Gladly, indeed, I'd see the whip by her strong arm impelled,
Gladly, indeed, I'd watch the lash wind round him till he yelled.
Nay, 'gainst this foul and canting rogue my anger is so strong
That I would gladly drown his howls with this new Flogging Song—

Slish! Slash!
Bring down the lash!
To let it cut deeply forbear not.
Swish! Swash!
Swing round the lash!
Swifter and swifter, and spare not!

The Remington Standard Typewriter is used and endorsed the best by all large users of writing machines.—For particulars, ress, Wyckoff, Seamans, & Benedict, 100, Gracechurch-et, London, E.C.

Paté de Fois Gras, Russian Caviare, Boars' Heads, Truffled Turkeys, Raised Pies, Galantines, &c. &c. Send for detailed list of Luxuries for the present season to Morel's, 210, Piccadilly, W.

Swing it once for each of the prayers he uttered,
And once for each of the hearts he wrung,
And once for each of the oaths he muttered,
And once for each of the hymns he's sung.

Slish! Slash!
Bring down the lash!
To let it cut deeply forbear not!
Swish! Swash!
Swing round the lash!
Swifter and swifter, and spare not!

Swing it once for each of the hearths he plundered,
And once for each of the lies he told,
And once for each husband and wife he sundered,
And once for each victim his frauds cajoled.

Slish! Slash!
Bring down the lash!
Be deaf to his moaning and squealing!
Swish! Swash!
Swing round the lash!
'Tis a monster with whom you are dealing!

"And now," said TRUTH, when she had done, "I want one favour more.
Spook! With this message please to fly to Argentina's shore,
And having found that Jabez out, wait till he is alone,
And then read every word to him in your most Spooky tone!"

"TRUTH," came a Spook-voice in reply, "before the sun next rises Jabez, I promise you, shall have the Spookiest of surprises!"

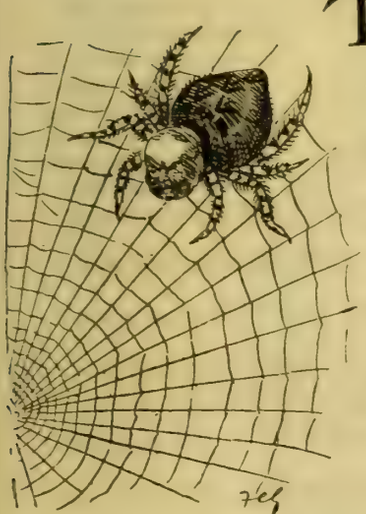
With this assurance TRUTH retired, and, though she has not heard,
She's every reason to suppose that Spook has kept its word.

Some Swindlers Spooked.



THE next night the Spook handwriting was exceptionally clear,
And the language used was crisp, too, and uncommonly severe.
"Persevere," so ran the message, "in your efforts to convict
Those impostors and those swindlers who your wicked world afflict.
Persevere in your endeavours, for it is a worthy task,
Quacks and charlatans and humbugs to discover and unmask.

"You already have done wonders, but you must not stay your hand,
Rogues and rascals and pretenders still infest your hapless land.
There is ——"
[Here the Spook dictated names in number so profuse,
That the list is far too lengthy for us new to reproduce.]
"Do not rest, then, on your laurels, there are other foes in sight."
(It was thus the Spook continued.) "Still be ready for the fight,
And if e'er your ardour lessens or your hopes are overcast,
Gain new courage by recalling your successes in the past.

There was 'Monte Carlo' Wells
With his vaunted patent sells,
Just think how you for years and years attack'd him;
How his projects you disclosed,
How his swindling you exposed,
And how in vain, time after time, you track'd him!
But your triumph came at length,
For the Law put out its strength,
And joined you in the conflict that you waged;
And since Mr. Wells's shock
In the Ancient Bailey's dock,
He has found himself quite otherwise engaged;
Most in-noc-u-ous-ly otherwise engaged,
Most in-dus-tri-ous-ly otherwise engaged.
And what makes our pleasure stronger
For some eight or nine years longer,
He is likely to be otherwise engaged!

You have been, too, the assailer
Of the pestilent black-mailer,
And the trafficker in make-believe degrees;
Your crusade's been most affective
'Gainst the fraudulent detective,
And you've brought the bogus agent to his knees;
Aye, the Morgans and the Binets
Will no more collect their guineas;
For, thanks to you, they're now securely caged,
And obedient to the orders
Of our convict-prison warders.
They at present are quite otherwise engaged—
Most in-noc-u-ous-ly otherwise engaged,
Most in-dus-tri-ous-ly otherwise engaged
Picking oakum, or ascending
Up a stairway never ending,
Or in some such manner otherwise engaged!

De Cobain, so long levanting,
Has at last to cease his canting,
Or to keep it for the prison chaplain's ear;
For this wolf, who wore sheep's clothing,
'Midst all decent people's loathing,
Has been now transferred to quite another sphere.
There he cannot mix his libel
With quotations from the Bible,
Till his bitter Orange rancour is assuaged;
Since this shameless text-distorter,
This sham Methodist exhorter,
For the present is quite otherwise engaged—
Most in-noc-u-ous-ly otherwise engaged,
Most in-dus-tri-ous-ly otherwise engaged—
Stones continually breaking,
Or door-mats daily making,
Or in some such manner otherwise engaged.

Hobbs and Wright for heartless swindling a just penalty are paying,
And that Jabez soon may join them with much heartiness are praying;
But that rogue of rogues, still lurking upon Argentina's strand,
Finds society congenial in that thieves' and robbers' land.

Many another rascal's waiting for the coming coup de grâce,
But the Law is most deliberate, and lets many chances pass,
Still, continue your endeavours, for as surely as you do,
Why, the Law, however sluggish, must perform its duty too.
The time wasted may be grievous, most annoying the delay,
But, egged on by your example, it, for shame, must act some day;

LENNOX'S WHISKY.—Special, 48s.; Choice, 42s.; Highland, Malt, and Scotch, 36s. per dozen cash.—Dumfries, N.B., and 41, Pall Mall, London, S.W.

Two Truefitts in Bond-st. H. P. TRUEFITT, 13 & 14, OLD Bond-st.
Two Truefitts in Bond-st. H. P. TRUEFITT, 13 & 14, OLD Bond-st.

Let all those, then, be most careful who your efforts still defy,
For the Public Prosecutor will awaken by-and-bye!

Let Mr. John James Jones beware—or, though he's so adroit,
He'll rue the day that Charity he ventured to exploit.
He must be extremely careful and, when challenged to explain,
Must with "pious" subterfuges not prevaricate again,
Nor lie passive 'neath your charges (which you don't and won't withdraw)
Because his Christianity won't let him go to law.
For unless he's very wary soon he'll tenant cease to be
Of that luxurious home of his at Sandgate-on-the-Sea.
For you've got him on your List,
And you'll keep him in your eye;
And the Public Prosecutor
May have him by-and-bye.
He may writhe and he may wriggle,
He may shuffle and may lie,
But the Public Prosecutor
May get him by-and-bye!

Let Mr. Ernest Day beware! That pertinacious cheat
Who works his 'ancient portrait' dodge with zeal so indiscreet;
Let Dr. Sturman have a care! and Mr. A. Maclean,
Who hatches swindles new each month with roguery serene!
Let begging-letter writers pause, ere on new schemes they start,
Let Parson Henville also halt—past master of the art;
And Beresford the 'Pastel' knave, let him his projects stay,
And that most recreant veteran, the tortuous MacVeigh.
For you have them on your List,
And you'll keep them in your eye,
And the Public Prosecutor
Will have them by-and-bye.
Yes, unless they quickly alter,
I'm prepared to prophesy
That the Public Prosecutor
Will have them by-and-bye.

Those most persistent rogues who work the Spanish Treasure trick,
Will find a less nefarious course by far more politic;
Those firms which purchase Army-cloth at prices so absurd,
Had better not repeat the fraud in which they have concurr'd;
Those Army-Sergeants who've abused their trust in ways so mean,
Must cease to rob poor Atkins when he goes to his canteen;
And Officers more highly placed, who at exposure writhe,
Would find it well to take to heart, what Truth has done at Hythe.
For you have them on your List,
And will keep them in your eye,
And the Public Prosecutor
May awaken by-and-bye.
They may threaten and may bluster,
They may argue and deny,
But the Public Prosecutor
Will be at them by-and-bye!"

"Yes," said Truth, "that high official, as I'm very glad to see,
Is much more wide awake just now than once he seemed to be.
He is not, perhaps, so wakeful as he might be even now,
But most difficult his task is, I will readily allow.
As a Government official, though his powers may be wide,
His hands with red-tape fetters all too frequently are tied;
And often when his actions savour somewhat of delay,
It is not the will that's wanting, all that's lacking is the way.
Still, there can be no objection, should he seem at times to nod,
To the kind administration of a well-meant warning prod."

Wrote the Spook, "Then that prod-giver must be you and you alone,
For no helpful disposition have the other papers shown."

"No," cried Truth in bitter accents, "I am very much afraid
When the papers lend assistance 'tis the swindlers that they aid.
Look at Wells; that he was able for so long to win success
Was indubitably due to the assistance of the Press.
'Twas in no uncertain language at his villainy I hinted,
Yet the dailies but too gladly his advertisements still printed.
That the very greatest caution can't prevent some slips, I know,
But no atom of discretion my contemporaries show,
When they with a callous blindness which one's indignation kindles
Print advertisements which must upon the face of them be swindles.
And of all the dailies acting in this very weakly way
Far the worst has been the Standard, I'm surprised and pained to say."

"Quite so!" the Spook wrote quickly; "it is time the truth was known—
It is time the chief offender to the public should be shown;
And it's time that other papers came and offered you their aid,
That no longer single-handed you may fight your new crusade."

A Spook Amongst the Bulls and Bears.

"Spooks!" exclaimed Truth, the following day, "I know you're round my chair,
For, though I cannot see you, of your presence I'm aware.
I've a suggestion I would make; to me it seems most strange
That some of you don't seek for work upon the Stock Exchange.
Its members have their telephones, their wires, and tapes and books,
But none of them as yet, I think, have laid on private Spooks.
This seems to me a great mistake, for think what splendid tips
A dealer daily might obtain from your omniscient lips.
If 'Julia' can, as we have been informed by Mr. Stead,
Predict what is to come to pass for several days ahead;
Why, only think what you could do in this prophetic way,
If you would in advance write down the price of 'Brighton A.'
To any firm, however rich—however good and old,
A Spook thus gifted would be worth a salary untold."
"The Stock Exchange," the Spook replied who at Truth's elbow waited,
"Does not deserve the spirit aid which you have advocated.
I doubt if even with our help, whatever that might cost,
It would regain that confidence which it so long has lost.

Major Howe & Co.'s fashionable Boots and Shoes (ready-made or to measure) for Ladies, Girls, and Gentlemen.—16, Coventry-st., W.; 400, Strand, W.C.; 81, Gracechurch-st., City; 13, Queen Victoria-street (Mansion House), London. (Klenrusha, Polish.)

Cremer's Entertainments.—Parkins & Gotto, of Oxford-street, having acquired the goodwill of the business of the late Mr. Cremer, of Regent-street and Bond-street, have re-engaged all the best artists, and are now booking orders for the holidays.

No, no, instead of hiring Spooks, 'twould be a wiser plan,
For it to get back public confidence as quickly as it can.
The public still mistrustful is, is most suspicious still,
And as a needful consequence the business done is nil.
It's quite heartrending to look down and see how, like a pall,
Gloom, black and hopeless, settles down on Gorgonzola Hall.
But yesterday, whilst hovering near that interesting spot,
I heard a shrewd Promoter thus bewail the common lot :—

Once we had riches and mansions so grand,
The Jobber and I and the Broker ;
We all drank champagne of the costliest brand –
The Jobber, and I, and the Broker.
The Jobber'd a yacht, with a swell club burgee,
The Broker and I had a place by the sea ;
And we rented a moor at Kingussie, N.B.,
The Jobber, and I, and the Broker—
The Broker, Broker,
Always a joker,
Kept us laughing, choke full of glee ;
We were as jolly as jolly could be,
The Jobber, and, I and the Broker !

Now, what a change ! Stoney-broken are we—
The Jobber, and I, and the Broker ;
Down on our luck most completely, all three,
The Jobber, and I, and the Broker !
Horses put down, and our mansions all let,
We have nothing to do but to pine and to fret,
And to smoke cheap cigars and to get into debt,—
The Jobber, and I, and the Broker !
The Broker, Broker,
Now is no joker,
Always grumbling, growling is he,
We are as dismal, as dismal can be,
The Jobber, and I, and the Broker.

In the old taking style we prospectuses write,
The Jobber, and I, and the Broker ;
But the public—confound them !—now shun us in fright.
The Jobber, and I, and the Broker ;
And if they much longer continue annoyed,
You will see us this winter, by p'licemen convoyed,
Join the daily street march of the poor unemployed,
The Jobber, and I, and the Broker !

'Pity ! Pity !
Men from the City !
Nothing to do, no £. s. d.'
This is the cry you will hear from us three—
The Jobber, and I, and the Broker !

"Nor is it strange," the Spook went on, "the public should object
To trust again the men by whom their confidence was wreck'd ?
Suspicion still is in the air, each man suspects his brother;
And, victim of some recent smash, dreads to be in another.
Thus, though the Stock Exchange of late has earned no censure new,
For past offences it must still bear retribution due.
The goose that laid it golden eggs was badly terrified,
And it may be much longer yet before its fears subside.
Still, if that goose were wise, which it most certainly is not,
'Twould see that 'tis already time that it the past forgot.
Yes, if it were not such a goose, it would, without a doubt,
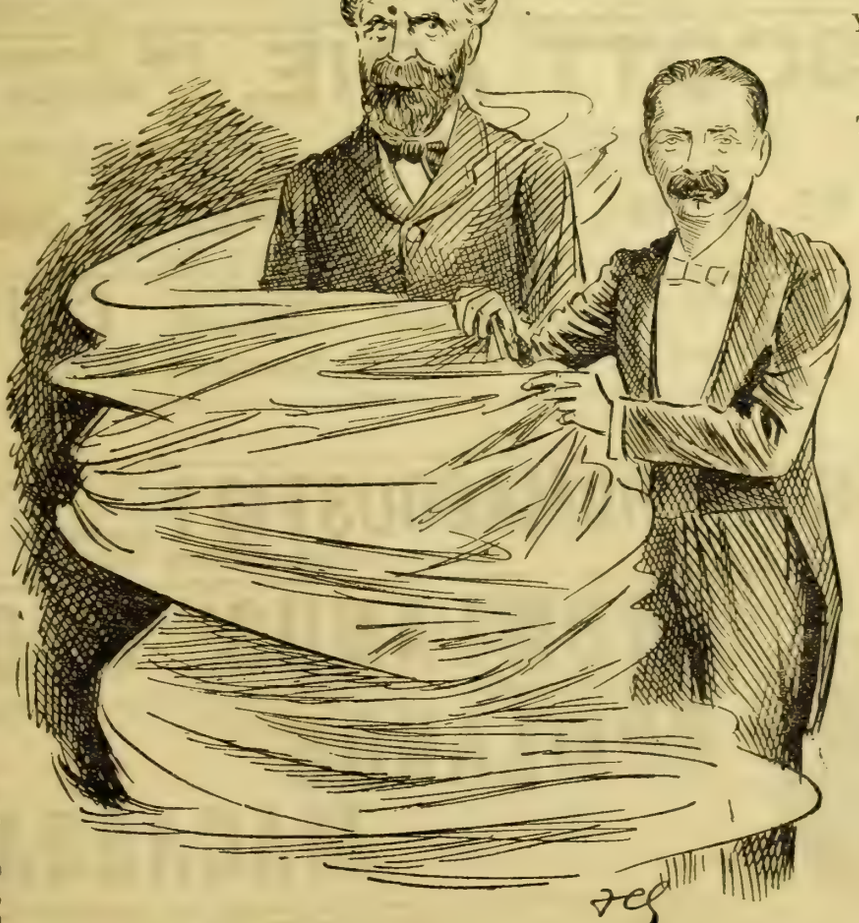
Peck at the many golden grains that lie just now about.
Not recklessly, but cautiously, 'twould now employ its beak
Till on a well-selected fare it once again grew sleek.

The Last of the Spooks.

HER task completed, TRUTH sent off to the Egyptian Hall,
And Mr. Maskelyne at once responded to her call.
"See what the Spooks have done," she cried, "and done at my command."
(And, with the same, she placed this Christmas Number in his hand.)
"'Tis not at Mowbray House alone Spook-messages are read,
But"—here a boy the door threw back, announcing "Mr. Stead."

"Come in," cried TRUTH—and Mr. S. at once made his advance.



"To think we three should meet," said she ; "this is a happy chance.
You, too, Stead, will be glad to learn in what a handsome way
The Spooks have rallied round me since we met the other day."
"And so," he answered, eagerly, "you're a believer now,
And that Spooks do indeed exist, you're ready to avow."

Said TRUTH (and Maskelyne and she exchanged most meaning looks),
"Yes, as a journalist, I do indeed believe in Spooks :
They make most splendid 'copy', and I've not the slightest doubt
That when it's published they will sell my Christmas number out.
But now that they have served my turn, to them I'll say 'Adieu !'

And Stead, if you're a prudent man, why you will say so too.
They've also served your turn, I know, but frankly you'd do best
To follow my example now and give the Spooks a rest."

"You dare suggest," cried Stead, but Truth held up a warning hand;
"Come, come," she cried, "your 'daily' soon will all your time demand,
And if you can't the Spooks give up, why then I would propose
That you and Mr. Maskelyne should now this bargain close:
Let him a new illusion plan of Spooky disappearance,
To which you as confederate shall give your warm adherence.

And as a finish to this trick of Spookery most dread,
When the white sheet is drawn, then let the Spook appear in Stead."

In vain Stead tried to still look stern, and very soon all three,
He, Maskelyne, and Truth, laughed out right long and merrily.
And hoping that this laugh may be a thousand times repeated,
When by its countless readers this Truth's Number new is greeted,
Truth wishes all her friends and foes, with feelings most sincere,

A very Ghostly Christmas and the Spookiest New Year.

THE MANUFACTURING
GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY,
(With which is Incorporated the Goldsmiths' Alliance, Ld. (A. B. Savory & Sons), late of Cornhill, E.C.),
Show Rooms: 112, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W. (Adjoining Stereoscopic Company.)
Supply the public direct at Manufacturers' Cash Prices, saving purchasers from 25 to 50 per cent.

Fine Gold Bracelet, £2 15s.

Fine Pearl, Diamond, & Golden Cornelian Brooch, £10 10s.

Awarded Nine Gold Medals and the Cross of the Legion of Honour.

Fine Pearl and Golden Cornelian Bracelet, £6.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST FREE.

The Largest and Choicest Stock in the World of NOVELTIES IN JEWELLERY SUITABLE FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S PRESENTS.

Goods forwarded to the Country on approval.

Fine Pearl and Golden Cornelian Bracelet, £5 10s.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Brooch £10 10s. With "Xmas" in Enamel, £6.

Fine Pearl and Diamond Cluster Half-Hoop Bracelet, £50. Sapphires and Diamonds, £50.

SCOTT ADIE, THE ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE,
FOR
Shooting and Fishing Suits. Waterproof Capes. Gowns and Jackets.
Hand-Knit Stockings. Rugs, Mauds, and Shawls, Highland Suits and Jewellery.
TELEGRAMS— SCOTT ADIE, LONDON.
115 & 115a, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.
Price List and Patterns Post-free.

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN,
Great Ormond-street, London, W.C.
The Committee URGENTLY APPEAL to the Public for £9,000, to pay off the DEBT on the NEW WING opened last June. Any contribution will be gratefully received.
ADRIAN HOPE, Secretary.

WHAT IS THE HOMACOUSTIC? THE GREATEST CONVENIENCE OF THE AGE. A REVOLUTION IN SPEAKING TUBES
Showrooms, 22, QUEEN STREET, LONDON, E.C.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO
Whitens the Teeth, prevents decay, and gives a pleasing fragrance to the breath.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL
Known for 100 years as the best and safest preserver and beautifier of the hair, and is by far the best Brilliantine for the Beard and Mustaches. It can also be had in a golden colour. Sold in usual four sizes. Ask any Chemist for Rowlands' articles.

"You must have your habit from Busvine, of course."

—TRUTH, Oct. 5, 1893.

COUNTY GENTLEMAN.—"I am astonished that any fair Diana should be without a Busvine Habit."

COURT CIRCULAR.—"Mr. Busvine is acknowledged to be pre-eminent in Riding Habits."

DAILY NEWS. — "The Busvine Safety Skirt has saved many a life. The skill that conceived and carried out this very ingenious invention pervades the rest of the details of the Riding Habit. The uninitiated in such matters would be astonished at the results obtainable by means of a habit so innocently simple in appearance that no one would imagine it capable of concealing a defect or developing a curve that otherwise would err in incompleteness."

DAILY TELEGRAPH. — "Habits turned out by inimitable Busvine are the pink of perfection."

FIELD. — "That great purveyor of ladies' hunting properties, Busvine."

GLOBE.—"Busvine is the arbiter of woman's destiny with regard to her equestrian attire."

GRAPHIC.—"The lines are perfect in the Habits made by Busvine."

HORSE AND HOUND. — "Mr. Busvine's Habits look perfection."

LADY'S PICTORIAL.—"That too delicious Habit of Busvine's."

LAND AND WATER.—"Busvine's Habits are world-renowned."

LIFE. — "That faultless builder of Riding Habits, Busvine."

LONDON SOCIETY. — "Busvine, the hierarch of cloth so far as riding gear is concerned."

NEW YORK HERALD.—"Compliments on Mr. Busvine's Habits have never been wanting since their perfections were discovered. The Princess of Wales swears by them, if so gentle a lady can be said to express her faith by any such downright method."

MR. BUSVINE'S NEW DESIGNS FOR THE HUNTING SEASON, 1893-4,

Include several quite Unique Styles in

HUNTING HABITS,
COATS FOR DRIVING & WALKING
COVERT COATS,
WALKING JACKETS AND GOWNS

New Materials have been specially made for many of them which cannot be obtained elsewhere. Sketches and Patterns sent by post if desired.

JOHN BUSVINE,

By Special Appointments to

The Princess of Wales,
The Duchess of Fife,
The Marchioness of Lorne,
The Princess Henry of Battenberg
The Duchess of Connaught,
The Duchess of Albany,
The Empress of Austria,
The Empress of Germany,
The Princess Henry of Prussia,
The Princess Victoria of Prussia,
The Countess de Paris,
The Princess Helene d'Orleans,

4, BROOK STREET, LONDON, W.

OBSERVER. — "At Mr. Busvine's, cutting and fitting are reduced to a fine art; his name is a household word when the subject under discussion is equestrian attire."

PALL MALL GAZETTE. — "Busvine's neat Riding Habits and smart waistcoats."

PICCADILLY. — "Busvine, the builder of Habits of symmetry and of safety."

QUEEN.—"The arch-master in the art of Habit-making, Mr. Busvine."

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"These dainty gentleman-like garments, Habits cut by Busvine, in lines which makes fit and style sufficient charm."

ST. STEPHEN'S REVIEW.—"Busvine's Habits outrival any I have seen anywhere."

THE CITIZEN. — "The Riding Habits supplied by Mr. Busvine are beautifully finished."

THE LADY. — "Mr. Busvine is unrivalled as a Habit-maker."

TRUTH. — "Busvine, the infallible authority as to the latest fashion in Riding Habits—a sort of Pope in such matters."

VANITY FAIR. — "Busvine, the champion Habit-maker.

WEEKLY TIMES.—"It would be impossible to describe the beauties of a Busvine Habit in writing; they need to be seen to be appreciated."

WHITEHALL REVIEW. — "That exquisite appearance is due to Mr. Busvine."

WORLD. — "That hero of Habits, Mr. Busvine, whose praise is in all smart hunts."

"Beautifully built, flexible yet firm, no end of minor imperfections may be hidden away in one of Busvine's coats."

—THE WORLD, Oct. 25, 1893.

D

MAPLE & CO
LIMITED
TOTTENHAM COURT ROAD
LONDON W
THE LARGEST AND MOST CONVENIENT
Furnishing Establishment
IN THE WORLD
ESTABLISHED FIFTY YEARS.

Ice pail, with drainer, in glass with electro silver-plated mounts, very strong, 12s. 6d.

Superior cut-glass and electro-plated claret jug, 18s. 9d.

Handsome electro-plated crumb scoop, with shaped handle, best quality, and full size, 12s. 6d.

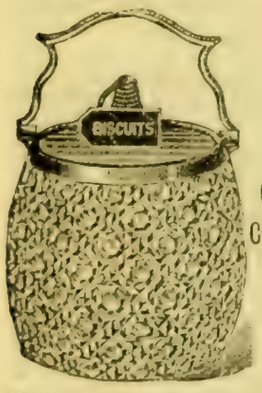
Superior quality new model electro-plated egg stand, with spoons complete, £1. 7s. 6d.

USEFUL PRESENTS

Queen Anne afternoon tea set, triple plated.
Tea Pot, £1. 4s. 6d. Sugar, 12s. 6d. Cream, 10s. 6d. Set, £2. 6s. 6d.

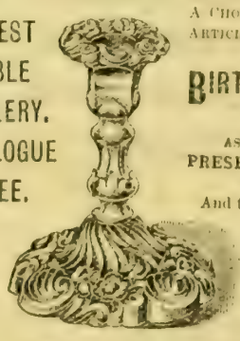
USEFUL PRESENTS

Superior electro-plated silver kettle and stand, with lamp complete, £1. 13s. 6d.



Handsome cut-glass and electro-plated biscuit box, £1. 5s.

FINEST TABLE CUTLERY. CATALOGUE FREE.



Electro silver-plated table or piano candlestick, 8½ in. high, 11s. 9d. each.

A CHOICE SELECTION OF ARTICLES APPROPRIATE — FOR — BIRTHDAY GIFTS AS WELL AS FOR PRESENTATIONS, TESTIMONIALS, And the like purposes, ALWAYS ON VIEW.

Electro silver triple-plated candlestick, 7½ in. high, 15s. each.

NOVELTIES IN CRYSTAL TABLE GLASS. CATALOGUE FREE.

Six frosted triple silver-plated napkin rings with gilt figures, in case complete, £1. 3s. 6d.

Electro silver triple-plated double marmalade or preserve dish, with richly cut crystal inner dishes, £1. 5s. 6d.

Electro silver triple-plated sweets dishes, in various sizes.
6½ 7½ 9½ 12½ inches
11s. 17s. 6d. 22s. 6d. 37s. 6d.

Handsome repoussée and chased entrée dish and cover, with loose handle, triple silver-plated, £2. 10s.

Very good triple-plated celery or fruit dish, richly engraved, and with cut-glass dish £1 17 0
Ditto, sterling silver 6 7 6

Very handsome embossed and engraved breakfast dish, forming soup tureen, as well as fish and bacon dish; best quality and finish, triple plated £4 7 6

Best electro-silver triple-plated repoussée biscuit box, a useful size £1 12 6
Ditto, sterling silver 12 5 0

NEW CATALOGUE OF ELECTRO-PLATED WARES POST FREE

Sampson Low, Marston, & Company's New Books.

TWO NEW THREE-VOLUME NOVELS AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

THE HANDSOME HUMES. By William Black. Second Edition.

THE EMIGRANT SHIP. By W. Clark Russell. Second Edition.

"The story is capitally told, and full of fresh interest."—Athenæum, Oct. 28, 1893.

IMPORTANT NEW WORK BY HENRY M. STANLEY.

MY DARK COMPANIONS AND THEIR STRANGE STORIES. By Henry

M. STANLEY, D.C.L., &c. With over 60 Illustrations by Walter W. Buckley. 1 vol. small demy 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

"Mr. Stanley has constructed a fascinating edifice of folk-lore.....A collection of mythological stories, which are both interesting and instructive."—Daily Telegraph.

LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL'S TRAVELS IN MASHONALAND. CHEAP EDITION.

MEN, MINES, AND ANIMALS IN SOUTH AFRICA. By Lord Randolph

CHURCHILL. With Special Portrait, numerous Illustrations, and Route-Map. Third and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

"Unusually interesting; so sincere in tone, and so studded with practically suggestive matter touching recently acquired African territory as a field for either agricultural or commercial enterprise."—Athenæum.

A MEMOIR of EDWARD CALVERT, ARTIST. By his Third Son, SAMUEL CALVERT. With Thirty Inset Plates, and other Illustrations in Facsimile from the Artist's Designs.
Strictly LIMITED EDITION of 350 Copies, imperial quarto, with large margins, each copy numbered and signed, THREE GUINEAS net.

LANDMARKS of a LITERARY LIFE, 1820-1892. By Mrs. NEWTON CROSLAND (Camilla Toulmin), Author of "Mrs. Blake," &c. With Photogravure Portrait. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.
"There are, it may be said, few notable names in the art, literature, and drama of the period embraced by the volume which do not recall to the venerable author interesting reminiscences."—Scotsman.

The LAST EARLS of BARRYMORE, 1769-1824. By J. R. ROBINSON, Author of "The Princely Chandos," &c. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

CHARLES KEENE'S LIFE and LETTERS. By GEORGE SOMES LAYARD, B.A. With Three Portraits, Thirty Full-page and Forty-four smaller Illustrations, including 15 Photogravures. Cheap Edition. 8vo, cloth, 12s 6d.
Mr. Layard's book is worthy of his subject, and excellent reading from first to last."—Saturday Review.
"One of the most beautiful illustrated books that has appeared for many years."—Spectator.

WILLIAM HOGARTH, Mr. AUSTIN DOBSON'S CRITICAL BIOGRAPHY OF. Cheap Edition. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.
"An authoritative monograph on Hogarth and his works.....Executed in a manner eminently worthy of Mr. Dobson's high reputation for literary skill and critical acumen."—Times.

A CENTURY of PAINTERS of the ENGLISH SCHOOL. By the late RICHARD REDGRAVE, C.B., R.A., and SAMUEL REDGRAVE. New Edition. With the addition of Twenty-four Full-Page Illustrations. Square 4to, cloth, gilt top, 7s. 6d.

MEMORABLE PARIS HOUSES: a Handy Guide, with Illustrative, Critical, and Anecdotal Notices. By WILMOT HARRISON, Author of "Memorable London Houses." With over 60 Original Illustrations of Celebrities and their Houses. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

NEW NOVELS AND STORIES AT ALL LIBRARIES.

A PRISONER of WAR. By F. A. INDERWICK, Q.C., Author of "Sidelights on the Stuarts," &c. Illustrated after Drawings by WILLIAM PADGETT. Bound in Japanese vellum, small post 8vo, 5s.

CLAUDEA'S ISLAND. By ESMÉ STUART, Author of "Virginie's Husband," "Joan Vollacott," &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

A WITCH'S LEGACY. By HESKETH J. BELL, Author of "Obeah: Witchcraft in the West Indies," &c. 2 vols. crown 8vo, cloth, 21s.

The TRIUMPH of THERESA: A Novel. By JEFFREY ARDEN. 2 vols. crown 8vo, cloth, 21s.

BEYOND the BUSTLE: a Tale of South Africa. By JENNER TAYLER. 1 vol. crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

The FEVER of LIFE. By FERGUS HUME, Author of "The Mystery of a Hansom Cab," &c. New and Cheaper Edition. 1 vol. crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Ask at your Booksellers' to see the NEW EDITIONS of William Black's Novels.

R. D. Blackmore's Novels.
Thomas Hardy's Wessex Novels.
W. Clark Russell's Sea Stories.
Dr. MacDonald's Novels.

Now being issued in uniform volumes, with portraits, bound in cloth extra.
HALF-A-CROWN per VOLUME.

MAJOR WINGATE'S BOOK.—TENTH AND CHEAPER EDITION.

TEN YEARS' CAPTIVITY in the MAHDI'S CAMP, 1882-1892. From the Original Manuscripts of Father Joseph Ohrwalder, late Priest of the Austrian Mission Station at Delen, in Kordofan. By Major F. R. WINGATE, R.A. Fully Illustrated, Revised, and Condensed. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.
"A book unique of its kind, and well worthy of the permanent place it has attained in contemporary literature."—See twenty-page criticism in Dublin Review for October, 1893.

HOW I SHOT MY BEARS; or, Two Years' Tent-Life in Kullu and Lahoul. By Mrs. R. H. TYACKE. With Maps and numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.
"Something really new and original in the literature of sport....Mrs. Tyacke's tone is always lively, her style is pleasant, graphic, and accurate, and her book is charming."—World.

ON the INDIAN HILLS; or, Coffee-Planting in Southern India. By EDWIN LESTER ARNOLD, Author of "The Wonderful Adventures of Phra the Phœnician." Revised and partly Re-written. With a Preface by Sir EDWIN ARNOLD. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.
"Fresher matter or more interesting reading of the kind has not been given to the public."—Scotsman.

TWO ROVING ENGLISHWOMEN in GREECE. By ISABEL J. ARMSTRONG. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.
"A lively narrative of an adventurous tour in classic lands, full of high spirits and good humour."—Times.

FROM the ARCTIC OCEAN to the YELLOW SEA: the Narrative of a Journey across Siberia, Mongolia, the Gobi Desert, and North China. By JULIUS M. PRICE, F.R.G.S. With Photogravure Portrait, Facsimiles, and 150 Illustrations. Route Map. Cheaper Edition, with a New Preface. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

The LAND of POCO TIEMPO: the Great American Mystery. By CHARLES F. LUMMIS, Author of "A Tramp Across the Continent," &c. Numerous Illustrations from Photographs and Sketches by the Author. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 10s. 6d.

CAMP FIRES of a NATURALIST: the Story of Fourteen Expeditions after North American Mammals, from the Field Notes of Prof. LEWIS L. DYCHE, of the Kansas State University. By CLARENCE E. EDWORDS. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

COMIC TRAGEDIES. Written by "Joe" and "Meg," and acted by the "Little Women." By LOUISA M. ALCOTT, Author of "Little Men," &c. With Portraits. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

The BLACK BAR. By GEORGE MANVILLE FENN, Author of "Off to the Wilds," "Dick o' the Fens," "The Silver Cañon," &c. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

The CASTLE of the CARPATHIANS. By JULES VERNE. Profusely Illustrated. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.
"A winter without a book by Jules Verne would scarcely be intelligible."—Globe.

UNDER the SEA to the NORTH POLE. By PIERRE MAEL. Fully Illustrated. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

"BOYS" FIRST ANNUAL VOLUME (832 pages). Price 7s. 6d. Handsomely bound in red cloth, gilt bevelled boards, unique and attractive design. Nearly Eight Hundred Illustrations, including Thirteen Coloured Plates. Serial and Short Stories by G. A. HENTY, GEORGE MANVILLE FENN, H. M. STANLEY, ASCOTT R. HOPE, S. BARING GOULD, ROBERT OVERTON, and many other equally well-known and Popular Authors.
The DAILY TELEGRAPH says: "An admirable work, full of pictures, coloured and plain, and containing an immense variety of stories and adventures."

DECEMBER NUMBER NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING.

FASHIONS of TO-DAY in Dress, Fancy Work, Art, Music, Literature, Women's Work, &c.

With Coloured Plate, Pattern Sheet, and numerou Illustrations.

The November Number commences a New Volume.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, Christmas Number.

PRICE ONE SHILLING. PRINCIPAL CONTENTS.

AN UNPUBLISHED WORK OF SIR WALTER SCOTT: Private Letters of King James's Reign, with an Introduction by ANDREW LANG.

AN ARTIST AMONG ANIMALS, elaborately illustrated by the Author, F. S. CHURCH, the great animal painter, who for many years has made a study of the habits of wild and domestic animals.

A BACHELOR'S CHRISTMAS, a Story, by ROBERT GRANT, the Author of "The Reflections of a Married Man." Illustrated by IRVING R. WILES.

CONSTANTINOPLE. By F. MARION CRAWFORD, Author of "Paul Patoff," illustrated by EDWIN L. WEEKS, both of whom made a journey to the Turkish capital especially to prepare this article.

A SEARCH FOR DELLA ROBBIAS IN ITALY. By ALLAN MARQUAND. Illustrated in tint from his unequalled collection of photographs.

And many other Stories, Poems, and Descriptive Articles.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS it will be seen are particularly elaborate, there being twenty full-page and forty text illustrations.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

BRIGHTON—HÔTEL MÉTROPOLE

The finest and most luxurious Sea-side Hotel in the World. Very moderate charges. Almost opposite the West Pier. Suites of Apartments with Bath-room, &c. Also Double and Single Bedrooms at moderate prices. Electric Light everywhere. High-class Cuisine. Luxurious Turkish and other Baths. Large Garden. The Building is entirely Fireproof.
Full particulars by post, or room plan can be seen in London at the Grand, Métropole, or First Avenue Hotels.

Proprietors — THE GORDON HOTELS, LIMITED.

TRELOAR'S CARPETS

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

AXMINSTER PILE CARPETS,
2/11 (American) 3/11 to 4/9
WILTON PILE CARPETS,
3/9 to 4/6
BRUSSELS CARPETS,
2/1 to 3/9

TAPESTRY CARPETS,
1/9 to 2/6
LINOLEUM,
1/- to 4/- PER SQUARE YARD.
DECCAN RUGS,
8/9 EACH.

CATALOGUES FREE.

TRELOAR & SONS
LUDGATE HILL.

AN ABSOLUTELY SAFE MILK SUPPLY

TO ALL PARTS OF LONDON

The Farms are within half-an-hour's drive of the Chief Dairy, thus ensuring a Supply of Pure Rich Fresh Milk from our own Cows within Two Hours of Milking. Orders to—

The whole of the Farms and Dairies being under constant Medical and Sanitary Inspection.

WELFORD & SONS, LIMITED,

Cowkeepers and Dairy Farmers.

CHIEF DAIRY AND OFFICES: ELGIN AVENUE, MAIDA VALE, W.,

—BEING—

THE LARGEST DAIRY IN LONDON

FRONTAGE TO ELGIN AVENUE AND SHIRLAND ROAD, 651 FEET.

Consulting Medical Officer.
SIDNEY MARTIN, Esq., M.D., F.R.C.P.
Analyst.—A. W. STOKES, Esq., F.C.S.

Inspector of Farms.
E. F. WILLOUGHBY, Esq., M.D. Lond., San. Sci. Cert. Camb.
Veterinary Staff.—Messrs. WOODGER, PRIESTMAN, & WOODROOF.
JOHN WELFORD, Esq., Managing Director.

Medical Officer for Employés.
G. GWYNNE BIRD, Esq., M.R.C.S.

N.B.—BRANCH DAIRIES IN ALL PARTS OF THE METROPOLIS.

Messrs. William Blackwood & Sons' Publications.

THE RISE OF OUR EAST AFRICAN EMPIRE: Early Efforts in Uganda and Nyasaland. By F. D. LUGARD, D.S.O., Captain Norfolk Regiment. 2 vols. With 140 Illustrations and 14 specially-prepared Maps. Large demy 8vo, 42s.

LIFE AND TIMES OF THE RT. HON. WILLIAM HENRY SMITH, M.P. By Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P., Author of "Passages in the Life of Sir Lucian Elphin," "Meriolana," &c. With 3 Photogravure portraits, 3 Etchings from Drawings by HERBERT RAILTON, and other Illustrations by RAILTON, SEYMOUR, and others. 2 vols., demy 8vo, 25s.

THE ARABIAN HORSE: His Country and PEOPLE. By Major-General W. TWEEDIE, C.S.I., for many years H.B.M.'S Consul-General, Baghdad, and Political Resident for the Government of India in Turkish Arabia. In 1 vol., royal 4to, with 7 Coloured Plates and other Illustrations, and a Map of the Country. Price £3 3s.

A JOURNEY THROUGH THE YEMEN, and some General Remarks upon that Country. By WALTER B. HARRIS, F.R.G.S., Author of "The Land of an African Sultan: Travels in Morocco," &c. With 3 Maps and numerous Illustrations by FORESTIER and WALLACE from Sketches and Photographs taken by the Author. Demy 8vo, 16s.

ON SOME OF SHAKESPEARE'S FEMALE CHARACTERS. By HELENA FAUCIT, LADY MARTIN. Dedicated by permission to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen. Fifth Edition, with Portrait by LEHMANN. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d.

ROUND THE BLACK MAN'S GARDEN. By ZELIE COLVILE, F.R.G.S. With 2 Maps and 52 Illustrations from Drawings by the Author and from Photographs. Demy 8vo, 16s.

GEORGE ELIOT.

GEORGE ELIOT'S NOVELS. CHEAP EDITION. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. In Uniform Binding.
ADAM BEDE, 3s. 6d.; THE MILL ON THE FLOSS, 3s. 6d.; FELIX HOLT, THE RADICAL, 3s. 6d.; SCENES OF CLERICAL LIFE, 3s.; SILAS MARNER, 2s. 6d.; ROMOLA, 3s. 6d.; DANIEL DERONDA, 7s. 6d.; MIDDLEMARCH, 7s. 6d.; GEORGE ELIOT'S LIFE, 7s. 6d. Also to be had handsomely bound in Half Morocco, Full Calf, and Half Calf, for presentation.

GEORGE ELIOT'S LIFE AND WORKS. CABINET EDITION. Printed from a new and legible type. Complete in 24 Volumes, price £6. Each Volume, price 5s., may be had separately. Also to be had handsomely bound in various leather bindings, very suitable for presentation.

Wm. BLACKWOOD & SONS, EDINBURGH AND LONDON.

BLACKIE & SON'S NEW BOOKS.

Stories by Popular Authors.

A DOZEN ALL TOLD.

A Series of Twelve Stories by W. E. NORRIS, F. W. ROBINSON, G. A. HENTY, G. R. SIMS, WILLIAM WESTALL, F. BOYLE, Mrs. ALEXANDER, MONA CAIRD, HELEN MATHERS, FLORENCE MARRYAT, JOHN STRANGE WINTER, and ADELINE SERGEANT.

With 12 Illustrations by 12 well-known Artists.

In crown 8vo, handsomely bound in cloth extra, 6s.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S EVE: a Tale of the Huguenot Wars. By G. A. HENTY. With 12 Page Illustrations by H. J. DRAPER, and a Map. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olivine edges, 6s.

THROUGH THE SIKH WAR: a Tale of the Conquest of the Punjaub, by G. A. HENTY. With 12 Page Illustrations by HAL HURST, and a Map. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olivine edges, 6s.

The CLEVER MISS FOLLET. By J. K. H. DENNY. With 12 Page Illustrations by GERTRUDE D. HAMMOND. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olivine edges, 6s.

A JACOBITE EXILE: being the Adventures of a Young Englishman in the Service of Charles XII. of Sweden. By G. A. HENTY. With 8 Page Illustrations by PAUL HARDY, and a Map. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olivine edges, 5s.

The WRECK of the "GOLDEN FLEECE": the Story of a North Sea Fishership. By ROBERT LEIGHTON. With 8 Page Illustrations by FRANK BRANGWYN. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olivine edges, 5s.

WESTWARD WITH COLUMBUS. By Gordon STABLES, M.D., C.M. With 8 Page Illustrations by ALFRED PEARSE. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olivine edges, 5s.

The WHITE CONQUERORS of MEXICO: a Tale of Toltec and Aztec. By KIRK MUNROE. With 8 Page Illustrations by W. S. STACEY. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olivine edges, 5s.

A FAIR CLAIMANT: being a Story for Girls. By FRANCES ARMSTRONG. With 8 Page Illustrations by GERTRUDE D. HAMMOND. Crown 8vo, cloth elegant, olivine edges, 5s.

 BLACKIE & SON'S New Illustrated Catalogue of Books suitable for Presentation, &c., sent post free on application.*

London: BLACKIE & SON, Limited, Old Bailey.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST

ANSTEY (F.) — THE MAN FROM BLANKLEY'S, &c. Reprinted from Punch. With 24 Illustrations by J. BERNARD PARTRIDGE. Post 4to, 6s.

— THE TRAVELLING COMPANIONS. Reprinted from Punch. With 25 Illustrations by J. BERNARD PARTRIDGE. Post 4to, 5s.

— VOCES POPULI. Reprinted from Punch. FIRST SERIES. With 20 Illustrations by J. BERNARD PARTRIDGE. Fcap. 4to, 5s. SECOND SERIES. With 25 Illustrations by J. BERNARD PARTRIDGE. Fcap. 4to, 6s.

DOYLE (A. Conan) — THE REFUGEES: a Tale of Two Continents. Crown 8vo, 6s.

HAGGARD (H. Rider) — SHE. With 32 Illustrations. Cr. 8vo, 3s. 6d.

— ALLAN QUATERMAIN. With 31 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

— MAIWA'S REVENGE. Crown 8vo, 1s. boards, 1s. 6d. cloth.

— COLONEL QUARITCH, V.C. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

— CLEOPATRA. With 29 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

— BEATRICE. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

— ERIC BRIGHTEYES. With 51 Illustration. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

— NADA THE LILY. With 23 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.

— MONTEZUMA'S DAUGHTER. With 24 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.

HAGGARD (H. Rider) and LANG (Andrew) — THE WORLD'S DESIRE. Crown 8vo, 6s.

LANG (Andrew) — THE TRUE STORY BOOK. With 8 Plates and 58 Illustrations in the Text. Crown 8vo, gilt edges, 6s.

— THE GREEN FAIRY BOOK. With 13 Plates and 88 Illustrations in the Text. Crown 8vo, 6s.

— THE BLUE FAIRY BOOK. With 8 Plates and 130 Illustrations in the Text. Crown 8vo, 6s.

— THE RED FAIRY BOOK. With 4 Plates and 96 Illustrations in the Text. Crown 8vo, 6s.

— THE BLUE POETRY BOOK. With 12 Plates and 88 Illustrations in the Text. Crown 8vo, 6s.

— THE BLUE POETRY BOOK. Special Edition, printed on India Paper, with Notes, but without Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN, & CO.

SEELEY & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

AT EVERY LIBRARY.

Just ready, demy 8vo, price 16s.

MADAME: Memoirs of Henrietta, Daughter of Charles I. and Duchess of Orleans. By JULIA CARTRIGHT (Mrs. Henry Ady, Author of "Sacharissa"). With Two Portraits on Copper.
 This Volume contains Ninety Unpublished Letters of Charles II.
"There has just been published what is practically a discovery. In an interesting book on a woman who fascinated her generation as much as any that ever lived, there are ninety-eight letters of Charles II. to his Sister, published for the first time."—The National Observer.
"Political events and Court gossip, negotiations and alliances, quarrels and intrigues are all freely discussed in them, and they show us the Merry Monarch with his well-known faults and weaknesses, his levity, not unmixed with cynicism, his indolence, and his good nature."—Glasgow Herald.

Just ready, demy 8vo, price 16s.

THE PARIS LAW COURTS: Sketches OF MEN AND MANNERS. Translated from the French by GERALD P. MORIARTY, of Balliol College, Oxford. With 140 Illustrations.
"Capitally got up and illustrated."—Times.
"First an entertaining book, and then one that instructs."—Scotsman.
"Very amusing, but there is also no little information in the book."—Solicitors' Journal.

NEW NOVEL BY VINCENT BRITON.

THE FACE OF DEATH: A Westmore- LAND STORY. By E. VINCENT BRITON. In 1 vol. Price 6s.
"There is a touch of originality about this book which is distinctly refreshing. The story is decidedly interesting, remarkably well written, and has an ending happy enough to please anybody."—Glasgow Herald.

Just Published.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS. By Claude PHILLIPS. With Nine Copper Plates. Large Crown 8vo, price 7s. 6d. (150 Large Paper Copies at 21s. net.)

Just Published, price 6s.

ASPECTS OF MODERN OXFORD. By A MERE DON. With Twenty-Eight Illustrations by J. H. LORIMER, T. H. CRAWFORD, LANCELOT SPEED, and E. STAMP. Large crown, 8vo, price 6s.

Just Published, price 25s.

THE RIVIERA. Twenty Etchings and Forty Vignettes. By ALEXANDER ANSTED. With Notes by the Artist. Price 21s. net. (50 Large Paper Copies at 42s. net.)

SEELEY & CO., Limited, Essex-street, Strand.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S LIST.

A very Attractive and Elegant Christmas Present.

THE POCKET EDITION OF W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS, In a New Style of Binding.

The Volumes of this Edition are now supplied, elegantly bound in cloth, with gilt top, as follows:

THE NOVELS. 13 Volumes in gold-lettered cloth case, 13s.

THE MISCELLANIES. 14 Volumes in gold-lettered cloth case, 14s.

With a Steel Engraving of a recent Portrait of Mr. SYMONDS, demy 8vo, 12s. 6d.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE RENAISSANCE IN ITALY. Taken from the work of JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS. By Lieut.-Colonel ALFRED PEALSON.

VOLTAIRE'S VISIT TO ENGLAND, 1726-1729. By ARCHIBALD BALLANTYNE. Crown 8vo, 8s. 6d.

ALL THE YEAR WITH NATURE. By P. ANDERSON GRAHAM. Crown 8vo, 5s.

"Absolutely indispensable to every well-furnished library."—Times.
"The magnum opus of our generation."—Truth.

Royal 8vo, price 15s. net per volume in cloth; or in half-morocco, marbled edges, 20s. net.

THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.

Edited by LESLIE STEPHEN and SIDNEY LEE.

Thirty-six Volumes, comprising ABBADIE—MASON, have been published; and a further Volume will be issued Quarterly until the completion of the Work. Volume XXXVII. will be ready on December 25.

W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.

THE CHEAPER ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

In 26 Volumes, crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. each; sets in cloth, £4. 11s.; or handsomely bound in half-morocco, £8. 8s. Containing nearly all the small Wood-cut Illustrations of the former Editions, and many new Illustrations by Eminent Artists. This Edition contains altogether 1,773 Illustrations.

CONTENTS OF THE VOLUMES.

Vanity Fair. Illustrated by the Author. 2 vols.

Pendennis. Illustrated by the Author. 2 vols.

The Newcomes. Illustrated by RICHARD DOYLE. 2 vols.

Esmond. Illustrated by GEORGE DU MAURIER.

The Virginians. Illustrated by the Author. 2 vols.

The Adventures of Philip. Illustrated by the Author, FREDERICK WALKER, and R. B. WALLACE. 2 vols.

The Great Hoggarty Diamond; A Little Dinner at Timmins's; Cornhill to Cairo. Illustrated by the Author, J. P. ATKINSON, and W. J. Webb.

Christmas Books. Illustrated by the Author and RICHARD DOYLE.

The Book of Snobs; Travels and Sketches. Illustrated by the Author.

Burlesques. Illustrated by the Author and GEORGE CRUIKSHANK.

Paris Sketch Book, Little Travels, and Roadside Sketches. Illustrated by the Author, T. R. MACQUOID, and J. P. ATKINSON.

The Yellowplush Papers; The Fitzboodle Papers; Cox's Diary; Character Sketches. Illustrated by the Author and GEORGE CRUIKSHANK.

The Irish Sketch Book; Critical Reviews, Illustrated by the Author, GEORGE CRUIKSHANK, JOHN LEECH, and M. FITZGERALD.

The Memoirs of Barry Lyndon; The Fatal Boots. Illustrated by J. E. MILLAIS, R.A., GEORGE CRUIKSHANK, and W. RALSTON.

Catherine, a Story; Men's Wives; The Bedford Row Conspiracy. Illustrated by the Author, L. FILDES, A.R.A., and R. B. WALLACE.

Ballads; The Rose and the Ring. Illustrated by the Author, Lady BUTLER (Miss Elizabeth Thompson), GEORGE DU MAURIER, JOHN COLLIER, H. FURNISS, G. G. KILBURNE, M. FITZGERALD, and J. P. ATKINSON.

Roundabout Papers. To which is added The Second Funeral of Napoleon. Illustrated by the Author, CHARLES KEENE, and M. FITZGERALD.

The Four Georges, and the English Humourists of the Eighteenth Century. Illustrated by the Author, FRANK DICKSEE, LINLEY SAMBOURNE, FREDERICK WALKER, and F. BARNARD.

Lovel the Widower; The Wolves and the Lamb; Denis Duval. To which is added an Essay on the Writings of W. M. Thackeray by LESLIE STEPHEN. Illustrated by the Author and FREDERICK WALKER.

Miscellaneous Essays; Sketches and Reviews. With Illustrations by the Author.

Contributions to "Punch." 132 Illustrations by the Author.

OTHER EDITIONS OF MR. THACKERAY'S WORKS.

THE STANDARD EDITION. 26 Vols., large 8vo, 10s. 6d. each.

THE LIBRARY EDITION. 24 Vols., large crown 8vo, handsomely bound in cloth, £9; or half-russia, marbled edges, £13. 13s. With Illustrations by the Author, RICHARD DOYLE, and FREDERICK WALKER.  The Volumes are sold separately, in cloth, 7s. 6d. each.

THE POPULAR EDITION. 13 Vols., crown 8vo, with Frontispiece to each Volume, scarlet cloth, gilt top, £3. 5s.; and in half-morocco, gilt, £5. 10s.  The Volumes are sold separately, in green cloth, 5s. each.

THE POCKET EDITION. 27 Vols. in handsome ebonised case, £2. 12s. 6d.  The Volumes are sold separately, in half-cloth, cut or uncut edges, 1s. 6d. each; or in paper cover, 1s. each.

ROBERT BROWNING'S WORKS. UNIFORM EDITION. 16 Volumes, crown 8vo, bound in sets, £4; or the Volumes, bound separately, 5s. each. This Edition contains Three Portraits of Mr. Browning at different periods of life, and a few Illustrations.

 Also Mr. Browning's last Volume, ASOLANDO; Fancies and Facts. Ninth Edition. Fcp. 8vo, 5s.

MRS. BROWNING'S POETICAL WORKS. UNIFORM EDITION, in 6 Vols., in small crown 8vo, 5s. each. This Edition contains Five Portraits of Mrs. Browning at different periods of life, and a few Illustrations.  Vol. VI.—AURORA LEIGH—can also be had bound and lettered as a separate Volume.

MISS THACKERAY'S WORKS. UNIFORM EDITION. Each Volume Illustrated by a Vignette Title-page. 10 Vols. large crown 8vo, 6s. each.

 CATALOGUE Post Free on Application.

London: SMITH, ELDER, & CO., 15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

SELECTIONS FROM CASSELL & COMPANY'S

PRESENTATION VOLUMES.

	s.	d.
The Story of the Sun. By Sir ROBERT STAWELL BALL, LL.D., F.R.S. With 8 Coloured Plates and other Illustrations	21	0
The Story of the Heavens. By Sir ROBERT STAWELL BALL, LL.D., F.R.S. With Coloured Plates and Wood Engravings. Cheap Edition	12	6
Starland. By Sir ROBERT STAWELL BALL, F.R.S., &c. Illustrated. Third Edition	6	0
The Story of our Planet. By T. G. BONNEY, D.Sc. With Coloured Plates and Maps and about 100 Illustrations	31	6
With Thackeray in America. By EYRE CROWE, A.R.A. With upwards of 100 Illustrations	10	6
The Magazine of Art. Yearly Volume. With 12 Exquisite Etchings, &c., and 120 Illustrations	16	0
The Cabinet Portrait Gallery. Containing 36 Cabinet Photographs of Eminent Men and Women of the Day. With Biographical Sketches. Series IV.	15	0
Dante's Purgatory and Paradise. Illustrated by Doré. Cheap Edition	7	6
Doré's Dante's Inferno. Illustrated by Gustave Doré. With Preface by A. J. Butler	7	6
The Doré Don Quixote. With about 400 Illustrations by Gustave Doré. Cheap Edition	10	6
The Story of Africa and its Explorers. By Dr. ROBERT BROWN, M.A., &c. Illustrated. Vols. I. and II. each	7	6
Old and New Paris. By H. SUTHERLAND EDWARDS. Illustrated. Vol. I., 9s., or gilt edges	10	6
Historic Houses of the United Kingdom. Illustrated	10	6
Rivers of the East Coast. With numerous Engravings	16	0
The Royal River: The Thames from Source to Sea. With Beautiful Engravings	16	0
The Picturesque Mediterranean. With magnificent Illustrations. 2 vols.	84	0
Picturesque Europe. Popular Edition. Containing 65 exquisite Steel Plates and nearly 1,000 Original Illustrations. 5 vols.	90	0
Cathedrals, Abbeys, and Churches of England and WALES. Illustrated. Popular Edition. 2 vols.	25	0
The World of Adventure. Fully Illustrated. 3 vols.	27	0
The World of Romance. Illustrated	9	0
Éditions de Luxe of the principal Plays of Shakspere, with Original Drawings by the leading Artists, reproduced in the highest style of Photogravure.
King Henry VIII. Illustrated by Sir JAMES LINTON, P.R.I. (Price on application.)
Othello. Illustrated by FRANK DICKSEE, R.A.	70	0
King Henry IV. Illustrated by EDUARD GRUTZNER	70	0
As You Like It. Illustrated by EMILE BAYARD	70	0
The Plays of Shakespeare. Edited by Prof. HENRY MORLEY. 13 Volumes in Box	21	0
Cassell's Miniature Shakespeare. Illustrated. 12 vols., 12s.; or, handsomely bound	21	0
The Leopold Shakespeare. With about 400 Illustrations	3	6
Cassell's Illustrated Shakespeare. With about 600 Illustrations. Complete in 3 Volumes	63	0

Works by R. L. STEVENSON.

Catriona. Being Memoirs of the Further Adventures of David Balfour at Home and Abroad. 15th Thousand	6	0
"Kidnapped." Illustrated Edition. 32nd Thousand	3	6
Treasure Island. With 25 Illustrations and a Map. Forty-fourth Thousand	3	6
The Master of Ballantrae. 22nd Thousand. Illustrated	3	6
The Black Arrow: A Tale of the Two Roses. Nineteenth Thousand. Illustrated.	3	6
The Wrecker. By R. L. STEVENSON and LLOYD OSBOURNE. Twenty-fourth Thousand. Illustrated	6	0
Island Nights' Entertainments. Eighth Thousand	6	0
A Foot-Note to History. Eight Years of Trouble in Samoa. Third Thousand. Cloth	6	0

Works by Q.

The Delectable Duchy. Cloth	6	0

UNIFORM EDITION OF WORKS BY Q.

Dead Man's Rock.
The Splendid Spur.
The Blue Pavilions.
The Astonishing History of Troy Town.
"I Saw Three Ships;" and Other Winter's Tales.
Noughts and Crosses.
... each 5 0

By J. M. BARRIE.

The Little Minister. With 9 Full-page Illustrations by W. Hole, R.S.A.	6	0

By RIDER HAGGARD.

King Solomon's Mines. New and Revised Edition, Illustrated	3	6
Robinson Crusoe. Cassell's Fine Art Edition. With 100 Illustrations by Wal. Paget	7	6
"Little Folks" Christmas Volume. Illustrated. Board, 3s. 6d.; cloth gilt	5	0
Bo-Peep. Yearly Volume. Illustrated. Boards, 2s. 6d.; cloth gilt	3	6

 Upwards of 1,000 VOLUMES suitable for GIFT-BOOKS will be found in CASSELL & COMPANY'S COMPLETE CATALOGUE, a copy of which will be forwarded post free on application.

CASSELL & COMPANY, Limited, Ludgate Hill, London.

LIVERPOOL VICTORIA LEGAL FRIENDLY SOCIETY

ESTABLISHED 1843.

Head Office: ST. ANDREW ST., HOLBORN CIRCUS, LONDON, E.C.

Branch Offices in all the Principal Towns.

THIS Society has been in active operation for over fifty years. It is specially established for the Insurance upon Lives from £1 to £200 by weekly, monthly, or quarterly payments to meet the convenience of the Assurers.

AMOUNT PAID IN CLAIMS AND GRANTS SINCE THE SOCIETY'S ESTABLISHMENT EXCEED	£2,500,000
ANNUAL PREMIUM INCOME EXCEEDS	465,000
ACCUMULATED CAPITAL EXCEEDS	875,000

JNO. G. CLENSY, Secretary.

PATENT STEAM
CARPET BEATING
COMPANY, LIMITED.

The only EFFECTUAL METHODS of REMOVING DUST WITHOUT INJURY to the CARPET.

CHIEF OFFICE:
196, YORK ROAD, KING'S CROSS, N.
WORKS:
PLEASANT GROVE, YORK ROAD, KING'S CROSS, N.; LATIMER ROAD, NOTTING HILL, W.; 379, KING'S ROAD, CHELSEA; STATION ROAD, CAMBERWELL, S.E.; 2, CLAPTON ROAD, N.E.; ZION ROAD, NEW THORNTON HEATH, CROYDON; AND KINGSTON.

Also by the COMPRESSED AIR PROCESS.

ORDERS RECEIVED BY ALL CARPET FURNISHING WAREHOUSES.

HOT MINERAL BATHS OF BATH.

Daily yield 507,600 gallons, F. at 120.
FOUNDED BY THE ROMANS IN THE 1st CENTURY.
ΑΡΙΣΤΟΝ ΜΕΝ ΥΔΩΡ.

BATHERS DURING 1890—97,299.

These Baths are unrivalled in Europe for luxury and extent, and contain all that modern improvements can provide for the comfort and relief of the invalid or the enjoyment of those in health.

Receiving, Deep, and Swimming Baths. Thermal Vapour Baths for Painful Conditions of Joints, &c. Douche, Inhalation, Aspiration, Pulverisation, &c., and Ear, Eye, Throat, &c. The Aix les Bains Massage System and Doucheurs and Douchenses.

The Medical Profession sends Patients who suffer from Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Dyspepsia, Eczema, and other skin affections.

Letters to the General Manager will receive every attention.

LONDON AND COUNTY ADVANCE AND DISCOUNT COMPANY, Limited.—Cash advanced from £10 to £500, without preliminary fees or deductions for interest, for short or long periods, repayable by easy instalments, at moderate rates, upon approved security. Bills Discounted. Forms free. Offices, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, W.C.—JOHN STONE, Secretary.

ACCIDENTS OF TRAVEL

AND ALL OTHER ACCIDENTS INSURED AGAINST BY

The Railway Passengers' Assurance COMPANY,

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST COMPANY PROVIDING FOR

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

W. D. MASSY, A. VIAN, } Secs.

LIEBIG "COMPANY'S" EXTRACT OF BEEF.

See Signature (as below) in Blue Ink across the Label on each Jar of the Genuine Extract.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

J. Liebig

KEEPS FOR ANY LENGTH OF TIME.

Cookery Books (Indispensable for Ladies) sent free on application to—

LIEBIG'S EXTRACT OF MEAT COMPANY, Limited,
9, FENCHURCH AVENUE, E.C.

HOTEL ALBEMARLE, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

Patronised by Royalty and the Elite of Society.

This select Hotel, situated in the most fashionable part of London. Celebrated for its decorations and the excellence of Cuisine. Several complete suites of apartments, with bath rooms and lavatories.

SPACIOUS DINING ROOM.

HIGHEST CLASS MODERN FRENCH CUISINE.

Telegraphic Address: "Hotel Albemarle, London."

A. L. VOGEL, Proprietor.

LONDON. { HOTEL WINDSOR,

VICTORIA STREET, WESTMINSTER, S.W.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—ELECTRICALLY LIGHTED THROUGHOUT, DAY AND NIGHT. MODERATE TARIFF.

Table D'Hote, at separate Tables, from 6.30 to 8.30.

(OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS)

TURKISH & SWIMMING BATHS.

INCLUSIVE TERMS, from 12s. per Day.

J. R. CLEAVE & CO., Proprietors.

COURT DRESSMAKERS, MILLINERS & FURRIERS.

Specialties—
Brides' Toilettes,
Bridesmaids' Toilettes,
Trousseaux.

RUSSELL & ALLEN

COURT
AND FAMILY MOURNING.

17, 18 & 19, OLD BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

THE CITY SAFE DEPOSIT,

13 & 15, THROGMORTON AVENUE, LONDON, E.C.
(OPENED 6th DECEMBER, 1893.)

A New Safe Deposit, adjoining Austin Friars, and in the very centre of the Stock Exchange, Banking, and first-class Office region of the City. All the latest improvements. Constructed of Corngreave's Patent Compo. Undrillable Steel, every plate of which has been tested by independent engineers and proved to be undrillable.

FIRE-PROOF and BURGLAR-PROOF SAFES from £1. 1s., and STRONG ROOMS from £15. 15s. a Year.

Chairman of the Company—JOHN MORRIS, Esq.

Prospectuses and all particulars on application to the MANAGER, Mr. ROBERT SLAGG (Late Manager of the Chancery Lane Safe Deposit).

CORRESPONDENTS IN UNITED STATES AND CANADA:—
NEW YORK—FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST CO.
WASHINGTON—AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST CO.
CHICAGO—TITLE GUARANTEE AND TRUST CO.
PHILADELPHIA—THE FIDELITY INSURANCE TRUST AND SAFE DEPOSIT CO.
MONTREAL—MONTREAL SAFE DEPOSIT CO.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

THE SAFE KEEPING OF SECURITIES TO BEARER has been brought into prominence by the recent decision of the House of Lords (The London Joint Stock Bank v. Simmons), which materially modifies their previous decision in the "Sheffield" case, thereby greatly increasing the risk of Bearer Securities passing into the hands of third parties when improperly obtained from the true owner.

"The practical lesson for the investing classes arising out of Simmons's case therefore is: keep your securities yourselves, OR WHERE YOU KNOW THEM TO BE SAFE."—Investors' Review. NO BETTER SECURITY THAN THAT AFFORDED BY THE CITY SAFE DEPOSIT CAN BE DEVISED.

G. TANSLEY & CO.,

BALL AND CONCERT FURNISHERS,

16, WIGMORE STREET, CAVENDISH SQUARE, W.; 91, GLOUCESTER ROAD, QUEEN'S GATE, S.W.

SUPPLY ON HIRE,

TABLES, SEATS, CHINA, PLATE AND GLASS.

BALL ROOMS LIGHTED BY ELECTRICITY OR CANDLES.

TEMPORARY BALL ROOMS ERECTED with Patent Ceiling and Special Polished Floor.

DOORWAY AWNINGS, STALLS FOR BAZAARS.

ENTERTAINMENTS AND MUSICIANS PROVIDED. Price Lists sent Free on Application.

30, ST. JAMES'S ST. LONDON, & GRAND CANAL, VENICE.

VENICE & MURANO GLASS CO.

HAVE ON VIEW AT THEIR LONDON GALLERY
A CHOICE AND VARIED COLLECTION OF THEIR UNRIVALLED

Venetian & Muranese Glass

— SUITABLE FOR —

TABLE USE, DECORATION, CABINET SPECIMENS, CHRISTMAS, WEDDING, and other forms of PRESENTS, VENETIAN CHANDELIERS, CANDELABRA, AND MIRRORS, VENETIAN GLASS MOSAICS FOR CHURCH DECORATIONS, REREDOSES, MEMORIAL TABLETS, &c.

HIGHEST AWARDS AT ALL PRINCIPAL EXHIBITIONS

HIGHEST AWARDS AT ALL PRINCIPAL EXHIBITIONS

30, ST. JAMES'S STREET, LONDON, S.W.

Carr's stamped Ladder Tapes for Venetian Blinds

A MODERN METHOD
—OF—
ELOPEMENT.

A Young Lady who elopes "in haste" down a ladde of Carr's Patent Tape possibly may not stop to see if every yard of her descent is stamped with the name CARR'S; but anyone who wants the best Ladder Tape for Venetian Blinds should "at their leisure" stop and see that the name CARR'S is stamped on ONE cross-strap in each yard, without which it is not the genuine

CARR'S PATENT LADDER TAPE
For VENETIAN BLINDS

See that the name CARR'S is stamped on the INTERWOVEN CROSS-STRAPS once in each yard.

From all Ironmongers and Furnishing Drapers.

HALL'S COCA WINE.

A MARVELLOUS RESTORATIVE.

This tonic preparation is recognised by the medical profession as one of the most powerful nervines and restoratives. It has the unique advantage of being a highly medicated and standardised wine, having no unpleasant after effects; at the same time it is extremely palatable, having the rich flavour of port wine combined with the delicious aroma of the fresh Coca Leaf. It can be taken with meals or dessert.

The medical profession and Press are recommending it for PHYSICAL EXHAUSTION, MENTAL FATIGUE, GENERAL DEPRESSION, SLEEPLESSNESS, NERVOUS DISORDERS, THROAT COMPLAINTS.

It is the restorative par excellence for extreme weakness following illness. A few glasses only will prove its efficacy.

We have a large number of testimonials from doctors who have been benefited by it.

Dr. NOBLE says:—"I consider 'Hall's Coca Wine' most excellent for preventing fatigue, and while taking it have been able to do double the amount of work that I could have done without it."

Dr. D. S. DAVIS, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., writes:—"I have much pleasure in recommending 'Hall's Coca Wine' as a Tonic and Restorative. After trial, I have found it very beneficial in depression of spirits following illness."

The LANCET (April 9, 1892) says:—"This is an excellent wine. The restorative and invigorating properties of the Coca Leaf are now well known, and it may be very conveniently and palatably administered in the form of this wine."

The BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL says:—"A sample of 'Hall's Coca Wine' has been submitted to us. It is carefully prepared, and contains a large proportion of the alkaloid. Coca is undoubtedly a valuable stimulant and tonic and this preparation may be recommended as fulfilling these indications."

THE CONVALESCENT.

A most acceptable present to a delicate person is a half-dozen case of "Hall's Hock Wine," costing 20s., carriage paid.

Of Chemists and Wine Merchants, 3/6 per bottle, or post free of

STEPHEN SMITH & CO., BOW, LONDON.

Exquisite Model. Perfect Fit. Guaranteed Wear.

The Y & N Patent

DIAGONAL SEAM CORSET

Will not split in the seams nor tear in the Fabric. Made in White, Black, and all the Fashionable Colours and Shades, in Italian Cloth, Satin, and Coutil; also in the New Sanitary Woollen Cloth. 4s. 11d., 5s. 11d., 6s. 11d., 7s. 11d. per Pair and upwards.

CAUTION.—Beware of worthless imitations. Every genuine Y & N Corset is stamped "Y & N Patent Diagonal Seam, No. 116," in oval on the lining.

Sold by the principal drapers and Ladies' Outfitters in the United Kingdom and Colonies.

THREE GOLD MEDALS.

WRITE FOR THE NEW PATTERNS.

Sent POST FREE on Approval to any Address.

Henry PEASE & Co's Successors

DARLINGTON DRESS FABRICS

Any length cut at mill prices. Any article not approved of exchanged within seven days. Carriage Paid on all orders (except remnants) to any railway station in Great Britain, and to Dublin, Belfast, Limerick, Cork, and Waterford.

FOR WINTER WEAR.

Tweeds, Serges, Homespuns, Diagonals, Bengalines, Whipcords, Hop Sack Cloths, Habit Cloths, Shot Effects in Fancy Worsted Serges, and entirely New Weavings of the World-renowned Darlington Gold Medal Merinos, Cashmeres, and Cross-warp Serges.

REMNANTS.—Made-up Bundles of Remnants, containing useful lengths of Serges, Meltons, Calicoes, Flannels (white or scarlet), Velveteens, Prints, Sateens, &c., in lengths from 2½ yards to 8 yards, at 10s. 6d., 15s. 6d., 20s., and 25s. each. Worth double the money. 1s. extra is charged on each parcel to cover carriage.

HENRY PEASE & Co.'s Successors, The Mills, DARLINGTON.

HAVE YOU SEEN THE "DEVIL" DISINTEGRATOR?

IT IS THE BEST MACHINE for Grinding almost any material to moderately Fine or Coarse Powders, giving at the same time a large output.

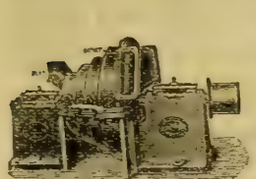
The most important competitive trials of Disintegrators ever held took place at the ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF ENGLAND SHOW, held at Plymouth, June, 1890, when the "DEVIL" was declared the BEST MACHINE, and was awarded the FIRST PRIZE and the SOCIETY'S MEDAL.

There were eight entries for this competition from the best makers of this class of machinery.

It is Cheap, Simple in Construction, and not liable to get out of repair. The Grinding Rings, which are the only wearing parts, can be replaced by a labourer, without fitting, at slight cost. Prices from £45 to £250.

THE NEW MULTIPLE GRINDER



Is the BEST MACHINE for reducing Friable, Fibrous, or Moist Materials to Fine or impalpable Powder.

MAIZE and other Grain can be reduced to the fineness and softness of wheat-flour.

SUGAR is ground finer than in any other machine.

GLUE is reduced to almost any degree of fineness.

There are few, if any, Materials that this Mill will not deal with. It deals successfully with Materials that would clog up any of the ordinary Mills with grids. The wearing parts are simple, inexpensive and easily replaced. Prices, £45 and upwards.

THE NEW MAGNETIC SEPARATOR

Is the most effective Machine for separating Iron and Steel from any other Material.

THESE MACHINES MAY BE SEEN AT OUR WORKS, OR WILL BE SENT OUT ON APPROVAL.

Makers of Coal-washing and Coking Plants, Elevators, Elevator Buckets, Driving Chains, Conveyors, Separators, Shafting, Pulleys, and all appliances connected with Grinding and Pulverising Machinery.

THE HARDY PATENT PICK COMPANY, LTD.,
SHEFFIELD, ENGLAND.

Allen & Hanburys'

Castor Oil

Tasteless. Pure. Active.
Sold everywhere at 6d., 1/, 1/9 & 3/.

"It is taken both by children and adults without the slighest difficulty, whilst its aperient effects are unquestionable. It possesses all the advantages claimed for it."

—Lancet.

ESTABLISHED 1824.

Needham's Polishing Paste

The most reliable Preparation for cleaning and brilliantly polishing Brass, Copper, Tin, Britannia Metal, Platinoid, &c. Sold everywhere.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS—

JOSEPH PICKERING & SONS, Sheffield.

LONDON OFFICE:—
St. George's House, Eastcheap, E.C.

500 SEALSKIN JACKETS FROM £10. GENTLEMEN'S FUR LINED COATS FROM £5.

SAVE 50 PER CENT. by going to

PHILLIPS & CO.,

52 & 53, NEWGATE STREET, CITY.

£10,000 worth Sealskin Garments and Ladies' Furs at Half-price.
Superb Bear Boas for Christmas and New Year's Gifts.

EVERYTHING GUARANTEED ONE HALF WEST END PRICES.

DINING-ROOM SKIN RUGS, HALF PRICE.

500 FUR CARRIAGE RUGS, 25/-

SEALSKIN JACKETS RE-DYED AND ALTERED TO PRESENT FASHION.
CAUTION: "The only address." Other people are trading upon our name.
PHILLIPS & CO., 52 & 53, Newgate Street, City.

RIMMEL'S TOILET VINEGAR

Has for over Half a Century sustained its High Reputation as an indispensable Toilet Requisite. Delightfully Cooling to the Skin.

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

RIMMEL'S Specialities for the Toilet, Perfumes, Soaps, Powders, &c.
EUGENE RIMMEL, Ltd., Perfumers to H.R.H. The Princess of Wales.
Call Special Attention to their CHOICE and VARIED COLLECTION of CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S GOODS.

In great variety. Fancy Scent Cases, Xmas Boxes, Sachets, &c.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.
CAUTION.—Note Name and Trade Mark as above on all goods, and beware of imitations.
96, Strand, 180, Regent Street, 64, Cheapside, London; and Paris.

"CANADIAN CLUB" WHISKY.

TRADE W MARK

Distilled by HIRAM WALKER & SONS, LIMITED, Walkerville, Canada.

Age and Genuineness Guaranteed by the Excise Department of the Canadian Government by Certificate over the capsule of every bottle.
OF ALL WINE MERCHANTS

GOLD CAPSULE, 1886 make. Bottled at the Distillery in Bond and under Government supervision, whereby the age and genuineness are guaranteed by an official certificate over every capsule.

WHITE CAPSULE. Bottled by the Wine Merchants in England.

London Offices: 69 and 70, MARK LANE, E.C.
Branches and Agencies Throughout the World.

PAILLARD'S MUSICAL BOXES Are the Best.

Price Lists AND Lists of Tunes Free on Application.

MUSICAL BOXES REPAIRED.

C. PAILLARD & CO.,
MANUFACTURERS.
London: 62, Holborn Viaduct, E.C.
St. Croix, Switzerland. New York, 560 Broadway.

BRISTOL HOTEL

Burlington Gardens, London, W.

(Between Bond-street and Regent-street, and close to Piccadilly).
Lighted by Electricity throughout. New Hydraulic Lift to all floors.

THE CHOICEST OF WINES. FRENCH CUISINE OF HIGHEST CHARACTER.

SEPARATE ENTRANCE TO RESTAURANT IN CORK STREET, OPEN TO NON-RESIDENTS.

Luncheons at fixed price of 4s.; Dinners at 10s. 6d. or à la carte.

Private Rooms for Parties of Four or more.

NO SUPPERS.

Telephone No. 3,507.

SEAFORD.

ADMIRABLE WINTER RESORT. Equable Temperature.

Bright Sunshine. The healthiest place on the South Coast.

THE ESPLANADE HOTEL,

Adjoining the Sussex Downs, facing and within 50 yards of the sea. A model modern Hotel. Perfect sanitary arrangements. Golf-links (best on the South Coast) close by. Tariff of G. REEVES SMITH, Proprietor.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL.

CONTRIBUTIONS ARE EARNESTLY SOLICITED towards meeting the expenses of this Unendowed Hospital.

Debt, £10,000. RESERVE FUND QUITE EXHAUSTED.

Messrs. DRUMMOND, Bankers, or by the SECRETARY, at the Hospital.

DREAM MEMORIES. 5,000 Copies Sold Weekly.

By the Composer of "LOVE'S GOLDEN DREAM."
Sung by Mr. Iver M'Kay.
The Greatest Success of modern times. Post free, 2s. net.
THE SONG OF THE SEASON.

DREAM MEMORIES WALTZ. By Theo Bonheur.

A delicious and dreamy Waltz. Splendid to dance to. Quite irresistible. Very easy to play. The greatest success of modern times. Post free, 2s. net.

LONDON MUSIC PUBLISHING CO., Ltd.,
7, Gt. Marlborough-street, London, W.

HYDE PARK AND PORTMAN ESTATES. — Messrs. FREDERICK A. MULLETT, BOOKER, & CO.'S Registers of the Select Furnished and Unfurnished Residences, TO BE LET and SOLD, may be inspected daily at their Auction and Estate Agency Offices, Albion House, Hyde Park-square (the corner of Albion-street), W.

IRON WINE BINS

AND CELLAR REQUISITES OF ALL KINDS.

Illustrated Catalogues Post free.

FARROW & JACKSON

(By Appointment to H.M. The Queen, and H.R.H. The Prince of Wales),
8, Haymarket, S.W., & 16, Gt. Tower-st., E.C.

"NO BETTER FOOD EXISTS." London Medical Record.

This Food, which is malted by a patented process should be tried when ever other nourishment has not proved entirely satisfactory. It is already cooked requiring neither boiling nor straining.

Allen & Hanburys' Infants' Food.

A nutriment peculiarly adapted to the digestive organs of Infants and Young Children, supplying all that is required for the formation of firm flesh and bone Surprisingly beneficial results have attended the use of this Malted Food, which needs only to be tried to be permanently adopted. Medical Testimony and full Directions accompany each Tin.

Price 6d., 1s., 2s., 5s., and 10s. Sold Everywhere.

In Bottles 29

COLEMAN'S WINCARNIS OR LIEBIG'S EXTRACT OF MEAT & MALT WINE

Over 2,000 Testimonials received from Medical Men.

HIGHEST AWARD CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

Sole Manufacturers

COLEMAN & CO., LIMITED, NORWICH AND LONDON.

DIRECT FROM THE DISTILLER TO THE CONSUMER.

CENUINE SCOTCH WHISKY FROM A DISTILLER AND WHOLESALE WHISKY MERCHANT. ESTABLISHED 1802.

GOLD MEDALS: Dublin, 1892; and Paris, 1892.

Dawson's PERFECTION WHISKY.

TO MEET A DIFFICULTY often experienced in obtaining a First-class Whisky, I have resolved to offer direct to the Public my Perfection Old Scotch Whisky in no less quantities than Single Cases guaranteed to contain 12 Bottles and 2 Imperial Gallons, or in Jars guaranteed to hold 2 Imperial Gallons.

Carriage paid to nearest Railway Station at 21s. per Gallon. As a guarantee of quality, LAST YEAR'S SALES were 576,240 BOTTLES (exceeding half-a-million).

THE DOCTORS AGREE.—Mr. G. COMBE STEWART, F.C.S., Public Analyst, Glasgow, says:—"DAWSON'S PERFECTION OLD SCOTCH WHISKY has great age. It is pure and unadulterated—being distilled from the very finest materials—uniform in excellence of quality and free from German Spirit or anything likely to be injurious to health." Mr. C. R. BLACKETT, F.C.S., Victorian Government Analyst, Melbourne, Australia, says:—"After a thorough chemical analysis and examination, I can recommend DAWSON'S WHISKY as a highly-matured spirit of exceptional flavour, having all the characteristics of genuine Scotch Whisky."

Cheques and Post Office Orders Crossed "Commercial Bank."

PETER DAWSON, DISTILLER, WHOLESALE and EXPORT WHISKY MERCHANT.

DUFFTOWN, GLENLIVET and DISTRICT; 88, GREAT CLYDE STREET, GLASGOW.

Gold Medal Awarded for Special Excellence.

"Will bring a new vigour to our manhood and womanhood."

See Medical, Scientific, and Press Opinions.

"MERSANO" WINE

Sample Bottle Post Free 9 Penny Stamps.

"The Monarch Temperance Beverage of the World."

"Strengthening and Sustaining like the best Port Wine."

A PERFECT WINE FOR 6D. PER BOTTLE.

"'Mersano' Wine should have a brilliant future."—The Queen.

"The samples of 'Mersano' we have tasted are delicious, a very great improvement on lemonade, ginger beer, and mineral waters generally, with a sparkle equal to the finest Champagne."—Tit-Bits.

Sold by all high-class Grocers, Stores, Chemists, Hotels, Spiers & Pond's Bars, &c.

PROPRIETORS AND PATENTEES—

FORBES, MAXWELL & CO., Ltd., ABERDEEN

WHOOPING COUGH

INSTANTLY RELIEVED and QUICKLY CURED.

PAGE'S PATENT VAPOURISER AND CRESOLENE

Children, by simply breathing the vapour of Cresolene, obtain in a few seconds extraordinary relief in Whooping Cough, and the disorder is rapidly put an end to, generally in a few days. It is a perfectly safe remedy and will not harm the youngest child. CRESOLENE is most valuable in Asthma, Catarrh, Scarlet Fever, Diphtheria, Hay Fever, &c.

CRESOLENE is claimed to be the most powerful antiseptic and disinfectant at present known.

Vapouriser, with Lamp complete, and 2 oz. bottle of Cresolene 7s. 6d., Post Free in the United Kingdom; or can be obtained through any Chemist. The Cresolene can be had separately in bottles, at 1s. 4d. and 2s. 6d.

SOLE AGENTS FOR EUROPE:

ALLEN & HANBURYS, Plough Court, LONDON.

SCHWEITZER'S "STILL THE BEST COCOA."

Cocoatina

PURE, ANTI-DYSPEPTIC, STRENGTHENING.

POSSESSES REMARKABLE NOURISHING AND SUSTAINING QUALITIES.

"In use among children it is greatly to be preferred to the ordinary Cocoas."—
SIR C. A. CAMERON, M.D.

PARISIAN BONBONNIERES.

S. SAINSBURY invites an EARLY INSPECTION of his large and varied selection of the LATEST PARIS NOVELTIES in fancy boxes, sacs, baskets, &c., filled with the choicest French Fondants, Chocolates, &c., and forming most suitable Christmas Presents.

DISPLAY COMMENCES DEC. 11.

S. SAINSBURY, 176-7, STRAND, LONDON.

ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE.

INCORPORATED A.D. 1720.

Funds, £4,000,000. Claims Paid, £36,000,000.

LIFE. FIRE. SEA. ANNUITIES.

For the Latest Developments of Life Assurance, consult the Prospectus of the Corporation.

Full particulars on application to Chief Office—ROYAL EXCHANGE, E.C.
OR TO 29, PALL MALL, S.W.

UNEQUAL VISION.

About 40 persons out of each 100 have some difference of focus between the two eyes, and yet the majority are content to wear spectacles made with both lenses alike—the result is, continued straining and impairment of the vision. For the eyes to be used healthfully, each eye should be suited separately. This method is always practised by Mr. JOHN BROWNING, Ophthalmic Optician (Author of "Our Eyes," now in its Fourteenth Edition), at his only address, 63, Strand, W.C., where he may be consulted personally, free of charge respecting spectacles for all forms of defective vision, between the hours of 10 and 4 daily except on Saturdays.

FOR POLISHING METALS, ESPECIALLY BRASS,

THERE IS NOTHING BETTER THAN
"LA BRILLANTINE"
METALLIC POWDER.
TRY IT, AND CONVINCE YOURSELF.
It is used by the Metropolitan Fire Brigade, the Life, Horse, and Dragoon Guards, &c.
— Sold Everywhere. Boxes, 6d. and 1s. post free. —
PROPRIETORS—
J. F. BAUMGARTNER & CO.
15 (T.), Newman-street, Oxford-street, London, W.
ABSOLUTELY REFUSE IMITATIONS.

The "QUEEN" says:—"Few Silks can equal 'FAILLE INVICTA,' which is really a magnificent texture."

THE BEST WEARING FASHIONABLE BLACK SILK

FAILLE INVICTA

THOROUGHLY TRIED AND RELIABLE.

REGISTERED No. 93,095.

AT ALL SILK HOUSES.

"VANITY FAIR" says:—"I think nothing could be better than 'FAILLE INVICTA.'"

"MYRA'S JOURNAL" says:—"The 'FAILLE INVICTA' is fully recognised as the perfection of Black Silk."

Mr. HELBRONNER, Ld.

300 & 302, OXFORD ST., W.
ECCLESIASTICAL AND DOMESTIC EMBROIDERERS,
Weavers of Dress Silks,
Decorators, Upholsterers, &c.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED.—
Holborn Bars, London.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITY BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
REVERSIONS PURCHASED.

Invested Funds, £16,000,000.

The last Annual Report can be obtained on application to the Secretary.

J. TANN'S SAFES

"ANCHOR RELIANCE" TRADE MARK

JOHN TANN'S RELIANCE SAFE

DOORS, LOCKS &c

NEWGATE ST

LISTS FREE. LONDON

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS-URBANA
3 0112 109806742